Family, friends and fellow members of the art community joined together over the weekend at the Wilkinson-Stumbo Convention Center for a retrospective on the art — and the life — of renowned Floyd County painter Russell May.

Organizers and Gina Rose and Greta Heintzelman Slone addressed the audience at a benefit dinner Friday evening; the third person responsible for spurring the retrospective, Cliff Latta, was unable to attend.

"This is the first gathering of vision, appreciation and momentum in the positive and hopeful spirit of Russell May," Rose said. "Here's

KDE releases Floyd County student assessment results

A FLOYD CHRONICLE AND TIMES STAFF REPORT

The Kentucky Department of Education has released 2017-2018 student assessment results.

According to a statement from KDE, across the state, the 2018-2019 assessment identified 51 schools for Comprehensive Support and Improvement, meaning they are in the bottom 5 percent of schools at their level (elementary, middle or high) in the state or had a graduation rate below 80 percent. The statement also said 418 schools were identified for Targets Support and Improvement as a result of having at least one student group performing as poorly as schools in the bottom 5 percent.

According to the KDE assessment, of which, only Prestonsburg High School shows a need for "Targets Support and Improvement," in the disability category.

Being identified as TSI allows schools to focus on raising achievement for groups of students who have been underserved, and may have previously been hidden by

Fiscal court talks tax rates, future of the Martin Community Center

By AARON K. NELSON
APPALACHIAN NEWSPAPERS

The Floyd County Fiscal Court took action Friday to establish and accept tax rates for districts throughout the county, and heard from members of the public about a renewed interest in finding use for the defunct Martin Community Center.

Deana Mullins of Martin addressed the fiscal court, saying she hoped to lease the center building under the agreement that her nonprofit group would be responsible for its repair, paying its bills, and running an after school program there.

"A lot of the children want it, and I've got high school kids wanting to do

The ladies of Karen's Place in Louisa attended the Prestonsburg Recovery Celebration Saturday, performing skits and offering cheers and support for any person battling addiction. mentoring programs with them, and provide this for the younger kids," Mullins said. "There's nowhere for kids to go after school that is safe and reliable."

Other members of the community, including Ashley Tackett Lafferty and school board member Dr. Chandra Varia, also spoke up in support of using the community center for children.

Judge-Executive Ben Hale said the fiscal court is in the process of entertaining an offer for the center's outright purchase, and if they proceed with it, they would accept a sealed bid and go through steps to advertise its sale. The court could then accept or reject that offer and any others that are made, Hale said, but working out a lease agreement before then would not be possible.

"At that point, if the court refuses to sell that property, I think we could take up other options. Just bear with us," Hale said.

Hale said that in the past, tax rate changes by other agencies, including the Board of Education, have been blamed on the fiscal court.

"I want to make sure people understand this," Hale said. "All these tax rates that come in to us, the health department, library, cooperative extension, soil conservation and the Floyd County School system, we have no authority whatsoever in that. We have to take these tax rates in order for them to be put on the tax bills, and give them back to the state. These individual boards have set their own rates."

County Attorney Keith Bartley said the rate that the fiscal court is responsible for, and does set, has again been left alone and not raised.

While rain may have deterred some attendees, multiple addiction recovery organizations, such as Karen's Place, the Floyd Drug Court, Carl D. Perkins Job Corps, Sapling Center, Celebrate Recovery Centers and church ministries such as Reign and Fire, Praise Assembly and God's Pride were present to share support and resources for recovery

"I used to be terrified of recovery," said Hall, also a former addict. "All my life, I was told by that I would never amount to anything, that I was worthless, that my opinion didn't matter. I had no confidence in myself and had a negative self-image defined only by how other people saw me."

"I had no idea what would happen in recovery, what it meant to me as a person and what would happen afterwards. It was only after learning more about the process and meeting all of these people who were there to support my recovery that I was able to move forward to heal," he said. "I learned to define myself and my likes as my own person, and that God was not mad "at" me, he was mad "for" me."

Throughout the evening, people came up to share their stories and perform skits, songs, dances and other inspirational messages to encourage each other to stand fast in the face of addiction.

"I would like to thank everyone who came out for the celebration. A special thanks to our community partners like Mann Toyota, Pop's Chevrolet, the Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, Kidd Realty and many more who donated door prizes, funding and their time and effort to make this happen," said Hall. to many years of this art festival, because there are so many more stories to tell.”

Guest speaker, Lt. Governor Jenean Hampton, said she agreed with Rose’s assertion that, “There is hope in creativity.”

“I am a firm believer in that,” Hampton said. “Just because your resources are meager, creativity is free.”

Hampton said that, listening to musical guests Adam Williamson and Robert Daniels with the Mystery Meat Blues Band, she was inspired to possibly break out her old harmonica and take it with her to Frankfort.

“We need more music in politics. We need more art in politics,” Hampton said. “I’m so tempted to take my electric guitar and just practice in the halls of the capitol building.”

The dinner benefited two local nonprofits, the Kent Rose Foundation, a child empowerment organization inspired by the late Kent Rose, and Appalachian Hospice Care.

Russell May’s three children, Kathy, Janie and Rusty, took turns after dinner speaking to the memories of their father and his influence on not only Appalachian art, but their lives.

Kathy also presented a slide show of photos from May’s life, including his first sign shop, and photos from May’s time serving in the military, as a parachute jump instructor and later on the European front in World War II.

May’s son Rusty said his father was not very open about his time serving in the military until later in life.

“I had a pretty serious case of hero worship as a child,” May’s son Rusty said. “When I was younger, I thought he single-handedly defeated the Third Reich.”

Janie May Riehm related another story about the time Russell took a very rare break from their regular church services to hold a surprise picnic, and told the children to be very quiet and listen to the “church music” — the crickets, the birds and the nearby moving water — and reminded his children that “God is not in a building.”

Prestonsburg Mayor Les Stapleton presented the three May children with copies of the city’s proclamation honoring May, and organizers presented them with original art from Hazard’s Jenn Noble inspired by their favorite pieces of their father’s work.

May’s art was joined on display by other local Appalachian artists, and organizers said they hope to make this an annual event celebrating local art.

Big Sandy Small Business Expo

By ELAINE BELCHER
APPALACHIAN NEWSPAPERS

The East Kentucky Small Business Development Center at Morehead State University Thursday hosted the 2018 Big Sandy Small Business Expo at the Jenny Wiley State Resort Park Convention Center, welcoming more than 40 businesses to connect, shop and learn from each other.

Chris Tomlinson, owner of SilverLiner, spoke before an audience of business owners and representatives. He shared the story of how his business, originally shrunken by the downturn in the coal market, has since expanded to multiple locations throughout Eastern Kentucky.

"If we as a region pull together to look at our positives, we can make a difference," said Tomlinson.

He said that the competitive nature between counties to home manufacturing centers makes no sense in the long run.

"We are currently at 36 employees in Pikeville. Two weeks from now it will be in the mid-40's and by mid-November we will have 75 employees. These employees are from Pike County, Martin, Prestonsburg, Paintsville, Louisa and even across the mountain in Norton," said Tomlinson. "We need to support each other and be glad when any of us makes a move forward."

Speakers stepped forward to offer resources for establishing an online presence through social media and to expand their market globally through online sales.

"The expo was a great chance to come out and speak with other small businesses and find out what works for them," said Misha Curnette, representative for the Big Sandy Area Development District. "We want to make sure that everyone has access to the education and resources to help them grow."

For more information about classes, resources and events, visit the East Kentucky Small Business Development Center's Facebook page.

overall school achievement data, according to a statement from the Kentucky Department of Education.

"It is an imperative that we ensure every group of students is performing at high levels. We can't leave groups of students behind," said Interim Commissioner of Education Wayne Lewis. "This is a moral issue. Our expectation must be that all of our students can learn at high levels, regardless of income, gender, race/ethnicity or disability status. It is schools' responsibility to identify approaches, curricula and strategies for meeting students' needs. Our students and their families depend on it, and our Commonwealth depends on it."

Lewis said while KDE will provide resources for TSI-designated schools to improve, ultimately it is the responsibility of schools and districts to use the accountability results to chart a course that continuously improves achievement for all their students.

Kentucky is in the process of phasing in a new accountability system, which is scheduled to be fully implemented in the 2018-2019 school year and conforms to requirements of the federal Every Student Succeeds Act and Senate Bill 1(2017). Once implemented fully, school and district performance will be classified using Kentucky's 5-star rating system.

According to the KDE statement, under this new system, accountability determinations are only made at the school level and determinations are based on student performance on state assessments and other school quality indicators or measures, such as growth or graduation rate, depending on the grade level. Additionally, per Senate Bill 1 (2017), the new accountability system does not provide a single summative score that ranks schools against each other.

According to the data released by KDE, a higher percentage of students at both the elementary and middle school levels scored at either proficient or distinguished on state assessments. According to the data, 71.9 percent of Floyd County elementary students and 69.2 percent of middle school students scored proficient or distinguished, while, at the state level, an average of 54.6 percent of students scored proficient or distinguished at the elementary level and 60 percent scored proficient or distinguished at the middle school level.

However, the district had below average scores at the high school level. According to the data, only 37.4 percent of Floyd County high school students scored proficient or distinguished, while 45.4 percent scored proficient or distinguished at the state level.

ACT scores, which are based on all public school juniors taking the test last spring, also mimicked a national average downturn, according to the KDE statement, with across the board performance declines in English, mathematics, reading and science.

For Floyd County, according to the KDE 2017-2018 assessment, this resulted in an ACT composite average score of 17.7, a drop from 19.1 during the 2016-2017 school year.

Lewis said the results reinforce the KDE's current efforts to address lagging student achievement in critical subject areas like reading and mathematics. For example, proposed graduation requirements would require students to demonstrate basic competency on 10th grade reading and mathematics assessments in order to earn a diploma.

Bad defense of fast-tracked pension reform

Of all the supposed reasons the state Supreme Court should affirm a controversial pension bill passed this year by state lawmakers, most specious is the assertion that justices would open Pandora's box.

Steve Pitt, attorney for Gov. Matt Bevin, told justices Thursday that they would jeopardize many "good" laws from prior years if they uphold Franklin Circuit Judge Phillip Shepherd's ruling that lawmakers trampled on the state constitution's safeguards against hastily passed legislation.

Get ready to see defense lawyers for heroin dealers lined up at the courthouse door wanting convictions overturned, Pitt warned, referencing bipartisan legislation to combat the opioid epidemic. With due respect to Pitt and his client, that's not the judiciary's concern in our republic's system of checks and balances. If using parliamentary shenanigans to skirt the constitution has become a normal way of life for the General Assembly, it's time for the Supreme Court to put a stop to it.

Republicans, who control the legislative and executive branches, should welcome a strict interpretation of the constitution, which clearly spells out a minimum standard of three readings in each chamber and a minimum five-day journey to passage for every bill. There's no reason for the GOP to abandon its long-held value of strict constructionism by appellate judges.

Yet, in the pension case, Bevin and the GOP's legislative majority want the court to do what they despise in liberal judges who "legislate from the bench" and bend constitutions to the times rather than honor the framers' intentions.

In requiring that bills get thorough debate and consideration by lawmakers, Kentucky's framers were wise. No lawmaker can cast an informed vote on a 200-plus-page bill that is published within 24 hours of a vote on final adoption. Whether the topic is pension reform or heroin addiction, lawmakers owe it to their constituents to take their time and get it right.

We take the point of Republicans that Democrats' outrage over the 2018 pension bill is hypocritical, given similar legislative tactics used to pass a 2014 pension bill during Democratic Gov. Steve Beshear's administration. Adhering to the constitution is essential, whether it's Republicans or Democrats trying to violate it.

But the question before the high court is narrow: Did 2018 pension reform pass constitutional muster? What happened in prior legislative sessions is irrelevant. In complying with something as sacred as a constitution, two wrongs never make a right.

GUEST COLUMN

Many reasons to be mad

By SJ Ruth
Appalachian Newspapers

I'm having a hard time keeping up with the things I'm supposed to be mad about this week. And that makes me mad.

I'm not a guy who likes to carry grudges, but sometimes you just gotta suck it up and lift. The supreme court hearings are a great reminder.

Three years ago a legitimate, twice-elected president was denied a supreme court pick by Kentucky's champion of Party over Population, Sen. Mitch McConnell.

There was no legal precedent for the move, no standing principal of governance. McConnell, who had failed miserably in his vow to make Obama a one-termer, did what he's done in 90 percent of his senate career: He chose his party over his country.

He wanted to make sure there was no Supreme Court justice who would vote to overturn Citizen's United, the insane ruling by a conservative majority that made it even easier for people with lots of money to buy politicians and elections.

That paves the way for questionable "interest groups" to carpet bomb local television and radiowaves with blatant lies and distortions to sway elections. If you watch TV channels out of West Virginia right now, you know exactly what I'm talking about. The Lexington stations have a pretty good share of them too.

So here we are in the middle of another Supreme Court fight and the Democrats, whose slogan should be "Making Republicans Strong since 1980", are pulling out all the stops to blow it again.

I'm not for the confirmation of Kavanaugh, don't get me wrong. I believe conservatives are, in general, wrong about everything and have no business dominating the direction of this country. Backwards is not now, nor has ever been, an improvement.

But surely Diane Feinstein could have forwarded the accusation of sexual harassment against the nominee a lot earlier. Is there a good reason she waited until the hearings were almost over to act?

Sometimes it isn't better late than never. Sometimes late just looks like desperation and desperate is not a good look going into midterm elections where there is a real chance of taking control of Congress out of Republican hands.

I may be wrong. Maybe it's a brilliant political move designed to get more women out to vote. But I'm not holding my breath on that one. Don't tell anyone, but a lot of women vote for anti-choice candidates.

Do I think Kavanaugh did what he's accused of? Probably, but I don't really know, if I'm being honest with myself. It's a classic he said she said.

What I do know is I'm pretty squeamish about holding a person accountable for bad teenage behavior 30 something years later. Especially if there's no evidence of that kind of thing in the ensuing years. It's early, but this isn't looking like a Harvey Weinstein or Bill Cosby serial predator.

The reason I said "probably" is simple. He believes he is better suited to make decisions about a woman's body than the woman. It's not a stretch to see how that mindset could lead to sexual assault, especially emboldened by alcohol.

Floyd County Board of Education approves plan to host Teach for America training

By Aaron K. Nelson
APPALACHIAN NEWSPAPER

The Appalachian arm of national nonprofit Teach for America is gearing up to change their summer training program for pre-service teachers by bringing it to Floyd County and simultaneously providing a summer academic and 'boot camp' and bridge program.

Robin Gabbard, executive director for Teach for America Appalachia, said that the six-week pre-service training in classroom management has previously taken place in the Mississippi River delta area, and has not included enough time interacting with actual students.

"Since 2011, we have placed 35 teachers here in Floyd County, and 74 percent of those have remained three or more years here," Gabbard said. "We are really, really grateful for the strong relationship we have with Floyd County Schools."

Stephanie Devine, director of teacher leadership development, said the current approach, after gathering teachers from around the country, is a training in rural Mississippi, but training them in Appalachia for future service in Appalachia would be better.

The two-and-a-half-week boot camp and enrichment courses would be co-located with the summer feeding program, so there is already a plan in place to feed the students. All Floyd County Schools would have to provide, Devine said, would be access to the classrooms and transportation from centralized pick-up and drop-off hubs in the county.

The board also heard stories from county teachers placed here by Teach for America Appalachia, each of whom said they have felt warmly welcomed here.

The board approved the plan as part of its regular consent agenda.

Floyd County Schools names district-wide guidance counselor

SPECIAL TO THE FLOYD CHRONICLE AND TIMES

Floyd County Schools Superintendent Danny Adkins has announced that Leslie DeRossett-Fannin is the district's new district-wide guidance counselor.

"We're happy to have Leslie serve in this role for our district," Adkins said in a statement. "She will focus on supporting students through programs like bullying prevention, suicide awareness, behavior interventions, and college and career exploration. She is a liaison for us with local, state, and federal agencies dealing with mental health so that we help remove academic, social and emotional barriers for our students."

Fannin has worked in Floyd County Schools for 26 years, serving 16 as an administrator in the role of guidance counselor. Fannin, the statement said, is a Prestonsburg High School and Morehead State University graduate, working at Allen Elementary, Prestonsburg Elementary and May Valley Elementary.

She has served in many roles including Gifted and Talented (TAG) school coordinator, Positive Behavior Interventions and Supports (PBIS) coordinator and cheer coach.

"I'm excited to have the opportunity to focus on programs to help kids with some of the issues they may face," Fannin said. "We're giving our students tools that will equip them for now and for the rest of their lives. Working through situations, seeking help when you need it and looking to the future are part of having balanced lives.

Our district wants all kids to be ready for life and this new role will allow me to help with those areas."

Superintendent Adkins concluded, "Leslie's enthusiasm for what this role will help her do for kids is contagious and we're looking forward to seeing the innovative ways she will help kids. The board team and I look forward to working with Leslie and being part of the new opportunities she will bring for students."

Leslie and her husband Chris live in Spurlock. Leslie is the mother of Zachary Ousley, attorney, and Madelyn Ousley, student.

BSCTC, MAC release Fall Artist Series lineup Proceeds go towards Big Sandy Singers & Band scholarships

SPECIAL TO THE FLOYD CHRONICLE AND TIMES

The Big Sandy Community and Technical College Department of Fine Arts and the Mountain Arts Center (MAC) have released the lineup for the annual Fall Artist Series to be held at The Gearheart on the Prestonsburg campus. This year's concerts include Senora May, an all-star lineup called "Star City Session," and Louisa native Adam Chaffins.

The series opens with back-to-back presentations in late October. First up will be Estill County native Senora May on Thursday, Oct. 25. May is a singer/songwriter with deep folk influences. She is fresh from two important performances this month. On Sept. 8, she presented her album release show in Lexington. Her new project — Lainhart — is already garnering high praise from critics. On Sept. 15, she was part of "Kickin' It On The Creek," a three-day music and camping festival near Irvine, Ky that usually escalates artists to the next level in notoriety.

The next evening—Friday, Oct. 26—features the "Star City Session." The lineup for this event includes Nicholas Jamerson, Grayson Jenkins, Sean Whiting, and Bek Smallwood. All four artists are busy with various projects on and off the road. This will be the first time they have graced a stage as a foursome. Jamerson describes the night as one of "singing songs and telling the stories that made the songs."

The fall series will conclude with the Thursday, Nov. 8, appearance of Nashville musician and Louisa native Adam Chaffins, back in eastern Kentucky for a performance with his full band.

Moving to Nashville in 2010, he fast became an in-demand bassist and vocalist, touring with Rounder Records' The Deadly Gentlemen and spending time as a member of North Carolina progressive bluegrass band Town Mountain. In the studio, he's gained the attention of producers like Buddy Miller and Dave Brainard, and as a writer he won a SESAC award in 2013 for co-writing with GRAMMY winning group The Infamous Stringdusters.

His debut album — Some Things Won't Last — is scheduled for November release and features ornamentation more often found in pop and rock circles. Chaffins has a college degree in Jazz Performance.

All Fall Artist Series performances are on sale now through the MAC box office at, www.macarts.com, by calling, 1 (888) MAC-ARTS, or in person Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tickets are $12 and all the proceeds go to benefit the Big Sandy Singers & Band scholarship fund at BSCTC.

Report: Floyd, other counties still struggling

A FLOYD CHRONICLE AND TIMES STAFF REPORT

Floyd and other Eastern Kentucky counties are still struggling to overcome the last recession, while other regions of the state are improving, a new study reports.

Compared to other regions of the state, this region has more residents who are leaving, fewer residents working and lower wages and wage growth than other areas of the state, the study says.

The study, "A Citizen's Guide to Kentucky's Economy Since the Recession," was issued this month by the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce.

It was created by Dr. Paul Coomes, emeritus professor of economics at the University of Louisville.

It shows that Kentucky lags behind other states in terms of job, population and wage growth, but it has "outperformed more than half of its bordering states" in those categories.

The same cannot be said about the Mountain region highlighted in the study, which includes Floyd and other Eastern Kentucky counties.

Coomes reports that economic growth in regions throughout the state are varied, "with decline in some areas and significant improvement in others."

Kentucky ranked 47th in per capita personal income last year, and its per capita income of approximately $39,400 is less than all of its border states except West Virginia.

Of nine regions identified in the study, the Mountain region's per capita income is less than half of the state average, at about $15,900 in 2016 — less than all other regions in the state.

The Mountain region was also identified as have the least personal income per capita, at $30,300, than other parts of the state.

This region is also the only one highlighted in the report to have a negative wage and salary growth since the last recession. Its wage and salary growth rate is instead, listed as a decrease of 14.1 percent, while other areas of the state experienced increases in this wage and salary growth. The least amount of increase was in Ashland, at 6.6 percent and the highest increase in northern Kentucky, at 47.8 percent.

The report maps the percentage of job growth in every Kentucky county from June 2009 through December 2017, and once again, the Mountain region and Floyd County are well behind other regions of the state.

Job growth decreased by 12 percent in Floyd County, the report shows, by 20 percent in Johnson and Martin counties, by 39 percent in Knott County and by 25 percent in Magoffin and Letcher counties.

In terms of employment growth, the Mountain region, once again, dived 17 percent since the end of the last recession, and Ashland also decreased by 7 percent. All other areas of the state reported positive job growth numbers. The average is about 10 percent statewide, with the largest increase in Louisville at 15.8 percent.

This part of the state also has fewer people who are employed than other areas. Coomes reported an employment-to-population ratio of 36.6 in the Mountain region. The highest percentage is 62.5 percent in Northern Kentucky, which is higher than the US average.

According to the report, more than 20,000 people have left the Mountain region between 2010 to 2017. It was one of three areas to lose residents during that period, but the next-highest loss was in Ashland, with a decline of 3,788.

In the mountains, the population decrease attributed to deaths during that time is about 2,339, the report shows, while migration accounted for a population decline of 23,700 in this region.

From 1969 to 2017, the population has not grown at all in the mountains, the report shows.

Veterans Stand Down set this week

Veterans from Floyd, Johnson, Pike, Perry and surrounding counties are invited to attend the Veterans Stand Down in Prestonsburg this weekend.

Admission is free to this event, which will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 28, at Archer Park in Prestonsburg.

Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, which operates the veteran's transitional housing center in Pike County, has hosted this event for four years in Pike, Floyd and Johnson counties.

Margaret Rice, the outreach coordinator for the MCCC homeless veterans program, said more than 100 veterans are usually in attendance.

"It's for all veterans, however, our focus is on the homeless veterans," she said. "It's just a day for them to relax, enjoy music and not to worry about anything, just R&R."

MCCC has partnered with several local businesses and individuals to host this event. It will offer a free lunch provided by Texas Roadhouse, door prizes, gift bags with nonperishable food items and toiletries, informational resources for veterans, a job fair, live music and other activities.

Floyd BOE announces Early College and Career Explorers

Floyd Schools Superintendent Danny Adkins has announced a new early exploration program in college and career pathways, Floyd County Early College and Career Explorers, FCEC2s. Thanks to a partnership with the Kentucky Department of Education Career and Educational program and the Kentucky Valley Educational Cooperative, according to a statement from the Floyd County Schools District, eighth grade students will be part of a pilot program for the 2018-2019 school year.

"The program is going to provide our students with the opportunity to learn more about the fields of office technology, welding, electricity, carpentry, automotive, health science (pre-nursing) and heating, ventilation and air conditioning systems during one grading term through participation in programs at our Floyd County Are Technology Center in Martin," Adkins said. "South Floyd Elementary and Duff-Allen Central Elementary will partner and be our first two schools with students beginning in mid-October. SFES Principal Denise Issac and DACE Principal Wes Halbert agree that providing field experiences in career education will help these eight graders select a future college and career pathway." Adkins continues, "We'll have an informational meeting for our students at each school to help communicate the program design and goals. Our District Wide Guidance Counselor, Leslie Fannin, ATC Principal Lenville Martin, school administrators and staff and ATC instructors will all be there to help answer questions that students may have. We have some of our community agencies/members who are graciously providing some extras, like T-shirts. Then we will be sending a newsletter home with each student."

ATC Principal Lenville Martin said, "Students who continue on this route will acquire skills and certifications which will allow them to get a good job when they graduate from high school or be ahead of the game along their career pathway in college which can save their parents money."

Adkins ended saying, "We are thrilled to see this program get up and running in our district. We believe that when students know more about the opportunities provided at our area ATC, that they are better equipped to consider possible choices for their own education and career pathways. This is another way we are providing more opportunities for all kids."

With the win, Prestonsburg improved to 10-5-1.

Walton-Verona dropped to 9-6-1 with the loss.

Jillian Kidd scored two goals to lead Prestonsburg to the victory.

Accompanying Kidd in the Prestonsburg scoring column, Elizabeth Burchett and Makayla Slone netted one goal apiece.

"We played well versus Walton Verona," said Prestonsburg coach Paul Burchett. "It was a huge win for our program. We really got after it and showed the fight that we had been missing in some previous games this year. It's the first time in school history that we have reached the semifinals of the All 'A' Classic and I think it may be the first time an Eastern Kentucky team has gotten this far. I know nobody has since the regions were realigned and went to 16 regions like the other sports. I'm super proud of this group for being able to accomplish that."

NOTICE

Kentucky Power Company plans to file an application with the Public Service Commission of Kentucky on or before September 21, 2018 seeking authority to rename and to amend its existing Tariff H.E.A.P. (Home Energy Assistance Program). The tariff would be renamed Tariff R.E.A. (Residential Energy Assistance). The proposed effective date, subject to Commission approval of the modifications, for the amended tariff is on or before October 31, 2018.

Home Energy Assistance in Reduced Temperatures (HEART)

Participating low-income residential customers, whose primary source of heat is electric, are eligible to receive an electric bill credit of $115.00 a month for bills rendered in January through April.

Participating low-income residential customers, whose primary source of heat is non-electric, are eligible to receive an electric bill credit of $58.00 a month for bills rendered in January through April.

Temporary Heating Assistance in Winter (THAW)

Participating residential customers, who are experiencing temporary economic hardships, are eligible to receive electric bill credits totaling no more than $175.00 for bills rendered in January through April in any single calendar year.

The change in the benefits currently available through the Company's existing Home Energy Assistance Program and the proposed Home Energy Assistance in Reduced Temperatures Program are illustrated in the table below:

Heating Source	Existing Home Energy Assistance Program		Proposed Home Energy Assistances in Reduced Temperatures Program		Monthly Change	Program Year Change
	Monthly Benefit	7 Months	Monthly Benefit	4 Months
Electric	$65.00	$455.00	$115.00	$460.00	$50/ month (76.9%)	$5/year (1.1%)
Non-Electric	$33.00	$231.00	$58.00	$232.00	$25/month (75.6%)	$1/year (0.4%)

The proposed Temporary Heating Assistance in Winter program is a new program and thus there is no change in existing benefits.

Participation in the programs above will be determined by the residential customer's local community action agency in accordance with guidelines approved by the Commission and the availability of funds. Customer participation is limited to one program each calendar year.
