Murder trial postponed

Sexton agrees to plead guilty, then withdraws it

By MARY MEADOWS

The trial against a Letcher County resident accused of killing a man in Floyd County four years ago was set to start on Tuesday, but it will be rescheduled, following a hearing in Floyd County Circuit Court on Monday. Floyd County Circuit Judge Thomas Smith granted two motions filed by Floyd Junior Sexton, 37, of Ermine in Letcher County, who was scheduled to go on trial on Tuesday in a case in which he is accused of the 2014 murder of Bill

The Mountain Arts Center debuted the premiere of a new television show that will highlight local musicians last week.

On Oct. 12, the MAC showcased "Live from CMH 23," a show that was produced in partnership with a national television network, The Country Network, and will be broadcast on that station on Nov. 5.

Attendance was low at this free-admission event — held as the Jenny Wiley Festival was underway in Prestonsburg — but it did not lack enthusiasm from those who Collins. Smith expressed his disappointment, however, with actions Sexton has taken recently.

"This is what bothers me about this," Smith said. "This is not anything new. This is not something new. You knew there was trial tomorrow, and yet, you didn't file this. You agreed to a guilty plea last week, and I get this stuff this morning. And so, I see more to this than simply an effort to get justice. I mean, this is pretty much a blatant effort to delay the trial."

Sexton was indicted in 2014 on one count of murder for allegedly shooting Collins on Nov. 5, 2014. Two other people were also indicted in the case.

Officials reported that Sexton agreed to enter a guilty on Friday, Oct. 12, and the hearing was scheduled on Monday for him to enter that plea. Sexton came to the Floyd County Judicial Center, however, with several motions, seeking to withdraw his motion to plead guilty, to fire his attorney, to request a change of venue and report that death threats have been made against him.

Sexton alleged that his attorney Public Advocate Carla BOWENS-TACKETT should be replaced because of an alleged conflict of interest and other issues, and he talked about a prison visit from a chaplain who allegedly told him something confidential in the case.

"That's curious," Smith said, asking for the chaplain's name. Sexton couldn't remember it.

"Well, I guess it was a full service chaplain," Smith told Sexton.

Saying that he knows Tackett has represented Sexton "to the best of her ability," Smith granted Sexton's motion for a new attorney, noting the importance of ensuring a defendant's right to appropriate representation. He ordered another public advocate to take over the case.

Smith also granted Sexton's motion to withdraw his motion to enter a guilty plea, but he did not grant Sexton's motion for a change of venue, following objections from Floyd County Commonwealth Attorney Brent Turner.

"Right after this happened, throughout November and December, this was posted all over here in Floyd County through the Floyd County Times, WSAZ News, WYMT, EKB News. It was all over every news big outlet," Sexton said when he was asked to explain his motion for a change of venue.

Smith clarified his statement, "Alright, that would have been, you're talking about November and December 2014, right?"

"Right," Sexton said.

He said people approached him in jail saying they've seen him on the news.

"I don't feel that my case being tried here in Floyd County is in my best interest," he said.

He said he wanted his trial to be held "anywhere away from Eastern Kentucky."

Turner objected to that motion, saying it should be addressed by Sexton's new attorney.

"This has just been presented, so I'm going to give the Commonwealth 30 days to respond to the motion," Smith said.

Smith also addressed allegations of death threats against Sexton, saying they were detailed in his motion to withdraw a guilty plea.

"You want to make a presentation to the grand jury on that?" Smith asked him. "You're saying someone has threatened your life. Do you want to go in front of the grand jury and bring charges?"

"Yes," Sexton said. Turner said his office will have an investigator talk to Sexton about the alleged threats.

After Smith made the comment about these motions being "pretty much a blatant effort to delay the trial," he expressed disappointment that the trial will be delayed.

He continued, "I'm not sure exactly what the reason is to delay the trial, but I just, I want you to know that you had all of this information before, and didn't bring it forth, then, I'm just kind of, I'm kind of upset with the fact that we couldn't go forward with the trial, when we had people coming from everywhere, including people coming from far off to testify on your behalf, and then we get this, this morning. This is, this is pretty disturbing to me."

Sexton said he's been receiving death threats for three years.

"Well, and I heard exactly nothing about it," Smith told him, "and as a consequence, like I said, we made a lot of effort to get ready for the trial and then, my understanding, I was given the understanding Friday that you agreed to a (plea). You never had agreed to a plea before Friday. You agreed to the plea Friday and then I get all of this filed, well, not even filed. This was handed to our bailiff when he came back from bringing you here for this plea."

After the hearing, Turner said Collins' family would be disappointed.

"We were prepared to go to trial tomorrow," he said. "We had witnesses coming from Arizona, Texas and Virginia. When he indicated that it may get resolved, all of that was called off, but then the bigger issue now is just where he's wanting new attorneys. It wouldn't have mattered if we still had everybody available for tomorrow. We couldn't go now because he's got to have new counsel based on the complaints he's made."

He believes Sexton's will not be tried now, until at least next year.

The case against Sexton involves two other co-defendants.

John Tate Maggard, 33, of McRoberts and Jennifer G. Jernigan, 43, of Prestonsburg, were indicted alongside Sexton on complicity to commit murder.

Turner said he believes that Maggard's case may be resolved soon.

"That one's still pending, and there's a possibility that it may get resolved, but we'll just have to see," he said.

Jernigan pleaded guilty in May 2017, accepting a sentence of five years. The sentence was set to be suspended after she served two years and Jernigan was scheduled to be on supervised probation for three years after that two-year jail term. In exchange for the Floyd County Commonwealth Attorney's offer on a guilty plea, she was required to "testify truthfully" against the Sexton and Maggard. She was enrolled in a Lexington-based substance abuse treatment facility this March, court records show.

tout the CMH 23 partnership with The Country Network as a dream come true for Eastern Kentucky.

"Thank you for letting us be here. Thank you for letting us be a part of this dream, because it's not a dream anymore. It's become reality," The Country Network CEO Tim Eaton told the crowd.

Keith Casebolt, a founding board member of CMH 23, said he got the idea to establish the nonprofit organization after learning four years ago that Eastern Kentucky gets five percent of the revenue generated by tourism in the state.

"I went back immediately and wrote down a little idea called CMH 23 and started to work on it, which is a unified approach for this whole region," Casebolt said. "We've been working on it for about four-and-a-half to five years."

The plan includes creating a regional channel and television studio, based at the MAC, to highlight local musicians and tourist attractions, and partnering with The Country Network to share content. Officials hope to reach 150,000 households in Kentucky alone with this new channel, and "Live from CMH 23" episodes will air nationally on The Country Network.

The partnership is also expected to create educational opportunities through Big Sandy Community & Technical College.

Prestonsburg Mayor Les Stapleton said the venture will be beneficial for the entire region.

"It's going to connect everybody," he said. "We can promote the Appalachian region. We can showcase local talent and, if they were to work it out with the college, then we can train people to be in this field."

Casebolt said Appalachian Wireless CEO Allen Gillum wanted "Nashville quality" when planning was underway to find a partner for CMH 23. Gillum has high hopes for this partnership, saying it could boost the local economy.

"I do believe that if we can get this thing right, which I think we started right, get it up and going, I think in five to 15 years, that CMH 23 has the ability to be one of the very largest economic components east of I75 and south of I64. I really believe that," Gillum said.

Other CMH 23 board members also praised the project.

Hazard City Commissioner Dew Gorman said it could break down regional barriers.

"Whenever Mayor Stapleton brought this idea to me, and presented it, I was all over it because this tears down the lines that we see and worries more about the people," he said. "It's absolutely fantastic and I am honored to be part of this board."

Ashland City Commissioner Amanda Clark said it offers an opportunity to showcase the region.

"We know how great Eastern Kentucky is. We know what's here and it's time we told everybody else what it is and what's here and I couldn't be more honored to be part of it," she said.

Eaton described The Country Network as a "discovery network" that highlights both nationally known musicians and lesser-known musicians from all over the county. He grew up listening to Loretta Lynn, so he knew about Eastern Kentucky when he was approached about a possible affiliation with CMH 23. He said being a part of it was a "no brainer."

"When he (Keith Casebolt) started talking about putting people here that have recording studios and they're teaching kids how to play musical instruments, that is a farm system that we could only dream about," Eaton said. "So, it was a no brainer for us to get involved."

Recording for the first season of "Live from CMH 23" began in April at the Mountain Arts Center, the Paramount Arts Center in Ashland and at Hillbilly Days in Pikeville, and The Country Network team returned to Prestonsburg last week to record performances for the second season of the show.

They taped Troy Burchett singing during the Jenny Wiley Festival and also recorded performances by Clark Sexton, Arlow McKinley, Jason Goble, Senora May and Jeremy Dempsey, as well as others.

Cary Rolfe, vice president for development and artist relations at The Country Network, said his goal is to discover talent and give those musicians a national platform.

Commending MAC Marketing and Programming Director Joe Campbell for scheduling recording sessions for The Country Network, Rolfe said he and his team "have not been disappointed at all" with the talent they've found during recording sessions here.

"Our first trip up here, I think it was in March, we taped, I think over 100 artists in the two trips here, and they've all been spectacular," Rolfe said. "They've been wonderful to work with. A lot of them, it's their first time in front of a TV camera, and they were pros."

Eaton said The Country Network is giving CMH 23 six minutes of commercial time every hour so that it can continue its mission.

"We're giving back to that nonprofit organization so that you guys can continue to develop talent, so that we can record it so that we can have new discovery talent," he said.

He said he likes the third episode of the show. The Country Network launched in 2009, when it was known as the Artists & Fans Network. It was bought by one of its founders and became the American Music Video Network, briefly, then was renamed The Country Network in 2010.

Zuus Media bought the network in 2013, re-branding it as Zuus Country. In 2016, the network was bought by a Texas company, TCN Country LLC, and its name changed back to The Country Network.

Annexation begins in Wayland

By MARY MEADOWS
STAFF WRITER

The Wayland City Commission moved closer to the final phase of its corridor annexation.

During a regular city commission meeting last week, the commission unanimously approved the second reading of the city's intent to annex the roadway corridor that stretches from the intersection of Ky. 7 and Ky. 550 to that road's intersection with Ky. 80. Then, the commission held the first reading of the ordinance in which the city plans to annex the corridor.

The ordinance annexing the property cites two portions of KRS 81A, which specifies regulations in annexation proceedings. That law requires a 60-day waiting period following the approval and publication of an ordinance announcing a city's intent to annex before it holds the first reading of the ordinance formally annexing the property.

City officials believe, however, that the 60-day waiting period between the two ordinances is not required in Wayland's corridor annexation without property owners.

The city has been annexing corridors surrounding it over the past several years and this is its fourth phase of annexation. The three prior corridor annexations covered from the Knott County line to the center of town, from the center of town to the top of Sizemore Mountain on Ky. 1086 and from the center of town to Lackey.

The road is the primary means of entrance and exit to and from Wayland, a reason the annexation would be beneficial to the city, officials said.

The roadway proposed for annexation stretches about one mile from Lackey, and once the annexation is finalized, residents who live along that road may petition Wayland for voluntary annexation.

In other news, the commission tabled a vote on a lease agreement with the city of Prestonsburg for about 35 acres of property that Prestonsburg owns in Wayland. Prestonsburg obtained this property through its purchase of a portion of the Southern Water & Sewer District and Prestonsburg officials said that city has no need for this acreage. The lease agreement, which has already been approved by the Prestonsburg City Council, allows Wayland to "occupy and use" the property "for the benefit of economically based projects," paying Prestonsburg $1 annually. The lease requires Wayland to pay Prestonsburg two percent of any profits it earns over $75,000 through the property.

Registration underway for Code Red

By MARY MEADOWS
STAFF WRITER

Floyd County Emergency Management is now accepting registrations for a new mass notification system.

Residents can receive text alerts, calls and email notifications about weather emergencies other issues that could pose a danger with the implementation of a Code Red.

Registration is free for this service, which is open to all Floyd County residents and visitors.

Floyd County Emergency Management Director Tim Fields started sharing a registration link for Code Red on local social media pages last week and he said the agency could start sending out test alerts on this system this week.

The Floyd County Fiscal Court approved the only bid it received for the purchase, installation and implementation of the system last August, agreeing to pay OnSlove, based in Florida, $22,000 for Code Red. Fields has been working to obtain grant funding and implement the service since that time.

The county bid request required the company to provide a system that is capable of notifying the entire county within 30 minutes, "producing a minimum of 500 calls per minute or at a rate supported by the local telephony system." It also required the company to include unlimited SMS text, phone app alerts, e-mail, paging and calls as part of its total cost.

Those who register may receive calls, texts or emails about adverse weather events and disasters. The notification system will automatically issue weather warnings, and local agencies will also be able to send out alerts for disasters or other problems that could impact residents.

"Basically, we have the weather warning system and we have the standard warning system, that we can send out," Fields said. "Basically, they use the link and they put their information in and they've got different things they can opt into and opt out of. There's different levels of Weather Warn. You can have it call your home. You can have it email you. You can have it text you. You can put in your cell-phone. You can actually sign up with the mobile app, if you want to download the mobile app. It's all kind of in your control, how you want it to notify you." He explained that the service will provide alerts about emergencies as well as announcements in Floyd County.

"There's going to be other people than just me who will be using it," Fields said. "The water utilities will be using it. At some point, the schools may or may not start using it. The health department will have it. The utilities services will have it. It could be a simple as a boil water advisory, or pending weather issues. If we have a big storm coming, we can put out information on where storm shelters will be, those kind of things."

Judge-Executive Ben Hale explained that Code Red would help the county send area-specific alerts in the county to notify residents about issues that arise in their community.

"It doesn't have to be an all-call every time," Hale said. "It can be down to the minutia of an area if a bridge was going to be worked on or this road was going to be closed, find an alternate route, that they can knock it out within that area."

Fields said, for example, that through Code Red, emergency management could notify residents of a community where a mock disaster drill will be held to let them know that it's just an exercise.

Hale and Fields encourage county residents to sign up for the free service.

"So, we're close to getting our Code Red up and going, which should be beneficial right now for our county citizens, especially when we try to alert or bring something to the attention to somebody in a certain area," Hale said.

"Right," Fields said. "We're coming into a season where we've got the potential to get some weather, so it'll work out very well."

For more information or to sign up for the service, visit the Floyd County 911/EM on Facebook.

Town of Martin Project Public Meeting Notice

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE), Huntington District, is hosting a public meeting for the Town of Martin project. The purpose of the meeting is to solicit comments on potential impacts to historic properties and archeological sites in accordance with Section 106 of the National Historical Preservation Act and to discuss status of real estate acquisitions.

In the past, the USACE evaluated alternative flood damage reduction measures for the Town of Martin project area. The project area has been devastated by numerous floods during the past years. The April 1977 flood is the flood of record and caused severe damages to residential and non-residential structures in the project area. In the past, several flood reduction measures have been implemented such as the construction of the Phase 1 Redevelopment Site. Recent supplemental funding has been allocated towards the Town of Martin project to continue and complete flood reduction measures.

A public meeting with USACE staff available to discuss the project will begin at 6 p.m. on October 25, 2018 at the Fire Station on the Redevelopment Site (1 Randy Caudill Loop, Martin, Kentucky).

Questions regarding the public meeting can be sent to Ms. Rebecca Rutherford, Chief, Environmental Analysis Section, Planning Branch, Huntington District Corps of Engineers, 502 Eighth Street, Huntington, West Virginia 25701-2070.

CMH 23 could benefit the region

Local residents who missed the free premiere of the first episode of "Live from CMH 23" at the Mountain Arts Center last week lost the opportunity to see this region shine.

The one-hour television show, produced with a partnership between the local nonprofit CMH 23 and The Country Network, featured live performances by Eastern Kentucky musicians, including Brittany Taylor, Jeremy Short, The Jenkins Twins, Kelsie May, Cory Harris, Rachel Messer, Sean Whiting, Josh Martin and Chelsea Nolan. Some of those performances were backed by members of the Billie Jean Osborne Kentucky Opry house band.

That list of performers in the first episode of "Live from CMH 23" includes just a few of more than 100 local musicians whose live performances have already been recorded by The Country Network as part of this partnership. Officials traveled to Floyd County last week to record more videos of local musicians at the MAC and the Jenny Wiley Festival.

The videos of these performances will air locally on a new television channel, CMH 23, that is under development, and they will also be broadcast on The Country Network's national network.

Years ago, Kentucky tourism leaders devised a plan to promote this region's musical heritage by promoting US 23 as the Country Music Highway.

Until now, the major developments of that initiative concerned the placement of roadway signs honoring musicians like Ricky Skaggs, Loretta Lynn, Chris Stapleton and others who were born in these mountains, and the opening of the Country Music Highway Museum in Johnson County.

Now, this group, made up of representatives of all communities located along US 23, is working together to grow that plan into something that could actually make a difference in the lives of the musicians who will be highlighted on "Live from CMH 23."

Organizers hope to use this project to give these musicians a national platform and to promote tourism in Eastern Kentucky. They also want to partner with Big Sandy Community & Technical College to launch educational programs that could lead local students into a recording or production or similar career in media.

It's a fine plan that's taken a lot of hard work and diligence. We hope it works.

If done correctly, this television series has the potential to do much more than just bring a few Eastern Kentucky musicians to the forefront. If The Country Network grows into a strong national market, comparable or better than other country music video stations available today, then this series could help redefine a whole region of folks who have been negatively stereotyped for decades.

We're thankful to have a trove of talented, passionate musicians in our midst. We're even more thankful when we get to share that talent and passion with the rest of the country.

Congratulations, CMH 23. We hope the journey continues upward.

GUEST EDITORIAL

Stop arguing with political opponents and start listening

When was the last time you spoke with someone of a different political persuasion than yourself and listened well enough to understand where they were coming from?

Has it been a week? A month? A year?

For way too many of us, the answer to that question is "never."

As a country, we never listen to the "other side" anymore. We listen to the people we already know, the people we already trust. But when it comes to people we don't agree with, we only ever argue.

We are all consumed with hatred for the "other side's" manipulations, lies, bad behaviors and ignorance.

The Internet and social media have only fueled the fire by diluting sensible, measured free speech.

We are cast adrift in an ocean of trolls foaming at the mouth and looking for any chance to be aggressive and mean. Unfortunately, many of us have given up and joined the fray.

But it doesn't have to be this way. It's time we started treating each other less like soldiers on opposite sides of a war and more like family members.

If you're a parent, you've definitely experienced a time when your kid was in the wrong. You knew they had done something bad, but hopefully your reaction wasn't anything like, "How big of an idiot are you?" It was probably something along the lines of "Why did you do that?"

You don't want to belittle or degrade your kid; you want them to learn from their mistakes and do better next time. As a result, you want to understand where they're coming from, and you're open to hearing their explanation, even if you're certain they're wrong.

This is how those of us on opposite political sides need to listen to each other. We need to listen with the intent to understand where the other person is coming from, and the desire to grow and become better people.

TV news doesn't want you to do that. Facebook and Twitter don't want you to do that. Whatever partisan news website you visit doesn't want you to do that. They all want controversy and shouting and anger and fear and insults. All of the drama keeps more people hooked and sells more ads. It's great for their bottom lines, even as it destroys the fabric of America.

It won't be easy to stop arguing and start listening. We've been so conditioned to political fighting and never-give-an-inch attitudes that it's almost innate for many of us. Many of our first attempts at listening may not go well; they may devolve right back into bitter and stupid fighting. But that doesn't mean we shouldn't try.

The first step you can take is to turn off the TV. Log out of Facebook. Then, you can walk out your front door. Pay a visit to the coffee shop. Visit a church you don't normally go to. Ask an acquaintance out to dinner. Patronize a local festival. Do something that isn't staring at a screen, wallowing in hatred for the "other side."

Then, give that "other side" a chance. Listen to them like you would listen to a beloved family member. Try to see where they're coming from. Recognize there are no ulterior motives or secret agendas — they are just like you in that they care about their country and believe they know how to make it better.

You might be surprised at how much you have in common. You might find that you begin to accept where they're coming from. If they're willing to listen as well, you might find that they begin to accept where you're coming from. In any case, "the other side" won't be a demonized, faceless thing anymore; it will be another human being.

Big Sandy Community & Technical College President/CEO Dr. Sherry Zylka and Prestonsburg Mayor Les Stapleton sign an agreement to continue the partnership between the two entities for the operation of the Mountain Arts Center.

P'burg, BSCTC partnership agreement signed

A FLOYD CHRONICLE AND TIMES STAFF REPORT

Big Sandy Community & Technical College President/CEO Dr. Sherry Zylka and Prestonsburg Mayor Les Stapleton formally signed a memorandum of agreement on Friday to continue the college's operation of the Mountain Arts Center.

At the ceremony, held at the MAC, Stapleton commended Dr. Zylka as a "big advocate for the arts" and said the partnership has benefited the city.

"It's been exciting for us because, honestly, it's the first time we were ever in the black at the Mountain Arts Center," Stapleton told those gathered for the ceremony. He was referring to a report previously provided by MAC officials, that showed the facility operated in the red by about $70,000 in 2015, $37,000 in 2016, $60,600 in 2017, but this year, the loss was replaced by a profit of $45,500.

Dr. Zylka said she was "delighted" to extend the partnership between the college and the city.

"The partnership between Big Sandy Community & Technical College and the city of Prestonsburg to have the Mountain Arts Center be a rising star in the community is just an amazing journey and adventure, and we're really looking forward to seeing it taken to the next level," Dr. Zylka said.

The Prestonsburg City Council and the BSCTC Board of Directors approved the agreement prior to the Oct. 12 signing ceremony. Officials reported there has been no change in the terms of the contract since it was first approved in 2016.

Through the partnership, the MAC has access to the college's marketing arm, webmaster, grant writer, information technology and fine arts department.

The college agrees to fund employment of the MAC director, marketing and programming director, assistant fine arts director, production and technical director, fine arts faculty and student workers and interns, while the city agrees to fund the employment of the MAC's assistant director, box office manager and part-time employees in concessions, the box office and stage and lighting roles.

According to the agreement, any revenue generated through the MAC's recording studio will be "split 50/50" between the MAC and the college, while all other revenues from shows, events, rentals and donations and other funds earned by the MAC will stay in that facility.

The agreement, however, requires the MAC to pay a $71,000 management fee to the college to support the personnel, with monthly installments of about $6,000.

It also includes a profit sharing option, through which the city and the college agree that at the end of the fiscal year, the college is entitled to earn a portion of profits if the MAC closes the fiscal year with a positive net asset position. Under that condition in the agreement, the college would be eligible to receive 25 percent of the revenue and 30 percent of "each and every" $50,000 in profit above $100,000 that is made at the end of the fiscal year.

The agreement also outlines the goals of the partnership as being to expand the MAC's capacity, raise awareness about it being a "premiere performing arts facility," promote it as a tourist attraction, enhance the college's missions to "enhance community and economic development" and "become a leader in the community" and create a platform from which the MAC and the college can "better develop and enhance the talent and skills" of people who are interested in the performing arts.

Pike does not qualify for state's ambulance emergency regulation

By JOSH LITTLE
APPALACHIAN NEWSPAPERS

Last month, Kentucky Gov. Matt Bevin and the Cabinet for Health and Family Services drafted a State of Emergency declaration to combat inadequate ambulance services in Kentucky counties, which according to the regulation, could have impacted Pike County. However, Charles "Chuck" O'Neal, deputy executive director of the Kentucky Board of Emergency Medical Services, said that information may be incorrect.

Documents provided by the state, citing a study from the Pegasus Institute, said that Pike County is one of six counties in Kentucky that have one Class 1 ambulance service that is not owned or operated by a public organization (a county or city government entity).

In fact, Pike County has two Class 1 ambulance providers not owned by a public organization: Trans-Star Ambulance, located in Pikeville, and Appalachian First Response Emergency Services, Inc., located in Stone.

In an email sent to Appalachian First Response, O'Neal said he did not believe Pike County would qualify for the emergency regulation, which, according to the statement, is designed to place certain ambulance Certificate of Need (CON) applications into non-substantive review, streamlining the process of approving additional providers also helping to increase competition, protect patient choice and alleviate ambulance shortage.

"I believe the fact that two (2) Class I licenses are held in Pike County, not to mention a third through Pikeville Fire that operates in the city of Pikeville and is government operated, relieves Pike County from consideration under the non-substantive review provision," said O'Neal.

O'Neal cited the following requirements:

The proposal involves an application to establish a Class I ground ambulance service; The applicant's proposed service area is limited to a county with a population of 50,000 or more; There is no more than one licensed Class I ground ambulance service in the county that the applicant is proposing to serve; and the current Class I ground ambulance service provider serving the county is not owned or operated by a public organization.

Doug Hogan, executive director of public affairs for the Cabinet for Health and Family Services, said Friday that an initial emergency regulation did include Pike County.

However, he said only three counties meet the criteria in the latest emergency regulation filed —Warren, Laurel and McCracken.

Kentucky judge tosses 'Marsy's Law' ballot question, but votes will still be counted

By JACK BRAMMER
LEXINGTON
HERALD-LEADER

Franklin Circuit Judge Thomas Wingate ruled Monday that Secretary of State Alison Lundergan Grimes, as the state's chief election official, cannot certify the votes cast for or against a constitutional amendment known as Marsy's Law that will be on the statewide Nov. 6 ballot.

In his 18-page order, Wingate said the ballot question, which grants certain rights to victims of crime, does not sufficiently state the substance of the proposed constitutional amendment. The question will remain on the ballot and officials should count the votes for or against it in case an appellate court rules differently from him, Wingate said.

Sen. Whitney West-erfield, R-Hopkinsville, successfully introduced in this year's state legislative session the proposed constitutional amendment in the form of Senate Bill 3. Both the Senate and House approved it and drafted the question for it on the ballot.

Voters will be asked this question: "Are you in favor of providing constitutional rights to victims of crime, including the right to be treated fairly, with dignity and respect, and the right to be informed and to have a voice in the judicial process?"

On Aug. 7, the Kentucky Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers challenged the substance of the ballot question, saying the wording is misleading. It filed suit against Grimes, West-erfield, Rep. Joe Fischer and Marsy's Law for Kentucky LLC.

Kentucky is one of six states with questions about victims' rights on the ballot in November. The nationwide campaign is named after Marsalee Nicholas, a California college student who was murdered in 1983. One week after her death, the man accused of killing her was let out of jail on bail. Nicholas' mother did not know that and was confronted by him at a grocery store.

Fifteen states already have similar amendments in their constitutions.

Westerfield, who is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and an announced candidate for attorney general in 2019 after losing to Democrat Andy Beshear in 2015, said he "profoundly" disagrees with Wingate's ruling "and will seek transfer of the inevitable appeal directly to the Kentucky Supreme Court."

A statement from Marsy's Law for Kentucky said "we strongly believe the ballot question drafted by the General Assembly adequately informs the voters and will immediately appeal the decision to the Kentucky Court of Appeals."

Louisville attorney R. Kenyon Meyer, who is representing the criminal defense lawyers, said his clients "are pleased with the well-reasoned opinion of the court."

"Before our Constitution can be changed, the voters should be fully informed about the content of a proposed amendment before they vote," Meyer said.

Wingate said his ruling does not address the constitutionality or the merits of the substance of SB 3, but is concerned solely with the wording of the ballot question.

"The heart of the issue before the court is does the question submitted to the electorate incorporate the substance of the amendment in order to properly inform the electorate of the contents of the proposed constitutional amendment," said Wingate.

He said the question "must encompass the substance of the amendment in order to properly and fairly inform the public of the contents of the proposed constitutional amendment."

He said the question submitted by the General Assembly fails to do that. He said SB 3 contains numerous new constitutional rights that would be granted to crime victims, such as giving victims timely notice of all court proceedings and the right to be present at the trial and all other proceedings.

"The question drafted by the General Assembly for SB 3 merely asks if voters are interested in providing constitutional rights to victims and instead of stating the proposed constitutional rights simply categorizes the rights as the right to be treated "fairly" and with "dignity and respect."

"The electorate cannot be expected or required to vote on a constitutional amendment of which they are not accurately informed of the substance," said Wingate.

Wingate said he anticipates the issue will be settled by the appellate courts upon review. He said the secretary of state may tally the ballots but must withhold certification unless ordered to finalize the vote by a reviewing court.

Grimes' spokesman, Bradford Queen, said the secretary of state is reviewing the ruling. He said votes on the ballot question will be counted and made public but will not be certified until a court says to do so.

Wheelwright wants to partner with Prestonsburg for police

By MARY MEADOWS
STAFF WRITER

Wheelwright City Commission members praised the work of its newly-hired police officer last week and talked about the possibility of partnering with Prestonsburg to grow its police presence in the city.

During its Oct. 10 meeting, commission members praised the work of David Pridemore, who was recently hired to work as Police Chief. Randy Johnson is off on medical leave. Pridemore, who is also employed at the federal courthouse in Pikeville, works part time in Wheelwright.

"I just wish we could have him more than part time," Mayor Don Hall said, responding to a compliment given by Commissioner Andy Akers.

Akers mentioned a possible partnership with Prestonsburg to provide police officers on a contract basis in Wheelwright, and Hall said he talked to Prestonsburg Mayor Les Stapleton about it.

City Attorney Tyler Green said Wheelwright could approve an interlocal agreement with Prestonsburg for police services. The city has one, he said, with Floyd County for an animal control officer.

He suggested that Hall check with the Kentucky League of Cities about whether Wheelwright would need a rider on its insurance policy for contract employees.

He said if Wheelwright contracted with another city for police service, that officer would remain an employee of that city, not Wheelwright.

"You would pay a flat rate for the service," Green said. All Kentucky police officers have county-wide jurisdiction, he explained.

Green agreed to talk to Stapleton about it.

Stapleton said he is considering the proposal and must ensure there won't be any liability issues for Prestonsburg

Police if an agreement is approved.

Hall reported he has also talked with Stapleton about the possibility of contracting the Prestonsburg fire marshal/code enforcement officer for Wheelwright.

Wheelwright City Commissioners also:

- Approved the financial report, showing the city had about $18,000 in carry-forward funding, $170,600 in its prison fund and $24,000 in its road fund in September and $24,000 in bills for September and October.

- Received a report from Commissioner Sam Little regarding a disciplinary hearing held last month because of allegations made by his parents and girlfriend. He said, "The situation we had last time, we actually sat down and had a discussion with our core members of our fire department and I am happy to say, I think, for the time being we've got it on the right track. We've got a goal set and a way to get there, so."

support enforcement for county residents.

On Tuesday, the Kentucky Cabinet for Health and Family Services released a copy of a settlement agreement signed by Bartley, Cabinet Secretary Adam Meier and Commissioner of the Cabinet's Department of Income Support Bryan Hubbard, reporting the lawsuit Bartley filed against the cabinet is dismissed and the case was settled, and Bartley's oversight of child support enforcement will now be handled by the Madison County Attorney.

Hubbard said in a telephone interview that the negotiation for this settlement agreement has occurred over the past two weeks and was finalized "about a week ago." All parties are prohibited from commenting on the lawsuit, but Hubbard said he could talk about child support enforcement services in Floyd County.

He said, "Number one, Mr. Bartley will no longer be administering child support for Floyd County. The child support office will come to be administered by the Madison County Attorney's office. It will stay in its same location. Everybody who was in the office, as well as those employees who were previously dismissed, had an opportunity to interview if they wished. Two of the three dismissed workers applied and were rehired. They are the senior case managers and they have been placed back into their positions."

Hubbard said he was in agreement with the terms of the settlement agreement, which was approved Sept. 20.

In exchange for the dismissal of the lawsuit, the cabinet agreed to move Bartley's child support enforcement contract to another entity by Sept. 30, with the state paying related costs and invoices submitted by Bartley's office.

The cabinet agreed to contract with a member of the Floyd County Bar Association, the settlement says, and Hubbard reported Tuesday that attorney Michael Fox will oversee Floyd County Child Support Enforcement.

"Effective today, the Madison County Attorney's office has hired a member of the Floyd County Bar by the name of Mike Fox, who has a caseload in Floyd County through his private practice, who has prior or child support experience and he will be the one performing the legal work for the Floyd County Child Support in the Floyd County Child Support Office, which will remain where it has always been," Hubbard said.

The settlement also notes that "any currently pending and preliminary investigation being conducted by any agency" of the cabinet, including "any pending and preliminary investigation related in any way" to the lawsuit Bartley filed against the cabinet "will cease in view of the termination" of Bartley's contract with the cabinet.

It also states that "no information obtained through any currently pending or preliminary investigation, including any currently pending and preliminary investigation related" to the lawsuit "will be used by the Cabinet against Bartley for any purpose."

The parties agree to decline to comment about the lawsuit and agreed to state only that they have "no comment" when asked about it.

By signing the settlement, Bartley agreed to discharge the cabinet from any and all liability or claims originally alleged by the lawsuit, and the cabinet agreed to discharge Bartley from any claims of liability as well.

The agreed order will lead to the dismissal of the lawsuit, with prejudice, the order said.

Bartley filed the lawsuit against the cabinet in Franklin County in July, claiming that a letter ending his contract with the cabinet for child support enforcement services "for the convenience of the Commonwealth" was unlawful.

Hubbard responded to Bartley's claims with another letter on Aug. 13, in which the cabinet officially withdrew its previous termination letter and reported that Bartley's contract for child support enforcement is terminated, "effective immediately," because of his alleged failure to meet performance goals, his "deliberate staff mismanagement" and "general unprofessionalism."

The notice of termination letter claims that the performance measures in Floyd County office declined in the 2017 fiscal year after the departure of one employee and the hiring of Bartley's girlfriend, who the letter claims, was allowed to work from home.

Hubbard claimed in the notice of termination that Bartley fired his "three most senior caseworkers, leaving one caseworker to handle approximately 3,200 cases" and then hired less experienced workers who earn more. The letter claims he fired the employees under a "false pretense" that a mandated budget reduction and pension costs would financially impact the office.

Hubbard also claims that Bartley made comments to his staff about choking a state worker and burning down the governor's house.

At the time, Bartley said he intended to "disprove every single claim" asserted by Hubbard. He could not be reached for comment prior to press deadline on Tuesday.

Learning as I go with Diabetes

May 17, 2018 is a day Carolyn Rohr, known as Sue to everyone will not forget anytime soon. It all began with a sore on the side of her foot that would not heal. She made an appointment with her family doctor to get it checked out just to be safe. Once there she had lab work done, her foot was checked and she was referred to a specialist. On this day May 17, 2018 she went to see the podiatrist and he had the results back from her lab work and it was then that she found out she had diabetes. "He actually thought I was going to lose my foot" Rohr stated. Hearing this and finding out I had diabetes was devastating. At the time of diagnosis her A1C level was 7.9%. Type 2 Diabetes is diagnosed with an A1C >6.5%. The A1C test measures your average blood glucose for the past 2 to 3 months.

With a family history of diabetes and risk factors for diabetes, she stated "you don't want to think about it". She had only one of the common symptoms of diabetes. Symptom of diabetes include:

- Frequent urination
- Excessive thirst
- Blurred vision
- Extreme fatigue
- Extreme hunger
- Unintentional weight loss
- Irritability
- Slow healing wounds
- Frequent infections

After her diagnosis of Type 2 Diabetes, Sue enrolled in the Diabetes Self Management Sessions at the Floyd County Health Department. It was at these sessions that Rohr learned more about diabetes and what to eat to control her blood sugar.

Rohr who is the Manager at McDonald's admits the first two weeks were hard. With working in fast food she has learned she can still have fast food, she just makes healthier choices and monitors the portions.

Since May she has made changes in her diet and lifestyle. She has lost 63 pounds, follows a 1500 calorie diet while monitoring her carbohydrate intake. The results of her work are proven by her twice a day blood sugar readings which are now normal. Her last A1C dropped to 6.3%. The American Diabetes Association recommends an A1C <7% for adults with diabetes. She currently is controlling her blood sugar, without medication, with diet and activity only. Rohr stated, "I feel great, I have more energy and no longer get sleepy when driving". Her foot has healed and she still sees the Podiatrist along with her family doctor.

Dietitian and Diabetes Educator with the Floyd County Health Department stated "Sue is a true success, because she took the information I provided her and made it work". She is determined and has a goal to succeed. "I admire her for what she has accomplished in these few months all the while working daily in a restaurant" Younce stated.

When asked, What advise she would give to someone newly diagnosed with diabetes? Rohr stated, "definitely take the classes, they are informative, you learn a lot and don't have a breakdown. It will be alright, you will get use to it and you will learn. I am learning as I go."

More than 100 million adults are living with Diabetes or Prediabetes according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

According to the most recent Behavioral Risk Factor Surveillance System data, Kentucky ranked #7 in the United States for Diabetes. So it is recommended you know your risk factors and get screened.

Are you at Risk?

- Over the age of 45 years
- Have a family history of diabetes
- Overweight
- Not active
- Delivered a baby weighing more than 9 pounds
- History of Gestational Diabetes

If you answer yes to one or more of these questions or you have symptoms of diabetes talk with your health care provider about getting your blood sugar checked.

BETSY LAYNE — The first round of the 15th Region Volleyball Tournament kicked off Monday night at Betsy Layne High School.

Johnson Central took on Floyd Central, but was unable to put the Lady Jaguars (3-0) away putting an end to their season.

The first match of the night saw Pike Central and East Ridge square off. The two teams have met three times this season so far, and East Ridge won two of the three matches this season. East Ridge continued this winning streak pulling off a 3-0 victory in three very close games (25-22, 25-14, 25-21).

The second match pitted Johnson Central (11-17) vs Floyd Central (26-6). The Lady Golden Eagles struggled to keep up with the Lady Jaguars falling 25-8 in the first game. Johnson Central fought back hard in the second set to try to keep their season hopes alive, but Floyd Central was just too much with a second game score of 25-19. The final game was 25-11.

This pins East Ridge vs Floyd Central in the semifinals with the winner of that match appearing in the 15th Region Volleyball championship match.

The other side of the bracket has Pikeville (30-6) taking on Lawrence County (15-19) and Paintsville (32-3) going head-to-head with Belfry (12-10).

Dominant Casey County rolled up 503 yards of total offense in the convincing victory.

Quarterback Austin Campbell helped to pace Casey County offensively, completing nine of 12 passes for 140 yards and two TD. Campbell is one of the most underrated quarterbacks in Class 3A.

rolled to the non-district win.

Haden Bastin led the Rebels in receiving, hauling in three receptions for 91 yards and two TDs.

As a team, Casey County rushed 23 times for 300 yards and five TDs.

Preston Tucker paced the Rebels on the ground, rushing nine times for 124 yards and three TDs.

Brown and Elijah Pitman rushed for one TD apiece for the Rebels. Brown finished second in rushing for the Rebels, providing 83 yards.

Pitman paced Casey County defensively, recording eight tackles.

Dalton Hall accounted for Betsy Layne's only TD, reeling in a scoring reception from quarterback Chase Mims.

Lady Blackcats edge Johnson Central, take 57th District title

By STEVE LEMASTER
SPORTS WRITER

INEZ — Prestonsburg would not be denied a 57th District girls' soccer title. The Lady Blackcats, under the direction of head coach Paul Burchett, managed to edge rival Johnson Central 1-0 in the 57th District Girls' Soccer Tournament title game at Sheldon Clark High School Stadium on Thursday.

Makayla Slone netted the game-winning goal for the Lady Blackcats. Slone scored off an assist from Jillian Kidd.

Goalkeeper Chelsea Samons led the Prestonsburg defensive effort, recording a shutout.

The Lady Blackcats excelled both offensively and defensively.

"The girls played great," said Burchett. "Johnson Central is a good team and we knew that. But we knew if we played the way we are capable, that we're really good too. It was a great game between two really good teams and another Johnson Central-Prestonsburg classic. It's unbelievable the number of games that we've had against Johnson Central over the last few years that have been decided in the last 5 to 10 minutes or overtime. Our defense was fantastic. Chelsea Samons played her best game of the season in goal. Midfield controlled the game with effort, ball winning and good decision making."

With the win, Prestonsburg improved to 15-6-1.

Johnson Central slipped to 17-2-1 with the loss.

Both Prestonsburg and Johnson Central advanced to the 15th Region Girls' Soccer Tournament in Pikeville. The field for the 15th Region Girls' Soccer Tournament also includes Lawrence County and Belfry.

Floyd Central, Prestonsburg honored for sportsmanship

Prestonsburg's Ethan Varney plows through two East Ridge defenders Friday night in a 32-16 Class 2A District 8 win. With the win, the Blackcats advance to 1-7 on the season and will be at home this week as they host Betsy Layne. For full game preview, see Friday's edition of the Floyd Chronicle and Times.

LEXINGTON — Floyd Central and Prestonsburg are among 68 KHSAA member schools whom have been identified as having zero disqualified players or coaches during the 2017-18 school year following a final review of the available data. With 596 disqualifications reported last year in the sports of Baseball, Basketball, Field Hockey, Football, Soccer, Softball, Volleyball and Wrestling; the level of sportsmanship displayed by the 68 member schools becomes all the more impressive. Many of these schools were recognized at the KHSAA Annual Meeting of the membership in September, with additional schools recognized following an audit of disqualification data in October.

"In this day when it is more and more difficult to recruit and retain officials and where conduct expectations in everyday conversation appear to be subpar, it is great that we can recognize these schools for modeling that sportsmanship and good behavior are important," said KHSAA Commissioner Julian Tackett. "Displaying good sportsmanship on the field or court, when tensions can sometimes be overblown and over-exaggerated, makes this a great feat for each of the schools."

Floyd Central earned the sportsmanship recognition in its first year of existence following the consolidation of Allen Central and South Floyd high schools in 2017.

Turkey Recipes

FROM A
Child's Point of View

TURKEY

First, I would go to the barn and catch a turkey. Next, I would take his feathers off and put cheese on him. Then, I would put him in a big big thing where the cookies go in. Last, I put it in the stove.

Then when he is done I would eat it.

– Alexis Puckett, age 5

TURKEY

Get a turkey by going to WalMart and buy it. Before you cook it you need to: put sauce on it like mustard and get all the grits out of it.

Cook the turkey at 100 degrees for 100 minutes in the fire (you cannot play with fire you must be careful with it so you don't die). The turkey is done when I look at it. You can eat a fork with the turkey. For dessert I would go with another turkey. – Jayson Bartley, age 6
