REGISTRATION OF RELIEF SEEKERS TO BE REQUIRED

New Program Expected to Start Soon After July 1st

CASELOAD LIGHTENED

All relief clients expecting work on the new relief program must register at the district office of the National Re-Employment Service, Pikeville, J. S. Murphey, area supervisor of the Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration, said this week upon his return from Louisville.

Instructions to this effect were sent out of Washington a few days ago, and Mr. Murphey emphasized the importance of following them. "Unless relief clients register with the Re-Employment office," he said, "they cannot be given work or any form of relief under the new program, no matter how long they have been enrolled as relief clients."

The new relief program is expected to be started soon after July 1. Projects of real value are expected to be started soon after the new program goes into effect. The minimum to be paid each man on work relief under this plan will be $21, while the maximum will be approximately $50.

Though approximately 808 persons in this county have been removed from relief rolls, at least temporarily, there yet remain 2,176 persons on relief. A total of 1,683 men and 74 women are working, while 419 are on direct relief. Twenty-seven work projects have been started. For Floyd work relief the appropriation for the month of June was $25,200; the direct relief appropriation, $6,297.

PLAYGROUND FUND DRIVE IS PLANNED

Tentative plans were laid at a meeting Monday night of the Prestonsburg playground commission for a drive for funds with which to purchase equipment necessary to procuring the advantages of the recreation program offered by the Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration.

The committee set $100 as its goal, and this amount will be sought through public subscription.

Members of the playground commission, as named by Miss Ella Noel White, executive secretary of Floyd chapter, American Red Cross, and the Rev. Robert A. Potter, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, and as approved by the city council, are: R. C. Leard, chairman; C. D. Milby, S. L. Isbell, Mrs. J. R. Hurt, Miss Virgie McCombs. The committee meets next Tuesday night when plans are expected to be completed for the drive for funds.

If the hopes of the local group are realized, a playground for all the children of the town will be made available and will be under competent supervision furnished by the KERA. In addition to playground facilities, community singing, health programs, and dramatic club work and other activities will be made possible.

Woodrow Hamilton, of Henderson, N. C., is here this week, spending his vacation with friends and relatives.

Mrs. E. S. Dotson and sons, E. K. and James, returned Monday from a visit with relatives in Missouri.

SEVENTH OF FAMILY TUBERCULOSIS VICTIM

Miss Hazel Thompson, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dock Thompson, of Wonder, succumbed June 12 to an illness of more than a year from tuberculosis. The youthful victim was the seventh of her family to succumb to the disease.

Miss Thompson was a member of the Baptist Church, and had the friendship of all who knew her. She is survived by her father, four brothers and two sisters. Funeral rites were conducted by the Rev. Isaac Stratton, and burial was made in the Burchett cemetery at Wonder.

PASTOR OF CHURCH HERE, WIFE HURT

Dr. and Mrs. Nordenhaug Injured in Wreck Near Salyersville Monday

Dr. Josef Nordenhaug, pastor of Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church, and Mrs. Nordenhaug were severely injured Monday morning at 10:25 o'clock, near Salyersville, when their auto in which they were driving en route to Louisville collided with a state highway truck.

Mrs. Nordenhaug sustained a broken leg and cuts about her face. Dr. Nordenhaug's hurts consisted of a head injury, a bruised knee and elbow. Though both were at first reported as having been seriously hurt, they are recovering at the Beaver Valley hospital, Martin.

Despite his injuries, Dr. Nordenhaug said Wednesday morning that he expected to come to Prestonsburg Wednesday afternoon to officiate at the funeral of Miss Lenore Bond at his church.

The wreck resulted, it is said, when a truck blocked the side of the highway on which Dr. Nordenhaug was driving through the cut at the top of the hill north of Salyersville. The minister's auto was badly wrecked. Dr. Nordenhaug said that, if there was a warning signal placed on the highway by the workmen, he did not see it.

REFUSES TO HONOR EXPENSE WARRANTS

Frankfort, Ky., June 14—State Treasurer Elam Huddleston today refused to honor warrants for payment of expense account claims of 13 employees of the State Tax Commission.

The warrants were issued in the customary manner by the office of Auditor J. Dan Talbott and sent to the treasurer's office for checks to be written on them. The treasurer returned the warrants with a letter explaining that he was not convinced the expenses were incurred on state business.

The expense accounts were those of W. R. Robinson, son-in-law of Governor Ruby Laffoon and head of the sales tax division of the Tax Commission and 12 field agents on the Tax Commission. Then ranged from $30 to $198 and totaled about $1,000.

Huddleston has filed declaration papers as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Attorneys Oscar P. Bond and J. D. Bond were called Monday to Lexington by the fatal illness of their sister, Miss Lenore Bond.

Escaped Oklahoma Slayer In Floyd Jail After Nine Years of Security In Hills

Almost nine years of freedom from the Oklahoma state penitentiary from which he escaped while serving a life term for murder ended for Earl Jarrett, alias Earl Martin, Saturday when he was arrested at Pikeville by Floyd county officers and Pikeville police.

Jarrett was jailed here and faces possible extradition to Oklahoma, though his attorneys, Joe P. Tackett and Francis M. Burke, are prepared to make a determined fight against this move.

Jarrett came to Floyd county after his escape, and has been employed as a driller in the gas fields of this section. He is widely known in this section and is said to have been an excellent citizen. Two years ago, he married a Miss Lowe, a member of a prominent Pike county family, and they had resided in Pikeville since that time.

Sheriff M. T. Stumbo, Deputy Sheriffs J. M. Stumbo and W. A. Wills and Pikeville police effected Jarrett's capture Saturday afternoon. The fugitive fled from his home to a nearby residence when the officers approached.

RELIEF PROJECTS AIDS TO SCHOOLS

Martin, Lackey and Wayland Schoolgrounds Benefit from FERA Work

Two new relief projects have been approved for Floyd county at a total expenditure of $7,492.25. The Times has been informed by E. A. Marye, director of works for the Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration.

One of the two projects is the improvement of the Martin schoolgrounds, on which 37 men will be given employment daily at an outlay of $5,708. This includes construction of a retaining wall at the back of the school, concrete walks from school to gymnasium and other improvements.

The other project is the construction of a retaining wall at the rear and front of the Lackey high school building. Thirteen men will be employed daily on this project at a cost of $1,884.25. A similar project has already been started at the Wayland school, with approximately 40 men being employed.

BOGUS MONEY PASSER JAILED

U. S. Commissioner Atkinson Holds Monroe Roberts Under $10,000 Bond

Monroe Roberts, of Penny, Ky., was held under $10,000 bond here last week by U. S. District Commissioner Fred Atkinson on a charge of handling counterfeit money. He was alleged to have had $750 in bogus bills on his person when arrested at Virgie in Pike county by Magistrate B. C. Burke and Constable Lattice Fouts.

John Malley, Louisville, secret service agent, was notified, and sent J. J. Cassidy to Pikeville and brought Roberts to Paintsville, where he was tried Saturday and bound over for trial at Lexington.

PRESTONSBURG WATER FRANCHISE IS UPHELD

Frankfort, Ky., June 18—Judgment of the Floyd circuit court dismissing the petition of B. F. Combs and Edward P. Hill seeking to have the franchise of the Prestonsburg Water Company adjudged void and to oust the company from occupying the streets and thoroughfares of the city was upheld today by the court of appeals.

The court also upheld the ruling of the Floyd circuit court to the effect that the water company was entitled to recover of the city the amount alleged to be due it on hydrant or fire plug rentals.

TWO BANKS QUIT AS DEPOSITORIES

Of County Funds When Interest on Daily Balances Demanded

The Floyd fiscal court this week was looking for a depository for county funds as a result of the resignation of the First National Bank and the Bank Josephine as joint depositories.

Action of the two banks followed the demand of the fiscal court that they pay two per cent interest on daily balances on county funds in the two banks. Both banks refused to meet the demand.

The two banks were made joint depositories at the January, 1933 meeting of the Fiscal Court. George P. Archer, cashier of the Bank Josephine, is county treasurer. County officials said this week they would negotiate with other banks in this section in an effort to find a depository.

The $22,000 judgment awarded N. M. White, Jr., receiver for the Winchester Coal Company, was ordered paid by the fiscal court at its meeting Tuesday. Credits of $4,000 paid Combs and Combs, attorneys; $3,500 paid Stephen L. Blakely, Covington attorney, and $1,000 paid Joseph M. Spears, special master commissioner in the litigation, were deducted from the amount of the judgment, but accumulated interest brought the payment necessary to settle the judgment up to $21,082.19.

Henry S. Chestnut was employed to represent the county in collecting for the county and its common school districts franchise taxes which the United Carbon Company is alleged to owe from 1931 to 1935, inclusive. For his services, Mr. Chestnut is to be paid 40 per cent of all taxes he collects.

BULLET FIRED BY EX-WIFE CLAIMS LIFE OF VETERAN

John D. Steele, Native of Floyd, Slain at Boldman Sunday

PIKE OFFICER KILLED

Two men were killed in Pike county Sunday, one at Boldman near the Floyd-Pike line by his former wife, the other at Robinson Creek by a former convict from this county.

The dead are: John D. Steele, 37 years old, World War veteran and a native of Little Mud, this county, shot through the heart.

Cline Tackett, Pike deputy constable, shot twice through the body by Robert Newsom, formerly of Left Beaver Creek.

Though divorced, Steele and his ex-wife, Mrs. Josie Caldwell Steele, continued to reside in the same building at Boldman where he owned a restaurant and whisky store. They are said to have had frequent fights. Sunday, after Steele had attended a ball game at Boldman, he attempted to break into a room inside which Mrs. Steele had locked herself, according to her statement. She claimed she fired through the door three times to frighten Steele away. The third shot pierced his heart.

Another report received here says the woman did not fire through the door but shot her former husband as he entered the room. Immediately following the shooting, Mrs. Steele called a taxi, went to Pikeville and surrendered to county authorities. She had not been granted bail Monday afternoon it was said.

The victim was a son of Robert Steele, of Little Mud Creek, and was well known through this section where he formerly was game warden. For several years he had been night boss of the Pike-Floyd Coal Company at Betsy Layne. He is survived by four children.

Miss Genevieve Steele, Betsy Layne; Emmaline, Julia Ann and Clifford, all of Boldman. He also leaves two brothers and two sisters: J. W. Steele, Betsy Layne; Bruce Steele, Boldman; Mrs. Mary Belle Burgess, of Broadbottom; Mrs.

MISS LENORE BOND DIES AT LEXINGTON

Former Floyd Teacher Claimed Monday After Brief Illness; Funeral Here

Miss Esther Lenore Bond, 21-years old, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles F. Bond, of Ashland, died at St Joseph's hospital, Lexington, Monday evening at 7:45 o'clock after a brief illness.

Miss Bond, a student at the University of Kentucky, and last year a member of the McDowell school faculty, was stricken Sunday afternoon and her condition rapidly grew worse. The end came without warning to a host of friends and relatives, to whom news of her passing came as a distinct shock.

A young lady of much personal charm and of many accomplishments and the highest of womanly traits, Miss Bond held the friendship of all who knew her. She was a graduate of Bethel Woman's College, Hopkinsville, Ky. Her father, a veteran physician, for years practised his profession throughout the Big Sandy valley, and

TO UNION LABOR

(An editorial)

Already in the present political campaign, The Floyd County Times has lost the work of at least one candidate because of the fact that our printing shop has not been unionized.

This candidate tells us that organized labor in this section is demanding that his printed matter carry the union label—this as an indication, it is to be inferred, that the candidate is patronizing a union shop and, therefore, is a friend to labor. Other candidates have been, in effect, told the same thing.

In other words, if this information is correct, labor is blacklisting every country newspaper shop in Kentucky—for the simple reason that no weekly newspaper shop, within our knowledge, has been unionized. The Times has always been friendly to labor. When the NRA came into existence, The Times gladly conformed to its demands.

But we have only two printers. We're a one-horse outfit, we admit. The Times' employes are home-town men, not transients. They expect to continue to reside in Prestonsburg and Floyd county. It simply hasn't occurred to The Times to set a precedent in country journalism by unionizing. We have no objection to doing so—but why?

Now, if candidates are driven to Ashland, Huntington or Louisville in order to have the Typographers' Union label on their printing, what the gain? If labor's worst enemy goes to a union shop for printing, that enemy of labor will have on his cards and other printed matter the union label, just the same as the friend of labor would have.

Sweet Penelope! Where does labor gain thereby? Why, in our burning ardor to work for the advantage of labor, turn against our neighbors and drive business to distant cities, or, perhaps, to other states?

The Times is just a home-town outfit trying to get along. We know most of you folks. We don't punch a time clock, every time one of our men steps out of the shop. We don't charge for the obituaries of your departed relatives or friends; we gladly publish your cards of thanks without charge. We trade at home, and hope others will do likewise.

ALSO, WE VOTE AT HOME.

WE RESENT BEING DISCRIMINATED AGAINST SIMPLY BECAUSE WE ARE NOT A CITY PRINTING SHOP AND HAVE NOT IN OUR POSSESSION A UNION LABEL WHICH AS EASILY MIGHT BE PLACED ON THE WORK OF AN ENEMY TO LABOR AS ON THAT OF A FRIEND.

Sewell said, "and the present county officers have made progress in the right direction" and "soon should have the fiscal affairs in a thoroughly sound condition," with better public service at no greater cost.

The inspector's report on both counties urged reducing the number of meetings of the fiscal court "at least 50 per cent." He urged the reduction of the Hickman court from six to a smaller number of members.

Sewell said that when the present Floyd county officials took charge there were "but few counties in the state, all things considered, in worse shape" as to their fiscal affairs than Floyd. During the sixteen months since the present administration took office, Sewell said, "but few counties have made better progress in bringing order out of chaos than has Floyd."

Sewell said in preceding years the county was "imposed upon through the rights-of-way racket" but the present administration in Floyd "early in its term" put a stop to it.

A GREAT EDITOR

When the Kentucky Press Association met at the Henry Clay hotel on last Friday evening, it was necessary for a little time to be consumed before the program proper was started, due to the fact that the broadcasting station was not quite ready for the speakers to go on the air. As toastmaster, we took occasion to speak briefly on the career of Marse Henry Watterson, whom we characterized as one of the greatest editors America has ever produced. His bold, dashing style and his choice diction won for him such nicknames as "Light Horse (Harry)" and "Henry of Navarre." But the name which stayed with him through life was "Marse Henry."

We also referred to an address which Mr. Watterson delivered before the K. P. A. meeting in Ashland in 1884 in which he was asked to tell something about how he came to enter the field of journalism. A part of this address was preserved in a scrap book kept by the late Judge John F. Hager, which is as follows:

"I came out of the war like many of the young fellows of the South, a very picked bird, indeed. In order to escape the humiliation of borrowing from a Northern uncle, whose politics I did not approve, I went with my watch to an 'uncle' who had no politics at all and got fifty dollars on it. Along with two blanket mates, who were as poor as myself, I started, or rather revived, publication of an old suspended newspaper at Nashville. Nothing could withstand the energy and ardor which we three threw into the enterprise. We were working for bread and had to have it. When we began there were nine daily papers struggling for a foothold in the little Tennessee capital. At the end of the year there were but two, and of these ours had two-thirds of the business. After two years I was called to Louisville to take an editorial position on the old Louisville Journal, the paper of George D. Prentice. Six months later Walter N. Haldeman, who owned the Courier, joined with me in combining the Journal and the Courier. Incidentally this led to the purchase of the old Louisville Democrat, this publication losing its identity entirely. That is about all."

The consolidation of the three papers was first of the great newspaper combinations, it resulted in the first appearance of the Courier-Journal Nov. 8, 1868.

In his early years Mr. Watterson superintended the detail of every department, and for more than 30 years "put the paper to press" every night.

In 1918, Mr. Watterson sold his interest in the Courier-Journal to Judge Robert W. Bingham of Louisville, who also purchased stock of other owners, and Watterson retired from editorial responsibility.

One example of his characteristic style is found in a letter written in October 1921, regretting that age rendered inadvisable his attendance upon the Confederate reunion at Chattanooga. "It cannot be long," he wrote, "when we shall meet on that beautiful shore, and; when we shall meet on that beautiful shore, and; when we meet, be sure the Bonnie Blue Flag will be flying at the fore, and the bands will be playing "Dixie" on parade, whilst the pretty girls will be distributing "The Chattanooga Rebel" to groups of ragged, red-nosed angels who have not forgotten the rebel yell."

The "Chattanooga Rebel" referred to was a little paper, published semi-monthly by Mr. Watterson for nearly a year during the war.—Ashland Daily Independent.

WHEELER-RAYBURN BILL

CONTRARY to what the public has been led to believe, the new Wheeler-Rayburn Bill, reported to the Senate on May 25, 1935, contains all the major destructive features of the original Bill. During the past few weeks organizations and individuals from every state in the Union have openly declared themselves against the proposed Bill, emphasizing the following five points:

1. It would seriously retard the nation's economic recovery;
2. It would cause immense destruction of values in utility securities;
3. It would increase the cost of electricity to the consumer;
4. It would undermine the efficiency of the light and power industry;
5. It would virtually nullify state jurisdiction over local operations.

Who Are AGAINST the Bill?

- A Majority of Newspaper Editors—
- Hundreds of Thousands of Individual Investors—
- Investors' Organizations—
- Practically all Business Organizations—
- Savings Banks (With 14 Million Depositors)—
- Insurance Companies—
- State Public Service Commissioners—
- Investment Bankers—
- Banks and Trust Companies—

Who Are FOR the Bill?

Except for a few government officials who are advocates of government ownership, and a few who have long had a deep-rooted prejudice against the public utilities, there is apparently no answer.

VACATION HEALTH HAZARDS

Dr. A. T. McCormack, state health commissioner, this week issued a warning relative to vacation health hazards which loses nothing of timeliness because it is largely a repetition of what has been said on this subject, each summer, for several years.

June, July, August and September are the months during which tourists from outside, in largest numbers, drive thru Kentucky to view the scenic beauties with which the state so abounds. They are also the months when city dwellers, as a rule, take their vacations. Naturally the majority of these, in their desire for a complete change, take to the great outdoors—traveling by automobile, camping in the hills or fishing in lakes and streams. Life in the open is usually a period of relaxation, when sanitary discipline is all too apt to be neglected, unless its importance is freshly stressed with each recurring season.

For automobile tourists, campers and summer vacationists generally there are always potential dangers to health in changed and changing environments. Particularly is this danger present in connection with those diseases which may be transmitted through food and water supplies and the bites of insects—typhoid fever and other filth-borne diseases, malaria and food poisoning.

"Typhoid fever," said Dr. McCormack, "is a disease whose incidence is greatest where environmental sanitation is lowest. It is unnecessary, because it is preventable. It is spread from person to person by means of water, milk, fingers, flies and food. Every case is contracted by taking into the mouth some substance contaminated with typhoid organisms, which occur in nature only in the bowel or bladder discharges of persons ill with the disease or who, having had typhoid fever, become 'carriers' through still harboring the organisms.

"Persons who contemplate a summer vacation, or recreation where sanitation may not be rigidly enforced, or where food products are not regularly examined should protect themselves against infections with typhoid vaccine; a week apart will assure protection against the disease for two or three years.

"All vacationists, not already protected, should also be vaccinated against smallpox and diphtheria. Smallpox vaccination is good for several years; and diphtheria immunization protects for life.

"Campers should be careful to protect themselves against mosquitoes. Malaria is transmitted only by certain kinds of mosquitoes that have become infected by biting persons contaminated with malaria parasites. These infected mosquitoes bite other persons and infect them in turn, thus spreading the disease. Campers living in cottages should screen all doors and windows; if tents are utilized, mosquito bars should be used.

"Care should also be taken not to come in contact with poison oak, poison ivy or other poisonous plants. These plants do not transmit disease; but their infection is often as painful and debilitating as disease and, if very severe may have serious results.

"Automobile tourists will do well to observe the following precautions:

"Patronize tourist camps bearing the approval certificate of the state health authorities.

"Look over the place where you propose to eat before ordering your meal. Untidy surroundings usually mean dirty people; dirty people are apt to sell dangerous food products.

"Beware of Wayside water supplies and farm house wells unless they bear safety signs from state health authorities.

"Unless you can obtain milk from sources which have the approval of the state health authorities, it is safer to boil all milk before using.

"Don't stay in a place where flies are prevalent, for the presence of flies means it is not kept clean.

"If these precautions are carefully observed, and the tourist or camper takes the required amount of rest and does not overindulge in food or drink, there is no reason why his or her vacation should not prove what it was primarily intended to be—a period of rest and recreation, designed to refresh and invigorate for the better performance of duties upon his or her return."

DANIEL BOONE and KENTUCKY
By Dr. Charles M. Knapp

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY

In 1754 George Washington commanding a force of Virginians, undertook to forestall the French and take possession of the forks of the Ohio, but was repulsed. The French then created their Fort Duquesne. Immediately the whole frontier was threatened, and the militia of the several colonies was called out. What part, if any, Daniel Boone took at this time is not known, but it is certain that he served with the North Carolina militia in the following year. With a detachment of the North Carolinians he served in Braddock's ill-fated expedition against Fort Duquesne in 1755, not as a rifleman but as a blacksmith and a waggoner for the North Carolina contingent. When the French and Indians surprised the British regulars at Turtle Creek, Boone was driving a wagon in the train, probably far to the rear. Cutting the traces of his own team and mounting a horse he made his escape from that disastrous field. Soon after he was back home on the Yadkin.

But if Daniel Boone in his first venture at soldiering had not saved the day, he had nevertheless learned much that fascinated him about the lands even farther west than the forks of the Ohio, and the hunting therein, particularly from John Finley. The latter, a few years before, had been a fur trader to the Ohio country, and had, while so engaged, rambled all over the valley as far west as the falls of the Ohio, where Louisville now stands. Of the country south of the Ohio and of the hunting therein he spoke in glowing terms. So enthusiastically did Finley and others speak of Kentucky that Boone seems to have determined to hunt there sometime in company with Finley. But it was to be years before he was to fulfill his dream. The real way to reach that country, Finley seems to have thought, was from the southeast. Such an expedition from the Yadkin country could not be lightly undertaken. Its hardships and dangers were innumerable, and ways thither from the forks of the Yadkin, through the perplexing tangle of valleys and mountain ranges, were not as easily to be found as Finley had supposed.

Another reason caused Daniel Boone to linger near his home. Two years before he had met Rebecca Bryan, and now upon his return from Pennsylvania he married her. Daniel was now past 21 and Rebecca was 17. Soon after their marriage they took up land for themselves on Sugar Tree, a tributary of Dutchman's Creek, a few miles north of Squire Boone's. Here they lived quietly for several years. In these early years of married life Daniel proved a good husbandman, planting and harvesting his crops regularly, and pasturing his cattle and swine upon the wild lands adjoining his farm. Sometimes he accompanied with his wagon the caravans which, loaded with furs, went down each autumn to the coast cities, bringing back salt, iron, cloth and a few other manufactured articles. When this annual expedition was over Boone was free to go on long hunts in the forests to the west, where he cured great stores of meat for his family and prepared his furs for the market.

When Worlds Collide

Tony, hurrying to his station, appreciated how wisely Hendron had acted in deceiving them all—even himself—as to the night. Here he was, second in command of the first Space Ship, carrying a strange child in contravention of all orders. The chief commander's daughter also carried a child.

No one stopped them. Not Hendron himself. It was the last hour on earth, and men's minds were rocking.

The bugles blew again, and Tony, depositing the boy with Eve, set about his business of checking the personnel of his ship. Three hundred yards away Dave Ransdell checked the personnel of his larger party.

Ransdell, for a moment, ran over. He asked for Hendron, but he sought, also, Eve. Tony did not interfere; he allowed them their last minutes together.

A third time the bugles blew. Tony completed his check of crew and passengers. Thrice he blew his whistle.

From off to the right, where the second ship lay, Dave Ransdell's shrill signal answered.

"Close valves and locks!"

There was no one on the ground. No one! All checked and talked, thrice over. Yet as Tony left the last lock open to gaze out again and listen, he heard a faint cry. The father of the children!

Could he take him, too? One man more! Of course they could make it. Tony withheld the final signal.

The voice was faint and far away, and in its thin notes could be detected the vibrations of tense anxiety. It came from where the airplane field lay. Presently he made out syllables, but not their meaning.

"Hello," he yelled mightily. "Who is it?"

Back came the thinly shouted reply: "C'est moi, Duquesne! Attendez!" Tony's mind translated: "It's I, Duquesne! Wait!"

On the opposite side of the flying field a lone human figure struggled into the rays of the floor lights. It was the figure of a short fat man running clumsily, waving his arms and pausing at intervals to shout. Duquesne! The name had a familiar sound. Then Tony remembered. Duquesne was the French scientist in charge of building the French Space Ship that had been reported to him by James long ago.

He turned to the attendants at the airlock. "Get Hendron," he said. "Tell him Duquesne is here alone." He operated the which which moved the stairway back to the hull of the ship.

The short fat man trotted across the field, stopping frequently to gesticulate and shout: "Attendez! C'est moi, Duquesne!"

At last he scrambled up the steps of the concrete foundations to the ship. He rushed across the platform and arrived at the airlock. He wore the remnants of a khaki uniform which did not fit him. Protruding from the breast pocket of the tunic was the butt of a revolver. He was black-haired, black-eyed and big-nosed. When he began to speak brokenly, he first swore in French and then said in English: "I am Duquesne! The great Duquesne! The celebrated Duquesne! The famous Duquesne. The French physicist, me, Duquesne. This I take for the ship of Cole 'Endron—yes? Then, so I am here. Tell him I have come from France in three months, running a steamboat by myself almost, flying across this foul country with my plane, which it is broken down near what was Milwaukee, and to here I have walked by myself alone these many days. You are going now, yes? Tell him to go. Tell him Duquesne is here. Tell him I leave those pigs, those dogs, those cows, those onions, who would build such a foolish ship as they will break their necks in. I know this 'Endron ship would fly, so I have come to it. Bah! They are stupid, my French colleagues. More suitable for the motemen of trams than for flyers in the outer space."

At that instant Hendron arrived at the top of the spiral staircase. He rushed forward with his eyes aghast. "Duquesne! By G—d, Duquesne! I'm delighted. You're in the nick of time. In forty minutes we would have been away from here."

Duquesne gripped Hendron's hand, and skipped around him as if he were playing a child's game. With his free fist he smote upon his breast; he shouted so that the entire chamber reverberated; "Am I a fool that you should have to tell me what hour was set for your departure? Have I no brains? Do I know nothing about astronomy? Have I never studied physics? Idiots, charming friends, glorious Americans, fools! Have I no brain? Can I not anticipate? Here I am!"

Suddenly he let go of Hendron's hand and stopped dancing. He bowed very gravely, first to Hendron, then to Tony, then to the crew. "Gentlemen," he said, "let's be going. Let's be on our way."

Hendron turned to Tony, who in reaction burst into a paroxysm of laughter. For an instant the French scientist looked deeply wounded; then suddenly he began to laugh. "I am ridiculous, am I not?" he shouted. He roared with laughter. He rocked with it.

"What about the ships that were being built in other countries in Europe?" Hendron asked him.

"The English?" returned Duquesne. "They will get away. What then, who knows? Can you 'muddle through' space, Cole 'Endron? I ask it. But the English are sound; they have a good ship. But as to them, I have made my answer. I am here."

"The Germans?" demanded Hendron.

The Frenchman gestured. "Too advanced! They have tried to take every contingency into account—too many contingencies! They will make the most beautiful voyage of all—or by far the worst. As to all the other, again I observe, I have preferred to be here."

Pierre Duquesne, France's greatest physicist, went off with Hendron to the control room, talking volubly. Tony superintended the closing of the lock. He went up the spiral staircase to the first passenger deck. Fifty people lay there on the padded surface with the broad belts already strapped around their legs and torsos. Most of them had not yet attached the straps intended to hold their heads in place. Their eyes were directed toward the glass screen, where alternately views of the heavens overhead and of the radiant landscape outside the Space Ship were being shown.

Tony looked at his number and found his place. Eve was near by him, with the two children beside her. She had sat up to welcome him. "I've been terribly nervous. Of course I knew you'd come, but it has been hard waiting here."

"We're all set," Tony said, as he adjusted himself on the floor harness.

Below, in the control-room, the men took their posts. Hendron strapped himself under the glass screen. He fixed his eyes to an optical instrument, across which were two hair lines. Very close to the point of intersection was a small star. The instrument had been set so that when the star reached the center of the cross the discharge was to be started. About him was a battery of switches which were controlled by a master switch, and a lever that worked not unlike a rheostat over a series of resistances. His control-room crew were fastened in their places with their arms free to manipulate various levers.

CHAPTER XI

Hendron turned to the crossed hairs on the optical instrument and began to count. Every man in the room stiffened to attention.

"One, two, three, four, five—" His hand went to the switch. The room was filled with a vibrating hum. "Six, seven, eight, nine, ten—" The sound of the hum rose now to a feline shriek. "Eleven, twelve, thirteen, fourteen, fifteen—ready! Sixteen, seventeen, eighteen, nineteen, twenty—" His hand moved to the instrument that was like a rheostat. His other hand was clenched, white-knocked, on his straps. "Twenty-one, twenty-two, twenty-three, twenty-four, twenty-five." Simultaneously the crew shoved levers, and the rheostat moved up an inch. As he counted, signals flashed to the other ship. They must leave at the same moment.

A roar, redoubling that which had resounded below the ship on the night of the attack, deafened all other sound. Tony thought: "We're leaving the earth!" A quivering of the ship that jarred the soul. An up-thrust on the feet. Hendron's lips moving in counting that could no longer be heard. The eyes of the men of the crew watching those lips so that when they reached fifty a second switch was touched, and the room was plunged into darkness relieved only by the dim rays of tiny bulbs over the instruments themselves. A slight change in the feeling of air pressure against the eardrums. Another forward motion of the steady hand on the rheostat. An increase of the thrust against the feet, so that the whole body felt leaden. Augmentation of the hideous din outside.

Tony reached toward Eve, and felt her hand stretching to meet his. The dery trail of the second Ark rising skyward on its apex of scintillating vapor already was miles away.

Below, on the earth, fires broke out—a blaze that denoted a forest burning. In the place where the ship had been, the two gigantic blocks of concrete must have crumbled and collapsed.

Far away to the south and west, the President of the United States, surrounded by his cabinet, looked up from the new toll engendered by the recommending earthquakes, and saw, separated by an immeasurable distance, two comets moving away from the earth. The President looked reverently at the phenomenon; then he said: "My friends, the greatest living American has but now left his homeland."

In the passenger chamber the unendurable noise rose in a steady crescendo until all those who lay there were pressed with increasing force upon the deck. Nauseated, terrified, overwhelmed, their senses floundered, and many of them lapsed into unconsciousness.

Tony, who was still able to think, despite the awful acceleration of the ship, realized presently that the din was diminishing. From his rather scanty knowledge of physics, he tried to deduce what was happening. Either the Ark had reached air so thin that it did not carry sound waves, or else it was travelling so fast that its sound could not catch up with it. The speed of that diminution seemed to increase. The chamber became quieter and quieter. Tony reflected, in spite of the fearful torment he was undergoing, that eventually the only sound which would afflict it would come from the breeches of the tubes in the control rooms, and the rooms themselves would insulate that. Presently he realized that the ringing in his ears was louder than the noise made by the passage of the ship. Eve had relaxed the grip on his hand, but at that moment he felt a pressure.

It was impossible to turn his head. He said, "Hello," in an ordinary voice, and found he had been so deafened that it was inaudible. He tried to lift his hand, but the acceleration of the ship was so great that it required more effort than he was able yet to exert. Then he heard Eve's voice and realized that she was talking very loudly: "Are you all right, Tony? Speak to me."

He shouted back: "I'm all right. How are the children?" He could see them lying stupefied, with eyes wide open.

"It's horrible, isn't it?" Eve cried. "Yes, but the worst is over. We'll be accelerating for some time, though."

Energy returned to him. He struggled with the bonds that held his head, and presently spoke again to Eve. She was deathly pale. He looked at the other passengers. Many of them were still unconscious, most of them only partly aware of what was happening. He tried to lift his head from the floor, but the upward pressure still overpowered him. Then the lights in the cabin went out and the screen was illuminated. Across one side was a glimpse of the trail which they were leaving, a bright hurtling yellow stream, but it was not that which held his attention. In the center of the screen was part of a curved disk. Tony realized that he was staring up at half of the northern hemisphere of the earth.

Tony thought he could make out the outline of Alaska on the west coast of the United States, and he saw pinpoints of lights which identified with the renewal of volcanic activity. The screen flashed. Another view appeared. Constellations of stars, such stars as he had never seen, blazing furiously in the velvet blackness of the outer sky. He realized that he was looking at the view to be had from the side of the ship. The light went out again, and a third of the four periscopes recorded its field. Again stars, but in their center and hanging away from them, as if in miraculous suspension, was a small round bright-red body which Tony recognized as Mars.

Once again Eve pressed his hand, and Tony returned the pressure.

In the control room, Hendron still sat in the sling with his hand on the rheostat. His eyes traveled to a meter which showed their distance from the earth. Then they moved on to a chronometer. He had already determined the time necessary for acceleration—one hundred and twelve minutes—and he could not shorten it.

Tony felt that he had been lying on the floor for an eternity. His strength had come back, but they had been instructed to remain on the floor until the speed of their ascent was stabilized. Minutes dragged. It was becoming possible to converse in the chamber, but few people cared to say anything. Many of them were still violently ill.

Hendron operated the switch controlling the choice of periscopes. In the midst of the glass screen, the earth now appeared as a round globe, its diameter in both directions clearly apparent. More than half of it lay in shadow, but the illuminated half was like a great relief map. The whole of the United States, part of Europe and the north polar regions, were revealed to their gaze. In wonder they regarded the world that had been their home. They could see clearly the colossal changes which had been wrought upon it. The great inland sea that occupied the Mississippi valley sparkled in the morning sun. The myriad volcanoes which had sprung into being along the western cordillera were for the most part hidden under a pall of smoke and clouds.

Hendron signaled a command to his crew, who had been standing unbuckled from their slings, at attention. They now seated themselves.

NATIONAL SUPPLY LICKS UNITED CARBON, 7 TO 0

Allen, Ky. June 13 — Ben Westfall and his National Supply softball crew marked up their third straight victory Wednesday afternoon by giving the United Carbon outfit a 7-0 drubbing on Pikeville's diamond. This victory came as an upset to Red Hagans and his United Carbon team after a long row of victories.

"Lefty" Laferty hurled the game for the Allen team and tantalized the opposing team with his slow knuckle ball. Backed by an air-tight infield and outfield, Laferty allowed only three hits. Only two men saw second and none reached third. Dan Boyd, third-srker for Allen, hoisted the ball over right-field for a home-run in the fourth, scoring Bill Malone before him.

Red Ogden, hurler for Pikeville, was nipped for ten hits. Eight of these however (came in the fourth inning, when six runs crossed the plate.

Students from Bonanza who left recently to attend school at Morehead State Normal were Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Ratliff, Miss Docia Baldrige, and Tom Hill. They were accompanied by Miss Opal Wooten, who will also attend the summer session at Morehead.

HOW WOMEN CAN WIN MEN AND MEN WIN

The Favor of Other Men Unless two pints of bile juice flow daily from your liver into your bowels, your food decays in your bowels. This poisons your whole body. Movements get hard and constricted. You get yellow tongue, yellow skin, pimples, dull eyes, bad breath, bad taste, sad disposition, headache. You have become an ugly-looking, foul-smelling, sour-thinking person. You have lost your personal charm. Everybody wants to run from you. But don't take salts, mineral waters, oils, laxative pills, laxative candies or chewing gums and expect them to get rid of this poison that destroys your personal charm. They can't do it, for they only move out the tail end of your bowels and that doesn't take away enough of the decayed poison. Cosmetics won't help at all. Only a free flow of your bile juice will stop this decay poison in your bowels. The one mild vegetable medicine which starts a free flow of your bile juice is Carter's Little Liver Pills. Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

Do you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination; backache, headache, dizziness, swollen feet and ankles? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly, for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

DOAN'S PILLS

Personals

A. J. May, Jr., of Lexington, spent the week-end here with his family.

Mrs. W. H. Craft was taken, a few days ago, to St. Joseph's hospital, Lexington, for medical treatment and possibly a later operation. Three of Mr. and Mrs. Craft's children have whooping cough. The many friends of Mrs. Craft are hopeful of her early recovery and return to her home here.

Miss Ivola Hale submitted to an operation for appendicitis at the Beaver Valley hospital, Martin, Wednesday night. Her many friends will be glad to learn that her condition was reported as favorable to her recovery.

Attorney and Mrs. F. M. Burke, of Frankfort, were visitors here this week. Mr. Burke recently resigned as assistant Attorney General to enter the race for the Democratic nomination for Attorney General.

Circuit Judge John W. Caudill returned Saturday from Louisville, where he was a business visitor last week.

C. P. Stephens, assistant U. S. district attorney, returned Wednesday from Lexington, where he has been attending federal court.

STEPHENS ANNOUNCES FOR STATE AUDITOR

Henry Stephens, Jr., of Prestonsburg, this week filed with the Secretary of State notification and declaration of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for State Auditor.

Mr. Stephens, a native of Caney Fork of Middle Creek, was a teacher in the Floyd county schools for five years, was clerk of the Floyd circuit court for 12 years and for the past eight years has been cashier of the First National Bank here. His prominence as a Democratic leader and with banking circles throughout Kentucky lend him an excellent chance of nomination. Already, he has been assured of the support of political leaders throughout Eastern Kentucky.

J. W. Howard, of Prestonsburg, former State Senator, has been named manager of Mr. Stephens' campaign.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

You are hereby notified that on and after June 22, 1935, I will not be responsible for any debts incurred by my wife, Mrs. Carrie Hays, or any person other than myself.

CARD OF THANKS

Dr. and Mrs. Charles F. Bond and family wish to express their thanks and appreciation to the kind people of Prestonsburg for their kindly sympathy and helpful services during their bereavement resulting from the death of Esther Lenore Bond. Especial thanks are extended to Rev. W. C. Pierce, Rev. Josef Nordenhaug, Rev. C. H. Nicholls and Rev. A. T. Malmberg for their kind and consoling words, and to E. P. Arnold for the dignified and efficient manner in which he conducted the funeral arrangements.

ATTEND FUNERAL HERE

Among those from a distance who attended the funeral here Wednesday of Miss Lenore Bond were:

Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. F. M. Burke, Frankfort; Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Ramsey, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Tackett, South Webster, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Wilton Tackett, Pikeville; Mr. and Mrs. Jay Tackett, Virgie; Mrs. J. C. Burnette and Misses Lois and Miriam Smith, Hindman; Mrs. F. R. Keller, Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Bond, Mrs. A. C. Bond, Catlettsburg; Miss Neva Bond, Ashland; Mrs. O. K. Bond, Meta, Ky.; Reed Tackett, Morehead; F. P. Hall, Weeksbury; Mrs. Mart Tackett, Virgie; Burgess Kilgore, Louisa; James E. Trivette, Pikeville; Charles Lowe, Louisa; Gene Stephenson, Ashland; Warren Alday, Atlanta, Ga.

Alpha Jackson, Big Shoal. The body was taken to Little Mud for burial in the family cemetery.

Tackett was killed by Newsome Sunday when he and Deputy Constable Glean Osborne sought to arrest Newsome and his two brothers, Earl and Dave, on a drunkenness charge when the officers met the brothers on the Mayo Trail. When Tackett left his truck to assist Osborne in making the arrests, Newsome opened fire, according to a report received here. Following the shooting, the trio was arrested and taken to Pikeville to jail. Earl Newsome was charged as an accessory to murder, and Dave was jailed on a drunkenness charge.

Newsome was paroled less than a year ago from a 15-year penitentiary sentence imposed on him in the Floyd circuit court for the murder of Oscar Daniels at Drift, this county. He is a son of Quillen Newsome, of Escro, Pike county.

GARRETT

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Martin and family have returned to their home at Garrett after visiting friends and relatives in South Carolina and going on to Daytona Beach and Miami, Fla., where they spent three weeks fishing and enjoying life.

Alpha Morgan is back in school at Lexington for the summer; also, Flossie Moore is at Morehead.

Mrs. R. D. Spencer and Mrs. Byrd Cooley are in Lexington for a few days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Paek are the parents of twin boys.

Lenore Bond Dies

the family is well-known. Only recently Dr. and Mrs. Bond moved to Lexington so that their daughters might be with them while attending the University. This was the first death in their family.

The body was brought to the home here of Atty Oscar P. Bond, brother of the deceased, Tuesday, by E. P. Arnold, who conducted the funeral rites from Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Rev. W. C. Pierce, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Catlettsburg, of which Miss Bond was a member, officiated at the last rites, with Dr. Josef Nordenhaug, Rev. C. H. Nicholls and Rev. Arnold T. Malmberg assisting. The large concourse of sorrowing friends and relatives and the profusion of flowers bore eloquent testimony to the high esteem in which Miss Bond was held. Burial was made in the Porter cemetery under the direction of E. P. Arnold.

Active pallbearers were County Attorney Forrest D. Short, of Prestonsburg; H. O. Herr, of Louisville; Fred Francis, of Prestonsburg; Robert Francis, of Prestonsburg; and Chandos Tackett, of Virgie.

Honorary pallbearers: Assistant Attorney General Francis M. Burke, Frankfort; Charles Lowe, of Louisa; Circuit Judge John W. Caudill and Hon. Joe P. Tackett, of Prestonsburg; James E. Trivette, Pikeville; Gene Stephenson, of Ashland; and Warren Alday, of Atlanta, Ga.

Miss Bond is survived by her parents, two brothers, Oscar P. and J. D. Bond, attorneys here; three sisters, Misses Dixie and Dorothy Cart's Bond, now spending the summer at Lexington, and Mrs. F. R. Keller, Catlettsburg.

FORMER CORONER OF FLOYD COUNTY DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Thomas Jefferson Bentley, former Coroner of this county, died at his home near Allen last week after a protracted illness from ailments attendant upon advanced age. Mr. Bentley was about 75 years old.

TO LAY CORNERSTONE OF MORGAN SCHCOL

Laying of the cornerstone of a new high school building will be made at West Liberty, June 22; Ova O. Haney, superintendent of Morgan county schools, and former Floyd teacher, announces.

Hon. James H. Richmond will feature the program with an address. Ex-Governor A. O. Stanley is expected to be present.

Other features of the program are — the Morehead State Teachers' College band, big parade featuring a float and the presence of many outstanding personalities from all over the state.

Prestonsburg Postoffice To Be Second Class

Washington — Effective July 1, the Maysville postoffice will become a first-class office.

Postoffices to be changed from third to second class included 10 in Kentucky: Prestonsburg, Barbourville, Carlisle, (Hawesville, Ind.), Marion, Providence, Springfield, Stanford and Wilmore.

BETSY LAYNE MINER VICTIM OF CARBUNCLE

Lark Daugherty died Friday at the Beaver Valley hospital, Martin, from the effects of a carbuncle from which he had suffered for some time.

Mr. Daugherty was a miner and had resided for several years at Betsy Layne, where he was well-known and had many friends. He is survived by his widow and nine children. The body was taken by G. D. Ryan to Cow Creek, Pike county, for burial.

JUDGMENT AGAINST OIL COMPANY IS REVERSED

Frankfort, Ky., June 18.—Pointing out that the trial court's instructions to the jury were erroneous, the court of appeals today reversed judgment of Floyd circuit court against the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky.

The lower court awarded T. J. Bentley $4,000 damages against the oil company caused by odors from a gas and oil storage plant erected on a lot adjoining a hotel owned by Bentley at Allen, Ky.

BOLDMAN IN LEAD

With all games rained out Sunday, Boldman retains the lead in the Big Sandy baseball league with an unbroken string of three victories. Wayland, Drift and Dunleavy are tied for second place with two wins and one loss. Henry Clay, Weeksbury and Van Lear all have lost two games while winning only one, and Ashcamp is securely in the cellar with three losses and no victories.

TO THE DEMOCRATS OF EASTERN KENTUCKY:

It has been reported in this section that I would withdraw from the race for Attorney General after the filing date had expired, and that I would come off in favor of Francis M. Burke, who recently announced his candidacy.

I am taking this means to advise the public that said report is untrue and false, and that I have no deal with Mr. Burke and that I am in this race to the finish, and expect to be the next Attorney General of Kentucky.

MANY VEGETABLES COOKED TOO LONG

The notion still prevails with some women that certain vegetables must be cooked for long periods. Home economics specialists at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture point out that cooking is only for the purpose of softening vegetables, reducing their bulk and making them easier to digest, and sometimes to change their raw flavor.

Long cooking tends to make them mushy, destroys their original flavor, and makes them indigestible instead of easier to digest. It often wholly destroys the food value, especially if vegetables are cooked in much water and the water poured off. With the water goes such minerals as calcium, phosphorus and iron. Valuable vitamins are destroyed by excessive boiling.

The rule to follow, suggests Miss Lillian Brinkman, extension food specialist, is to add as little water as possible, cook only until the vegetable is tender, though still a little crisp, and then use all of the liquid.

Cabbage cooked 5 to 15 minutes has a delicate flavor and practically no odor. Cooked long, a chemical substance in the cabbage decomposes into bad-smelling sulphur compounds, which go thru the house. This also applies to cauliflower, brussels sprouts, broccoli and any of the cabbage family.

KIDNAP VICTIM DIES IN WRECK

W. A. Evans, 35 years old, who was kidnaped and robbed at Williamson, W. V.; last year and released by his abductors near Prestonsburg, is dead, his wife sustained a broken back and two of his children were hurt as the result of an accident near Gallipolis, Ohio, June 9. Mr. Evans was connected with the Huntington branch of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, having been transferred there last January from the Williamson office.

They were returning to their home from a visit to Marietta, Ohio. As they approached a side road with Henry Bowens, of Ironton, Ohio, driving the Evans car, another car driven by a woman appeared from a side road and collided with the Evans car. The Evans car ran for a distance of about 100 feet and overturned three or four times. The driver was not hurt.

Mr. Evans was rushed to the hospital suffering from a fractured skull, chest injuries and severe cuts and bruises. Death occurred at 5 a. m. Monday.

Evans was the victim of a kidnaping last October, while making collections for an insurance company. When he turned to his auto parked on Williamson street, he said, two men in the rear seat held him up with pistols and forced him to drive across the river. There the bandits took charge of his machine and money, amounting to several hundred dollars. They slugged him into unconsciousness and drove with him for several hours, finally leaving him for a day in a tourist cabin. The bandits made him drink poison, Evans said; and when he regained his senses he was in his own automobile near Prestonsburg. This was 24 hours after the time he was kidnaped in Williamson. Although rests were made for the kidnaping, there were no convictions and no one was ever brought to trial.
