COMBS IS GRADUATED FROM U.K.; GOVERNOR CHANDLER, SPEAKER

Governor Albert Benjamin Chandler delivered the principal address to approximately 78 members of the mid-year graduating class at the University of Kentucky, Monday afternoon, February 3, at 3 o'clock in Memorial Hall on the University campus. Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of the University, presided at the exercises.

One of those to graduate was Leroy Combs, son of Attorney and Mrs. B. F. Combs, of Prestonsburg.

The mid-year commencement exercises concluded a week or more of activities for members of the graduating class. Thursday evening, January 23, seniors in the College of Education were entertained at a dinner by honorary education societies and by the college. Friday, January 24, the Alumni Association gave a dinner in honor of the mid-year graduating class, at 6 o'clock in the University Commons. Judge Brady Stewart, Paducah, an alumnus of the University, was the principal speaker at the banquet.

Sunday, Feb. 2, Dr. Elmer E. Gabbard, Buckhorn, Ky., president of Witherspoon College, delivered the baccalaureate address, following which the members of the University faculty entertained seniors, visitors and friends of the University at a tea in the faculty clubrooms, McVey Hall.

HOME, LOCALLY OWNED, DESTROYED BY FLAMES

The old home owned by the Richmond estate at the mouth of Brush Creek, near Bosco, was destroyed by fire at daybreak Monday, together with practically all its contents. Loss is estimated at $2,000.

The structure was occupied by Can Martin and family at the time of the fire. Cause of the blaze was not stated here, but it was said that the fire is believed to have started in the kitchen. The Martin family saved only a small quantity of bed clothing. Along with the household effects, the family lost a supply of meat and other foodstuffs.

IS HONOR STUDENT

Miss Grace Francis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Francis, of Martin, is one of the 44 students of Morehead State Teachers' College who achieved the honor roll of the school during the first semester, it is announced by the registrar's office of the college. Students must have an average of "B" or better to attain this rating.

HUEYSVILLE MAN SUFFERS WOUND

Special to The Times
Hueysville, Ky., Feb. 4—Bogey Shepherd, 21 years old, of Salt Lick creek, near here, is in a serious condition at his home from a bullet wound in his left thigh suffered Sunday night when he accidentally discharged a pistol on which he was working. Dr. Mark Dempsey, of Garrett, said the bone of Shepherd's leg was not touched by the bullet but that an artery had been severed and the victim is suffering severely from loss of blood.

Shepherd had purchased the gun only a few days ago, it is reported, and was trying to repair some part of it while it was loaded, when it was accidentally discharged.

COURT POSTPONES BUILDING DECISION

February 11 Set as Date for Fiscal Court Action;
Plans Studied

Definite action toward contracting for the construction of a new courthouse, or the enlargement and remodeling of the present building, was deferred by the fiscal court Saturday until Tuesday, February 11, when, it is announced, the court will make its final decision.

Three firms of architects already have been consulted with the court and submitted tentative plans and cost estimates. Postponement of final action to February 11 is designed to give all architects in this area an opportunity to submit plans and figures. Attendance of Magistrate M. C. Wright, who has been absent from the fiscal court meetings since the courthouse fire here, will also be sought for the February 11 meeting.

Latest plan to be presented the court is that of a Huntington architect who proposes enlargement and remodeling of the building. This plan provides for retention of walls of the present building.

First Courthouse Fire Followed By Work of Restoring Records

Damage by fire of the courthouse here a few days ago recalls Floyd county's earlier courthouses, and search of old records in the office of County Clerk A. B. Meade reveals that more than a century and a quarter ago a commission was working to restore records destroyed in the county's first courthouse fire.

On May 2, 1808, the Floyd circuit court entered an order for this work to be done following a fire which had destroyed the county's first courthouse and the earliest records of the county. The order was entered "pursuant

The store was located in the Odd Fellows' building and was under the management of W. H. Williams. Two other branch stores of the company have been eliminated since January 1, it was reported here.

The company is moving its main office from Paintsville to Ashland, it was announced this week.

EUREKA WOMAN SAYS DAUGHTER MISSING

Mrs. Mollie Green, of Eureka, Tuesday reported that her daughter, Miss Amanda Green, 17 years old, is unaccountably missing. She said that the girl was last seen in Prestonsburg Monday night, Jan. 27, after having been a court witness here.

Mrs. Green described her daughter as having brown hair, blue eyes, weighing about 120 pounds, five feet, 10 inches tall, wearing a green dress, brown hat and brown checkered coat. The mother will be grateful for any information concerning the whereabouts of her daughter.

NO SERIOUS MISHAPS DESPITE TREACHEROUS CONDITION OF ROADS

Though all highways in this section have been in a treacherous condition since winter closed down on this section before Christmas, no fatalities have occurred in this county from automobile wrecks.

After a slight thaw Sunday and the freeze during the night, highways were in probably their worst condition Monday morning. At Betsy Layne two or three cars were in the ditch and a long string of other autos were temporarily detained. On Abbott mountain Sunday afternoon a salesman's auto slid from the highway and into the steel cable at the roadside. Though the car was almost half over the edge of the highway, headed down the mountain side, the driver escaped injury and his machine was not badly damaged.

S. R. Auxier was named executor of the estate without bond. To her granddaughter, Mary Auxier Ford, she bequeathed $500, with S. R. Auxier as her trustee until she is 18 years old. "This bequest," Mrs. Auxier wrote in her will, "in favor of my great-granddaughter is motivated by the fact, which I am desirous of expressing, that she has been a source of great comfort to me."

GAS, GAS ALL THE TIME, CAN'T EAT OR SLEEP

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart hurt. After I tried several doses I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel better." Mrs. Jas. Miller. Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli." Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

The "Concord Hymn" The "Concord Hymn" is a poem by Ralph Waldo Emerson, sung at the completion of the Bunker Hill Monument in 1836. It contains the much-quoted lines "Here once the embattled farmers stood, and fired the shot heard round the world."

Crime Scarce in West Indies Crime almost is an unknown quantity in the smaller islands of the West Indies. Rarely will the natives steal money or valuables. Highway robbery is unknown.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained. Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, puffiness under the eyes, feel nervous, miserable—all upset. Don't delay? Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by grateful users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

The Crown Remains Veterans Reach the Top The Useful Red Cross Oxygen Is Life

Behind the gray walls of Windsor castle, on the hill above the Eton school, where young England learns discipline and cricket, King George's coffin was lowered into the vault to lie beside his father, King Edward VII, and his grandmother, Queen Victoria. The magnificent crown of England was taken from the coffin before it disappeared and placed before the altar. Kings go; the crown remains.

The services were broadcast, new feature of a royal funeral. The simple Church of England burial service, read by the Archbishop of Canterbury, was heard far over the earth, wherever Britain's 400,000,000 subjects live.

Veterans having successfully climbed the long, long road, the government began the biggest "pay-off" job in history, the printing of two billion four hundred million dollars' worth of bonds, to be distributed among 3,518,191 World war veterans. The mere distributing cost alone will be $7,000,000.

Now government wonders what new taxes can be invented to pay the two and one-half billions.

Interesting news from Ethiopia sent by an American correspondent says the residence of Haile Selassie's son has on the roof a large red cross, although it has nothing to do with the Red Cross. Associated Press sends news of a Swedish "field hospital," captured by Italians in the South, carrying ammunition on five trucks adorned with Red Cross flags and insignia. The "field hospital" automobiles contained, in addition, 27 cases of munitions. In modern war, the safe plan seems to be bomb everything. The war drums of the Ethiopian hero, Ras Desta Demtu, were captured. He will miss them.

"The Blood Is the Life," according to an old Hebrew saying, and oxygen is the life of the blood. No oxygen means death, in three minutes or less; too little oxygen means premature death, inferior health meanwhile. The Dionne quintuplets are marvelous in their health. The marvelous babies sleep outdoors every morning and afternoon; on one occasion the temperature was 30 degrees below zero.

All five walk, all have gained weight during the past month, and have new teeth. Annette has three new ones, twelve in all. All have beautiful big eyes, high foreheads, pretty faces and look as French as the Marsellaise; get plenty of oxygen, but wrap up well.

Lloyd George says the new king, Edward VIII, has the magnetism of his grandfather, Edward VII; that he comes to the throne with such great troubles ahead as few kings have ever encountered, but "his courage and his sure instinct will not fail him."

O. K. Allen, Huey Long's governor of Louisiana, died of a cerebral hemorrhage. He remained in succession to Senator Long, leader of the Long party, a short time only. Perhaps they are together now, both aware that nothing happening on this little earth is important; Huey Long wondering why he made such a fuss about it.

Mr. John Horan of Milwaukee, called by his fellow workers "Soda Ash Johnny," first used soda ash to clean locomotive boilers, a discovery that should have made him rich, but did not.

"Soda Ash Johnny," a proud man, refused to let his son accept a pension, told the authorities: "I am still able to work, and no boy of mine is going 'on the county.'"

It will surprise you to hear that the son, aged sixty-six, had applied for an old age pension.

The statement that imagination is worse than reality applies to everything—death included, let us hope.

When a colony of nudists move on San Diego, Calif., the strongest protest comes from San Diego's Braille club, an organization of blind people. And/Or "And," says a dictionary, usually expresses the general relation or connection or addition, "especially accompaniment, participation, combination, contiguity, continuance, simultaneity, sequence." "Or," is defined as a coordinating particle "that marks an alternative" and often "connects a series of words or propositions, presenting a choice of either."

Apricots Peaches From China Apricots and peaches both originally came from what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Middle Age and Painless Dentistry. CULVER CITY.—Especially to those nearing middle age—the age when you begin to exchange your emotions for symptoms—it's gratifying to hear a New York scientist has hit on a formula for really painless dentistry. If he's right, the operation will only begin to hurt when you get the bill. Time was when you could hang onto your stately ruins until there was English ivy growing on them. Nowadays, no matter what ails you, they X-ray your teeth, which is a mistake to begin with, because I never yet saw an X-ray photograph that was flattering. And the Irvin S. Cobb, next thing you know, you've a taste in your mouth like a druggist's dishrag; and your face looks like an old-fashioned buckskin purse, with the draw-string coming undone; and, on the inside, feels as empty as a haunted house. Still, getting the upper plate from a small order house has its compensations. Hot soup no longer makes blisters in the palate. Just a slight smell of burning rubber—that's all. And a beautiful brilliant new set, shimmering from a tumbler of water alongside the reading lamp, certainly does brighten up the boudoir.

A True Maker of Melodies. THEY gave a dinner here to the son of desperately poor immigrants, a modest, kindly little man who started life as a singing waiter in a bowery bar-room. The dinner celebrated his silver jubilee as a maker of melodies. It has been just 25 years since he set the toes of the nation to tingling with "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

I can think of an occasional popular composer, who might be defined as a person who has a good memory and hopes no one else has; just as now and then—but this is a trade secret—you strike a writer who is getting by not because he is such a good writer, but because he has been such a close reader. But for Irving Berlin, it may be said that his lyrics are his own and his airs are his own and his ideas are his own. Maybe that's why his tuneful output is so good—it reflects the spirit of an authentic creator, a genuine minstrel bard.

The Great Republican Hope. I NEVER thought the stocks that licked the desert and the Apaches would be slackers, but neither in Arizona nor in New Mexico can I find trace of an authentic Presidential boom for any home-grown statesman. On the other hand, the sheep crop is reported good.

Maybe it's just as well. Already there has been more than one favorite son boom that reminded me of a new trunk store on a side street—you know, the kind that always opens with a grand closing-out sale.

Republicans here speak highly of Governor Landon of Kansas. Still, you never can tell. If you can believe what the Sunday papers print when the editors can't think of anything else, tragedy always followed owing the Hope diamond or digging into King Tut's tomb. But being indorsed for office by W. R. Hearst is pretty fatal, too, seems to me.

A New Kind of Inflation. WHEN one of the New Deal groups council—announced the other day that Americans have larger hips than formerly, I just said: "Well, I'm glad things are expanding. There were several years when nothing I owned showed a tendency to go up except my blood pressure, and if hips are spreading, it merely means wider detours for a fellow when dancing on a crowded floor."

But now another White House pet, the Works Progress administration, gives a real thrill by promising to expose spinach, proving there are plenty of vegetables just as good for the diet, that taste like something and not like spinach. Maybe they'll yet find a use for spinach—by applying it externally, say? Personally I'd rather wear it in my hair than try to eat it. So would you, reader, if you were only brave enough to come out with the truth.

England's New King. IN THE matter of their ruling monarchs, the English are luckier than some. The crown is never tarnished nor the people ever shamed, for all their kings are gentlemen and all their queens are queens. That's why, I think, Britain will keep her royal line, while we keep our flag, which ought to be quite a long spell, in case any communistic person should ask you.

So, to the witty and engaging young lady gentleman, who picks up the mantle that slipped from the tired shoulders of a kindly and gracious elderly gentleman, we over here offer our best wishes. We know Your Majesty invariably will show good taste, and whilst you may not always do the right thing—that would be asking too much of any man—we're dead sure you'll always say it.

Time-Honored Swift Silver Mine Legend Again Revived

The time-honored legend of a lost silver mine reputed to be somewhere in Kentucky was again revived with the reading of an historical paper on Pulaski county before a Somerset business club. In the opinion of that author, the elusive silver lode is in Pulaski county, and the prediction was made that it eventually will be located.

Generally regarded as a pioneer myth, what has been referred to as the lost Swift silver mine has for nearly a century and a half provided the theme for a story that has gripped the Kentucky mountains. According to the yarn, with some variations, John Swift, an adventurer from the Colonies, came upon a silver mine in the Kentucky mountains, long worked by the Indians, and took from it fabulous riches in the precious metal.

At various times over a century, what purported to be charts showing the location of the missing cache have appeared, but while much of the region has been excavated and explored, no trace of the treasure has been found. At one time or another the search has been made all the way from Bell county to the Big Sandy country. In every case, however, what were regarded as promising leads proved of no avail, nor did the repeated failures deter the more venturesome from trying to solve the age-old riddle.

The so-called lost Swift silver mine has figured in many mountain narratives, and while these are generally discounted, there are many folk who hold to the belief that somewhere in Eastern Kentucky a vein of silver was worked by the aborigines before the advent of the white man to the region. Only the more optimistic, however, express the hope that the fabulous deposit so long searched for may ever be found. Admittedly it is one Kentucky pioneer legend that will not go down.

Cursed by Blessings

The following from The Courier, Journal is of especial sentence to Floyd County:

"The Kentucky Packers, Inc., Paintsville, capitalized at $50,000, was granted a charter today by Charles D. Arnett, Secretary of State."

It suggests the notion that Floyd county has, after a fashion, been cursed by its blessings of rich natural resources.

Floyd county is rich in coal and gas. For years we only touched the surface, tilling corn crop after corn crop until much of the strength of our soil was gone; peeling back the wooded hillsides for "new grounds;" cutting and slashing, right and left, for timber for outside markets until the expression, "Kentucky mountain forest," is like the little red schoolhouse—it just "ain't."

Then John C. C. Mayo and others opened up the coal business. Gas development followed. And these two, aside from unprofitable farming, compose our industries.

These natural resources have been blessings. But their very richness has dwarfed all other endeavor to the point that they may be curses in disguise.

Floyd county sadly lacks diversity of industry and originality of enterprise.

On the other hand, Johnson county, on our northern border, is not so richly endowed with natural gifts. It started as Floyd did, with farming by the hit-and-miss method its principal industry. Tim-bering also played its part. Coal and oil and gas also have had no minor role in the life of the county. But these resources have not been so great that they have stifled all other endeavor.

Johnson county business men have gone farther ahead. They have organized wholesale firms dealing in foodstuffs, commodities, gasoline and other products. Floyd county's former wholesale grocery houses were branches of a Paintsville firm. The only livestock market in this section is in Johnson.

And now—a packing firm. In Paintsville or nearby—not in Prestonsburg or Floyd county.

That sounds like a rather serious indictment of Floyd county. It is. Not because The Times would present this county in unfavorable contrast with another, but because these are facts.

And, again, because they are unpleasant facts about which something can be done. In this vicinity are numerous sites for factories, small or large. Water power is at hand, fuel at our very door. The county needs new industry.

We let one of the world's largest gas compressor stations go into Pike county, simply because our neighbors tendered greater inducements than Floyd was willing to offer. We have lost heavily in taxes ever since while Pike has profited.

Some day we should awaken to opportunity which does not have a habit of knocking twice on anybody's door.

"I Read Meters and Most Always Make Friends"

Last year this Company paid over $345,000 in wages to over 290 employees. These wages are largely spent at home and put into local circulation a substantial amount of money annually.

"ON my job as a meter reader I read hundreds of meters every day. I go right into people's homes and they ask me all sorts of questions, many of which have nothing to do with electricity. The other day a lady asked me to recommend a diet for her baby.

"I go into their offices where they are busily engaged in the tasks in which electricity is their helper. I see them in the city, on farms and in the factory. It makes me realize just how important is this job of maintaining a constant, dependable supply of electricity for every need of the community.

"The best part of my job is the opportunity it gives me to make friends and to help people get the most out of their electric service.

"For many people I am their only point of human contact with the Kentucky & West Virginia Power Company. Through me they appreciate that ours is not a soulless corporation but a big family of over 290 men and women who are serving the public.

"I like to have them ask me to help them; it shows they have confidence in me and in my company."

Fire which raged for two hours within a tank containing approximately 1,200 gallons of kerosene Friday at the gasoline manufacturing and oil refining plant of Mr. Gilley at Betsy Layne was finally extinguished with little loss

About Love

As have tried at to determine the many of the people state try charms at the end of the year. The of finding out's mate enough for us to be seeking. At any sea- apple peeling when over the head will the first letter of your name. Similarly, the seeds properly will reveal whether you or love, you Christmas write under a holly leaf the one of your admirers this leaf under your pillow; you will dream about the one who will love you best. If you will remove the yolk from a hard-boiled egg, fill the place with salt, and eat the egg, salt and all, you will dream that night that your true love will bring you a drink of water; do not be so eager to get the water that you will fail to recognize who brings it. The cardinal, or ordinary red bird, can tell your fortune quite as well as Madam Sanschaarctere. When you see one sitting on a limb, begin saying the alphabet; it will fly when your own lover's initial is called. Besides, it will fly in the direction in which he lives.

Try the following to avoid being an ungathered rose on your ancestral tree. Do not allow any one to sweep under your feet. If you find yourself fond of oats, break this habit, for it portends old maidhood. Do not fail to take all of a piece of cake offered you; if you are so dainty that you take only the top layer, you are destined to be single. young women must avoid soaking, or dunking, your bread or cake in coffee; the penalty is single blessedness. Do not allow your dishwasher to come to the boiling point; otherwise you will be out of the matrimonial market for a year.

Lovers' quarrels and jealousies must be avoided at all costs. If you are doubtful about your lover's fidelity, tie a knot in a cedar limb; if the limb continues to grow, his love is sincere. If the fire you have built burns well, your lover is thinking about you. When you are fishing, name your bait; if you catch a fish with this bait, your lover is true. If you are from his head and bury it with one of your own; this will insure lifelong affection between you two. A love vine, or dodder, placed by you on a plant will grow if your lover is true. Bend a stalk of mullein in the direction of your sweetheart's home; if the stalk regains its upright position, your lover is true.

Assuming that you have done all these and more, I suppose that you are now ready to contemplate matrimony. Watch your step, literally, when you march in to face the preacher; do not stand across the flooring planks from him. Watch the colors worn by brides, if you wish to prophesy safely the happiness or sorrow of the match. Avoid marrying on a stormy day, since that portends a stormy married life. If the wedding ring is dropped during the ceremony, look for bad luck. And after the ceremony, when the bride steps across the threshold of her new home, tell her to be sure to step across rather than on the threshold if she wishes to be happily married. If you are not one of the happy pair and wish to be especially lucky, kiss the bride before the husband has a chance. And, naturally, catch the bride's bouquet if you wish to be the next to go to the marriage altar.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lillith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lillith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after making several tests, assure Garth his claim is nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Sensing treachery ahead, Garth secretly removes a part from the motor of the plane. Huxby and Lillith taunt Garth, but their tone soon changes when they try to start the plane. Returning to shore they try to force Garth to give up the missing part. Garth manages to set the monoplane adrift and the current carries it over the falls. He points out that he is their only hope in guiding them out of the wilderness. Garth begins the work of preparing for the long journey. He insists that the others help. Ramill and his daughter must be hardened for the hardships ahead in their trek to the outpost on the Mackenzie. Garth experiences difficulties in getting his companions into line. An experience with a bear helps. Returning from a long sleep in the woods, Garth finds the party has stolen the tea and sugar he has been saving for emergencies. He makes no objection, simply pointing out that he is accustomed to a strict diet, and that they are hurting only themselves. The work of getting ready for the trip continues. Huxby refuses to help, and works on the mining claim. Garth stores food in an ice cave.

"You'll have two more days for it," Garth told him. "Only don't forget that an alloy of platinum and gold weighs more than lead. You'll be totting my 60 per cent, along with the 40 for yourself and Mr. Ramill. If you ride the loot in your pockets, you'll go down like a shot, first time you slip into a muskeg pool or quagmire. Think of the all-around calamity that would mean. You'd lose your life, Mr. Ramill would lose his Man Friday, Miss Lillith her fiancé, and I—I'd lose my 60 per cent."

Mr. Ramill interposed. "It's no joke, Alan. I've seen a strong swimmer sink by the gold in his money-belt. A man can be thrown off the shoulders. Another thing, Garth is to receive his five-fifths of whatever you have mined out. That is understood."

"It was his bargain," Huxby replied. "I went to gorge on the leg of caribou that Garth had roasted over the fire on a twist-thing of rawhide. When I could eat no more, he hastened me to the placer trough to resume panning."

"The others had already feasted upon tender venison, that was self-basting in its delicious fat. Lillith and her father had helped Garth pack it, with the meat and the skins, down the slope of the glacier."

"I'll see sundown, Garth set several snares, each attached to a line of downbeat saplings. For bait, he used raw pieces of caribou flesh. The beasts of the valley had never been trapped. When, at sunrise, he found the rounds of his snares, he collected lynx, two red foxes, a wolverine and a wolf."

"I would not reset the snares. He has more skins than he needed. From the fox skins he made a knapsack for himself. The fox skins furnished small pieces of catgut with the caribou rawhide for the bundle ironically."

"I told me about your caribou. I take it, you aim to live among the Eskimos?"

"No worse," Garth replied. "I'll wolf packbag. Load our traps up from the placer. I'll be at the glacier."

"Lillith's nod, the engineer knapsack and started off. The small aluminum pot and the millionaire's bag, the blanket from the leanto and his pack-board with the secret into the leanto. She came out with a tin of tea. Neither Lillith nor Garth put them in the wasteful eating."

"I lay at the foot of the mountain on her moose-skin leggings. Under the low roof of the tent. They had been set for use. But when she came down, Garth took along with the moose hides, the rawhide soles."

"How about the whisky flask?"

"Father's care."

"—spruce pitch."

"How. She put the tin bag, along with the salt, and a deadly wolf."

Garth had made a tump-line for his pack. As he fitted the band across his forehead and stood up, rifle in hand, he glanced over his shoulder at the girl.

She turned and met his glance. Her lips curled in their old scornful smile. "What are you waiting for? Aren't we ever to get out of this beastly valley?"

He started off without any reply but with a glow of exultance under his outward show of indifference. Lillith Ramill thought she was about to escape from the Wild.

He had promised to guide them all to the Mackenzie. The probabilities were now in favor of even her father making it. The girl would go back to what she called civilization—to luxury and self-indulgence, to jazz and night-clubs—the rapid pursuit of sensation.

Yet a part of her would linger behind in this lost valley of the desolate subarctic Rockies. She had eaten of wild meat; she had smelled the tang of smoke from man's first friend, the camp fire. She had come face to face with the Primitive—and had lived it.

The real woman of her had awakened—had thrust aside the superficial self whose world was made up of artificiality and dissipation. She had been compelled to face the raw realities of Life. And there were weeks more of it to come.

Fortunately, she had already been hard. Now she was fit. Under the smear of mosquito dope, the lines had smoothed from her face. The drawn look had disappeared. Instead of the scarlet of rouge, her lips were cherry red with healthy natural color. She had gained weight. Her body now looked lean rather than emaciated.

As Garth overtook the girl's father, he eyed him with a smaller yet no less genuine satisfaction. For every pound gained by the daughter, the father had been rid of three or more. Though still far from hard, the millionaire had worked and sweat into vastly better condition than at the start of his training.

Huxby did not come into sight, out of the placer trough, until the others were well up the tundra slope, halfway to the glacier. That gave Garth an excuse to tell Lillith to ease her father along while Huxby was closing up with them.

Garth himself swung briskly ahead. So far, nothing had been said to Huxby about the cache cave in the ice tunnel of the glacier stream. He knew only that the caribou carcasses had been put on ice.

The one thing of which Garth felt most certain regarding the engineer was that he would never give over trying to get the platinum placer until every possible scheme had been balked. Mr. Ramill might quit. He already possessed a fortune.

But Huxby was still a relatively poor man, and he had now made certain that the placer was worth at least a million dollars. Behind his polished front, he was no less unscrupulous than his millionaire partner, and he was absolutely cold-blooded.

Among the cards that the future was to deal in the game, the ice cave might prove to be anything from a two-spot to an ace. If the play should shift back to the valley, a cache full of meat would most benefit the player who knew about it. No less so, the caribou skins. In any event, it would do no harm and might prove of advantage to leave Huxby in doubt regarding the location of the cache.

Lillith made the last climb to Garth without effort. But Huxby plodded up almost as winded as Mr. Ramill. He lowered from his shoulders the small but heavy load in his wolfskin knapsack. The chunks of frozen caribou meat beside the bulky blanket-wrapped bundle on Garth's packboard drew his displeased attention.

"You can't expect me to carry any of that venison. I'm no pack jack of the woods. Forty pounds is quite enough to suit me."

Garth hefted the wolfskin sack.

"My guess is forty-five. Figuring roughly, that makes forty-one troy pounds, or four, ninety-two troy ounces. Call it five hundred even. Platinum is around sixty dollars an ounce troy. The values of the alloy will average at least thirty. That gives us a total of say, fifteen thousand dollars. Not so bad for a few days' panning."

Huxby's face showed that this was no news to him. For all his cool self-control, his fingers clutched tight hold of the wolfskin as he drew it out of Garth's careless grasp.

Ever since coming into the valley he had spent the greater part of every long day scratching spots all over the great placer claim and panning samples of the gravel. Fifteen thousand dollars was no fortune. But if a few score panfuls of grassroot dirt could yield that amount, there could be no doubt of the vast treasure beneath. Even if bedrock lay at a shallow depth, the platinum placer was worth at least a million dollars.

Though Garth smiled at the engineer's betrayal of cupidity, he took note of it as an additional warning. He had said that Huxby was a commonplace wolf. The wolf is apt to be deadly.

Garth's sideward glance caught an amused twinkle in Mr. Ramill's shrewd eyes. The hard training had put the millionaire in better health than he probably had enjoyed for many years. Also, his mind was bigger and better poised than that of his prospective son-in-law. He could smile with Garth over Huxby's obsession—smile and put aside all thought of the placer until in a position to take it from its discoverer.

Lillith saw the situation from a still different angle. She opened the wolfskin sack to peer inside. At sight of the nodules, she dropped the flap, with a look of disgust. Mere value meant nothing to her. The alloy looked dull and uninteresting.

"Worth only fifteen thousand dollars!" she bantered her fiancé. "You've dug dirt all this time for a trifle like that, and lugged it all the way up here. Don't tell me you're so dumb that you plan to pack it for the weeks Alan says we'll need to get back to the Mackenzie. Forty-five pounds of that stuff—how silly! From what Alan told us, we may have all we can do to carry ourselves on this cross-country hike."

"With my blanket and the meat that's in it, I'm starting off with something like two hundred pounds," Garth said. "Game was scarce on the other side of the pass when I went out the other time. The weight of our metal in meat may be worth more than the fifteen thousand dollars. Let Huxby choose which he prefers to pack."

The engineer compromised by showing one of the twenty-pound chunks of caribou meat into the sack, on top of the metal. This left a second chunk of equal weight. Lillith bent over to put it in her own sack.

"Lay off," said Garth. "It is his choice. Besides, frozen meat soon spoils when it thaws. Fall into Indian file. Here goes."

"Alan Garth, You're a Man."

He backed up to his boulder-perched pack, slipped the tump-line over his forehead, and started up the great cleft as if his 200-pound pack weighed no more than Huxby's 65 pounds of meat and metal.

He halted only when the other men were compelled to stop for breath. Huxby, though carrying a load only a third the weight of Garth's, had soon begun to strain and puff as hard as Mr. Ramill. He was larger than Garth and seemingly stronger-muscled. But he lacked Garth's wind and endurance and the knack of back-packing. At every halt he sank down on the ice or a moraine stone, panting.

Garth merely eased his back-breaking pack upon a boulder, slipped the tump-line from his forehead, and waited for the other men to recover. Lillith Ramill's pack was too light to hamper her. She climbed with the agility of a goat.

In places the pitch of the glacier became too steep for ordinary climbing. Garth had to draw his belt-ax and chop foot holds. The last of these steep rises was far up towards the head of the pass.

The remaining distance to the summit was not so steep, and there were no dangerous crevasses. Garth made the climb at a swinging pace. He was halfway down before he met Huxby plodding slowly upwards with Mr. Ramill. The engineer looked at him with cold-eyed rancor.

Mr. Ramill panted a wistful question: "Wh-when—do we—eat?"

"At the top. Take your time."

Lillith had chosen to wait for Garth down where he had left them all. His pack lay on the snow below the boulder upon which he had set it. She pointed her slender finger at the fallen bundle.

"I tried to find out if you were lying about the weight. I couldn't even lift one end. But you see how the top of the stone slopes. The beastly tump-line slid off."

"That's all right, Miss Ramill. Easy enough to up-end it again."

"Easy!" Her blue eyes flashed with an odd light.

to camp that day. But it was downhill. Now—to pack this frightful load all the way up here! Alan Garth, you're a man!"

"Well, it's a bit of a stiff pull-up," he admitted. "But we'll soon make the downslope. I left the knife on the knapsack. Go up and slice that caribou meat."

The girl whom her own father could not command met the order with a cheerful nod. She started briskly off up the gap. Garth's steady climbing brought him to the top of the pass a few paces behind Huxby and Mr. Ramill. Lillith was sprinkling salt on slices of the raw meat.

The pass was barren even of caribou moss. The meat had to be eaten cold or uncooked, or not at all. Six hours had passed since the party left the camp in the valley bottom. After the long, hard climb, even the girl was hungry enough to have eaten rawhide. The caribou meat was tender, and the first taste of salt since the party had come to the valley turned the meal into a feast.

Less than half of the 20-pound chunk of caribou remained by the time even Mr. Ramill found he could eat no more.

All were so refreshed by the food and rest that no one objected when Garth gave the word to start on. There would be no more slogging up-hill, with lungs bellowsing for air. One would only have to hold back.

But that was the rub—the holding back. The south side of the pass was far steeper than the north, and there was no glacier to offer stretches of smooth footing. The bed of the sharply tilted cleft frequently dropped over small cliffs. Between these high ledges were slides of frost-shattered rocks. Patches of ice here and there made the footing doubly treacherous.

In places Garth had to drop his pack down before him. Not infrequently, even Lillith had to be given a hand down slippery chutes, or caught in Garth's upraised arms when Huxby lowered her off the edge of a sharp drop. Still oftener, her father had to be helped by both Garth and Huxby.

Shovel-Tusked Elephants Used Big Jaws as Dredge

Nature never made any real mechanical steamshovels except indirectly through her agent, man, but 20,000,000 years ago, before the Gobi desert had reached its present barrenness and before man had put in his appearance on earth, she had a creation far more remarkable. It was an animated dredge—a great elephant whose tusks had taken the form of shovels extending from a scoop-like lower jaw. These mastodons dredged the muddy bottoms of prehistoric swamps for water lilies and other swamp growths which formed their food. It has been several years since their fossils were first discovered in the Gobi desert, but interest has reverted to them through the discovery and identification of plant fossils which prove that swamps existed in the Gobi during their time—a fact previously doubted and which doubt raised a question as to these animals' food and the purpose of their shovel tusks. This doubt, however, is now cleared. Other discoveries have shown that these long-extinct elephants also lived in America and dredged the swamps of California, Nebraska, and Kansas.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Spiders and Stars

Spiders' webs have many uses. Without them astronomers would find it harder to make accurate observations. The eye pieces of their telescopes are marked into sections by very fine lines, which are really pieces of web held in place by spots of varnish. Webs are used because it is impossible to have finer as well as equally distinct lines by any other method. There are other uses, too, for webs. An instrument maker in York employs a man specially to collect spiders and webs. Only a special kind of spider is caught, the "eperira drademata," which is usually found on gorse bushes and has a cross on its back. The spiders are made to wind their webs on special forks, each insect winding about 40 feet before the supply gives out. These webs are used in the manufacture of the most delicate types of scientific instruments.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Animal Prophets

A pit-horse at Markham colliery proved wiser than the man who drove it, says Tit-Bits Magazine. Suddenly, for no apparent reason, the horse, which had worked underground for seven years, bolted and refused to return. When its driver returned alone, the roof fell on him almost immediately. Animals often sense danger and the authorities in England know, for instance, that pit-horses are aware of danger long before the miners. Not long ago, a New Forest dog pulled its master from under the radius of an old oak, which crashed a few seconds after he reached safety. In Burma, where elephants carry logs, one of these beasts refused to cross a certain bridge with its load. Eventually the logs were loaded on a cart and dragged by a man.

Some Club Luncheon Ideas for the Puzzled Hostess

It Is a Sensible Custom to Serve at Regular Meal Hour.

Herewith is given a menu for a very simple club luncheon, to be served before the afternoon bridge. It is such a sensible custom to serve a luncheon at a regular meal hour instead of refreshments at an hour which will be so near dinner time that appetite is lost.

Another good reason for serving beforehand is that most women feel it necessary to get home before the children's supper hour, and when there is a distance to be traveled, they are anxious to leave as soon as the game is over.

As far as the hostess herself is concerned, it is usually easier for her to serve before bridge than after. She can then play her hand without worry as to whether the coffee is boiling over or the sandwiches drying out.

For a club that is original in its idea of what may be served at luncheon, the hostess of the day invited the eight members to a breakfast party served at ten o'clock. She provided melon as a fruit course and then served coffee, small baked sausages, creamed potatoes and waffles. There were plenty of waffles and they made the dessert as well when the sirup was passed.

Another woman, who had been sent a Virginia ham from her southern home, gave her guests ham and eggs and hot waffles with grapefruit as a starter.

The clever hostess does not feel that she must follow accepted formulas for refreshments for her parties, and her guests always agree with her.

- Luncheon Menu.
- Chicken turnover
 - Celery
 - Pickles
 - Ice cream with meringues
- The meringues can be bought at the bakery. As they are often rather long for an afternoon service, the small "kisses" can take their place.
- Tomato Shrimp Jelly.
- 3 cans tomato soup
 - 1 can boiling water
 - 2 tablespoons gelatin
 - 1/2 cup cold water
 - 1/2 pound shrimps
 - 12 stuffed olives
- Heat the soup with the boiling water. Soften the gelatin in the cold water, add the soup, stir until dissolved. Arrange several shrimps to use alternately in a mold and add carefully a little of the gelatin mixture. Place on ice to harden, and repeat. A ring mold is attractive when it is turned out—and then the center can be filled with sliced cucumber mixed with whipped sour cream seasoned with onion and tarragon vinegar. When the mold is set, turn out on a platter and garnish with lettuce or romaine. Pass the sour cream dressing or mayonnaise.
- Chicken Turnover.
- Cut pastry into long rounds and spread with a filling made of minced cooked chicken seasoned with oil, juice, salt, pepper and moistened with cream. Fold the pastry press edges together, brush with milk and bake about ten minutes until brown in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit).
