CALLED TO OKLAHOMA BY DEATH OF MOTHER

Mrs. S. R. Auxier left Tuesday for Crowder, Okla., having been called there by the death late Monday night of her mother, Mrs. Mollie Tucker, 74 years old. Her mother had been in ill health for several years and had recently suffered an attack of influenza. She was a member of the Baptist Church for years.

Besides her daughter here, Mrs. Tucker is survived by two daughters and three sons. Funeral rites were conducted Thursday and burial made

$10,000,000 GAS TAX IS INDICATED

State's Gasoline Revenue For Year Almost Million Dollars Ahead of 1934

The state of Kentucky collected $927,386.19 in gasoline tax for the month of October which is $81,270.05 more than was collected in October, 1934, an increase of 9.6%. The total collections for the first ten months of 1935 were $8,397,893,84. This is an increase of $721,060.49 over the first ten months of 1934 when collections were $7,676,833.35. This is a 9.39% gain over last year. The total collections for the twelve months of 1934 were $9,207,196.37. If the months of November and December show the same rate of gain as the previous ten months, the Kentucky gasoline tax will produce $10,071,-752.11 in 1935. This will be a gain in excess of eight hundred thousand dollars over 1934 and an increase over 1933 of over one and three-quarter million dollars. Gasoline tax colections for the past four years are as follows: 1932 $8,203,822.70 1933 8,316,249.03 1934 9,207,196.37 1935 (estimated) .. 10,071,752.11

The 1935 gasoline tax collections will represent tax on approximately 201,435,000 gallons of gasoline. If the gasoline tax rate in Kentucky was 4 cents instead of 5 cents a galion, the state would have realized $8,057,000, almost as much as the 5 cent tax produced in 1932 and 1933.

Kentucky gasoline consumers will also pay the federal government 1c per gallon on the 201,435,000 gallons of gasoline used in 1935, amounting to $2,014,350.00. Kentucky's total gasoline tax bill will doubtless be well over $12,000,000.00 in 1935.

Believed Under Control After 5 Cases Develop

TWO SURVIVE

With three persons dead of spinal meningitis after five cases of the disease developed there early last week, the Caleb Fork section of Weeksbury on Left Beaver Creek was under quarantine this armed guards being stationed at the entrance to that part of the mining camp to prevent entrance to or departure from Caleb Fork.

Of the two survivors of the disease, one may die, Dr. Marvin Ransdell, director of the Floyd health department, said Tuesday. This sufferer is Wavy Johnson, a 12-year-old boy. The other survivor, Lula Bowens, 22,

Immediately upon learning of the threatened epidemic at Weeksbury, Dr. Ransdell asked the state board of health for serum with which to treat meningitis sufferers. With the full co-operation of coal company officials and Dr. Massie, at Weeksbury. ne also caused armed guards to be placed at the entrance to Caleb Fork and at the homes where cases of the malady had developed. The Weeks-bury and Caleb Fork schools, in Christmas vacation when the meningitis outbreak came, remain closed.

"We don't anticipate any further spread of the disease," Dr. Ransdell told The Times Tuesday morning. "We have taken the only steps possible to curb its spread, and these are solation and quarantine, since there s no medical preventive measure to be taken. The weather has been in our favor, discouraging people of the stricken community from visiting among each other. Full co-operation has been given by the Koppers Coal Company officials, and if the ame vigilance is maintained that we have employed in the past week danger of an epidemic should soon pass."

Medical authorities believe they have traced the disease from Marrow-Pike county, to Weeksbury. At Marrowbone several cases of what was termed there as "brain fever" leveloped. Members of Joe Johnson's family, the same household in which meningitis developed at Weeksoury, visited on Marrowbone, about weeks before the Weeksbury outbreak of meningitis at a home or in the vicinity of a home where the 'brain fever" cases had been.

Names of the dead from meningitis were not available when this was written Tuesday morning

Doctor Carrel is a bit late with his theory that human beings might be dried out and filed away for a matter of 200 years or so, and then brought back to life again. Only the other night I was speaking at a dinner where there were many who must have undergone the process-only they hadn't been brought back to life yet.

It used to be that I had better results, talking at banquets. But lately my audiences and I seem to be drifting apart. Or maybe it's merely poor old Mr. Cobb that's drifting apart.

Seriously, I think it would be a mistake to dehydrate a fellow the way Doctor Carrel suggests and set him aside in some quiet ratproof place for a couple of centuries and then return him to consciousness. My guess is the NRA memorial stamp will be printed in black and feature a picture of Gen. Hugh Johnson standing on his head.

Peace Prize for Sale.

STICKING up their heads just long enough to announce there'd be no peace prize for 1935, the judges ducked right back into the sub-cellar, out of the way of brickbats and night-sticks. But before withholding the award, why didn't the judges take a quick glance in the direction of Greenland? There hasn't been a harsh word out of Greenland all year. I believe there was one other small country somewhere enjoying comparative peace but the name escapes me.

Feminist From West Says a Change in Tactics Is Needed.

Judge Georgia Bullock, of the Superior court of Los Angeles, a recent visitor in Washington, D. C., believes that women have "lost ground" in the last few years, says the New York Sun.

Like all feminists, she advocates an equal chance for men and women in business and the professions. But unlike the militant feminists, she does not insist "rights" can be won or retained by combative tac-

"Women in the past have won some concessions-suffrage, for example-by 'warfare,'" states the judge. "But the time for contention is gone. Contrary to the stand of most women in public life and in organizations, Judge Bullock is convinced that in the last few years women in this country have their wings clipped, have lost caste to a certain extent in business and the professions. She attributes this to world changes, but feels "the only way we can retrieve our former position is to prove we have unique ability and can work with, not against, men.

Her own successful career in the egal profession has taught her that the odds are not all against women. While she admits countless evidences of discriminations against women, she explains that this is not due so much to man's prejudice as to the attitude of women themselves.

Too Dominant?

Developing this theory, she said she had noticed how often women in high positions set out to execute their ideas, regardless of the opinions of men and women with whom they worked. Such action, she sald, was enough to prejudice men against all women who sought self-expression outside the home. time, retains the fundamentals which we believe are so vital to our national welfare and which have played a large part in bringing our country, in a comparatively short space of time, to the position of the greatest industrial nation on the earth

The Public and Banking

It is necessary that the public have a thorough understanding of the functions of banks, what they can do and what they cannot do, for it must be recognized that to many people the business of banking is still somewhat of a mystery.

We should frankly explain these functions to the public, acquaint them with the laws under which we operate and emphasize the vital part which banks play in the economic life of the Nation. Therefore, in order that there may be the fullest cooperation and understand ing between the banks and the people of the country, it will also be one of our objectives to take the mystery out of banking wherever it exists in the public

Banking Conferences

A series of Regional Conferences of Banking Service will be held in strate gic sections of the country, embracing all types of banking. The new banking laws and the regulations issued thereunder will be carefully analyzed so that our bankers will have a thorough un derstanding of the broadened services now made possible.

The question of public relations and how we can best serve the people of our communities will be another topic of discussion. Clinics or forums on spe cific questions of interest to bankers and the problems confronting them in their particular localities will also be included in these conferences.

Annual Bankers Convention Says People Have Had Confidence Restored-Recommends Changed Government Policy

The restoration of public confidence in banking has put it in the position where it can function fully and vigorously in playing its full economic part in the progress of recovery, said the annual convention resolutions.

"The passage or a generally construc tive banking law in the Banking Act of 1935 has stabilized the banking situation and enabled bankers to devote un divided attention to the normal administration of their institutions in promoting the business and public welfare of their communities," the resolutions said.

"We feel that it is a particularly important feature of this law that it aims to create through the revision of the Federal Reserve Board a Supreme Court of Finance which, with the nonpolitical appointment of exceptionally competent men, should constitute one of the greatest forward steps in building a sound banking and credit system for this country."

The Government in Banking

Another resolution said: "We particularly emphasize the de sirability of the retirement of government from those fields of extending credits of various types which can be adequately served by privately owned institutions. We recognize that the exigencies of the now passing depression made necessary a large participa tion by government for a time in the task of meeting the public's emergency financial needs.

"Those conditions have been largely remedied and the obligation now rests upon the banks and other financial agencies to demonstrate to the peopl of this country that they are fully able and willing to meet all demands upor them for sound credit cooperation. It is our duty as bankers to facilitate in every effective way the retirement of government agencies from credit activities by promoting public understanding of the proper function of privately owned banking,'

Where the spring rill came burbling over ledges down to the rocky shore, he halted in a small clearing. Here had been his camp on his previous visit to the valley. Ten feet up the branch-trimmed trunks of four closely grouped birch trees, a tattered moosehide hung over the edge of a pole plat-

Garth glanced up at the platform. Wolverines have robbed the food cache. But there's plenty more meat on the hoof. While I go for some, you two will start gathering wood."

Miss Ramill's nerves were on edge. She snapped at him hysterically: "You insolent bully! Don't you dare to try to give me orders."

Her father had squatted down on the warm rock, tired out by his day's exertions. Garth spoke to him:

"Too much is enough. The condition was that all three of you would do as I thought best. Huxby promptly tried again to bluff me. Now your daughter balks."

Mr. Ramill raised his down-sagged head. "You'll not be able to say that of me, young man. I stand by your terms. I always play to win. But no one can truthfully claim I ever welch or revoke. I will take your orders, and so will Vivian, now that he has had time to realize the situation."

"How about your daughter?" "I'll leave that to you. If you can control her, you'll be doing more than I have ever been able to do."

Garth met the disdainful gaze of the girl with a smile. "So your father turns you over to me, my lady. Let me hasten to assure you, I beg to decline the honor." "Ah, indeed!"

"Yes. I'll let old Mother Nature spank you till you come to your senses.

Her blue eyes flared with scorn, "Oh, you-you! D-n!"

"Better save your energy," he advised. "You'll need it all, unless your pride stoops to the squaw work of camp-fire tending. Smoke drives off insects. For another thing, no wolf, wolverine or lynx, or even a grizzly, will venture close to a fire. Think that over. Mr. Ramill, you have your patent lighter."

He swung away between the spruces without waiting for any reply. Left alone with her exhausted father, the girl might come to realize how utterly she had crashed out of her soft and luxurious civilized environment.

A girl whom even her father had been unable to control! That had been evident from the first. She was a badly spoiled product of the jazz-age -willful, arrogant, utterly selfish. Fortunately she had shown herself no less hard physically than mentally. Otherwise he would have played the game in a different way. No weak-muscled woman could make that travois to the Mackenzie.

As for her father, he had only himself to thank. A pirate should expect to take his chances. He might be gotten out to the river, and he might not. That depended upon his heart. Soft muscles could be hardened. Not so a

No question as to the girl and Huxby, if they obeyed orders. They could make it.

A crash in the alders broke in upon Garth's thoughts. The splash that followed told him a moose had caught his scent and taken to the lake. To have run to the bank and shot the swimming beast would have been easy. Only, he had no canoe or raft, and the water here was rather deep offshore.

He stalked down through the timber. For the first hundred feet or so out from the shore thickets, willows grew along both sides of the low ledge. A peer through the foliage showed the immense palmate antlers of an old bull

Garth flattened down on the mosscovered dyke and crawled away from the bank. Shoreward, on the other side, he caught sight of a slight movement among the willows. He rose on his knees and swung up his rifle. Though he was still screened by the brush alongside the ledge, his quick movements sent a strong whiff of manscent downwind.

With loud snorts of alarm, two cow moose, a calf, and a young bull heaved up among the willows less than a dozen yards apart. They started to plunge forward out of the thicket. Garth's first shot dropped the calfless cow with a bullet through the head. His second bullet glanced off the base of the bull's left antler. Partly stunned by the shock, the bull swerved sideways, only to drop in his tracks, shot through the heart.

Silently as he had stalked out the ledge, Garth returned to solid ground. He knew that the snorting, bawling moose in the pools would soon quiet down and return to their lily-pond feeding. The only requirement was for him to keep out of sight and either across or down wind from the stupid beasts. They had not learned to fear human hunters.

A few steps along the bank brought him to a game trail through the thickets. He laid down his rifle and wade

> To dress out a thousand-pound animal is no light task, even under the best of conditions. Garth thought nothing of it. All the hide within reach slid free to the quick draw of his curved knife blade. With belt-ax and knife he cut off the antlered head then the upper foreleg and hindquarter. After that he was able to heave the carcass over by the leverage of the other

> When he had finished with the bull, he went to the cow. She weighed perhaps 200 pounds less, and was therefore easier to dress out.

> With the two skins and all the meat ashore, he took a dip in a clear pool and washed his buckskins. As he sloshed out of the willows in the wet garments, he saw Miss Ramill staring through her headnet at the eight big legs. He had hooked them on the stubs of spruce limbs. Her gaze lowered from the other raw moose products that were piled on one of the hides. She turned from them loath-

"Faugh! What a sickening mess! Have you started a packing plant?"

"The packing is just about to start," he replied. "Are you too feeble to carry this rolled skin? It's the lighter

"That filthy thing? You may be sure I'm not so feeble-minded as to touch any of your butcher mess."

"Very well. Only remember, it's your own choice, sister.'

He bagged the contents of the bull hide, slung it on his back, picked up his rifle, and headed for camp. The girl looked from him to the folded moose cow skin, hesitated, flushed angrily, and followed, empty-handed.

While still some distance from the rill, he whiffed a tang of wood smoke. He quickened his step. It gave him a pleasant surprise. After all, the girl seemed to have given in, at least partly. He turned to her with a friendly look. She met it with a scornful smile.

They came to the opening where Garth trimmed a pair of green willow spits, opened the moosehide, and cut two slices of liver. He put a slice on each spit, and started to broil them over the coals. With a look of disgust, Miss Ramill turned her back and sat down on the rill bank. Before long the broiling liver began to send out an appetizing odor. The girl's nose went up for an involuntary sniff. Garth met the intent look of her father, and allowed his left eyelid to flutter slightly. Another turn of the spits completed the broiling. He handed one of them to Mr. Ramill,

The millionaire lifted his headnet to take a gingerly nibble at his hot meat. His heavy face brightened with a surprised smile. He smacked his lips and bit off a large mouthful. At the sound, his daughter jerked around. Garth was biting into the other piece of liver.

The girl cried out her indignation: "You greedy pigs! Where's my piece?" Garth pointed to the moosehide. Help yourself."

He met her furious look with cool indifference, and went on eating. Unable to blast him, she turned to her father.

"I'll take yours, Dad. You've had two bites. It will not take you long to cook another piece. Make it three." At that, Garth swung around between father and daughter.

"Mr. Ramill, we'll settle this right now. You said you'd leave her to me. I cooked that meat for you. She will cook her own meat, or go without." The older man sat for several moments considering the matter. He then raised his piece of meat and re swined his meal. Lilith Ramill st. him, her eyes wide,

"Not now. You'll rest, do some work, and then get another slice. Call this valley one of those physical culture sanitariums where the tired busl-

"Take your choice. If you refuse, I give you my word you'll never reach the Mackenzie. I might back-pack you in some places; you don't weigh much over two hundred. Happens, though, I'm not a donkey. You'll go on your own feet."

"Very well. Put me on them." Obedient to directions, the big man stretched out flat upon the sunwarmed rock. Garth turned about to pull the moosehide and what was upon it into the shade of a birch.

Miss Ramill thrust in front of him and seized his knife. She slashed at the liver. The blade was razor-sharp. Her angry stroke not only cut through the liver, it slit the moosehide as well.

Garth said nothing. Enough for him that hunger had humbled the girl's pride. She had learned her first lesson. Long hours had passed since her finicky breakfasting on wine and delicatessen in the cabin of the monoplane, far over on the Mackenzie. She was fairly ravenous.

Her rouged lips twitched with anticipation as she held the spitted slica of liver close upon the coals of the Festive Trappings Bring low-burnt fire. Well satisfied, Garth hung the remaining liver, the tongues and muffles under the cache platform. A smudge-fire on the ground below the meat drove off the flies.

Indians' Ark Legend Is Still Related in Quebec

The remnants of the Indians in the country surroundings Capes Trighty and Eternity, the high points on the Saguenay river, still cling to the ancient belief that the ark or, as they erm it, "the big canoe," rested on the top of Cape Trinity, 2,000 feet above the level of the river which skirts Its base, and was placed there by a flood which inundated the rest of the earth, destroying all life thereon, only the families of worthy Indians, as well as pairs of the various animals and birds being preserved by the Great Maniton, whose guiding hand landed "the blg canoe" on the last bit of earth left uncovered by water.

The Indians also have a legend, says a Tadoussac (Quebec) correspondent in the Washington Star., which bears considerable resemblance to the casting of Satan and his rebellious followers out of paradise. According to the Indian tradition, the Great Manitou cast the "fallen angels" over the precipice of Cape Trinity. All met death in the river below with the exception of the leader, who was so strong that the fall of 2,000 feet only crippled him.

As this "angel" gathered strength he became the demon of the river, wrecking canoes, drowning peaceful Indians and wreaking havoc in gen-

The battle between the two was terrific, Mayo swinging the demon around his head and against the rock of Trinity with such force that the three great gashes in the mountain resulted from the contacts, so the tradition continues. Finally Mayo was victorious, crushing out the life of the demon and thus restoring peace and quiet to the beautiful waters of the Saguenay.

Mourning Dove Like Pigeon

The female mourning dove looks very much like a pigeon. Her dress is dull grayish brown or fawn colored, and she lacks the coloring around the neck which distinguishes the male. Wher in repose the female is a flabby supine, shiftless-looking creature, but she laspires one of the most famous of all bird love calls. Perhaps the male mourning dove is inspired to his plaintive call in appreciation of the refinement of his mate, for she is among the gentlest of birds.

Old Br'er 'Coon Is a Wise One; Could Be Chosen National Animal

"If we were to adopt a national | tree where the wind roars and the animal, just as we have adopted thunder is louder, possibly a racthe eagle as the national bird, what better could we find than the raccoon?" asks Leon F. Whitney in the Journal of Mammalogy. Whitney favors the raccoon because it ranks as the most intelligent of mammals, and has proved its ability to survive where many other animals have succumbed.

Because the raccoon is nocturnal, it is one of the least understood of our animals, says Whitney. The common belief that the raccoon washes all of its food is discounted by him. "This observation has been made on raccoons in captivity and not in their natural state," he Raccoons are popularly believed to hibernate all during the winter. but this is not always true, says Whitney. He calls the matter a relative one, for a cold snap which will drive a 'coon to his den in the fall may be not cold enough to keep him inside in the winter.

"In December, the raccoons will be found out on nights which may be as cold as 20 degrees, and when the temperature drops to 12 or 15, the raccoons will not be out," he says. "But temperatures which will make them go to their dens and go there during the early part of the fall, will not trouble them at all in the latter part of the fall. It seems to be an entirely relative matter, and the same condition applies throughout the winter. The warm nights all during the winter will bring the raccoons out, and the cold nights will keep them home."

Whitney has found that raccoons are not nearly as sensitive to noise as to vibration; that the sense of touch is developed far more in proportion than any of the other faculties. He gives the following explanation for this characteristic:

"Probably this development has come about through its tree climbing propensities. Living high up a coon would need to be less sensitive to noise, and less wary for sound warnings. But he would need to be extremely sensitive to warnings through the sense of touch, and he is. If an enemy attempted to climb a tree in which he was living the facts must needs be transmitted to him; hence his development of this extraordinary power. Sometimes when hunting, my dogs have treed a raccoon in a tree too large to climb, and it seems impossible to induce him to look down at the flashlights so that his eyes may be seen and the hunter may know where to shoot. When an incident of this kind occurs, the hunters pound on the tree trunk with a rock. This will almost always arouse the animal's curiosity and he will look to see what is happening."

FLOYD GETS NYA PROGRAM PROJECT

Employment To Be Furnished Young Men And Women Members of Relief Families

F. A. Maggard, district NYA supervisor, said Tuesday that approximately $7,000 will be spent in the county within the next few months by the administration.. A project at Allen has already been approved.

The Floyd county NYA council, which works in co-operation with Mr. Maggard in planning and submitting projects, is composed of Prof. Ishmael Triplett, C. D. Milby, Supt. Ballard Hunter, Circuit Judge John W. Caudill, all of Prestonsburg, and Mrs. G. C. Sutherland, .of Wheel-

The National Youth Administration for Kentucky this week centered its activities around a state-wide program designed to provide employment for young men and women who are between the ages of 16 and 25 and who are members of relief families. F. D. Peterson, State Director, said.

Floyd is one of nine counties in the program have been approved. It is the only county in Eastern Kentucky thus far to profit from the program.

The NYA work program includes part-time employment on projects in the fields of Youth Community Devel opment and Recreational Leadership, Rural Youth Development, Public Service Training and Research. Sevwith the promise of full co-operation eral such projects already have been from all members, and it is planned to approved and will be active within

According to Mr. Peterson, there are two basic requirements to follow Unusual interest is being shown in in development of these projects. One of a type which will result in definite contribution to the community, and for this they will receive wages. The other requirement is that a major portion of the federal funds expended must go for youth labor.

Project application procedure has been simplified, and public and quasipublic agencies may act as co-operating sponsors, Mr. Peterson stated. Projects can be developed, approved and set in metion in a relatively short

Information as to procedure may be obtained by writing the National Youth Administration, Ninth and Broadway, Louisville. It is pointed out, however, that major construction and music projects should not be undertaken under the NYA program, while projects involving house to house canvassing are not permissible.

Recreational Leadership projects suggested by Mr. Peterson included those employing youth from relief families as leaders and assistants in the establishment, organization and conduct of recreational and community activities in playgrounds, athletic fields, water sports areas, camps, parks, community houses, indoor recreation centers, gymnasiums, public institutions, and school and community centers.

The Rural Development program is designed for employment of youths from relief families in rural communities in improving and beautifying school grounds, minor repairing, aiding in reforestation, aiding in work of state experiment farms and agritultural work.

Public Service Training projects call for employment of youth as assistants in various public services, to conduct activities outside the scope of these local governmental agencies, such as traffic checks and control, parole and delinquent work, sanitation, health and welfare activities, social services, child care, and investigation of local and state governmental record.

On Research projects, youth will be employed in a variety of local history, tax records, safety campaigns, and biological and agricultural ex perimental assistance.
