

THREE DRAW 32 YEARS IN TRIALS HERE FOR MURDER

Adkins Pleads Innocent of Lewis Slaying, Gets 10-Year Term; 20 Years for Castle

KIDN CONVICTED

Three of the 15 men indicted recently by the grand jury of the Floyd circuit court for murder in this county were convicted this week for a total prison stretch of 32 years.

The convicted men are: Chester A. Kidd, 18 years, killing of Martin Tackett; Henry Adkins, 10 years, slaying of George Lewis, his neighbor, and Morgan Castle, Pyramid, 20 years, murder of Guyless Allen.

Most interesting of the three cases was that of Adkins, who was accused of murdering Lewis as they walked up Ivy Creek toward their neighboring homes on Daniels' Creek. Lewis' body was found at the roadside, a bullet through his brain, fired from behind. Adkins denied the slaying, and the Commonwealth was burdened with the task of proving that he fired the shot.

The defendant testified that he was at home working at the time the authorities fixed for the slaying. He produced two faithful witnesses, whose testimony claimed that he arrived home about 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the murder, and that he was working at the time the shot was believed to have been fired.

More recent, a Commonwealth witness, testified to seeing that he saw the murder commit. A man named Mullett also told of hearing Adkins and Lewis talking as they walked along the road at or near where the body was found. Members of Adkins' family placed the time of his arrival home at about 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and the Commonwealth countered with testimony contending that he and Lewis were together at level at about 3 o'clock.

The bullet found in the road beneath Lewis' head was sent to a ballistic expert, but it was so battered that it could not be definitely identified as having been fired from Adkins' revolver which officers found lying on the bed in which he was asleep when they arrested him, a few hours after the slaying. This testimony did not enter into the trial. The jury deliberated about four hours before reaching a verdict. Commonwealth's Attorney O. C. Hall had told the jury that Adkins deserved either the Chair or an acquittal.

In the trial of Castle for the slaying of Allen, it was shown that the two men disputed over a boundary line fence between their farms. Castle claimed that he went home and

TIRE-RIM, HURLED BY BLOW-OUT 110 FEET, INJURES TWO, REPORT

Two men were seriously injured at Shelby Junction, Pike county, last week in one of the most unusual accidents to occur in this section, according to a report received here.

When a tire of a two-ton truck loaded with pipe owned by the United Carbon Company blew out, the rim was hurled a distance of 110 feet into the yard at the home of Squire Burke where Willie Johnson, of Long Fork, and a man named Mullins were seated in chairs. Johnson suffered a compound fracture of the right leg, and Mullins' shoulder was broken. The chair in which Johnson was sitting was demolished. The truck did not wreck.

BIDS ASKED FOR COURT ADDITION

Building Boom Seen During Summer With Courthouse, Theater and Residence Construction

Bids on the construction of an addition to the Floyd county courthouse are asked by the Floyd County Building Committee in an advertisement appearing in this week's Times. Bids must be received on or before May 11, and contract will be awarded subject to the approval of the fiscal court, on the following day.

L. J. Dean, Huntington architect, has been working on plans and specifications for the courthouse addition for some time, and these will be on file in the office of A. B. Meade, County Clerk, on and after May 4, it is announced.

This construction job, that of the theater being started by H. T. Allen and several residences either under construction or to be erected this year will provide a sizeable building boom during the next several months.

MRS. MINERVA CLIFTON VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA

Mrs. Minerva Clifton, wife of Frank Clifton, died at her home here, Thursday of last week, victim of double pneumonia from which she had suffered only a few days.

Surviving her are her husband and several children. James and C. C. Goble, of Prestonsburg, are brothers of the deceased. She leaves many relatives and friends in this vicinity.

Funeral rites were conducted Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Freewill Baptist Church, the Revs. Adrian Davis and Isaac Stratton officiating. Burial was made in the Mayo cemetery under the direction of E. P. Arnold.

Woman Walks 14 Miles Daily To Work Here In Relief Training Center

Bright, sunny days of Spring after the most rigorous winter of the century came as a relief to millions of persons throughout America, but Mrs. Margaret Gibson Prater, of this county, probably has the most unusual reason of all for welcoming balmy breezes, blue skies and dry earth underfoot.

For Mrs. Prater, a woman of 45 years, through the winter walked 14 miles a day to and from her work in the woman's training center, a relief sewing project, here. From her home above Blue River, on Middle Creek, seven miles from here, Mrs. Prater trudged through snow and mud and rain, day in and day out, an average of 224 miles a month—to reach her work and get back home for $21 a month. Prater's story is a saga of fortitude and industry. She is an old son, Adis, who is high school here, and it is to keep young Adis in school that she has undergone the hardships she has unflinchingly met in recent months. Adis has "trouble with his feet," Mrs. Prater said recently, and for that reason he was unable to walk as far to school as his mother does to work. So he boards with an uncle on Sparkle, three miles from here.

Since December 23, just when winter clamped the lid down on this section, with the exception of a few days when she was sick, Mrs. Prater has been doing her daily 14-mile stint of walking four days a week. Up at 4 o'clock of mornings, fires kindled, breakfast prepared, the long walk here, seven hours of work, again the long trek home. An exhausted woman back home at 7:30 o'clock at night—and in wintertime that is long after nightfall.

"No, I never got used to the walking," Mrs. Prater says. "It got hard."

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, the first day of May is annually proclaimed as Child Health Day and that day in all its connotations pertains to the health of all alike, young or old; and

WHEREAS, it is not only the duty of every citizen to participate in contributing to the cleanliness and therefore the healthfulness of his or her community but also a recognized necessity for every community to fight disease by eliminating accumulated dirt and filth;

NOW, THEREFORE I, ARTHUR C. CARTER, Mayor of the city of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, do proclaim the week of May 4 as Clean-Up Week; do urge our citizens to join in this worthy movement, working toward the beautification of the city as well as toward the safeguarding of the public health; and do hereby extend an invitation to all civic clubs and other organizations to join with city officials in the effort of making the week one of great value to Prestonsburg.

SCOTT'S APPEAL MOTION GRANTED LONNIE TACKETT KILLED BY TRUCK

District 4 Magistrate Case May Be Far From Settled; Roberts Appointment Voided, Claim

Motion of counsel for John Scott to permit the filing on May 1 of his appeal from the decision of Circuit Judge John W. Caudill holding that neither he nor Dewey Roberts, who is contesting Scott's election as Magistrate in District No. 4, is entitled to the office, was granted by the Court of Appeals a few days ago. At the same time motion of Roberts' attorneys to dismiss Scott's appeal was overruled.

This action voids the recent appointment by Lieutenant Governor Keen Johnson of Roberts as Magistrate, it is held. If the Court of Appeals does not rule on the case until September, Scott's tenure of office may extend until the 1937 election, though an immediate appellate court decision would make an election necessary this year.

Appointment of Roberts as Magistrate is seen as a move anticipating refusal of the Court of Appeals to review the case. Question of time in the matter of filing the appeal arose as a result of a belated entry of Judge Caudill's decision on the order book of the circuit clerk's office. The delay was caused by a question involving costs. Judge Caudill finally held that Scott was responsible for costs in the contest case in which Roberts was the plaintiff.

Mr. Roberts, former Magistrate in District 4, had not been sworn in as Magistrate following his recent appointment, and until the Court of Appeals makes its decision Magistrate Scott's title to the office will be clear, it was said this week.

2 SCHOOLS TO JOIN IN COMMENCEMENT

Special to The Times
Martin, Ky., April 23.—The Maytown and Martin high schools are attempting something new in their commencement exercises this year.

The two schools will combine their baccalaureate sermon and commencement address.

The Maytown seniors will come to Martin Sunday afternoon, May 17, to join the Martin seniors in the baccalaureate service, and the Martin seniors will go to Maytown for the commencement address, which will be delivered by United States Senator M. M. Logan on Monday evening, May 18, at 8 o'clock.

School officials here believe that this movement is the beginning of a county-wide attraction, and that in a few years there will be only one exercise for the entire county, with a prominent speaker for a mass commencement of all Floyd high schools.

WAYLAND MINE FOREMAN SUCCEDES TO PNEUMONIA AT PAINESVILLE HOSPITAL

T. P. Branham, 44 years old, mine foreman for the Elk Horn Coal Corporation at Wayland, died at the Painesville hospital at 7:10 o'clock Saturday morning after a few days' illness of pneumonia.

Body of Mr. Branham was prepared for burial by G. D. Ryan and taken to Louisa where burial was made Monday in the Shannon cemetery. Surviving him are his mother, Mrs. Rebecca George, of Louisa, his widow, four sons, Earl Jack Harold and T. P. Branham, Jr., and two daughters, Bonnie and Betty. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. Milton Pobbette, of Louisa, and three brothers, Leo Branham, Deane W. Va.; Dee Branham of Martin, and Paul Branham, of Garrett.

SIX CONVICTED OF RAIL VIOLATIONS

Two Fled Guilty to Car Robbery; Colley Gets Year For Stealing Coal

Six men have been convicted here within the last week of law violations arising from offenses committed on or against the property of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company.

Press Fleming and Richard Swains, both of Martin and each aged 18, pleaded guilty in circuit court here last week to a charge of robbing a box car in the Martin railroad yards, and each drew a two-year pen term. Silas Colley, 34, was given a one-year penitentiary sentence for stealing coal.

In county court Ollie Wallen was fined $50 Monday for stealing coal; George B. Bentley, of Dwayne, was given a four-month jail term for the same offense, and Tollie Adams was fined $25 and $16.50 costs for drunkenness on the C. and O. excursion to Washington last Saturday.

KNOTT WOMAN DIES AT MARTIN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Nannie B. Stone, 26 years old, wife of Fair Stone, of Troublesome Creek, Knott county, died Sunday at the Beaver Valley hospital, Martin, a victim of pneumonia.

Mrs. Stone leaves her husband, two children and three sisters. The body was prepared for burial by E. P. Arnold and was taken to the Lindsey Dyer cemetery, near Hindman, where funeral rites were conducted by Revs. E. H. Howard, L. D. Moseley and N. T. Maggard, of the Regular Baptist Church. Mrs. Stone was one of her community's best women and she leaves many relatives and friends who mourn her passing.

'Uncle Andy' Frazier, Who Bore Message From Lee to Pickett, In 'Last Bivouac'

A. J. "Uncle Andy" Frazier who almost three-quarters of a century ago carried General Lee's message ordering the famous charge at Gettysburg of General Pickett, is dead.

At the age of 98, "Uncle Andy" died peacefully at his home here Wednesday morning at 1:10 o'clock. Rigors of the years took their toll—he was probably Floyd county's oldest man and one of the last surviving veterans of the Confederacy in this county.

Uncle Andy died without realizing his fond and oft-expressed hope of some day going back "to old Gettysburg, drinking from that spring where we soldiers on both sides drank during the battle and showing a guide around the battlefield instead of a guide showing me." He died also without learning the identity of that other courier, who with him left General Lee's head-

PRESTONSBURG HI SCHOOL PRINCIPAL DIES AT PIKEVILLE

Prof. N. C. Boughton Claimed Sunday Night by Kidney Ailment at Age of 37

BURIED AT MAYTOWN

Prof. N. C. Boughton, principal of Prestonsburg high school, died at 11 o'clock Sunday night at the Methodist hospital, Pikeville, following a short illness resulting from kidney complications. He was 37 years old.

His death came as a distinct shock to his hundreds of friends in this section, where he was recognized as an educational leader and held in the highest esteem. Mr. Boughton's condition had been reported as showing improvement a few days before his death, and his many friends here were hopeful of his early recovery.

Newell Chase Boughton, son of James T. Boughton, Sr., and Mrs. Genevieve Boughton, was born April 9, 1899 at Madison, Georgia. He attended grammar and high school at Madison, and graduated from Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., in June 1921. He later took graduate work from Western State Teachers' College and Morehead State Teachers' College.

On June 4, 1921 he was united in marriage to Miss Elsie Louise Jones, of Fort Valley, Georgia. To this union were born two children: Newell Chase, Jr., who preceded him in death, and Elsie Elizabeth.

On August 12, 1924 Prof. and Mrs. Boughton came to Floyd county and began work as teachers at Martin. May 19, 1926, he moved to Maytown, his present residence, and for six years he taught in the Maytown consolidated school. He also taught two years at Northern and for the past two years has been teaching at Prestonsburg high school. Probably no other man gave more to the field of education in Floyd county. He was the first to organize state accredited high schools in the county. No obstacle was too hard for him to overcome in his fight for better educational advantages for the people of this county.

He was a member of the Maytown M. E. Church, South, and his kindly nature, engaging personality, his ability in the field of education and his worth as a citizen renders his loss doubly great.

There is left to mourn him not only countless friends in this county and Eastern Kentucky, but his wife and little daughter, his mother, three brothers: Dr. J. T. Boughton, Jr., pastor of Broadway Methodist Church, Camden, New Jersey; Simon P. Boughton, Jacksonville, Fla.; Usher T. Boughton, Detroit, Mich.; and six sisters: Mrs. Mary er all the time, and sometimes I felt like I couldn't go a step farther. But I did."

During the winter, Mrs. Prater quit work an hour early in the afternoon so that her arrival home would not be so late. She worked a day extra each month to make up time thus lost.

Mrs. Prater lives in a three-room house on the three-acre farm of her father, Isaac Gibson. Her only help is from her 66-year-old mother, Mrs. Hannah Gibson, who has supper prepared and the livestock fed when her daughter arrives home at night. Her husband, John Prater, is serving a life penitentiary term for murder.

For a time last winter she had a walking companion in Mrs. Cassie Adkins, who walked from up Spurlock Creek to the training center here. Mrs. Adkins moved to Martin, however, two months ago and is employed in the sewing project there.

Mrs. Prater is still working—and walking!

wealth testified, however, that Tackett was leaving the premises when Kidd fired a shotgun charge into his body.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spurlin had as their guests over the week-end Mr. Spurlin's mother, Mrs. R. T. Spurlin, and his aunt, Mrs. P. L. Kessler, of Louisville.

Music pupils will be glad to know that Mrs. K. J. Whaley, teacher in voice, piano and string music, is making special rates on class-lessons to those beginning at this time.

procured his shotgun after Allen had threatened him and attempted to hit him with a rock. After he had returned to work, he testified, Allen swung an ax at him before the shot was fired.

Death-bed statement of Allen was entered as evidence, and this statement claimed that Castle first attempted to hit him with an ax but that he wrested it from him. Then, the statement continued, Castle went home, returned with his shotgun and immediately opened fire.

Kidd, on trial Monday for the slaying of Tackett, claimed that Tackett was advancing upon him at his home at Harold after Tackett and another youth had fired shots while in the yard. The Common-

HERE'S HOW THE FORD V-8 TRUCK IS Selling itself TO AMERICAN BUSINESS

1. WE LEND YOU a Truck for an "on-the-job" test. Truck picks up your load.

2. YOUR OWN DRIVER takes the Ford V-8 Truck out over your own regular routes, hauling your own load.

3. YOU CHECK THE RESULTS Test proves V-8 performance, efficiency, economy.

Why not try it on your own job now?

MOST Ford V-8 Trucks are being bought by, rather than sold to, truck operators who try before they buy. These owners haven't been asked to listen to sales arguments—they are choosing their Ford V-8 Trucks strictly on the basis of superiority proved by "on-the-job" tests. Their experience confirms what owner records show—that the 80 horsepower Ford V-8 Truck engine offers the ideal balance of power, speed, flexibility and economy for modern hauling. That chassis, frame and bodies are designed to meet 90% of all hauling needs, and built to stay on the job! Now, in the Ford V-8 Truck for 1936, you get time-proved V-8 performance and rugged Ford dependability—plus new advancements that give even smoother operation and longer life. Examine for yourself the many vital features of this truck. Consider how much they mean to anyone who wants to cut trucking costs.

Ask your Ford Dealer to lend you a 1936 Ford V-8 Truck. Put your own driver at the wheel and put it on the toughest job you have. Then check results—and draw your own conclusions. There's no charge or obligation to you for this convincing test.

STATEMENT

It has come to our attention that statements have been made in and about Prestonsburg, that many people in and around Auxier, Ky., have stated that it was their intention to refrain from spending any money in Prestonsburg, or in any way transacting business there. We want to correct this statement and assert to the good people of Prestonsburg and Floyd county that our intention is at all times to be true and loyal to our county and our business men located in the county.

This statement voices the true spirit of all our people here and of the U. M. Workers as a whole.

THE BALLOT OF DEATH

Three ballots in an urn, three white and one black. Four men to draw them out, the three drawing white ballots to go free, the one drawing the black ballot to die. Strangely enough, the first three to draw secured the white ballots, leaving the other to draw the fatal black slip.

This was the dramatic scene enacted at La Paz, Bolivia, and came about in this way. Four men were convicted of the murder of former President Pando. Under the Bolivian law, only one person can be executed for a single murder, no matter how many may be implicated. So, to determine which of the four should pay the penalty, the drawing was held at the Palace of Justice.

Alfredo Jancusi, 28, who had already spent 10 years in prison, was the unfortunate player in the lottery of death. He laughed when his fate was known and declared his innocence, but refused to ask for mercy. Boldly or not, some admiration is due a man who can play such a grim game and lose with a smile.

Arnold Shore thought the police in Boston had forgotten all about the fine car speeding to him to have paid six years ago, but the police inspector happened to clean out his desk drawer and found the warrant.

Lueda Carruthers, 21-year-old girl of Seattle, Wash., runs a school to teach whistling.

SYNOPSIS

Lella Seton, young and beautiful and an expert on paintings, is commissioned to go over the collection of paintings in the home of the wealthy Kellers in New York, where a party is in progress. From her window she witnesses a man in another room strike a woman. Shortly after Mrs. Keller sends up word, asking her to join the party at dinner. Lella hastily dresses and goes down. She is seated between Mr. Deck, a critic, and Monty Mitchell, a noted lawyer. Introductions follow. There are Mr. Harriden, Miss Letty Van Alstyn, Mrs. Crane, Mrs. Watkins and Prince and Princess Rancini, guests. Lella finds she is taking the place of Nora Harriden. Dan Harriden leaves the table, and Mitchell explains he has gone up to see how his wife's headache is. He returns shortly. Deck, saying he must put in a call, leaves. Upon his return, he begs Lella to secretly take a message to Nora "to take no steps until I see you." Lella consents. Lella finds the Harriden rooms empty and so informs Deck. Coming out she passes Letty. Harriden asks Princess Rancini to run up and see his wife. The princess reports the absence of Nora. Search is fruitless. Harriden admits that he had a row, and believes she is spitefully hiding. Anson, a maid, reports seeing Deck near Nora's room. Letty tells of seeing Lella come from the room. Lella accuses Harriden of having struck his wife.

I could only stand and stare, gripped in a horrible uncertainty. I could not swear that the figure in the window had been his. But it was in her room, and if not he—

Very stiffly I said: "I certainly saw a man's figure in that room, and saw him strike a woman. The curtains were not drawn, and he was standing in the window."

An odd shiver ran across Harriden's face. It was like a tremor through ice, I thought; and then the hardness and the stiffness reformed. He said, through lips that seemed to be enunciating with painfulness: "I have no means of knowing who was in my wife's room before I came up."

There was a perfectly ghastly silence. I didn't dare look at Alan Deck, though I know I was asking myself if it had been he in that room, he who had slapped that woman, then plunged off to the gallery later, to bitter, reproachful brooding.

I could understand his eyes, then. I could understand his agony of eagerness to see her again, at once—his message he had tried to send by me: To take no steps.

It was all a mystery to me, but I wished I had bitten my tongue out before I had blurted out my angry words.

Keller came suddenly to my rescue. "All this is getting us nowhere; petty rows don't matter. The question is, where has Nora gone to? Since she hasn't changed her clothes, she's probably somewhere about, and I suggest we go out and help the men who are looking."

The men trooped off for coats against the chill of the October night, and we women were left together. I had a feeling that I was in disgrace, a dangerous interloper who might explode at any moment with more shattering bombs of revelation.

Suddenly Mrs. Crane said, in her practical voice: "A handit couldn't possibly have got in here, could he, Carrie—in the window and carried her off?"

"It sounds fantastic," said Mrs. Keller.

"Well, it's been done."

"I don't think that's possible. Look and see for yourself," said her sister; and they came to the window. I hastened to help undo the bolts, and opened the wide casement. We all looked out in turn, the crisp air striking sharply on our bare shoulders and arms. I liked the shiver of it; it seemed to speak of clarity and reality, after all this pother of domestic brawls and a vanished woman. One by one we three craned our heads over the edge, examining the scanty stone sill.

"It doesn't look possible," Mrs. Crane admitted. "He might have used a ladder though—those thugs manage anything."

"That's too fantastic," said Mrs. Keller again. She added dryly: "You'll find Nora is safe in New York, enjoying the powwow. . . . I shall never forgive her—treating me like this."

Down below us, we could hear the voices of some of the men returning. "They haven't found her," said Mrs. Crane, drawing in her head. "I expect I'll get a cold in my nose for this."

I took one more look out, down at that group of men; and so it was I who saw first what there was to see—down in the checker of shade in the shrubbery directly beneath the window. Something half hidden—a faint, lightish blur.

I said excitedly: "Mrs. Keller— isn't there something there?" And I drew back for her to look.

She called sharply down to the men: "Look there—in the shrubbery—under the window. There is something—"

It was invisible from where they were, for the shrubbery was thick and high, and the front part unbroken. Nearer the house the branches had bent in under the burden that they found there, the still slight body of a woman in gold pajamas: the lifeless form of Nora Harriden.

CHAPTER III

It couldn't be real, I felt. It was like some scene in a dreadful play. These couldn't be real people; this wasn't a real death. . . . It didn't seem possible that Nora Harriden could be dead; my impression of her vitality, of her exultant aliveness, was so intense that I could not bring myself to believe in her death. Not till I had looked on her face.

I saw the thin, sharp curve of the reddened lips, like little knife-blades, and thought—in spite of my pity for the dead—that it was a hard, cruel, triumphant little mouth, made for exultancy.

They were kneeling all about her, feeling her pulse, her body.

She lay in those incongruous gold pajamas, one slim slither foot bare of its shining slipper, on a sofa in the hall, until the doctor came.

No bones were broken, he reported; the bushes had eased her fall. But over her ear was a ghastly wound with the blood dried about it, and dark stains on her temple.

"Struck on something hard," he said sapiently. "Penetrated—death must have been almost immediate."

His voice, as he phrased that, slid into a consolatory cadence. He was looking up at the husband, who stood motionless beside him, his head slightly bent. I could not see his face; his hands were clenched at the sides. I felt suddenly a queer pity for those hands—I wondered if one of them had indeed struck out at that adored woman who had infuriated him so much. . . .

And then I thought again that it might have been Alan Deck. Surely the husband would rather have the onus of that blow upon himself than admit that another man was lounging in his wife's room—though perhaps these people thought little of casual intimacies.

A conference was going on. I heard Harriden's voice saying, in his grim, unshaken tones: "She probably wanted more air—tried to open the window wider, and was dizzy—she'd taken headache stuff—and fell."

"Oh, an accident, undoubtedly," said Keller in his convincing, everyday voice.

I heard the doctor assenting. I had a feeling that he would assent politely to anything these plutocratic clients dictated—with his own secret reservations.

"She was there on the bed when you came up, wasn't she, Dan?" Mrs. Keller asked.

The husband hesitated. "I couldn't be sure. The room was dark, and I assumed she was still on the bed sleeping, so didn't speak." He added, with positiveness now: "She was there when I went down. When I came in to see her after I had dressed—that was at eight, or a little after—she said her head ached, and she wanted nothing sent up. I rang for the maid and told her not to come in to do anything in the room—that Mrs. Harriden wanted complete rest. I don't remember whether Mrs. Harriden said anything further to you or not, Anson. Did she?"

"Why no, sir," said Anson. "It was just you, sir, at the door."

"But you saw her there on the bed."

"Why, yes, sir," said Anson, a little surprised. "I could see through the door. You sort of whispered to me. You said she was asleep."

"Did I?" said Harriden wearily. "I forgot—I think she'd turned over and wanted to sleep. And I don't remember whether the window was open or not. I suppose it was a little way."

"Anson," said Mrs. Keller, "was the window open when you came up?"

"Why, yes, ma'am, it was," said Anson promptly. "I remember the room felt chilly, so I closed and locked it."

Whether Nora Harriden had gone out that window before her husband looked in, or just afterward, it had all happened while we were sitting down there about that dinner-table, eating and drinking and uttering our banalities.

There was more talk, I remember; and then Nora Harriden was carried upstairs. Her husband carried her, her bare arms drooping over his big shoulders, her blood-stained head like a child's asleep on him, and took her to the bed I had seen waiting.

Then Mrs. Keller, practical in all stress, said abruptly, "Look here, Dan—I want you to take charge of her things." She went to the closet. "If her pearls are in there, I don't want the responsibility. Take them in your room," she said, and stepped quickly inside.

The next instant she gave a queer, muffled cry and came stumbling out.

"Quick—somebody—come!" she said incoherently.

And then, in a thin voice of horror: "It's blood! I stepped in it!"

Mrs. Crane caught hold of her and we all stood about, staring down at the jade green slipper she lifted, at the wet, dark stain on the sole. The princess gave a little cry, and Keller and the doctor hurried into the closet. Harriden stood rigid by his wife's bed.

Then both men came backing out, and Keller was holding up a forefinger, dark-stained and sticky.

"It's blood all right," he said.

The doctor, looking down at his own finger, nodded affirmatively. Every one stood staring at them a moment then flattered forward to that open closet door and I went with them. The light was on in it. On the floor, just under a sweep of orchid silk, lay a dark heavy pool, its edges blurred where feet had stepped into it. It must have been there, dark, unregarded, when Harriden had stepped in, to glance about for his wife's gold pajamas.

Harriden marched to the closet door, and I shrank aside, trembling in my excitement and pity. He seemed to stay there quite a time, and when he came out his face was more than ever like granite.

"Yes, it's blood," he said, as if no else's word could be accepted.

I glanced about for Alan Deck. He was not in the room; he had not followed when we had trooped like sheep after Harriden and his dead wife. Perhaps the sight of Nora in Harriden's arms. . . . I was grateful that he was spared the sight of Nora Harriden's blood on her closet floor.

"This puts a new complexion on it," said Keller. His words seemed incongruous, but his tone did full justice to the terrible gravity of the situation. He turned directly to Harriden.

"That blood in the closet—that came before she went out the window. This doesn't look an accident, Dan. Some one got in here. Some thing—"

His eyes turned to the window. "I suppose that way is possible," he said grudgingly, "though how any one could get in the grounds—I suppose he was after her jewelry. He got in, thinking the room empty, went to her closet to rummage, and she jumped off the bed after him—she had plenty of pluck."

He paused, and the assenting undertone of murmur about him confirmed Nora Harriden's pluck. "Then," said Keller, "he struck her and flung her out."

Keller's next question, so eminent-ly that of the practical man, seemed to me shocking in its immediate concern for material things.

"Better see if anything's missing," he advised briskly. "See if he got away with anything."

Harriden did not stir.

"What the devil does it matter?" he growled. He looked half savage with pain, at bay against the world.

The doctor spoke up persuasively. "But you want to have the man apprehended, Mr. Harriden. The man who has done this—"

Glancing toward the still figure on the bed he hesitated. Even in the presence of death the word murder had an incredible quality in that house.

"Every moment is of value," he urged. "Any jewel taken would be a clue. If—if you can bring yourself to it, Mr. Harriden—"

Harriden gave him a glance of cold contempt, as if for the imputation of weakness, and like a man suddenly waking moved forward: "I know where she put the box," he said, as Keller made to anticipate him, to save him the sight of that dark pool, and he went into the closet.

Harriden's bulk filled the doorway when he moved forward, gingerly, stopped and fumbled. I remember Mrs. Crane's saying in a low tone to Keller, "Harriden's better telephone the lodge—have them keep a sharp look-out?" and his telling her to do it. She was just moving away from the phone when Harriden came out of the closet, bearing a morocco-covered box. "It's locked, all right," he reported.

"Well, if it's locked there can't be anything missing—the thief wouldn't lock it up again," Mrs. Keller murmured.

"We might open it, anyway, to make sure," said Keller. "Do you know where the key is?"

"She kept it somewhere in her dressing case."

Harriden went to a small green dressing case whose opening lid showed fittings of green enamel set in gold, lovely, luxurious fittings that any woman's heart would envy, and began fumbling about in it. I don't know why I watched his strong, blunt fingers so closely. They seemed to fascinate me, I felt so dead sorry for them, in the work they had to do. Once he paused and his face had a queer, arrested look; I remember thinking that some especially intimate possession of his wife's had touched some chord of deep and bitter remembrance. He swept his fingers back and forth over the silk for a moment as if he had forgotten what he was after, then suddenly his hand lowered and he drew out a small key.

"Well, the man would never lock the case and put the key back there again," Mrs. Keller murmured with a sort of petty triumph.

"He might—just to put people off," Mrs. Watkins declared with the same sort of obstinacy.

"He might have had a pass-key," said the princess thoughtfully.

Harriden unlocked the case; he opened the lid and made such slow business of examining it, staring down into each tray of bright, glistening things that I wondered if he were thinking that those lovely baubles would never go about her throat and wrists again. He must be thinking it.

Then his voice came, with that sharp, almost grumbling irritation in it. "The pearls are here—and the emeralds. And a lot of other junk. But the diamond chain isn't here."

"The diamond chain—her yellow diamonds?" Mrs. Keller caught up quickly. "Way, she was wearing them!"

Harriden stood a moment as if remembering. His eyebrows kept twitching but that was the only sign of emotion in that rigid face.

"Yes, she was wearing the chain," he said. "She had it on."

Some one said, "Hasn't she it on now?" and Harriden turned quickly to the bed. He bent over her, then straightened and came back to us. "It's gone," he said.

"That's a clue, then," the doctor declared. "You must lose no time, Mr. Keller, in notifying the police."

"The police!" said Keller. All his repugnance toward the sensational publicity was in his tone but he moved at once to the room phone, his wife murmuring to him in agitated undertones. The doctor went on, "And nothing more here must be touched. We must set a guard here."

"Do we have to go through all this?" demanded Harriden. "Let the damn diamonds go."

"I'm afraid we must," Dr. Olliphant told him. "It's the only way to get the—the man."

"They'll never get him," growled Harriden, in grating contempt. His bleak eyes seemed to say, "And if they do, what's that to me—now?"

I knew how he must be flinching at having his wife's name dragged through the publicity of a murder case.

"I'll guard," I heard him say gruffly, and the doctor murmured that he would stay with him. I suspected he had his idea that Harriden might do something desperate to himself if left alone just then.

We were all trooping downstairs, I rather on the outskirts, when Monty Mitchell dropped back beside me. His small, bright eyes were glittering behind their glasses.

"Why would Nora run into that closet after a thief?" he put directly to me. "She had pluck, but she wasn't a fool. She'd have run to the door and screamed."

"He may have caught her and dragged her in," I said, and then, "She was excited—no one of us knows what he'll do when suddenly flung off balance."

"I know damned well what I wouldn't do," the young man retorted. "He had lost his chatty, bantering air; he looked extremely competent. He seemed quite pleasurably excited."

"Anyway he shoved her in that closet before she was dead," he went on. "She must have been there some little time for all that blood to form. Then he thought again and decided to give it the look of an accident so he put her out the window. . . . A strong fellow."

I thought of how easily Harriden had carried his wife up the stairs and murmured, "She doesn't look heavy."

"About a hundred and fifteen," said Mitchell practically. He paused at the foot of the stairs and stood beside me, frowning intently as he tried to piece out the situation. He said, thinking aloud, "Dan did not see the blood when he went in to look for those gold pajamas—but then Dan was glancing along the level of his eye. . . . This fellow might have seen it when he came back—I'd say he did, and that was the reason he locked the door and took the key away. Presumably the key was in the lock, up to then. . . . And I'd say that he got out the window. He had the diamonds and didn't dare wait for more loot."

"And I'd say," I spoke up, somewhat spiritedly, "that every one of you is thinking about how it was done and what was taken and not about how awful it is."

Mitchell gave me a quick look.

"You seem a simple-hearted young creature," he told me. "You never knew her—yet you rushed to her room to help her cover her slapped cheek."

He gave a short laugh. "You may be glad she wasn't there—she'd have skinned you. She wouldn't have dreamed you'd come in anything but malice."

"You don't make her sound very pleasant."

"I never liked her," he said bluntly. "Come and have a drink. We need it."

The others had set the example and as we entered the white dining-room for the second time that evening I saw it was already filled and that a group was about Deck, who was standing straight and tall beside the buffet. I saw him put an empty glass down very slowly and carefully, and it came over me that it was only then that he had heard of the grim discovery in the closet. It was tragic enough, I thought, to know the woman you loved was dead, but to have to learn that she had been done to death, brutally, violently, to have to hear it and give no sign. . . .

The police had come, four or five local authorities, with a head official named Donahy whose eyes were as cynical as Harriden's own, and the house became a bustle of confusion. Fingerprint men and cameramen trooped upstairs to work, policemen tramped through all the rooms, searchlights flashed outside the windows in the shrubbery. Again I had that sense of grotesque unreality, as if this were a scene from some morbid play.

"Pauper" Lies Ill in Gutter With $6,794 on His Person

A hoard of $6,794 in bills, many of them gold notes, was found recently sewed in the ragged clothing of a semiconscious man picked up in the gutter of a South Philadelphia street.

Police said the notes were not part of the Lindbergh ransom money. Bank books showing $2,000 on deposit in two banks in Elizabeth, N. J., under the name of "Harry Bunn," were found in the man's pockets. He whispered the name "Harry Bonner" to police who found him.

Physicians said he was critically ill.

INVENTS NEW STOVE THAT MAKES OWN GAS

W. C. Coleman, Noted Inventor Makes It Possible for Every Home Everywhere to Enjoy Modern Gas Cooking Service at Low Cost

Housewives everywhere are enthusiastic in their praise of a new stove that makes its own gas and brings modern gas cooking service at low cost to homes anywhere. W. C. Coleman, noted inventor and pioneer manufacturer of gas-pressure appliances, regards this stove as his crowning achievement.

The new Coleman Range makes its own gas from ordinary lead-free gasoline. Lights instantly, like gas. The flame from its fuel-saving Band-A-Blu Burners is hotter than natural gas and is easily adjusted for fast cooking or slow simmering. Its low fuel consumption makes it cheaper to use than coal, wood or kerosene.

The Coleman Range has a spacious insulated oven and drawer-type broiler. An independently controlled burner provides any heat desired for baking or broiling.

Climaxing his achievement, Mr. Coleman endowed the Coleman Safety Range with gracious beauty, style and color.

Persons wishing full information about these marvelous new Coleman Ranges, will receive beautifully illustrated literature and a valuable stove check chart by addressing a postcard to Mr. W. C. Coleman, Dept. WU-238, Wichita, Kansas—Adv.

GAS, GAS ALL THE TIME, CAN'T EAT OR SLEEP

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel better."—Mrs. Jas. Miller.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

REVEREND HARRIS CALLED BY DEATH

Body of Minister, Native Prestonsburg Man, Returned Here For Burial Sunday

Funeral of the Rev. Walter C. Harris, 61 years old, native Prestonsburg man who died Thursday, last week, in Montgomery, W. Va., was held Sunday afternoon from 1 till 3 o'clock at the M. E. Church, South, here.

A son of the late Harmon and Angie Ward Harris, he was a member of one of the county's largest and best-known families. Through more than 20 of the last years of his life he was spent elsewhere, he was remembered with profound respect here for the high ideals of his young manhood and for the labor of service to which he dedicated his life in later years.

He was united in marriage to Miss Margery Cassidy on February 13, 1903. To this union were born the following children, all of whom survive: William Glenn, Caretta, W. Va.; Forrest Clyde, Long Branch, W. Va.; Maude Rose Keller, Long Branch, W. Va.; and Walter Lou-ell, Ft. Thomas, Ky. He is survived also by two sisters, Mrs. Ida Butler, Elkville, and Mrs. Elizabeth Gam-kill, of Ount, and one brother, Malcolm Harris, of Prestonsburg.

In 1900 Mr. Harris was licensed to practice law in the state of Kentucky and for a number of years followed this profession.

After his conversion he joined the Methodist Church and was licensed to preach May 23, 1912. In 1916 he joined the Western Virginia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and thus became an itinerant Methodist preacher. His first appointment was to the Grayland circuit. Later he served the Lookout charge and was sent to Ansted, W. Va., in 1918. In 1923 he was transferred to the Bolston Conference, serving the following charges: Jonesville, Va.; Limestone, Tenn.; Mt. City, Tenn.; Clintwood, Va.; Wilder, Va., and Loran, Va. In 1931 he became disabled through the loss of his voice, to a superannuated relation and later located at Long Branch, W. Va., remaining there until his recent illness which resulted in his death.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. Harry F. King, assisted by Rev. James Beark, Rev. Robert A. Pitter and Dr. Josef Nordenhaug. Interment was made in the Weddington cemetery under the direction of E. P. Arnold.

CLEAN-UP DRIVE HERE NEXT WEEK

Importance of Observing Period Stressed by Health Department; Dumping Regulations Cited

Co-operating with the Floyd county health department in its annual clean-up, paint-up drive here, Mayor A. C. Carter has designated the week beginning May 4 as Clean-Up week in Prestonsburg.

Trucks will be provided for the removal of rubbish to the city dump. Dr. Marvin Ransdell, director of the health department, said Monday.

The real importance of observing the week by industrious cleaning up of premises and the general beautification of the town was stressed by the health department.

Practise of many homeowners of hiring small boys to remove rubbish from their premises results, Dr. Ransdell said, in the dumping of refuse in spots forbidden by the city council upon the recommendation of the health department. Every property-owner, he said, should hire a truck regularly engaged in hauling garbage to convey refuse to the city dump. The cost of this service, it was pointed out, is around 40 cents a month.
