MEMORIAL SERVICES AND HOMECOMING TO BE SUNDAY, JUNE 27

The All-Day Program Features Events of An Informal, Historical Nature

LARGE CROWD EXPECTED

Next Sunday, June 27, will be a gala day for the Methodist Church of Prestonsburg when the members and friends of the church join in the celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of their present building. A general homecoming is also planned for this occasion and it is expected that a large number of visitors will attend the services.

At the 11 o'clock hour the services will be of an historical nature, presenting the story of the building of the first church to be erected in Prestonsburg which was in 1833, and also the story of the building of the present edifice which was started in 1915 but not completed until the afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The afternoon at 2 o'clock will be an unusual service to be known as "That Reminds Me Service." At this time members of the congregation will share with each other the happenings of the long ago.

At the evening hour the church will be lighted with oil lamps and lanterns, an old fashioned organ will be the musical instrument, the choir will sing on page five

Figures Reveal Little Known Facts About Floyd County

There are more incorporated towns in Floyd county than in any other county in Kentucky, and Prestonsburg, the county seat, has an estimated population of 5,500, is not the largest town in the county. This distinction goes to Wayland-Garrett, incorporated as one. This and similar facts about Floyd county are learned from the Paintsville Herald-News. Floyd county's incorporated towns are: Prestonsburg, Allen, Martin, Lackey, Wayland, Wheelwright, Weeksbury, McDowell, and Wayland-Garrett. Floyd county can also lay claim to the distinction of ranking near the top of Kentucky's 120 counties in its number of consolidated schools. Floyd county has 13. Other facts revealed show that there are about 16,000 students and 345 teachers.

THE CRY, 'SHINE MISTER?' NO LONGER TO BE HEARD ON THE CITY'S STREETS

The cry, "Shine, Mister?" will no longer be heard on Prestonsburg's city streets due to an ordinance enacted by the city council at its regular meeting Saturday night.

The ordinance is to the effect that henceforth all shine boys must not seek business on the city streets or in public buildings, such as the courthouse. All shine boys seen violating this ordinance will be prosecuted. The ordinance grew out of the practice of "shine" boys roughly and illmannerly accosting hurried business men for trade.

It is expected that when the ill-mannered type of shine boy is prevented from using the streets as a place of business, the few boys of a "higher type" will be permitted to continue their business in booths located in approved positions.

The city council passed a second ordinance prohibiting vagrants, obscene loafers and the kindred type of characters from Prestonsburg's streets. Police were instructed to arrest such persons if they are seen.

TELEPHONE BROADCAST TO CARRY PROGRAM TO PERSONS WHO ARE SICK

Memories of pioneering days of radio will be recalled Sunday when Methodist Pastor H. F. King, with the assistance of the local telephone operators, arranges a "telephone broadcast" of the M. E. Church anniversary services so that sick persons may "tune in" from their sickbeds to hear all parts of the program.

Reverend King explains that the church telephone will be placed so that it will pick up all speeches, music and other activities throughout the services. Local telephone operators say that as many as 15 persons can listen in over their own private telephones.

Reverend King said that this method had already been carried out on a smaller scale, explaining that last Sunday the church's telephone was placed so that all of the services were carried by telephone to the bedside of Mrs. H. D. Fitzpatrick, whose illness has confined her to her room for some time. Pastor King reports that Mrs. Fitzpatrick heard the sermon, or Mayor Carter also announced that at a meeting of the Prestonsburg city board of education, it was decided that new blueprints were necessary for the construction of the new $85,000 graded school building here. Letting of contracts for these blueprints was discussed at the meeting.

Terry More Certain Than Ever Cubs Are Giants Big Threat

HERE'S what they say:
Bill Terry—"The more we look at the rest of the league the more we figure those Cubs are the ones we have to beat. Of course you can't tell how well their pitching will stand up, but with Hartnett back there catching it looks a lot better. They stayed up close to the top when they were having plenty of hard luck and now their power boys are back in action they're bound to be tougher."

"What? Yes, that's right. They've been something like us with Leiber out and Otty not doing so good. Don't know when Hank'll be back, either. You know they only gave him light food when he was in the hospital and now he's got to build himself up again before he can take chances on hard playing in the hot sun."

"Tough break that, because he certainly looked swell in spring training, but let me tell you something. That other guy out there in his place (Ripple) isn't going to hurt any ball club. He's hitting close to .300, won a couple of games on the road that nobody seems to have given him credit for, and he can field as good, or better, than anybody you can name in the league."

"Jersey City? It's a great baseball town with one of the finest parks I've ever seen, and our tieup is bound to be helpful both to the Giants and to the folks over there. We bought in too late to do any real good this year though, even if we have got plenty of money to spend and so we can't promise anything this season. But we're improving. I was talking to Travis Jackson recently and he says Bluege is just the shortstop we've needed over there. Also there's a couple of other deals we may swing before long."

Carl Hubbell—"Do I measure my pants every day so as to get them just exactly one inch above the second white stripe on my stocking? Nope. That's just because they don't make baseball pants any longer. I like 'em long and I stretch 'em as far as they'll reach."

Charley Grimm—"Yeah, we figure we've got to beat the Giants but you've got to take them all seriously in this league this year. Maybe Bowman won't continue pitching so good in Pittsburgh but they've got a better club out there than last year."

"Then go down in the second division and look at Philadelphia as an example. Jimmy Wilson's come up with three good pitchers and that kid Scharein knows how to handle the ball at shortstop even though he is a little green and mainly used to second base. Yeah, we've got some good youngsters ourselves. We figure Marty's going okay out there in the outfield now and that Shoun is a pitcher almost anybody would like to have."

"Parmalee? We let him pitch his own games because we know he's got as much as anybody in the league when he's right. If he gets into trouble the infield doesn't come charging in telling him how to pitch and neither do the boys start yelling from the bench. We just let Gabby Hartnett handle him and they've been doing a mighty good job together even if he has lost a couple of tough ones."

"What's that? You're blamed well right we're pleased with Frey and he may win a regular job with us if those others don't continue to hustle. He's helped us a lot. Right now we're practicing him in the outfield more than any place else and that may turn out to be his spot because there's a chance his arm may not be quite good enough for shortstop."

"Anywhere we play him is okay with him though, because he's a swell kid to handle and loves to play. Fast, too. When we got him I knew he could shake a foot but I had no idea how fast he really was."

Roy Parmelee—"It feels swell to with this club. Especially after a year. Boy, that St. Louis heat is terrible and it was only part of New York? Hey, don't go telling me on anything like that. Fans were swell to me there."

Benny Frey—"How does it feel to be sold down the river and then up eating in the dining room the quality folks? That's base—Brooklyn was okay, but they're to me here and—"

Roy Hughes, Cleveland infielder, never had made a home run in the major leagues until recently, when a line drive which just cleared the fingers of Billy Rogell, Tiger shortstop, rolled to the left center field wall in the Cleveland stadium.

Lizzie was uncertain in her manner, not knowing whether to be haughty or friendly. She melted under Hugh's friendly agreeableness, and was soon loquacious about her ill-health and the trials she had had to bear with her children. Presently Hugh began talking. She cried out when he related what Ellen had attempted, but when he suggested that the girl go abroad with his mother very soon, a half-scornful smile appeared on her lips. "I'm wondering—wondering!"

"Just what?"
"Do you suppose it was a trick she played to get her own way? She may have seen you—knew you'd follow her, tell us about it!"

"Did Ellen ever play tricks to get her own way?" Hugh asked gravely.

"No-o."
"She couldn't have seen me. I was too far away. I tell you the girl was desperate—half out of her head!"

"Then the place for her is a sanatorium—not Europe!" said Lizzie quickly.

"Do you want that stigma on her?"

Hugh pressed his point eagerly. "And my mother needs this trip. It will do them both so much good. She can leave easily now that Kezia is married—while you, Lizzie—"

"I can take her myself this summer! Gavin will send us if I insist."
An inspiration came to Hugh. "Lizzie, you know you couldn't—you'll never get away. Gavin won't let you out of his sight. He'd mope and grieve, get sick if you were gone longer than a week! . . . If Ellen is to get well, she must have a change of scene for several months."

A flush tinged Lizzie's faded fairness, a gratified light shone in her eyes. She sighed. "Poor Gavin—I'm afraid so! Quiet—never says much, but absolutely devoted. You'd be surprised if you knew how dependent he is on my advice!"

"We all know that."
"And how much his success is due to me!"

Hugh nodded encouragingly. The belief which he helped her build as to Gavin's need of her, was useful to him, and harmless to her. It gave her stubborn mind something to cling to, and might allow Ellen to depart in peace.

That night in the library he tossed some travel pamphlets to Ellen and his mother. "I got these today from an agency. Look them over and tell me which trip you two would like to take."

They looked at him questioningly as they unfolded them.

"There's a good boat sailing in three weeks."
"England—France—Spain—Italy—Germany," murmured Fluvanna. "Shall we take them all, or are we limited to two or three?"

"Greedy! . . . Paris or Florence, since Ellen wants to study."

Ellen's blue eyes flew open, startled. Her lips parted but she did not speak.

"Hugh!" said his mother, warningly.

"Not joking! I've had a busy day planning this. I couldn't speak of it until some details were settled—but they are now. Ellen's father and mother have given their consent. All you two have to decide is where you want to go and the earliest date you can be ready to sail."

Fluvanna looked agitated. "No—no," she began. She stopped at the radiant expression on Ellen's face.

The girl, sitting on a hassock near Hugh, clasped her hands. "Hugh, you're not fooling? . . . they said I could go away—with Fluvanna? Are you sure there's no mistake?"

"Oh, I can't believe it!"
"There's no mistake," answered Hugh, smiling. "And you, Mother? . . . you said you always wanted to go—?"

"Cousin Fluvanna, think of it! Paris—Florence—the Louvre—the Uffizi Gallery!" Ellen buried her head in the arm of Hugh's chair; he patted her shoulders comfortingly.

Fluvanna's face was a study of struggling emotions. "Leave you?" she whispered.

Hugh nodded slowly, then indicated Ellen, as though her need were greater. His mother was quiet, gazed at the fire.

Ellen raised her head, touched her shining eyes with her handkerchief. "Excuse me . . . I go all weepy with grief or happiness lately . . . but it was happiness this time! . . . Oh, Fluvanna, what wonderful precious times we will have together!

"Pull your chairs up close to mine," said Fluvanna in an oddly hollow voice. "We'll go over the folders together."

The sailing date was set for the seventeenth of April and the days flew by in a hurry of preparation until there was only a week left for Fluvanna to say good-by to dear familiar furnishings, to Margery and her children, to Kezia, to Hugh.

They reached New York the morning of the day they were to sail. It was mild and sunny. They leaned at the rail of the ferry, watching the spires of the city come closer.

"The skyline has soaring aspiration in it," mused Ellen. "Sometimes the tips of buildings are in the clouds—but they always reach up—up! I like this approach to the city so much."

Hugh smiled down at her. Again he had the feeling of a rose opening; the delicate face, the petal texture of her cheeks, had the softness of a flower. She looked like a different person these last few weeks since she knew she was to leave Corinth. Whether Ellen would paint great pictures or not, he did not know, but he knew that as her charm moved him, it would move others. The unconscious seeking for love was in her melodious voice, in the graceful movements of her slight figure. What she sought she would find—perhaps on this trip. He hoped so.

"I recognize the Empire State building," said Fluvanna.

"We'll go to the top of it today," Hugh promised.

Their taxicab went slowly across town, held up by the traffic and the whirling lights. The crowds of people on Forty-second street, moving in restless rhythm, lashed back and forth like the sea. A man, selling roses at the corner of Fifth avenue, extended his bunches ingratiatingly to passers-by. The sun sparkled on the silvery top of the Chrysler building.

"When we come back we will stay here a week," said Ellen. "All of America is here, the west, the north and the south, all fused in a kind of eagerness for achievement. I felt that when I went to school here. Hugh, when we come back, will you come on to meet us?"

Hugh smiled at his mother. "Haven't you heard? I'm coming over to get you when you are ready to come home."

"No!" Ellen leaned forward to look in his face with a sparkle in her glance. "Are you bribing us to cut short our stay?"

Fluvanna rested in the hotel while Hugh and Ellen shopped, then went to a matinee. After late dinner they went down to the boat which was to sail at eleven. Although they were early, knots of people promenaded the decks, gay, laughing groups. Boys scurried down corridors with luggage; the whole ship buzzed with activity. Hugh had secured an outside stateroom with twin beds. Flowers were already there from Kezia and Jerry, fruit from Margery ar! Will, books, candy, letters, and bon voyage telegrams from friends.

"You're so quiet, Mother," said Hugh, sitting on the arm of her chair. "Tired?"

"No, dear," she replied. She reached for his hand. Hugh, her boy. The moments, the dear moments were flying, and all the while her heart knocked the passionate certitude: "I shall never see him again." Twice lately she had had attacks which she felt might be her last. Two or three months. . . . Only a little while at most, she reasoned. And he wanted this—wanted to help Ellen. He had been better lately in his enthusiasm for helping Ellen. It would "work out for the best. Perhaps a dear wish would be fulfilled . . . that old wish . . . Good-by, dear loveliness, dearest and most tender of sons! What are a few weeks of life to give—to help you? The wheel is turning—turning . . . this body will never come back. No harder to say good-by now . . . at least not much harder."

"Ellen and I are going for a stroll around the deck, Mother. We'll be back in a few minutes." Ellen tied a ribbon about her hair, put on her beaver jacket. Fluvanna watched Hugh hold open the door for her, pass through after Ellen. His tall, easy bulk filled the narrow aperture; the light from the corridor shone on his face. A wave of pride surged up in her, exquisite exultation. "That's my son—my son!" her pale lips murmured.

Ellen and Hugh explored the lounge, the library, and the dining salon, then went for a turn about the deck. They paused and stood at the bow of the boat. The April air was sweet and murmurous. A mystery overhung the deep water of the river.

"The lights on the Jersey shore remind me of necklaces strung in a jeweler's window," said Ellen softly.

"You have pretty thoughts, Ellen."

She tucked back a strand of hair which had escaped from the ribbon. Her white forehead gleamed above the straight, fair brow.

"And you're very pretty, too." She smiled dreamily.

"Quite lovely in fact."
"I can't think of anyone I'd rather have feel that way about me," she said simply.

The Consumer's Privilege

THE term "patent medicine" is a misnomer. Originally it signified a patent of royal favor granted long before there was a United States patent office. In our time, when few medical products are patented, national advertising identifies the integrity of the manufacturer of scientifically prepared proprietary drug products. Advertising enables the public to choose from the world's output, to accept or reject on a basis of merit. This is a greater privilege than royal favor. And it is a privilege that comes to you through the service of your local druggist.

Sunday School Lesson

MESSAGE FROM GENESIS

International Sunday School Lesson for June 27, 1937

Golden Text: "They all died in faith, not having received the promises but having seen them and greeted them from afar, and having confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."—Hebrews 11:13.

For the past three months our lessons have been taken from the first book of the Bible, Genesis. The theme for the quarter's lesson has been "God the Creator" and through the twelve studies we have been able to see clearly to see the hand of God, creating, advising, punishing, molding and guiding the patriarchs of old, just as he does today.

In John 1:1-5, it is pointed out that before the world was created, God was and with him "in the beginning" was his beloved son, Christ. It is a pleasant thought and a comforting one, too, to realize that Christ was present with his Father when God made the world and, therefore, knew all about it and was intensely interested in the occurrence. The time of the creation should give no trouble to students of the Bible who believe that behind the creation of this world was a Supreme Being, God, who in an orderly manner, brought the world into being. Nothing in the story of creation is contrary to the revelations of scientists, these only serving to further substantiate the original story.

After the creation of the world, with its animal and vegetable kingdoms, God created man and gave him a helpmate. He also gave them rules to live by, providing them with a will of their own, and permitting them the privilege of choosing what they should do. When they disobeyed a command of God's they were required to suffer the consequences, forfeiting their right to their luxurious surroundings and forced to provide for their own needs by the sweat of their brows. They could not escape the consequences of their sin and neither can we do so today. Plato says wisely, "Sin and penalty go through the world with their heads tied together."

To bring the story of the wickedness of the people at the time of Noah and Lot a little closer home, we read in Luke 17:26-32 the words of Jesus to his disciples, concerning his second coming into the world, when he told them that as it was in the days of Noah, so it shall be also in the days of the Son of Man. The people spent all their time in eating and drinking, in marrying and giving in marriage. Also in the days of Lot did the people do likewise. None of these occupations, in themselves, are to be considered sinful. In fact, they did these things to the exclusion of God—they were wholly occupied with material things, giving no time or thought to the things of God or the spiritual needs of men. Many point to a like condition in this country and the world today as an evidence of the imminent return of the Son of Man to the world. Surely no one man can deny that with many the desire for material possessions and the pleasures of this world seems to overshadow everything and they have no time nor inclination to make provision for the here after.

Running as a bright-hued thread a1 through the lessons of the past quarter is the outstanding characteristic of the characters studied—their devout and unwavering faith in God. In Galatians 3:6-8, Paul calls attention to the justifying faith of Abraham, who is often called the "father of the faithful." The whole life of Abraham is an illustration of the working power of faith and the blessing which his faith in God brought to this grand old patriarch. God will bless us in like proportion.

In Hebrews 11:1, we are given Paul's idea of just what faith is. He says, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." The word "substance" is sometimes translated "assurance," making real in our lives those things we are confident we are yet to have in the future, because God has promised them to us. "Faith is nothing else but receiving the word of God. We know what it is to receive the word of man, to believe statements, though strange and surpassing our experience, because we regard the character of him who makes them with respect and confidence. Faith in God's word is receiving God's testimony, but as God is greater than man, so God's word is heaven-high above every human word."—Abiphir. On through the seventh chapter of Hebrews, Paul calls the roll of the heroes of faith, which has caused this chapter to be often called the Westminster Abbey of the heroes of faith.

In the last reference given for our contemplation, 2 Peter 2:4-10, the apostle Peter warns us that the punishment and destruction which followed the sins of the people in the days of the beginnings will always follow like sins. But the reassuring note given by Peter is that the same God who was able to save Noah and his family and Lot and his daughters from destruction, is able "to deliver the godly out of temptations and too reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished."

ABOUT JUVENILE DELINQUENTS

Happening to meet, by chance, the other day a police officer from a large city, we were interested in his remarks about juvenile violators of the laws of the land.

This officer admitted that his state had no adequate program for juvenile delinquents but declared that he had not hesitated to set up his own scheme of "unofficial parole" for boys and girls running against the law for the first time that he made it perfectly clear to them that they were not getting out of their misdeeds entirely and that it would count against them heavily if they failed to mend their ways.

He was of the opinion that only few of our young people are to be blamed entirely for their mistakes, that most of them are misled by older persons and that well-planned programs for boys and girls should center upon athletics and properly supervised amusements.

Every town and city, regardless of its size, has among its problems the age-old puzzle of straying youth. It can be faced with intelligence only if there is an intelligent study of each local situation. No community needs outside experts or vast financial outlays to make progress locally. About the only things needed are an interest in youth, a belief that the race can be improved through its young people and a willingness to give some time and thought to the peculiar problems that exist.

THREE TOWNS DRAFT PLANS FOR GIANT GOOD ROADS MEET

Definite plans for a giant good roads meeting in Ashland within a few days to urge early paving of the missing link in the Mayo Trail between Louisa and Paintsville were drafted at a meeting of delegations from Ashland, Paintsville and Louisa, held in connection with the weekly meeting of the Louisa Rotary Club.

A committee of three, one each from Ashland, Louisa and Paintsville, was appointed to draft resolutions to be presented to Governor Chandler and members of the state highway department when the meeting is held in Ashland, probably next week. Col. Ben F. Forgey, editor of the Ashland Independent, who presided at the meeting Monday, appointed R. L. Vinson of Louisa, Dr. C. H. Parsons of Ashland, and John B. Wells, Jr. of Paintsville, to compose the committee. They will meet in Ashland Saturday to draft the resolution. — Big Sandy News.

COMMITTEE CHOSEN

Continued from page one selected after Mayor Carter received a letter from Sol Bloom, director general of the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission. The letter follows:

Dear Sir: As summer impends and the 17th of September will occur so soon after vacation time ends, I am venturing to call your attention to the necessity that arrangements for the opening of the Constitutional Sesquicentennial celebration may be advanced now that the summer absences will not hinder your preparations for the great event.

There is always a danger of confusion and regretful occurrences in the last-minute rush, which can be minimized if not entirely avoided by the foresightedness of early contacts and basic preparations by those whom the success of the celebration must depend. If this is done, a proper beginning of the Sesquicentennial commemoration on September 17 will be achieved.

With this in mind definite arrangements for the type of program to be held on September 17, definite appointments of all those who will cooperate, and definite programs are really necessary almost immediately. In case that your own organization has not taken definite action it occurs to me that this thought may prove valuable.

Permit me to assure you of my willingness and that of my staff to aid by all possible means in the successful inauguration of the observances all over our country on September 17, and in their continuance throughout the period of the celebration. I feel deeply that a great essential of this much-desired result is that of taking time by the forelock in our preparations, and feeling so. I trust you will receive this plea in the spirit in which it is sent, and take it to heart.

FOR COUNTY JUDGE

We are authorized to announce HENRY BORTER of Allen, Ky., as a candidate for County Judge, subject to the action of the Democratic party at the August 7, 1937 primary.

TO THE VOTERS OF FLOYD COUNTY

In making my announcement for the Democratic nomination for Jailer of Floyd County, subject to the action of the Democratic party, I think I should state why I am entitled to this nomination. I have been a life-long Democrat, have made the struggles for every Democratic nominee since a mere boy! When younger and had the money, I always contributed to the campaign in the interest of my party. I served my party as County Chairman for four years, and during this term, I was active and at all times working and giving my time and money to the cause of my party. I am now 53 years of age and will never ask the voters of my county for another office. I feel and I am sure that a large majority of the voters feel and know that I am entitled to the office I now seek. If and when I am elected Jailer of Floyd county, I promise the people that I will at all times attend to the duties of my office. I will give to those placed in my custody the best treatment that it is possible for them to have. I assure you that your vote and interest in my candidacy will be appreciated, and that I can and will repay you by making you a kind, courteous and efficient officer.

Very truly yours,

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore BY Gordon Wilson Ph.D. WESTERN KENTUCKY TEACHERS COLLEGE BOWLING GREEN, KY.

THE SCOUT

Very soon after the first colonies were planted along the Atlantic coast, daring men penetrated farther into the wilderness and became our first frontiersmen or scouts. We sometimes think that the frontier was a thing of the West, forgetting that upstate New York and the hill areas of New England were genuine frontiers, long before Kentucky and Tennessee were known by name. The earliest frontiersmen were likely to be scouts, daring explorers or hunters or trappers off the edge of civilization. James Fenimore Cooper drew this type from real life as it appeared in New York early in the last century. So nearly like the later Western scout was the Leatherstocking that it was easy to transfer this Easterner to the West to die in old age. Thus Cooper's scout lived long enough to typify the frontier from central New York to what is now Missouri and Iowa.

For years the attire of the scout was a thing that attracted attention, just as the later cowboy influenced the dress of many a person who had never seen a ranch. The scout's leather breeches, with fringe, his coonskin cap, long rifle, flowing locks—all appeared in real life on and off the frontier. Visitors to Kentucky within a few years after the early settlements always mentioned the long hair of the frontiersmen.

Very early the scout became a restless wanderer, appearing successively on the new frontiers. Many a man who was born in upstate New York migrated to the Ohio valley and then on to the Far West, stopping for a few years at practically every border line between the wild-and the settlements. Daniel Boone was such a scout, dying in the country across the Mississippi River.

The conventional scout and the actual often blended. When the scout realized how much advertising value he had, he was not slow to take advantage of it. It is nearly impossible in the autobiography of William F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," to pick out the personal experiences of the author from what was expected of him by the admiring public. Buffalo Bill was in many ways the last of the long line of scouts, having down into our own time and reintroducing the scout to the places where he had vanished as a lost institution. Kit Carson was almost equally romantic but did not live to cash in on his picturesqueness. So typical were they of their class that one hardly knows whether to regard them as real men or as abstractions wrought out by more than 200 years of the American imagination.

As the frontier vanished, even in the days of Cody and Carson, the type gradually blended with other types on or near the borders of civilization. In the plains country the scout easily became a cowboy; in thinly settled areas he often fell into the class of professional pioneers or Pikes; his experience as a scout often helped him to be valuable in urban centers as a sort of business man. Today the real type is gone, never to return; his descendants may make good forest rangers or government surveyors or hunters in foreign lands for rare animals or plants. But the scout of the Buffalo Bill type would seem as un-real today as a beaver dam across the stream in your past-

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feet weak, nervous, all played out.

In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

HONESTLY NOW

WHAT'S YOUR HURRY?

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Summer Influenza.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—In this favored land we are now starting to celebrate the customary seasonal rite of having our summer influenza.

Summer influenza is distinguished from winter influenza by the fact that the former does not set in until September, thereby providing intervals for spring and fall to slip in between.

Irvin S. Cobb

The symptoms remain practically the same. The eyes water copiously, but the nose runs second. The head stops up thoroughly, thus providing proof of the fallacy of the old adage—all sinus fail in dry weather. The patient barks like a trained seal, but the difference here is that the seal stops barking if you toss him a hunk of raw fish.

One could go on at length, but it's difficult to continue a writing job when you're using a nasal inhalant to punctuate with and have a taste in your mouth like moth balls smothered in creosote dressing.

The Art of Cussing.

MY OLD chum Burgess Johnson, once an editor but now a college professor, tells a credulous bunch of advertising men that Mark Twain was the champion all-time all-American cusser—could cuss five solid minutes without repeating himself.

Pardon me, Burgess, but Mark Twain never did any such thing. Once I heard him at his out-cussing best—denouncing a publisher who had offended him. He swore for five minutes all right, but over and over again he used the same few familiar oaths which the English-speaking race always have used. He didn't introduce a new or an original one.

I studied the art of cussing, both by note and by ear, under such gifted masters of profanity as southern steamboat mates, New York newspaper men, London cab drivers, western mule whackers and north woods timber choppers.

With my hand on my heart I solemnly affirm that not one of these alleged experts ever employed any save the dependable age-seasoned standbys, to wit, seven adjectives, two strong nouns, one ultrastrong noun and one compound phrase—the commonest of all.

Romance for King Zog.

FOR about the fifth time comes a plaintive plea from Albania, one of those remote little border countries of eastern Europe where every now and then peace threatens to break out. They have a king over there. At least they had a king at the time of going to press with this dispatch. His name is King Zog. This is neither a typographical error nor a vaudeville gag. The name positively is Zog, and radio comedians may make the most of it.

For many months he has been paging the world for a wife. The qualifications call for the lady to have $5,000,000. His majesty would also like for her to turn Mohammedan, but the main requirement is that $5,000,000 bank roll.

California's Coastline.

WHILE it's quite a roomy coastline, California has at present only one coastline. This is a source of mortification to patriotic native sons, Florida having two such, one on either side, besides a dampish area in the middle known as the Everglades.

Still, in a way, California's silvery strand continues to excel. Within easy speeding distance we have at least one beach resort where, when Palm Springs folds up on account of the heat, many of our artistic colony go to relax. So wholeheartedly do some go in for this that often you may stand off a quarter of a mile and hear them relaxing.

Occasionally a relaxationist relaxes so completely that it takes weeks for him to get over it. His friends leave him at the seaside only to gather at the bedside.

The Changing World.

IT WAS Susan B. Anthony who dedicated her life to the cause of emancipation for her sex. But it was her grandniece who lately attained the headlines by suggesting that, with the addition of a buckle here and a ribbon there, a nightgown would make a suitable evening gown for almost any occasion.

Thus do we see how from one generation on to another is handed down the flame of genius and service to womankind.

But, although the inspired suggestion is already weeks old, there still are no signs that it is finding advocates among the queen bees of the cultural hive. Maybe the reason is that a belle of the Hollywood artistic group would feel so ostentatiously overdressed if she wore a full-fashioned nightgown to a social function.

 PROVIDE THE EXTRA MARGIN OF SAFETY ON THE SPEEDWAY OR THE HIGHWAY

THOUSANDS said that tires could not stand the terrific grind. They said cars had been built with much greater speed, turns in the track had been repaved with granite-like surface, yet Wilbur Shaw drove to victory on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires setting a new record of 113.58 miles per hour on one of the hottest days in the history of the Indianapolis track.

Think of the terrific impact on these tires as the cars roared into the treacherous turns and out again. Tons of force straining, pulling, and twisting inside the tire, yet not one cord loosened, not one tread separated from the cord body—all because Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process, successfully counteracted the internal friction and heat that ordinarily destroy tire life.

You will never drive your car at these record-breaking speeds, but for the safety of yourself and family you need the safest, strongest and most dependable tires. See your nearby Firestone Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires—the safest tires that money can buy.

DON'T RISK YOUR LIFE ON THIN WORN TIRES
 No car owner is going to risk his life and the lives of his family knowingly on thin worn tires.

DO YOU KNOW
 THAT last year highway accidents cost the lives of more than 38,000 men, women and children?
 THAT a million more were injured?
 THAT more than 46,000 of these deaths and injuries were caused directly by punctures, blowouts and skidding due to unsafe tires?

John Nesbitt, commentator of the NBC "Passing Parade," advises aspiring young artists to first get a job in a radio station even if they have to sweep out the place and work for nothing. Regardless of what their ultimate aims may be, he feels that they should first acquire as much general knowledge about radio as possible.

The Saturday Night Party broadcasts over NEC boast an ingenious singer. Donald Dickson, the baritone, has had a lot of trouble with collar buttons popping off while singing. Now he unbuttons his collar and loosens his tie during rehearsals.

Joe Cook is one of the few radio comedies to recognize that the microphone requires a different comedy style than most comedians have been using on the stage. Joe strives for the conversational level while conducting his Saturday night jamboree.

Jock Roseleigh, radio "father" in "Pepper Young's Family," believes in keeping versatile. In addition to his radio success, he returns to the theatre at regular intervals, his latest venture being the stage play, "Arsenal."

Joe E. Brown is getting to be Radio Theatre's baseball specialist. This Spring again he opened the season with a baseball play, "Alibi Ike." Once before he helped roll up the baseball radio performance and last year went to bat on the air during the World Series as well.

"Flash News" is a new game invented by a famous New York newspaper man and as usual Morton Dove, the tenor, is champion at the new pastime.

Phillips Lord, Radio's Number One idea man, told how the idea for his "We, the People" programs came to him as he stood at the foot of the Hawaiian Cross and a number of ministers wired him for permission to use it as the basis for a sermon.

Most of the questions asked by radio listeners of Nel Vinick, famous New York beauty advisor, deal with the subject of wrinkles.

Ed East and Ralph Dumke are among radio's busiest. In addition to making movies and doing two daytime broadcasts weekly, they are now heard three times a week on WEAP as "The Sisters of the Skillet." The photo shows Ralph Dumke as one of the "Sisters."

Another radio "first" is the all-Negro show on the Friday night NBC blue network. Eddie Green, Gee Gee James and Louis Armstrong's orchestra are the performers, with the program scripted by Octavus Roy Cohen, famous author.

Werner Janssen struggled to land in the ranks of the world's foremost conductors. His father opposed his musical career but Werner worked his way through Dartmouth and a musical education by pounding the piano in movie houses and cafes. The big Sunday night variety show heard over the NBC red network at 8:00 p.m. (E. D. S. T.) is Janssen's first radio series. Don Ameche is the "m. c." and Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy provide the comedy.

Mrs. Una Turner and daughter, Una, who have spent the past month at this place, left Thursday for Pola O., where they will visit Mrs. Turner's daughter, Mrs. Ralph Marshall. Many of their friends were calling on them Wednesday night and wished them a pleasant trip and a nice vacation.

FLOYD PRANKER'S SON DIES AT GARRETT, KY.

(By Will Boggs)
Hueysville, Ky., June 17— "Uncle" Bill Patton, 73, widely known citizen of West

Garrett, near here, died here early yesterday morning at the home of his son, Willie Patton, following a long illness of a complication of ailments.

He was the son of "Uncle" Willey Patton, famed hill-country "pranker," or practical joker and hunter, who passed away at this place several years ago. Morg Patton, a brother known over a wide section of the mountains for his "pranks," died at West Garrett last fall.

Surviving Mr. Patton are his widow and the following sons and daughters: Alonzo, Willie and Carew Patton, all of this place; Mrs. Luther Allen and Mrs. Will Green, of this place; Mrs. Wes Slaven and Mrs. Willie Patton, of Garrett; and Mrs. Willie Davis, Estill, Ky.

Burial was made Thursday morning in the Huff cemetery at this place, with local ministers officiating. A large crowd turned out for the final rites.

The steel strike is blamed by both the coal operators and coal miners of this section for the "slack run" in which both parties are now sunk. Many of the mines hereabouts seldom operate more than two days a week. Business in this region is showing a weak trend as a matter of course.

However, goth sides are optimistic, expressing the belief that things will improve in the near future.

The Southern Agriculturalist said not long ago that most of the the Kentucky mountain women are expert gardeners, and, this being the case, their prediction that mountain gardens this season will be the best in a dozen years should mean something.
