COAL DEADLOCK STILL UNBROKEN

General Shutdown of Coal Industry Threatened Friday by Lewis

At noon Thursday the mine wage contract conference remained in a deadlock, and, unless settlement reached today, general shutdown of the entire coal industry is seen Fri-

The miners' policy committee was called back to New York this week for consideration of operators' proposals, but developments hopefully anticipated, did not materialize.

Meanwhile, 338,000 bituminous coal miners, approximately 6,000 of whom are in Floyd county, are starting their second month of idleness. The coal supply has dwindled over the nation almost to the vanishing point, and many workers in other industries are idle as a result of the mine disagreement, railroad employes being particularly affected.

An unconfirmed report received here last week said that the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company's supply of coal is almost exhausted and that coal of an inferior grade which had been stored for three years was being used. Another report says the coal shutdown has been a boon to the gas industry and that one gas burner manufacturer had stated orders exceeded his factory's ability to supply.

Secretary of Labor Perkins visited the conference in New York this week, and government intervention is expected unless an agreement is reached within the next few days.

In an effort to obtain a more advantageous fire insurance rate for Prestonsburg, Mr. Carter recently wrote the Kentucky Municipal League, at Lexington, concerning the procedure that should be taken. A survey conducted by the League last year shows that Prestonsburg is rated at present in the tenth class, the lowest rating, which usually indicates that the community so rated is unprotectby the Kentucky Actuarial Bureau, is based upon a number of considerations, including the reliability and adequacy of water supply, the equipment and efficiency of the fire dethe structural conditions of the city. "It is likely that Prestonsburg's fire fighting facilities have been improved since that rating was made," C. T. Judging from the way John Young Brown was handled by those deputy sheriffs the other day, his arguments weren't very convincing!

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY IS SHOT BY HUSBAND FOLKLORE

SCRAPBOOKS

Today I received from the mother earlier in the day. Both men were tury ago by a boy who later became ted firing the shot, Magistrate Omery through it, reading a bit here and Hall said. The scattered shots struck there, and trying to recreate the time the woman on her arm, inflicting only and the boy. And that brings up the whole question of scrapbooks.

> Reading matter was scarce, as you all know, when some of us were young. Books were passed around from house to house, so that a single volume had often had half a hundred readers Those who could not read very well listened to others read aloud. I got my first love for poetry in that fashion and heard older people read English and American classics long before I knew A from B. Not many people could afford to buy books outright. The scrapbook became a substitute, a sort of home-made one, for books. From the weekly newspapers and the few cheap magazines we received we saved such poems or stories or jokes as struck our fancy, laying them by for a later day when we would make a scrapbook.

The scrapbook, in my case, at least. was largely a matter of winter work, when I was shut indoors with a cold or on the long winter nights around the fireplace. I still have several of better if the soil soil is cultivated these home-made books, some fairly good, others pretty bad. The astonishwill cut down weeds and grass, which ing thing is that my scrapbooks and absorb much moisture. Keep this area others I have seen show a startling lack of arrangement or choice. The dullest things that took our eyes were given as much attention as genuinely leaned toward poetry. I have just turned through one I made in 1902 and have found more than a hundred standard poems that would be in any inclusive anthology of American and English poetry. Besides these, there are several hundred poems that might be called minor poems, good at the time they were written but now largely forgotten. I mention this scrapbook in detail to remind you that the newspapers used to feature poetry, some of them having a double column once a week. That is where I got many of my gems. Newspapers today would feel somewhat cheap to print on their editorial pages a poem that has become a part of our heritage. Thus time passes.

Not everyone who planned a scrapbook actually made one. In a shoebox were preserved all the valuables until they became yellow with age. I have visited in some quaint old homes on the outskirts of the Fidelity neighborhood in which I was entertained, really so, by being shown the poems, stories, jokes, pictures and cartoons that were to form the basis of a scrapbook that had never and never will take form. Treasured up for years, these bits of printing opened the big world to people who probably never wandered 20 miles beyond the hills by which they were surrounded.

BORN OF TRAVAIL

Out of the business travail of the last few years here has been born probably Prestonsburg's greatest business boon.

Young and old business and professional men have found a common interest in the Prestonsburg Co-Operative Business Association. Forgotten are old scores. Lost in the welling interest for a better town and county are small-town prejudices.

At last Prestonsburg is in a position to do more than say it welcomes visitors. Customers of business places here are not going to enjoy small "bank nights"—they are going to profit from big "bank days."

Many other plans are being formulated for the benefit of those trading in Prestonsburg as well as for the advantage of local business firms

THE TIMES does not propose to disclaim in behalf of Prestonsburg business all hope of financial gain, or to claim for Prestonsburg business only altruistic motives. Why be dishonest and at the same time obviously foolish? Prestonsburg business naturally hopes to gain and retain the goodwill of Floyd county business by virtue of the services they have arranged for in the organization of the business group.

In that enterprise they are determined not

PROTECT HUMANS, TOO

If Prohibition was "unenforced and unenforceable," what about the Kentucky dog tax

Ask any Sheriff. The people of practically every section of the state hate the law. Officials themselves consider it a perpetual thorn in their

Primarily designed for the protection of sheep-growers, the law has failed insofar as nost of the state is concerned; and, that being true, it should not apply to the entire Commonwealth, or should be changed so as to be practical and afford all parts of the state the protection citizens expect.

A law to compel every dog-owner to have his der 'reculated against rabies would effect a greate aving in money and in human anguish to the Late as a whole than tagging "Old Ring"

A simple treatment costing less than a dollar immunizes a dog against hydrophobia, and the cost of the treatment would not vary because of the sex of the animal. Thus would be protected not only the dogs themselves but also humans and livestock. Without this protection, the economic loss-cost in money and time-and suffering mount higher in Kentucky than does the simple loss in dollars and cents from sheep-killing dogs.

It is argued by supporters of the present law that strict enforcement of the dog tax would lessen the prevalence of hydrophobia. Grantedit would lessen hydrophobia in proportion to the lessening of the dog population. But hydrophobia would still take its annual heavy toll-a toll confined not only to sheep growers, at that.

England, and a few states in this country, have enacted wise laws which have eliminated rabies. These laws, in short, make inoculation against rabies compulsory.

And any person owning a dog worth keeping cannot refuse to pay fifty cents or a dollar to protect the family pet, members of the family and the public in general against this disease which dogs contract through no fault of their own poor dumb selves. Enforcement of this law would effect a reduction in the mongrel, sheep-killing type of dog as much as, perhaps more than, the present law has ever done.

With 4,652 dogs listed for taxes in this county, this year, and approximately the same number last, sheep claims totaling exactly nothing were paid last year and exactly nothing remains in the sheep fund. Not a very good business proposition even, this dog tax thing, considering expenses, trouble and hard feelings.

So serious is Floyd county's hydrophobia problem that Dr. Marvin Ransdell, director of the Floyd county health department, reported this year in the department's yearbook that "There is not a month in the year that we have not had a few cases of rabies among animals reported, and the disease is so prevalent in this county and other sections of Eastern Kentucky that I am of the opinion the wild animals have become infected."

Dr. Ransdell further commented on the number of humans and domestic animals bitten by mad dogs and cited the heavy expense incurred by humans thus bitten. The cost of antirabies serum retails at around $9.

Twenty-eight persons received anti-rabies treatment last year in the county. Multiply that by $9, add physicians' fees, loss of time from work, cost of transportation, mental anguish not only of the patients but also of their relatives-if a dollar-and-cents value can be placed on this last

There is argument, of course, both ways. But for the state as a whole the change to a protection of the people as well as the sheep seems to this newspaper quite a logical course.

DOES COLLEGE PAY?

That question has been asked by more and more anxious parents in recent years. Does it pay in dollars and cents, that is.

Best and strongest light ever thrown on the question, perhaps, now comes from a study by the U.S. Office of Education, which compiled data from 31 colleges, covering 46,000 alumni graduated between 1928 and 1935.

Here are some of the more interesting things

1. Of the men, 58 per cent, and of the women, 61 per cent have never been unemployed since graduation. Ninety-eight per cent of the men and 99 per cent of the women have never been on relief. Ninety-six per cent of the men, and 93 per cent of the women reporting are today either temporarily or permanently employed, though many took a year or two to connect with

2. The average typical college man one year out of school is making about $1,314 a year, and after eight years he has climbed to $2,383. For women the average salaries were, first year, $1,092; eighth year, $1,606.

3. Nearly two-thirds of the graduates go into the professions, and after eight years about 19 per cent are owners or part owners of their businesses. More than half gravitate into cities of 100,000 population or over.

4. Of married alumni in the group surveyed, 57 per cent of the men, and 61 per cent of the women report no children. To 12,233 wives of the men graduates were born 7,728 children; to 6,359 women graduates were born 3,463. The divorce rate among college graduates is lower than among people in general.

There's your picture. A young fellow goes to college. He graduates at about 22. He gets a job fairly quickly at about $25 a week. Not much, maybe, but better than the income of the average wage-earner. After eight years he's married, getting about $45, with less than a 50-50 chance of having children to support. There is one chance in five that by that time he will be his

That's pretty good proof that the pre-depression picture of the value of college has vanished. In those days it was: graduate, become a bond salesman, and make a million within five

Today the picture is less flambouyant and very much more realistic. The college degree today is no touchstone, no guarantee of monetary success. It never was.

The greatest value of the college diploma today, as always, must be sought in other places than in the pocketbook, in other values than those which may be set down in a checkbook. -Ashland Daily Independent.

SPRINGTIME OVER EUROPE

This is one of Europe's loveliest springs. "From a blue, impartial sky," as Anne O'Hare McCormick writes in The Times Magazine, "sunshine of a warmth and brilliance rarely seen in April pours down on the just and unjust alike." The grass is tenderly green in Hyde Park and daffodils "foam like yellow surf along the edges of the Serpentine." In the Bois de Boulogne the magnolias are in bloom, and Parisians sip their wine and nibble their croissants in the fragrant open air. The tulip beds of the Tiergarten are a lovely light, and in the Villa Borghese "happy children play in the golden air."

Will these pleasant pictures be remembered as many millions of the middle-aged remember the spring of 1914? The old Europe was to begin dying before the leaves that unfolded that April turned brown. There were many innocent, happy things that would not come again. Lovers walk now in city parks and along country roads. Mothers watch their children playing-boy children already accustomed to drill, girl children still too young to be wives, or widows. Old people do not ask much. A warm place in the sun will answer for a while. But a shadow crosses the sun. Will these pictures, in the light of future autumns and winters, take on the unutterable sadness of lost joys that cannot be recaptured?

This is a practical question, not a sentimental one. The human pilgrimage on this earth is, at best, not easy. But it has its moments, and the key to most of these moments is the lasting quality, the known return, of very simple things. Young people fall in love, marry, have children, plan for the future. They grow old and die and the children carry on their hopes. If Europe could be honestly polled today, without regard to national boundaries, can any one doubt that the vote would be that these simple things should not be interrupted by war? If national policies went by results of such a vote the democracies would not be faced by the hideous choice between war, on one side, and security and self-respect on the other, for there would be no aggressor

It is true that some governments are aggressive. Others are not. Some nations are being brutally disciplined. Some are still free. But in any country does a mother wish to have her son killed or mutilated, does a girl wish to lose her sweetheart, does a young man, however great his sense of adventure, desire to be shot, bayoneted, or blown to rags? When people believe a great cause to be at stake they will endure these things. But in a world of free opinion and complete information no great cause, needing to be settled by mass slaughter, would be at stake.

Democracies have made wars, sometimes. But it is not to be believed that free men, in a free society, will deliberately destroy that society which is what a general war now is likely to do. The children play happily, lovers go arm in arm, old people dream of the past in the soothing warmth of the April sun. Who but a madman would say that any of them would vote, in a free election, to roll out the artillery and send the bombing planes up? The world's danger in this harrowingly beautiful spring lies in the suppression of men's yearnings, the perversion of their desires. If everything were known, if everyone had a voice, there would be no war.-New York

"Navigable waters" means: "Any waters within this state under lock and dam." That would include the Kentucky, the Ohio, the Green, and its two tributaries-the Barren and the Rough; the Cumberland, the Tennessee, the Big Sandy and its two tributaries-the Levisa Fork and the Tug Fork. The four tributaries mentioned are open to fishing below the locks and dams that have been placed some distance from where they flow into the larger streams.

The new law states: "It shall be unlawful to take fish or attempt to take fish in any manner or by any means in any of the pubic waters of this state during the month of May each year, except that this shall not prohibit fishing with pole and line in any navigable streams but not above the last lock and dam." The locks and dams in each stream are numbered starting with number one and going on up to the number of the last lock and dam on the river.

Take the Kentucky river for example: The No. 1 lock is located at Carrollton, Ky., at the mouth of the Kentucky river where it enters the Ohio river. Thirteen High Schools Enter Mountain Festival

Thirteen high schools have definitely announced as entries in the Eastern Kentucky music festival which will be held Saturday on the campus of Pikeville College, it was said by Miss Alta May Lumbard, of the music department of the college. This is the fourth consecutive year the callege has sponsored the activity and Prestonsburg for examination and this year is expected to surpass the three previous ones in attendance rectheir care. The health department ords if advance indications are any gauge, Miss Lumbard said

Other schools making belated entry or arrival at the fete will not be barred from participation in the various musical sessions, as the events are non-competitive and as the sole purpose of the festival is to stimulate ed to all-day so that all interested interest in music in the schools throughout this section. A noticeable interest in music has been evidenced by a marked increase in glee clubs, bands and other musical groups in the surrounding schools since the origin of the music festival four years ago when the local college first played host to the young musicians and their directors, it was further stated.

Five hundred people, participants and visitors, are expected to appear Saturday on the college campus. The festivities will be officially opened at 1:45 in the afternoon by Dr. Harry M. Crooks, president of the college, who will welcome the musicians and guests sion. Following the afternoon session will come a period of entertainment sponsored by the various departments of the college which will in turn be followed by a complimentary supper served to the student musicians and their instructors in the cafeteria. Festivities will reach their peak at 6:30 in the evening when a combined concert of seven high school bands will be held in front of the administration building. The evening session will be closed with selections sung by a chorus composed of members from various high schools.

High schools, which have already signified their entries in the festival are Wayland, Johns Creek, Martin Betsy Layne, Layne, Cumberland, Belfry, Prestonsburg, Jenkins, Hellier Pikeville, Dorton and Virgie, and the Pikeville College Academy. One hundred and fifty-seven band members, it was reported, met in the college gymnasium Monday night and rehearsed for the combined band concert Saturday evening.

Instructors who are bringing ensembles to the festival are Robert Wallace, Wayland; Charles A. Blaine, Johns Creek; Miss Virginia Tharp, Martin; Miss Carlos Hale, Betsy Layne; Jesse Elliott, Betsy Layne; Forrest Albert, Cumberland; Mrs. Carl Hatcher, Belfry; Mrs. Chalmer Frazier, Prestonsburg; Paul Lyons, Jenkins; Cecil Wallace, Pikeville; Miss Ella Duffey, Pikeville; Mrs. John Meador, Pikeville; Miss Gertrude Sandrock, Pikeville College Academy; Mrs. L. Labor leaders have called a strike, not for more wages, nor shorter hours, but for the supreme right to dictate to the employer in the hiring and firing of men, and to evade a fine for "wildcat" labor strikes.

Regardless of the merit of their demands, it has thrown over 350,000 men out of work in the coal mining industry, and more than 60,000 railroads of America more than $200,000,-

In Kentucky, more than 23,000 miners are out of work and can not draw unemployment compensation because they are on a strike and are not involuntarily unemployed; many are existing only because of credit given them at company stores.

Down at Owensboro, business is crippled by labor agitation. Organizers are wining and dining the girl employes of the Kenrad Company in an effort to organize them, and a picture show was being picketed, and continued to run, had most of its seats damaged by knife cuts in the upholstery.

All of this leads up to the coming governor's race, briefly. Chandler was put in by the opposition to the sales tax, and Brown may be kept out by the opposition to the tactics of labor organizers and leaders.

Next_week Kentucky will be talked about all over the world, and most of from Kentucky, for the Derby will be run at Churchill Downs near Louisville, and its fame and tradition have helped to make us famous.

Don't call it "Darby" as the English do. We were once with Gov. Laffoon when a reporter asked him about the pronunciation, and I well remember his reply: "In England it may be called 'Darby,' but we Kentuckians have made the race famous as the 'Derby,' and I decree that Derby it

From small, shabby towns on the branch line; from citified communities; from the back districts where the folks yet ride in shabby buggies; from up in the mountains; from the hemp and tobacco fields and the corn lands of the river bottoms, the Kentuckians come.

The next week, May 12, 13, 14 and 15, the annual Garden Pilgrimage will be held. This tour is for the benefit of the garden at Liberty Hall Many historic spots throughout the Commonwealth are on the visiting list and guests are expected from every state in the union. This pilgrimage is fascinating to not only the garden lovers but to those interested in history and architecture and promises delightful treats on every hand.

May 26 and 27 have been set aside for the Laurel Festival at Pineville Thousands who love the beautiful will be present those days. Friday night the grand ball will be held in The War Upon Insects the auditorium in Pinevile, and Saturday will be devoted to tours of the Cumberland Mountains. The sights Dick Davis has seen in water meters here over the years has made water consumers' eyes pop out at times, but never till last Thursday did a peek into a meter box cause Dick's eyes to pop. Unlocking the meter box at the home of D. C. Stephens, Dick's eyes, focused for meter reading, unfocused as a full-grown possum came to view inside.

Presumably the meter box had not been opened for a full month, there was only the key-hole and a crack of only a few inches permitting air into the box. Yet, "Br'er 'Possum" was in good "killin' shape." Huccome? What do you think?

TO THE PEOPLE OF KNOTT AND FLOYD COUNTIES:

I was a candidate for Circuit Judge six years ago, but withdrew to accept a Government position then offered

At the insistence of many good Democrats, some months ago, I definitely announced that I would become a candidate for this office this time.

I felt, however, that there should not have been any race and have been trying to get some agreement that would give us a Circuit Judge satisfactory to the people. I do not want to have to make the race. I know that a large majority of the people would feel safe with me on the bench. I know that it is their will that I be nominated. Whether this will is to be thwarted by the politicians remains to be seen. This great office should not be traded upon, or bought or sold, or farmed out for the special use of the privileged few. It should be an office that would protect and defend the weak and helpless who are being

I am making this fight not for myself alone, but that the people may have a New Deal in this district. CLAUDE P. STEPHENS
