Is Floyd County a Sleeping Beauty?

THE "lead" paragraph in a recent Courier-Journal news-story should be pondered by Floyd of all the counties in Kentucky. It read: "Wide-awake Kentucky communities are on their toes with post-war planning that is working already, the Smaller War Plants Corporation district office here reported yesterday." In the hope that Floyd county's officials, civic and business leaders will see this story here, THE TIMES re-prints it:

Wide-awake Kentucky communities are on their toes with post-war planning that is working already, the Smaller War Plants Corporation district office here reported yesterday.

In recent months seven Kentucky cities have attracted out-of-state plants with pay rolls aggregating in excess of $1,000,000 a year, and fifteen other plants are seeking to establish in the state.

The S.W.P.C. said it assisted civic groups at Mt. Sterling, Winchester, Corbin, Glasgow, Paducah, Danville and Greensburg in obtaining factories employing a total of more than 1,000 workers. All of the cities are in Group 4 labor classification, meaning they have a surplus of workers.

John M. Frier, district manager of the S.W.P.C., said his office also aided seven communities in setting up industrial "go-getting" organizations patterned after the Louisville Industrial Foundation and that all these cities are now bidding for plants. They are Lebanon, Greensburg, Central City, Middlesboro, Mayfield, Murray and Paducah.

C. L. McBride, traveling representative of the S.W.P.C., has been detailed to work with the communities in getting industrial plants, Frier said. All of those now operating are engaged either in war production or essential civilian goods.

Numerous inquiries have been received from plants in Northern and Eastern cities leading the S.W.P.C. to believe Louisville will be "in excellent position" to draw industries after the war, Frier said.

"The high-caliber of labor in Louisville and throughout Kentucky, excellence of transportation and nearness to power throw this area wide open to postwar development," Frier said.

Principal functions of the S.W.P.C. have been to get war contracts for small industries throughout the state and to lend financial assistance to the performance of the contracts. Prime contracts totaling millions have been channeled through the S.W.P.C. office here and war contract loans now exceed $5,000,000.

The No Creek Homemakers' Club in Ohio county bought a $100 War Bond with which to improve the clubroom after the war.

Now, while all this has been going on, what have Prestonsburg and other Floyd county communities been doing but live in the fool's paradise of a wartime boom in the coal and gas industries, without which we are deep in the throes of a business depression?

Re-read Paragraph Six of the re-printed news-story. Numerous inquiries are coming in from plants in northern and eastern cities, asking about Kentucky locations. Then ask yourself a question—Is Floyd county on that Kentucky map those plant-owners are studying?

The district manager of the Smaller War Plants Corporation is quoted as pointing to the "high-caliber" labor that is Kentucky's, the state's nearness to power, its excellence of transportation. And he is not excluding Floyd county's labor, its power and its transportation facilities. He is not denying that we have the coal and gas here at our door, the Big Sandy river splitting the county, a railroad which has stood up under the wartime load of millions of tons of coal, an almost complete north-south highway. But is Floyd county itself doing anything toward causing others to know we have all this? Is it making any effort to get that high-caliber labor, that ready supply of electric power, its natural resources and all the rest into use by any new business?

For all that has been done to date, its labor may remain in the fields of Ohio and Michigan and in the plants of distant cities till, no longer needed, its men and women straggle home, some day, another potential army of WPA-sters.

We suggest that the Floyd county reader of this editorial study the list of Kentucky towns already benefiting, or seeking to benefit, from the industrial program. Only a very few have spread beyond the "small town" class. But all are growing, all are alive and letting other states and towns know they are alive.

Take Greensburg, for instance. It is one of the towns which, not satisfied with leaving things to chance and reap the windfall or suffer the famine, has gone out and brought in one of these industries. In 1930 that town had a population of 770. The same year, Prestonsburg's population was 2,105. We confess our ignorance, we do not know the exact location of Greensburg (our desk encyclopedia which lists most Kentucky villages and towns does not mention it). But we are not ignorant enough to think that Greensburg is not known to others. It was only one-third Prestonsburg's population in 1930, but if the two towns go along as they are now going, the figures will not be so favorable to Prestonsburg when next census-taking time comes six years hence.

Yes, we have a great county, a great people. Our resources are richer than those of many sections, our possibilities are limitless. But why talk about it? Carthage was great, centuries ago.

Why gaze raptly into the mirror and murmur to ourselves, "How beautiful we are!" if we have not the energy nor the desire to step outside and let the world see for itself?

We ask you!

Take Prestonsburg, for instance. It is one of the towns which, not satisfied with leaving things to chance and reap the windfall or suffer the famine, has gone out and brought in one of these industries. In 1930 that town had a population of 770. The same year, Prestonsburg's population was 2,105. We confess our ignorance, we do not know the exact location of Greensburg (our desk encyclopedia which lists most Kentucky villages and towns does not mention it). But we are not ignorant enough to think that Greensburg is not known to others. It was only one-third Prestonsburg's population in 1930, but if the two towns go along as they are now going, the figures will not be so favorable to Prestonsburg when next census-taking time comes six years hence.

Journal that the Louisville man telephoned his willingness to sell his own jeep. Dr. Archer said he plans to meet Mr. Humphrey either in Lexington or Louisville when he goes to Lexington next month for the Kentucky Medical Association meeting.

"I kind of hate to give it up—it's a bright green—but I guess the doctor needs it more than I do," Humphrey said.

"He sounded like an awfully nice fellow over the telephone and he said he had to walk or ride horseback to many of his patients."

A Fort Knox official said used jeeps are sold through the army's Salvage Division and that the nearest outlet to Louisville is Cincinnati. The jeeps are sold on bid to automobile dealers and then are re-sold. The current selling price of the few now being released is understood to be slightly in excess of $600.

The first jeeps released through the army's Salvage Division were sold to a Chicago dealer, who repainted and reconditioned them and sold them for $1,250.

Rites for Emma Woman, Victim at Bypro, Held Saturday at Cow Creek

Mrs. Elizabeth Branham Woods, 70 years old, widow of Will Woods, of Emma, died Thursday, last week, at the home at Bypro of her son, Henry Woods.

Mrs. Branham had been a member of the Freewill Baptist Church for years and was one of the county's best women. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Belle Branham, 94, of Allen, and seven sons and daughters, Otto, Henry and James Woods, Mrs. Virgie Miller, Mrs. Joe Click, Mrs. Neelie Conn and a son whose name is unavailable. She also leaves two brothers and one sister: John Branham, Dwaile; Mrs. Martha Porter and Tom Branham, both of Allen.

Funeral rites were conducted from the Freewill Baptist Church on Cow Creek, Saturday, the Revs. Isaac Stratton and Roy Blevins officiating. Burial in the family cemetery on Calf Creek was under direction of the Arnold Funeral Home.

Italians if they are friendly. We should think very highly of those smiling ambassadors from Japan who were making beautiful oriental bows and smiling and showing themselves very friendly while their brothers of the same color and caliber were planning the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

"Who ever heard of saloons being friendly to churches? Let the tears of wives who have drunken husbands, the cries of children who have drunken daddies, the pleas of destitute homes, wasted lives, prostitution in mass formation show any 'friendliness' existing between a saloon and a church? What is there in common between the two? Oh, the great gulf that exists between the two, the church and the saloon, between the advocates of the church and the saloon. The advocates of liquor have no warm interest in the church apart from social, political and pecuniary interests.

"Another flimsy excuse for granting the license was: ' . . . but in the rush of business the license for retail package liquor store was issued.' This quotation is taken from the written opinion of Mr. Whittle. The State Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission was created for the purpose of controlling the liquor traffic according to law. However, there are some who think that it is better to let the liquor crowd and their opponents arbitrate their differences while the Control Commission says: 'In considering this question the Board recognizes that it is very undesirable for a liquor store to be so near a place of worship, and it is to be hoped that, within the near future, this situation will be remedied by the church leaders and Mr. Carlos working in harmony with each other.' Yes, the Control Commission pleads 'friendliness' and 'hopefulness' as they circumvent the law."

H. HAROLD DAVIS, major domo of The Courier-Journal's rare and difficult color photography, is a scholarly young man whose home town was Corydon, Indiana. Attracted to the newspaper as steel to a magnet, the association has, for nine years, proved to be a mutually happy one. Davis has trained far afield, wherever new techniques in color photography were being developed. He has traveled from coast to coast . . . caught color shots on land, sea and air. At the Graphic Arts Institute in New York, Harold became friend and protege of Carlton Dunn, pioneer and foremost authority on tri-color work in this country. Dunn, author of many textbooks on the subject, is a frequent visitor in our studios.

Dark hair falling across a serious brow, Harold talks about the 40-pound lens Leviathan which simultaneously filters basic colors on three plates. "It's done with mirrors" . . . and while it's the best available now . . . great strides will be made in this field after the war. Perhaps then Harold will find a color lens capable of catching the exquisite beauty of his wife . . . who is remarkably photogenic. So far, none has done her justice.

Like his fellow technicians, Davis worships at the tripod feet of the "one-shot-color-camera," and becomes slave to its artistic temperament . . . which is notably allergic to vibration, temperature and humidity. Between the idiosyncracies of the camera and Harold's currently changing status with the Draft Board (he's 1-A again), life is never static.
