

THURSDAY

PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY

OCTOBER 9, 1952

This Town-- That World

Can you remember as far back as a month? Try stepping outside, these cold mornings, and see if you can feel that heat you were complaining about, just that short while ago.

Indian summer. A rather beautiful Indian legend has it that the blue haze of the season is the smoke from campfires of dead warriors. Hope the season don't get so mixed up this year that we're deprived of this addition to the glory of autumn.

A BOY AND HIS DOG

If the person who poisoned all those dogs in West Prestonsburg, the other night, could have seen a boy and his dog as I did, the other afternoon, he surely would have had punishment enough. The kid had apparently been to the neighborhood grocery. Loaded into his wagon was a well-filled bag and about the cutest bulldog I've seen since mine died, years ago. I drove into the end of the street where the wagon was parked, and stopped alongside. The car and its occupants might as well have been miles away as far as the boy and his dog were concerned. The youngster had his head down, nuzzling his pet and never a mother caressed her babe with hands and voice more tenderly than that boy while "loving" his dog.

Kill that boy's dog, and you'd break his heart—and who would have the heart to do a thing like that?

SERMON TOPIC

Back in the days when Mark Twain was just Sam Clemens, a carrot-topped brat in Hannibal, Mo., his farmer-uncle had an old negro slave who would preach a sermon at the slightest provocation. With Sam his old auditor. And invariably the old slave's sermon-topic was this:

"Tell me how a man gits his co'n-pone and I'll tell you what his 'pinions is."

Just a thought for the present political campaign.

POLICE ROLE IN CASE HERE

May Be Investigated, Says Council Member After Woman Beaten

A member of the Prestonsburg City Council said this week that Charlie Laferty, restaurant-owner and taxicab operator here, had requested an investigation of the conduct of Policeman "Pie" Gilliam last Saturday night when Mrs. Laferty was allegedly severely beaten at the Bus Station Cafe by Fire Chief Vernon Blackburn.

Blackburn was placed under $2,000 peace bond following the altercation.

Laferty claimed the policeman stood by and permitted the beating of Mrs. Laferty without making a serious attempt to control Blackburn.

Three members of the Johnson family on Left Beaver Creek were jailed here Monday by Deputy Sheriff Willie Johnson who booked Floyd Johnson on a peace warrant, reckless shooting and carrying a concealed deadly weapon. Joe Johnson on a peace warrant and a charge of reckless use of a deadly weapon, and Joe Johnson, Sr., with drunk driving.

Samuel J. Woods was jailed here Monday by Policeman Bill Potter on a forgery charge after he allegedly had forged two $25 checks on J. T. Hughes. Richard Shockey was booked at the jail Wednesday by D. E. Blackburn on a grand larceny charge and as a parole violator.

BOARD ASKS BIDS ON TWO SCHOOL JOBS

Bosco, Ligon Buildings Planned; Bus Drivers Warned About Duties

The Floyd County Board of Education voted Tuesday to ask bids from contractors on the construction of two school structures, one at Bosco and the other at Ligon.

The work was voted immediately after the new school budget was approved and funds available for construction had been determined. It was explained that the venture was delayed by the budget delay, since "we didn't want to be shooting in the dark."

The Bosco building, originally planned for five rooms, may be reduced to four, since the enrollment there has dropped from about 190 to 134. The Ligon structure will be of four rooms. Both buildings will be of either block or frame construction, with modern facilities.

Landscaping of the site for the Bosco building also is planned. The slope at the rear of the present building will be leveled, the school located on this new site and a depression on the school grounds leveled.

The Board also ordered that each school bus driver be informed and made to understand that state law and insurance provisions make the Board liable if they transport on buses they drive any person other than pupils and employees of the Board of Education. Any driver who persists in the practice of transporting others will be discharged.

The system of getting salary checks out to teachers promptly was discussed at some length. The Board plans to mail out checks to the teachers or to deposit them in a bank, depending on the wishes of the individual teacher.

Contract for supplying material for the Goble (or Perry) Branch school was awarded the Vanhose Lumber Company on its low bid of $800. Construction will be done by the school system's maintenance crew.

The first month's tuition for 350 county students attending Prestonsburg high school and amounting to $31,083.50 was paid. The Board also voted to pay KEA dues of all teachers in response to a request made by the teachers last fall.

With the illness of the teacher, Inez Hall, threatening to close the Spears school on Buffalo, the Board ordered the pupils be transported to the Clark school during her absence.

The trassure's Creek bus run which Green Gayheart quit was awarded to Moses Frazier on his bid of $175 a month. The Board created a new bus run on Branham's Creek, with Oliver Hall being awarded the contract on his bid of $125 a month. Two junk buses were sold to Willie McCown and L. P. Tussey.

TB SEAL SALE EXPENSES CUT

Volunteer Worker Help Enlisted; $3,500 Goal On Drive Set Nov. 17

The Christmas Seal Sale, which must succeed in Floyd county if the work of a special tuberculosis nurse is to continue, will be conducted this year in the main by volunteer workers, it was announced this week by Mrs. A. H. Mandt, president of the Floyd County Tuberculosis Association.

The office-help expense for the entire campaign will be only $100. The Association has set $3,500 as a minimum goal, and Seals will go into the mails on Nov. 17.

To train the volunteer workers in all the details of the drive, including maintenance and use of the Association's extensive card-index system, J. Irwin Nichols, director of the Kentucky Tuberculosis Association, will conduct a workshop training meeting Oct. 16 in the basement of the Methodist Church here.

Pointing to the need for continued work of Mrs. J. D. Mayo, special tuberculosis nurse, in carrying on educational work, contacting cases, getting active cases under treatment and arranging for chest X-ray pictures, the Association president cited this record of progress made in the fight on TB since Mrs. Mayo began work two years ago:

The average yearly death rate from tuberculosis during the preceding five years, 1949-50, was 35; 26 died of the disease in 1950; 19 died in 1951, and to date this year the total number of deaths is 10.

Volunteer workers enlisted for the campaign to date are:

Messiaenes H. L. Ley, Lon C. Hill, Grover Lowe, Bill Petrey, Raymond Sirke, F. S. Collins, Marian Wilson, W. V. Bunting, Wall Hamilton, Cecil Kendrick, Russell Shaw, Gerstle M. Haggard, E. P. SCOUTS WIN STATE TITLE

In First-Aid Contests Held at Hazard; Consol Wins Mine-Rescue Test

A team of Explorer Scouts, Troop 143, sponsored by the Princess Elkhorn Coal Company, David, won the first-aid contest for boys which was a part of the mine safety contest and demonstrations held Saturday at Hazard.

The mine-rescue contest was won by the team representing Mine No. 204 of the Consolidation Coal Company (Ky.) at Jenkins.

The first-aid team representing the Pond Creek Pochontas Company at South Williamson, Ky., won first place for white men, and the team from Consolidation's Clover-split mine won in the negro division.

It was Princess Elkhorn Coal Company's white men's team and the colored team from the Inland Steel Company at Wheelwright represented this county in first-aid competition. Sixteen teams took part in the contest.

The winning boys' team is composed of Lowell Hager, capt., Randall Honeycutt, Tommy Castle, Rex Music, Roger Marshall and Joe Marshall.

DEEPER LAKE STUDY ASKED

Kentucky Delegation Confers with Whipple; Interest in Lake Cited

Out of last week's hearing in Washington on the question of deepening Dewey Lake came an order from Senator Chavez, chairman of the Senate Public Works committee, for the Army Corps of Engineers to make a study of the proposal.

The order was issued after three Kentucky Congressmen supporting the proposal met last Wednesday morning with Col. William Whipple, deputy executive in the Civil Works Section of the engineers. They were Senators Clements and Underwood and Representative Perkins, Hindman Democrat.

The reservoir is being used increasingly for recreation, Congressman Perkins said. Clements added that it would be used even more because the Kentucky State Highway Department is planning roads which will make it more accessible.

"I don't believe that in the Army Engineers' original evaluation that such a large attendance was envisioned," Clements said.

Whipple said this was true—Dewey Lake now has 120,000 visitors a month or about 4,000 average daily attendance.

Underwood said he flew over the lake recently and that it looked low and muddy.

Whipple said a higher dam would make for deeper water and that the silt would settle out.

"Didn't your original plan call for a higher dam?" Clements asked.

Whipple replied that he wasn't sure, but that it would have been much cheaper to have built the dam 10-foot higher in the first place than to add to it now.

"I would like to see the dam higher," Whipple said. "Like many dams, this one will take care of most floods but you're always getting the granddaddy of all storms and that's when you need the extra water-storage space. The present dam doesn't impound as much water as we'd like."

Perkins said the proposed 10-foot addition would mean a lot recreation-wise to the Big Sandy section. Underwood said the lake is the biggest economic opportunity the area has, and that a bigger, deeper lake would add to the opportunity.

The lake as of last Sunday had

Selective Service Breaks Sunday School Record

A record for Floyd county Sunday School attendance was probably broken recently by the military draft.

It took for induction Frank Gordon Gray of Allen, who had a record of 18 years' perfect Sunday School attendance which he began at the age of two years and nine months. The Methodist Sunday School at Allen presented him, shortly before his departure for Ashland to report for duty, a fountain pen and other gifts in recognition of his record.

Young Gray was graduated from Prestonsburg high school, studied radio at the Mayo Vocational School and at the time of his induction was a student at Pikeville College, e is now at Ft. George G. Meade, Maryland.

SCOUT LEADER IN 2nd VISIT

As Council Receives National Recognition For Outstanding Gains

J. H. Browne, assistant director of Rural Scouting Service, Boy Scouts of America, is spending this week in the Lonesome Pine Council. Mr. Browne is scheduled to talk with county school superintendents, county agents, Scout leaders, and others interested in the welfare of youth in the 15 counties in eastern Kentucky and southwest Virginia included in the Council area. John Dean, Scout executive, reported that the visit is a follow-up on work done by Mr. Browne in this section early in 1951.

Browne said that the Lonesome Pine Council has received the attention of the National Committee on Rural Scouting because of outstanding gains that had been made in recent years in organizing the program of Scouting in rural areas. It has been planned to organize other troops in rural areas where boys have not had opportunity for other youth programs.

Executive board members of the Lonesome Pine Council will meet at the Lakeside Hotel, Jenkins, Monday. One of the important items to be discussed at the meeting is an annual budget for the Council operation.

ORDERS FIRM TO SELL GAS

To Supply Town Needs; PSC Directive May Ease Gas Shortage at Allen

The gas famine which has plagued the town of Allen during recent cold days may be over as a result of an order of the Public Service Commission, entered Wednesday and directing the Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company to sell a supply of gas sufficient to the needs of approximately 200 additional customers of the Allen & Dwale Gas Company.

The gas company already was selling to the Allen & Dwale Gas Company gas for about 100 customers at Ddwale, but the shortage at Allen affected upwards of 200 others. The school there was closed Tuesday for lack of gas, and during the week indignant citizens and the town's City Council discussed the situation at two mass meetings.

In the hearing held before the Public Service Commission it was pointed out that natural gas formerly available for Allen was procured from two wells now exhausted. Kentucky West Virginia, United Fuel Gas Company and the Columbian Fuel Corporation were asked recently to show cause why they should not serve the Allen & Ddwale Gas Company with gas for use at Allen. Jurisdiction of the Commission was challenged, but it was shown that Kentucky West Virginia

FLOYD YOUTH IN FFA BAND

Turner One of Three From State To Play At National Meet

Jack Justin Turner, 15-year-old Maytown high school sophomore, left this morning (Thursday) for Kansas City to play in the National FFA Band at the 25th National FFA convention to be held there from Oct. 12-18.

Justin is one of three Kentucky boys chosen by the band director, Dr. H. S. Brunner, of Pennsylvania State College, to represent Kentucky.

The National FFA Band is composed of boys from 38 states and its 109 members were selected from an application list of 400.

Justin will be joined in Cincinnati by the Kentuckians, Charles Lousure, of Stanford, and Terry Woolan, of Alexandria.

The Kentucky FFA is paying all expenses of the trip and has presented Justin with a made-to-measure blue and white uniform.

Justin plays the Bb alto saxophone. He began studying this instrument in the third grade under Jesse Elliott, Floyd county band instructor, and Mrs. Thomas Patrick, instructor in music at Maytown high school.

This year he won superior rating at the Pikeville music festival and first place in the orchestral instrument division of the District FFA meeting at Paintsville. In June he was given an expenses-paid trip to the State FFA meeting at Louisville where he played with the Kentucky Home Band.

He is the son of County Superintendent and Mrs. V. O. Turner and numbers among his non-musical achievements the following:

GOP SPEAKERS APPEAR HERE

Cooper, Clark Hit The Democratic Record In Tuesday's Rally

First shots of the current campaign from the stump in this county were fired here Tuesday afternoon by Republicans, John Sherman Cooper and Curtis Clark, in their respective campaigns for U.S. Senator and for Congressman from the Seventh district.

Competing with the seventh and deciding game of the World Series, which was televised, the speakers were heard by a comparatively small crowd. Ex-Senator Cooper's appearance here was a stop on a swing through Eastern Kentucky counties. On the same day he spoke in Pikeville and Paintsville.

Both candidates assailed the record of the Democratic party. At the same time, Cooper pointed to his own record in the Senate where, he said, every bill he introduced or sponsored became law.

"My record on labor is not made here," the former Senator said. He cited his endorsement by the UMW in his 1948 campaign and pointed out that since that time he has not been in a position to do anything to add to or detract from the record established at that time.

Attacking Communism and corruption in government, Cooper termed the Korean conflict the second war as to duration and the

SUIT CLAIMS DEFENDANTS OWE $9,600

Former Justices Say No Legal Foundation For League's Action

A suit filed by the Floyd County Good Government Taxpayers League in the Floyd circuit court Monday named four ex-Magistrates as defendants and sought to recover from them $9,600 it claims as illegally paid them for Road Committee service and also all other sums collected by them in excess of the compensation authorized by law.

Named as defendants in the suit which was filed by the League's attorney, Jesse K. Lewis, of Lexington, were these members of the fiscal court during the years, 1946 to 1950: Dewey Roberts, Glenn Burchett, John May and Henry Stumbo, the present County Judge. Listed as plaintiffs were Gorman Collins, Joe H. Cooley, Polk Saunders, Henry P. Scalf, John Warrick, Wayne Stumbo and Dr. Edward B. Leslie.

The petition claims the amount of $9,600 collected by the four defendants for what has been designated as payment for Committee service constitutes misappropriation of public funds and that the allowance of $10 a day for each day of court attendance during the fiscal year, June 30, 1948 to June 30, 1949, was in contravention of public law.

In a prepared statement the four defendants this week declared the suit "is an attempt to smear certain people who held public office or who may be candidates in the future and is being used for the purpose of prejudicing the minds of the people against certain county officials in order to affect next year's election."

Declaring "there is no legal basis

FLOYD U.-KY. ALUMNI MEET

Annual Meet Elects Burchett New Head; Future Plans Told

County Attorney W. W. Burchett was named president of the Floyd County University of Kentucky Alumni Association for the coming year at the association's annual dinner meeting held here last Wednesday evening at the Center Grill. Mr. Burchett succeeds Robert S. Wellman, Prestonsburg, as head of the Floyd alumni.

Other officers elected at the meeting are Miss Marie Coburn, of Garrett, vice-president, and Miss Elsie May Stephens, Prestonsburg, secretary. The Association has approximately 100 Floyd county members.

Miss Helen King, executive secretary of the state U. of K. Alumni Association, extended greetings to former students of the University and thanked alumni for their loyalty to the University.

Dr. Hamilton Tapp, assistant to President Donovan at the University, gave the alumni a resume of events at the University during the last year and told of plans there for the future. The University of Kentucky, he said, anticipates an enrollment of 10,000 in the next five years. Lack of housing, however, caused applications of 1,000 girls to be rejected this year, he said, explaining that freshman girls are required to live in dormitories and that needed dormitory rooms are unavailable.

The 1954 Legislature will be asked for funds with which to finance construction of girls' dormitories, Mr. Tapp added.

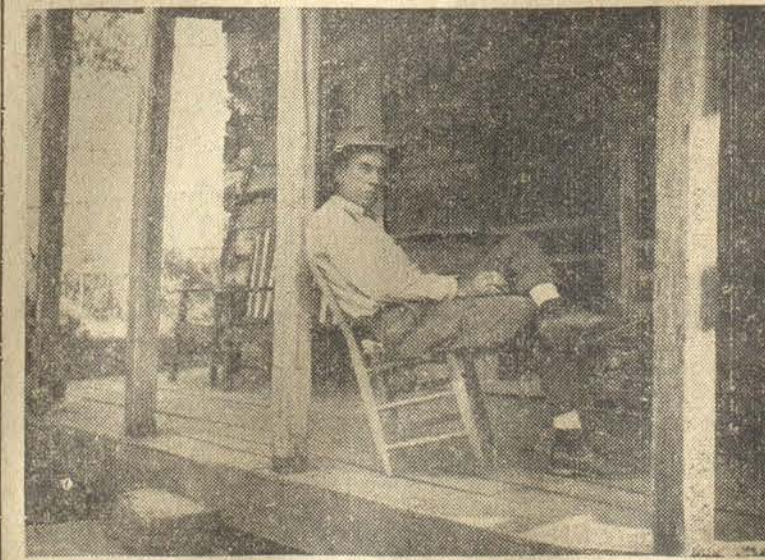

Chalmer H. Frazier, superintendent of Prestonsburg schools, acted as toastmaster at the dinner.

FHA Here Initiates Fifty New Members

Other new officers of the chapter are: Vice-President, Phyllis Hager; secretary, Phyllis Snipes; treasurer, Mary Lou Hill; parliamentarian, Esther Burke; reporter, Wanda Greene; historian, Clara Greene; song leader, Dorothy Rowe; recreation leader, Dixie Ellen Neely.

Authentic Story of Pete McCoy One of Courage, Compassion

Pete McCoy (left), World War I hero, as he related his battlefield experiences. At right he stands with his blind son, James

By Henry P. Scalf

This is the story of Pvt. Pete McCoy as related by himself for the first time.

Only the desire that the record be set down in print for his children induced McCoy, one of the outstanding heroes of World War I, to relate in detail what occurred that September day in France, 34 years ago.

There are two climactic chapters in his life. One is the story of great courage on the battlefield at Bellecour, France. He tells the story himself. The other is about a great compassion for an only and blinded son. His life portrays that by work and deed. High courage and great compassion are twin attributes of the human soul. Pete McCoy, who could walk in the face of guns and death, now because of a great compassion imparts courage to his son. These two stories are separate and distinct. They have no continuity except in the soul of Private Pete McCoy.

Life for him began 61 years ago in a log cabin on the Kitten Narrows Branch of Johns Creek, about 300 yards over the line in Floyd county. His father was Harrison McCoy, not of the "fighting" McCoy's but of the "fighting" McCoy's, so called, it was said, because they would fight at the drop of the proverbial hat.

These two families, while distantly related and having their common ancestor, were residents of different sections of Big Sandy. The "feuding" McCoy's lived on Blackberry and Pond Creek. The "fighting" McCoy's lived on Brush Fork of Johns Creek and on Wolf Creek in Martin county.

Pete's early life was uneventful except for the many boyish escapades common to a mountain boy who went to school barefoot, raided watermelon patches and explored every water hole that was wide enough for him and his companions to wade and swim. In school he received a few lickings from an irate teacher, perhaps a few more than some. Perhaps justly, for it is said that he would stick a straight pin through the tough outer skin on the Feed Prices Too High... Farmers Take Action— Slash Southern States Prices!

Farmers are squeezed by feed prices that are too high in relation to prices received for meat, milk and eggs. The farmers who own and use Southern States Cooperative—272,000 strong—are doing something about it.

Southern States Cooperative has made a sharp reduction in its mixed feed prices—is pricing them at less than actual cost. Southern States Service Agencies, working hand in hand with the farmers they serve, have reduced their handling margins to approximate actual cost. The result is a reduction of $4.00 to $5.00 per ton (20 to 25 cents per bag) in Southern States feeds which were already low in price as compared with commercial feed of comparable quality.

This program of self-help by farmers will continue until it forces the price of commercial formula feeds to a more reasonable level from the standpoint of farmers. A big crop of corn and other feed grains will soon be pressing on the market. This also should help.

Support this cooperative effort to pull down the too high price level on mixed feeds—save real money too by using quality feeds cooperatively manufactured by farmers in their own mills. See us for details. You'll be amazed at the new low Southern States feed prices.

Defendants Say Suit An Attempt To Smear

This suit is an attempt to smear certain people who held public office or who may be candidates for public office in the future and is being used for the purpose of prejudicing the minds of the people against certain county officials in order to affect next year's elections.

There is no legal basis or foundation for the suit, Sec. 87.110 of Kentucky Revised Statutes provides that Justices of the Peace shall be paid $6 for each day of attendance of the meetings of the fiscal court and for each day they serve in supervising the county roads in their respective districts. On January 18, 1943, Fiscal Court Order Book 5, Page 140, an order was entered appointing the magistrates a committee to supervise the roads in their respective districts at six dollars per day. On April 1, 1947, in Fiscal Court Order Book 5, page 362, a similar order was entered and fixed the pay of the magistrates at six dollars per day for supervising county roads and for attendance at fiscal court meetings.

Under these appointments these magistrates performed the services they were authorized to do and furnished their own automobiles and paid their expenses in supervising the county roads in their districts and attending the meetings of the fiscal court. The people of this county are aware of the fact that these men worked diligently and did their best to perform a service to the public. They did not receive any compensation which they did not earn or which was not authorized by the law.

It is alleged in the petition filed that they received ten dollars per day for their attendance in fiscal court meetings. This allegation is not true and the records show that they only received six dollars for their attendance at fiscal court meetings.

This answer is being written to inform the public of the actual truth of the payments made to these magistrates for their official services and to keep people from being misled by unwarranted statements made by people who have no regard for the truth of their allegations and who are using the courts and the Taxpayers League to further their own political interest.

The Taxpayers League has good objectives and would be a fine organization for the betterment of Floyd county government if it were properly organized and operated, but when it is used by a few disgruntled politicians to grind their personal axes and further their own political interest at the expense of duly elected officials who have been and are now doing a good job for the people of this county, then it becomes a dangerous organization. It ought to be used for the betterment of Floyd county and its people and not as an instrument for revenge.

end of his big toe and, while intently looking at his book, ease the pin-armed toe into the thigh of an unsuspecting boy in the next seat. Throughout the commotion caused by a yell of pain and the irate teacher, Pete maintained the decorum of a boy who wonders what it is all about.

Boys grow into manhood and wars take the pick. So it was that World War I found him in France, an infantryman in the 30th Division. For four months he was on the firing line, sleeping in fox holes, slogging through mud, dust and heat. He was merely a single and expendable unit of the big drive in the fall of 1918 that was throwing the Germans out of France. At times the enemy would fold up and retreat for hundreds of yards; again, they would pause to fight with vigor and viciousness. Whether they were in flight or making a stand, the big American and French guns roared and pounded around the clock.

The noise of the mighty guns was a part of life, the overtones of the events on the earth where men lived and died as a matter of course. Always with these men was that over-tone, now far in the rear as the advance aschelon moved fast, or nearer as the mammoths waddled up to support an attack. The rolling thunder was about and enveloping friend and foe. If they were to cease firing, men who had attuned their bodies and minds so long to their noise, would break under the strain and cry for them to resume.

Came mid-day of September 29. The 119th regiment had moved fast through the bodies of dead Germans caught in the rolling barrage, the plowed earth and shattered trees. They paused at a sunken road. Men piled upon the earth and rested. Pete, like the rest, was tired and worn.

It was about 11 a.m., when his captain sent for him, although he is not sure of the time. There was a mission to be performed. When Pete was asked if he volunteered, he said: "Hell, no—I was ordered!" And the way he answered made you know that he wanted no part of playing the hero.

Captain Williams said that a message had to be carried to the advance elements of the 118th regiment. The 119th had been on the move all day long and had pressed forward thousands of yards. Just where the 118th was no one knew, for liaison had been lost in the day's surging offensive. Two messengers had gone out into the smoke-drenched no-man's land and had not returned. Their bodies were to be found, undelivered messages retrieved and another similar one, carried by Pete, to be delivered.

Pete and the Captain walked along the sunken road in the direction of the desert of scarred and steel-tortured plain. Silence between them. Silence like the drifting smoke. Soon, at a point on the way, Captain Williams stopped and Pete turned to take an offered hand. Climbing the earthen rampart, he moved with the drifting smoke.

Out in no-man's-land his first objective was the bodies of his buddies who had gone before. After he had found them and retrieved the messages his final objective would be where he found the 118th. Perhaps he would not find the former messengers. Perhaps he would not find the 118th.

He noticed the drifting smoke-barrage, how it billowed and spiraled at times but in the main how it floated forward a few feet above the ground. Near the earth the air was clear.

"You've looked under a fog," Pete recalls, "and have seen how clear it can be on the earth. That was the way of the smoke. It was clear on the ground but a foot or two above it was impossible to see farther than about 10 feet."

He moved on in the direction his buddies had gone and soon stumbled over the bullet-riddled body of one. He took the message, identical with the one he was carrying, from the inert body and moved again. He was beginning to feel the utter loneliness of no-man's-land. The American army, even the 119th regiment, was back of him—back on the outer rampart of the dread area in which he could move and breathe when he could. Ahead were the Germans; ahead, too, were advance posts of the 118th. Just where one clung viciously to the earth to cover retreat and the other probed and advanced, he did not know. But his faculties told him he must know soon—must know to live.

As he had found the first messenger he came upon the second, crumpled and sprawled as only one can fall when dead before they reach the earth. Another message was picked up and now he was the bearer of three. Of two who had died and of another man who in a detached way moved and drifted in no-man's-land.

Writers have said that he was lost but he avers not. "I was off my course," he said. In saying this he was talking like a mountaineer, for they are seldom lost, traveling as they do in neither of the cardinal directions, but by natural objects as bearings. He was "off his course" because of the unfamiliar terrain and the smoke.

Forward again, some 30 yards. The rat-tat-tat of machine guns over to his left. He threw himself on his belly and lay pressing his abdomen against the pouch of grenades that did not let him touch the earth. He began now to move slowly in an effort to unload his ammunition, for its bulk under him propped his body up into the whining bullets.

A whistle sounded back of him, near the sunken road. Its significance did not become apparent, for bullets were ricocheting off his helmet, and he was concerned with that. To turn was death. He must keep his head, protected by the helmet, just as it was. That and nothing else, just now.

The whistle again. Still it rang no bell in his mind. He clawed under his body, still attempting to get the grenades out. He wanted them out from under him, not to throw but so that his body could sink more prone on the earth. Finally, with deft fingers and the co-ordinated ease of his body, he removed the grenades.

The whistle sounded again, sharp and clear above the rat-tat-tat and the whine of death. "That was the third time I had heard that whistle, and I recognized it as the captain's. He was standing on the edge of the sunken road and motioning to me, signaling that there were machine guns off to my left. His left hand was moving as a signal. The bullets cut it off at the wrist and he rolled back into the sunken road."

The smoke cleared and he saw the German dugout, only a few yards to his left. And as if by coincidence, when the smoke cleared the rat-tat-tat of the guns slowed and died. The one break, the wholly unexpected and 1000-to-1 piece of luck that could come to the lone figure on the earth of no-man's-land had happened. The guns had died.

"I was scared," said Pete. "Hell, I was scared to death. Don't let nobody tell you they weren't scared in such a case. I don't know what made me do it, but I pulled the pin from a grenade and pitched it in. I pitched it in another and when I had thrown in the third the Germans began 'o pop out.'"

While Pete was pitching hand grenades he was rising to his feet and running crouched toward the emplacements. He was scared, all right, but in a brief moment came courage—the courage that lifts a man above fear of death. "I might have made it back to the sunken road, all right, but I never thought of it," he said.

The third grenade brought Germans out of their dugout and no sooner out than Pete was upon them with his bayonet.

"I took 17 out, but I left seven of 'em lying there dead." When he came to this part of the story he arose from the tilted chair against the porch post and went into the house. In a moment he was back. In his mind he was going over the struggle anew, and the turmoil in his soul had wrenched him to his feet. He sat down again and talked.

Germans now were swarming out of the dugout and crying "Kamerad! Kamerad!" "Kamerad, hell, it was just Pete," he said, wryly. He took the enemies' guns and went down into the place. A German was lying, suspiciously inert and Pete kicked him with his boot. "He was dead, all right," he said.

In recounting the story of the struggle Pete is laconic and brief as if he would hurry it from his mind. All the detail of rounding up the enemy is lacking but when the disarmed Germans were on their way back to the 119th regiment, it becomes more detailed and clear.

The Germans marched in front, the grim mountaineer from Brushy Fork of Johns Creek behind with ready arms. They came to the sunken road and he picked up the body of his wounded captain. He was still under the exhilaration of battle as he carried the bleeding and semi-conscious officer, watching his prisoners and prodding them back towards the American lines.

"Blood from the captain was running all over my clothes," he remembers. "It made me sick and weak. I made the Germans carry the captain back." The exultation of battle and the spirit of Valhalla were gone and he was again common clay.

When he arrived at the advance posts of the American lines he was relieved of his prisoners and the wounded officer. His clothes and pack, now shreds from German bullets, were examined by an officer. There were 177 bullet holes in them.

A detachment went out immediately. Although told that it was unnecessary for him to do so, Pete refused to stay behind. They went out there to the wrecked emplacements and viewed the signs of struggle and death. After confirming the carnage wrought he proceeded with his original mission to contact the 118th. Without mishap contact was re-established between the two segments of the 30th Division.

Somewhat later he was gassed and wounded but the Armistice was signed and Pete came back to the States, a hero. Down in Georgia he stood in line for over two hours awaiting the pleasure of a functionary to present him with a medal. "I was sick and ready to fall out," he said. At last the officer came to Pete and as the evidence of illness and fatigue were apparent in his face he said, "Why didn't you tell me you were ready to fall out?"

Pete hadn't told him or anyone else. He wanted to get it over with. Today he is so uninterested in the decorations that he can't remember the name of the general who honored him. This decoration was the Distinguished Service Cross. France had already given him the Croix de Guerre.

The citation read: "Citation for bravery. General Headquarters. From: The Adjutant General, A.E.F.

To: Commanding General 30th Division

"Subject: Decorations. For extraordinary heroism in action near Bellicours, France, 29th Sept. 1918 unexpectedly encountering seven of the enemy, Pvt. Pete McCoy, single-handed killed them all with his bayonet and hand grenades. As the result of this feat he captured four hostile machine gun emplacements and took seventeen prisoners out of a dugout nearby. Upon advancing further he found a wounded officer whom he sent to the rear in charge of another soldier and continued on to the objective."

Any slight deviation from Pete's story and the official citation are chargeable to the commanding general. The events of that day are too indelible on his mind to be much in error.

After his discharge, Pete hurried home to Brushy Fork. He wanted no part of glory and the public stare or big money either. He laughed at offers of almost fantastic prices to appear on the stage.

The Pike County News of July 4, 1919 published a story about him under the headline: "Pete McCoy, War Hero Here Today." It stated that he would speak and relate his exploit. But there was no speech. They hadn't consulted Pete.

He married Coon Ratliff, a daughter of James Ratliff, farmer. They went to housekeeping on the ancestral McCoy Branch. Financial reverses came, reverses that he could have overcome with a month's appearance on the road with some shoddy show, but Pete did not choose the easy way. He acquired another farm at the mouth of Ratliff Branch of Brushy and here he and Coon reared three children—two girls, Margaret and Bertha Marie, and one son, James Clinton.

An only son oftentimes is a boon companion and as James grew into manhood he was the object of more than the paternal affection from Pete. Like father, like son, the old adage says. Indeed the son was a younger Pete, a good companion, interested in hunting and the ordinary activities, like his father, that existed in life on Brushy Fork. He married Margaret Lowe from an old settler family of Johns Creek. They have no children.

Three years ago James went squirrel hunting. It was Aug. 20. Pete were old would be found a correct diagnosis.

There were consultations, X-rays and examinations. At last one morning they stood in the doctor's office and Pete was called into another room. He was told there was no hope, that the optic nerves were destroyed and that no miracle of science could restore his son's sight. The son, the doctor said, should be told the truth.

Pete had faced death in his time but to stand by his son and tell him there was no hope was more than he could do. After an appeal from Pete the doctor himself consented to convey the dread message.

These three stood together in the inner room of the office and the doctor talked. He said: "Son, you will never see, again, in this world." When he ceased there was silence for a moment. At last the son said quietly: "Pay the doctor, Dad. I may not see in this world but I'll see again."

The old doctor had seen the whitening of the boy's face as the words found meaning in his mind but had seen, too, the sudden, stern control as courage came to him. Courage—like father, like son. "Young man, there will be no fee. I would rather suffer the loss of my right arm than charge you," he said.

Tragedy and shattered hopes were theirs but men with courage brush the past away and build anew. Pete and his son are building a new life—and a new house. A house for the son. Even though the father lives in a comfortable and well-furnished house, it is a log cabin. He could build a new house for himself but he would rather build for James. The one he is building is well-appointed and has spacious rooms.

Sally, the giant collie, and Dinah, the mule, are James' chief aids to locomotion and traveling about the farm. If he wants to leave his home and go over to his father's porch he grasps the dog by the tail and they sally forth. If a mule-back trip is in mind the dog leads him to the barn door where old Dinah will put her head in the bridle. If Sally is not with him, he calls for her to bark at the gate so he can find it with the aid of his cane.

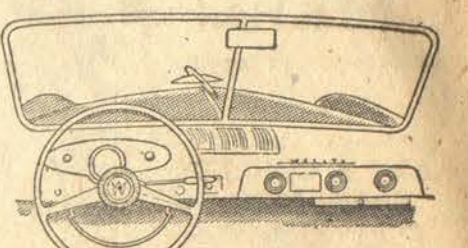

So life for the family goes on, but it is not a life exactly like yours or mine. It is a life they built themselves when the foundations of old were washed away. Its base today is courage, compassion and unity around the hearthstones of two houses that have become one home.

Cats Drop First Game; Face Pikeville Here Friday Night

Prestonsburg's Black Cats last Friday night permitted their goal line to be crossed for the first time this season, and that one crossing was all that the Jenkins high school Cavaliers needed to score the biggest football upset in the Big Sandy Conference.

Jenkins won the game, 7 to 6, and it was that close all the way. Prestonsburg scored first and failed to convert. Jenkins scored and the conversion attempt was good. And that was it.

The big Cat line failed to function with its usual effectiveness, permitting the invaders' forwards to pour through and harass the ball-carrier and to rush Prestonsburg's stellar quarterback, Delmar Hughes on every pass attempt. It was a matter of passing on the run for Hughes. Yet he made good on six of 11 tosses for gains totaling 127 yards.

Apparently, the Black Cat were "down" at the time when they needed to be "up." That and a determined Jenkins defense kept the offense floundering at points when a quick opening, a long dash or a successful pass would have meant a score.

After a scoreless opening period, Prestonsburg scored early in the second quarter. Chester Shepherd intercepted a pass hurled by Ricketts, Jenkins quarterback, and the Cats scored with an ease that deceived the big crowd into thinking this one, too, would be easy. On the fourth play after the interception Delmar Hughes went across from the three. The snap from center for the place-kick was high and the kick after the ball was hurriedly placed down was wide.

In the third quarter Jenkins marched 80 yards for its marker, Ricketts completed four of five passes. Ricketts plunged across from the two and his kick split the uprights.

In a determined effort to pull the game out of the fire in closing minutes of the contest, the Cats started from their own five with Hughes hitting Johnny Hill for a 40-yard gain, then himself dashing 30 yards to the Jenkins 25. After two more run attempts failed, Hughes faded back to pass. Again the Prestonsburg forward wall leaked. The Jenkins line surged through to smother Hughes as the gun ended the game.

First downs were 12 for each team. The Cats attempt tomorrow night (Friday) to get back in the win column against the undefeated Panthers of Pikeville high school. The game will be played here, and this week Coach "Doc" Ferrell was giving his squad some of its toughest practise sessions in preparation for this one.

already attracted visitors numbering more than the average here. Reservoir Manager said estimates based on spot checks, count of autos and boats and other observations at various points of access had the total on that date as 511,539 since Jan. 1. The total for the year will climb far ahead of that of last year, it was predicted, with improved fishing and the duck-hunting season drawing larger crowds of sportsmen.

Because of the continued drought which has cut down the inflow of water into the reservoir, and the necessity of keeping a certain volume of water flowing in Johns Creek below the dam, the lake has fallen approximately a foot. No provision for storage of more water to meet such conditions has ever been made.

If, claim local supporters of the plan for a minimum of at least five feet more water during the dry season, gas companies in the area would give their cooperation, this much water could be added with little expense and with minor alterations in control installations at the dam.

Hagewood Re-Appointed To Water Commission; Dog Control Talked

Russell Hagewood, cashier of the First National Bank here, was re-appointed by the City Council Tuesday evening to the Prestonsburg Gas & Water Commission. The other two members of the Commission are Burl Spurlock and Leroy Combs.

A proposal by Councilman Watt Hale that the city construct and maintain a dog pound failed of passage. The idea grew out of the poisoning last week in West Prestonsburg of upwards of a dozen dogs.

The Council did, however, decide to invoke the power of an ordinance enacted some time ago, beginning November 1, and will order police to kill all dogs in the corporate limits which are permitted to run at large and which have not been immunized against hydrophobia.

or foundation for the suit," the defendants pointed out that Section 67.110, Kentucky Revised Statutes, provides that Justices of the Peace shall be paid $6 a day for each day of fiscal court attendance and for each day they serve in supervising the county roads in their respective districts.

The suit makes these allegations: 1. Stumbo, Roberts and Burchett each received for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946 $1,200 "supposedly" for attending 200 meetings of the fiscal court, and May received $594 for a "supposed" 99 meetings. 2. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947 each received $1,200, "supposedly" for attending 200 meetings of said fiscal court at the rate of $6 per diem. 3. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948 each received $300 for a "supposedly" 30 meetings at the rate of $10 per diem and in addition received $1,200 each for Committee service.

4. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949 each received $300 for court attendance and $1,200 for Committee service. 5. For the last six months of their term which ended Dec. 31, 1949, Roberts received $756; May, $750; Burchett, $756; and Stumbo, $750. The suit ascribes these amounts as pay for fiscal court meetings.

"Every meeting of the fiscal court appears of record on the fiscal court order book," said Judge Stumbo. The official said he was as puzzled as anybody else about the references to the large number of fiscal court meetings claimed in the suit.

It was pointed out by the defendants that on Jan. 18, 1943 an order was entered appointing the Magistrate a committee to supervise the roads in their respective districts at the rate of $6 per day. The same order was again entered April 1, 1947. They added that the allegation that they received $10 a day for fiscal court attendance is untrue, that records show they received only $6 a day.

fourth in casualties and cost in the history of the United States. "If our defense effort is too small, we are in danger; if it is too large, we threaten the economic stability of our country," he said.

Cooper attacked the freight differential existing between this and other coal fields, classing it as discriminatory and ruinous to the industry in this section. He assailed this freight rate as existing under the Democratic party and also jibed at the lien required of recipients of old age assistance. He claimed the "old folks got their money without giving a lien on their property" when the Republican Congress enacted the law providing such aid. "Nobody ought to make them afraid in the sunset of their lives," he added, referring to the lien.

Cooper said he put his country first in casting his vote as a Senator on various pieces of legislation and pointed out that he voted for 188 bills for veterans.

"I do not believe in America being Santa Claus for the rest of the world," said Mr. Clark, Prestonsburg's Mayor who seeks to unseat Congressman Carl D. Perkins. He urged that this country send tanks and guns but not its boys overseas. "The war in Korea would have been over 10 months ago, but for President Truman's prisoner of war policy," he declared.

Clark hit out at Congressman Perkins, alleging that Perkins did not protest the use of diesel oil by trains which reduces the section's coal market and that the Congressman represented Alabama interests in his protests against TVA use of gas for fuel.

He advocated $50 a month for needy aged persons who are not now receiving old-age benefits.

W. M. Darby, county Republican chairman, introduced both speakers. A $5-per-plate fund-raising dinner planned by Floyd county Republicans will be held Oct. 18 at the Keatley Theatre building in Martin, with former Attorney General Eldon S. Dummit as speaker. Senator Nixon, the GOP candidate for Vice-President, has been asked to appear as a speaker.

Many a Party Candidate Deserves Nonpartisan Vote

(Editorial from Life Magazine)

In 1946 Kentucky did itself and the nation a great service by sending Republican John S. Cooper, 51, to the Senate where he speedily made a reputation for fairness in domestic and farsightedness in foreign affairs. Despite labor support he was beaten in '48 and was thereupon drafted by the State Department as consultant and U. N. delegate. He is one Republican candidate for office who can criticize Democratic foreign policy from the inside. This he is doing with force and precision. If elections were won solely on character and intelligence, he would be a shoo-in. Unfortunately his opponent, the faceless Senator Underwood, is backed by the extremely effectively Clements machine.

REA NOTES

Rural Electrification Administration was established in 1935. The purpose of REA, as it is called, was to lend money to the power companies in the United States to build power lines to the homes of rural people. But for some reason this program did not work out successfully. So, in 1937, the first Rural Electric Co-op were formed. These co-ops were made up of farmers who were interested in getting electricity to their homes as quickly as possible. Now, these co-ops serve 3,500,000 consumers in the United States.

Mr. and Mrs. Gale Music, of Bonanza, were the lucky winners of a complete water system for their home. They had won a kit of tools at the annual meeting at Prestonsburg in July of this year. Their names went to Louisville to the State Fair to win a water system.

In 1935 only 10.2 percent of the farms of the United States had electricity; now, 83.6 percent have electricity. These farms will never go back to the "good old days" when there was no electricity to be had at the farm. The comforts of the city have been brought to the farm. These conveniences are responsible for relieving the crowded conditions of the city.

Miss Ella Faye Faulkner, who won the title MISS BIG SANDY, has entered school again. She is a sophomore at Maytown.

The state of Kentucky became a part of the rural electrification movement. Now there are 27 rural electric co-ops in the state with an organization known as State Wide. This Association, known as The Kentucky Rural Electric Co-operative Corporation, is located in Louisville, Ky., and performs a great number of free services for its member co-ops. However, only 23 co-ops belong to this organization.

This discussion brings us to the Big Sandy Rural Electric Co-operative Corporation which serves 3,500 members of the rural areas of Floyd, Johnson, Martin, Lawrence and Knott counties. It has a potential membership of 6,000.

Big Sandy REA believes in services to its members at cost. It has as its goal: Electricity at cost and complete satisfaction for all its members.

The management invites you, the members and owners of your local co-op, to come in and visit with us. The records are open for your inspection. We want you to know your co-op and to find out for yourself that it is being operated honestly and efficiently.

IT'S AGIN THE LAW

Speaking of politics, the subject has received so much attention in this shop that the boys go together last Thursday and decided to do something about it. They set up a set of rules.

This was done while I was absent, and Thursday night we worked in a depressing sort of silence that had me wondering if there had been a difference between the fellows more serious than a mere variance of opinion.

Then one eased up to me and in a whisper—afraid for the others to hear—informed me that the mere mention of politics in the back end of the place would penalize the offender to the tune of a coke for everybody present.

P. S. There has been no coke shortage around this place. By gosh, it's worth a quarter sometimes just to get to speak your mind.

Four things are certain: Death, taxes, the fish aren't (or are) biting—and you can't chew up bubble gum.

The Taxpayer's Case

Mr. Taxpayer, we want to talk to you. Yes, you. Just listen in your easy chair for some minutes while the Taxpayers League states a case. Perhaps it is only a new angle to an old case, but we want you to listen to it.

We begin by stating our case for you. You must remember we are pleading your case before the bar of public opinion and before the courts. It is our case, too, as we are taxpayers like you. It is the Taxpayers' case against anything and everybody that does not represent our interest.

This case has many faces. One face is turned toward the Prestonsburg courthouse and inevitably the Court of Appeals where we are prosecuting a case in the taxpayers' interest.

There are other faces to this case of the taxpayers against all of the things we argue are against your interest. One face of the case is vote-buying. If there was ever a condition that outrages the feelings of decent men and women it is vote-buying and selling. Plenty of people have done it. Yes, but plenty of people, ashamed of the corrupt practice, have quit. Time everybody quit buying and selling. If there were no buyers, there would be no sellers.

In our case we plead, too, that the money paid into the sheriff's hand for taxes and winds up in the county treasury should be spent wisely. If we could we would write the word wisely in box-car letters. It is not spent wisely when it is wasted. It is not spent wisely when some man works a few hours on a road and turns in triple time and is paid. It is not spent wisely when it is given as payment to a contractor for dubious services. Some state this is not done in Floyd county. As to that we do not plead, but we state the matter to show you some of the things we intend to plead, if need be, in your case.

The defense propagandists state we should not have sued Woodrow Burchett until we could have sued others. We answer that by saying we are not out to "get" anybody. We are out to clean Floyd county up. If we sue one now and no other suit is brought for a while it does not mean we have quit. It means we are digging for money to carry on the fight. This very week we got together enough money to hire an auditor. Yes, we are hiring an auditor despite the fact that the fiscal court hired one. That's their audit with which we would have cooperated on your terms, but since we couldn't we let them take their audit and we will take ours.

We asked our attorney, Jesse K. Lewis, of Lexington, to procure for us an auditor of unquestioned integrity. Only this week he called to give us the name of a prominent accountant in Louisville who would meet our requirements. Two of our directors went to Louisville this week to discuss price. We think we have money enough to meet the obligation. That money is yours, of course. We begged it from you. The money paying the courthouse auditors is your money, too—your tax money.

We have one of the best lawyers money can procure. He is the man who cleaned up Henderson county and forced the sheriff there to resign. He has a record we are proud to offer you. Your money hired him. We begged it from you. The Hon. Jack Howard represents the fiscal court in the Burchett suit. If he is getting a fee it is your tax money that pays him. Looks like for awhile you are going to pay "going and coming." Well, you've been doing it for years and didn't know it. Now you know it.

Don't let anybody tell you that we will fold up after the next primary. We have self-respect, honor and integrity just like the rest of the people. We expect to live in Floyd county and here our good names are at stake. The only way to keep faith is to clean Floyd county up. Just give us time and help.

We have lived "in the woods" long enough. Vote buying, vote selling, excess salary payments, wasted tax money, and all other reprehensible practices are things that belong, not in a civilized community but in those dreary years of the past when men were learning the simple and fundamental processes of democracy. We have learned. Those things are not in our book. We want our children to learn of them as history, not as a present-day practices of Floyd county democracy.

Help us to clean Floyd county up. Help us by contributions and faith in our honor and integrity. By virtue of an united will we can succeed.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

Western Kentucky Teachers' College Bowling Green, Ky.

'I Wish Somebody'd Come'

One of the girls that I knew at Fidelity used to say a piece on Friday afternoons that had a refrain like the title of today's article, "I wish somebody'd come!" As you could guess, it was the lonesome cry of a child that felt itself shut off from the big world because of its own loneliness. Since I liked the girl who said the piece, it had a double meaning for me: once for the poem itself and another one for the speaker. It always brought back to me some of my loneliness, a loneliness that seems father comic now, when I recall how we lived with the privacy of a goldfish; for our house was small, our family was large, and there was a constant procession of people coming for the doctor and coming to sit till bedtime and just coming. In spite of this busy life, so much more busy after the day's work is over than my professional life has been after school hours, I got lonely. Maybe it was not lonely so much as bored with the year-to-year sameness of experience. Like our neighbor boy, we were doing "not much o' nothin'."

Every boy, I suppose, has become bored with his surroundings. Ham and eggs for breakfast, with quantities of sweet milk added, merely to wash the food down; abundant dinners, topped off nearly every day with pies and cakes and canned fruits and such like; afternoon snacks that should have made us have no desire for supper but didn't; work, not too hard but rather steady, for five and a half days a week, long before we had heard of labor unions and their limited hours; clothes good enough for all uses we had for them, always somewhere to go and a horse, with or without a buggy, to use—these were regarded as just natural things, nothing extra. But, after all, our horses were just nags, with trace-chains rubs on their sides, and often with cockleburrs in their manes and tails. We wanted chargers or war-horses or something else fine that we had read about. Everywhere around us were good, honest people, but they seemed so drab and so commonplace. When the weekly county paper came, and we had our fling at it, only a brief time was necessary to devour all its contents, including every advertisement and our own contributions as the country correspondent. When our pulp magazines came, once a month, again there was not much time to be killed in reading the serials and catching on breaths when the installment ended at the most dramatic places. Our small stock of books, some of them good and others tiresome, had been read so much that they were tedious in most places. We knew all the answers. When we could borrow a sugary novel, the only kind we had a chance to read, we soon exhausted all our supply of tears and were left dry-eyed to face feeding the stock and plowing corn and cutting wood and putting up fences. A visit to Fidelity to look in on the loafers' 'int was usually hard to manage, because Father doubted the wisdom of letting growing boys hang around such a place. Even when we wangled a trip to buy or sell something, the tedious yarns of the old-timers often left us as heart-hungry as when we went. After a time a fellow just gets bored and stays bored.

People came, of course, too many of them for comfort. But they had had chills and fevers or biliousness and needed some calomel and quinine; there was only rarely the excitement of seeing Father sew up a cut slashed open by a broadaxe or set an arm that had been thrown out of place or yank out a particularly stubborn tooth. Cousins came by the buggy or wagon load, but they were so much more sophisticated than we that we rarely knew whether to be glad or sorry, and it would not have made any difference anyway. The people we wanted to come rarely came, new people or people with new ideas or new yarns. A ninety-ninth cousin came by one week-end and gave me a host of yarns that I have bored my students with awe ever since I started teaching. He was either the greatest yarn-spinner I ever knew or the greatest natural-born liar; I would not like to decide after all these years. Our peripatetic-clock tinkers, preachers, pack-peddlers, et al—all helped relieve the tedium occasionally, but there were always long, desert-like spaces in our lives when "nobody interesting came around, when time hung heavy upon us, when we heartily wished that somebody'd come.

Says Wonderful Things About You!

The instant your beautiful Cadillac points its crest into view, it begins to say wonderful things about you.

It says, almost as plainly as if the words were written out, that you are a person of achievement in your own world of affairs.

It talks of your good judgment and your splendid taste—and indicates your sense of responsibility for those who ride with you as passengers, or drive beside you in the traffic lanes.

It speaks of your family and home and your way of life—and, in general, paves the way for the respect of those you encounter as you sit at its wheel.

This is true because those who own Cadillacs form a virtual "Who's Who" of America's highways. In almost every community in the country, it is obvious that Cadillac is the favored car of the leading people.

The reason for this, of course, is found in the history of the car itself.

For fifty years, it has been the unwavering purpose to make Cadillac as fine a car as it is practical to produce. Goodness has always been the watchword—craftsmanship has always been the creed.

As a result, Cadillac has long been known and accepted as—"The Standard of the World." And, inevitably, people who want and seek the finest have turned to Cadillac.

That's why the man who sits at the wheel of a Cadillac is an accepted member of the most distinguished motoring family to be found anywhere.

If you are ready for membership in this incomparable group, better come in and see us soon. We'd be happy to welcome you at any time.

IT'S A GOOD WORLD

BY WILMAY

It is a glorious day when some of the faculty members from Wayland and Garrett get to eat dinner with Mrs. M. M. Collins, of Lackey, as was the case last Friday. Everyone who knows "Miss Biddie" regards her as a wonderful person, but only those who have sampled her fare can truly appreciate her ability in the field of culinary art. She insists that Rose, Scott's wife, is equally accomplished, and we can now vouch for the fact.

When Mr. Price and Mr. Clark mentioned how they approve of homes inviting the teachers out to dinner, as was often done in the good, old days, believe it or not, every lady present seconded the motion, and went so far as to agree that this be included in the column! There are many reasons that make it sad to see this old-time custom disappearing.

We recall the time when the Maytown faculty dined with Uncle John and Aunt Laura Allen in Warco one evening. Three men sat in the swing before the meal. But after the supper that same swing broke with no one in it except dear, old Mr. Harry Cooley. If that does not prove teachers are underpaid, what will?

All joking aside, we must say that Charles Clark is one of the nicest young men it has been our privilege to meet in come time. We have had the pleasure of knowing others in his family but never met him till this summer.

Thanks to the kind reader who sends material, but won't you drop a note with your name? School work and other activities have us almost too busy at present to do justice to any topic, but we appreciate having the interest of others.

An outstanding engineer believes America has entered a golden age of progress. He is confident we are living in a period of history when gigantic changes and enormous advancement will take place. No one objects to this. It is a good sign, provided we keep our feet on the ground and remember from whom all blessings come. But unless our spiritual development can catch up and maintain pace with our scientific progress, with the intellectual growth, we need to keep in mind that man can destroy himself.

The moral decline has created a spiritual vacuum, and we need to remind ourselves that every great nation in the history of the world has lost her power and sunk into oblivion after internal decay occurred. Fenton Turk predicts increasing cultural development and points out that we spent more on classical music concerts than on baseball games last year, twice as much for books as we did 10 years ago. They are good indications, but when we spent five times as much for liquor as for education and Christianity combined—twice as much for tobacco as for all religious purposes, at home and abroad—we need to take inventory and see whether a cultural veneer, an intellectual snobbishness, luxuries, amusements, pleasure, etc., come first in our hearts or if the God who gave America her wonderful beginning is still the choice of a majority of our citizens. We can worship idols in America, the same as in Japan, and the almighty dollar is the idol of too many of us today. God gets what is left over, in time, money, talents and service.

Four world governments have risen to power in history, to be followed by subjection and decline. Daniel prophesied a fifth and last, when he interpreted the dream of the old King, Empires of the Babylonians, the Medes and Persians, of the Greeks and the Romans were all wiped off the map. Where and whose will the fifth be, and what will its ultimate destiny become? Can America turn back to God and lead the world His way or must crass materialism characterize us?

SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

Assistant Attorney General W. Keller called upon schools boards to see that such funds be handled through local boards.

TO MY FRIENDS, THE PEOPLE OF THE 5th EDUCATION DIVISION:

In a recent article submitted to The Times our County Superintendent while disavowing any political ties took it upon himself to, nevertheless, offer his unqualified support of my opponent. Does this gesture contain any political connection? If there is no politics in this move when are we to assume that Mr. Turner is completely satisfied with the present political policies that the members he is supporting, are following? Let us look over a few of these policies and see whether they are policies for our students' welfare and determine whether they are satisfactory or not:

According to Mr. Turner's article, as I see it, the County Board members are resolved to allow our schools to remain "run-down," continue to offer salaries to teachers that result in our having to accept "emergency teachers" year after year (never offering these teachers enough to make it possible for them to go back to school and finish their educational training.) And in spite of this emergency situation we do not have shop teachers at Garrett or Wayland. Teachers are paid after they have worked their full month, gotten their monthly reports in and after: THE COUNTY BOARD MEETS ON THE FIRST TUESDAY, or some other day they choose, IN THE FOLLOWING month. In addition to this practice the teachers are not given their checks. Instead the present practice is to deposit their checks in some bank because it is feared the teacher will keep their checks and not cash them in a hurry. This supposition is that the teachers get enough to live on from month to month when everybody knows THEY DO NOT. Some schools have dire cases of fire hazards that remain in the same condition year after year and as far as I can ascertain they are going to remain that way until the people raise their voices and demand improvements. Seldom, if ever, do the County Board members take it upon themselves to visit our schools and survey the needs that are so sorely needed. These neglects have been "conscientiously and diligently" performed by the members that Mr. Turner has extended his unqualified support to.

Personally, I have no quarrel with any member of the present administration. I have nevertheless, decided to seek a position on the School Board because I am willing to set down in black and white the things I will truly work for, and for which I shall pursue relentlessly because the people want their children, and I want my children, to have the things that they are entitled to, and for which we are paying our taxes.

It is time for all of us to cease talking in generalities and get down to the job at hand. Year after year we hear of the needs and the improvements that are coming but with each passing year the conditions remain as they are. We have said, "Someday we shall have better schools and finer citizens." If that day is to come it should be soon and now.

1. I shall offer as my Platform the following proposals:

1. County Board meetings open to the public.
2. School buildings in A-1 condition.
3. Teachers' pay according to that prescribed by leading educational leaders.
4. Teachers paid upon completion of their school month and by check to the teachers themselves.
5. Immediate erection of fire escapes wherever they are needed.
6. School bus schedules that will get the children to and from school quickly and safely.
7. Cooperative planning for the creation of a centralized vocational center to which we can send our youth that usually drop out of school before they have received their diplomas. Many of our young people are unable to go on to college and need to learn some trade that will enable them to make a living after they leave school and are ready to begin their life's work.
8. Promote better health and safeguards in our schools.

Furthermore, I shall seek information from you, the voters, on what you think our schools need and together we can gain all the objectives that can only be gotten through sincerity and determined efforts.

I am happy to say to you that I owe no one anything for support in this attempt to put myself in the services of the people of Floyd county. I have a son in the public schools and would have him, together with your children, get the fullest measure of our combined efforts to prepare our youth for the future that lies before them.

YOU CAN BE SURE THAT a vote for me is a vote for the future of all the children in our county.

SOIL CONSERVATION

By L. R. JOHNSON
Soil Conservation Service

The farmers of Floyd county are showing increasing interest in Soil Conservation. A total of 21 farm plans were written for the month of August—eight initial and four advanced and eight basic plans. The basic plans take in consideration every acre of a given farm.

The interest in drainage work is increasing in the county in spite of the dry weather. H. B. Patrick drained a 10-acre field with 1,125 feet of tile on Abbott Creek. E. L. Reffett put in 665 feet of tile at Langley. We also staked tile lines for Gilbert Ray on left Abbott, Lee Justice on Buffalo, Nero Ousley up Middle Creek, and Ben Maynard on Mare Creek. John Stephens and Edgar Bingham began working on their drainage problems by cutting 1,000 feet of open ditch. Approximately 60 farmers have plans for tile drainage this fall as soon as the crops are harvested.
