NEW INSURANCE PLAN

Saw Judge Turner today, and hearing squirrel-hunting mentioned, asked him if he'd been lost yet this year. No, he said, he hadn't, adding that Doc Allen didn't get far enough from base to get lost. This reminds me that Joe Stanley has asked me to join in organizing the Lost John Insurance Company since his fellow-worker, Wesley Campbell, strayed over a large section of Kentucky. I'm almost sold on the proposition, if it will cover fishermen.

NICE GOING

The Times abjectly apologizes for a statement it made, once upon a time, to the effect that state police arrive only after the accident has occurred and the dead and injured are carried away. We would like to atone for that by saying State Troopers Armistead and Howard, who are operating now in this county, are doing a good job as they clamp down on drunk drivers. We need not remind them, I suppose, that more of these puffed-up drivers belong in jail.

OUT IN THE CRUEL, COLD WORLD

A number of youngsters last Monday morning fell from high estate. They ceased to be babies as they started off to school for the first time. The poor, little tykes now are more or less on their own. But if they could, or would, only profit from the mistakes millions of other starters-out made before them, it wouldn't be so tough. . . . If I were asked to suggest one thing needed for a boy-child thus faring forth, I'd make it an extra pocket. A mere four aren't enough to ac-

THEFT OF CAR FEDERAL CASE

For 3 Local Youths As Moles Auto Found In Williamson, W. Va.

Three West Prestonsburg youths face the federal charge of transporting an automobile across state lines as a result of the theft here, Wednesday night of last week, of the automobile of Lon S. Moles, C. & O. agent.

The car was recovered next day, undamaged, in Williamson, W. Va. The trio, Joe W. Hyden, Claude E. Wallen and Billy Ray Chaffins, were arrested, it was said here, while attempting to take another car in Williamson. The Moles car had run out of gasoline.

They were taken to Huntington, W. Va., by an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Another stolen car, that of David B. Leslie, of Prestonsburg, was recovered in Indiana. It had been sideswiped and slightly damaged.

THREE SCHOOL SYSTEMS TIFF OVER TUITION

Disagreement with Knott Cuts Lackey Enrollment; Agreement Here Lacking

A disagreement over the amount of tuition Knott shall pay for instruction of its pupils in Floyd grade and high schools already has emptied two rooms of the Lackey school and threatens to disturb the Prestonsburg high school situation. County Superintendent V. O. Turner said the new minimum foundation law provides that the state pay tuition to the county where the child attends school rather than to the county of his residence which in turn itself formerly paid the tuition. Thus Floyd county would receive approximately $13,000 for the instruction of Knott pupils attending the Lackey, Garrett and Wayland schools this year instead of the $9,000 collected from Knott county last year.

Superintendent Turner said Beckham Combs, Knott county Superintendent, is contending his school system cannot afford such a figure for tuition, which reduces the net received from equalization. Turner said Floyd county has not asked for pay from Knott county above that allowed by the state, but Knott county claims it has.

Forty-six Knott students attended the Lackey school last year. As of this week, some of these pupils were being transported by the Knott system to its own grade schools on Jones Fork, some still were in school at Lackey and still others were not in school at all. Knott county proposes next year to transport all its pupils now attending the Wayland and Garrett high school, it was said.

It, said Chalmers H. Frazier, superintendent of Prestonsburg schools, the Floyd system is asking money in addition to the $13,000 coming from the equalization fund under minimum foundation program for teaching Knott pupils, it is exactly right. For, he explained, Knott county still is paid per capita on these pupils and their parents pay their school taxes to Knott county.

So argues Mr. Frazier in con-

SHEEP BUYING IS CONTINUING

14 Registered Rams Arrive; Two Carloads On Way from Wyoming

Farmers of this county were continuing their sheep purchases this week, it was noted when 14 registered rams were delivered here. The sheep were bought from Willow Brooks and Beechwood farms in Garred and Shelby counties. Virgil Smith, of Allen, delivered the rams early in the week to the farmers. Several more have been ordered, County Agent O. E. Boggs said.

The first two cars of sheep to be shipped from Buffalo, Wyo., left that point last Thursday. One car will be unloaded at Royalton as it has several head consigned to Magoffin county farmers, and the second car will be moved to Prestonsburg since the sheep in that car are all consigned to Floyd farmers. Farmers will be notified in advance of the cars' arrival.

The first of the scheduled community meetings of Floyd farmers will be held at Bonanza, Friday. The meets, at which will be discussed strawberries, sheep and the latest research on various subjects currently of interest, will continue all through the month. County Agent Boggs has released the following schedule: Mare Creek, Sept. 7; Banner, Sept. 8; Head of Prater, Sept. 10; Toler, Sept. 20; Spruce Pine, Sept. 21; Maytown, Sept. 22 and Brainerd, Sept. 27. Community meets through the week of Sept. 13 to 18 will be omitted because of the Floyd county fair, scheduled for Sept. 16, 17 and 18.

Buyers of the Hampshire rams were given as Gale Music, Graham Calhoun, Virgil Smith, Robert Younce, Morrow Hatfield, Rowland Cline, James A. Allen, W. W. Cooley, Russell Rice, Miles Whittaker, Frank DeRossett, Paul Dotson and Johnny James. All were purchasers of one each except Cline who ordered two.

Fire Loss Here Placed at $60-$70,000

Mining Institute's Fry Attended by Large Crowd

Approximately 1,500 persons attended the annual fish fry of the Big Sandy Mining Institute which was held Saturday night at the Drift ball park.

A floor show, which featured dancers and instrumental music, was a feature of the evening's program.

An untoward event of the evening was the destruction by fire of the temporary kitchen erected on the baseball field for the frying of fish. Just as the last of the fish were fried, grease caught fire and the building was leveled before the Martin fire department arrived.

JUNK DEALER SUES McCOY

Accuses His Competitor With Interference; Wife Of Music Sues for $7,500

Claiming a competitor through employees interfered with his business, Donald Horn, doing business as the Horn Brothers Junk Company, filed suit Friday in the Floyd circuit court against Charles McCoy, doing business as the Mountain Metal Company, asking $5 actual damages and $5,000 punitive damages.

The complaint prepared by Robert S. Wellman, Prestonsburg attorney, claims that on or about last May 10 agents and employees of McCoy drove his trucks onto property Horn had leased from Bradis Goble for a junkyard near Lancer, and that they solicited contracts for the purchase of scrap and other materials from persons who were on the premises for the purpose of entering into contract with Horn. It also is alleged that the defendant's employees parked their trucks on the premises and "in a defiant manner proceeded to violate the rights of plaintiff in the peaceful pursuit of his business. . . ." The suit adds that acts of the defendant continued till peace officers arrived and placed his employees under arrest.

Another suit, filed last Thursday is that of Mrs. Janice Music, of Auxier, in which she seeks $7,500 damages of the Moore Funeral Home and its manager, Franklin Moore. The action grew out of the death last March of her husband, Claude Odell Music. The plaintiff claims she "requested and ordered" Mr. Moore not to embalm the body of her husband but that he did so without regard to her instructions. Alleging that the action was unlawful, Mrs. Music seeks to recover "for injury to her feelings resulting from the said wrongful mishandling of the corpse of her husband."

The suit was prepared by the law firms of Tackett & Tackett, of Prestonsburg, and Burke & Burke, Pikeville.

FEDERAL AID IS FORBIDDEN

New Law Denies Help On Food Distribution, Is Word from Perkins

Replying to a letter County Judge Henry Stumbo and County Attorney Hollie Conley wrote him, asking federal handling of commodity foodstuffs distribution, Congressman Carl D. Perkins wrote last week that Public Law 480, passed by the Congress on July 10, forbids the federal government to pay any expense other than freight to central points within a state.

Perkins termed the limitation fixed by the bill "unfortunate." In view of the fact, he said, cost of distribution will remain an expense of counties and states.

The Floyd officials had pointed out that distribution expenses created an intolerable financial burden for the county.

Congressman Perkins said he had asked the Department of Agriculture to broaden the list of foodstuffs to be supplied the needy, to include other items, particularly bread. Public Law 480 removed the former regulation which restricted commodity foodstuffs to perishable items.

It is estimated that commodity distribution will cost Floyd county about $7,000 this year.

PRESTONSBURG MAN IS SLIGHTLY BURNED AS JOHNSON COUNTY WELL CATCHES FIRE

This was the scene at oil well fire: At left, truck-mounted drilling rig; center, oil well pump; right center, 100-barrel oil storage tank. At right is 2,000-gallon sand-and-oil-mixing tank, belonging to Dowell, Inc., oil well service company. Picture was taken about two hours after the fire started.

When a casing split under 1,000 pound pressure during the petrafrac treatment last Friday morning of an old oil well at Isonville, near Paintsville, fire resulted causing damage estimated at $5,000 to $6,000.

The fire still was not completely under control Wednesday morning said R. L. Ashcraft, Paintsville, station manager for Dowell, Inc.

Oil is used in the petrafrac process which opens oil-producing sands under pressure, and lost in

MINES BUREAU IS EDGING OUT

Of Enforcement Function As State Inspection Work Standards To Be Elevated

The report that the U. S. Bureau of Mines as a mine safety enforcement agency is on the way out has been confirmed.

A committee report which has been approved by the Secretary of Interior delegates the Bureau to the work of research and education in matters of safety and allied subjects.

The committee report said, in part: "It is recommended that the Bureau increase its cooperation with state mine inspection departments, miners and operators, to bring all state inspection services up to the general standard of the Bureau's mine inspections. As this change in state inspection work is accomplished, the need for federal inspection will decrease and eventually cease to exist."

July 1, next year, has been established as the date for full compliance with the recommendations. Already a noticeable slackening of federal inspection activities has been reported in this coal field.

Extensive additions are in the planning for the States Motel here, it was announced this week by H. T. Allen, one of its owners.

The plan is to add 29 units to the motel within the next year, with all units completely air-conditioned and equipped with the most modern furnishings available. Also planned, Mr. Allen added, is a 40 x 60-foot swimming pool for guests.

"Work would have been started on this long ago, but circumstances beyond the owners' control prevented it," Allen added.

When the 29 new units are completed and ready for occupancy, it was said, the present units may be torn down and rebuilt with better materials, with a second story added to these units.

FLAMES GUT AUTO AGENCY BUILDING HERE

Lincoln-Mercury Sales Hit by Fire Wednesday; Suspect Wiring Defect

Fire gutted the Lincoln-Mercury Sales structure on North Lake Drive here, early Wednesday morning, causing damage estimated between $60,000 and $70,000.

Discovered shortly after 4 a.m., the blaze was not brought under complete control till four hours later.

H. B. Ranier, owner of the automobile agency and of the building, said the flames burned out the second story of the structure which extends back a distance of 50 feet over the entire depth of 120 feet, and ruined the first floor. He added that conditions created by smoke and water were such Wednesday that he had been unable to make a complete assessment of the damage.

The fire was ascribed to a wiring defect. The blaze apparently started in the rear of the second-story part of the structure.

Lost in the fire, Mr. Ranier said, were all auto accessories, furniture and fixtures. The roof and floors in the two-story front section of the building were destroyed, he said. Less damage resulted in the shop portion, which is only a single story. The building, shaped in an ell, is 50 feet wide in front and 100 feet in the rear, and is of brick construction. The walls remained intact.

Stored in the building at the time of the fire were 16 automobiles, three of which were new. All these were damaged by smoke and water. The garage wrecker had a rear

Young Hill dived after the girl and when both failed to come up, Hill's father, James Edwin Hill, and a friend recovered both bodies after a short search.

DOG TAGS ARE RECEIVED BY

Warden Cook, of Drift; Drs. Scutchfield Plan 43 Stops To Vaccinate

Roy Cook, of Drift, dog warden for this county, announced this week he has received a supply of dog license tags and that he will make an earnest effort to obtain countywide compliance with the state's new dog law.

"But it's up to the people as to how well the program works," he added. He urged thoughtful consideration of what the program means to the health and safety of the people and to the protection of property. "If the people will do that, I believe we will get their cooperation," he added.

Mr. Cook said he will accompany veterinarians to each community they visit during anti-rabies clinics, starting Sept. 6. Drs. Frank and Beecher Scutchfield will visit 43 points in the county next week to give the new three-year serum. Cook said he will have dog tags with him for sale during the clinics. He also said that if any stray dogs that are a nuisance or a threat are brought to the clinics he will impound them.

Cook already has a sizeable area under fence at Drift for use as a dog pound, and his truck is equipped for the transportation of dogs.

The county's dog program, it was said last week, will enable sheep-growers to insure their flocks at reasonable premium rates, and this is seen as the possible beginning of a flourishing Floyd county sheep industry.

Wayland Rhoads, state supervisor of the Kentucky Dog Act enforcement, conferred here Tuesday with Mr. Cook.

Mrs. Virginia Ward, 88, Native of Lawrence-co., Dies at Daughter's Home

Lake Group Sponsors March of Dimes Dance To Be Held Sept. 11;

In an effort to revitalize the emergency March of Dimes drive in this county, a dance sponsored by the Dewey Lake Association will be held Sept. 11 at the Dewey Lake Inn. To the 8,500 letters sent out by Ray Howard, chairman of the emergency drive responses total only $200. The dance is expected to materially relieve the financial distress of the local chapter.

The Kentucky Barons, an orchestra formerly known as Keith Barts orchestra, will furnish music at the dance. Members of the Association may bring, besides their wives, two couples as guests. Hours are from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tickets will be sold by the Association, and all proceeds will go to the polio fund.

Survey Order Issued On Lake Area Roads; Rights Being Bought

A survey order was issued Monday by W. P. Curlin, highway commissioner, covering 15.4 miles of road in the Dewey Lake area. The official order was read via telephone by Mr. Curlin to Paul Hayes, president of the Dewey Lake Association, the group which is sponsoring the completion of Kentucky 304 from Gulnare to Thomas. The Association passed a resolution last week calling upon the State Highway Commission to finish the road.

Curlin's order encompassed much more than the Association was asking. The survey, in the case of which the federal government is participating on a 50-50 basis, calls for a survey of 10.2 miles from Emma to the mouth of Brushy Creek. An additional 5.2 miles of survey is ordered from the mouth of Brushy to the end of Kentucky 304 at Gulnare, Ky. 304 is bituminous surfaced from its intersection with Highway 119 at the Johns Creek bridge in Pike county to Gulnare. Completion of this section of road would lessen the distance Dewey Lake visitors travel from Pond Creek and Williamson by about 45 miles.

An official of the State Highway Department at Pikeville is negotiating right-of-way purchases from Gulnare to Brushy it was said this week.

Lethargy Could Be Costly Here

With something more than patience the two school boards involved and the people to be affected await a final court decision before merger of the Prestonsburg independent district with the county system is made.

This is not to urge premature action by either board or insistence by the people on action until the court does make its final decision.

Both school boards and most citizens know that educational leaders are unanimously agreed that merger of independent districts with larger systems is the sensible thing to do.

What may turn out to be the biggest strawberry promotion in Eastern Kentucky was indicated this week when Pikeville businessmen planned to meet and discuss the diversion of $30,000 pledged by them from dairying to strawberries.

With neither auditorium nor gymnasium, the county school building badly needs the addition the Prestonsburg district has proposed to build at its own expense.

Then neither board should have any valid objection to the merger, once the court has acted, nor should the people of Prestonsburg.

Why then should there be a long string of delays? Why not get the job done?

It Is Our Defense, Too

It is natural, perhaps, for humans to witness danger from a distance without feeling its full import and without doing anything about their own defenses.

Such is Floyd county's position, just now, when emergency polio funds are being asked, now when most of us are disregarding this urgent plea.

recent months been most fortunate, in that it has not been hit by polio. But other Kentucky counties have suffered from the dread visitation.

And we rather smugly look on, doing little or nothing to provide the funds so badly needed to carry on the treatment of those afflicted by the crippling malady and to further the research that appears on the verge of conquering infantile paralysis.

It can happen here, and it will. Who the next victim will be, and how many there will be, none of us knows.

The scheme to buy the plants cooperatively this year got off to an initial start when Charlie Dixon, Morgan county agent, advised County Agent Boggs here that he wanted to place a minimum order of 100,000 plants now.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE SUPREME LAW

The Bible states that we must abide by the laws of our land—laws formulated and enacted by man. However, these laws would be entirely unnecessary should all the people observe and conduct themselves on the same principles as set forth by Christ in his sermon on the Mount.

What a tremendous and passionate beauty of love and kindness does this great sermon imply! It exemplifies the utmost in ideals—ideals by which Christ wishes us to live.

Were all people to abide by these golden nuggets of wisdom there would be no wars or rumors of wars. There would be no hypocrites—people who profess to be Christians but are unChrist-like in their daily living.

To all of you who have not read the Sermon on the Mount—please do so. You will find therein how your daily living compares with, but falls short of, the teaching laid down by Christ.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D. Western Kentucky Teachers' College Bowling Green, Ky.

"JUST A LITTLE BETTER"

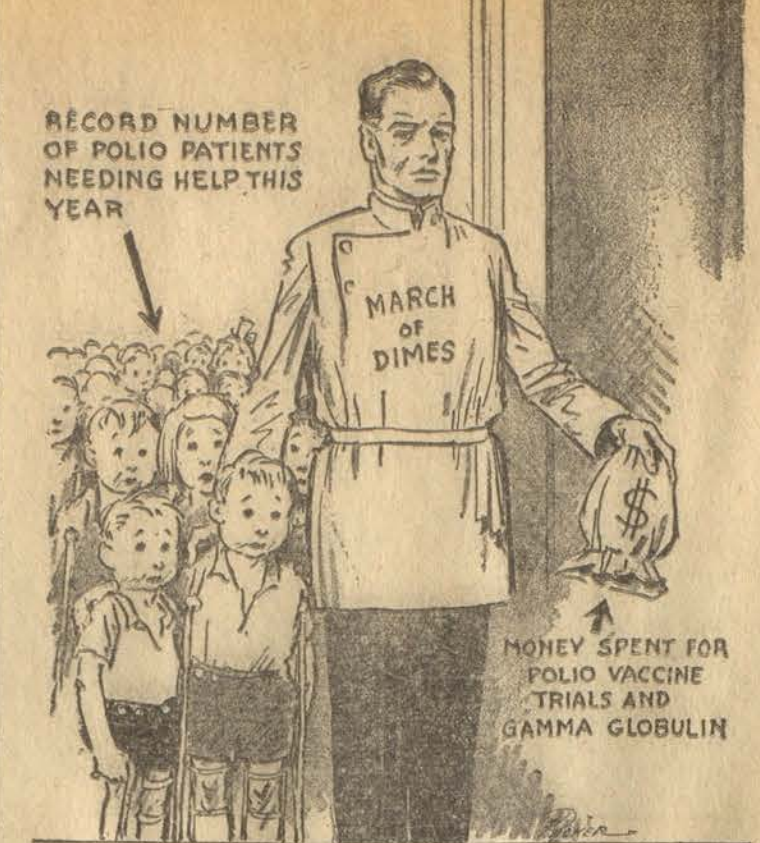

Many years ago I heard a famous doctor tell how he had worked out what was regarded as an almost ideal situation in a state institution for the feeble-minded.

for the annual teachers' examination. But, in addition to cramming grammar and arithmetic and spelling and reading and geography and history into the students' heads, the teachers had known a little about literature and had taught, however poorly, a few of the really good poems to Miss Betty and others of her age.

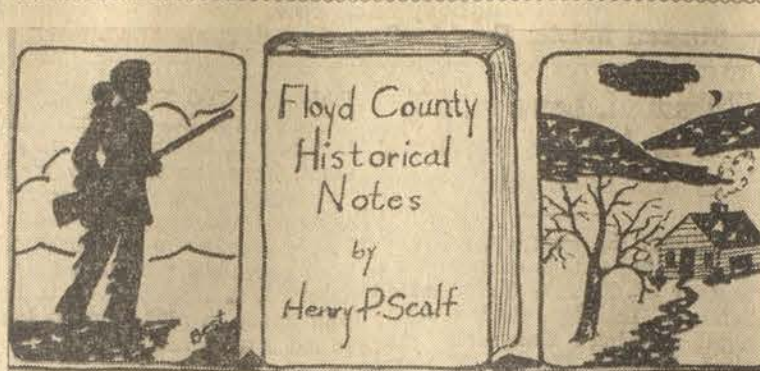

Mrs. Huey writes that Lindsay was a farmer, owned 160 acres of prairie land, raised thoroughbred and purebred cattle, "of which he was always proud."

Longfellow and Whittier and some others came to be real friends of ours, not much farther removed than people from across the river or in "old Kentucky," the rest of the state except our own Jackson Purchase.

EMPTY!

GIVE TO THE EMERGENCY MARCH OF DIMES-NOW!

Several weeks ago this column printed a few excerpts from a diary of a missionary of the Church of Latter Day Saints (Mormon) who traveled widely over this section.

Mrs. Billie Moore Sievers, formerly of Prestonsburg, but now a teacher in the Evansville, Ind., school system, did a thesis at the University of Kentucky in 1944 on the history of Floyd county and kindly lends it to this column for perusal.

The census data for Floyd county at the various decennial census years are interesting. In 1800, the year Floyd was formed, it had a population of 478 persons but in ten years, even with parts of Clay severed from the original area, the population had grown to 3,485.

An interesting bit of history is Mrs. Sievers' description of the old time school and the founding of our early schools.

"The people of the different communities built the school buildings and paid the teacher a small sum of money or paid him in such commodities as they had in greatest abundance, such as pork, corn or whiskey. The early schoolhouses were of the most primitive pattern. These were built of logs, usually unhewn, the cracks between the logs being daubed with mud.

These buildings were usually built by the joint labor of the men of the community, being the first thing undertaken as soon as the community was fairly settled. Few books were obtainable and most of the work was done in the old 'Blue-Back Speller'.

"In 1812 surveys were made and grants obtained in the name of the Floyd Seminary. These deeds may be found today in the Kentucky Land Office at Frankfort for 6,000 acres of land. The land was located on the following branches of water: Upper Hood's Fork, Middle Fork of Licking, Quicksand Creek, Licking River, Open Fork, New Combs Fork, Blain Creek, Right Fork of Elk's Fork and Elk Fork.

"The first act of the Legislature of the State to establish a system of common schools was the act of Feb. 16, 1837. This act set aside $1,000,000 of $1,537,757 received from the Federal government for the purpose of education. The final law was approved Feb. 15, 1838 but this final act reduced the school fund to $850,000."

BLADES OF BLUEGRASS

A breakdown of the list of positions accepted by recent graduates from the University of Kentucky's School of Home Economics shows that four are married and keeping house; 11 are teaching home economics in high school, five of them having married; five are home demonstrators or their assistants; four are taking their dietetics internships in hospitals for a year; four are demonstrators with public utility companies, one with an interior decorator, one with the dairy council and another with the State Board of Health.

High school girls will do well to give careful consideration to this field during the coming months. It offers a variety of opportunities for specialization, a choice of jobs upon graduation, due to demand exceeding the supply, and professional training for everyday living and homemaking.

Outstanding opportunities in college teaching, administration, food supervision, dietetics, and business increase with advanced study.

Scholarships often are available for deserving students, she said, in urging girls to write for information.

PICKED UP IN PASSING. By James Taylor Adams. STRANGER TAKES POTTERY.

On the morning of February 21, 1941, I was talking with the late Taylor Nash, in the Wise county courthouse. I knew Mr. Nash was interested in minerals, particularly Swift's Silver Mine, for which he had searched through many years.

"They said they were signs of a fire having been built under the pots, but it appeared to have been a long, long time ago; and this was about seventy years ago, according to my best guess."

"Old Man Preacher Ira Haney, the children's father, went and took the pots up and carried them to the house and put them away. One day a stranger came through the country and stopped at Mr. Haney's to stay all night. He looked at the jars, or pots; or whatever you might call them and said if Mr. Haney didn't care he would take them with him and have them examined to see if some sort of minerals or metals had been smelted in them. Said that he would send them back or report. Mr. Haney never heard of the man nor the pots again."

"Funny, I just wonder."

HEALTH NOTES

By Floyd County Health Department

Half a century ago tuberculosis was a disease especially of young people. The late teens and early twenties seemed to be the dangerous years. So strong did the evidence seem that many older people believed they were safe from TB just because of their age.

Very young children can and do catch TB, and the disease frequently strikes them violently. But modern science has made great progress against TB in this age group.

Between the ages of 5 and 14, children seem to be less susceptible to TB. From 15 to 24, there are almost five times as many cases as among young children.

But when we look at the next age group we find that "the dangerous years" have moved ahead. The greatest number of newly reported active cases of TB, according to Public Health Service figures, are in the years from 25 to 44. There is some drop from 45 to 64, but there are nevertheless twice as many new cases reported in that group as among the 15 to 24 year-olds.

Young or old, people still catch TB in the same old way, by exposure to an active case of the disease. Statistics do not tell us at what age a person first gets the germs in his system. But the statistics do seem to say that more people are breaking down with the disease in the middle years than in youth.

Some of the reasons why people break down with TB are well-known. A heavy new invasion of germs, poor nutrition, lowering of the general level of health, and mental and emotional stress can give the germs their chance to attack.

Parents protect their youngsters health and neglect their own? Are they playing fair with their youngsters in risking health and life in the years when responsibility for the welfare of the family, the community, of the nation rests on their shoulders?

Test your knowledge of the Bible by checking your answers to these questions. A score of 100 is excellent; 70 or less is poor.

1. What is the first commandment given with a promise? (Ephesians 6:2).

2. What promise did God make just after the flood? (Genesis 9:11-13).

3. What promise did God make to David concerning the building of the temple? (1 Chronicles 28:6).

4. What did God, who cannot lie, promise before the world began? (Titus 1:2).

5. Through his prophet, Malachi, God promises what blessings to all who bring their tithes into His house? (Malachi 3:10).

6. What promise did Christ give to anyone who opens to Him the door of his heart? (Rev. 3:20).

7. What promise is given to "him that overcometh"? (Revelation 21:7).

8. Whom does God promise to send and to protect those who fear him? (Psalm 34:7).

9. What promise did God give through His prophet, Isaiah, concerning the final triumph of Christianity in the last few days? (Isaiah 2:4).

10. What are some of the promises given to all who believe? Name three. (Matthew 7:7; 21:22; Mark 9:23; John 3:16; John 3:36; 11:25-26).

Now we learn that all fishermen are not liars. They are only tellers of beautiful tales.

RIGHT—AND BEAUTIFULLY SAID. Ex-President Hoover may have been wrong about some matters, but I rise to declare him one hundred per cent correct on the subject of fishing. It was in Collier's, ten years ago, that he wrote:

"When all the routines and details and the human bores get on our nerves, we just yearn to go away from here to somewhere else. To go fishing is a sound, a valid and an accepted reason for such an escape."

And in the same vein he continued: "It is not the fish that we get that counts, for they can be had in the market for mere silver. It is the break of the waves in the sun, the joyous rush of the brook, the contemplation of the eternal flow of the stream, the stretch of forest and mountain in their manifestations of the Maker, that soothes our troubles, shames our weakness and inspires us to esteem our fellow men—especially other fishermen!"

CLEARING THE WAY. The man was having a tough time of it maneuvering his car into the space at the curb that was almost too short. He backed up, struck the bumper of the car behind; pulled forward, jammed into the car in front. Several times he repeated the operation, with the same result. The noise attracted the usual gathering of the curious.

For a time they watched in silence, but finally one asked, "What's that guy trying to do?" "Can't you see?" said another. "He wants to park and is knocking out a hole to crawl in."

WHEREAS, residents of this community are numbered among more than half a million children and adults in the United States with cerebral palsy, and

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Curtis Clark, Mayor of Prestonsburg, do hereby proclaim September as United Cerebral Palsy month, and I earnestly call upon all citizens of this community to support to the fullest the appeal of United Cerebral Palsy of Kentucky, and I urge all residents of this community to support this work by giving wholeheartedly and witness my hand and seal, given this the first day of September, 1954.

FRANCIS ASKS FEDERAL HELP

Calls for Less Favors To Oil, Gas Competing With Product of Mines

J. D. Francis, of Huntington, father of David L. Francis, president of the Princess Elkhorn Coal Company, this week asked West Virginia's representative in Congress to look into the possibility of reduced freight rates and elimination of what he termed federal concessions to competing fuels as a means of keeping an ailing coal industry on a "stand-by basis" for defense.

In letters to Congressman Neal and Senators M. M. Neely and Harley Kilgore, the retired board chairman of the Island Creek Coal Co., the nation's leading independent producer, pointed out that while the Office of Defense Mobilization has a master plan for creation of a "ready-to-roll" defense industry that can produce almost instantly in an emergency, the coal industry has been neglected.

Board chairman of two family-owned coal companies employing 1,200 persons and producing 2,000,000 tons of coal annually, Mr. Francis released copies of his letter preparatory to leaving for Washington where he will meet today with a subcommittee considering an integrated coal purchasing program for the federal government.

He pointed out that maintenance costs at idle mines are high. His operations, he said, would require $100,000 monthly if the mines ceased production but were kept on a "ready-to-roll" basis.

For the industry as a whole, he estimated maintenance costs of idle mines at from $150 to $250 millions annually.

As direct governmental aid to the industry, Mr. Francis recommended passage of a new natural gas act which would wipe out a competitive price advantage enjoyed by gas under which he said domestic and other small users pay rates which make it possible for large industrial users to buy gas cheaply.

Because of natural gas industry regulation by the Federal Power Commission and Interstate Commerce Commission under existing statutes, coal has lost, said Mr. Francis, "its normal growth and at least 20 per cent of its market." He said the heating value of $10.50 worth of coal delivered to New York City can be duplicated by $7.25 worth of natural gas piped there because of the wide variety of rates paid for gas along the delivery system.

Insofar as the ODM's "stand-by" program for all of industry is concerned, Mr. Francis noted that "these plants cannot be maintained in a 'ready-to-roll' condition" unless the key coal industry is likewise in similar shape.

However, he added, "a proper and equitable natural gas act properly administered will bring about an increase in the use of coal to the extent of 100,000,000 tons in the next three to five years."

$40,000 SET FOR EAST KY.

Forest Research Center Announced by Clements; Site To Be Determined

Appropriation of $40,000 for the establishment of a Forest Research Center in East Kentucky was included in the Supplemental Appropriations bill passed by Congress a few days ago, according to a telegram received by the Kentucky Bankers Association from Senator Earl C. Clements.

Work in connection with the Center will be under the supervision of the Central States Forest Experiment Station, Columbus, Ohio. The site of the Center will be determined at an early date and preliminary survey will be started soon thereafter. No additional land will be acquired because the U.S. Forest Service already owns a large acreage in the area.

According to Dr. W. G. McGinnies, director of the Central States Forest Experiment Station, work at the Center will be devoted to the study and solution of forest problems peculiar to the area, including planting, harvesting and utilization. Improved methods of forest management will be demonstrated where woodland owners may observe the results for themselves and apply improved practices to their own lands.

The Kentucky Bankers Association became interested in the establishment of a Center over a year ago as a result of their agricultural program. About 85 per cent of the land in the eastern third of the state is in forest and much of it of poor quality and is poorly utilized. The improvement and proper management of forest lands in the area is one of the most important long-time projects affecting the welfare of the people here.

"One of the major phases of the Kentucky Bankers Association's program," according to Jos. B. Buerger, President of the Association, "is to assist state and federal agencies serve Kentucky farmers better. Eastern Kentucky is the largest forest area east of the Mississippi not served by a Research Center, and we are gratified to know that this important work will be started soon."

Court Cuts Employes Of Road Department As Funds Are Short

The Floyd fiscal court at its meeting last week moved to reduce payroll expenses in the county road department as it cut off two employees and transferred another.

Ex-Magistrate Glenn C. Burchett was transferred from the post of road foreman to work in the commodity department at a salary of $225 a month, and Shelly Woods, already a road employe, was named to succeed him as foreman. Kennel Martin and Sam Leslie were dropped from the road department payroll as funds are lacking. Jerry B. Stephens was employed as grader operator at a salary of $225 a month.

Sheriff Gorman Collins, who had been charged with $609.58 back taxes for the year 1953, was refunded the uncollected $300.51 part of that amount. The court directed that bids be asked for Sept. 20 letting on construction of a swinging bridge near the present Betsy Layne bridge.

St. Juliana Mission At Martin Is Largest Of Building Projects

In a three-mile radius of Prestonsburg and over a small area of Beaver Creek an estimated $200,000 worth of building work is under way, THE TIMES learned this week.

Largest of the projects undertaken recently is the St. Juliana Mission, Catholic church being erected in the northern end of Martin. Astor Meade, of Prestonsburg, is contractor on the job.

Two Prestonsburg residences, one built by Russell Pelfry and the other by John D. Marcum, Jr., both on First avenue, are large brick homes, and Woodrow Adams is building a brick home on Little Paint.

Dr. Claude Allen has completed an annex to his home at Maytown, and at Martin, Halbert Brothers are constructing an addition to their service station.

Building is behind the pace a year ago but still figures heavily in the economic picture of the county.

Frank Stewart, 78, Allen, Is Heart Attack Victim; Burial Made at Van Lear

Frank Stewart, 78, of Allen, died last Saturday, at 6:45 a.m. He was a victim of a heart attack. Mr. Stewart, a retired miner, was a native of Poland, but had lived in this country since youth. His wife, Mrs. Frances Music Stewart, preceded him in death in 1939.

Surviving are the following children: Walter Stewart, of Allen; John Stewart, of Marietta, Ohio; Joe Stewart, Boise, Idaho; Mrs. Stella Smith, Prestonsburg; Mrs. Victoria Friedman, of Estill; and Mrs. Elizabeth Music, of Estill. One brother, William Stewart, Long Island, N. Y., survives.

Funeral rites were conducted Monday at 10 a.m. at Our Lady of the Mountain School chapel at Paintsville, Father Wiemers of the Catholic church officiating. Burial followed in the Saint Casimer cemetery at Van Lear under the direction of Hall Bros. Funeral Home.

Dogwood Trail Sponsors Meet in Municipal Bldg.; Hall Expresses Support

A proposed organizational set-up for the Winnie Johns Dogwood Trail Project was submitted to a meeting last Thursday at the Municipal building of those interested in the planned memorial to the county's war dead. The plan was submitted by Clark Todd, of David. Duties and responsibilities of the executive committee and estimates of cost of digging and planting the trees were set out in Mr. Todd's proposed plan.

Charles Hall, roadside improvement engineer of the State Highway Department, expressed his interest and support to the project. He discussed planting problems but this problem was given to the planting committee. Tom James, Lon Hill and Mrs. Willie R. Spradlin were elected members of the executive committee. It was suggested that all Gold Star Mothers be made either active or honorary members of the organization.

N. M. White and Judge Edward P. Hill volunteered for the tree procurement committee. Hill also asked to be put on the planting committee. John Campbell volunteered his services on the finance committee.

Next regular meeting of the organization will be Sept. 9.

Ashland Architects Picked by City Board To Plan New Structure

Hays & Coburn, Ashland architects, have been employed by the Prestonsburg Board of Education to plan and supervise the construction of the auditorium-gymnasium for which a special tax was voted here.

The Ashland firm was selected, it was explained, because it prepared the plans for the county high school building now under construction here, and so should be able to work more closely with the contractors in making the tie-in of the auditorium-gymnasium annex to the high school structure.

A Court of Appeals decision, expected Sept. 27, must still be made, before anything definite can be done toward actual construction.

Mickey Tuttle, two-day old son of George and Verna Whitlitt Tuttle, of Minnie, died at the Beaver Valley hospital, of Martin, at 2 p.m. Wednesday. A twin sister, Vicky, survives. Also surviving are six other brothers and sisters. Funeral rites were conducted at 10 a.m. today (Thursday) at the home, the Revs. Marion Moore and M. C. Wright officiating. Burial followed in the Bill Buck Stumbo cemetery at Minnie under the direction of Hall Bros. Funeral Home.

DALE PLANT IS DEDICATED

REA Administrator Tells How Power Pact To Bring Electricity at Low Cost

East Kentuckians attending the dedication of a new 40,000 kw steam generating plant, heard REA Administrator Anchor Nelsen describe the agreement reached by the East Kentucky Rural Electric Cooperative with a neighboring electric company as a milestone in the American farmer's search for low cost power. Speaking at ceremonies opening the new William C. Dale generating station of the East Kentucky co-op at Ford, Kentucky, Mr. Nelsen said that the integration and interconnection agreement between East Kentucky and the Kentucky Utilities Company might well become a pattern for other states with power supply and cost problems in rural areas.

"It seems to me that this is a realistic approach to the problem of providing rural families with adequate power at reasonable cost," Mr. Nelsen said.

The REA Administrator pointed out that the agreement will enable the power cooperative to meet the needs of its 19 member cooperatives and their 150,000 rural consumer-members with a lower total investment in generating plant and transmission facilities.

Under the agreement with Kentucky Utilities Company, the REA borrower will be able to buy needed power from the electric company and use existing transmission lines of the company to reach the more distant systems it serves. One immediate result is the elimination of 292 miles of high voltage transmission lines which East Kentucky had planned to build at a cost of $3,000,000. Further savings will be realized when East Kentucky expands its generating capacity, because the co-op will be able to utilize larger and more efficient generation units than it would without the integration agreement.

The new East Kentucky steam plant at Ford was built at a cost of $7,500,000. It is part of a generation and transmission system for which REA has approved loans totaling $27,982,000. When completed the system will include generating capacity in excess of 100,000 kw and a high voltage transmission network of more than one thousand miles.

CATS TO OPEN AGAINST CRUM

Friday Night Opener Here Finds P'burg Hi Low on Grid Manpower

As Prestonsburg high school's Black Cats prepared for their grid curtain-raiser here Friday night against the Crum, W. Va. eleven, it has become apparent that the phase, "a select few," applies to boys here who are interested in football.

For, said Coach Doc Ferrell, of the 300 or more boys in high school, only 32 are out for football. Ferrell had hoped to pick up additional material for his team from youngsters coming from outside Prestonsburg, but as of Wednesday no recruits had been added.

The team is not in top shape for the opening game Friday night. The week at Camp Daniel Boone was wasted effort as the extreme heat made heavy work impossible. A lot of work remains to be done before the Cats are ready for stiff opposition, Ferrell said.

Although rather long on experience, the Black Cats are short on reserve material. If injuries pile up they will be hard-pressed to find capable replacements.

MASSACHUSETTS BOAT GRABS SAILING LEAD

Holland, Mich., Aug. 30 — A Beverly, Mass., entry jumped off to a flying start today in the three-day international junior championships for junior sailing crews on Lake Macatawa.

Eight three-man crews, competing for the Sears Trophy, took to the water for the 34th annual event. A 12- to 14-mile-an-hour breeze favored the salt water-wise Massachusetts crew in the regatta's first heat today. They were chased across the line by the Sandusky, Ohio, entry and a crew from Kingston, Ont., in that order.

The fire was discovered by Bill Pettrey, who sighted the flames as he was leaving Prestonsburg on a hunting trip. Traffic on U. S. 23 was blocked while the fire department fought the blaze, and motorists were routed via Riverside.

MOTOR ACCIDENT REPORTS TO ELIMINATE CONFUSION

Special to The Times
Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 30 — Motorists involved in reportable traffic accidents in the future will be filing reports under an improved procedure, according to an announcement today by the commissioners of Revenue and State Police.

The new procedure is the result of new motor vehicle accident reporting form which combines the report with the insurance report required as proof of financial responsibility.

Reportable accidents are those resulting in injury or death or $100 property damage.

"The new accident report form combines the functions of two reports," Police Commissioner Charles Oldham and Revenue Commissioner Robert Alphin explain. Proof of financial responsibility is still necessary, but the insurance information is now shown on the same report with the accident information.

The two department heads say the new report eliminates confusion which resulted from names sometimes being spelled differently on two or more reports.

Reports must be filed with the State Police within 10 days after an accident. This is necessary regardless of who is at fault, or whether insurance will cover the damage, the officials stressed. By filing an accident report, the motorist meets the initial requirement of the safety responsibility law, which is administered by the Departments of Revenue and State Police.

Besides giving the insurance information on the accident report, drivers should also notify their insurance company immediately after an accident. If the motorist does not have insurance, the Department of Revenue will notify him of the steps necessary to retain his license and driving privilege.

Accident reports may be obtained from any State Police Officer, most local police officers, or at circuit court clerks' offices. Alphin said Oldham suggested that motorists obtain copies of the accident report to keep in the glove compartments of their automobiles.

Football as She is Played

Football is the most popular method of committing assault with intent to do great bodily injury. A man who would disdain to strike a defenseless foe twice his size will, under cover of a game of football, bite a chunk of an opponent at the slightest opportunity.

Like Broncho-busting, the game is strenuous and is accompanied by noise and excitement.

There are eleven men on a football team—which is odd. This was undoubtedly arranged so that if one was killed there would be ten left, anyway.

The fullback is an important character in the game. His duty consists of grabbing the windbag and skeddaddling around, through, under and across the skirmish line, with the object of making a gain. If he makes ten yards under the present rules he is a dandy, and ought to get his tuition handed to him on a platter.

The halfbacks are next in importance and are busy young men. Working the fake pass is their heavy suit. This is done by palming the ball or snapping it up the sleeve out of sight while they break for the enemy's goal.

The quarterback is the boss of the bunch, and is usually a small, wiry, quick-tempered man, with his nose done up in a crate. He plays right under the center rush and handles the signals that run the team.

The linemen are just plain, ordinary butchers and hack-drivers, making an honest penny on the side. They are chosen for weight and general deficiency in mathematics.

The game begins by kicking the daylight out of the ball. A tall noble youth, with tawny ringlets dangling over his brow, wets it one with his brogan and sends it hurtling through or over the ranks of the foe. One of them seizes it and starts to lug it back, which is foolish, as he is soon clutched by a shoulder blade and dashed to the harsh, cruel earth.

Friendship ceases right there. The men line up and glare at each other like bulldogs seeing themselves in a new tin pan. The audience howls for blood, and the leader of the massacre toots on a dog-whistle for the fray to begin. "Four-eleven-forty-four", and, kerplunk! the fullback takes a running jump into the mob and the slaughter is on. Some one yells "down" every little bit, which signifies that he has been tied into a bow-knot and wants time to unravel himself.

If a man gets a leg pulled out of joint or gets kicked in the voice, he gets a minute to recuperate. A second offense and he goes back to the foundry, wiser and sadder.

Bucking the center is a nice play—for everybody but the center. A large, fatherly citizen, weighing about 260 pounds usually plays center, and it must be annoying to him to have a man run up and jab his skull to the hilt in his solar plexus. He grins in demoniac glee, however, when the fullback misses his aim and hits a bone.

Hurdling the line is spectacular but a trifle deadly. It is rather disconcerting to have a man stick his feet, encased in shoes with prongs all over them, into your digestive organs when you do not expect it.

This one is of the disadvantages of trying to stop a hurdler who is onto his job.

If a player is incapacitated, which is effete for being knocked stiff, he is led tenderly and solicitously aside and asked if he has any word to send to mother. After which he is tossed into the discard and a fresh victim is led out.

When a game ends the audience explodes with a bang and tries to tear up the crust of the earth, along with the goal posts.

The teams rest up a week and gradually gain enough, under massage and poultices, to go at it again. Thus, they work up a good appetite for thanksgiving Dinner.

State Pay Lakes Anglers Must Have Fishing License

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 23 (Sp.)—Fishermen who fish in pay lakes will have to have a fishing license—or else—according to a resolution passed here today by the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission in a regular quarterly meeting.

The resolution, which will start being enforced on September 15, declares the law requiring fishing licenses for those who fish pay lakes must be enforced according to the demands of the state attorney general's office.

On the heels of this, Earl Wallace, commissioner of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, said conservation officers will start checking the lakes for arrests on September 15.

Wallace also said signs will be posted at all pay lakes advising the public that fishing licenses are required and that a thorough public information program will get underway to educate all fishermen to the edict before September 15.

In other action, the Commission:

1. Approved a request that an assistant attorney general be located in the Department's offices at least two days a week and okayed Jack Reed for the position starting September 1.
2. Set up a deer archery season at Kentucky Woodlands in western Kentucky running from October 4 through October 16, exclusive of Sundays.
3. Approved the reorganization of the Department's accounting set-up under one man and the employment of an inventory clerk.

Two commissioners, who were re-named to the Commission by Governor Wetherby, were sworn in to serve four-year terms. They were: Noble Lanier, of Franklin, and Tom Theobald, of Grayson. Roscoe Davis of Hazard were elected chairman. Al Cockerill, of Frankfort, was re-named secretary - treasury, and Tom Baker, Cadiz, was named vice-chairman.

Freeburn Town Marshal Fatally Shoots Youth Speeding Thru Town

Pikeville, Ky., Aug. 30 — James Dyer, 23, a Freeburn, Ky., town marshal in office three months, has been charged with the willful murder of Bernard Layne, 22, Jamboree, who was killed yesterday.
 Commonwealth's Attorney J. A. Runyon described the fatal shooting as "unjustified homicide and the result of a speed trap that had been operating in Freeburn several months."
 Dyer told Sheriff Alex Blackburn he shot at a boy who was speeding in the town of 300 about 20 miles northeast of here.
 The murder warrant was served on Dyer in the Pike county jail here tonight where he has been held since the fatal shooting.
 Sheriff Blackburn said trial has been set for September 3 at 10 a.m. before Pike County Judge Irvin S. Pruitt.
 An autopsy today revealed Layne was struck in the back of the head by a .38-caliber bullet which lodged over his right eye.
 The truck Layne was driving crashed into the porch of a house after the shooting. The half-ton truck was listed as owned by Lawson Estep, Hurlay, Va.
 Clinton Arsen Layne, a cousin of Layne, was in the truck with Layne and received minor bruises.
 Attorney Kelsey Friend said Dyer was appointed special officer by the five-man Freeburn Town Council several months ago after the resignation of the town marshal.

 Entrants will be judged on character, good family and home management, and a high standard of citizenship.
 Finalists will be chosen from each state. They will receive an engraved 15-inch silver "Trophy Award" tray, and an Honorary Certificate. The $2500 cash award winner of the "Most Successful Homemaker of 1954" contest will be chosen by the judges from the state finalists.

AN APPEAL...

TO ALL PEACE OFFICERS IN FLOYD COUNTY

When any person is found driving while intoxicated, if you will make an arrest and report the arrest to the Circuit Clerk's office I will immediately forward the report to the Operators' Licensing Section at Frankfort, Ky.

As a result of this action on your part and mine, the drivers' licenses of persons arrested for drunk driving will be promptly cancelled.

I suggest this action, not with the idea of making things difficult for any motor vehicle driver, but with the idea of making the highways safer for everybody alike. Too many lives have been taken, too many have spent months in beds of pain, too many thousands of dollars have been wasted—all because of drunken drivers.

Timely Alfalfa Cuttings

By O. E. BOGGS
 County Agent

The time (stage of maturity) at which alfalfa and medium red clover fields are cut is important for two reasons—it affects or may largely determine the total value of hay or silage harvested per acre and the longevity of stands.

Perhaps the highest value of hay per acre may best be measured in terms of total protein obtained. Experiments show that the largest yield of protein per acre is obtained by harvesting the crop when it is in 1/10 to 1/2 bloom. It is practically impossible, of course, to use stage of blooming to determine when alfalfa should be cut in Kentucky because the crop seldom produces much bloom, especially on the first crop of shoots each year. The appearance of new growth in the crown is a more reliable indication of proper time to cut each crop. However, it is often difficult to determine when the new shoots begin to make sustained growth. Therefore, it appears that the best cutting schedule is one that follows the calendar. According to this schedule the first cutting in Southwestern Kentucky would be made usually about the middle or shortly before the middle of May. In Northern Kentucky it would usually be made in late May or the first of June. Later cuttings should be made at five to six week intervals.

Longevity of alfalfa stands is related much more to the date of cutting the last crop than by the dates of any or all other cuttings during the year. The last cutting should not be made so late that the plants cannot make a full growth before winter. In general, the last cutting should be made not later than about September 25 in Southwestern Kentucky and September 15 in Northern Kentucky.

Red clover produces the largest yields of protein per acre when cut in the 1/3 to 1/2 bloom stage. This stage usually cannot be determined accurately for the first crop in Kentucky. The clover leaf weevil largely destroys the heads in that crop in most years. It has been found, therefore, that the first crop should be cut within a period of 10 to 20 days after the first flower appears in the field. At Lexington the proper cutting date for the first crop is usually between May 20 and June 1. The second crop—and sometimes a third crop—may be cut according to the stage of bloom. They, too, should be cut when in 1/3 to 1/2 bloom. If a seed crop is to be grown, the first crop should be cut as recommended for hay—that is, about 15 days after the first flower appears in the field. Seed yields are greatly affected by the time of cutting of the first crop. Red clover should not be cut after September 15 in North Kentucky and September 25 in Southwestern Kentucky.

HIDDEN IN INCINERATOR, COLLECTION BURNS UP

Springfield, Mo.—Businessman Paul Harris substituted as church treasurer one Sunday. Worried about a safe place for the collection, he bundled bills, checks, and coins together and stuffed them into an incinerator. Later some one lit a fire.

He saved the coins but the bills and checks burned. He set himself the job of asking every member of the congregation what he had contributed. Harris said he would make up the loss.

HEALTH NOTES

By Floyd County Health Department

"Mom, may I have some cookies and a glass of milk?" yells your youngster just home from school. So you promptly pour that tall glass of health-giving milk.

"But are you sure that milk is safe and healthy? It's good for Johnnie and Sue, and mom and pop, too, only if it is disease-free. To be disease-free, the milk must be pasteurized," comments M. V. Clark, Floyd County Health Administrator.

Raw milk can make you sick—or kill you, wherever you may be. Raw milk can carry undulant fever, typhoid fever, tuberculosis, diphtheria or other dangerous, preventable diseases. If you live in a small community, in a larger city or on a farm, make sure your family is not guilty of drinking raw milk.

Check with your milk delivery man to see if your milk comes from healthy cows, free of tuberculosis or Bang's disease. Grade A dairy people take other precautions to safeguard the community's health, and have clean facilities for the cooling, handling and storing of milk, and practice cleanliness habits in every way, both personally and with their dairy equipment.

If you live on a farm, and you are not heat treating raw milk, your life may be endangered. See John M. Stumbo, at the Floyd County Health Department, and he'll be glad to show you how to protect your family through simple, home pasteurization. The health department also has some interesting pamphlets, "Good Cow Tales Just Don't Grow" and "Milk is Good for You—Or Is It?", which you'd like to see.

Cantrill was nominated by the Democratic party to run for governor in 1923 but died before the election. He had won the nomination over Alben W. Barkley.

Wetherby Approves Movie Title, "The Kentuckian" As Good State Publicity

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 30 — A decision to name a motion picture, presently being filmed in various parts of the state, "The Kentuckian," was announced by the producers shortly after Governor Wetherby gave his approval to the title.

The Hecht-Lancaster association, producers of the film, sought the Governor's endorsement in a telegram which stated, "We hope this motion picture will prove worth of the natural beauty of your state and the hospitality of its people."

Starring in the film will be Burt Lancaster, who will also be its director. Wetherby expressed himself as pleased that the company has chosen to put the name of the state in the movie.

"The producers have done us great honor and every Kentuckian will take pride in this opportunity to advance our name and to show movie-goers the beauties of our state," the Governor said.

"The name is especially fitting because the film is based on a book by a Kentuckian and adapted for the screen by another Kentuckian." "The picture is based on the book, "The Gabriel Horn," by the late Felix Holt, a native of Calloway County. A. B. (Bud) Guthrie, formerly of Lexington, wrote the screen play.

Filming of the movie is now in progress in Levi Jackson Wilderness Road and Cumberland Falls State Parks and other sites in Southwestern Kentucky. Subsequent work is to be done in river areas in the western part of the state.

If you happen to be an educator, it's quite possible that you think most businessmen are hard-headed, hard-fisted individuals concerned only with business and sports and not deeply interested in the cultural and social development of our country as long as money is to be made.

On the other hand, if you are a businessman, there's a chance that you have a slight suspicion that professors are a bit tainted and are inclined to be radicals or left wingers.

Such feelings were admitted by both groups recently when approximately 50 men of education and the same number of industrialists met together on the University of Kentucky campus at the first Industry-College Conference.

Near the end of the two-day affair, most of the participants reversed themselves and expressed the feeling that these peculiar educators, or businessmen, were those which they did not actually know but had only "heard about."

Dr. H. L. Donovan, president of the University, put it this way:

"It has been said that the objectives of education and industry are identical. Both are interested in good citizenship, in serving society, and in a better life. Both firmly believe in freedom."

Yet, many suggestions were passed in both directions by the educators and businessmen. The objective of the conference, to help each group understand the other better, would not have been achieved had this not been true. A few opinions from each group, paraphrased in brief, follow:

1. Send us (the businessmen) graduates who are not only trained in technical fields, but who are broadly trained and liberally educated.

2. Prepare your graduates better in the field of communications, especially speech, so that they can express themselves among their fellow workers.

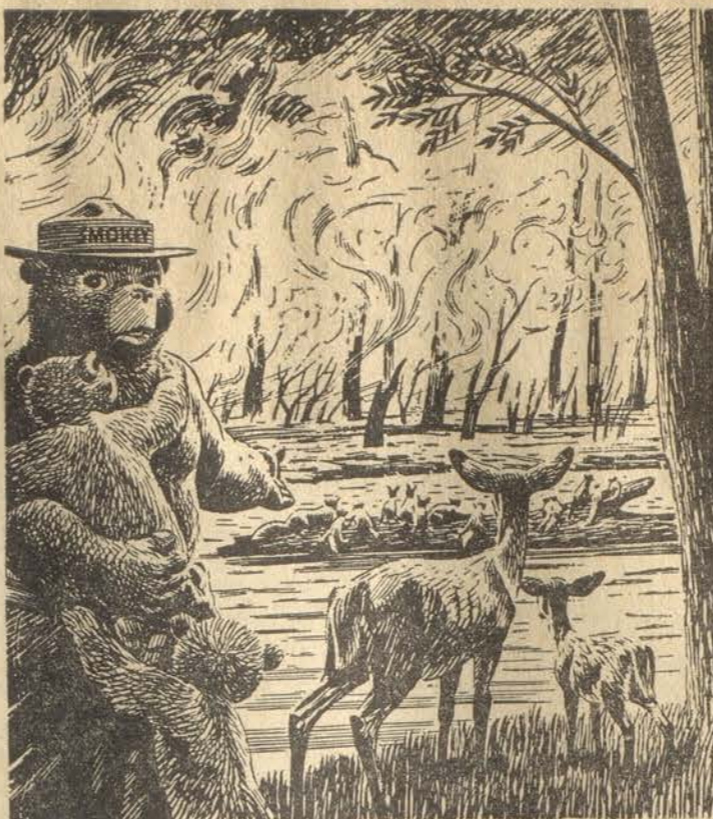

3. Educators felt that most businessmen should be made more aware of the serious financial difficulties confronting all colleges.

4. Both groups agreed that the bridge between education and business could be built only by conferences between the two parties.

4 Important Reasons why you should buy a PONTIAC RIGHT NOW!

1 Pontiac is One of the Greatest Cars Ever Built!

Match today's Pontiac with America's finest cars and you'll get a dramatic picture of Pontiac value. First of all, Pontiac is big—bigger, in fact, than many cars costing hundreds of dollars more. Pontiac is beautiful—with its distinctive Silver Streak styling. Inside, you'll find genuine fine-car luxury and appointments—along with the roominess and comfort that come only with a long wheelbase. But the big surprise comes when you test Pontiac's performance. See how alert it is to every demand in traffic, how it handles and corners almost without effort, how it takes to the open road with plenty of power to spare and saves money every mile.

2 Pontiac has the Best Resale Value in its Price Class!

Along with all its fine-car size, luxury and performance, Pontiac has a very special attribute no car at any price can beat—its unsurpassed reputation for year-in, year-out dependability. Pontiac's carefree, economical long life and its proved record of amazingly low maintenance expense are so widely known and acknowledged that it commands the highest resale value in its price class. Because Pontiac is America's most desirable used car, your original investment comes back in greater measure when you trade, making ownership cost even lower.

3 Pontiac is Priced Just Above the Lowest!

After you've convinced yourself of Pontiac's value, after you've considered all the good things you've heard about its dependability—see and compare it dollar-wise. Despite the fact it's a fine car in every sense of the term, it's priced so near the lowest that if you can afford any new car you can afford a Pontiac.

4 We'll Make You a Deal You Can't Afford to Miss!

Right now we're making such liberal trade-in allowances that you just can't afford to pass up the greatest opportunity you ever had to become a fine-car owner. Come in and get the facts.

FARM NOTES

BY O. E. BOGGS
County Agent

COVER CROPS

Now is the time to begin thinking of cover crops and farmers should not overlook the values of a green manure crop to turn under next spring. Here is what a cover crop will do for you. Prevent the soil from washing away during the winter, take up the plant food in the soil this fall and hold it for next year's crops, furnish grazing for livestock during the winter and add 50 to 60 pounds of nitrogen per acre which, if bought, would cost the farmer $8 to $10.

What land should be sown to a cover crop this fall? All row crop land, lespedeza fields and drought damaged pastures. To get a good stand, a seed bed must be prepared.

Usually thorough disking of the soil after the crop is harvested is sufficient preparation to make a good seed bed. Seeding may be done any time after the crop is harvested, starting in late August and extending through September.

There are several grasses and legumes that are suitable for winter cover crops. One of the best mixtures is as follows: Three pecks of Balbo rye and 30-40 pounds of hairy vetch, crimson clover may be used and if a good stand can be obtained it is equally as good as vetch in its ability to add nitrogen to the soil but farmers should keep in mind the difficulty of getting a stand of crimson clover. Under normal weather conditions farmers can expect to fall on getting a stand of crimson clover three out of five years and this is too much of a gamble to take. Recent research indicates that all legumes should be inoculated each year at the time of seeding.

SOIL TESTING

Farmers who plan to seed hay or pastures this fall or next spring should take their soil samples this fall so that the analysis can be made and the county agent will have time to make fertilizer recommendations early. All soil samples are tested in the Floyd County Extension service laboratory and fertilizer recommendations are made by the county agent. If you want the samples to qualify under the A.S.C. program, be sure to say so when you bring in the samples and a copy of the fertilizer recommendation will be sent to the A.S.C. office. Bring all soil samples to the county agent's office.

LIME

Farmers who plan to seed pasture this fall or next spring can get their lime this fall under the A.S.C. program. Fall is the best time to spread lime. For more details, contact the A.S.C. office.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D.

Western Kentucky Teachers' College Bowling Green, Ky.

"FAR AWAY"

Though I stayed at the site of my old home only a few minutes in November 1953, so many things came back to me that I could literally write a book about the memories. One of them had to do with horizons. As I stood there in the late-fall day and looked out over the landscapes that I had known as a child, it somewhat saddened me to think that the most distant objects that I was viewing were not more than three or four miles away as the crow flies. On the east, back where the sun used to come up from the eternity of night, the hills were still pretty well wooded and still showed rich colorings of the oaks. These hills once seemed the "boundary mountains" to my world on the east; I am afraid they are pretty small hills now. To the northwest, around a small spur of a hill, I got a view of my only other outlook on the Big World, across what is now an arm of Kentucky Lake and into a hilly, gravelly country beyond. Elsewhere the small timbered hills shut in my view to a few hundred yards. Wasn't that a pitifully small world, as judged by present standards? I am afraid that many of us, after leaving our small sections, often get just that point of view and come to feel that we have escaped, not voluntarily gone away. I think we need to reconsider our little folk worlds and see whether they were so very small after all.

In that small stretch of landscape there are so many features that would delight an artist, especially when the colors are at their best or when a snow covers the ground and brings out the little hills and valleys or when the tender colors of spring recreate the world "in all the freshness of childhood." There are springs, small streams, small marshes where life is full and fresh, sandy and gravelly hillsides, pudding-stone caps to the taller hills, stretches of ferns and fields. Within the area that I could see lived several dozen people, who managed somehow to wrest a living from the soil, to cultivate genuine though primitive manners and rugged outlooks upon life itself. Just out of sight in one direction was the church; in the woods hidden by the trees was the schoolhouse. There were no haunted houses or forbidding ruins, no spooky graveyards, no very impressive natural features like a chasm or a waterfall or a cavern. It was a pastoral little place, where you could hear the sound of cowbells and the bleating of sheep. If an actual artist should ever stray into that little nook, he might make himself famous by painting nature just as it is, with no effort to "gild the lily or adorn the rose."

In our all-too-rapid passing from one cultural pattern to another I fear we often fail to evaluate properly these little folkish backgrounds that no amount of learning or travel can ever quite squelch. Is not the sun shining on Fidelity the same as on the mighty cities of the earth or on the ruins of Babylon or Nineveh? Is not the magic of life, the miracle of growth just as present in this little remote place as in the better-known places? Whitman, with his rhapsodies about a "leaf of grass," would have seen in this pastoral landscape quite as much proof of his thesis as he could have found in broader, more fertile acres or in the metropolis itself. And I love to think—at Fidelity a half century ago and still—that Thoreau would have liked my simple scenes though they are far less scenic, from the average traveler's point of view, than his own Concord and Walden Pond. Maybe they define the boundary of a world that none of us have seen and only the poetic or prophetic have ever imagined. What is distance, anyway, physical or something that refuses to be measured by our self-constructed measuring rods? Emerson says that the axis of the earth visibly sticks up through the center of every town; certainly it did at Fidelity.

Town in Ohio Soon May Be up for Sale

Melco, Ohio — Anyone want to buy a town?

If so, Melco may be available. It is being abandoned by the Ohio Edison Company because the utility's power plant on Black Fork Creek here is to be closed.

The town has 10 houses, a swimming pool, and tennis courts on a 70-acre tract.

It was built in 1917 to house workmen and their families manning the power plant when it was owned and operated by the old Mansfield Electric Light Company.

Ohio Edison explained that other new plants, and particularly more efficient one, make Melco no longer practicable to operate. So workmen are moving out and only a watchman will be left.

The company hasn't decided what to do with the town yet, but since real estate like that hasn't much demand — though it's only about 10 miles from Mansfield — it probably will be torn down.

JAPAN'S SELF DEFENSE RECRUITING FALLING SHORT

Tokyo, Aug. 30 — Recruiting for Japan's newly organized self-defense forces has fallen far short of expectations, Kyodo News Service said today.

In the first two weeks, only 1,157 enlistment applications were received, a government source reported. The initial goal for land and air units is 23,100.

BATTLING A FLY PROVES COSTLY

Syracuse, N. Y. — The next time George Eltgroth decides to go after a fly roaming his bedroom, he'll think twice before using a towel as a weapon.

The 40-year-old Syracuse man bagged his prey with a swipe of the towel, but he also shattered a light bulb and sent his wife to a hospital.

DANGEROUS PART OF THE TRIP

A commercial airline pilot is reported to have told his passengers recently as their plane was landing:

"You are now about to experience the most dangerous part of your journey—the drive from the airport to your homes."

Unfortunately, the pilot was so right. The fatality rate per hundred million miles flown by scheduled domestic airlines last year was 0.7 as contrasted by 7.1 for every hundred million miles of motor vehicles travel.

Why? In spite of clearly marked lanes channeling traffic over mile after mile of smooth pavement—in spite of traffic signals and warning signs at every potential danger point—why is driving on the ground still ten times more perilous than flying thousands of feet above the earth?

To get the answer to this riddle, we must look to the human element—to the man at the controls—whether it be the four-engine airliner or the six-cylinder motor car. He writes your safety record—good or bad.

Airline pilots are trained specialists—experts at their job of carrying people safely from one place to another. They have a healthy respect for both man-made and natural laws, because they realize their own survival depends on strict observance of those laws.

If you're the average motorist, you can't expect to equal the skill of a professional airline pilot. But you can work toward smooth driving, perfect timing, constant control, good judgment and respect for traffic laws.

Above all, it's necessary to remember that you're at the controls of a land vehicle, not a plane. The giant air transport of today can zoom safely through the air at fantastic speeds, but you had better slow down if you want to live.

WHEAT FIELD BURNS—The Kingston, O., volunteer fire department battled more than two hours to quench a blaze in a wheat field near the town which is owned by Frank Hopkins, former Abbott Creek man. Chief Bob Earhart said the fire burned over 10 acres of standing wheat and another five acres of stubble. He said the flames apparently resulted from a spark thrown by a tractor or combine.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

By James Taylor Adams

THE SCARED WIDOW

A bunch of us were lolling in the shade of a spreading beech, waiting for meeting to begin.

Elder John A. Robbins looked lonely, down there, walking to and fro on the board-floored preacher's stand, with his hands hooked behind his back. Every now and then he would lift his head and gaze down the road, looking for some of his brethren to show up around the bend. Finally, with none of the other appointed ministers in sight, Elder Robbins quit the stand and joined the group of laymen and sinners, easing himself to a seat on a mossy boulder.

Jack Edwards cut short the risqué story he had been telling and said, "I hear somebody went in on old Miss Crumm, the other night, and robbed her of seventy-five dollars."

We had all heard about the Crumm robbery. Nobody asked Edwards to elaborate. He didn't. Conversation was scarce for the next five or ten minutes. Then Elder Robbins, slipping his Thomas hymn book into one coat pocket and his New Testament into the other, said, "That made me think of it. My father told me and his father told him. Hit happened way back yonder. Somewhere in Kentucky, I don't know exactly where.

"Two men had taken up land joining one another. Both done well. Mighty good friends and neighbors. Then, finally, one of them died and left his wife and children with the big farm. Fine place, they said.

"Now the other fellow, he got to studying. Decided that he'd like to have the widow's place. So he went over and bantered her to buy her out. She didn't want to sell. Not at the price he offered her. So he figured out a way to make her sell.

"He'd killed a big hoot owl and that give him an idea. He took the owl's claws, one night, and went up close to the widow's house; squealed like a panther; and the woman thought it was a panther and was nearly scared to death.

"The screaming came right on up to the house. The widow barred the doors. There was a big tree standing right close to the house and after while they heard something climbing the tree. The widow thought sure hit was a panther. Wasn't long till 'kertump,' something struck the roof and then there was clawing and scratching on the boards. The widow was scared to death. She grabbed her husband's old hog rifle and stuck it up through the loft and fired.

"The scratching and pawing hushed and they heard something a-going slipping and sliding down the roof and strike the ground with a thud. The widow was a-afraid to open the door. She huddled there in the house, with her children around her, all night long. Then when morning came, she looked out and there laid her neighbor dead and stiff."

Wetherby Proclaims Cerebral Palsy Week

Governor Lawrence W. Wetherby has proclaimed the week of September 5 as Cerebral Palsy Week throughout the state of Kentucky. For the first time, United Cerebral Palsy of Kentucky is attempting to assist the thousands of cerebral palsied children and adults in the state, no matter what the population and facilities may be in the areas in which they reside.

The campaign will consist of a rural letter carrier drive in which 170,000 rural box holders will receive a letter requesting that they send in their donation; a "Pennies for Palsy" campaign (approved by Wendell Butler, Commissioner of Public Instruction, State Department of Education) in which school children will be asked to give a penny a day during the week of September 12. This school collection has been advanced a week, due to the fact that school registration occurs during the week of September 5.

In addition, at scattered points throughout the state, drive-in theatres have indicated their willingness to allow cerebral palsy volunteers to canvass automobiles during performances.

Bond Sale Chairman For Floyd Receives Plaque for Service

For outstanding achievement in the promotion of U. S. Savings Bond sales, Adrian Collins, chairman of the Floyd county Bond committee, was awarded a plaque last week.

The plaque, known as Presidential Prayer Award, because it is inscribed with a favorite prayer of President Eisenhower, was presented by Hugh P. Finley, area deputy of the Savings Bond Division of the Treasury Department for Eastern Kentucky who lauded the consistent bond sales record established by Floyd county.

In paying tribute to the work of Mr. Collins, he commented this county "as usual oversubscribed its 1953 bond selling quota." Last year's goal was $379,200 — while this year's goal is $439,200. The county is ahead 8.7 per cent for the first six months of this year.

Besides the Presidential prayer, the plaque carries on the reverse side of the citation of Mr. Collins "for achievement in the United States Savings Bonds program, dedicated to the economic strength of the Nation and the financial independence of its citizens." Signatures affixed are those of G. W. Humphrey, Secretary of the Treasury, and Wilson W. Wyatt, State Savings Bonds chairman.

The plaque frame was made from one of the planks of the platform upon which Eisenhower stood when he took the oath of office of president.

GOVERNMENT OPENS OWN TELEGRAPH UNIT

Washington, Aug. 30 — The General Service Administration today inaugurated a high-speed, 15,000-mile private wire telegraph system to handle messages between government agencies in 53 major cities.

Administrator Edmund F. Mansure said the new system uses ultramodern communications techniques and is expected, for about $500,000 a year, to give more and faster service at less cost.

The system will be leased from and maintained by the Western Union Company.
