Which Do You Want --

$10,000 A YEAR JOBS FOR A FEW?

$12,000 ROAD PROJECTS FOR MANY?

HARRY LEE WATERFIELD

Boss Clementine's Louisville Twins, Combs and Wyatt, are trying to promise their way into the Governor's office with $10,000 a year jobs for so-called "Chiefs" and criticism of the Force Account Roads being built by the State Highway Department.

Both branches of the Combs-Wyatt crowd in Prestonsburg, the Drug Store Drones and the Courthouse Gang, want to stop all road work until after the election. The Drones want big fat state jobs, and the Gang wants protection in their lawsuits so they can KEEP the taxpayers' money.

Lieutenant Governor Harry Lee Waterfield has been very helpful in getting roads, bridges, and other benefits for Floyd county, despite the constant opposition from the old Courthouse Gang; as your Governor he will help even more.

Harry Lee Waterfield is a good, honest, sober, and experienced public servant. He believes in serving all of the people and not just a few powerful, selfish interests. He is the proven friend of the working men and a fearless fighter for better schools, good roads, and honesty in government.

Russell Pelfry, who lives on First avenue near the store, said he saw the one who fled. He said the man was running, holding his arm to his side, apparently injured. Mr. Hereford said he could have shot the driver when he left the car but withheld his fire.

The looters had gone to the mezzanine office of Mr. Hereford, had removed a P-38 pistol from a desk drawer and inserted a clip of cartridges but apparently did not know how to operate the weapon. Switch-blade knives they had picked up in the store were in a box nearby.

Had the burglars decided to make a stand inside the store, they would have had the benefit of a veritable arsenal of shotguns, rifles and revolvers, with ammunition, which the store stocks for its trade.

The Hereford break was not the only one of the night. Earlier, Wright's Drive-In at Lancer was broken into and the cigarette and juke box machines emptied. The Abigail Theatre, which was only recently reopened, was also broken into, and the money from a cigarette machine was taken. It was the fifth break into Wright's Drive-in since it was opened under its present ownership last July. Approximately $100 was taken in this latest break.

State police are looking for a second car in the series of breaks. Home of Robert Hughes was entered on Central avenue Tuesday, between 1:30 and 4 p.m. Missing from a dresser drawer were a watch, two rings and two electric razors.

Robert Horn was jailed here Sunday and held for Magoffin authorities on a car theft charge. He was taken to Salyersville, Tuesday. Others booked at the jail:

Roddie Stone, drunk driving; Dan Webb, reckless use of a deadly weapon; Jimmy Ray Gibson, breaking and entering.

you barely could walk over a narrow, muddy path or where you once saw sleds drawn by mules or wagons by oxen, in order to appreciate fully the wonder of a shiny automobile whizzing over the very same spot.

That will get you back to when a phonograph and a scratchy needle were something to hark and lo about; to when talking to a neighbor by telephone was an event; to when some folks thought there was a record in "that thing," referring to the radio.

And we stop short of the wonder of television, which still has me wondering. I would not argue with you a moment if you were to predict that you will, some day, be talking to a friend a thousand miles away and at the same time seeing his image before you, or feeling the touch of a hand across the miles. I am not going to risk being called an old fuddy-duddy.

You see, I am greatly impressed by all the changes made in the past.

Who, for instance, would have been able to convince me, back there in those halcyon days when I dug worms to go fishin', that the day would come when I would be buying nightcrawlers?

A GOOD START

She may be a bit young for the business, but Hope, 23-month-old daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Paul Bingham, of Prestonsburg, did a better job of driving, the other afternoon, than some I have seen. The minister left Hope in the family auto in the driveway at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Osborne, on Riverside, while he was making a brief call. The engine was turned off but the keys remained in the ignition switch.

Somehow, the child turned on the ignition, started the car. What's more, the car backed out of the driveway, made a turn at almost right angles into the street, then cut back in the other direction to stop against the opposite curb. Lenna Moore, in front of whose home the auto stopped, maintains she made the second turn to avoid hitting a parked car.

In fact, she grazed a bumper but with little damaging effect. How did this gal who lacks a month of being two years old do all this? The preacher has some ideas but he can't prove them.

Martin Slayer Given Two-Year Pen Term In Johnson-Co. Court

For the hammering of Jim Martin, a native of the Johns Creek section of this county, Cecil Waller, 40, of Daniels Creek, was given a two-year pen term by a jury of the Johnson circuit court recently.

Martin was taken by Sheriff Trimble to a Paintsville hospital where he died on Jan. 19.

Are These the "More and Better Roads" Offered by Chandler and Waterfield In Floyd County?.....

ROAD TO THE JERRY FONCE HOWELL FARM

A road, costing the taxpayers $18,000, built by Chandler-Waterfield administration to the farm on Johns Creek in the Dewey Dam area owned by State Senator Jerry Fonce Howell, a staunch supporter of Harry Lee Waterfield. This dead-end road serves only one person, Jerry Fonce Howell, organizational manager for Happy Lee. He enjoys a good road to his land while his neighbors slog and slide in the mud. Why couldn't the money for this political road been spent on the many other Floyd county roads needing construction or maintenance?

ROAD USED BY RESIDENTS OF BUFFALO CREEK

The Buffalo Creek road that has been the object of numerous promises but nothing more substantial than mud and neglect have ever materialized. One hundred residents recently petitioned the state to implement its promise of "More and Better Roads" by completing an extension to this road so the children could go to school and residents could drive to work. Where the gravel allocated to this road went only politicians supporting Happy Lee Waterfield know.

The Chandler-Waterfield Administration is still promising Floyd county "More and Better Roads." This is the same false promise of three years ago when Chandler's supporters assured us that a vote for him was to buy a bit of stock in a Gold Mine in the Sky.

The examples of the Turkey Creek and Buffalo Creek roads are but two of neglect and empty promises. There are many more.

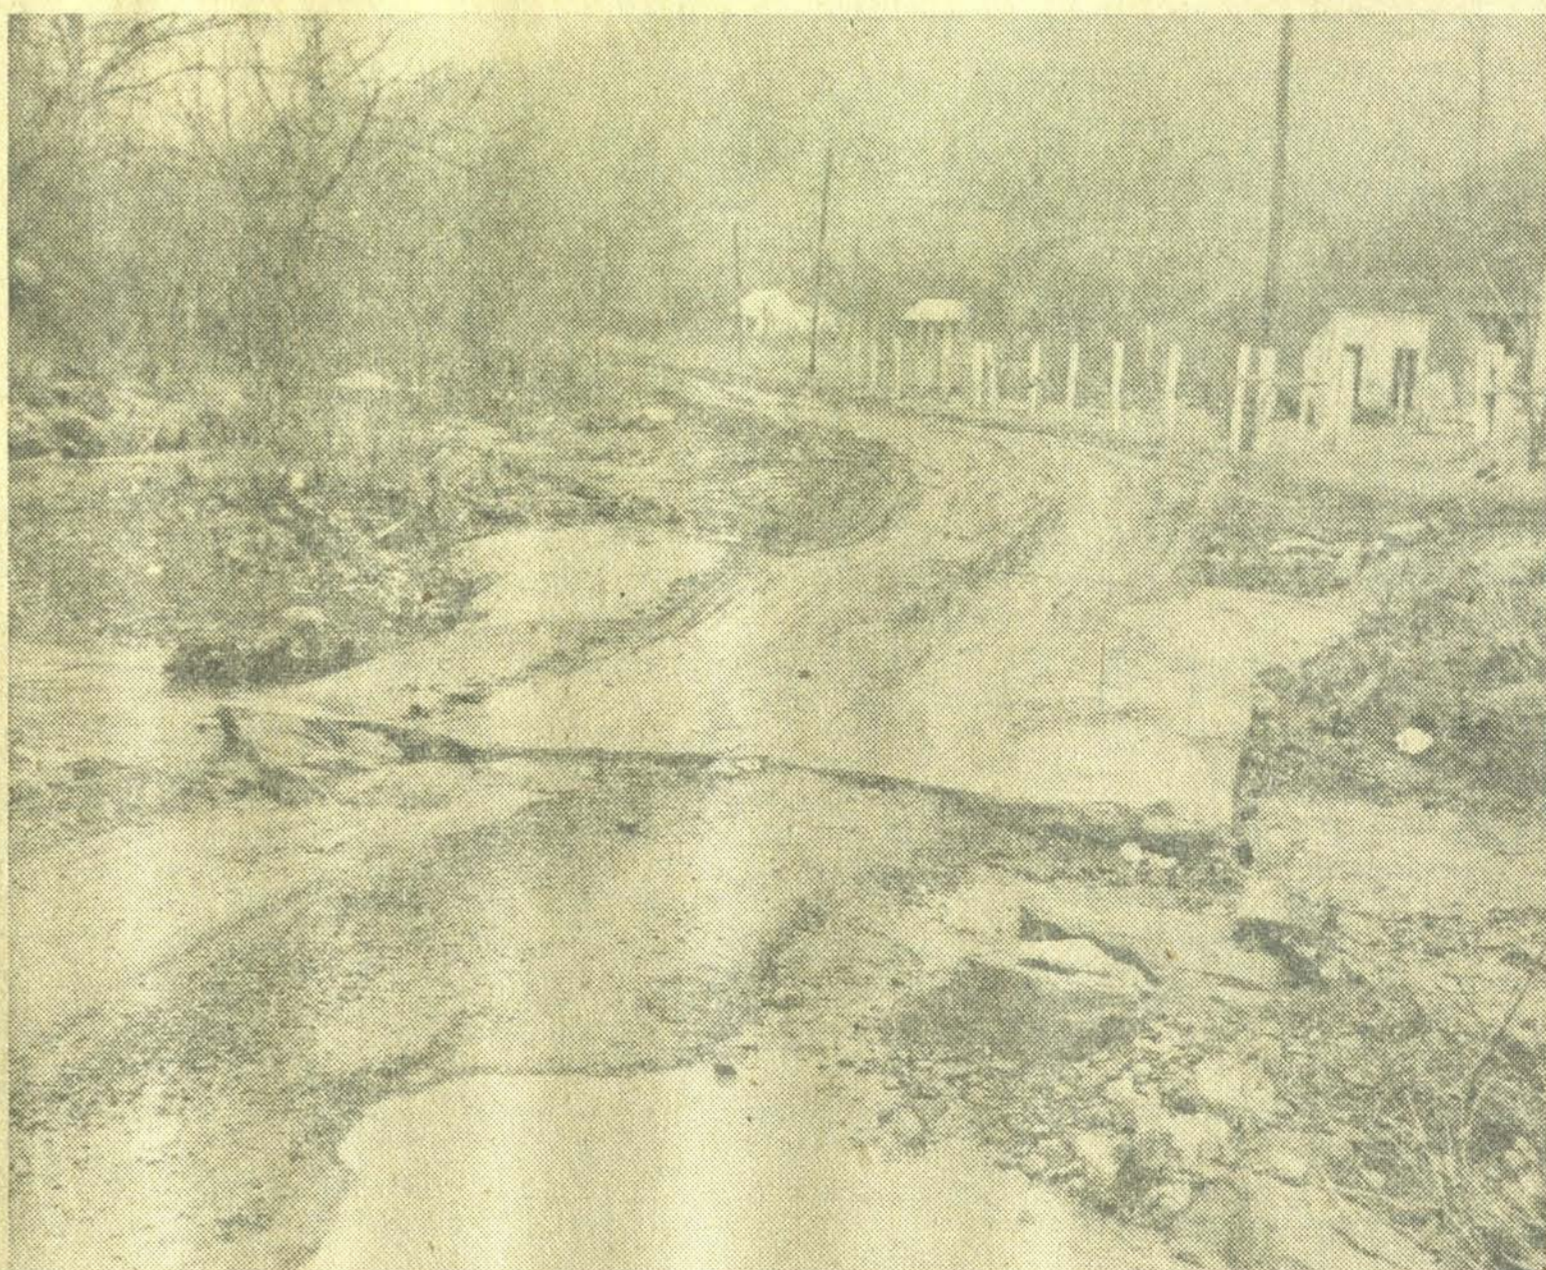

Most of the gravel for these roads allocated on the basis of need went to driveways of Waterfield men and to private projects like the one benefitting Jerry Fonce Howell.

"MORE AND BETTER ROADS" ARE STILL KNEE-DEEP IN MUD

Road used by residents and school buses on Turkey Creek. This road is one of the projects resulting from the "More and Better Roads" promised by the Chandler-Waterfield administration. Gravel has been allocated to this road. Where did it go?

THE "BRIDGE OF PROMISE" ON THE TURKEY CREEK ROAD

Turkey Creek low-water bridge. It is supposed to be state maintained along with the road. Look at the water hole at the right, the broken concrete on the bridge itself. This bridge has been the object of promises by the Chandler-Waterfield administration for months. "More and Better Roads" are but empty promises.

MUSIC FEST
SESSION SET

Experimental Program
Gets Try at Pikeville;
Twenty Schools To Enter

The first session of the Pikeville Division of the Kentucky State Music Festival will be held at Pikeville College April 1-4.

In an experimental program adopted for this year, no central festivals for the entire state will be held. The Pikeville meet, known until this year as the Pikeville Regional Music Festival, will be the only gathering of high-school-student musicians of this area.

Some 20 Eastern Kentucky high schools entered 220 solo and group performances for the state festival at Pikeville before the lists were closed several days ago, it was said. Entries not seeking ratings in the state-wide competition, but wishing only the advice and criticism of the meet's four judges, also will be accepted until March 12.

The 36 events already scheduled for the festival, with a large number of state-registered entries than last year's fest, include 15 high-school choruses and 33 smaller vocal groups; nine scholastic bands and numerous smaller instrumental organizations, including 11 miscellaneous woodwind ensembles; 20 soprano and mezzo-soprano solos; 10 girls' trios, and various other soloists and groups.

Judges for the festival will be Howard Karp, University of Kentucky, piano; Leslie Woelflin, Morehead State College; woodwinds: Dr. J. E. Duncan, head of Morehead's music department, brass instruments, and James Van Peurse, music department head at Eastern State College, vocal events. Dr. Duncan also will conduct the All-Festival Band and Van Peurse will direct the All-Festival Chorus in the meet's closing concert Saturday evening, April 4.

Rivals the Zipper

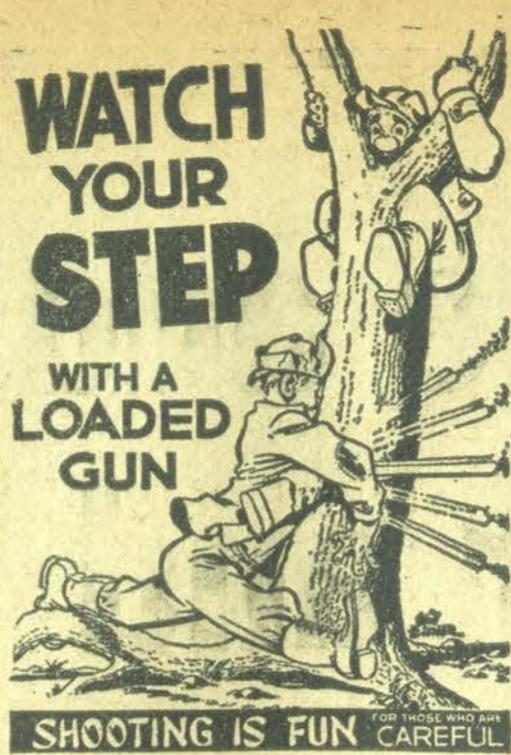

The latest rival to the zipper is Velcro, a pair of nylon ribbons covered with microscopic hooks and eyes, the March Reader's Digest reports. Press the two ribbons together gently and they lock, as a zipper would. Just as gently, they can be peeled apart. Dozens of firms will feature the new fastener this spring, in sports jackets and slacks, raincoats, children's clothing, shoe-straps, handbags, slip covers, luggage and other products.

New York Pair
Spends Winters
At State Park

Each winter from November to April Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tibbets, of North River, N. Y., call Cumberland Falls Park, near Corbin, Ky., home.

In summer the Tibbets own and operate a busy resort called the "Log House" in upper New York. After these months of hustle and hard work, they feel that quiet and relaxation can best be found at Cumberland Falls.

They drive from North River to Corbin in November and settle down in cottage No. 1 at the park with Pitch, their Labrador retriever. For six years they have enjoyed the beauties and quiet of the park. There are few trails which have not been explored by the Tibbets. James Draughn, superintendent of Cumberland Falls, says the Tibbets make themselves "right at home" and are treated by park personnel as real "home-folk."

Many of their meals are prepared in the cottage kitchen with grocery supplies purchased at nearby Corbin. On Sunday the Tibbets go into town to attend church or they join in the devotional services at the lodge. In the evenings they enjoy television and canasta in DuPont Lodge with the Draughns and other park guests.

"We enjoy the park and park life," Mr. Tibbets says, "and feel the quiet we find here is the ideal life we want to live in winter." For several years, they explain, they went to the deep South for their vacation but did not find that climate to be best for them. They prefer the mild winters and seasonal changes of Kentucky. They claim they can live cheaper at Cumberland Falls than at home during the same period.

Conn Is Promoted
To Specialist Class

Delmar Conn, 29, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Conn, of Dana, was recently promoted to Specialist Fourth Class, according to Capt. Charles I. White, his commanding officer who wrote the soldier's parents. "Personnel in this company are selected for promotion on the basis of his attitude toward his job, this company and to the service," White wrote. "His personal conduct and appearance on and off duty must be of the highest quality, his moral character and honesty must be unquestioned. The efficiency of this organization and the welfare of the men under him must be foremost in his mind at all times."

The Dana soldier enlisted in April, 1958, and went overseas last October. He is stationed in Berlin, Germany.

To establish the habit, read aloud: as many words in a newspaper column as you can without effort. Count the words. Try it again tomorrow. See how much you can increase the total as the days go by.

Conscious breathing brings with it a consciousness of posture. You cannot sit all hunched up and breathe well. But with shoulder blades pulled as nearly together as possible, you feel your lungs fill and empty with smoothness and ease. The body responds to wise treatment, Knowles concludes, and proper breath control pays off in sheer exhilaration.

BEARS WIN LOOP TITLE, IN TOURNEY OPENER

Pikeville, Ky., Feb. 23 (Sp.)—The Pikeville College Bears, who won their first Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Conference title last week and didn't know it for three days, are to meet the Villa Madonna Rebels at 9 p.m. today (Thursday) at Berea, in the first round of the annual conference tournament.

The Bears, coming from behind, nipped the Centre College Colonels, 67-61, Monday to finish their second season in the KIAC with a 10-2 mark. On Thursday the Transylvania Pioneers applied exactly the same treatment to league-leading Georgetown, dropping the Tigers into second position in the conference by administering Georgetown's third defeat in 14 loop games.

In non-conference action last week the Bears split their last two games, topping Bliss College 92-68 at Columbus, Ohio, Thursday (Feb. 19) after falling 96-84 to the Kentucky State College thoroughbreds Tuesday at Frankfort, Ky.

The Pikeville-Villa Madonna meeting will be the last game of the KIAC tourney's first round, after clashes between Georgetown and Centre and between host Berea and Transylvania Wednesday. Union will tangle with Bellarmine in the second evening's opener.

Early Riflemen Had Tough
Tests of Marksmanship

Since marksmanship was a source of pride in pioneer Kentucky, shooting matches were part of the frontier social life.

One of the most famous targets of the early sharpshooter was the "barking" squirrel, not only a pest, but a toothsome dish broiled, fried or cooked into a pot pie.

To avoid tearing the flesh with a bullet, the Kentucky marksman would hit the bark directly below the little rodent and send it whirling. Both Daniel Boone and George Rogers Clark were adept at this sport.

Another favorite Kentucky shooting pastime was "driving the nail" after a small wager had been made. From 40 paces, the marksman would aim at a common sized nail hammered about two-thirds of the way into a tree. The indifferent shooter would hit close to the nail; the better one would bend the nail and the expert would drive it all the way into the tree.

"Snuffing the candle" was a popular rifle sport. A group of experts would gather around a fire and shoot at a candle, all but invisible in the dark some 50 yards away. This improved the riflemen's night hunting, for a torch would reflect in the eyes of a deer or a wolf with just about the same intensity as the candle would flicker at 50 yards.

To win these matches took skill. The squirrel shooter usually could skin the bark beneath his target in one shot. The Kentucky marksman generally could hit the head of the nail one out of three shots and often had to drive in two nails to win a match. Extinguishing three candles out of seven was a fair score for the candle snuffer.

EVER NOTICED how often you hear the phrase—"It's as near as your phone!" Just an example of how we take the convenience and comfort of our telephones for granted. It's so easy to pick up your phone . . . for almost anything you want or need without ever taking a step from the house. Comforting, too, to know that you're never really alone when your phone's nearby. It makes modern living mighty convenient and pleasant all the way around—just telephone!

SHE KNEW WHAT SHE WANTED. Not long ago a woman came into our business office with a swatch of material in her hand. She held it against the new color phones, then selected the one she liked best. Some ladies like phones that blend with their color schemes and others prefer a contrast. It's fun to pick out just the right color, because there are nine lovely shades to choose from. Why not drop into our office and see for yourself, and treat yourself to extension phones to suit your taste?

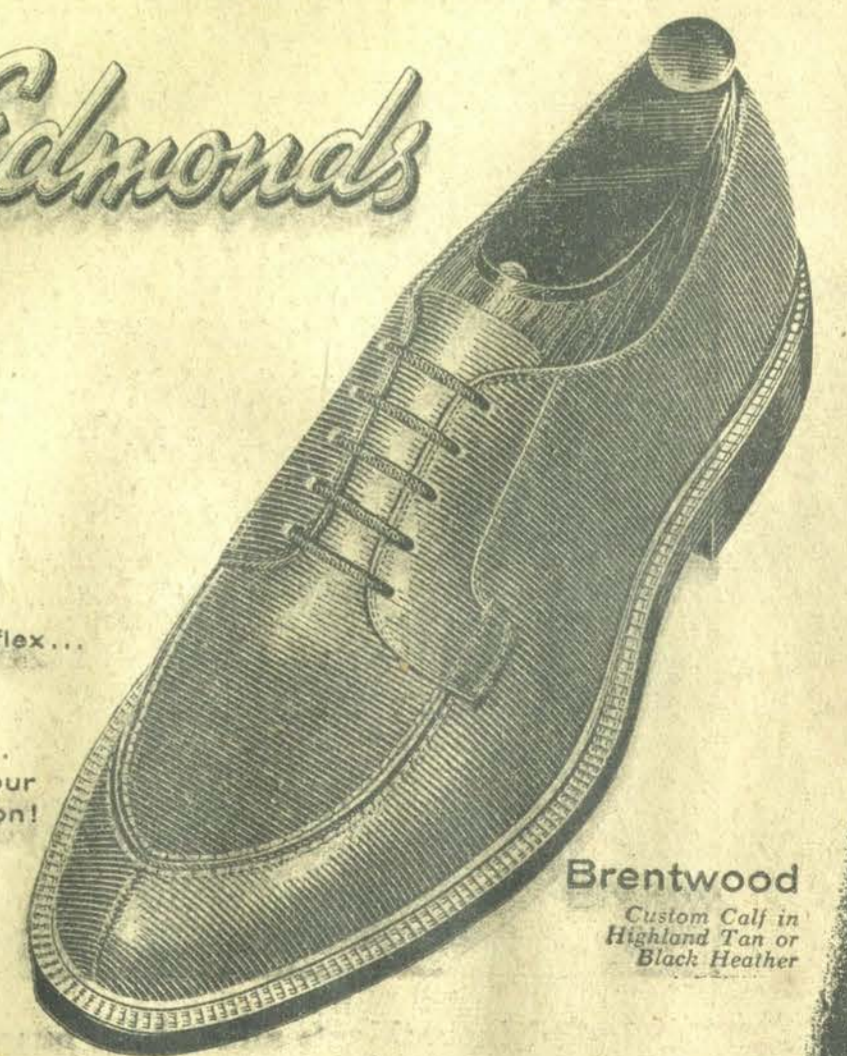

FEBRUARY was once described as "the greyest month of the year." Sometimes the lingering cold winter days seem depressing, and we feel that spring will never come.

Well, here's a suggestion for spreading a little good cheer. Just pick up your phone and make a Long Distance call to that very special person. Just the sound of your voice can brighten their day, and the cost is small for the happiness you give. Remember—it's always cheaper to call Station-to-Station—that's when you'll talk to anyone who answers at the number you're calling. You save, too, by calling after six P.M. or anytime on Sundays. Why not make someone's grey day "rosy" by Long Distance today!

MISINFORMATION and CONFUSION

There is a lot of confusion and misunderstanding concerning drivers licenses which expire in July 1959, which is the L. to Z. List, which means that if your last name begins with the letters L. M. N. O. P. Q. R. S. T. U. V. W. X. Y or Z you will be required to renew your license during the latter part of June or before July 31, 1959.

The A. to K. list which expired last July 31, 1958, have been renewed and will expire during their birth month in the year 1960. All persons renewing their license will come to the office of the Circuit Clerk as usual, and this L to Z list will expire during your birth month in 1961. It is hoped that people who read this will advise others. This office is consulted almost daily as to the manner of renewal of license and it is hoped that this article will put everyone in line.

bed. He and Mrs. Quinn took his money, covered the doctor with a blanket.

Smith choked again, his voice hoarse with emotion.

"It was whiskey and bad women that brought me here," he said. "I want to tell you boys to let it alone. Oh, God, save my poor soul. I wish I had never been born."

The Enquirer correspondent, editor Spencer Cooper of the Hazel Green Herald and others of the press were writing furiously.

Detective George W. Drake stood up, asked Jailer Centers to Centers to bring a cup of water. Smith gulped it down.

Drake prompted him to tell about other murders but the condemned man said it would take too long. Sheriff Combs told him to go ahead and take his time.

Bad Tom began again, saying the first man he had killed was Joe Hurt. Then he and Joe Adkins killed Joe Eversole and Nick Combs. He was sure he fired the fatal shot into both of them. He had found Eversole hidden in the bushes and killed him from ambush. Searching Eversole, he found $30 which he kept.

"Then came Joe McKnight," Bad Tom continued. "Me and Bob Prophet was both in that but I did most of the shooting and I reckon God put him down against me." He went on to relate how he and Jack Combs killed Robert Cornett who was at work logging.

"I was in some more shooting scrapes," Smith went on, "and men were killed but I don't know who killed them. That is all."

The detective was insistent that Tom go on, asked him if he knew who killed Judge Combs. The man who was now facing death denied that he had killed the judge. Someone had shot him in the arm and he couldn't assist in the crime. It had been plotted in Fult French's house. French, Joe Adkins, Jess Fields and Boone Fischer were the plotters. He said that later Joe Adkins told him he killed Judge Combs.

The Cincinnati newspaperman asked if French paid him for the murders.

"He was good to us and we got clothes and anything we wanted," Smith replied. Joe Adkins used to get the money. I didn't get very much but I got everything I wanted. I wanted whiskey more than anything else and I got plenty of that."

Her sister intervened now to ask him to stop and pray. He said he had something else to talk about. After embracing him, the weeping woman left the scaffold.

The condemned man raised a hand, commanding attention. There was no need, for the thousands were fearful of losing a word.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said and the words rolled from his lips as though he had been at that moment inspired with a new life, so clear and distinct, free from the mountain twang and provincialism," wrote Editor

Cooper of the Hazel Green Herald.

"I am going to take my departure from this world of wickedness and corruption," Bad Tom continued. "I know not where I am going but trust I shall meet you in that beautiful land where torment is unknown."

He had confessed his sins to the Lord, had been forgiven and the spirit of his Maker was upon him. He urged that his listeners abjure the potent mountain whiskey. He denounced bad women and asked all of his hearers to pledge with him as a dying man that these two things would forever be put out of their lives. He asked a show of hands. Five thousand hands responded as if the crowd was under the mighty spell of a camp meeting evangelist.

He went on to urge everybody to pray for him and turning to Revs. Kelly Hudson and Dickey he requested they sing, "Guide Me, Oh Great Jehovah." The ministers began to sing, and from the street, trees and housetops he was joined by the crowd. The pent-up emotion of the people was released in the chorus like the breaking of a mighty storm.

The song died and Sheriff Combs led the condemned man to stand over the trap in the floor. Smith kneeled and began to pray and for ten minutes he pleaded with his Master. The crowd went to its knees in the street and on the housetops. Here and there a mountain man or woman joined loudly in the prayer.

Rising from the deadly trap on which he had bowed, Smith again asked the ministers to sing. Now he wanted to hear, "Bear the Cross." The ministers sang it out almost alone as the emotion of the crowd was spending itself.

"I am ready now," Smith said, "but I would give the world for two days more. I can't get them, I know, so I'll go to meet the Lord."

Drake and Combs found his hands and ankles, Centers gave the doomed man a drink of water. A black hood was placed over his face and the noose adjusted around his neck. Some one pulled a curtain to enclose the man who was to die in a moment.

Those nearest the scaffold heard Sheriff Combs ask, "All ready?" and the answering "Yes" of Smith. Then, a sudden burst of the words, "Save, Oh, God, save me," and Combs cut the rope that allowed Smith to fall. He fell six feet and the still crowd heard plainly the snap of the breaking neck.

There, hanging in full view, with his tongue protruding, the outlaw weaved and twisted until the momentum of the fall died out. Dr. B. D. Cox, who was to die from an assassin's bullet in Jackson seven years later, examined his pulse, listened to his heart, and pronounced him dead 17 minutes after the trap was sprung.

Sheriff Combs felt in his pocket for a knife but, not having it, he turned to Bob Terry, a deputy, and asked if he had a sharp one. Terry gave him a knife and Combs cut the rope that had taken the life of one of Breathitt's worst outlaws. Three or four men helped place the body in a waiting coffin. Friends and relatives of Smith carried his body to a waiting wagon. Five minutes after the body had been cut down, the corpse-laden vehicle was on the road to Carr Fork of the Kentucky River where Bad Tom was to be buried.

The crowd came alive now, many people a little ashamed of themselves for being there, many regretting their presence for a lifetime. A thousand of the excursionists from the Blue Grass began to tramp back to the railway station, hundreds of others boarded wagons, mounted horses and mules or struck out a-foot for home.

More than 500 people, though, in ox-carts, wagons or riding horseback, formed a procession behind the vehicle bearing the black coffin. For hundreds their morbid interest did not die until the body of Bad Tom Smith was buried on Carr Fork.

For hours that evening Willie Smith, the ferry boy, plied his task of getting hundreds back across the North Fork. He was careful not to put the butt of the pole against his body as he pushed. Dr. Rader had said it might injure him. He pushed mightily, however, for the bank was lined with waiting people.

Bad Tom Smith, the outlaw, was dead and for thousands the circumstances of his passing would impinge upon their consciousness all their lives. Mountain balladry expressed their thought and mood and for decades, on Buckhorn, Troublesome and Carr, they sang, "I witnessed Tom Smith A-Hanging."

March 2 Deadline. For Auto Licenses, Luckett Announces

Frankfort, Feb. 23 (Spl) — Commissioner of Revenue, J. E. Luckett, has announced that the deadline for the purchase of motor vehicle license tags from county clerks has been extended to March 2 this year.

The reason for this extension is that the legal deadline of March 1 falls on a Sunday, he said.

Luckett added: Passenger car, truck and motorcycle owners are urged to purchase their licenses as soon as possible. The commissioner warned that the usual last-minute rush with lines of waiting people in many counties will occur again this year. The law requires that licenses be secured from the county clerk of the county where the owner resides, or where the vehicle is primarily operated.

Luckett said the Department of Revenue has finished a preliminary tabulation of motor vehicles registered for calendar year 1958. The totals are as follows: Passenger cars, 833,000; commercial trucks, 130,000; farm trucks, 90,000; motorcycles, 6,000, and trailers, 8,500.

Foster Drama Actors Needed

Frankfort, Feb. 23 (Spl.) — Only two weeks remain to apply for roles in "The Stephen Foster Story" which opens this summer in Bardstown. Final auditions are scheduled for Sunday, March 15, in Bardstown for the author, Paul Green, the director, Sam Seiden and others of the production staff.

There are 44 speaking parts which include the members of a singing chorus requiring fully matured professional voices. There are 20 actors needed for whom a singing ability is desirable but not necessary. No technical assignments are open.

The producer, The Stephen Foster Drama Association of Bardstown, has received hundreds of applications from all over the nation including more than 50 for the role of Stephen Foster. Foster and his wife, Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair, are the two principal leads and both must be excellent singers and actors.

The producers report that they have not received enough applicants for the character parts, actors who can play the roles of men and women 40-60 years of age. There are several such parts which are very good. Among the singers there is a need for low basses and contraltos. The director and author have both expressed hope that most of the casting can be accomplished from Kentuckians who apply.

The theater designed especially for The Stephen Foster Story is now under construction on the grounds of My Old Kentucky Home. Rehearsals begin June 1 and the opening performance is on Friday, June 26 with performances each night except Mondays through Labor Day, September 7. Applicants for acting and singing roles should apply at once for audition appointments.

More Moonshine Made In State As Economy Hit, Marshal Says

Moonshining is on the increase in Eastern Kentucky. U. S. Marshal Curtis Clark of Lexington and Prestonsburg, said Wednesday. The rise is attributed partly to the economic conditions, he said.
Clark, former Prestonsburg Mayor, said last year's operations were nearly 50 percent greater than two years ago. He blamed some of it on widespread unemployment.

Moonshiners are harder to catch because of their modern methods. The marshal explained some operators use bottled gas or gasoline to fire the stills, instead of wood.

Smoke used to be an aid in detecting illegal operations, but main giveaways now, he said, are odor of mash, reports from grocers of unusually large purchases of sugar, and anonymous informants. The informers sometimes are wives of men who drank the homemade whiskey and want to get rid of the source.
Clark said some moonshiners don't regard their work as a crime.

Doctors First Line Of Attack On Alcoholism

Doctors First Line Of Attack In Alcoholism
By J. COLLIS RINGO,
Executive Director Kentucky Commission on Alcoholism
Alcoholic Anonymous was originally organized by two men who had reached a stage of uncontrolled drinking and had repeatedly been hospitalized and treated for drunkenness and its after-effects. The early members of A. A. were primarily in this category. They had not "bottomed" and A. A. was a last resort.

For a number of years it was generally believed a drinker must reach the late stages of alcoholism, be approaching skid row, before effective rehabilitation should be attempted.

This theory has been disproved by the researchers. Continuing study has demonstrated that early detection of this illness is possible. It has further demonstrated it can be arrested, that an alcoholic can abstain and occupy a normal position in society.

Dr. Marvin A. Block, chairman of the Committee on Alcoholism of the American Medical Association, contends the physician, particularly the general practitioner, is the first line of attack on alcoholism. The general practitioner must be able to recognize the early symptoms and treat the patient promptly.

Dr. Block says: "The average doctor should be able to motivate his patient to cooperate with treatment long before he hits 'bottom'. If the patient shows a pattern of adverse results from drinking—that is, if his drinking is already causing significant difficulties in his job, family or any other department of his life, he can properly be called a 'problem drinker', and he should be advised to abstain. This would prevent many from becoming alcoholics."
This is a comparatively new concept by the medical profession. Not too many years ago physicians generally did not believe it medically respectable to treat alcoholics. A survey completed in October of 1958 by the Alabama Commission on Alcoholism disclosed that a large number of physicians in Alabama refused to treat alcoholics, preferring to refer them to alcoholic clinics.
