

THURSDAY

PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY

JULY 4, 1962

This Town-- That World

JULY 4, 1962 Since this is July Fourth and ideas for this column are plumb scarce and all my sources of supply are out celebratin', permit me to do some harking back. Never mind how long ago it has been.

It was the first Fourth I ever "celebrated." Yes, we knew about the Fourth, up my creek, but we didn't celebrate it. We saved our fireworks to make unholy the Christmas season, much as boys do yet.

I recall a lot of American flags, a brass band, a parade, men on prancing horses, a man with long, flowing whiskers, aging men in the line of march, veterans of the Civil War, perhaps seven or eight of them.

The crowd stood and listened to an Independence Day oration. And it cheered wildly when the last rounded phrase was spoken.

There was lemonade; ice cream, too, and pretty girls, and it all amounted to something special.

Now the sights of the day are memory-dimmed, but just a glimpse of them this day and a faint echo of that band music that drifts in and out make a fellow feel just a mite younger, if it isn't my second childhood I'm lapsing into.

Well, the brass band has gone, and the parade, and the last Civil War veteran has been gathered to his fathers. Fourth of July oratory isn't heard around here, any more, and the horses prance only across television and movie screens.

But the flag still waves. Yet it takes an American to wave it. Come to think of it, it will wave by itself in the breeze, if anybody will take the pains to hang it from doorway or window.

But how many did you see flying today, July 4, 1962?

FOOD STAMP PROGRAM GETS COMBS ASSIST

NO APOLOGIES FOR HIGHWAY, OTHER WORK

Governor Lashes Out At Chandler on Road To Eastern Kentucky

It didn't take Governor Bert T. Combs long last Saturday to tell county officials, food stamp workers and recipients and a gathering of citizens in the circuit courtroom that he intended to see that the approximately $15,000 needed from the state to continue the pilot food stamp program in this county will be forthcoming.

"I don't know of any way the state's money could better be spent than to guarantee that men, women and children will not go hungry, so you're going to get your money—unless somebody stops me," he told the gathering.

The Governor spoke after County Attorney Barkley J. Sturgill, acting as master of ceremonies, and County Judge Henry Stumbo had made formal statements urging a continuance of the stamp program and after Carl Horn, supervisor of the program in this county, had reviewed the year-old history of the pilot program.

"I feel obligated to the people of Floyd County more than to those of any other county in Kentucky," Governor Combs frankly admitted. He listed three major phases of endeavor he and Lieut. Gov. Wyatt (See Story No. 1, Page 6)

Road Surfacing Project Awarded for $57,967.65 To Adams Construction

A bituminous concrete surfacing project in this county was awarded by the Highway Department on June 25, Commissioner of Highways Henry Ward announced.

The project includes surfacing of the Garrett-Salyersville road for 2.037 miles, beginning at the Magoffin county line and ending at the mouth of Raccoon fork of Salt Lick Creek.

Adams Construction Corporation submitted the low bid of $57,967.65. This highway improvement is being financed entirely out of the state road fund.

SIX DIVERS IN TRAINING

Rescue Squad Sponsors Tutelage At Louisville; Envision New Equipment

With the end of this week the Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad will add to its repertoire of services the work of trained divers. Six members of the Squad are in Louisville receiving diving instruction and training under the tutelage of Louisville police and Coast Guard divers. This training done, they will add to their equipment aqua-lungs, tanks, wet-suits, masks and all the items needed for underwater exploration, whether in lifesaving or for the recovery of bodies.

Capt. Graham Burchett said the week of instruction for the six men will cost approximately $900. It was pointed out that some of the six are using a part of their vacation for the training work, and that others have taken time off their regular jobs for it.

The six trainees are Bennie Fanning, Jr., Ben Ferguson, Ernest Graham Burchett, Jack Branham, Tilden Ellis, Homer Nealey, Jr. Since its organization following the school bus disaster of 1958, the Squad has built its own building and amassed a large inventory of equipment. Its rescue operations have ranged into every Eastern Kentucky county where tragedy has resulted in need for its help.

Nobody on the Squad is paid for his services. Instead, every member has spent of his own funds to keep the organization going, to get equipment and to erect the building where meetings are held at least once a month and where equipment is stored.

FILE APPEALS ON CITY TAX

Stockholder Alleges Verification Request Stymied In Uncertainty

The "blanket" 50% assessment raise made in Prestonsburg recently to acquire through taxation needed revenues was under attack this week in county court.

Two Prestonsburg firms, Meade & Allen and the Prestonsburg Theatre Corporation, filed appeals in county court, claiming they had not been provided requested certification of the assessment placed on their properties. Meade & Allen's assessment was raised from $26,000 to $42,000, and that of the theatre firm from $30,000 to $45,750.

But said John Allen, a stockholder in both firms, in an affidavit accompanying the appeal, his request that the city clerk supply a certification of assessment was not given, the clerk referring him to the clerk of the board of supervisors. The latter, he said, informed him he could not certify the assessment until the city attorney approved such action.

Trial Commissioner Harold J. Stumbo entered an order directing City Clerk Judith D. Archer and Kermit Baldrige, clerk of the board of supervisors, to certify to the court the valuation of the property in question as fixed by the supervisors and also to show the date the supervisors adjourned.

Labor Argument Results In Death of Pike Man

Joe Coleman, 46, of Fishtap, Pike county, was shot to death Monday during an argument over the merits of two labor groups.

The shooting occurred in a contractor's office at the side of a highway leading to Fishtap Reservoir.

State police said a murder charge was placed against Woodrow Matney, 40, also of Fishtap. He was placed in the Pike county jail.

Police said the men were arguing whether the United Mine Workers or the A. F. of L. would be a better bargaining agent for laborers on the highway project.

WRIGHT SUES RAILWAY FIRM

Track Passenger Claims Louisa Mishap Resulted In Permanent Injuries

Gary Wright, of Water Gap, filed suit in circuit court this week seeking to recover $9,990 damages from the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company. Named as co-defendants with the railway company were Ollie Ellis, Water Gap merchant, and his son, Ollie Franklin Ellis.

Wright claims permanent injuries resulted from a collision last April 4 at a Louisa rail crossing of the company's train and a truck owned by the elder Ellis. Wright, a passenger in the truck, which was driven by Ollie Franklin Ellis, alleged carelessness and recklessness on the part of C. & O. employees and the driver of the truck. JUDGE ORDERS BONDS FOR 5

In Floyd Rape Case; Beaver Woman Alleges Attack In Pike County

The five Pike county men charged with the rape of a Floyd county woman June 12 were ordered held to the Pike county grand jury by Judge Ervin Pruitt following a hearing June 21.

One of the five, a 16-year-old Dorton boy, was given a hearing in juvenile court on the same date and held under $1,000 bond.

The five, who waived examining trials on June 13 and were held to the grand jury, are charged with raping a 25-year-old Floyd county woman in Pike county early on the morning of June 12.

All four of the accused adults were held without bond until a hearing to determine if bond would be permitted.

No bond was permitted for two of the adults, Robert McPeak, 20, and Gary Wright, 23.

Judge Pruitt set bond of $5,000 each for the other two accused adults, Glen Damron, 21, and David Fleming, 18. Judge Pruitt also placed Damron and Fleming under peace bonds of $1,000 each.

Officers said Hattie Kiser, of Beaver, Floyd county, claimed she was beaten and raped while detained in two automobiles about three or four hours on the morning of June 12. She was reported found in a dazed or unconscious condition beside the road near Indian Creek in Pike county about 4 a.m., June 12. She was taken to a hospital and released the same day.

Officers reported that the five admitted having intercourse with the woman but maintained that it was with her consent. They also denied beating her.

NEW STAMP OFFICE OPENS

Supervisor Horn Notes $91,418 Worth of Stamps Issued In Fiscal Year

The food stamp office here opened Monday morning in new offices in the east wing of the courthouse after remodeling work had been completed.

The office occupies space formerly occupied by the office of County Judge Henry Stumbo, who moved into the opposite wing of the building to offices formerly occupied by the Floyd County Board of Education. The east wing office formerly occupied by County Attorney Barkley Sturgill, who also moved to the Board-vacated portion of the building, is expected later to serve the County Clerk's office.

Carl Horn, supervisor of the pilot food stamp program in the county, this week said the $91,418 worth of food stamps issued in June brought the total issued since June 1, 1961, when the program was instituted, to $1,124,994. During June, 1,518 families, or 8,110 persons, benefited as recipients of the program.

Horn said the federal government, through the U. S. Department of Agriculture, bore approximately 80% of the total amount expended.

Pointing out that the stamp program administration has reduced the number of recipients from the days when direct commodity relief was afforded, Horn said that before the stamp system was introduced 2,600 families were receiving surplus foodstuffs in the county. The reduction amounts to 41.8 per cent.

In his review of the stamp program at last Saturday's meeting with Governor Combs here, Horn said that, in addition to the assistance given the needy, the stamp program had favorably affected about 300 merchants and 15 wholesalers.

Families participating in the food stamp program began receiving newly designed food coupons this week.

The new coupons are printed in two denominations—50 cents which is orange in color, and $2 which is

PIONEER DAYS

SALE

In this sale we go 'way, 'way back to Pioneer Days. And in this sale there hangs a tale—a bear's tail, if you will pardon the pun.

More than a hundred years ago, David Cooley, father-in-law of Isaac Richmond, operated a General Store here in Prestonsburg. He was the great-great-grandfather of the present I. Richmond Store manager.

In those early days of this, the oldest of Floyd county businesses, Mr. Cooley owned a bear which he kept chained to a tree on the property where the store was located on First avenue here, a few doors away from the site of the present store. It was his custom in those days to invite home with him for lunch all customers who happened to be in the store at the noon hour. The invitation was usually accepted, and store and bear were left unattended.

On one such occasion Mr. Cooley and his friends returned to the store to find the bear had broken his chain and was inside the building. Since he kept sugar in a barrel, the whereabouts of the bear was no mystery. They found the barrel overturned and the bear helping himself to its contents.

As a result of this incident, Mr. Cooley staged Prestonsburg's first sale—a sale of the sugar from the barrel, at bargain prices.

And now, a century later, we go 'way back to the bear and this bit of history to tilt over for our customers and friends barrels and barrels of bargains in our Semi-Annual Sale.

Breckinridge Appoints Organization Committee Of Sixteen Kentuckians

In a move to broaden interest in Kentucky history on a community and local level, John B. Breckinridge, president of the Kentucky Historical Society and Kentucky Attorney General, has announced the formation of a Committee on Organization of Local Societies.

The persons from the Eastern section of the state were named on the committee. These are Clifford R. Rader, of Morehead, Henry P. Scalf, Prestonsburg, and Mrs. Robert Martin, of Martin.

The committee will work in conjunction with the recently organized Historic Sites and Shrines committee whose object is the preservation and acquisition of historically important sites.

As a first step toward a statewide network of historical groups, the Committee on Organization of Local Societies will work to establish regional societies corresponding to the 12 highway districts in the state. They will also try to reactivate any defunct local societies.

The Eastern Kentucky Historical Society, organized here in 1956, to cover the 16 counties which constituted in whole or part Floyd county as it was established in 1800, served as suggestive idea for the organization of societies on a regional basis. Jean Auxier, of Pikeville, was named president of the group.

Breckinridge said a chairman and additional members of the committee will be named at a later date. At present, 16 members of the committee have been named.

Those named besides Rader, Scalf and Mrs. Martin, are George Street Boone, Elkton, Mrs. John M. Rosseau, Glasgow, Judge Forrest Calico, Lancaster, Mrs. William W. Weis, Maysville, Charles F. Hinds, Frankfort, Elmer R. Wallace, Carrollton, Henry Harned, Frankfort, Mrs. Katherine Cooper, Henderson, W. A. undertook upon going to Frankfort: 1. Education; 2. Highways; 3. The creating of more jobs. Commenting that teachers are being paid an average of $1,000 a year more than they received four years ago, Combs declared: 'The children in these mountains have more of intelligence, imagination, drive — whatever it takes. Then we figure they need education for their great potential to be developed. It's for these that we plan and work in education, not merely because we love the teachers.'

On that subject he turned to the community college program which was authorized by the 1962 General Assembly. 'If any college is to be built, the first will be built right here,' he added. Commenting on criticism of the Eastern Kentucky Turnpike, the Governor warned to his task, lashing out at Ex-Governor Chandler whom he quoted as having said the highway 'ends nowhere.'

May attended Pikeville high school and Pikeville College. He has his first class radio-telephone operators license. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl May, of Pikeville, and is married to the former Mona Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Hughes, of Prestonsburg. The Mays have one daughter, Cindy.

Scoring Chandler for his statement that the road to the mountains is not needed, that the existing road should have been widened instead, Combs remarked, 'Happy Chandler and the Mexican bean bug descended upon Kentucky about the same time, and I don't know which is worse.'

During the spirited speech he was interrupted repeatedly by applause. 'Roads, schools, parks may not do all we need, but I say they make our chances twice as good. I have no apologies to offer. We are trying. I sometimes feel that not only am I on trial but also that Eastern Kentucky is.'

County Judge Stumbo said, in urging the Governor's help to assure continuance of the food stamp program: 'I am in favor of continuing the stamp program until something better comes along.' Voicing official concern here about the program and its continuance, County Attorney Sturgill pointed out that Floyd county had no money with which to carry the local share of the administrative burden. 'So,' he added, 'we turned where we have turned on about every other occasion I know of, at least since I have been in office — to Governor Combs.'

COURT DENIES BALLOT PLACE

Paintsville Candidate Refused Right To Run Under Lincoln Emblem

Walter Clay Van Hoose, Paintsville, will not be listed a candidate for United States Senator on the Conservative Republican ticket.

Franklin Circuit Court Judge Henry Meigs issued an injunction against Secretary of State Henry Carter Tuesday enjoining him from listing Van Hoose as a candidate under that party name.

The Paintsville man had filed a nominating petition and asked Carter to certify him as a candidate of the Conservative Republican party under the likeness of Abraham Lincoln as an emblem.

Judge Meigs issued the injunction on grounds that Van Hoose had allowed his 20 days to lapse without answering the petition against him. The law-suit was brought by the Republican State Central Committee and Don Cooper, Somerset, brother of United States Senator John Sherman Cooper.

The suit made three principle points: 1. Van Hoose's petition was 24 names short of the 1,000 required for an independent candidate to get on the ballot. 2. Use of the name, 'Conservative Republican Party,' was calculated to confuse voters into believing Van Hoose was the Republican nominee, rather than Senator Thurston B. Morton, Louisville. 3. The emblem of Lincoln's picture likewise was calculated to form the erroneous impression Van Hoose was nominee of the Republican Party.

LEE COUNTY MAN PROVES FARMING IS PROFITABLE

BY NEVYLE SHACKELFORD
 Quicksand, Ky.—With some justification, agricultural economists have said that farming, especially commercial farming, has very little place in Eastern Kentucky. But Albert Little, Jr., of Lee county has an answer to this statement: "It's a living."

And that he does. As a matter of fact, he lives better than many of his neighbors who went away to the cities of the north and found positions in industry that pay a much greater annual income. Little may not have a regular paycheck, but he has no fear of losing his job.

Little who, all told, owns about 500 acres of mountain land scattered here and there in the general area of his homestead on Fincastle Ridge is, as was mentioned in a previous column, making arrangements to live even better. He's starting a cattle ranch after the western tradition.

The name and brand of this ranch has already been registered as the "Lazy L," and he's stocking this spread with Santa Gertrudis cattle, a hardy breed that is said to produce excellent beef, but requires less care and management than most other types.

"I'm not trying to substitute breed for care and management," he said, "but I'm trying to find and introduce a breed that will thrive and produce better on the type of pasture and forage we have right here in Eastern Kentucky farms."

Right now Little has two Santa Gertrudis bulls and three heifers which he purchased last spring from the "Rolling C" Ranch in Texas. After crops are "laid by" this summer he's going back to Texas for eight more heifers and he expects to build up a herd of about 40 head of this breed of cattle. He already has a herd of 42 Herefords and he plans to cross-breed some of these Herefords with the Santa Gertrudis cattle, hoping to show up hardier calves for the market.

Another experiment Little has in mind is to raise quarter horses. "You can't have much of a ranch without horses," he said, "and right now all I have in this line of livestock are two old mules."

He went on to state that range cattle, and on the range is where he intends to keep them, are much easier handled by a man on horseback.

But Little isn't going to breed quarter horses just to herd his own cattle. He's going to breed them to further increase his chances at "living well." He and his brother, Col. James Little, a World War II ace fighter pilot and the airman that fired the first American shots at the enemy in the Korean War, are going into this enterprise together.

As another adjunct to better farm living, Little also raises purebred Hampshire and Landrace hogs. "My wife takes care of the management of the hog project," he said, "all I have to do is furnish the feed." At the present time he has 50 of these hogs which he is "feeding out" for the market and this year, if he can find the time, he's going to construct a modern "feeding parlor" for added convenience in the operation and to cut down on labor.

Along with all his other farm operations, Little raises tobacco and assists in growing a considerable acreage of hay and corn on his father's farm. He has to work hard, of course, and put in longer hours than a factory hand, but as he said, he "lives well, enjoys every minute of it, and can take off when he takes the notion." He drives a good car, owns a nice home and is in the process of constructing a better one. He has a daughter in college and his farm enterprises have paid off.

Reiterating his statement about living well, he intimated that a few corners have to be cut, but with the right kind of management, a good living can be made on most Eastern Kentucky farms. It takes work, however, and a lot of it.

State Department Names Changed by Recent Order Under Reorganization Act

Frankfort, Ky., July 2 (Sp.) — The Kentucky Library Extension Division is now the Kentucky Department of Libraries. Miss Margaret Willis, director of the Division since 1957, heads the new Department, holding the title of state librarian.

The change of name is part of the Reorganization Act approved by the 1962 General Assembly. The Division has been a separate agency since 1957 when its parent organization, the Department of Library and Archives, was dissolved.

Miss Willis commented that the newly-created Department of Libraries will not materially affect the current operations or staff of the agency, but that it does "open the door for future improvements in library service, including service to other state departments. We are building up a reference library collection of technical material on economics, education, trade and other fields, in preference to light recreational material which is becoming available to individual borrowers through local libraries in our regional system. The reference library here in Frankfort will supply these local libraries with the expensive technical material they need only occasionally — the same material needed by state government agencies."

The reference library now contains 30,000 volumes, Miss Willis said. Books are still mailed to some borrowers who have no access to a local library.

In addition to service rendered through its reference library, the new Department will continue to develop regional libraries throughout the state, distribute cash grants to libraries and bookmobiles, to order, catalog and deliver Bookmobile books, distribute new Bookmobiles and certify librarians. The Department has 36 regional staff members in 10 regional libraries comprising 51 counties.

Miss Willis was formerly head of the circulation department of the Louisville Free Public Library. She joined the State Library Extension Division in 1955 as a coordinator and was named acting director in August, 1956.

Three other name changes were effective July 1, as specified in the Reorganization Act. The Department of Banking became the Department of Banking and Securities; the Department of Industrial Relations became the Department of Labor; and the Department of Welfare became the Department of Corrections.

The Department of Economic Development became the Department of Commerce on June 1 by executive order of Governor Bert Combs.

The division is organized as a ROAD (Reorganization of Army Divisions) mechanized division, one of the first ROAD divisions to be created. NATURE'S UNDERTAKERS AND GRAVEDIGGERS

Nature has plenty of gravediggers and undertakers to bury her dead. These bury and consume the millions of small animals and birds that die most every week during summer. Although these multiplied millions fall in death, rarely do we ever run across the dead body of a small animal or a bird—the gravediggers by the millions wait to bury them the moment they die!

It is not for the constant work of these busy undertakers, the earth would soon be filled with dead bodies and we couldn't walk without stepping on the dead. The air would soon become a foul stench that would be sickening.

The sexton beetle is one of nature's busiest gravediggers. While we often think of most beetles as harmful, many of them are in fact highly useful as gravediggers and scavengers.

The moment a small animal dies, the sexton beetle will be right by to take charge of the carcass. It will get its mate to come and help. The pair of beetles then begin to dig a grave right beside the dead body of the animal or bird. If the ground is too hard for digging up, they will find a soft spot for the grave. When it is dug out big enough to hold the body, the beetles will then clear a path from the dead body to the grave, often chewing off roots or plants to get them out of the way. Then they lie on their backs and with their six strong legs, they push the carcass to the grave and roll it in. Then the female lays eggs in the grave, which will soon hatch out and form larvae to devour the dead body.

The sexton beetle is about an inch long, is shiny black with deep vermilion blotches on its back. This beetle does valuable work as an undertaker and a scavenger.

THE FLOWERING DOGWOOD

The flowering dogwood (Cornus florida) has more uses than any other small tree of our forests. For centuries the French Canadians and the early French settlers of Louisiana have made their toothbrushes out of dogwood twigs, which they claim keep their teeth glistening white and is good for the gums to brush with a dogwood toothbrush.

The finest weavers' shuttles in the world are made from dogwood, and the longer they are used, the smoother and better they get. Many shops in the south manufacture shuttles from dogwood, to supply the world's looms; dogwood is also used to make gold club heads and mallets and jewelers' blocks.

The dogwood played a great role in the pioneer development of our country. Old-timers made all their wedges, or gluts, from dogwood, for use in splitting rails and timbers of all kinds. Most of their mattock handles, single-trees and ox yokes were made from dogwood; when it seasons out good, it becomes as hard as iron and is very durable.

The outer bark of dogwood is rough and scaly like the hide of an alligator. The inner bark is bitter and highly medicinal; it is often used as a substitute for quinine. The bark will also yield its many chemical properties to water and alcohol, and is used to produce tannic and gallic acids, resin, gum, oil, wax, lignin, lime, potassium and iron. The bark is also a good tonic and stimulant; the dried bark contains Coranine, used in making the medicines.

The dogwood tree is a cousin to the black gum, being in the Dogwood Family, Cornaceae; it is one of our most beautiful trees and transforms our hills into white sanctuaries of beauty every April. The whiteness of the flowers is from the four white bracts surrounding the golden yellow true flowers; sometimes the white bracts show stains of crimson—and these are said to commemorate the suffering and death of Christ on the cross, as the four bracts are in the form of a cross.

The dogwood blossoms produce red berries in autumn, adding verve and sparkle to the landscape. The berries are really nuts, or drupes, with two small seeds; the seeds are highly prized as food by squirrels, birds and many kinds of wild life. The dogwood can be transplanted if proper care is used and it will make a most valuable addition to the lawn or garden border. The leaves are opposite, smooth, ovate, not toothed and parallel-veined.

According to legend, the cross of Christ was made of dogwood, which was so heavy He sank under its weight, and Simon, the Cyrenian, bore it for Him.

In England, the dogwood is sometimes called "dogwood," because its strong, firm boughs were once used to make daggers. It is one of our most colorful and interesting trees and should have a wider planting, especially along our roadsides, to beautify the countryside.

Frankfort, Ky., July 3—Gov. Bert Combs and Revenue Commissioner James V. Marcum have announced that after July 29 retailers and others with small monthly state sales or use tax liabilities will not be required to file monthly tax returns.

Approximately 25,000 sales tax permit holders will benefit from the less stringent filing requirements.

The new policy requires all permit holders with average monthly liabilities of $15 or less to file only four sales tax returns a year. Marcum pointed out that the June returns must be filed as usual, before July 20.

Governor Combs said the changes were made to ease the cost of reporting for smaller retailers; to save postage for the state; and because of the relatively high cost of processing the smaller returns. Combs and Marcum believe that these factors outweigh the probable $250,000 in General Fund revenue which would be deferred until the 1963-1964 fiscal year.

Marcum said the Revenue Department will review yearly each permit holder's annual return to see if he qualifies for or will be retained on quarterly filing. The Department will notify permit holders each year of any change in their filing status.

Taxpayers who qualify for quarterly filing will receive a pre-addressed return late in September or early October of this year. This return is to be completed and filed with the Department of Revenue on or before October 20, covering sales made during the months of July, August and September.

For all subsequent quarters, a return must be completed and filed on or before the 20th of the month following the close of the quarter, the Revenue Department said.

100 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky

By JOE JORDAN
(Kentucky Civil War Commission)

Union Army Brig. Gen. J. T. (Jerry) Boyle, newly appointed military governor of Kentucky, 100 years ago this week issued instructions for the guidance of provost marshals. According to Collins' History of Kentucky, that inaugurated "a general system of arrests for opinions' sake."

The rules which General Boyle laid down were in four principal parts:

1. All who had joined the Confederate forces, or had given them aid or assistance or at any time had gone within their lines must now report themselves to certain provost marshals, take an oath of allegiance, and give bonds with security for their future good conduct. Any who did not comply were to be arrested and taken to a military prison at Louisville and thence to Camp Chase at Columbus, Ohio, there to await action of the U. S. Secretary of War.

2. All who organized or aided in organizing forces either for the Confederates or for guerrillas, or who harbored or concealed or gave information or assistance to guerrillas, were to be arrested and dealt with according to military law.

3. "For anything said or done with intent to incite to rebellion, the offender must be arrested and his conduct reported, that he may be dealt with according to law."

4. "When damage shall be done to the person or property of loyal citizens by marauding bands of guerrillas, the disloyal of the neighborhood or county will be held responsible, and a military commission appointed to assess damages and enforce compensation."

It will be seen that under No. 4 persons adjudged "disloyal" by whom of military authorities could be made to pay for the acts of unknown marauders, concerning which they might not have the slightest knowledge. During the remainder of the war there would be many charges that entirely innocent persons had been so penalized.

The oath of allegiance referred to above was printed on thousands of forms in the following words: "I do solemnly swear that I will bear true allegiance to the United States, and support and sustain the Constitution and laws thereof; that I will maintain the national sovereignty paramount to that of all state, county, or Confederate powers; that I will discountenance, discourage, and forever oppose secession, rebellion and disintegration of the Federal Union; that I disclaim and denounce all faith and fellowship with the so-called Confederate armies; and pledge my honor, my property and my life to the sacred performance of this my solemn oath of allegiance to the government of the United States of America."

Printed at the bottom of each form was the line: "The penalty for a violation of this oath is death."

New Tax Regulations Issued for Retailers

Frankfort, Ky., July 3—Gov. Bert Combs and Revenue Commissioner James V. Marcum have announced that after July 20 retailers and others with small monthly state sales or use tax liabilities will not be required to file monthly tax returns.

For all subsequent quarters, a return must be completed and filed on or before the 20th of the month following the close of the quarter, the Revenue Department said.

Egg Law Amendments Noted for Retailers; License Still Required

Frankfort, Ky., July 2 (Spl.) — Amendments now in effect to the state egg law exempt retailers of not more than five cases of Kentucky-produced eggs a week from classifying eggs but do not exempt them from buying a state license, according to the Division of Markets in the State Agriculture Department.

Under the amendments, effective June 14, these small-volume retailers are also exempt from buying a 2-cent inspection stamp for each 12-dozen lot of eggs.

Retailers of more than five cases a week still must classify all the eggs they sell by U. S. standards of grade and size and must pay the inspection fees, as well as obtain a state license.

Containing any portion of eggs to be sold from an out-of-state producer or from another dealer disqualifies the small volume retailers from claiming exemptions, the Division said.

The classification exemption does not relieve retailers of five cases or less a week from the requirement that dealers candler all eggs and remove inedible ones from sale, the Department said.

All egg retailers, handlers, dealers and wholesalers, except farmers who produce their own eggs, hatcheries, hotels, restaurants, bakeries, confectionaries, ice cream manufacturers and consumers, must have a state egg handlers license.

The retailer's license, renewable April 1, is $5 a year. Other license cost range from the $5 to $50 depending upon the average weekly volume of eggs handled.

The law was passed to keep inferior eggs off Kentucky markets. Previous to the legislation, the state had become a dumping ground for eggs of bad quality from other states, the Marketing Division said.

HARRIS FAMILY

Mrs. Lawrence Johnson, Pikeville, is seeking the names of the parents of William Harris, of Johnson county.

She excerpt from notes she hands this column: "William Harris was from Johnson county originally. He was married twice. His first wife's name was unknown by my father but William Harris and his first wife had the following children according to Tom Dillon's memory: Jim Harris, Kelsey Harris, Celia Harris and Haden Harris, all of whom migrated to the West.

"William Harris remarried to Alice Lawson. She had formerly been married to Bob Nickell and had one son, Shely Nickell, or perhaps it was Shelly.

"Children of William Harris and Alice Lawson Harris were Rachel Harris, my grandmother, married James Dillon, had three sons, Frank, Thomas and Charley; Henry C. Harris, born March 17, 1839; Lili Harris, married Becky or Lizzie Harper, with two known children, Val and Tom; Julia Harris, married James Harper in Elliott county; Amanda Harris, married a Dr. Campbell and had one son, William, who died in infancy; Clarinda Harris, married Henry Sparks of Elliott county and children were Bob and Liza; Celia Harris, married James Pennington.

"Henry C. Harris first married a Clark. Children were Bill, Joe, Mary and two other girls. He later married Liz Cottern and children were Rosa and Lily. Rosa married a McClain and Lily married P. L. Hollon.

"Haden Harris, my great-uncle, was twice married. I do not know the name of his first wife. His second wife was Clarice Nickell and they had the following children: "James Harris, married a Mattox; Oliver Harris, married Alma Hollon; Henry Harris, married Mary Ellen or Nancy Ellen Epperhart; John Harris, married Sarah Fletcher, my mother's sister; Bob Harris, married Eta Rayse; Tom Harris, married Trent; Hollie P. Harris, married Caudill; Sarah Harris, married John Henry Farley; Linza Harris, married Dr. Samuel Porter; Martha Harris, married Henderson Templeman; Mary Harris, married Ike Day, later a Holbrook; Fowler Harris, married Dulcene Epperhart."

Mrs. Ed Sutton, returned home with her daughter, Mrs. Jack Crowe, at Covington, Ky., because of her illness, but is now very much improved.

Rev. Cornelius McGuire, who married Solomon's daughter, Elizabeth, lived a few hundred feet south. McGuire converted Col. Harry, whose right name was Henry, and the first Methodist class was organized at the home of Harry in 1796. The Laynes, Mayos, Auxiers and others rode many miles to attend.

Harry left a great number of children and grandchildren, who married into the major families of the area. So did Tandy Stratton, who married Mildred Layne in Amherst county, Virginia, and migrated to the Big Sandy to settle with his kinsmen.

Solomon, with Major Andrew Hood and Mathias Harman, directed John Graham to survey out Preston's Station, now Prestonsburg, in 1797. He died in 1819 and lies buried in an unmarked area with other pioneers just back of the Clark residence. The grave stones were removed about 40 years ago as they impeded agriculture.

I can remember playing among the old stones when I was a mere boy. Accompanied by other boys, usually on the way to swim in the river, we would pause and examine the grave stones. One was of Solomon Stratton, another for Richard, who was affectionately called Uncle Dicky by his descendants, John Kelly and Elizabeth Kelly and others.

Solomon Stratton, veteran of the Illinois Expedition, founder of the Stratton Settlement and who assisted to lay out Prestonsburg when the bottom it now covers was a wilderness of primeval trees, has thousands of descendants who honor his name.

HOUSE GROUP STUDIES ACT

Library Extension Viewed By Perkins At Hearing; State Circulation Jumps

The House General Subcommittee on Education has concluded hearings on legislation to expand the Library Services Act of 1956, sponsored by Congressman Carl D. Perkins of Kentucky and other members.

In testimony before the subcommittee last week, Perkins said the bill would provide for Kentucky $343,324 for the extension of public library services, $536,498 for library services in public elementary and secondary schools, and an estimated $141,240 for library services in institutions of higher learning. Perkins stressed the importance of provisions of the bill which enabled states with relatively lower per capita incomes to receive more Federal funds per state funds expended on the program than states with relatively high per capita incomes.

Perkins also was high in praise of "private citizens, public servants and librarians" who have made substantial contributions to the Library Extension program in Kentucky. Perkins said that the original Library Services Act passed in 1956 had greatly stimulated state and local efforts to furnish library services to rural and remote areas of the state of Kentucky. Perkins submitted data to the committee supplied by Margaret Willis, state librarian, which showed that, as a result of increased activity in the library program, circulation in Kentucky had increased from 2,874,000 to 8,257,000 from the year 1953-1954 to the year 1960-1961. The state appropriations to the Library Extension program since the enactment of the federal law had increased from $176,000 to $613,000 per year.

The Perkins bill substantially increased the amount of Federal funds now available for the program under the existing law. For the fiscal year 1961-1962, the existing federal law would afford Kentucky $205,000 for public library extension services as compared with $343,324 for the extension services and $536,498 for public school library services under the Perkins bill.

KENTUCKY ROAD STRUGGLE NOTED BY COMMISSIONER

(First in a series on Ky. Turnpikes)
 BY HENRY WARD
 Commissioner, Kentucky Department of Highways

Kentucky, since statehood, has struggled for a unified system of highways, linking the East with the West and the North with the South.

The action of the Federal Government in creating and providing nine-to-one financing for the Interstate System gave the Commonwealth the nucleus for such a system and a foreseeable end to sectionalism.

The Interstate System provided for nearly 700 miles of multi-lane, limited access highways in Kentucky. I-75 will be a north-south arterial across the widest part of the state, entering Northern Kentucky at Covington and extending to the Tennessee border.

I-64 will be the principal east-west expressway route, running across the state from near Ashland to Louisville. Interstate 65 will extend from Louisville to Elizabethtown, on toward Bowling Green and thence into Tennessee. The importance of Kentucky's only completed turnpike, the Kentucky Turnpike, became apparent when it was incorporated into the I-65 route.

In the far western part of the state over a route yet to be finally located, I-24 will cross the state from the Illinois border to the Tennessee line.

I-264 is a circumferential route in the Louisville metropolitan area, connecting the interstates and other major routes radiating from that area.

All these roads are needed and their locations were determined largely by the United States Bureau of Public Roads. However, the Interstate System left great gaps in a complete expressway system for the state.

It was to fill these gaps that Governor Combs boldly moved toward the fast planning and construction of two turnpikes. The Eastern Kentucky Turnpike from Winchester to Salyersville is well under construction, with more than half of its 77-mile length due to be opened to traffic by November. Construction or re-construction of two free-way arms to this turnpike, stretching to Pikeville and Whitesburg, will give Eastern Kentucky more than 200 miles of safe, fast expressway.

The Interstate plan left another gap in the west-central section of the state. To fill this gap the Western Kentucky Turnpike is under construction. Work is progressing at a rapid rate on this 127-mile-long route from Elizabethtown to Princeton and will be open to traffic late in 1963.

Another turnpike, the proposed Central Kentucky Turnpike to link Elizabethtown with Lexington, and thereby fully connect Eastern Kentucky with Western Kentucky, is under consideration. Surveys are under way on it to determine whether it should be built.

Those who oppose the turnpike system argue that roads should be free. That's a fine argument if a state had all the money it needed with which to build and maintain roads and bridges. Kentucky, like many other states, simply did not have and will not have in the foreseeable future enough funds to build multi-million-dollar expressways. The state faced the problem of doing without the roads, which it has done for too long already, or undertaking a turnpike system by which the roads could be built on a pay-as-you-go basis.

The principle is comparable to buying a home. The vast majority of Americans could never own a home if they had to save the purchase price before buying. Instead, they buy, live in and enjoy their home while paying off the mortgage.

Failure to build the turnpikes would delay the unification of Kentucky by many years. Engineers have estimated, for example, that it would take $150 million a year for 10 years just to bring the state's Federal-aid system up to modern standards. With less than a fifth of this amount available now for this work, construction of free expressways would have had to remain a dream.

Instead, the turnpikes are making the unification of Kentucky a reality.

STATE THIRD IN GRANTS IN AREA REDEVELOPMENT

Frankfort, July 5—Kentucky ranks third among the states in grants under the new Federal Area Redevelopment Program, Gov. Bert Combs has announced. "We've broken $1 million," said Combs, noting that Kentucky's project grants rank below only Oklahoma and Pennsylvania.

"Kentucky was the first state to be completely organized with all designated counties participating in over-all economic development programs according to A. R. A. requirements," Combs said. He noted that other counties newly designated are now organizing. "We are just as pleased to learn that the new Kentucky Area Development Program is so unique in approach that the Federal Government has chosen to make a study of the Kentucky approach, and has indicated it may serve as a prototype for

A. R. A. in advising other redevelopment areas on long-range economic planning," the Governor said.

Unique features of the Kentucky approach were cited by Combs as including the organization of multi-county development areas, the emphasis on over-all area and regional programs conducted by special area councils, and the completeness with which various development groups in the state were able to work together in voluntary coordination. Such groups include the A. R. A., the Department of Commerce, the Rural Areas Development Program, civic and professional groups, and others.
