This Town-That World Three Are Killed As Span Collapses TRAGEDY AGAIN VISITS AT KNOTLEY HOLLOW

Three lives were added late Monday to the long list of those who have died in the vicinity of tragedy-ridden Knotley Hollow, three miles south of here.

There, in sight of and within 200 yards of the scene of the 1958 school bus tragedy in which 27 lives were lost, a bridge spanning the Big Sandy River partially collapsed, spilling onto its top an auto and crushing to death three of its four passengers.

The dead are:

wife of Greeley Stephenson, Lan-Horn, 33, Laneer construction worker, and his wife, Mrs. Naomi Stephenson Van Horn, 36.

Injured but expected to recover was Debra, six-year-old daughter of the Van Horns. Monday's tragedy came when one of two steel cables supporting the bridge snapped. The Van Horn lapsed Monday at Knotley Hollow, one from General Douglas Mac-Arthur, and several from members of the United States Senate. Chandler is a former U.S. senator.

> "It's going to be a great victory in 1963," Chandler predicted. In next May's Democratic primary Chandler will face Edward T. "Ned" Breathitt of Hopkinsville, choice of Governor Bert T. Combs and his State Administration, and Rumsey B. Taylor, Princeton, and Miss Mary Louise Foust, Shelbyville, both running independently.

Breathitt did not attend the birthday party. Instead, he sent telegrams to Chandler, Taylor, and Miss Foust calling on them to put "personal political ambitions in the background" so that 'first emphasis" can be given to the election this fall of Lieutenant Governor Wilson W. Wyatt to the U.S. Senate and to the election of Democratic congressmen. Breathitt's telegram said he hoped the other candidates for governor would "publicly urge your supporters to work and vote for the Democratic ticket this fall-to join hands in putting first things first."

Chandler retorted that Breathitt's telegram "comes a little late He should have thought of that earlier when the Governor announced him. They're the ones who must take the responsibility for complicating Wyatt's race."

"The next governor of Kentucky must know the ways of Government," Chandler said. "It is no job for the stripling or the inexperienced . . . he must avoid a tax burden that deprives the people of the necessaries of life." Master of ceremonies for the picnic program was basketball coach Adolph Rupp of the University of Kentucky.

The principle speaker was Senator John Powers, president of the Massachusetts State Senate, who spoke here a year ago at a similar affair in honor of Chandler's birthday.

This year's King and Queen contest was won by: Senior Queen, Stella Mae Coffey; Senior King, Gary Lee Gregory; Junior Queen, Sarah Ellen Boggs; and Junior King, Joey Monroe. Best result of the program has been that McCreary county is now one of the two Kentucky counties which has its own camp. The U. S. Forest Service, which has worked closely with Boggs' groups, leased the 4-H group 10 acres in its forest on a special-use permit. An old farm house there has been cleaned up and repaired, and some out buildings repaired. Now hundreds of 4-H youngsters of the summer The site works perfectly in several respects. It can be used as a wood-working shop area; tree plantings can be made there; and gatherings can be held for fund-raising. So far about $4,000 has been raised for the camp and an estimated 500 boys and girls will use the camp this summer. One of the best things about McCreary county's program is its commercial nut program. More than 30,000 pecan seedlings have been planted, 6,000 blight resistant Chinese chestnut set out. 3,000 black walnuts. Farmers of the county, encouraged by the 4-H project, have set out 1,000 pecans, 2,000 Chinese chestnut and 5.000 black walnut. About 150,000 pine seedlings have been set out by 4-H youngsters in their own projects.

HISTORIC CUMBERLAND GAP

Dr. Thomas Walker was the first white man to find his way through Cumberland Gap. This was in 1750 and he continued on into the Big Sandy valley in his explorations. Daniel Boone first went through the famous gap in 1770. It became the entry point to Kentucky on the Wilderness Road.

Cumberland Gap changed hands four times during the Civil War. Still to be seen. near the gap is the site of the huge commissary and magazine that Union General George W. Morgan ordered Brigadier-General George Gallup, of Louisa, to destroy before they retreated.

Shown here is Pinnacle Overlook, a scenic attraction of Cumberland Gap National Historical Park. Middlesboro recently completed a mammoth Civil War Centennial observance in which the gap was a featured attraction.

BOAT SAFETY IS SOUGHT

Strict Enforcement Planned by Inspectors;

Strict enforcement of boating afety regulations is now the watchword of the water safety inspectors of the Boating Division of the Kentucky Department of Public Safety

Up till the end of May the safety inspectors had been lenient, according to Boating Division Director Scott Barbour. "It's a different story now," he declared. "Leniency doesn't pay off, but enforcing the poating laws will." All water safety inspectors have been instructed to issue citations to boaters who do not have a regstration card, fire extinguishers, adequate life preservers, or registration number properly displayed on their boat. "To boil it down," Barbour summarized, "the safe boat is the properly-equipped boat."

The boating director also emphasized the necessity of operating boats in a safe manner. "Boaters and water skilers alike are responsible for their individual behavior," water skilers have a certain amount of control over their path of skiing, despite the fact that they are

State Colleges To Curb Student Use of Autos; Ban Operation by Frosh

Fewer students in Kentucky's five state-supported colleges will be driving their own cars this fall.

A new ruling adopted by the Kentucky Council on Public Higher Education follows the regulations on student motor vehicles now in effect at the University of Kentucky.

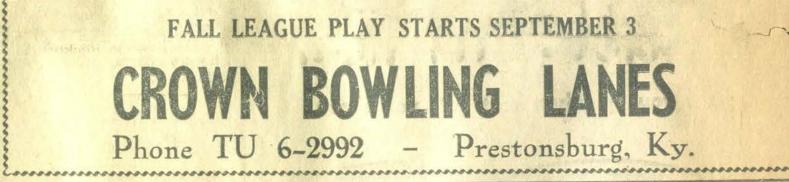

Briefly, the policy forbids freshmen entering the colleges this fall to possess or operate motor vehicles within certain distances from their schools. The same policy will apply to incoming sophomores who in September, 1963 hold less than a B average. In addition, students who are on academic or disciplinary probation are likewise prohibited from owning or operating motor vehicles. Exceptions to this general. policy will be made by the individual colleges. The policy also stipulates that all students who are allowed to drive must register their cars with school authorities, presenting a valid operator's license and evidence of public liability and property damage insurance. Students under 21 must provide written consent of a parent or guardian, regardless of the ownership of the vehicle.

Hearts Are Explained; KHA Makes Suggestions

One man is lying quietly in bed; another is exericsing. Which man's

You may be wrong if you pick the active man, according to Kentucky Heart Association. A great deal depends on the temperature and what part of the country you are in. Hot and humid weather can make your heart work harder even if you are lying down. "The neat's on, so watch your heart." cautions the Heart Association, "especially if you have heart disease." The body's built-in thermostat takes time to adjust to weather extremes, so care should be exercised in jumping from one extreme to the other. Make the change gradually, if possible; if you can't, take it easy for a while until you become adjusted.

Because heat and humidity can be hard on the heart, many doctors recommend that their patients get air-conditioners in their homes to keep the air comfortably cool and

Here are some, suggestions from the Kentucky Heart Association about staying cool and healthy during the summer:

1. Try to "think cool" and don't keep talking and complaining about the heat.

2. Every now and then, run cool water over the inside of your wrists.

3. Wear loose-fitting, light-colored clothes.

4. Bathe frequently.

5. Be careful about your diet. Eat more fresh fruit and leafy salads,
