This Town-- That World

When baseball games start as late as 10 o'clock at night (our time) I would be just as well-satisfied if they put the whole thing off till the next day.

They've twisted the saying around till a lot of people think the reward is its own virtue.

See by the papers that JFK may have put one of the New York newspapers on his black list. He should take a look at that movie magazine and see what it did to Mrs. Kennedy by putting her picture and Liz Taylor's on its cover and by devoting some space inside to an article comparing the two. Presidents' wives are only human and they don't rate fawning adulation, but they don't deserve degrading, either.

SEPARATED FROM WHAT?

We are willing to back the principle of separation of church and state to the limit of our ability, but we sometimes wonder if we don't go afield trying to practice this doctrine.

The Supreme Court may have a point in its favor by pointing out that the prayer declared unconstitutional for New York schools was a state-ordered prayer. It may be true that a powerful and militant majority in a state with such a law could eventually force its idea or concept of prayer into the schoolroom and thus break the separation barrier.

But one wonders where all this will stop. Have the enemies of the God the Founding Fathers trusted and of the Bible they read and studied and lived by—have these the basic law of the land on their side?

This court decision may be a prelude to a move to halt the reading of the Bible in the presence of school-children. Yet we doubt if there is a law which will protect your children or mine against a (See Story No. 2, Page 8)

COOK WARNS EXHIBITORS

Kentucky Inspector Says Exhibit Livestock Must Have Certificate

Roy Cook, Kentucky livestock inspector, warns all prospective livestock exhibitors of the scheduled Floyd County Fair that all cattle must be certified disease-free before they can be entered.

A certificate from the Department of Agriculture will be required and may be obtained after examination of the animals. Cook noted that farmers should contact Elm, the Fair Board chairman or the county agent before July 15. Mr. Cook will then go out to the farm and take the necessary specimen for examination by a state laboratory at Lexington.

The inspector said that hogs and sheep with the mange, fever or other obvious signs of disease cannot be exhibited under the law at the fair. He emphasized that only cattle will require a certificate stating that they are disease-free but pointed out that no other animal could be exhibited that obviously was diseased.

COURT VOTES 3-CENT TAX

New Levy To Finance Farm Extension Work; Governing Body Planned

Floyd county's share of the cost of maintaining its agricultural extension and home demonstration services will, beginning with the new fiscal year, be financed by a 3-cent per $100 valuation levy on real estate, tangible personal property and franchises.

The tax was voted Saturday by the fiscal court under authority provided by an act of the 1962 General Assembly, known as the District Cooperative Extension Service Act. The new legislation provided that the levy could be as high as 7 cents, but the court decided, after conferring with the county extension service, that the 3-cent levy would suffice.

First of all, an order was entered by the court creating the Floyd County District Cooperative Extension Service Board, which is to be composed of the county judge and six other citizens of the county or district. This board will be the governing (See Story No. 3, Page 8)

COUNCIL ACTS TO END RIVER POLLUTION HERE

LOAN OFFER IS ACCEPTED UNANIMOUSLY

Sewage Disposal Plant, New Sewer Line Funds Available from Agency

Prestonsburg will be the first of the county-seat towns along the Big Sandy to end its contribution to river pollution, it became certain last Thursday as the City Council voted unanimously to accept the $710,000 loan-offer of the Community Facilities Service, Housing & Home Finance Agency to finance a sewer system here.

As a result, it was said this week, actual construction of a sewage disposal plant, the laying of new sewer lines and reconstruction of existing lines will begin October 1. The project is expected to be advertised for bids, about August 1.

Yet Prestonsburg will not be the first community with centralized sewage disposal in Floyd county. Wheelwright installed a sewer system and sewage disposal plant upwards of 20 years ago.

The $710,000 loan, offered by the federal agency and accepted by the company, will be made for a period of 40 years at 3% interest and will be amortized by a sewer service charge approximately 70% of water bills. A grant of $17,000, already made by the federal government, brings to $880,000 the total outlay on the project.

The Council at its Thursday meeting also recommended to bond counsel sewer tap-on charges which may reduce the sewer service charge. It suggested that the charge for connecting a vacant lot to the sewer while sewer construction is in progress and before the excavation is closed be set at $40, and that all taps made after that be done at a charge of $100. There would be no tap-on charge to present users of the sewer system. All connections with sewers, the Council recommended, would be made by the Prestonsburg Utility Commission.

The Louisville firm of Fratton, Ferguson & Fleischer was employed, subject to federal approval, as bond counsel.

In other action the Council employed Ex-Sheriff Hershel Warren as policeman to succeed Frank Blackburn, who will retire July 1. Mr. Blackburn was hired, effective July 1, as traffic officer at a salary of $100 a month.

4 PRECINCTS ARE CREATED

Judge Stumbo Orders Voting Place Divisions; Machines Made Available

Four new voting precincts were created Monday by County Judge Henry Stumbo by dividing existing precincts. The action raises the number of voting places from 34 to 38.

The new precincts will be served by voting machines purchased this year by the county. One machine will be left for stand-by service.

Abbott precinct No. 35 was formed out of Rough & Tough, and the voting place will be the Bonanza school, the judge's order specified. The precinct will begin at the gap of the mountain at the head of Abbott Creek and will extend down the creek to but not including the Harry Hill line. The precinct also will include all of the Lick Fork of Jenny's Creek.

Jack Allen precinct No. 36 was established by dividing Buckeye precinct. Its voters will vote at Goodloe. The precinct will begin at the Mallory Service Station, which it includes, and will extend up Middle Creek to the top of the mountain adjoining Bosco precinct, and in the other direction will extend from the Mallory Service Station up Middle Creek to include the town of David and territory on to the Floyd-Magoffin line.

Garrett precinct was divided into two, Rock Fork precinct No. 37 being established. The railroad track through the town of Garrett will be the dividing line between the two precincts. Voting place for Rock Fork will be the Garrett consolidated school; (See Story No. 1, Page 8)

Veterans Hurt Here In Collision of Autos

Three war veterans en route to an American Legion meeting here Monday evening were injured when a car in which they were passengers was hit by an auto driven by Francis Carroll Hughes at the intersection of Dingus street and Lake Drive. Hospitalized were W. G. Africa and Jay Salyers, of Prestonsburg, and Luttrell Laven, of Dwale. Earl Miller was driver of the auto in which the three were riding.

The Martin festivities will begin with a speech by Congressman Carl D. Perkins, end with a street dance. McDowell will open the celebration with a baseball game and terminate the day's fun with a dance at the roller rink at Minnie. Prestonsburg will wind up with a Twist and Rock and Roll.

Hisle Becomes Manager Of Paintsville Office

A. Guy Hisle, a native of Mt. Sterling, has recently been promoted to manager at Paintsville for Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company.

A graduate of Montgomery county high school and the University of Kentucky, Hisle has been with Southern Bell since 1960. His first job location was in Louisville where he held various assignments in the company's management training program. In June of last year, he was transferred to Winchester, as the commercial supervisor of the Winchester district, a position he has held to the present time.

Hisle served in the Transportation Corps of the United States Army immediately after graduation from the University of Kentucky. He is presently a second lieutenant in the Army Reserve.

Mr. Hisle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger W. Hisle, of Mt. Sterling. His wife, the former LeGrand Crooks, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Crooks, also of Mt. Sterling. The Hises have one daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Hisle will move from Winchester to Paintsville in the near future.

FOUR AWARDED SAVINGS BONDS . . . Four Floyd county farmers were the winners in the strawberry production contest sponsored by the First National Bank. Each received a $25 Savings Bond, and A. C. Howard, of East Point, was awarded an additional $50 bond for the greatest yield per acre brought to the processing plant. The $25 bonds were given on the basis of the most production from their acreage.

CLUB HOLDS ANNUAL MEET

Alcoholism Is Rated As No. 4 Cause of Death; Many Towns Represented

The 13th annual Alcoholic Anonymous picnic of Eastern Kentucky was held at the pavilion on Stratton Branch, Jennie Wiley State Park, Saturday evening, drew its biggest response of several years, it is said. A large crowd, many from not only Prestonsburg but from regional towns, attended.

An A. A. official of Frankfort who is a representative of the clubs in Kentucky, was featured as speaker. A. A. club policy forbids the use of names in news stories. The Frankfort official, in discussing alcoholism, said, "It is an allergy of the body and a disease of the mind." He noted that alcoholism is rated by the American Medical Association as the fourth greatest cause of death in the United States.

The speaker told of his battle with the bottle and his long effort to rehabilitate himself through the A. A. He quoted another alcoholic, whom he compared to himself in his desperation: "Give me something to make me live or die, I don't care which."

The speaker said he tried psychiatry, received aid from his family and friends but made no progress until he became associated with Alcoholics Anonymous.

"When you reach the A. A. there is no place to go but up," he told the more than 100 picnickers. "To keep from drinking now I have to attend A. A. It's through our fellowship that there is hope for the hopeless."

Delegates from A. A. clubs from Prestonsburg, Pikeville, Hazard, Maytown, Hindman, Paintsville, Louisa, Lexington, Frankfort and Georgetown attended.

SURVEY FINDS CORN ACREAGE

Figures of Moot Value When Legislation Killed; Average Floyd Yield Told

Expenditure of more than $2,000 on a recent survey of Floyd county farms to determine the corn acreage for the two base years of 1959 and 1960 was a futile operation, it is learned. Object of the work was to have the figures available in anticipation of the passage of the recently defeated farm bill in Congress.

The survey shows that there were 6,722 acres in production. Twenty-four persons, directed by the local Agricultural Stabilization Conservation committee, did the field work.

An average Floyd county farm has four acres in corn for the two base years, it was learned. Of the 1,492 farms surveyed, 5,193 acres were in production in 1959 and 5,168 acres in 1960.

Average corn production in this county, according to the 1959 agricultural census, is 36.5 bushels per acre. The highest average yield was in the Mare Creek district with 42.5 bushels per acre and the lowest was in the Wheelwright-Weeksbury district with an average of 27.8 bushels.

PROCESS PLANT GROSS FOR GROWERS IS TOLD

The strawberry processing plant established here for the current season grossed $35,000 for Floyd and Johnson county farmers, it was said this week by Robert Jones, county agent. This sum was paid for strawberries and labor and does not include the amounts paid for trucking the processed product to Cincinnati.

"It was a good strawberry season," Jones said, especially when it is compared to sections like Tennessee and Western Kentucky where the berries dried up in the drought." He noted that wet weather, rot and hail depleted the yield in this area.

Dan Akers, of Amba, Lee Akers, Grethel, Henry Ousley, of Dock, and A. C. Howard, East Point, were named the winners in the yield contest set up by the First National Bank. The four were awarded $25 Savings Bonds on these records: Daniel Akers, one acre, $1,112.05 worth sold to plant; Howard, one-half acre, $874.12; Ousley, three-fourths acre, $895.69; and Lee Akers, one-fourth acre, $398.45. The bonds were presented Saturday.

In addition to the $25 bond received by Howard he was awarded an additional bond of $50 for the greatest yield on a per acre basis delivered to the processing plant. The bonds were awarded Saturday.

Carl Abbott, Bedford, Kentucky, owner of the plant here, has left his equipment in storage with plans to return next season if farmers will commit themselves to growing an additional 150 acres in Floyd and Johnson counties.

SUITT NAMED NEW MANAGER

For Jenny Wiley Park; Other Personnel Named By State Parks Division

Appointment of a general manager of Jenny Wiley State Park and other key personnel have been announced as development of the park and its new lodge and golf course approach completion.

Vernon Suitt, formerly of the Kenlake Hotel on Kentucky Lake, is the new general manager. Mr. Suitt is a native of North Carolina and has been with the Division of Parks 19 months. He is unmarried.

Otto Cisco, former manager of the boat dock, is now superintendent of maintenance and construction. The boat dock management is currently under Mr. Suitt's direction.

Robert Nix, a native of Owensboro, has been named reservations manager, and he and his bride of a few weeks arrived at the park Monday. Mr. Nix has had previous experience at Kentucky Lake and Lake Cumberland.

Suitt said a chef for the new lodge will arrive about July 15. He is Cliff Carpenter, a native of West Liberty who has had professional experience for years outside Kentucky.

Although the reservations manager is on duty and the chef will arrive next month, completion of the 35-room lodge is not expected till Labor Day, September 3. But lodge reservations are not being accepted at this time, Mr. Suitt said.

One reservation, however, has been officially confirmed, and that is for the Kentucky Dental Association on September 24. That application was accepted at Frankfort, some time ago.

Foundation work for 10 vacation cottages on the mountainside, up-lake from the new lodge, has been completed by park employees, but delay of materials, ordered by McGuire and VanHoose, contractors, has set construction back.

The new park manager said the greens of the new golf course at the park are doing as well as any he had ever seen in the first year of a course and that the fairways are much better than any he had seen on new courses. He would not hazard a guess, however, as to an opening date for the nine-hole course.

FOOD STAMP HEARING SET HERE BY COMBS

Bituminous Surfacing Set for Weeksbury Road, Commissioner Announces

Bids for a bituminous surfacing project on the Weeksbury Hollow road in this county will be received by the Highway Department on July 13. Commissioner of Highways Henry Ward announced last week.

The project will begin at the end of the blacktop at Weeksbury and extend one mile to the southeast.

This highway improvement is being financed through the state's rural secondary program, which is operated with two cents of the gasoline tax.

COMBS NAMES P'BURG MAN

Bi-Partisan Commission To Study Redistricting; Howard Accepts Position

J. W. Howard, Prestonsburg attorney and former State Senator, was named with six other Democrats and six Republicans by Governor Bert Combs last week to membership on a steering commission to present redistricting proposals for Kentucky.

Mr. Howard, who has accepted the appointment, said this week he had not been notified when the commission will begin work but that a meeting may be called soon after July 1. The group is to explore the need for redistricting and possibly to get into the actual mechanics of redistricting.

"I intend to give the subject mature thought before making a judgment," said Governor Combs after the recent Frankfort meeting of some 200 people from throughout Kentucky to consider the problem of reapportionment of legislative districts.

"It is true the Constitution provides for reapportionment every 10 years," the Governor said, "and we have had no reapportionment in Kentucky since 1942. It is also true that all citizens of Kentucky are entitled to equality in legislative representation. I am of the opinion, however, that we have many more problems just as important as redistricting. The problems of education, highways, mental health, distressed areas, mental retardation, educational television, homes for the aged are to me just as important as mathematical population." (See Story No. 4, Page 6)

CONTINUANCE OF PROGRAM TALK TOPIC

Judge, County Attorney Slate Courthouse Meet At 11 Saturday Morning

Governor Bert T. Combs will be here Saturday to hear the case for and against food stamps before deciding if the pilot food stamp program is to be continued in Floyd county.

At the invitation of County Judge Henry Stumbo and County Attorney Barkley J. Sturgill, Governor Combs slated the meeting at the courthouse for 11 a.m.

The question Governor Combs is to answer is this: Shall the state appropriate its half of the approximately $30,000 required to continue the program in the county?

The U. S. Department of Agriculture will bear half the $30,000 outlay. But the Governor wants to know, specifically, if merchants, employers, business people and the public in general want the program. He has heard complaints against, as well as praise of, the program.

The food stamp office here, recently pointed out that more than a million dollars in food stamp trade was channeled to Floyd county retailers during the first year of the pilot program which ended June 1.

Those who prefer the stamps to relief by the direct method of distributing surplus foodstuffs to the needy argue that a better-rounded menu is made available to recipients and that retail business is greatly stimulated by food stamp trade. There are those, on the other hand, who claim the program has discouraged men from accepting jobs at which they could earn a living.

In addition to relief recipients, business men, employers and others, representatives of the U. S. and Kentucky Departments of Agriculture and the Department of Economics will attend the courthouse meeting.

Floyd county was one of several localities designated over the nation by President Kennedy for the pilot food stamp program. This county was so designated at the urging of Governor Combs.

REED SAYS TURNPIKE AREA BREAKTHROUGH

The Eastern Kentucky Turnpike is the most dramatic breakthrough in "Program 60," said B. F. Reed, of Drift, chairman of the Eastern Kentucky-Regional Planning Commission, at Frankfort, Monday.

"Program 60" is the outline for progress drawn up by the Commission two and a half years ago, and a road from Eastern Kentucky to the Blue Grass was placed No. 1 on the list of improvements necessary if the region was to shake off the economic doldrums which have so long beset it.

The Floyd county man also said: "The single basic policy change which may have the most significant consequence on future regional development is the new federal policy on water-resource projects, just approved by President Kennedy."

Reed, as chairman, since the commission was reorganized five years ago, was succeeded by Dr. Alex Spencer, West Liberty.

Other new officers are vice-chairman Cloyd McDowell, Harlan, and secretary Russell Ward, Pikeville.

The nine-member advisory group met with other state leaders, including Governor Bert Combs, to discuss its new report.

"For once, improvement has gone beyond study and survey to become on-the-ground, earth-turning action," Reed said.

"Construction projects for roads, parks, water impoundments, and schools are moving at a rate far beyond any realistic expectation of three years ago."

The Eastern Kentucky turnpike is expected to be finished late this year.

The water-policy statement, which won't have any immediate impact on Eastern Kentucky, is expected to bring more benefits long-range industrial and recreational development.

"At long last the criteria which has perpetually prevented the development of adequate water-resource projects in Eastern Kentucky has been changed," Reed said.

His report was lavish in its praise of the current State Administration. At a luncheon Reed told Combs:

"This commission feels you have carried out its recommendations to an excellent degree—you have given us every cooperation."

Reed cited what he called progress in these fields:

Transportation — Increased airport construction as well as the turnpike.

Conservation — Reservoir and dam construction, the small-lakes program, new strip-mining laws, state and federal funds to stimulate the use of forest products.

Industrial development — Some new operations and arts-and-crafts centers, but "new industry, which has scored zero in Eastern Kentucky for many years, is still not moving into the region in great quantity."

Research — The Spindletop and agricultural-research centers.

Community development — Twenty cities have planning programs. More than a dozen have new libraries and health centers.

Training and education — More state money for Eastern Kentucky schools, expansion of vocational training, and a pilot adult-education program.

Tourism — State parks expansion, promotional plans for the tourist trade, and cleanup and beautification drives.

NOTICE

Occupational licenses for the year 1962-1963 are now available at the County Clerk's office. Under the new 1962 law a penalty will be charged against all who are delinquent on August 1, 1962.

OVERLAND CALIFORNIA LETTER CARRIED BY PRESTONSBURG MAN

BY HENRY P. SCALF

Prestonsburg was a struggling frontier hamlet of four or five log houses when Elias Barnett was born here May 28, 1805, and California was a Spanish stronghold several thousand miles west across trackless deserts, plains and mountains.

Barnett helped break a new trail through those implacable obstacles of nature, carried what historians consider the first overland letter from Missouri to California, soldiered under John C. Fremont, farmed for Capt. John A. Sutter on whose land gold was discovered in the state, signed the Los Angeles Declaration against dictatorial Mexican authority and had enough adventure after leaving the Floyd county seat to fill a volume. He lived to a ripe, old age.

He was a son of Jesse Barnett, born in 1765 in Virginia, possibly in Henry county, and resided in this Big Sandy valley town when it had but a few log cabins strung out on the Sounding Gap Road. Jesse died between 1816 and 1820. There is almost complete genealogical silence on his wife. We only know that her name was Sally and that she was born between 1775 and 1784. Three other sons and a daughter of Jesse were Gilbert, William, Nathaniel and Levey who married William Brown in Floyd county in 1824. There were probably others, family students think.

Floyd county records show that Elias Barnett married Nancy Blair of Prestonsburg, March 21, 1823. Here at Prestonsburg were born two children: Jesse, born in the year his parents married, followed his father to California and died December 5, 1906, in Napa county; and Abigail (1827-1911), who married Joseph Halteman, of Ohio.

While still living at Prestonsburg he was seized with the wanderlust, traveled in Virginia, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. In 1831 he settled, with his son, Jesse, and daughter, Abigail, in Jackson county, near Independence, Missouri. Others of the Barnett clan followed Elias to Independence. They had completed the first lap of the great journey that was to take them to the Pacific.

Missouri was the jumping-off place for the West. At Independence the wagon trains gathered for the final plunge. Scores died from starvation on the westward trek, many lived by turning cannibal, others died from Indian tomahawks but most got through to the west and southwest regions.

Everywhere in Missouri the talk of the West dominated the conversation and thought of the settlers. Independence was but a short journey from the Elias Barnett homestead, and he saw the caravans leave out on the Sante Fe and Oregon trails. Many of the immigrants outfitted at the merchandise establishment of William B. Barnett, who with William Hague, a Sante Fe trader, were to write the famous letter that Elias Barnett carried overland to the Far West.

We infer from the meager record of Barnett's life that his wife, Nancy, must have died sometime in the 1830's or early 1840's for he made his way westward without a wife or children. Like many of the wives of pioneers, she is probably buried somewhere in an unmarked grave, probably in Jackson county.

It was a letter of Dr. John Marsh, California pioneer, published in the St. Louis (Mo.) Daily Argus, October 31, 1840, that set Missouri burning with California fever.

"It is beyond all comparison, the finest country and the finest climate," the Argus quoted Marsh. "What we want here is more people. If we had fifty families from Missouri we could do exactly as we please without any fear of being troubled."

Elias and William Barnett, with William Hague and other traders talked a long time of the California country. The elder Barnett and Hague were traders, and the breaking of a new trail to the west would open up fabulous profits to a canny merchandiser beyond the high Sierras.

First, however, they would like to know more of the country, its climate, soil, population, the attitude of the Mexican authorities and many other matters. They induced Elias and Michael Nye to carry a letter with a company of riflemen under John Bartleson who were going to "the finest country and the finest climate." From what we have learned of the subsequent career of Elias Barnett we know he had no fear of "being troubled" by Mexicans.

Patently, William Barnett and William Hague penned a letter "To Captain Sutter or Mr. Marsh." It was headed, "Weston, Platte County, Missouri" and dated March 18, 1840.

Barnett and Hague wrote that Elias and Michael were coming with others for "the purpose of exploring the country and returning to the United States. We have had considerable excitement here on the subject of emigrating to that country."

"Two months since," the letter continued, "there was a belief that fifty or a hundred families would start for California this spring. But since doubts having arisen as to the practicability of the routes for wagons and families, our friends whom you will see in your country have thought proper to go on and explore the route and if they report favorably there will certainly be a large emigration to that country immediately on their return. If your country should prove to be such as we anticipate and really believe it to be, there is no calculating the emigration that will go there in say four or five years."

They asked for information on the resources of the country in general but specifically they wanted mules for the animals had been depleted in Missouri by immigrant caravans outfitting for the Oregon and Sante Fe trails.

"And last though not least should our friends report favorably, we will want some forty or fifty good mules for the purpose of carrying us out the spring after their arrival here. We are determined to go, it will be difficult for us to get the animals in this country."

They went on to assure Sutter and Marsh that if they could get land grants in California they would bring out "from two to four hundred families."

There is inferential evidence in the letter that Barnett and Hague had formerly met Marsh, for the letter neared conclusion with, "You will remember us in Independence, William Hague formerly a trader to Sante Fe and William Barnett of the firm of Barnett and Shaefer, merchants of Independence."

Most historians have said that the John Bidwell-John Bartleson party that went overland to California was the first immigrant group to do so but this letter, heretofore unpublished and in the California State Library at Sacramento, is evidence that at least some of them were merely seeking to find a practicable route to California. Undoubtedly most of the party were immigrants but Barnett, Nye and probably Bartleson and a few others were explorers. In the Bartleson party, later joined to that of John Bidwell's group, were eight men, including the leaders, Barnett and Nye.

About the time the Bartleson party was formed, they first heard of John Bidwell, 22-year-old New York school teacher, who was forming a company at Sapling Grove, Missouri, for a California journey. Bidwell was having trouble keeping up enthusiasm which was referred to in the Barnett-Hague letter. Great numbers had enlisted to go but, learning a new trail was to be blazed, most defected early. They had too many doubts about reaching the country through uncharted deserts and high mountains.

Leaving Independence, the Bartleson riflemen sought out Bidwell and made an agreement. They would go with the Bidwell party if Bartleson was made captain. The discouraged New Yorker, almost in despair of getting a group together, abdicated the leadership and consented to serve as secretary of the party and it is to him that we are indebted for knowledge of their saga of peril and grief.

In the caravan, besides the Bartleson party, were George Hinshaw, an invalid riding a fine, black horse; a wagon with several persons who had enlisted from Weston; and another wagon with a few persons in it from Sapling Grove. A group of Catholic missionaries led by Father Pierre de Emet and guided by the legendary mountain man, "Broken-Hand" Fitzpatrick, wanted to go out to Oregon, and joined for part of the journey. Finally, there was a total of 69 persons ready for the record-making and path-making overland trip.

They had no map, only the vague and optimistic advice of Dr. Marsh to guide them. He had said in his letter in the St. Louis Daily Argus that the journey should be made from Independence to a frontier rendezvous on Green River, from there to Soda Springs on Bear River north of Great Salt Lake, to Mary's River, find a gap in the mountains and proceed to the plains of the Joaquin River. In those few words Marsh had made it sound almost easy to do. The Bartleson-Bidwell party made it possible by heroic struggle.

The wagon train left Missouri in March, 1841, snaked its way out over the prairie of what is now northeastern Kansas, followed the Platte River through the present states of Nebraska and Wyoming. When they arrived at Soda Springs in the present state of Idaho they had acquired some intimation of the hardships of the trail.

At Soda Springs the party split, about half of it deciding to go to Oregon with Father de Smet and Fitzpatrick. Remaining with the Bartleson-Bidwell caravan were 31 persons, including Benjamin Kelsey, his wife and daughter. Fitzpatrick's parting advice was brief and of little value: "Find the Mary's River, follow it to its end, then push west, ever west."

With much handshaking and a few tears the two groups separated and Bartleson led his group west. In mid-August he brought them inside the present state of Utah, a few miles north of Great Salt Lake.

They were now suffering from the intense heat and lack of fresh water. Swinging south of the lake, they moved out over vast Great Salt Lake Desert, headed across the present state of Nevada. The sun beat down mercilessly, the creaking wagons, the tolling oxen and the emaciated horses disturbed the arid land to leave a trail of boiling dust. All vegetation ceased, and was supplanted by rock and salt. One day when the sun reached high noon they saw the green-timbered slopes of a hill and a beautiful, peaceful river. It was their first mirage.

Day by day, as they struggled over the desert, without map or any direction except to follow Fitzpatrick's advice to push west, their food supply became lower and lower. The oxen, without grass or feed, became mere bony frames. Bartleson ordered most of them killed for food.

Abandoning their wagons and most of their equipment, they began to travel at night on foot, sending out scouts every evening in search of the elusive water. Lost in a desert sea, they were thankful for the stars that guided them and the darkness that protected them from the blazing sun.

Elias Barnett, Prestonsburg native who carried the first overland letter from Missouri to California, lies buried in the Barnett family cemetery in Pope Valley near where he settled.

of the maze of canyons and dead valleys that had neither water nor vegetation. Finally they picked up the trail of Bidwell and rejoined him.

Bartleson told his associate: "If I ever get back to Missouri, I would gladly eat out of the trough with the pigs."

They had to kill their horses for food, finally the hardy mules. After these were consumed they ate whatever food they could find, often subsisting for days on acorns. Bidwell stayed alive by eating the "lights" of a wolf. As he took as his part of the animal division. Indians, disturbed by the first white men they had ever seen, skulked on their rear, sullen and hostile.

They found the Mary's River, now called the Humboldt, traversed the Humboldt Sink and conquered desert mountains but in their attempt to cross the Sierra Nevada range they were lost for a week. They knew nothing of their location except that they were entering the last great barrier of mountains and that in the distance, be it scores or even hundreds of miles beyond, there was California.

They pulled themselves with great effort into the mountains. Fall had come on, the cavernous canyons were filled with perpetual snow. Wind roared and they shivered in the autumnal cold. Stoically they penetrated the unmapped Sierras. Mrs. Kelsey and her daughter.

ter were now fast approaching the point when their wills would break and they would lie down and die.

One night they sat disconsolate in camp, the Bartleson company, now afoot, keeping to itself, bound by its collective thoughts. Barnett tried to repair a pair of moccasins. Several began to reminisce of Missouri and other states they had visited before joining the Bidwell caravan. Barnett talked very little, for he was weak and hungry.

The day before, they had passed the timberline and were now in the high altitude of the Sierras, covered with eternal snows. Barnett and Nye huddled together in an open space, the snow banked higher than their heads. The Kentuckian thought of the letter securely wrapped and tucked inside his buckskin shirt, which he was carrying to Marsh and Sutter. Nye, veteran of the frontier and co-emissary of the Independence traders to the California country, was succumbing to the harassment of the trail. Elias noticed his loose clothing, recalled that it fitted him when his friend was fifty pounds heavier.

The two talked of their mission to the Sacramento valley, evaluated the chance to get through. If they did would they be able or want to return? If Sutter was receptive to the merchants' proposals, would they be able to procure the mules requested by the traders in Missouri? Elias thought little of the letter itself and then only to give it protection inside his shirt. He had no inkling of its historic value, could not even surmise that it was the first overland letter and that a century and a quarter from then it would still be treasured in the archives of California.

He contributed desultory snatches of his history, spoke of the hills of Eastern Kentucky, none so big you couldn't cross in half a day. They were but mole hills on a prairie to these giants of the west. He talked of his native Prestonsburg, where he married and where his first child was born. His thoughts drifted to the Missouri homestead and he agreed with Bartleson.

"Yes, sir," he said as much to himself as Nye, "if I could not get back to Missouri I wouldn't care to eat with the pigs."

Bidwell, who had resumed command, sent two men ahead to seek out a way to the Joaquin River. The two, Jones and Kelsey, found a friendly Indian, who knew Dr. Marsh. Outfitted with horses, they went back to meet the others after a week's absence. November 4, 1841, they became the guests of Marsh on his ranch.

As one historian says, they had completed "successfully the first overland journey of an immigrant party to California." They had broken a trail without map or guide, traversing a vast uncharted desert and negotiated a mighty mountain range. It is one of America's greatest sagas.

Barnett reminisced in the after years about the terrible need for food, particularly after they left the Humboldt. He discoursed often on the qualities of horse, mule, oxen and coyote flesh and edible acorns.

"I was so near starved that the coyote did taste good but hang me if I could make horse or mule taste well," he told a newspaperman who wrote sketches of the pioneers for a history of Napa county, California. "Horse and mule meat was too bitter."

Capt. John Sutter, native of Switzerland and a baronial land grant owner on the Sacramento River, had heard of the travail of the Bidwell party in the last lap of their journey. He sent two guides with provisions to bring them to his fort. Failing to find them in the mountains, the guides turned toward the Marsh ranch. There they found the immigrants domiciled the first night in the doctor's home and scattered about the ranch buildings.

Marsh had welcomed them with open arms, killed two pigs, ground up some of his precious seed wheat given his bedroom to the Kelseys. He invited many to sleep on cowhides spread on the earthen floor. He directed them to slaughter a beef for the morning meal and retired. They butchered the beef next morning, only to learn that the animal was Marsh's prized work animal.

The party was so antagonized by Marsh's violent language that they left at once, half to trap in the San Joaquin valley, the others to San Jose to hunt for work. Bidwell and others, including Barnett, were arrested by Mexican authorities but finally were released.

Barnett, Bidwell and others found their way to Sutter's fort that he had bought from the Russians, and the Prestonsburg native went to work on the vast agricultural projects being conducted. Bidwell became Sutter's secretary.

We lose Nye now in the diverse movements of the party members upon their arrival in California but Barnett delivered the letter, probably to Marsh, since the doctor was seen first and he had known him in Missouri. However, it can be deduced that Barnett and Sutter discussed the letter from Independence. Action on it, if any was contemplated by Marsh or Sutter, must have been deferred, and Barnett soon evinced no will at all to return to Missouri.

Sutter put Barnett at work on the preparation of a ten-acre field in which he wanted to experiment with some wheat seed he had acquired from the Russians when he bought their fort. One variety, of which Sutter had only 300 pounds, yielded 510 bushels of wheat, Barnett noted in his reminiscences.

Barnett didn't want to be tied to Sutter on the ranch as an agricultural laborer, and he left in the spring. After several weeks of traveling and stopping at ranches he came to Santa Rosa valley near the present Healdsburg. Mark West, and ranchers Carillo and Alexander were the only settlers in the valley. Barnett worked at building an adobe house and hunted the wild game so plentiful in the valley.

There was much agitation among the Americans to wrest the country from the Mexicans, and one day in the early fall of 1842 Barnett heard that a company had been formed at Sutter's fort to make the attempt. He hastened to his former employer on the American River, eager for adventure. The plan fell apart, however, and Barnett went to Cache Creek and remained with a Billy Gordon until spring.

There is evidence that Elias had by now dropped all intentions, if he had ever entertained any, to return to Independence. He went calling in 1843 on Julianna Pope, widow of William Pope, for whom Pope's Valley was named. They were married in the spring of 1844 and he settled himself to work on the ranch.

In the autumn months the Mexican government, disturbed by the sudden appearance of the Bidwell party and the threatened influx of other settlers, sent General Manuel Micheltonera with 350 recruits, many of them scraped up from prisons, to govern and hold California against the Americans. They had neither arms, clothing or military training and fell upon the ranches like a swarm of locusts. Generals Jose Castro and Pio Pico, leading Mexicans of authority, revolted against General Micheltonera, and Capt. Sutter, promised large rewards by the governor, espoused his cause. He asked for volunteers. One of the recruits, still eager for adventure, was Barnett.

On New Year's Day, 1845, the Army of Sacramento of 275 men moved out of Sutter's fort to meet Micheltonera and fight the revolting generals. Sutter was resplendent on a great horse, a highly-groomed commander with a motley, comic-opera following. There were Americans, Mexicans and Indians.

Joined with Micheltonera, Sutter and his troops moved southward, the rebel troops retiring before them. It began to rain, the roads became sodden mush. Food gave out and the men were reduced to foraging. After seven weeks of marching the Army of the Sacramento found itself on the plains of San Fernando valley and facing the enemy.

The battle was joined on February 20 with an artillery duel. It lasted until night, and the next day, before it was resumed, the forces under Sutter found that most of the enemy were Americans. Many of them were from Missouri. Barnett and the other Americans under Sutter began to ask questions. Dr. Marsh, who had been forced to join Sutter as a common foot soldier, had been asking questions all along. They deposed Sutter, put Marsh in command and called a truce. As soon as the opposing forces met there was fraternization as the troops exchanged news from home.

Sutter, stripped of his uniform and jailed, awaited his fate from his captors. They debated whether to shoot or hang him, finally deciding to do neither. He returned to the American River, resumed his life as if nothing had happened. Barnett went to Napa valley near Sonoma.

The Americans in California were so eager to wrest California from the Mexicans that they needed only a word to rise, but Col. John C. Fremont, who commanded American troops in the state, didn't want to precipitate a war. Conflict would come soon enough but in the meantime he would advance his country's interest and position. He sent Ezekiel Merritt down into the Napa valley to pick up recruits.

Merritt gathered followers in the Napa and Pope valleys and, delaying to move for a few days, camped on the ranch of Elias Barnett. For some reason the Kentuckian was in Los Angeles, on what business we do not know. If he had been at home, he would have, it is very probable, signed with Merritt.

Barnett, while in Los Angeles, was a participant in the wild and boisterous discussions that were dissolving the political structure of the Mexican province. Even the Mexican leaders were fighting or preparing to fight each other, and Gen. Jose Castro, the Northern California pretender to power, was exceedingly high handed and dictatorial and was threatening to expel all Americans in the country. One of the state of California's (Continued on Page 6)

Historical Society Sponsors
Radiocast of Foster Story;
Commemorative Plates Issued

The Floyd County Historical Society is sponsoring a one-hour presentation of the songs from the Stephen Foster Story on Radio WPRT, Sunday at 1 p.m. It was said this week by Dave Stephens, Jr. The records were made available to the station by the Stephen Foster Drama Association, Bardstown.

The historical group, which is again sponsoring The Proud Heritage, a historical pageant at The Garfield Place here in late August, decided that presentation of the songs of the Stephen Foster Story would be appropriate at this time.

James Salisbury, principal of Martin high school, will direct The Proud Heritage for the second time. The play, based on historical incidents that occurred at The Garfield Place, then Col. James A. Garfield's headquarters house following the Battle of Middle Creek in 1862, drew more than 1,000 persons last summer.

Two acts, one depicting the conflict within the Hereford family as father and son decided to fight on opposite sides in the Civil War, and a final act where the gypsy foretells Garfield's death by assassination, are added.

Promoters of the pageant, written by Henry P. Sealf, of The Times staff, say that improvements in the presentation will be made. One is the sound system that was unsatisfactory the first time.

Commemorative plates, designed by Mary Jo Shivel, are on display at two local stores. It depicts The Garfield Place, the battle scene and has a picture of the martyred President. The plate, in a blue motif, has a brief history of the home, built by John M. Burns in 1856 and preserved by the Leete and Stephens families.

BARNETT

most prized historical documents is the Los Angeles Declaration, signed June 22, 1846. It castigated Castro and protested in strong terms his dictatorial actions. Elias Barnett was one of the signatories.

The Bear Flag Revolt, as it was called because the rebels' banner depicted a bear and a grizzly, was another comic opera war. It established the California Republic, later to become the state of California, but the revolt was only a preliminary to the major war that erupted with Mexico.

Barnett's service under John C. Fremont was his last soldiering. The American leader, maneuvering over the west and hanging around the periphery of California, was awaiting only the opening guns of the Mexican War to seize the state. He found his opportunity in the Bear Flag Revolt, aided the Americans, continued military operations, and captured Los Angeles, August 13, 1846. Fremont removed himself from the city and insurgents promptly retook it on September 22.

Barnett joined Company 3, First Battalion California Volunteers, October 5, 1846, probably after news of the flare-up at Los Angeles. Enlisting at Sonoma for a period of three months, he was to receive $25 per month for his service. Thirty-six other Americans enlisted with Barnett under Captain John Grigsby. The company rendezvoused with Fremont at San Juan.

Fremont, with his forces that included Grigsby and his Sonoma Volunteers, began to move in November toward Los Angeles by way of the San Benito River, Salinas Valley and San Luis Obispo.

The march was begun in chilly weather with a cold rain falling. As they marched the weather became colder and for days the men waded mud and water. There was an almost total absence of pasture for the horses and they became weak and fell by the roadside. They had left San Juan driving 500 horses and mules but it was found necessary to leave them behind.

Foodstuffs had been packed on mules, and a herd of cattle was driven along to be slaughtered when needed. Sometimes the small army would kill as many as 14 of these in one evening. The cattle were replenished by confiscation as they marched. The beef ration was ten pounds per day, many of the men increasing this by rising at 2 a.m. and roasting fresh steaks. It was one of the best beef-fed armies Fremont commanded.

At San Luis Obispo they captured a prominent California leader, Don Jesus Pico, who had been paroled. A court martial sentenced him to death but Fremont pardoned him in response to weeping entreaties by his family. The army moved out of the town in a cold rain with wind whipping their ragged apparel.

Fremont feared an ambush and made a mountainous short-cut that increased the misery of the troops. They found themselves on Christmas Day on a high ridge near Santa Barbara. A storm raged, blowing great gusts of rain against the men who pulled their torn clothing around them. Fremont decided to descend on Santa Barbara, storm or no storm.

Barnett recalled vividly in his old age the bitterness of those last few hours of marching. The rain beat out the path and men stumbled in the darkness, many of the mules falling over declivities to drown in rushing mountain streams. Amid the roar of the storm could be heard the shouts of the drivers as they tried to force the reluctant animals down the mountain. More than a hundred horses and mules died in the descent.

The rain ceased at 2 o'clock but this was little relief, for the wind continued to blow. In pitch-black darkness they reached the foot of the mountain and tried to start fires. Finding that impossible, they lay down in the mud, exhausted. Those faring better were the men who had sought refuge in mountain caves as they descended.

The troops rested a week at Santa Barbara, which they had found deserted. Pushing on toward Los Angeles, they traveled by the oceanside. The weather began to get warmer and they suffered less.

In the meantime Gen. Stephen W. Kearney had entered California through New Mexico and on January 8-9, 1847, inflicted defeat upon the insurgent Californians. The next day his troops marched into the city.

Fremont and his rugged battalion entered the city January 14 in a heavy rainstorm.

One historian describes the troopers as they splashed through the muddy central street of the City of Angels: "A more ragged, ill-provided, unprepossessing battalion it would be difficult to imagine; they might have been taken, as one of them remarked, for a tribe of Tartar nomads. Their garments tattered, drenched and plastered with mud; some of them without shoes or hats; their horses dispirited and exhausted—only their military order and arms made them seem soldiers."

It was a proud day for Fremont and his soldiers but none was more proud than the Kentuckian Barnett as he splashed in rags through the mud of the street.

The records do not show when Barnett left his battalion. He may have stayed through subsequent enlistments until mid-summer when a quarrel erupted between Fremont and Kearney. Kearney sought to take the volunteers into the regular army forces, the troops refused to go under a new leader. They were discharged without pay.

The Prestonsburg native went back to his ranch in Pope Valley and began successful efforts to create an estate in California, soon to become a state of the Union. His uncle, William B. Barnett, for whom he carried the first letter overland to California, came west in 1850, settled in San Francisco, but later moved into the household of Elias in Pope Valley. He was living there when he died in 1860.

Jesse Barnett, who was born at Prestonsburg, and who had been taken to Independence with his sister Abigail and left there while the father was making his way west with the Bartleson riflemen, lived on in Jackson county until 1836 when they moved to Scioto county, Ohio. He went to nearby Lawrence county and married Lorrana Clark in 1843. Four years later they moved back to Scioto county.

Like his father, he was infected with the western fever and in 1852 he started west again. With him were his wife, their two children, his sister Abigail, her husband, Joseph Halterman, and their four children. They went by way of Independence but the way was now explored and charted. They arrived safely in Pope Valley in 1855. A piece of a wheel from the covered wagon used by Jesse Barnett and his family on their journey is now preserved at Sutter's Fort. Jesse died in 1906 and his sister, Abigail Barnett Halterman, survived until 1911.

Elias Barnett's second wife, Julianna Pope, died sometime between 1853 and 1860. She bore him six children, two of them twin boys. It may have been that the death of Julianna was one of the reasons Jesse Barnett and Abigail Halterman decided to join their father for he was now left with six small children.

As he grew old an aura of respect began to cling to this Kentuckian who had braved the deserts and mountains to carry a letter with the first overland immigrant train, who had fought in the wars of the state and endured incredible hardships in the field.

He had known and had associated with many great men of the West. He had trailed with Broken-Hand Fitzpatrick and John Bidwell, knew personally the legendary Kit Carson and fought under Fremont, the Pathfinder. Capt. John Sutter was his patron and Dr. John Marsh became his bondsman for the Mexican authorities when he was incarcerated as an illegal immigrant to the state. Hundreds of the early pioneers were his intimates, and he was a fountain of knowledge to historians like H. H. Bancroft, who in collecting and writing the story of California made many little slips of paper for reference on which he jotted down the name of Elias Barnett.

He died February 8, 1880, in Pope Valley, surrounded by his children and kinsmen. He lies buried in Pope Valley cemetery on what was originally his ranch land and a quarter-mile from the still-standing two-story house built by his son Jesse in 1865.

Across the top of the tombstone is engraved the word, "Pioneer," and underneath that is a circle enclosing a Golden Bear, symbol of the state of California.

The forerunner of Uncle Sam was Brother Jonathan, reports World Book Encyclopedia. During the Revolutionary War any patriotic American was called Brother Jonathan.

tion equality in every legislative district. The conflict in the Constitution itself (arising from a prohibition against more than a two-county district) needs to be resolved; the question whether the 1964 Legislature can undo the work of a special session needs to be considered. In particular, consideration should be given to some general plan which can be sold to the Legislature and which will stand up in court.

"A sound plan is more important than speedy action. The ideal solution would be to work out a bipartisan plan of action which would be endorsed by both political parties and by all of those groups genuinely interested in redistricting."

In addition to Mr. Howard, Democrats appointed to the Commission on Reapportionment are:

Earl Bellew, Grayson, an A.F.L.-C.I.O. representative; Robert T. Burke, Louisville attorney; Carroll Cropper, Clay county judge; House Majority Leader Richard P. Moloney, of Lexington; Strother Melton, Paducah, a former state senator, and Dr. John E. Reeves, of the University of Kentucky political science faculty.

Republican appointees are: Louisville Mayor William O. Cowger; Durham Howard, State senator from Pineville; Dewey Daniels, Hazard, former Republican Party state chairman; Edwin R. Denney, a onetime gubernatorial candidate; Wayland Renter, House minority leader, and Charles H. White, Sr., Manchester, Clay county judge.

Combs has said he does not believe it is in the public interest to call such a session in 1962 or 1963 because those are senatorial and gubernatorial election years.

Also lined up against Combs' position of no special session is the Kentucky Municipal League.

Combs has said he would call a legislative session "as early as possible and get the misery behind me" if he felt the issue sufficiently important.

Representative R. P. Moloney warned that such a meeting would be unfruitful because legislators could not be expected to vote themselves out of office in overrepresented areas.

Combs' supporters argue that there is not critical imbalance and that representation has not been historically equal since the Constitution was drawn in 1890-91.

A spokesman for the Civil Liberties Union, Joseph Freeland, said the state chapter would take no special action to force reapportionment providing Combs "does something by the end of the month."

"We are not trying to put the governor under the gun or make any threats," he said at Paducah.

The British sang "Yankee Doodle" to poke fun at American colonists. But the Americans adopted the song and made it popular throughout the colonies, reports World Book Encyclopedia. . . and played it as the British left after the surrender at Yorktown.

FISH PRODUCTION

Fish production in two of the state-owned lakes that have been undergoing fertilization treatments has been greatly increased this year, Bernie Carter, director of the Division of Fisheries, announced. He declared that the catch of bluegill, good sized ones, at Shanty Hollow, near Bowling Green, has increased several times over since the renovation work started. The fish population, all species, according to Carter, has been upped greatly and many bass, just under catchable size, have been found in the fish population surveys.

Telephone Talk

MEDICAL DATA BY PHONE! The Bell System is developing instant transmission of "live" electrocardiographs by telephone through use of special DATA-PHONE data sets. When this service is perfected, a medical attendant, after connecting electrodes to the patient's arm, would dial the number of the receiving location and start the DATA-PHONE data set. Instantly, graphs would be produced in the distant location where a consulting specialist could study the recording. Methods of transmitting other types of medical data and x-rays by telephone are also being developed by the Bell Labs.

THE WEST WON HANDS DOWN in a recent comparison of prosperity in the two sectors of Berlin. In the German equivalent of our Yellow Pages, the number of goods and services available highlights the tremendous contrast between Eastern and Western ways of life. Some examples: gas stations—305 in West Berlin, 58 in East Berlin; libraries—95 in the West, 3 in the East; Dairy products stores—83 in the East, 166 in the West.

85% OF AMERICAN HOMES HAVE INDOOR PLUMBING, which shouldn't surprise most people. But the growing number of extension telephones in bathrooms is something new. A cosmetics shelf is the perfect spot for a Princess phone. (Just don't use it while in tub or shower.)

PROGRESS REPORT: '61 was a busy year at Southern Bell. We built telephone facilities costing about $293,000,000. By year's end, we were serving nearly 7,600,000 telephones. Direct distance dialing was made available to about 850,000 more customers, which meant at the end of 1961, 46% of our customers could dial their own station-to-station long distance calls.

AND SPEAKING OF PROGRESS, take a look at this "tool chest on wheels." Pictured, underneath all the wire, boxes and tools, is one of the first telephone repairmen. Southern Bell repairmen are still very much on the job... even more efficient and quick to answer your calls in their modern-day trucks.

Grethel Man Removed By Court To Hospital For Tubercular Cases

Oliver Hall, of Grethel, was removed from the county jail here last Friday and committed to Hazelwood Sanatorium for tuberculars. Hall, who had earlier left the state t.b. sanatorium at Ashland without permission, had been arrested several days earlier and booked on a charge of refusing to comply with orders of the health authorities. He contended a Pikeville physician had given him a clean bill of health but failed to prove the truth of his contention. He was convicted in quarterly court, Monday of last week, and his six-month jail sentence was changed to commitment to the tuberculars sanatorium.

Annual Meeting Slated At Paintsville, July 11; Beauty Contest, Feature

The 1962 annual meeting and farm show of the Big Sandy Rural Electric Cooperative will be held July 11 at Paintsville. Oran Hinkle, co-op manager, announced this week. The four-hour program will consist of entertainment by professional performers, a beauty contest, two awards of free prizes, a business meeting and two presentations dealing with the progress of rural electricity and electrical safety.

Local beauties, 16 to 22 years of age, previously unmarried and members of co-op consumer's family, are eligible to compete in the beauty contest.

The young woman selected by the judges will be crowned "Miss Big Sandy Rural Electric Cooperative of 1962." She will also represent Big Sandy RECC in the annual state beauty contest which will be held in Louisville at the Kentucky State Fair and Exposition Center in September.

Applications for the beauty contest may be obtained from the Big Sandy RECC office at Paintsville.

Visitors, in addition to members, are invited to attend the show and will be entertained by six professional acts.

teacher's standing before them and reading from pseudo-scientific tracts, Marxist treatises or outright atheistic theory.

Freedom can be an elusive thing. On the one hand, God may not be "inflicted" upon pupils. On the other, anything goes.

When you get to thinking about this entire matter you begin wondering if the upshot of the whole business will be separation of church and state, or separation of state and God.

SOME CONSOLATION

I did a bit of commiserating with Jack Howard, this day. He has accepted a place on the commission to study redistricting, and he has an idea he and others with him are in for rough sledding. The situation reminded him of the story told by Lincoln when a friend found him at the White House, in a mood more melancholy than usual. In the South he was a murderer; in the North, he was a monster—and he knew what they were writing and saying about him. But to the friend the sad countenance lit up, and Abe explained his situation with a characteristically humorous story.

It was the yarn about the miscreant who had got himself caught and who had received at the hands of an irate citizenry a liberal coating of tar and feathers. His captors were adding the finishing touches by giving him a ride out of town on a rail. Young boys followed, catcalling, hurling insults, and the rail became sharper by the second. Finally, after a mile of this, the unfortunate one turned to one of his tormentors and remarked: "If it wasn't for the honor of the thing I would just as soon get off and walk."

IT'LL HAPPEN EVERY TIME

Asked "Snow" White, Tuesday, how he was getting along with his farming, and he replied with an observation which rang true. Said he could work an hour, two hours, in the hot sun and give every evidence of an industrious farmer, and never a soul would pass to be a witness to his labor. But let exhaustion set in and let him sit down in the shade for even ten minutes, and—you know it!—sure as shootin' along would come some loafer to sing out, "That all you do—sit in the shade?"

I say this rings true, not because I have worked myself to a quivering mass of muscle on the farm, but because of my experiences fishing. Let me come into port, any old evening, empty-handed, and the whole gang will be lined up to chorus, "Where's the fish?" But let me get lucky and be ready for 'em, and every soul will have long since departed for home.

WHAT'S THE "CATCH" TO THIS?
Surefire Fishing Tip: Find you a clear place in the Big Sandy and start casting. I guarantee you'll catch fish.

body of the Extension Council under authority of Chapter 275, Kentucky Revised Statutes. After that, a resolution was adopted describing the authority and the need for the tax. It pointed out that the General Assembly legislation of 1962 was enacted to provide for aid in subjects related to agriculture, home economics and rural and community life. The fiscal court, the resolution continued, has been contributing to the extension service and the soil conservation service for several years, in an effort to provide the people of the county with full and adequate opportunities as provided by the University of Kentucky's Extension Service and the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

County revenues have been decreasing over the past years, it was pointed out, and in view of the county's loss of revenue it has been extremely difficult to contribute fully and provide needed agricultural assistance through these agencies.

Having adopted the resolution, the order itself was unanimously adopted, providing for the 3-cent levy and including all the directives of the resolution.

It was said by county officials that the county's revenues this fiscal year will be $12,000 less than last, largely because of the court ruling holding that franchise taxes may not be assessed at a rate higher than the assessment rate for other taxes.

As a consequence, the proposed county budget cut appropriations for both the Extension Service and the Soil Conservation Service. The new levy, however, will take care of needs of the county agent, his assistant, clerical and other expenses for which the county is responsible and also meet the home demonstration agent's needs. But it was said Monday that the Soil Conservation Service, whose appropriation is being cut $700, is not included under the District Cooperative Extension Service Act and so will not benefit from the levy.

Camp Meeting Scheduled

Evangelist Ralph Turner, Evandale, O., will preach at the seventh annual Church of God Camp Meeting here July 5-8, it was announced this week by the Rev. Moses Kitchen, pastor of the First Church of God, Prestonsburg.

Fourteen churches are sponsoring the annual gathering, Rev. Kitchen said. Meals and lodging will be free, he noted, but people are asked to bring pillows, blankets and cots.

Mrs. Jewel Turner will direct singing and Ann Cunningham, Boma, Tenn., will be the pianist. The first evangelistic service will begin at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, July 5. There will be four services daily.

Crown Lanes Quintet Takes Lead in Tourney Sunday at Parkersburg

The Crown Bowling Lanes team took the lead Sunday in the BPAA regional handicap tournament at Parkersburg, West Virginia over 400 or more teams which already posted their scores, and stands a strong chance of winning its way into the national tournament to be held at Owensboro, Kentucky, August 10 and 11.

Until the Crown Lanes team—Ebert Reynolds, Ray Wilcox, Harold L. Patton, Jay Settles and Lloyd Burton—posted its 3,202 total a team from Battle Creek, Michigan, had held the lead with 3,174 pins. One hundred thirty-three teams were slated to bowl after Sunday's play had ended.

Winner of the Region III tournament at Parkersburg will receive $3,376 in cash and the regional championship trophy.

An over-600 series by Reynolds and Wilcox led the Prestonsburg team. Reynolds scored 173, 225, 235 for a 633 series, and Wilcox added 203, 303, 198 for a 604 total, with Burton, Patton and Settles backing them up with strong totals.

A severe fish kill occurred in the South Fork of the Cumberland River a few days ago, Carter reported. He said acid mine water apparently came into the river across the Tennessee border, but fish were killed on the Kentucky side for many miles. An encouraging note, Carter says, however, is the fact that a great many walleye in the pound to two pounds category were found in the Yama-craw section, an area where it was feared the spawn of this species had failed for several years.

WATER POLICY IMPLEMENTED

Small Watershed Jobs Given Reconsideration; Guidelines Are Prepared

It was announced last week by Congressman Carl D. Perkins that new water resource development policies will be implemented soon in Eastern Kentucky by instructions being sent to U. S. Department of Agriculture field personnel in connection with the Small Watershed Program.

"The policy changes," Perkins said, "will enable many small watershed projects deferred in the Seventh district to be reconsidered under a formula more favorable to the hills and valleys of this part of the Appalachian area."

The new policy changes recently approved by the President would (1) increase the maximum evaluation period from 50 to 100 years, (2) place greater emphasis on the economic evaluation of additional purposes of such projects as recreation, fish and wildlife conservation, water supply and water quality control, (3) permit evaluation to reflect benefits from increased employment in labor surplus areas which would result from the construction and operation of the project and (4) relax harsh restrictions on evaluation of secondary benefits.

Perkins said that the U. S. Department of Agriculture was in the process of preparing revised field manuals as guidelines in applying the new policy to eastern Kentucky projects. Projects which could be reconsidered as a result of the revised water policy include: Bear Creek in Lee county, Beaver Creek in Menifee county, Boone Branch and Paint Lick in Rowan, Boone Fork Creek in Letcher, Upper Buckhorn in Perry, Cane Creek in Powell and Menifee, Cow Creek in Floyd, East Fork Cabin Creek in Lewis, East Fork of Little Sandy River in Lawrence, Greenup, Carter and Boyd, Fleming Creek in Fleming, Frozen Creek in Breathitt, Gladys Creek in Menifee, Grassy Creek in Morgan and Wolfe, Ison-Johnson Creek in Elliott, Lower Little Sandy River in Carter and Greenup, Middle Fork in Martin, North Fork of Licking River in Lewis, Fleming and Mason, Roe's Run in Bath, Toms Creek in Johnson, Tygarts Creek in Greenup and Carter, Upper Johns Creek in Pike, Upper Licking River in Magoffin, Upper Little Sandy in Carter, Elliott, Lawrence and Rowan and Upper Troublesome Creek in Knott.

The policy changes approved by the White House follow a long series of conferences Perkins has held with White House staff members concerned with policies and reflects the favorable attitude expressed from time to time by Perkins' plea that the Bureau of the Budget's strict requirements with respect to the cost-benefit ratio was operating to deny eastern Kentucky the benefits of the Small Watershed Program.

One of the means employed by Perkins to direct attention to the problem was the introduction of H. R. 5513 which gained the approval of the Department of Agriculture. Perkins expressed the hope that the new policy directions would break the log jam in Eastern Kentucky and result in the construction of much needed Small Watershed Programs throughout the district.

THE FEMININE SIDE OF BOWLING NEWS

By IMA BOWLER

Summer league play has now begun, and already we are settling down to business. Most leagues got under way with little difficulty. Please remember, your new league secretaries are supposed to send copies of league rules and the list of new officers to the City Association secretary for records. Please don't forget this. If a protest comes up, you will be protecting yourself by already having the rules before the executive board. Things are rather slow right now. It would be a good time to keep practicing so that you can hit that 300 game. There still have been only six three hundred games in the whole country and all of them were west of the Rockies.

Might be of interest to you to print some of the bowling terms with which you may not be familiar:

For instance, "alley" is an obsolete term for "lane"; an "error" is a missed spare; a "spare" is cleaning up on the second ball all pins that you missed with the first; a "sleeper" is a hidden pin; "cheeseecake" is a fast or easy lane; "Dutch 200" means making 200 by getting alternately strike, spare, strike, spare; a "mother-in-law" is the 7 pin; to "blow" is to fail to knock down all pins on the second throw unless you have a split; a "split" is when two pins are left standing, with no headpin between them; a "broom ball" is one that sweeps down all the pins, a mixer; hitting to the Brooklyn side is to hit the opposite side of the pocket for which you are shooting; "gutter ball" is one which drops into either gutter before reaching the pins.

Perhaps it should be mentioned that all league sanctions have to be in within three weeks after you start bowling. This is essential if you are to bowl in sanctioned leagues. It is absolutely forbidden for any WIBC member to bowl in any league which is not WIBC sanctioned, and each member must herself determine whether this league is sanctioned or not. You could lose your membership by bowling in an unsanctioned league, so don't let these sanctions go. Get busy on them. Also, every member of each team must be a WIBC member. You could lose games if you bowl a gal who isn't a member.

Your league secretaries all get a copy of WOMAN BOWLER magazine for each league. Ask your secretary about your copy, so you can see it. Your secretary is also responsible for getting each member of the league a copy of league rules.

Those of you who were secretaries of leagues last fall should be sure that your final standing sheets are turned into the City Association secretary right away. The secretary of each league received some form of pay for doing the league work, and this is a very important part of their duties. Be sure to get this done right away if you haven't already. They should be sent to the secretary of the City Association, Earlene Daniels, at East Point.

Frankfort, Ky., June 26 (Spl.)—Quail and rabbit populations, according to early June surveys, are better than for the past several years, Arnold Mitchell, director of Management, reports. The quail count, conducted in widely spread areas, indicates greater male birds whistles than for last year—in some cases twice as many. In the rabbit survey increased numbers of young bunnies have been recorded.

Is Silence Bliss? Not for 7 Years

London, England—Gladys Lusher refused to talk to her husband George when he came home 40 minutes late to lunch from a golf game in 1954. He kept his silence, too, and for seven years the couple lived together without exchanging a word.

Mrs. Lusher has now obtained a divorce so she can live separately and talk to their two children.

Radioactivity Program Scheduled by Kentucky; Waste Disposal Slated

Frankfort, Ky.—The Division of Radiological Health, Kentucky State Department of Health, is planning to initiate an environmental surveillance program to measure radioactivity in selected samples of milk, water and food from all over the state, Charles L. Weaver, director, announced today.

Emphasis at first will be on studies in the area of the world's first commercially operated nuclear service center, which will be constructed in southeastern Fleming County, Weaver said.

The initial study, which will begin in September, will establish as a basis for a continuing high radioactivity background surveillance program.

The Division has added new staff members who will concentrate their efforts on getting the program started, he said.

Ronald J. Doyle will assume duties July 1 as radiation physicist. A 1960 graduate of N. E. Louisiana State College, he received his M. S. degree from the University of Kentucky earlier this month.

Richard McDowell, D. D. S., U. S. Public Health Service Division of Radiological Health, was assigned to the Division June 15 for a year of practical training in all phases of radiological health including environmental surveillance.

Leonard Wilson, formerly a chemist for the Kentucky Water Pollution Control Commission, has transferred to Radiological Health.

Minnesota Woman Saves Lives, Teaches Gospel, Reader's Digest Says

How a Prior Lake, Minn., woman less than five feet tall, who wanted to be a newspaper-woman, now operates orphanages and hospitals, and spreads the Christian gospel in Formosa, is told by Clarence W. Hall in the July Reader's Digest.

Mrs. Lillian Dickson found her calling at Macalester College, where she fell in love with a former South Dakota cowboy, Jim Dickson, who wanted to be a minister. By 1927, following Jim's graduation from Princeton Theological Seminary, the Dicksons were on their way to Formosa, where they have been ever since—except for the war years and brief vacations at home.

The Formosans call Mrs. Dickson "the Littlest Lady With the Biggest Heart." Hall writes, and that is the title of the article, condensed from Christian Herald. With magnificent disregard for red tape, she has snatched young boys from prison, and girls from parents who wanted to sell them into prostitution, and set up homes for them. There are now 12 such homes with more than 400 children, around the island.

She has also set up more than 100 churches; 100 church kindergartens for more than 5,000 youngsters; a school where aboriginal boys of high-school age are taught farming and other trades; a similar school for girls; a teacher's training school which already has graduated more than 200; ten clinics serving 28,000 patients a month; a TB sanatorium and four maternity wards.

Her work's main support comes from individuals and local church groups in the United States and Canada. With these correspondents—about 20,000 at present—she shares her experiences and hopes in a chatty monthly letter. Contributors receive pictures of the children they "adopt," patients they sponsor, and churches or equipment their money buys.

One half-cup of cottage cheese contains about the same amount of protein as 3 medium-size eggs or 3 ounces of cooked meat, poultry or fish. And one-half cup creamed cottage cheese has only 120 calories. One-half cup dry cottage cheese has 180 calories.

Names Sought Of Daughters Of Rebel Vets

Lexington—Although all the veterans of both Civil War armies are dead, their children survive in numbers which are not known exactly, but probably would exceed the average person's estimate, according to one of them who has been investigating the matter. She is Mrs. W. E. Bach, 165 Bell Court West, Lexington, daughter of a Virginian who served in the Confederate States Army.

Mrs. Bach, who is president of the Kentucky Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, at the 1961 general convention of the U. D. C. at Jackson, Miss., was named historian general of the "Real Daughters Club" of the general organization. Since then she has been engaged in collecting the names and addresses of "real daughters" of men who fought for the Confederacy.

Mrs. Bach has issued an appeal to all daughters of men who served in the Confederate armed forces, whether or not they are members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, to send their names and addresses to her at the Lexington address given above. In each case, she says, she would like also to have the father's name and, if known, the regiment or other unit in which he served, with such other facts as are available concerning his war record.

Last year, among approximately 500 members of the Kentucky Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, eighty-eight were "real daughters." The others were granddaughters, great-granddaughters and, in some cases, collateral descendants—nieces, grandnieces and great-grandnieces.

The various U. D. C. chapters in Kentucky last year had the following numbers of "real daughters": Frankfort, seventeen; Lexington, fifteen; Cynthia, twelve; Louisville, ten; Princeton, six; Hopkinsville, Owensboro and Paducah, four each; LaGrange, Mayfield and Pewee Valley, three each; Catlettsburg and Prestonsburg, two each; Ghent, Morganfield and Murray, one each.

So far as Mrs. Bach knows, no comparable effort is being made to collect the names of Kentuckians who are "real daughters" of Union veterans or "real sons" of veterans of either army.

Egg Tosser Happens To Strike Policeman

Stafford Springs, Conn., June 20—It was the last day of school Wednesday, and the three teenagers were feeling unusually frisky. As they rode home along main street in the Stafford high school bus, one of the boys tossed an egg at a pedestrian. It was a bull's eye.

A few minutes later the bus was stopped by a state-police cruiser. State Trooper Leonard Wielock, dressed in civilian clothes, had been the target.

The boys have an appointment with police.

AN AVENUE NAMED BOB WALLACE... The city fathers had named an avenue in Huntsville, Ala., for Bob Wallace but he didn't know it until he visited his son, Gabriel, there recently. But he found the avenue was named for another Bob Wallace, not Robert Wallace, Regional Librarian. It was, however, a nice spot to snap a picture.

Chehalis Lifts Itself By Bootstrap Operation Following Plant Shutdown

What can a town do to survive the economic disaster which follows loss of a major industry? When the shingle mill burned down in Chehalis, Wash., one of the small city's biggest payrolls vanished. Efforts to lure another industry failed. Gloom settled over Chehalis' 5000 residents.

Then they got in touch with "the professors"—five specialists in political science, economics, planning, taxes and finance who make up the University of Washington's unique Bureau of Community Development and have assisted 43 Washington communities in the past 12 years. What they did for Chehalis is described by Karl Detzer in a July Reader's Digest article, "They Bring New Life to Old Towns."

First, the professors called for an inventory of resources and needs. Schools, churches, banks, garden clubs, P. T. A., Boy Scouts and business and professional men took volunteer assignments. A thousand people bought $50 shares in a new Industrial Commission.

With the money, a new water system was installed and 137 acres were bought for an "industrial park." Inexpensive sites were offered to industry. The city promised to extend all utilities and a railroad spur to every new plant. Four trunk railroads offered to rebuild nearly two miles of long-unused trackage. Local residents extended the track further by buying ties at $4 apiece—two for $7.50—and laid the rails themselves, working nights and weekends.

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company put up a $1,200,000 plant. Several other manufacturers followed. Today, with the emergency long past, new industries move to Chehalis every year.

Detzer's article, condensed from National Civic Review, tells of other towns similarly redeemed with the professors' help. Their bureau costs the State approximately $70,000 a year, or less than three cents per inhabitant.

Annual Bible Conference Set At Camp Nathanael

Camp Nathanael at Emmalena, Kentucky, will begin its annual Bible conference with supper on Monday, July 2, at 5:30 and continue until Saturday breakfast, July 7.

Rev. Walter Olsen has returned to be the missionary speaker at 9:30 each morning. A former missionary to India, Rev. Olsen now represents the Evangelical Alliance Mission across the United States.

Rev. Howard Burtner will conduct the Bible Hour at 10:45 a.m. As pastor of the Brookfield Bible Church in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, he has experience in radio preaching, camps and conferences. Rev. Burtner and Rev. Olsen will alternate in the 2:00 p.m. services.

Each evening at 7, the Rev. Garland Franklin will be preaching. He is a native of Knott county and is founder and president of the Scripture Memory Mountain Mission which operates Camp Nathanael.

Wednesday, July 4, is "Camp Nathanael Day." Sunday Schools, church and family groups will be picnicking on the grounds. Old friends and alumni of Camp Nathanael will get together. Throughout the conference, there will be good food, fellowship and wholesome recreation, including swimming. Children will be ministered to by qualified workers in meetings of their own.

Individuals and families are invited to enjoy all or part of this conference. Young people under 16 years of age must be accompanied by parents if staying over night. No charge is made for food or lodging, but those attending will be invited to participate in free will offerings to meet conference expenses.

It's One Method Of Getting Action

Liverpool, England — Railway porter Stanley Malney, 33, was so annoyed with the British Internal Revenue Service he cut off his two empty pockets and mailed them in. The revenue officials returned them with a note promising a more generous tax allowance in the future.

Self-Evaluation Studies Slated In Schools, Said; Appropriate Action, Plan

Self-evaluation studies will be made this summer by all schools in Kentucky, Wendell P. Butler, State superintendent of public instruction, has announced.

"These reports will be used by the State Board as bases for appropriate action at the state level," Butler said.

In the self-evaluation study, Butler urges local education leadership—superintendents, school boards and other school officials—to make a thorough self-study of their districts' and individual schools' programs in terms of the purposes for which the school exist.

Butler said, "We want the school officials to re-examine and re-evaluate present beliefs and practices with regard to extracurricular activities, athletics, and the use of school time."

School officials will be asked such questions as whether athletic practice sessions and pep rallies are held during the school day, whether students are dismissed to attend ball games, how many games are played a week and how many many games on nights preceding school days.

Questions are asked about activities sponsored by groups outside the school, including colleges; activities originating within the school; fund-raising drives; and other classroom interruptions such as unsupervised student visiting, public-address systems, salesmen, ticket selling.

Another study soon to get under way will examine the organization, objectives and functions of the Kentucky Department of Education. This study will be directed by the State Commission on Public Education.

While there he was a successful candidate for the House of Representatives and was invited to return next year as a guest speaker.

He has received recognition in the fields of history and chemistry and in his senior year will serve as president of the Beta Club, National Honor Society.

Meter Jammer Pays for 200 Parking Hours

Louisville, Ky., June 20—A fine equivalent to 200 parking-meter hours was paid in Police Court yesterday by a man accused of jamming a meter earlier in the morning.

The $20 fine was imposed on Edward M. Sanders, 24, of 2900 Garfield, charged with destroying public property at 8:15 a.m. in the 900 block of West Market.

Patrolman George Johnson said he saw Sanders park, wrap a penny in cellophane, and insert it in the meter. The meter jammed.

Sanders, a salesman, admitted the charge. He said he couldn't find a convenient place to park in the neighborhood.
