

THURSDAY

PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY

MARCH 22, 1962

This Town-- That World

If these bombers flying across the skies here are doing as much damage to their target as they are to nerves and the sleep of some of our folks, Berea, Kentucky, should just about be in ruins by this time.

THE SORDID SIDE

We print in this edition a letter in which Ira E. Frazier, of Weeksville, points to the cluttered-up condition of the countryside. Next week, we hope to print another from John F. Bentley, of Langley, on the same subject. We appreciate the interest of both these gentlemen. And, unless the rest of us become interested and do something about it, perhaps we should stop asking tourists to come, see our beautiful mountains. Maybe we could attract as many, and be more honest about it, with an invitation for them to "go slumming."

Any time we are little enough to feel big, let us recall that the favorite poem of a great President of the United States was "Oh, Why Should the Spirit of Mortal Be Proud?"

THE TRUTH

The first big string of fish brought to Prestonsburg from Dewey Lake this year was displayed Wednesday by Lennie Moore and Bill Bunting. The former indicated he might have been a "good" fisherman and lied a little about the "catch," but his partner insisted the fish were taken during seining operations conducted there by the Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources.

Maybe my ear is a little duller than a year ago, but I do not detect the voice of last year's leader among those frogs that are dining away again in the mill that runs across my backyard.

APRIL TERM JURY DRAWN

Court convenes Apr. 2, Clerk Stephens says; Light Docket Is Seen

Names of 63 Floyd women and men were listed this week by Circuit Clerk Henry Stephens as having been drawn from the jury drum for possible jury service at the coming April criminal term of circuit court.

The court session will convene Monday, April 2. Although the docket is comparatively light, grand jury action will add several cases which may be brought to trial before adjournment. Among the cases to be investigated by the grand jury is the

SCOUTS SLATE SPEECH BY AMBASSADOR WINE

FUND DRIVE TO FEATURE KNOTT NATIVE

Former Church Leader To Speak At Hi School; Proceeds To Aid Scouts

U. S. Ambassador James W. Wine will be the principal speaker at two ceremonies to be sponsored here Saturday by Lonesome Pine Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Wine, a native of Knott county, is ambassador to Luxembourg.

Arrangements for his appearance here were announced Tuesday by B. F. Reed, of Drift, Council finance chairman.

Wine will address a Scout fund-raising dinner at the Prestonsburg high school at 6 p.m. At 7 p.m. he will speak at the high school auditorium in a lecture free to the public.

Proceeds from the dinner will be used to support Boy Scout activities in the 16-county Council, Reed said. He added that tickets for the dinner may be purchased in advance from Scouters within the Council-area, or at the door the night of the dinner.

Wine was appointed ambassador to the small European principality in 1961 by President John Kennedy. He arrived in the United States this week for consultations with the State Department before returning to his overseas post.

Wine is former general secretary of the National Council of Churches. He toured the country during the last presidential election in Kennedy's behalf to blunt anti-Catholic sentiment which erupted during the campaign.

Wine is a former city attorney of Pikeville, served as a U. S. commissioner from 1949 to 1953, and was vice-president of Park College in Missouri before joining the National Council of Churches.

Tickets to the dinner are available at all Floyd county banks.

CLARKE NOTES FLOYD RC AID

Ninety-Four Families Register In Program; Four Workers Assigned

J. B. Clarke, disaster chairman of Floyd Chapter, American Red Cross, said this week that 94 families, in all, have registered for assistance as a result of the recent flood.

To date the agency has spent $1,599.24 for food and clothing, $204.91 for material to repair damaged homes, and $5,466.41 for household furniture.

The closing date for registrations was March 16, 1962.

There are four trained disaster workers assigned to the Floyd County Chapter. They are Mrs. Pearl H. Hill, worker in charge; Mrs. Betty Salois, Mrs. Elizabeth Firestone and Mrs. Sarah Hoyle, caseworkers; William Tidwell, building adviser.

It is expected that the disaster relief work will be completed by next Monday.

The quota for the Floyd County Chapter in the fund drive now under way is $7,000. "Give generously when solicited," Mr. Clarke urged.

Contestants Take Honors In District Competition At Pikeville, Saturday

Contestants sponsored by Floyd county Woman's Clubs took top honors in the district music and art contests staged Saturday in Wickham Chapel, Pikeville College.

Daniel C. Greer, Wheelwright high school student, repeated his last year's triumph in the music contest.

Members of the Prestonsburg and David Woman's Clubs swept all four awards in the art contest for club members, and Mack W. Martin, Wayland high school student sponsored by the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club, won the student art contest.

Miss Janelyn George, of Betsy Layne, placed second in the music contest. Miss George and Greer are both juniors, and both are pupils of Arkady Weber, of Pikeville.

Miss Annette Price, Whitesburg freshman, was third prize winner. She is a pupil of Luke Berlin, of Whitesburg. Receiving honorable mention was Miss Lynn Goble, Prestonsburg high school sophomore. Her teacher is John Grant Wheatley, of Paintsville.

'62 FOLLIES SLATED HERE

Woman's Club Schedules Presentation Two Days For Community Benefit

The Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club this week announced that it will present "The Follies of '62" on April 12 and 13 at the Strand Theatre here.

The club first presented the Follies last year.

Again the proceeds from the Follies will be used by the club to help finance its local community programs. This year, most of the funds derived from the entertainment will go to fulfill the club's pledge of $500 made for the acquisition of a site of a junior college here.

During the past year the club has sponsored one girl at Beulah Heights Orphanage and is undertaking the furnishing of a Prayer Room at the Prestonsburg General hospital. A committee also is working on a communication project which will include the placing of welcome signs at the approaches to Prestonsburg. During the year the club has contributed to various drives and undertakings.

"Wonderful entertainment for your family two nights in April and worthwhile services for our community the rest of the year—that is what we hope to afford," said Mrs. Cliff Latta, president of the club.

GIRL MISSING, FOUR JAILED

Two Prisoners Here Say Girl in Pike-Co.; Others Jailed Named

Four men were jailed here Tuesday and held for investigation while a search was being made for a 15-year-old Mud Creek girl who has been missing from her home since Sunday night.

John J. McKinney and Millard Johnson were first arrested by Deputy Sheriff Joe Wheeler Lewis. Later, Burnis Rogers and Thomas P. George were jailed.

Rogers and George said they picked the girl up at the roadside on Toler's Creek, about dawn Tuesday morning and took her at her request to the home of Rogers' brother in Happy Hollow, across the river from Pikeville. They said they expected officers to find her there. Authorities here were told that McKinney and Johnson were the girl's companions when she first left home.

Others jailed within the week included:

Vera McCown, driving under the influence of alcohol, booked by Sheriff's deputies; Leonard B. Howard, Jim Hall, Samuel Conn and Denver Shepherd, driving under influence of alcohol, arrested by state troopers; Clifford Crum, grand larceny, by deputy sheriffs; George Clinton Moore, drunk and disturbing magistrate's court; Paul Taylor, absent without leave from the armed forces.

LEGAL ACTION IS ORDERED

Against Coal Companies For Stream Pollution; Several To Show Cause

The Water Pollution Control Commission Tuesday ordered its counsel to take legal action against 10 coal firms the commission says are violating Kentucky pollution laws.

Nine of the firms listed by the commission are in Eastern Kentucky and one in Western Kentucky. The violation, the commission said, involved uncontrolled washing of coal.

At the same time two firms in this region, Princess Coals, Inc., of David, and Leckie Freeburn Coal Company, of Pike county, were ordered to appear at the next regular meeting of the commission to show cause why similar action should not be taken against them.

Named by the commission were the Eastern Kentucky firms of Paintsville Coal Company, Harlan Fuel Company, Liggett Coal Company, Pure "D" Coal Company, Seagraves Coal Company, Blair Fork Coal Company, Perrone Productions Company, and Blue Diamond Leatherwood No. 1 and No. 2.

The Ligon Quality Coal Company and Big Elven of Western Kentucky also was named for legal action.

At the same time, the commission 1. Ordered a public hearing for the City of Louisa on its sewage-treatment problems. No date was set for the meeting, but law provides that at least 30 days must pass after notification of the hearing date before the hearing may be held.

LOWMAN TALK HITS WYATT

Chandler Evokes Laughs At Lieutenant-Governor; Joe Weddington Presides

Harry King Lowman, who aspires to the senatorial seat of Republican Thurston Morton, and is seeking to defeat Lieut.-Gov. Wilson Wyatt in the Democratic primary, told approximately 100 dinner guests at the Wise Restaurant Tuesday evening that the Lieutenant-Governor had no right to ask Kentuckians to elect Wyatt to the senate because of the failure of the state's industrial procurement program.

Lowman, Speaker of the Kentucky House of Representatives at the recent session, and who broke with the Combs administration to challenge Wyatt, asserted that his opponent, who is in charge of the industrial promotion program, spent $5 million dollars and only 6,000 new jobs were created. This was at a cost of $740 per job, as compared with a cost per job in North Carolina of $19 and $70 in Tennessee, he said.

He was critical of a facetious remark attributed to Wyatt when his promotional efforts were attacked.

"When I criticized Wyatt's sorry record on industry procurement he didn't say my figures were wrong," Lowman said. "Wyatt said, 'I prefer Hazel.'"

Former Governor A. B. Chandler, who accompanied Lowman, picked up the verbal barrage

TEACHERS SET ANNUAL MEET

Miss Beckham, Others To Address Gathering; Plan Officers' Election

Five hundred or more teachers are expected here Friday to attend the annual meeting of the Floyd County Teachers Association at the grade school auditorium, Woodrow W. Allen, association president, said Tuesday.

Principal addresses at the all-day meeting will be made by Miss Vera Beckham, secretary of the Kentucky Teacher Retirement System, and John Fred Williams, former state superintendent of public instruction and now an Ashland Oil & Refining Company executive.

The election of officers and directors of the Association for the coming year and the naming of delegates and alternates to the Kentucky Education Association meeting will be items of particular interest.

The program will be opened by the Patsy Teen-Agers, an outstanding vocal group. The Prestonsburg Band Boosters will serve lunch to the teachers in the grade school cafeteria.

Welfare Worker Loses Gasoline To Juveniles

A Department of Child Welfare representative went to the Teaberry vicinity last week to make a Social Security referral interview but wound up a victim of juvenile crime.

While Mrs. Irene Campbell, of the Prestonsburg office, was talking with an elderly woman two teen-age boys siphoned the gasoline tank of her car almost empty. Both youth already are under probation. Her investigation disclosed that a brother of one of the boys watched him steal the gasoline, while the parents of the other witnessed the theft by their son.

Her efforts to recover enough of the gasoline to run her auto to a service station were fruitless, but the tank was damp enough to make the two miles to a station.

'Coach of Year' Honor Won in Ohio by Damron

Bill Damron, former Floyd basketball coach and now head coach at Valley High, Lucasville, O., has been voted the Southern Ohio Conference "Coach of the Year."

A former Prestonsburg high school basketball coach, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Damron, of Ivel.

SCHOOL PLANS EVENT SERIES

Ambassador, All-Stars Contest Is Scheduled To Aid In Fund Drive

The McDowell Boosters Club this week announced another in its series of events being staged to raise money toward construction of a modern gymnasium to serve the school here.

The Harlem Ambassadors will play the Floyd County All-Stars at McDowell, Friday night.

The Ambassadors, an outstanding colored quintette, has as one of its stars, Bailey Robertson, brother of the famed Oscar Robertson. The Floyd All-Stars will be composed of present basketball coaches in the county.

The McDowell community, it is explained, is attempting to raise $16,000 toward the cost of steel and exterior construction and has set July as the deadline for this effort. The Floyd County Board of Education has committed itself to the expense of flooring and seating.

Direct contributions will be solicited later. "Just now we're interested in having something to show the people before we ask them for such help," a spokesman said.

COUNTY LEVEL GROUPS NEED

Discussion of Problems Chaired by Cliff Latta At Paintsville Meeting

The necessity of organizing local development corporations at either the community or county level in order to participate financially in the ARA private loan program was reaffirmed Monday evening at the monthly meeting of the Big Sandy Area Development Council by James D. Toy, Louisville, financial specialist of the Small Business Administration.

Taking part in a question-and-answer period which elicited information applying to this area were, in addition to Mr. Toy; James Street, of the Department of Economic Development; George Gaud, of the Small Business Administration; Hillard Smith, of Hindman, Area Redevelopment Administration field coordinator, and George Armstrong, area counsellor, East Kentucky Resources Development Council.

Cliff Latta, of Prestonsburg, area chairman, presided at the meeting, which was held at the Paintsville Country Club.

The gathering was split up into four discussion groups: 1. Private

Mrs. Regina B. Mayo will appear at 10:30 a.m. next Tuesday in a program over radio station WDOC, discussing the Red Cross in its national, international and local aspects. Her talk will also emphasize the importance of local support of Floyd Chapter, American Red Cross, in its current drive for funds.

Ex-Magistrate May Found At Roadside, Suffering from Stabs

Ex-Magistrate John May was found before daybreak last Friday morning at the roadside on Ky. 30, near Martin, in a near-unconscious condition from loss of blood, the result of stab wounds, the Sheriff's office said this week.

May was hospitalized but reportedly was discharged later to return to his work. He was stabbed in the neck and cut slightly across the abdomen and arm, it was said. Officers said he declined to identify his assailant.

COUNCIL SAYS DEBT HIGHER

Outstanding Warrants, Bills Set At $13,000 Not In City Budget

The Prestonsburg City Council, after a determination of the amount of local indebtedness, finds that approximately an additional $13,000 will be required for the city government in the ensuing year. This is the amount due banks and the total of outstanding warrants.

The budget, formally adopted Thursday evening of last week, provides $107,628 for all city services next year. It is pointed out that the $13,000 has not been added to the budget and it is inferred that there will have to be a small deficit at the fiscal year's end.

Other actions of the Council at its regular meeting were:

1. James D. George was appointed Prestonsburg Civil Defense director at the request of Hern Burke, Floyd county director.

2. Adopted a tax assessment ordinance authorizing a blanket 50 per cent raise in assessments in the city. This is expected to yield $15,000.

3. Heard financial reports and discussed routine business.

$39 MILLION WILL FINANCE 33-MILE ARM

From Campton Terminus To Salyersville; Study Of Routing Here Begun

A preliminary study of the route through Prestonsburg was being made this week, with right-of-way width being measured to determine the number of lanes possible through the business district.

The Turnpike Authority of Kentucky sold $29 million worth of revenue bonds Wednesday to build a 33-mile extension of the Eastern Kentucky Turnpike from Campton to Salyersville.

Gov. Bert Combs made the announcement after the Turnpike Authority accepted the offer of New York, Chicago and Louisville investment firms representing 57 underwriters.

The bonds were sold at an average annual interest rate of 4.30 per cent. Interest rates on the serial bonds range from four per cent on the 1967 maturities to 4 1/2 per cent on the 1985 bonds. The term bonds which mature in 2000 bear an interest rate of 4.30 per cent. The average rate for the Western Turnpike bonds was 4.988 per cent, and the average for the original Eastern Turnpike issue 4.855 per cent.

Combs, noting that the interest rate is lower than rates recently paid by other state for similar types of financing, called the sale clear evidence of the high regard in which the credit of Kentucky is held.

The first bonds mature in 1967, with $10 million worth to be retired through 1967. The remaining $19 million in bonds will mature in the year 2000.

The first construction contracts on the road will be let this year as soon as rights-of-way are acquired, with completion hoped for by the end of 1963. Highway Commissioner Henry Ward said.

The extension will begin at the eastern end of the 42-mile Eastern Kentucky Turnpike at Campton in Wolfe county and go to Salyersville in Magoffin county, a distance of about 33 miles through rugged terrain.

It will be a two-lane facility with full control of access and additional lanes for climbing and passing.

Interchanges will be located at State Route 15 east of Campton, (See Story No. 2, Page 6)

CAPT. COLLINS REMINISCED OF UNION VICTORY

Capt. John C. Collins, of Company G, 14th Kentucky Volunteer Infantry Regiment, sitting at his desk, made at Louisa, and used by him while in service in the Union army. He took the desk to Kansas when he migrated there after the war.

BY HENRY P. SCALF

One hundred years ago, immediately following the Battle of Middle Creek, Capt. John C. Collins, Co. G, 14th Kentucky Volunteer Infantry Regiment, and his men were in hot pursuit of the Confederates fleeing up Spurlock Fork of Middle Creek.

Coming around a curve in the trail they found an abandoned wagon and inspection revealed it was the headquarters vehicle of Col. John S. Williams, noted rebel leader and veteran of Mexican War.

Collins, according to his memoirs dictated to the historian, William Elsey Connelly, took for himself only one souvenir, a small inkstand. He prized it in the decades following the Civil War and when he migrated to Kansas in 1865, he took it along.

The Company G captain, of Lewis county, Kentucky, came to Cavetttsburg while the area was filled with refugees from the Big Sandy and Licking River valleys and it was there he joined the 14th Kentucky Volunteers. He was elected captain by the men at an election in which his opponent was John Jordan, of Big Blaine Creek, Lawrence county, and who served as a scout and spy for Col. James A. Garfield in a campaign to drive the Confederates from the Big Sandy valley.

The 14th Kentucky, organized chiefly at Louisa by Laban T. Moore and William Vinson, performed distinguished service in the Union army. It fought at many of the major regional battles. It was mustered into service of the United States, December 19, 1861, one month before the Battle of Middle Creek, January 10, 1862. Nelson Boggs, of Lawrence county and a 16-year-old private, was the regiment's only fatal casualty at the Battle of Middle Creek. Moore resigned as colonel of the regiment, January 1, 1862, shortly before the Battle of Middle Creek and was succeeded by George W. Gallup, of Louisa. The latter was also assigned to the overall direction of military affairs in the Big Sandy valley.

M. S. Rice, of Louisa, grandson of Dr. Nelson T. Rice, corporal of Company B, 14th Volunteers, inherited the two pictures reproduced here, from his grandfather. Identical legends were printed on the backs of the pictures and is as follows:

"This desk was made at Louisa, Kentucky, in April, 1862, of yellow poplar wood to contain the books, papers and stationery necessary to keep records of Company G, 14th regiment, Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, commanded by Captain John C. Collins. It was brought to Miami county, Kansas, March 22, 1865, and is now in use as a private desk. The valise was bought in Cincinnati, Ohio, about the same time. It followed the regiment when transportation could be had, it was stored in warehouses for a short time at Louisa and Louisville, Kentucky, Nashville and Chattanooga, Tennessee, and Atlanta, Georgia.

"The inkstand was captured from the headquarters wagon of Gen. John S. Williams, known as Cerro Gordo Williams of the Mexican War, after the battle of Middle Creek, Floyd county, Kentucky, which was fought January 10, 1862. Col. James A. Garfield, Commanding, U. S. A., and Gen. Humphrey Marshall, commanding, C. S. A. "I hereby certify that the above is true in every particular. Paola, Kansas, June 10, 1907. John C. Collins."

Why I And My Family Attend Regularly At Church School

BY QUENTIN TERRY
(Lancer Baptist Chapel)

Sunday School! The very words bring to mind visions of good citizens—clean, happy children and grown-ups on their way to God's house to learn more of His precious word.

When the family attends Sunday School and Church they are following the example of our Saviors who "went to the synagogue on the Sabbath, as was His custom." Should we do less than follow His example?

Sunday School teaches order and respect for the higher things in life. Look at the examples about us! The lawbreaker, the drunkard, the hoodlum, the un-patriotic—any laugh at the thought of attending Sunday School and Church, while their life and actions condemn their words!

The society in which we live demands that man must reach for higher ideals than his own base nature can give him. The ground work for these higher ideals are taught to the young child who is taken to Sunday School—taken . . . not sent!

"If Dad and Mom won't go to Sunday School and Church, why should they send me?" is a fair question for any child to ask. The singing of hymns; hearing of the prayers and sermons; learning to respect the order and quietness of God's smallest child.

There is no greater task (or privilege) given to a man or woman on this earth than the shaping and moulding of a little life. The life and future of your child is in your hand as a parent. It is a solemn duty before God and man to bring them up in an understanding of God. What a terrible pity it is for the parents, in old age, to look back over the neglected childhood of their adult children as they now see them as criminals and foolish hoodlums . . . and realize that they have failed as parents because they did not "bring them up in the fear and admonition of the Lord."

A blueprint for raising your child is laid out in your Bible. This blueprint is for the building of a strong and happy home . . . not only for the children but for the parents as well.

The in-flow of an increasing knowledge of God into a life is like the in-flow of pure water into a stagnant pool . . . it will drive out the poison filth and make it clean so it can be used.

Finding faults with churches, preachers and church-going people does not relieve any person of the responsibility of seeking God.

Sunday School can be your beginning of a whole new life . . . for the father . . . for the mother . . . for the children and all your house. "Seek . . . and ye shall find."

Hand mending takes more time than machine mending, but it is often less noticeable, gives a softer finish, and is more convenient at times. It may be easier to make a strong, inconspicuous darn on wool material if a piece of light-weight fabric is first placed on the underside for reinforcement. This fabric can be net or any other light-weight material of a harmonizing color.

ORDINANCE

An Ordinance of the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, providing for the assessment of real and personal property, and levying a tax of seventy-five cents (75c) on each one hundred dollars ($100.00) valuation of real and personal property located within the corporate limits of the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, on January 1, 1962, and also levying a poll tax of one dollar ($1.50) and fifty cents on each male person residing within the corporate limits of the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, on January 1, 1962.

WHEREAS, the cost of operating the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, for the year 1961 was in the approximate amount of $120,628.00 and the income revenue from all sources, directed toward the operation of functions of the City and the cost of operation and defraying incidental expenses in said operation, amounted to the total income figure of approximately $70,000.00 and it became necessary to reduce many necessary and vital functions, and it became necessary to borrow funds, incur indebtedness and operate at a deficit, and

WHEREAS, a budget has been prepared and adopted by the governing body of the City which said budget covers the cost of operating the City on bare essentials and necessities indispensable to the health, welfare and safety of the residents and inhabitants of said City, which said budget indicates that the amount of $120,628.00 is necessary and required for the efficient and safe operation of said City, and

WHEREAS, the maximum tax levy now in effect, and in effect during the year 1961 and years prior thereto, was in the amount of seventy-five (75c) cents, and total revenue from real and personal property assessment in and for the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, as apparently equalized at the present time is in the total amount of $36,000.00, and

WHEREAS, revenue which the City realizes from other sources is at a fair and reasonable maximum assessment, and from all evidence available such sources should not be required to produce further revenue, and that revenue from real and personal property to be assessed is the only feasible means of raising additional revenue with which to defray the general operating costs current and incidental of the City, and

WHEREAS, the present level of assessment on real and personal property in said City is at a ratio of 25.2% of the fair cash value of said property, and that said property is not bearing its fair share of the cost of the essential operations and functions of the City of Prestonsburg, and

WHEREAS, it has been determined that unless additional amounts of money are made available to the operation of the City of Prestonsburg essential, necessary and indispensable services affecting the safety, health and welfare of the citizens of the City of Prestonsburg would be impaired, if not completely denied, resulting in chaos and dangerous to the safety, health and welfare of the citizens and inhabitants of the City of Prestonsburg, and that expenses of operation of the government of the City of Prestonsburg, and the services which it renders to its people are all necessary governmental expenses, and

WHEREAS, the other sources of revenue, including franchise and license taxes, is inadequate to satisfy the deficit now realized and to be realized by said City, a dire emergency now exists and prevails in that such revenue to be realized by the City under its present tax structure is inadequate to provide necessary government expenses and services.

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY, AS FOLLOWS:

Section I. That the duly appointed, qualified and acting Tax Assessor of the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, is directed to reassess all real and personal property subject to taxation within the corporate limits of the City of Prestonsburg at a figure increasing the present assessments, as they appear upon the Assessor's Tax Assessment Book for the year 1961, at a fifty (50%) per cent higher level, which would establish the assessment figure at a ratio of approximately thirty-seven and one-half (37½%) per cent of the fair cash value; and said Assessor shall immediately proceed to carry out the provisions of this Ordinance, in accordance with the provisions of Kentucky Revised Statutes. This shall be the assessment of real and personal property for the year 1962.

Section II. That there is hereby levied upon all property, both real and personal, with tax situs in the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky as of January 1, 1962, for general purposes, including general expenses of said City. All monies received hereunder shall be paid to the Treasurer of the City of Prestonsburg and placed to the credit of the General Revenue Fund of the City, and shall be used in defraying current and incidental expenses of said government. The tax hereby levied is as follows:

(a) The sum of seventy-five (75c) cents for each one hundred ($100.00) dollars valuation of all real and personal property located within the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, as of January 1, 1962.

(b) A poll tax of one dollar fifty ($1.50) cents on each male person over the age of twenty-one (21) years, residing within the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, on January 1, 1962.

Section III. That all taxpayers who pay the tax herein levied on or before the 1st day of January, 1963, shall be entitled to a discount of two (2%) per cent.

Section IV. That all taxpayers who do not pay their tax on or prior to April 1, 1963, shall be required to pay a penalty of six (6%) per cent in addition to the tax herein levied.

Section V. All Ordinances, or parts of Ordinances, in conflict herewith are hereby expressly repealed.

Passed and approved, this March 15th, 1962.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

SUGGESTS WE TAKE A LOOK

Editor, The Times:

I am concerned about the "sorry state" that our own highways in the eastern part of the state have deteriorated into. So I am asking, accordingly, that you, in the immediate future, get someone to drive you about our highways, within the county, and that you observe the extent to which those highways are being made into garbage and refuse disposal points; that after making such individual survey, you write an appropriate editorial on the subject.

I would suggest that you travel from Prestonsburg up Right Beaver to junction of Ky. 1498 (in Knott county) take 1498 back to Floyd county, down Jack's Creek, either down Left Beaver or cross Abner Mountain through Pikeville, making the trip up Left Beaver another time and back.

I overheard a statement made by one who had lived in this section several years ago, in which he remarked that he had never seen such filthy roads in travel from Paintsville to Jenkins.

This situation leaves the impression to the stranger that we have no community pride or respect for the law—which consequently would leave any executive of a concern planning to locate a plant anywhere with the conclusion that Eastern Kentucky is the place to stay out of.

IRA E. FRAZIER

IN APPRECIATION

EDITOR, The Times:

The City Council and I wish to thank you for your newspaper's fair and excellent coverage of our recent Town Hall meeting. We know that the subject of budgets and taxation is a very sensitive issue with each and every citizen, as it should be. We can assure our citizens that our program is not one of waste, but will be good economics and sound commonsense.

We believe this program is essential if Prestonsburg is going to be able to keep in step with our neighbors. We believe that with the coming of the Dewey Lake Lodge, golf course, amphitheatre, and various other lake improvements, with the establishment of a Junior College and the educational and cultural advantages it will bring with it to our community, with our new housing program, which is shortly to become a reality, and with other needed improvements in the routine upgrading of the various departments of city government, Prestonsburg must and has taken a giant step forward to progress.

With the help of our citizens and the help of God we will go forward with a cleaner, more healthful town in which to live and raise our children.

Combs characterized the road to be financed with the bonds sold today "a vital link in the system of major routes for Kentucky, providing safe highways which open new areas to development."

Interstate 64, portions of which are already open to traffic, will connect with the Eastern Kentucky Turnpike at Winchester.

The Eastern Kentucky Turnpike from Winchester to Campton will be completed this year. Work on the toll-free extensions from Campton to Whitesburg and Salyersville to Pikeville is proceeding as fast as funds become available, Combs said.

against Wyatt and the Combs administration when Lowman cut short his speech for a trip to Louisville.

He said that he had been in office 32 years and that when he left the governor's office in 1929, "I had not committed a single dishonest act. I don't have to ask anyone if I can run. I just announce and take my case to the people."

The meeting was presided over by Joe Weddington, longtime friend and associate of the former governor. Several former Floyd county officials and ministers were recognized by the chairman.

Chandler beamed laugh-provoking shots at Wyatt in an hour-long attack on the Lieutenant-Governor.

"I pray for the Governor every night," Chandler said. "If something happened to Combs we'd have Ankie-Blankets for Governor."

At another time he said that if Barry Bingham, of the Courier-Journal "got a bellyache, Wilson Wyatt took bicarbonate of soda." He added that when Wyatt died he wouldn't go to heaven but would go to Bingham and the Courier-Journal.

Chandler attacked Wyatt's record as mayor of Louisville, his alleged participation in the Cook truck purchase affair, and his part in the organization of Americans for Democratic Action. He said the ADA was "pinkish."

"Wyatt and Bingham want us to get into too many wars," Chandler asserted. "In time of peace they are warlike but let war come and they are the most peaceful men imaginable."

Methods of financing the Eastern Kentucky Highway came in for sharp barbs by Chandler. He said that if he had been governor he would have spent $20 million on the Garrett highway to make a fine road into Eastern Kentucky.

In a statement to The Times, he clarified his position. "I'm not against your road. I'm against toll roads when the tolls won't pay out. When I am governor I expect to honor the commitments already made by the state. What I am concerned about is that we will get so overwhelmingly in debt that the faith and credit of the state will be impaired."

He made a parting observation on the Lowman-Wyatt race. "Take a good look. If you make a mistake with Wyatt, Morton will beat him. Morton is no patsy. He's real tough. But I'll support the ticket. I've never failed to support my party despite what you may have heard."

Prevent Forest Fires!

LOOKING BACKWARD Twenty years ago this week death came to a man about whom I have often been tempted to write a piece, entitled, "The Most Unusual Character I Have Ever Known."

All life was a challenge to this man. Things and situations and people challenged him, as they do most of us; the difference was, he did not let the gauntlet lie, untouched. There is a term, "rugged individualist," which folks today might apply to him, but he was not a Wrong-Way Corrigan in the social structure. He would have made a first-class iconoclast, had he got off in that direction. His thinking had a great deal of originality, and he had an amazing lack of concern about what others thought of his ideas as long as he was convinced he was right.

He built a house to suit himself and none other, and it was as generous in its rambling as was his nature. Others thought it should be more compact. It rambled, as he originally planned that it would. Others thought the ceiling should be lower — it went upwards of 10 feet from the floor, as planned. Sections of a pine tree for porch posts were an abomination to some, but they stood.

Other men could dehorn cattle, castrate bulls and stallions. He thought he could, and he did, without instruction or experienced assistance — did the work so swiftly the offended animal didn't have time to decide if the operation hurt. And, unlike others of the day, he hooted at the old almanac hanging on the wall and the signs of the zodiac by which his neighbors swore and planted and lived. Somehow, his methods worked, even if he did fly in the face of Providence by refusing to "go by the signs."

Sometimes he had inspirations that weren't exactly "inspired." There, for instance, was the time when he was operating a sawmill and hauling crossties to market over two miles of the most wretched road imaginable. Ten or 12 ties on a wagon was a big load, and the round trip during wintertime required half a day. But there was a stream nearby and it was full — why not use it? To think was to act. So he built a boat. He had no pattern, he had never built a boat before, but he did the job out of yellow poplar, calked the cracks with gunny sack and tar, and turned out an 18-foot craft that could carry a considerable number of crossties downstream.

The only flaw in the grand scheme was, he failed to consider that the creek had some bends in it which were so sharp and short the boat could not negotiate them. One of the oarsmen, fighting to keep the bow out of bank, got the end of a pole in his side and wound up with cracked ribs. So the maiden voyage of the good ship was her last.

Folks in those days preached, "Sink the plow to the beam." He argued against it. I know he had never read at that time the theory of shallow plowing of corn to avoid breaking up the root system, but he practiced it. He scoffed at the practice of "hilling" each stalk of corn, and others laughed at him. They went their way, and he his. They joined him later.

A minister of the gospel 50 years and more, he on occasion played the banjo, delighted in young people, even did not frown on the dancing of the day. He hated intoxicating liquors in a day when only one other minister in the county believed with him and practiced the doctrine of total abstinence. Yet some of his best friends dabbled in whiskey — made it and/or sold it. Though Spartan in his denial of himself in some respects — he "used" neither tobacco, whiskey nor coffee — he had little regard for doctors' orders about his diet. When it was suggested by a doctor that a little "dram" might stimulate his falling heart, he stoutly replied, "I've made it this far without the stuff — I'll go on out without it."

To teach his children, he used walnut stain and some other ingredient to paint a blackboard on a bedroom wall. To teach them "better the next time," he brought the culprit to his knee, reduced him to tears without lifting his hand, then handed him a knife and sent him on his own particular Calvary-road to cut a switch for his own back.

The man had times of prescience. When Pearl Harbor came and Japan moved in on the side of Germany, there were the faint-hearted who feared the worst. But as confidently as if he were reading from his Bible he declared: "That means the end of Japan."

With men, however, he had poor judgment. He trusted them all. He endorsed bank notes which the makers refused to pay, and he made notes of his own at the bank to pay the same bank for what the other fellow owed. And still he came back for more. To every remonstrance against such instances of "poor business judgment," he stubbornly maintained that when he lost faith in human nature he was ready to move on.

Much more could be written about this individual. One could tell of his love of the outdoors, of his ear for a favorite hound's bugling on a distant ridge, of his love for children and his compassion for every human being. But I may have already imposed upon the reader, since I am writing about my own father.

There are four classifications: portraits (any medium), oil paintings (oil, lacquer, tempera, etc.), water colors (gouche, casein, etc.), and graphics (drawings, prints and pastels). Winners will be entered in the state contest to be held in May at the Phoenix hotel in Lexington.

The winner of the student art contest is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Martin, of Wayland. His entry was an oil painting and was titled, "Autumn Lane." Glenn Blackburn, of Stone, a junior at Belfry high school, was second place winner. His water color was a pastoral scene featuring horses. He was sponsored by the Pikeville Woman's Club, Inc.

Jesse Sammons, of Martin, was third prize winner. His water color was of a floral bouquet. He was entered by the Prestonsburg Woman's Club.

Mrs. Arkady Weber, who heads the art department at Pikeville College, served as judge.

Mrs. Chester W. Smith, governor of the Seventh district of the federation, was in charge of arrangements and was present to assist with displaying the paintings.

Added UHF Channels For Education Asked

Indications are that Kentucky will receive favorable consideration by the Federal Communications Commission on the state's request for reservation of nine additional UHF television channels for educational television.

FCC Chairman Newton N. Minow has sent his congratulations on passage by the General Assembly of enabling legislation for establishing an 11-station UHF educational TV network. Sometime after March 23, Chairman Minow told Gov. Bert Combs, the FCC will act on Kentucky's request for reservation of the nine channels.

Offer Student Nurses Financial Assistance While Completing Course

Student nurses who have successfully completed their second year of nursing school are now eligible for financial assistance while completing their course of instruction, Sgt. Paul F. Whittemore, local US Army recruiter announced here today. This assistance, Sgt. Whittemore said, would cover payment of tuition, books, fees, and a liberal monthly salary.

Through the Army Student Nurse program, an educational opportunity is available to student nurses who can qualify. Since the number of candidates is necessarily limited, those student nurses who are interested and desire further information are urged to contact Sgt. Paul Whittemore, local US Army Recruiter, at the Post Office Building, Prestonsburg.

Proclamation Issued Urging RC Support; To Aid Flood Victims

Gov. Bert Combs has issued a proclamation urging Kentuckians to support efforts of the American Red Cross to aid the state's flood victims.

In the proclamation, Governor Combs said, "I further urge all individuals, groups and organizations, wherever located, desiring to make contributions for the relief of the disaster victims send their contributions to their local chapter."

March is the month of the Red Cross annual appeal, it was noted. In some communities contributions are handled through the United Appeal. He said any contributions to the Red Cross would go into flood relief in the local area.

State Safety Commissioner Glenn Lovern reports that 5,936 more persons have taken automobile driving examinations in Kentucky for the first two months of this year than in the same period of 1961.

During January and February 1961 there were 31,752 examinations given, and for the same period this year there were 37,688. In 1961 there was a 10 per cent increase over 1960.

Lovern noted that approximately 69 per cent pass on the eye, road sign and written tests, and 54 per cent pass the driving test.

"The total license examining strength is 36 regular examiners, not including roving examiners and examining supervisors. The 36 regular examiners examined an average of 1,047 persons per man during the past two months, or about 24 examinees per man per day," he said.

It was pointed out that January and February are the lowest months of the year. During August this figure is almost doubled.

Commissioner Lovern urged drivers to prepare themselves thoroughly before taking the tests. He particularly stressed the reading of the driver's manual. The manual is available at the licensing stations in the county of the applicant's residence.

State Chartered Banks Have Increased Assets; State Charters Decrease

Frankfort, March 20 (Spl.).—At the close of business Dec. 31, 1961, the assets of state-chartered banks in Kentucky stood at $1,668,854,665, an increase of about $192 million or 13 per cent over the Dec. 31, 1960 total. State Banking Commissioner H. A. Rogers has reported.

The rise, Rogers said, reflects more favorable business conditions during 1961.

Deposits available on demand last December showed an increase of 13.5 per cent, topping the previous year-end total by about $102 million. Total deposits in the banks rose 14 per cent in the same period, an increase of $185 million.

Total capital accounts were up 7.3 per cent in Kentucky's 265 state-chartered institutions.

One new state charter was granted last year, to the American Fidelity Bank of Barbourville. Even so, the total number of state-chartered banks dropped from 269 in December 1960 to 265 in December 1961, Rogers said. Several mergers account for the decrease in State charters, the commissioner explained.

Kentucky also has 85 banking institutions under federal control.

Former Floyd Residents Rewarded for New Ideas Offered At Dayton AFB

Floyd county has never suffered from a dearth of ideas, but few of its residents cash in on them as did two recently at the Dayton (Ohio) Air Force Base.

Mrs. Marvella Goble Weaver, of Dayton, O., formerly of Prestonsburg, shared with another employe in a $150 award for an operation improvement idea which will save $2,661 in overtime pay, and John F. Anderson, formerly of McDowell, split with another employe a $185 suggestion award for their idea which will save the Air Force $3,195.

The awards were announced by Brig. Gen. William W. Veal, commander of the base.

On supply requisitions over 90 days old, it is customary to recheck with the Air Force customer to determine if any changes, such as quantity, have been made since the original order. Previously, this information was handwritten into a booklet, often resulting in considerable overtime. Aware of this problem, Mrs. Weaver and Florence Baldwin, of Fairborn, O., proposed that the information be annotated by machine which will produce the $2,661 savings previously spent on overtime pay.

Mrs. Weaver, a freight rate specialist for the Depot Shipment Planning Branch, began her federal career at Fort Knox in June, 1951 as a clerk for the Research and Evaluation Division. She worked there for two years and then joined Dayton AFB during September, 1958.

Born and educated here, Mrs. Weaver attended Mayo State Vocational School at Pintsville. She lists art as her favorite hobby. She is the sister of Dan Goble, of Prestonsburg.

Mr. Anderson and Mrs. Favorite proposed hiring three grade I white collar messengers on a full-time basis instead of using five wage board VI warehousemen part-time to handle mail deliveries. The difference in salaries is $3,195.

Anderson's civil service career, which started with the Depot, dates back to April, 1956. Before that, he served four years in the Air Force from 1951 thru 1955, and three years in England.

Born at McDowell, Anderson completed high school there in 1951. Married to the former Almeda Bilitier, of Martin, he and his wife live at 1318 Capok Street, Fairborn. They have one daughter, Teresa Renee. He is the son of Mrs. Mary J. Anderson, of McDowell. His wife's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John C. Bilitier, of Martin.

Agriculture Classes Inspect Poultry Farm

The Prestonsburg agriculture classes II, III, and IV made a field trip, March 12, to Reed's Poultry farm at Flat Gap, Johnson county.

The boys saw Mr. Reed's poultry operation, consisting of 11,000 laying hens from which he receives a production of approximately 8,000 eggs daily. Mr. Reed distributes eggs in the surrounding counties and in West Virginia.

This trip was made in relation to the study of poultry and the advanced classes' study of farm management.

State Historical Society Publishes Private Diary

A diary written during the Civil War by a young woman from Harrodsburg will be published this year by the Kentucky Historical Society.

"The Private War of Lizzie Hardin" will be the second work of historical importance to be published by the Society under a fund set up in 1960 at the recommendation of Gov. Bert Combs.

Action in the book takes place throughout the South and in Yankee territory, too, where Miss Hardin was eventually imprisoned by Union forces. Later, when her beloved Confederacy was defeated, she refused to take the United States oath of allegiance.

Rights to publish the book were granted the Society by Mrs. Blanche Dixon Bright of Harrodsburg, niece of the diarist.

The Society's choice for publication last year was "Remember the Reinsin!" which describes Kentucky's part in that battle of the War of 1812. Col. George M. Chinn, director of the Society, said proceeds from this book have paid enough into the $5,000 revolving fund to finance publication of the diary this year.

SPARKS, LYKINS, YATES, FERGUSON

A letter from Mrs. James D. Sparks, 1105 Orlin Drive, Idaho Falls, Idaho, poses inquiries on several Eastern Kentucky families and at the same time offers a wealth of information of a genealogical nature.

Mrs. Sparks writes: "Our great-great-grandparents came from Morgan and Magoffin counties, Kentucky . . ."

"John Ardie Sparks, born April 23, 1821, in Lee county, Virginia, left there as a child along with his sister, Abbie (Abigail) Sparks, born about 1823, Lee county, Virginia. She married somewhere between Morgan and Lewis county, Kentucky, to a Mr. Yates. She later lived near Vanceburg and Garrison, Lewis county, Kentucky. She had several children. We would like to locate someone of her family or of the Yates she married. Her husband may have been George Yates, of Yatesville, Kentucky.

"The first record we found of her brother, John Ardie Sparks, (our great-grandfather) was in Morgan county, Kentucky, at West Liberty, where he married November 10, 1841, to Mary Ann or Jane Lykins, born November 1 or July 31, 1824, at West Liberty. Who were her parents?"

"Mary Ann or Jane Lykins was known to have had a brother William and a brother Joe. She often spoke of them. John Ardie and Mary Ann's son, James Harvey Sparks, born April 19, 1859, at West Liberty, Morgan county, married June, 1878, in Lewis county to Arzela Lykins (his cousin). Arzela was born December 15, 1856, at Salyersville, Magoffin county, Kentucky, the daughter of James Harvey Lykins, born September 30, 1836, near Salyersville. He married January 4, 1855, at Salyersville, to Nancy Jane Ferguson, born February 19, 1832, in Magoffin county. Who are the parents of James Harvey Lykins and his wife, Nancy Jane Ferguson?"

"They had seven children, all born in Salyersville, 1856-1877; Arzela, Elizabeth, John Milton, Rebecca Jane, Cynthia Ann, James Stuart and Ella. James Harvey Lykins had three brothers, John, Milton and Green Lykins and one known sister, Pursissus (Pur Lykins). She was alive in 1901 and posted a letter from Netty, Kentucky, near Caney, Kentucky. In the letter which I have she mentions these relatives: Sis and Dick; Roe and his wife and their children who lived at the mouth of Johnson; Billie or Willie; Abner; Becky; Sissy, who had a baby daughter born or six or seven weeks old March 4, 1901; also she stated Sissy had two sons oldest (sic) children and another daughter and one son dead; Nancy and husband and Uncle Arch who had children all married except one son and two daughters, Mary and Margaret Oney who in 1901 received mail at Lykins, Morgan county, Kentucky. Nancy and Uncle Arch lived on Turkey Branch. Any information that anyone can give me on this family, I will be forever grateful.

"Nancy Jane Ferguson who married James Harvey Lykins above was thought to have had a brother John or uncle who fought in Custer's Last Stand in Montana and died there. It is also thought that both her father and her husband's father carried the first name of John. If anyone can help me with these lines or I can help them, please let me know.

"I have many Lykins, Ferguson, Williams, Sparks, Benton, Morris, Craig, Jones, Ratliff, Prater, Stacy, Rose, Webb and other Kentucky family records of the Morgan county Kentucky, area. If I can be of assistance to anyone, let me know. Also I would like to hear from anyone having information on any surname mentioned in this letter.

"We are compiling a family history and book pertaining to Lykins, Williams and Ferguson families of Morgan county, Kentucky, area and would like any data pertaining to them.

"The Williams referred to is that of Daniel Williams, Revolutionary War soldier, who married Violet Couch and among their children, four, Isaac, Elizabeth, Winnie and Nancy married Lykins. Nancy married David Lykins.

"The early Ferguson was William, born 1752-53 in Belfast, Ireland, and came to America in 1771, married Catherine Lemaster, of North Carolina, and migrated after serving in the Revolutionary War to Magoffin (Morgan?) county, Kentucky, where he sired several children.

"The Jones connection is Ambrose Jones, of Greenbrier county, West Virginia, where he married Martha Craig and came to Malone, Morgan county, Kentucky, and among other children had daughter named Nancy Jones who married Richard Ferguson about 1807."

LAYNE FAMILY
Floyd P. Layne, 2236 San Marco Drive, Los Angeles, California, who compiled a book, Layne Genealogy, and who is planning a reissue of the volume, writes in reference to the "Lost Books of Amherst."

"It will interest you to know that last year an addition was built to the courthouse at Amherst, Virginia, and several old court order books were found that were considered lost.

"In the 'lost' book is a great deal of information concerning William Laine (Layne), the wagoner, who was forebearer of the Laynes who settled in Eastern Kentucky."

Six Amphibious Ducks Ready for Emergencies By Safety Department

Frankfort, March 20 (Spl).—Scott Barbour, director of the Division of Boating of the Kentucky Department of Public Safety, and Col. J. R. Dorman, assistant director of state civil defense, have announced that the state plans to have six amphibious "ducks" ready to move at a moment's notice in case of another flood threat or other similar emergency.

They said that two "ducks" will be stationed at key points in Eastern Kentucky, two in Frankfort and two in Western Kentucky. The Boating Division will furnish full maintenance.

"Ducks" proved extremely valuable for evacuating many people in Eastern Kentucky as well as in Frankfort during the recent flood, Col. Dorman said. According to Lawrence Wetherby, Jr., of the Boating Division, at least one life was saved in the Frankfort area because of the land-water vehicles. A man suffering from an acute heart condition was isolated in his home by rising flood waters. He was evacuated by one of the "ducks" and rushed to King's Daughters' hospital in Frankfort where the attending physician said that the man probably would have died without immediate medical attention.

BLAME CARBON MONOXIDE FOR HIGHWAY BLACK-OUTS

Carbon monoxide, the colorless, odorless killer of thousands in parked cars and garages, now is blamed for a sizeable share of the 180,000 accidents caused yearly by drivers who "black-out" on the highways.

A California police official is quoted in the April Reader's Digest as saying: "We suspect that many one-car accidents, rear-end collisions, and accidents in which the driver steers right into an oncoming car are caused by carbon monoxide." Highway spot checks in Vermont, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and California found monoxide traces in as many as 50 percent of the cars stopped.

Leaving car windows open is not enough protection, Richard Dunlop writes. This can create a draft which sucks more carbon monoxide in from other cars. First signs of incipient poisoning are a tightness about the forehead, a headache, some dizziness. You feel tired. If you are driving at night, lights of oncoming traffic may seem particularly dazzling and the following darkness particularly dark. After that comes blurring of the eyes and a fluttering and throbbing around the heart; then unconsciousness and death.

The article, "The Invisible Menace in Your Car," notes that carbon monoxide can build up dangerously in tunnels and the narrow canyons of downtown streets. Traffic patrolmen have been found to have as much as a 35 percent concentration in their blood after a tour of duty.

"The traffic cop who growls at you," says Dr. W. W. Bauer, director of health education for the American Medical Association, "may not be a bully. He may be a sick man." The article is condensed from the A. M. A. magazine, Today's Health.

Martin Citizens Group Talks Municipal Codes; Specialist Hage Absent

The Martin Citizens Advisory Committee met Feb. 26 at the Martin high school building. The general theme of discussion was "Codes and Codes Enforcement." In the absence of the community specialist, Richard Hage, the nature and purpose of codes, together with a general review of enforcement, was given by W. G. Goff, chairman of the advisory committee. This was followed by a question-and-answer period.

The film, "As Your Home Goes," which emphasized the importance of home maintenance and illustrated ways of home beautification, was shown.

Citizens of Martin are urged to attend these meetings on the fourth Monday of each month, beginning at 7 p.m., Mr. Goff said.

The University of Kentucky's basketball team holds the all-time record of 12 appearances and four championships in National Collegiate Athletic Association Tourney championships.

Aged Pikeville Man, Floyd Native, Victim; Burial, Layne Cemetery

Burial was in the Layne cemetery on the Pikeville Bypass. The Rev. Johnny Conley officiated.

Mr. Layne died at 2:05 a.m. Tuesday, March 13, at the Pikeville Methodist hospital after an illness lasting about two and one-half weeks.

Born in Floyd county, he was a son of John M. and Elizabeth Ellicott Layne. His wife, Mrs. Jettie Carter Layne, died May 18, 1949.

Survivors include four sons, Ostile and Joe Layne, both of Pikeville; John Layne, of Chicago, and Pebble Layne, of Denver, Colorado; three daughters, Mrs. Brookie Coleman, of Tampa, Florida; Mrs. Lorraine Stollings, of Huntington, West Virginia, and Mrs. Charlene Adkins, of Elranger, Kentucky; a brother, George Layne, of Williamson, West Virginia; 12 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

MRS. ALICE GEDDES LLOYD, FOUNDER OF CANEY JUNIOR COLLEGE

Mrs. Alice G. Lloyd, Boston newspaperwoman, founded Caney Creek Community Center, at Pippa Passes, Knott county, in 1916. At that time the area was described as "a land of dulcimers and ballad singing, Elizabethan English, spinning wheels, pioneer manners and a land of no educational opportunity."

In 1923, with three high school graduates, Mrs. Lloyd founded the Caney Junior College. Five of the first seven graduates became medical doctors, the other two continued their education to earn masters degrees and are now serving the regional educational systems. Today, 14 doctors, 1,000 teachers, many engineers, ministers, civic leaders, lawyers, nurses and agricultural agents serve the southern mountain region because Caney Creek Community Center and Caney Junior College offered them educational opportunity.

The First National Bank salutes Mrs. Alice G. Lloyd, the educational institution she founded and the thousands of mountain youth educated through her efforts.

REDISTRICTING BILL SIGNED BY GOVERNOR

Frankfort, March 20 (Spl.)—Gov. Bert Combs has signed into law the congressional re-districting bill approved by both houses of the Kentucky General Assembly.

The measure reduces from eight to seven the number of congressional districts in Kentucky. This was necessary because Kentucky's population during the past decade has not increased at a rate as high as the nation's.

The reduction in districts was achieved mostly by combining parts of the old Fourth and Fifth districts into a new Fourth. A friendly suit, filed in Franklin circuit court by Sixth District Congressman John Watts, Nicholasville, to test legality of the new act, resulted in a decision holding the act valid.

The redistricting plan was presented to the Legislature by Governor Combs in an address to a joint Senate-House session.

The Governor said, "It was desirable that we arrange the districts in such a manner that none of our Congressmen would be arbitrarily eliminated."

The Third district, comprising Jefferson county, was untouched by the proposal, Combs said, because it is "apparent that Jefferson county cannot be divided without impairing the economy of that metropolitan area."

The First, Second, Sixth and Seventh districts retain generally their present boundaries, with some counties added and some subtracted.

In general, the present Fourth and Fifth districts were combined into a new Fourth. "In that district," Combs said, "we have attempted to strike a balance between the North Central industrial region... and the South Central agricultural counties in such a way that neither region would necessarily be predominant."

The present Eighth district becomes the new Fifth, "although retaining a substantial identity with the old Eighth," he said.

The old First loses no counties from its present boundaries but acquires Allen, Butler and Simpson from the old Second District.

The old Second, minus these three counties, retains all others within its present boundaries. To those are added Barren, Hart, Meade and Metcalfe from the present Fourth District.

The Third District remains unchanged.

The new Fourth district contains these counties: Anderson, Boone, Bullitt, Campbell, Carroll, Gallatin, Green, Hardin, Kenton, LaRue, Marion, Mercer, Nelson, Oldham, Shelby, Spencer, Taylor, Trimble and Washington. All these counties are drawn either from the present Fourth or the present Fifth districts.

The new Fifth consists of all the counties now in the Eighth, together with Adair from the present Fourth and Casey and Estill from the present Sixth.

The new Sixth district contains all the counties in the present Sixth except Casey and Estill on the south, and on its northern border acquires Bracken, Grant and Pendleton from the old Fifth.

The new Seventh District consists of all the counties in the present Seventh district, with the addition of Flemings, Lewis and Mason from the old Fifth.

Combs told the joint session, "There are those who would have us shirk this duty" and permit candidates for the U. S. House to be selected from the state at large. The Governor called this "the counsel of temporary expediency, because the next General Assembly and the next Governor would have to face the responsibilities which we are by law obligated to assume."

Saying "the very idea of eliminating congressional districts is displeasing," Combs declared his plan does not favor "my own personal preferences or those of any particular individual or group." He pointed out that Kentuckians, in all probability, will have to "live for the next decade" with the re-districting legislation passed at this legislative session.

He described the "overriding purpose" in his proposal as "the most equal distribution of population consistent with traditional ties of cultural, economic and emotional sympathy."

100 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky

By JOE JORDAN
(Kentucky Civil War Commission)

The Louisville Journal, a strongly Unionist newspaper, had argued during the 1861 period of Kentucky neutrality that the safest course for slaveholders of the Commonwealth was to keep the state in the Union, since they could depend upon the national administration's pledge not to interfere with the institution. Apparently this argument had its effect for at the August election in 1861 the voters had sent to the legislature a majority that had put Kentucky into the war on the side of the Union. One hundred years ago this week, the newspaper offered reassurance that the Lincoln administration would stand by its promise.

The occasion was the President's sending a special message to the Congress, suggesting the adoption of a joint resolution offering the co-operation of the federal government to any state that would adopt a gradual abolition of slavery and pledging financial aid, the money to be used by the state in its discretion, "to compensate for the inconveniences, public and private, produced by such change of system." (Eventually both houses of the Congress would pass such a resolution, the two U. S. senators from Kentucky splitting on the question, Garrett Davis voting for it and L. W. Powell against it.)

The Louisville Journal saw nothing improper in Lincoln's suggestion, since he had specified that the decision whether to adopt a gradual abolition of slavery was to be left to the state. It had been the Journal's position all along that that was for each state to decide, with no interference from the federal government. However, it predicted no state would accept the offer.

Within the same week, stirred by a fresh abolitionist move in Congress, the Journal was trying to comfort its pro-slavery readers by quoting from President Lincoln's inaugural address. Just a year before the date of the Louisville newspaper's editorial, the incoming President, after remarking that there seemed to be apprehension among the people of the Southern states that the new Republican administration might attempt to interfere with slavery, had said: "There has never been any reasonable cause for such apprehension. Indeed, the most ample evidence to the contrary has all the while existed and been open to their inspection. It is found in nearly all the public speeches of him who now addresses you, I do but quote from one of these speeches when I declare that I have no purpose directly or indirectly to interfere with the institution of slavery in the states where it exists. I believe I have no lawful right to do so, and have no inclination to do so."

Less than seven months after the Louisville Journal reprinted the words just quoted, President Lincoln would issue the preliminary Emancipation Proclamation.

Kroger Employee Plan Assets Top $64 Million

Kroger employee-members of the company's savings and profit sharing plan owned stocks, bonds, and other property with a market value of $64,012,680 at the end of 1961, it has been reported by trustees of the fund. The plan, which is part of the overall Kroger Profit Sharing and Retirement Income program, is now 10 1/2 years old. Of this amount, approximately $2,475,910 is shared by the 870 Kroger employees in the Charleston division area who are members of the plan.

Road Department Plans To Plant Tree Seedlings Along State Highways

Frankfort, March 20 (Spl.) — Kentucky highway crews will plant 61,500 tree seedlings alongside major roadways in the state this spring.

Highway Commissioner Henry Ward has announced that the State's Division of Forestry has been asked to supply the young trees and that all of them should be in place along rights of way by the end of April.

"Our basic purpose in these plantings," Ward said, "is to control erosion and reduce maintenance costs by eliminating mowing by hand on slopes that are too steep for tractors. At the same time, they will add to the beauty of Kentucky roadsides."

Five kinds of trees — white pine, loblolly pine, shortleaf pine, yellow poplar and black locust — will be used in the plantings. The pines will be set six to eight feet apart and others eight to 10 feet apart. All of the seedlings are one year old except the white pines, which are two years old. They will cost the Department $8 a thousand.

The tree-planting idea originated with Ward, reflecting interest developed during the eight years he served as State commissioner of conservation, in charge of both forestry and State parks program.

Planting places will be selected along highways of the federal-aid primary and secondary systems, mostly on slopes that have become unsightly because of weeds or erosion.

COOPER OFFERS PLAN OF LAND RESTORATION

Senator John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.) has proposed a major research effort to find ways to reclaim, reforest and put to use stripped coal lands in Eastern Kentucky and the Appalachian region.

As a first step, Cooper asked the Senate Appropriations Committee to add $200,000 to the research budget of the Forest Service. The money would go to the Berea (Ky.) field office of the Central States Forest Experiment Station, which has already begun studies on restoring strip land.

"Rains in Eastern Kentucky last week started great earth slides which uprooted trees and blocked streams," Senator Cooper told the Committee. "These valleys had floods before surface mining began, but the raw land sheds water much faster. The floods are one example of the urgent need for practical reclamation measures."

"Research has shown how to restore strip land in flat and rolling country, which has even been turned into recreation areas and parks," Senator Cooper said. "But until last year, no scientific work had been done to find similar answers for stripped mountain land. The work begun at Berea, on a small budget of $20,000, must be speeded up and greatly enlarged."

"The Forest Service has a good mining engineer on the job now. A soil chemist, a soil physicist, a stream biologist, a watershed management specialist and other scientists are needed now. They can get the facts on which sound recommendations and practical measures can be built. For example, they must find out how to place the earth so it will not slide, how to keep tree seedlings from being washed away and how to cover acid layers to prevent the pollution which kills fish miles downstream."

Like Kentucky, West Virginia and Pennsylvania have laws encouraging the reclamation of strip lands, Senator Cooper pointed out. But it is hard to get results until practical recommendations, based on scientific knowledge, can be made for improved mining practices and effective conservation measures.

As a second step, Senator Cooper suggested that a cooperative program be formulated to bring together the research talents of several interested agencies. President Kennedy, in his March 1 Message on Conservation, instructed the Department of Interior to study the problems arising from surface mining, noted Cooper. He said that as a result an interagency committee might well be formed, to gather all available information, and to meet with State agencies, the mining industry, and interested groups. The Soil Conservation Service, the Area Redevelopment Agency, the Fish and Wildlife Service, the Corps of Engineers, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Bureau of Mines, the Office of Coal Research and other Federal agencies, as well as the Forest Service, all have a proper interest in this subject, Senator Cooper pointed out.

As a third step, Senator Cooper urged the Forest Service to submit, in next year's budget, plans for construction at the Berea station of a research laboratory, including facilities for expanded land reclamation work, and for timber processing and marketing studies applicable to Eastern Kentucky. The Forest Service spends over $20 million annually at its 88 laboratories and experiment stations, carrying out an amazing variety of forest research, Cooper pointed out. Considering the rapid growth of strip mining in the Appalachian coal field, its importance in terms of jobs and income for the area, and the large problems of water, soil, timber, wildlife and scenic conservation it brings, certainly one major research center devoted to these problems should be established, Senator Cooper declared. "Because this work has been started at Berea," Cooper said, "it would be the proper place for a reclamation center."

College Freshmen Held More Mature Students;

The knowledge, maturity and intellectual curiosity of freshmen at the University of Kentucky have increased remarkably within the past 10 or 15 years, says Dr. M. M. White, dean of the UK College of Arts and Sciences.

The improvement, he asserts, can be attributed to Kentucky high schools, which are giving their students the opportunity to learn more.

Dean White's comments, which came at the annual dinner for Arts and Sciences faculty members, also included the reminder that UK, although its standards are at an all-time high, is not just a school for the top student.

"Sometimes I hear that certain parents hesitate to send their sons and daughters to us because we are too advanced," he said. "This is nonsense. Any ordinary high school graduate who is serious about getting an education and who is willing to study can succeed at the University."

He did point out, however, that better students are coming to the University than ever before.

THE FEMININE SIDE OF BOWLING NEWS

By IMA BOWLER

I noticed in the W. I. B. C. News sheet this week that there have only been five 300 games bowled by women in the whole country this year, and all five games have been scored west of the Rocky Mountains. Practice hard, gals. It would be something to bowl the first 300 game in the whole east right here in Prestonsburg.

Lake Lanes played a return match with the Hardware Charlie Gas Compy team at Paintsville, Sunday, and won all four games. Mary Zemo bowled 206 and got 519 for her series and Alka Jean Grey got a 231 for a 577 series. Hardware Charlie's June Tackett bowled a 525 series.

Lake Lanes also reports that a brand-new bowler in its Coffee and Doughnuts league, Georgia Compton, who had been taking lessons, had a 191 for high game at Lake this week. Pin Princess was Miss Betty Jo Greer. Although he isn't female, we also want to congratulate Mary Zemo's husband, Raymond, for his 256 game (626 series) and winning the St. Patrick's Day Tourney at Lake.

High bowler at the Crown this week was Pat Greene with 211. I'm sure most of you met Ed Faulkner from Huntington, who gave bowling instructions at the Crown Wednesday afternoon. Ed has been entering the BPAA tour which is on TV on Saturday afternoons, and has won money three weeks in a row.

Plans are going ahead for our annual banquet and our City Association tournament. Those interested should again contact Mrs. George Evans, Dot Marshall, Ruthie Goebel or Pat Greene for the banquet, and you must have a reservation for this.

Plans are not quite complete for the City Association tournament, but it isn't too early to enter, and you may do so by getting in touch with Jess Mahan, tournament committee chairman, or Earlene Daniels, Association secretary. I will fill you in on the complete details about this tournament as soon as they are complete.

At the risk of seeming to harp on a subject, I would like to mention again those courtesy rules. Most of the complaints we have had this year have been over a lack of courtesy.

NATURE TRAILS

By RUFUS M. REED

OAK APPLE GALLS

In summer when you walk through the woods, you may often notice round balls of a rich olive-brown color, clinging to the leaves of oaks, hickories and other trees. These are the oak apples, galls formed on the leaves by the larvae of a small wasp, known as the gall wasp, a member of the Cynipids.

These oak galls are among the strangest creations of nature, and just how and why they form in the way they do, is not yet understood by naturalists. They grow about the size of golf balls, and they do not seem to injure the leaves in any way.

This little wasp lays its eggs in the tissues of the leaf. When the egg hatches, it forms a worm or larva, a small white grub. It seems this little white worm can secrete some sort of an acid or some substance that causes the leaf to start a growth. The tissues of the leaf begin to swell and they make a house around the little white worm. This house keeps on growing and finally it covers itself over with an olive-brown hull. All this is done by the leaf to help the little worm to live and grow inside. The worm eats on the juices of the gall; it lives inside it until it matures; then it cuts a door or hole in one side of the gall and comes out a full-grown cynipid wasp.

These oak apples are eagerly eaten by gray and flying squirrels, but they are said to be highly astringent, which the squirrels do not seem to mind. They are also eaten by flying squirrels and perhaps by chipmunks too. The galls are rich in tannic acid and are used in making dyes and many kinds of colored inks. Just why Mother Nature takes care of these little worms by building a house around them, is one of the mysteries hard to figure out.

GALLS ON GOLDENROD, BLACKBERRY VINES

If you will observe the goldenrod stalks, you will often see an oblong, or egg-shaped swelling on the stalk, and when you look closely, you will find a tiny round hole in the side, through which the insect escaped when it reached maturity.

These galls are produced by the goldenrod gall moth, which lays its eggs in the stems of the plant. When the eggs hatch, the larvae cause the plant stem to begin to swell and grow, producing an elliptical gall. Usually the eggs stay inside the gall over the winter, and come out in the spring as adult moths.

THE SPHINX MOTHS

Many persons who have raised fields of tobacco have had to fight the big green worms which have horns on their rear. Sometimes the horns are red and give the worms a fruitful look. Often the worms will rear up when disturbed and spit tobacco juice on the one disturbing it.

These big hornworms are the larvae of the huge Sphinx moths, often seen flitting around a light

INTENSIFIED FEED PROGRAM BEGUN FOR EAST KENTUCKY

BY NEVYLE SHACKELFORD

Quicksand, Ky.—Livestock production in Eastern Kentucky has long been inhibited by lack of adequate feed and pasture. It was not so much that the land was unsuitable. Rather, the problem has been largely due to the absence of good land management and practices.

Working as partners, agronomist Kenneth Evans and livestock specialist Charles Martin, stationed here, have initiated a program which they firmly believe will help Eastern Kentucky farmers increase their income from livestock through the production of more and better feed.

This project is not exactly new, but as far as anyone has reported, has never been tried in this 30-county area. It is known as the "Intensified Feed Production Program." As a starter, the two specialists have been asked to select Elliott and Laurel as pilot counties. The project will be carried out in these two counties in cooperation with farmers, county agents, and other agencies interested in farmer welfare.

The project is relatively simple and what it amounts to is that plots of land will be selected on several farms in the two counties and subjected to special treatment. The soil will be tested for fertility needs and these needs supplied. The plots will then be seeded and cultivated according to requirements of the particular crop of grass or grain, and the results observed and evaluated.

Evans stated that all during the program, farmers will have an opportunity to observe the progress by personal visits, field days and demonstrations. They will be able to see for themselves how the land will react to proper treatment and how crops will grow with proper fertilization. They will be able to see the difference in crops on treated and untreated land and the project will be carried out in such a manner that no guess work will be involved.

It has been determined without question that Eastern Kentucky farms have a much greater potential for feed and forage crops than is being utilized. Also in many areas livestock production is outstripping feed and pasture production. This means feed is being imported with a resultant cutting down on profits. It is believed this research and demonstration project will make the farmer better acquainted with the possibilities of his land and help him grow more hay and grain and have better pastures.

Logan county, for one, has been involved in one of these intensified feed production projects and, as a result, farmers are making more money from livestock than ever before. In fact, the project has been a tremendous success. With sufficient interest shown, there is no reason why farmers in this area can not enjoy a like measure of the same success.

Russians Set Markers For 43 U. S. Targets; Trawler Fleet Watched

The U. S. Navy has found large radioactive devices, unmistakably Russian, on the ocean floor off the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. They are position markers for missile-firing submarines to line up on before blasting at 43 of America's 50 largest cities.

The radioactive guideposts, the April Reader's Digest reports, were planted by some of the Red fishing trawlers which prowled off our shores in poor as well as good fishing seasons as part of "The Soviets' Little-Known 'Wet War'." In fact, James H. Winchester writes, the Navy had noted a sizeable buildup in the trawler fleet recently in the area between Bermuda, the Bahamas and Cape Hatteras. There aren't many fish in that area; but there is a Navy anti-submarine detection project which would be of interest to spies.

During the last seven NATO maneuvers in the North Atlantic and Mediterranean, Red trawlers played hide-and-seek with Allied fleets. In the spring of 1960, a trawler tried to hi-jack a dummy missile fired into the Atlantic off Long Island, nearly colliding with a U. S. destroyer in the race to grab the missile. Our then U. S. ambassador to the UN, Henry Cabot Lodge, reported this to the Security Council.

Around the world, Red fishing boats are recording motor and other mechanical sounds of Allied submarines and warships. The propulsion machinery of each vessel gives off sound waves as individual as a finger-print. They tape-record these sounds, and they are then supplied to all of Russia's growing Navy.

U. S. Naval Airmen watch the Red trawlers carefully. The Reds have protested this continuing checkup. But United States says it intends to keep right on watching.

HIGHER POSTAL RATES POSE GRAVE THREAT TO EXISTENCE OF NEWSPAPERS, MAGAZINES

Pleasantville, N. Y., March 8 (Spl.)—The proposed postal rate increases now before Congress—HR 7927—will not "serve the best interests of the Post Office, its users or the country," editors of The Reader's Digest will declare in their April issue. Advance copies of the article were released today (March 8) coincident with Senate hearings in Washington on the proposed rate increases.

The article contends that many magazines and newspapers will be seriously hurt and may even be forced to cease publishing.

"The United States Post Office is in trouble," declares the Digest article. "Clearly something must be done. Postal rates must be increased to provide income and a program must be set up to improve the service and lower the cost of handling the mail."

The article, however, takes issue with the way in which the rates are proposed to be increased, particularly, with the 1c surcharge proposed for magazines and newspapers.

Pointing out that in the forty years of its existence, many valued and important magazines have been forced to discontinue publication, the Digest adds: "Along with other costs which have helped to cause so many good magazines to founder has been the relentless rise in the cost of second-class mail. Second-class postal rates have risen faster than other prices until they are now 89 percent higher than in 1945."

Up until the end of World War II, the post office was able to keep its budget within reasonable balance. Since, then, the cost of handling mail has doubled yet there has been only one change in first-class mail rates in 29 years, an increase from 3c to 4c in 1958.

The Digest states that the only way in which the post office can become solvent is by increasing the first-class letter rate from 4c to 6c rather than to the 5c called for in the pending bill. Forty-eight percent of the 180 billion pieces of mail handled daily by the post office are first-class letters.

The article quotes Postmaster General Day as saying: "If letter postage was worth 3c in 1932, it would be worth 7c today in terms of 1932 dollars." According to the Digest, business firms buy 75% of the first-class stamps so the bulk of the cost of a 6c letter rate would be borne by industry and commerce—including the Digest whose first-class mail bill was over $2 million last year.

The Reader's Digest contends that modernization of the Postal Department "could save tremendous sums; even a 10% reduction would save $400 million and make it unnecessary to raise letter mail to more than 5c. Other countries are far ahead of us in the use of machines."

The article states that another large factor in the postal deficit was recently recognized by Postmaster General Day, speaking about the public service costs of the post office. He said: "We perform many non-postal services, such as handling the registration of three million aliens a year, selling migratory-bird stamps and distributing forms for the Census Bureau and Peace Corps." Commenting on these points, the Digest says:

"Mail users derive no direct benefits from these and similar services performed by the post office but they pay for them!" Elimination of the $400 million cost of such services from the postal deficit could be "a giant step toward curing the chronic insolvency which plagues the post office," the editors argue.

The article is entitled "Second-Class Mail Rates Can Ruin First-Class Magazines." It states that "magazine and newspaper publishing is more than business. It is a vital function of a free society. It is through a free press that ideas and information circulate and public opinion is formed."
