THE "OUT" HOUSE IN "BACK" . . . "Out" houses should be completely "out" of town if we are to become worthy of a community college. Grade children can look down daily on these silent symbols of a pestilential threat.

One way to get warm is to get into an argument with your neighbor about whether this is dogwood or redbud winter.

OF RAMPS

I have a special request from a friend at Lackey to inform her and the general public about ramps. (You will recall, it was this vegetable and its odor which caused Secretary Udall to exorcise Southern cooking, the other day.) You will excuse us, please, from giving the botanical name (which we do not know), but ramps is a vegetable which could very well claim kinship with our wild onion. It grows in West Virginia and Tennessee and perhaps several other states, but not in our section. In fact, ramps is quite famous in West Virginia. At Richwood, West Virginia, folks have an annual ramps festival.

Everybody eats ramps where they are eaten at all, we understand. Have to. Otherwise, the non-eater wouldn't be able to abide those about him. But why should a fellow like Secretary Udall complain about the odor of ramps, since he comes from the big city where they smell up the premises with limburger, garlic and the like?

MINE TRAGEDY CLAIMS MARTIN, HURTS HELPER

ONE ESCAPES UNDERGROUND STONE SLAB

Thin Seam Contributed To Saving of Two Lives; Survivor Relates Details

A truck-mine operator was instantly killed, one of his employees was injured and another escaped by a matter of inches Wednesday morning when a huge slab of rock dropped without warning from the roof of the K-12 mine of the Danny Coal Company on Stumbo Hollow at Drift. Killed was Parris Martin, 62, owner of the operation and a mining veteran of 40 years. Edsel Osborne, 24, suffered a broken leg. Taylor Moore, 24, was caught by the foot by the slab of rock but extricated himself by removing his shoe. He was unhurt. The tragedy occurred almost at the face of the coal, approximately 1,000 feet underground. The three were working in coal 31 inches high. The slab of stone which fell measured 25 feet across by 16 feet and sloped from a thickness of 16 inches to a feather-edge. A shuttle car bore a heavy part of the fall, and this, together with the fact that thinness of the seam forced them to move in a crawling or semi-reclining position, saved the lives of Osborne and Moore. Martin was caught about 12 feet under the rock, alongside the shuttle car. Moore recounted the tragic events to Willard Stanley, head of the Prestonsburg district office of the Kentucky Bureau of Mines & Minerals, to this effect: They had loaded one shuttle car of coal, taken it to the tiple outside, dumped it and returned to the face of the coal. They had detected what is called hill seams in the roof and recognized the danger of a fall. The three were setting timbers to support the roof, with Martin at the side of the shuttle car and Taylor crawling back from the face of the coal when the fall came at about 7.45 a.m. The rock completely filled the room where they were working.

Taylor told Mr. Stanley his foot was caught by the edge of the rock but that he loosened his shoe and freed himself by working his foot from the shoe. He then set to work to free Osborne, later going to the outside to summon help. A jack was used to lift the slab of rock, then a rope was tied to Martin's body and by this means the victim was pulled to a spot where rescuers could load his body onto stretchers. Because of the low roof the stretchers bearing both Martin and Osborne were pulled along the passageway to the outside.

The victim was a son of the late Maryland and Dollie Stumbo Martin. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Nancy Stumbo, of Drift; two sons, Clarence Martin, Wellington, O., and Clinnon Martin, of Drift; a brother and one sister, Oliver Martin and Mrs. Zella Martin, both of Drift. His funeral will be held from the residence Saturday morning (See Story No. 5, Page 6)

AREA MEETS PLAN DRIVE

Cleanup Program Set By Leaders; Shepherd To Speak At Library

Robert L. Shepherd, of Quick-sand, who is associated with the Eastern Kentucky Resource Development group, will be here Monday to discuss landscaping with interested persons at the beginning of the cleanup drive in Prestonsburg. Shepherd, a former vocational agriculture teacher here and an authority on landscaping, will be at the Regional Library at 2:30 p.m., it is announced. The cleanup drive will officially start Tuesday, leaders say. That is the deadline for entries in the essay and poster contests associated with the civic effort, and entries will be picked up then. Several area meetings have been held to spur the drive, it was said this week by Mrs. R. V. May, chairman of the Community Development Council. These were at West Prestonsburg, the Regional Library and at the First Methodist Church. Mrs. May met recently with the South Prestonsburg Homemakers Club at the Mayo Addition to arrange area meetings. West Prestonsburg citizens have completed plantings at the railroad underpass as a contribution to the drive.

EARL STUMBO IS CLAIMED

Veteran C. & O. Employee, Bank Organizer, Cashier Succumbs Here Sunday

Earl Allen Stumbo, well-known Prestonsburg man, died suddenly at 9 a.m. Sunday at his Court street home here, a victim of a cerebral hemorrhage. He was 71 years old. Mr. Stumbo had previously suffered from a heart condition but had apparently been in normal health during recent weeks. On the day preceding his death he had twice visited his brother, Ex-Sheriff M. T. Stumbo, who lies critically ill at the Prestonsburg General hospital. His sudden passing came as a shock to a wide circle of relatives and friends. Born February 28, 1891, at Minnie, he was a son of the late W. M. (Bill Buck) Stumbo, a former Floyd sheriff, and Mrs. Mary Allen Stumbo. His family has figured prominently in Floyd county politics for half a century, but he directed his attention more specifically to the area of business. He was graduated from the Bowling Green Business University, was cashier of the Bank of Wayland and was one of the organizers and served as cashier of the Weeksbury State Bank. For the last 40 years he had been employed by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company in its freight department here. Mr. Stumbo was married on Christmas Day, 1914, to Miss Anne Keith Harmon, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Harmon, of Prestonsburg, and to this union was born one daughter. He was a member of the First Methodist Church here and of Zebulon Masonic Lodge. Surviving, besides his widow, are his daughter, Mrs. Chalmers H. Frazier, of Prestonsburg; two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Myers, of Detroit, and Mrs. Verna Mathis, Waynesboro, Virginia; and three brothers, M. T. Stumbo, West Prestonsburg, Grover C. Stumbo, McDowell, and Dewey Stumbo, of Drift. He also leaves three grandchildren.

The funeral was conducted at 2 p.m. Tuesday from the First Methodist Church, the pastor the Rev. Orin M. Simmernan, and the Rev. J. C. Hager, of Louisa, officiating. Burial was made in the Porter cemetery at Cliff under direction of the Carter & Callihan Funeral Home.

AREA ROAD TALK IS SET

Turnpike Discussion Planned With Governor At Natural Bridge Park

The Eastern Kentucky Turnpike—with 43 miles of it due to be opened this year—will be reported on, discussed and explained May 9 during a meeting at Natural Bridge State Park. Gov. Bert Combs will head a group of key state officials scheduled to appear on an afternoon program following a luncheon at the park. Appearing with Gov. Combs will be Lt. Gov. Wilson W. Wyatt, Highway Commissioner Henry Ward, Agriculture Commissioner Emerson Beauchamp, Turnpike Authority Director Felix Joyner, Tourist and Travel Director Charles Warnick and B. F. Reed, chairman of the Eastern Kentucky Regional Development Commission. Billed as the Eastern Kentucky Turnpike Conference—the first to be held—it follows by three weeks a similar meeting at Madisonville which attracted more than 400 persons. Officials at that meeting reported on the Western Kentucky Turnpike. Paving work is to begin soon on the Eastern Turnpike between Winchester and Campton, and grade and drain contracts are now being let on an additional 33 miles which will carry the route from Campton to Salyersville. The speakers will report on the potential of the route to industry, agriculture and tourism. Those attending will have the opportunity to ask questions on these various aspects of the Turnpike.

MUSIC FEST SET SATURDAY

Annual Post-War Event To Feature Musicians From County Schools

The Floyd county music festival will be staged here Saturday for the 13th time since the annual event was interrupted by World War II. It will be the 28th festival held since its beginning. In addition to band performances by student-musicians from the several high schools of the county, the parade featuring school queens and the coronation of the festival queen later will add color and beauty to the event. Five schools have named beauty queens, it was announced Tuesday by Franklin Honeycutt, Prestonsburg high school band director who will be in charge of the festival. They are: Patricia McCormick, Prestonsburg; Carolyn Crisp, Martin; Janie Hagans, Maytown; Dolores Gilliam, McDowell; Cherry Blackburn, Betsy Layne. (See Story No. 6, Page 6)

QUICK ACTION URGED ON SITE FOR COLLEGE

MAY 15th SET AS DEADLINE ON PLEDGES

Combs, Dickey Confer On College; Governor Acts To Spur Planning

The urgent need for every pledge of funds toward the purchase of a site for the Prestonsburg Community College to be converted immediately into cash was emphasized this week as both Governor Bert T. Combs and President Frank G. Dickey, of the University of Kentucky, announced their readiness to take definite action to make the institution a reality. May 15 has been tentatively set as the deadline for the fulfilling of all pledges. This is necessary on several counts, with these two being most important: 1. President Dickey wants to present the deed to the property to the trustees of the University of Kentucky at their June 5 meeting. 2. The option on the 40-acre tract of land selected as the college site will expire in June.

Governor Combs and the U-K president conferred last week plans for the college development. Immediately thereafter, the began to happen. Governor Combs announced he had made available funds to cover architects' fees for a design work prior to actual construction.

Mr. Dickey later told R. V. May of the college site finance committee, that he would send a five-man committee here within the week to inspect the site and to confer with a committee of citizens. Dickey said these University representatives will compose the committee which will come here: Dean R. D. Johnson and C. R. Hager, of the Extension Department; Frank D. Peterson, vice-president (business administration); Dean Shaver, of the College of Engineering, and Mr. Farris, the University's chief operating engineer.

"We are on our way to seeing a dream come true, but we must do something ourselves—we must contribute the money we pledged toward purchase of the site," commented a finance drive leader. (See Story No. 3, Page 6)

ON THIS ALL ARE IN AGREEMENT: COLLEGE TO FILL A GREAT NEED

The proposed Prestonsburg Community College will greatly raise the educational level of the area, is the consensus of opinion of persons contacted at random by The Times this week. All agree that it will become the area's greatest single asset. Typical of the comment was that of Bert Colvin, automobile dealer: "The only way we can ever raise our standard of living is to educate our children. This college will provide opportunity for many more of our young people to attain a higher degree of education, thereby making Eastern Kentucky a better place in which to live." This was echoed by Ernest Turner, Drift insurance man: "The community college will advance the educational level of our young people because it will make it possible for more to attend college. Also, two years' study here will create an incentive for them to finish college at some senior college." A note of pride features the comment of many persons polled. Dr. M. J. Lee, Prestonsburg dentist, expressed it succinctly: "I think the two-year college program is one of the most progressive movements ever undertaken in Eastern Kentucky in my lifetime. I am proud of its success." Excerpts from comments follow: John Hall, Martin businessman: "It is fine, fine. It will save many parents money, too. It will keep our children with us longer; for, as everybody knows, when they get their education, they have to leave here to make a living." Blaine Hall, Prestonsburg insurance man: "Any time we elevate the educational standards of our area we help ourselves. Better educated and better informed people become more prosperous. Our greatest asset is our children, not our coal, oil and gas." Claybourne Bailey, retired Lancer businessman: "It will not only be a fine thing for Prestonsburg but fine for all of Floyd and surrounding counties." Ray Howard, chairman of the Floyd County Board of Education: "The greatest thing is that a lot of children will have a chance to go to college that might not otherwise have an opportunity." Clifford Steele, insurance man and former Betsy Layne teacher: "We have a wealth of brains and this will help develop them. The college will slow down the high rate of dropout in our high schools because students will have something to look forward to." Clifford Wright, jeweler: "I don't think we could have procured anything as great, businesswise or culturewise." E. B. May, Jr., Scout leader and store manager: "I think it is one of the greatest assets ever conceived for our area. We have many fine seniors without access to a state-supported school and when the college is established here these students can commute to it." George Smith, Tram resident and Prestonsburg store manager: "I'm tremendously pleased. My children are young but they will probably attend it." Joe I. May, Harold realtor: "The college will provide educational opportunity for many that might not otherwise be able to attend an institution of higher learning." Joe Weddington, insurance man: "It will mean more educated young men and women in our area." Allie Howard, Allen wholesaler: "Our colleges are crowded now and many are turning applicants away. Our scholastically prepared students will have an opportunity to begin their educational careers here, and since the pressure will be relieved on the senior colleges, there will be more students able to enter them later."

DIRT IS NOT COMPANION OF POVERTY We are fostering a way of life in a segment of our population that can grow like a cancerous sore to destroy us all.

This is completely false. These are no more a necessary part of the indigent or pseudo-indigent than grass skirts would be to the Eskimo.

The truth is this: Hunger and privation may be accepted as teammates of poverty, but filth, torn, soiled clothes are not. This is so because food must be bought and money to buy it with is scarce among the truly needy.

A patch on clean clothes, even threadbare clothes, is a mark of honor, and can be worn with dignity on the bread-line or at the county fair. It distinguishes the indigent from the indolent, the unable-to-work from the unwilling-to-work.

On the other hand, slovenliness, shagginess, dirty bodies and clothes were the calling-cards of beggars, loafers, bums of centuries ago. These are becoming more conspicuous in some of our indigent (or pseudo-indigent) today.

The plain, naked facts are these: The unfortunate poor are no less able than the so-called rich to wash their faces, comb their hair, and launder and mend their clothes.

"Cleanliness is next to Godliness" is not an empty phrase; and its counterpart "Uncleanliness is inexcusable" is equally important.

We should remember this truth: Hunger is often the companion of poverty, but dirty faces and slovenliness are not. We should certainly help those who deserve to be helped.

This painting will be entered at Lexington, May 9, at the convention of Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs.

At the business session, plans were made to observe "Teacher Appreciation Day" in the three communities by serving lunch to the teachers of Lackey, Garrett and Wayland, also the County Board of Education members, office workers, and Charles Clark, county superintendent.

The club presented Mack Webb Martin a gift of $10.00 and thanked him for representing the club, school and community.

The hostesses, Mrs. Rudolph Spencer, Mrs. Adam Buckovich and Mrs. Eibel Wallen, served refreshments to the following members: Mesdames Florence Pack, Arnold Cooley, Bert Stapleton, Earl Castle, Crit Wells, Fred Hall, W. THE FEMININE SIDE OF BOWLING NEWS

By IMA BOWLER

It seems strange that after all these weeks of urging you to go to the banquet, the banquet is finally over, and I will tell you, I certainly don't know when I've enjoyed anything half so much as I did the meal, the meeting, and Mrs. Komorski, too.

Mrs. Helen was a very charming, attractive lady, who knew all the answers about the rules, and as far as I can remember every rule which has caused trouble this year was discussed. It was comforting to know that the girls from Ashland had experienced nearly the same difficulties and we weren't alone in the things which had caused us trouble. One thing Mrs. Komorski told us that is certainly worth repeating is to carry with you a league rule book, and when something comes up refer to it, and read the rule under question.

The W. I. B. C. is looking for field representatives who travel around and do much the same type of work that Helen Komorski did here. The woman must be able to travel, to speak and be able to meet people. If there are any of you who are interested in this type of work, you may contact Mrs. Helen Komorski, director of Field Representatives, 1225 Dublin Road, Columbus, Ohio.

Helen urged us all to participate in the local tournament which starts this week. She said that the experience in bowling in a tournament is invaluable. The team events are scheduled for Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday at Crown Lanes, and the singles and doubles are scheduled for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week at Lake Lanes. This should be barrels of fun, with cash prizes and trophies awarded.

High bowler of the week at Lake Lanes was Venice Reynolds, who seems to be appearing with amazing regularity at both lanes with high scores. Nice bowling, Venice. The singles and doubles of the City Woman's Tournament are next week, as we said before, and the deadline for entry is this Friday, May 4, at midnight. If you haven't entered, you may do so till then.

Pin Princess at Lake Lanes is Joyce Booth, with 183. That's pretty fine bowling, too.
At Crown Lanes, Mrs. Janice Pelphrey was high bowler with 213. Bet that 200 pin is pretty, Janice.

Mr. Daniels, manager of Crown Lanes, asked us to tell you that Crown Lanes welcomes the ladies of the Floyd-Pike Woman's Bowling Association this week for the team event of the tournament, and he will do everything possible to help make their first Association tournament a huge success.

The response to Bowl Down Cancer Week was very gratifying. Thanks to the many bowlers for their participation and contribution to so worthy a cause. At the Pro-Amateur tournament held the night before the qualifying rounds of the Pro Tournament (BPAA tour) in St. Louis around April 9, we had two bowlers from our town—Dr. John G. Archer and Tom Cox. Both entered the tournament—each amateur is paired with a pro. Tom Cox bowled with Buz Fazio to place seventh in the tournament—Fazio with 612, Tom Cox with 606.

Mrs. Helen Komorski told us that the term was "bowling lanes," not "alleys."

It is interesting to know that the woman's bowling organization is growing so rapidly that there will soon be many more women bowlers than men. It is also interesting to note that we have the largest City Association in the state, area wise, and our membership is larger than many others in the state. We have nearly a hundred more members than Ashland, for instance.

Second Annual Kiwanis Talent Contest Held At Wheelwright Hi

The second annual talent show sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Beaver Valley was held in the Wheelwright high school auditorium Monday evening. Chosen for top honors were the following:

First place, Danny Greer, piano solo; second, John Flitts, dramatic monologue; third, Sharon Collins, flute solo; honorable mention, Alice Clark, humorous monologue, and a vocal sextet composed of Wilma Lewis, Darlene Tyson, Robert Terry, Wanda Terry, Calvin Moss and Winston Johnson.

Serving as judges were Rev. and Mrs. John Dutil, Walyand; Mrs. Ellen Hornsby, Garrett; Mrs. Edith Hopkins, Drift; and Mrs. Olive Hall, McDowell. Arthur Bradbury served as master of ceremonies. Proceeds from the talent show are to be used for Kiwanis youth work.

The Time for Talking Is Past

Now comes it time, as they say among the betting gentry, to put up or shut up.

We refer to the matter of making good those pledges we so enthusiastically made, earlier this year, to contribute of our means toward the purchase of a site for a college here.

The option on the forty-acre tract intended for the college will expire next month. The community college system has been authorized by act of the General Assembly, and Prestonsburg was in that legislation given No. 1 priority. Governor Combs is ready for action; in fact, he already has made available funds to cover architects' fees. President Dickey, of the University of Kentucky, is ready, and a committee of five named by him will be here within the week to inspect the site.

That leaves us, those who pledged of our resources more than $100,000 toward purchase of the site. How ready are we?

Let us each show Governor Combs, Dr. Dickey and all Kentucky we are as ready as we were when we were "talking" money. Let us, each one of us, make good our pledge without delay. Please, if there is any delay let it be from some cause other than our failure to invest in this college which means so much to the future of our children and those of our friends and neighbors.

Then, having done that, let us continue with our interest. Let's talk this school and work for it till its great potential is fully realized and till it takes a proud place among the finer educational institutions in Kentucky.

Washing dishes and ironing each takes four per cent more energy when done sitting down than when done standing, tests show. And this didn't include the energy used to get up and sit down again when something "out of reach" was needed. When the energy needed to get on and off a kitchen stool was added to the extra energy used for washing dishes, the women tested used 13 per cent more energy by sitting rather than standing to wash dishes.

Here's a basic recipe for scrambled eggs, as given by USDA. Beat six eggs until light and fluffy. Add 1/2 teaspoon salt, a dash of pepper, and 1/3 cup milk. Place two tablespoons butter, margarine or other cooking fat or oil in the frying pan and heat until it just bubbles. Add egg mixture; cook until firm, but not hard, stirring constantly. Serve immediately. Serves six. Diluted evaporated milk used instead of fresh milk gives extra flavor and richness.

recently with a load of booze is not the Charles Leonard Osborne who attends Casey Junior College. Writes Charles Leonard in mild protest: "Since this article was published more than fifteen people have asked me to get them a case of beer, my next trip."

Last Thursday I made it back to the lake. Same beautiful lake, same friendly hills all about—same old luck.

Our item in this space last week about Roy Ramey's 200-pound catch seems to have been a bit ambiguous. Well, to clear up the matter we will tell what we did not intend to say: His fishing partner, Earl Castle, fell in the lake.

SHUCKS!
Mention of fishing brings me around to the violation of a confidence. I must tell you about Ernest Turner and his son-in-law, Olin Elliott, and their fishing contest.

They started the season off with an agreement that the one who caught the largest game fish this year would pull down $10 from the other—and, first thing, Elliott hauls off and lands an 8½-pound bass. But his father-in-law is not one to give up easily, and he is holding onto his ten-spot.

Last Friday, he tells Elliott as they start fishing, "I'll fish from the bow of the boat, this time, and I'll show you how to beat that minnow you caught."
And, sure enough, it wasn't long till he was all tangled up with a whopper that had struck an eel-strip while he was jigging. This monster took off, he circled, he rose and he went down. "Reminded me of the way a porpoise will act," Turner said. But the big fish was well-hooked, and finally he swung back toward the boat. "Guess this'll hold you!" he yelled to Elliott. "Get the landing net."

Elliott cooperated, slipped the net beneath the fish, then heaved mightily to bring it into the boat. The fish would have gone a good 10 pounds, Turner swears. But it was never weighed, he sadly relates. It was a carp.

EUREKA!
My notes, meticulously taken with the best of intentions, often go astray, sometimes to be found, occasionally lost forever. Here's a scrap of paper which was intended to remind me to write an item about three girls who are members of the staff of the Bobcat Times, publication of the Betsy Layne school. Know how long this item has been wandering around in limbo? The girls were here to register to vote. Their two ports of call in Prestonsburg were The Floyd County Times and the Floyd county jail (no wisecracks, please). The visitors: Joyceleen Martin, editor; Josephine Kidd, reporter; Connie Mitchell, typist.

Scout Leaders Honored At Appreciation Banquet; Bullard, Reed Speakers

Lonesome Pine Council, Boy Scouts of America, honored 1,200 volunteer Scouters at the Council's annual banquet held Friday at the Pikeville College cafeteria. The special award of the Silver Beaver was conferred upon George Leatherman, of Wheelwright, Council chairman of Camping and Activities; F. B. Fowler, of Grundy, Virginia, vice-president of the Council, and H. L. Rogers, Scoutmaster of Troop 10 of the Pikeville Methodist Church.

These men were selected for this honor by the Council's Committee on Awards for their outstanding service to Scouting. The Silver Beaver is the highest award which can be made by the local council.

Only three of these awards were allowed by the National Council for 1961 to be used by the Lonesome Pine Council.

Fred Bullard, a member of the Council's executive board and president of the Kentucky Coal Association, and B. F. Reed, board member and chairman of the Finance committee, through slides and lectures from their trip to the Iron Curtain countries last July pointed up the contrasts in the social, spiritual and economic progress of those countries as against that of our own country.

The great contrast was pointed out by the speakers as represented by the declaration of the American Creed by Star Scout Stephen Pruitt, of Troop 14, of Pikeville.

Under the guidance of president A. R. Barber, of Hazard, recognition for all groups of Scouters were made by other Scouters on the program, including C. V. Snapp, J. Lincoln Kiser, H. E. Greer, B. P. Bogardus, H. A. Street, Rev. Leroy Sanders and Byron F. Pennebaker.

POLL FAVORS PERKINS BILL

Legislation Reported Favorably by Committee; Administration Supports

In a survey it was reported recently that over the nation 79% of the people favor the idea to revise and modernize CCC camps of the 1930's for young men ages 16 to 22 years who want to learn a trade and earn money by outdoor conservation work. Only 16% of those polled were not in favor and 5% held no opinion.

The American Institute of Public Opinion of which George Gallup is the director, says that its analysis of the poll showed that the Youth Conservation Corps camps won overwhelming support in all regions of the Nation—East, Midwest, South and far West.

Legislation introduced by Congressman Carl D. Perkins (Dem., Ky.) has been reported favorably by the House Education and Labor Committee and awaits final action on the floor. The bill which is strongly supported by the Administration is given better than an even chance of passage at this time, according to some legislative sources. According to Gallup, the proposal has bipartisan support at the grass roots level but has more appeal to Democrats and Independents, 83% and 30% of whom favor it contrasted with 70% approval from rank and file Republicans.

Hearings before the Perkins subcommittee last session revealed that as many as one million young people between the ages of 16 and 22 are out of school and have no jobs while at the same time many deferred projects in national and State parks and forests represent a substantial resource loss to the Nation.

The Perkins bill, H. R. 10692, is temporarily stymied by the House Rules Committee which must clear all major legislation for action by the full membership but prompt consideration of the measure is expected by the Rules Committee following the Congressional Easter recess.

Many new textile and clothing products will come to market in 1962. Among them will be nylon zippers, paper blankets, drip-dry woollens, and a new finish to provide permanent pleating in wool fabrics. Stretch fabrics for women's skirts also are foreseen for future markets. Stretch wool suits are to be market-tested in the fall of 1962.

Girl Scout Council Board Meeting Held; President Presides

The April board meeting of the Sandy Valley Girl Scout Council was held April 17 in the Council office here. Mrs. Edward P. Hill, president, presided.

Routine reports of committees, officers and district chairmen were made. Mrs. James Camicia, camp chairman, announced that two sessions of established camp at Camp Chatterawha on Dewey Lake will be held July 8 and July 22, with the fee of $35.00 for each session unchanged from last year.

Mrs. R. V. May, Region IV chairman of the Selections Committee, reported on the opportunity for girls offered by Girl Scouting and expressed the hope that girls from the valley will, in the future, participate more fully in these activities. Mrs. Hill, Mrs. May and Mrs. Robert Hughes, executive director of the Sandy Valley Council, reported on the Region IV presidents' and executives' meeting held in Columbus, Ohio on April 10. Plans for launching the program changes and council coverage had precedence on the agenda at the meeting. These changes are planned for use in 1962 and the necessary steps will be taken during the remainder of this year for perfecting them. Mrs. R. V. May and Mrs. James Camicia were elected co-representatives to serve with Mrs. Hill as Sandy Valley Council members of the organizational committee. This committee will be made up of representatives of the eight councils that will make up the new larger council. Mrs. Robert Hughes will serve at the meeting in an advisory capacity.

The plans and decisions made at this meeting will mean much to the future of Scouting in this area, and all interested adults are invited to attend. The meeting will be held at Donovan Hall, University of Kentucky, Lexington, on May 1 at 10:00 a.m.

Members attending the board meeting were Mesdames Edw. P. Hill, Robert Hughes, R. V. May, and J. R. Camicia, Prestonsburg; Mrs. Hal Kawaja, Mrs. Elsom Hedges and Mrs. Maurice Hall, of Paintsville; Mrs. W. R. Burgess, Pikeville; Mrs. Russell Price, Whitesburg; Mrs. Everett Thompson, Williamson, W. PACKAGING FOR FROZEN FOODS

Packaging has a very important part to play in the future of frozen foods, as in the past. There is a new set of customers buying frozen foods in the one and two-pound see-through bags. Though there is a continuing market for berries and vegetables in cartons, the growth in sales of foods in polyethylene bags is over and above that. These pour-and-store bags have also brought some change in frozen fruits. Because of the demand for berries packed with no sugar or with just a coating of sugar has resulted in this type of packaging.

Credit goes to chemists who developed the materials that do not become brittle at exceedingly low temperatures used in freezing foods. Also thanks goes to the ingenious chemists for developing the materials for frozen foods that is packaged in bags and also may be heated in the same bag. Carton packaging needs not only be tough to prevent breaking in storage and transportation but they must be easy to open. Progress in this field is well under way, too. Some of the loose-frozen vegetables are now coming into stores in wrapperless cartons that have easy-opening features, with double-protection reclosures.

There is also something new in fiber cartons for frozen fruits. It's a pull-tab feature for metal ends of 10-ounce and 16-ounce fiber cartons. No knife, scissors, bottle opener or can opener is needed for these cartons. The metal ends may be either aluminum or tin plate and the fiber is paper-board body laminated with polyethylene. Products most commonly seen in this type of packaging are frozen peaches, frozen melon balls, frozen mixed vegetables as well as berries.

Aluminum cans for frozen concentrate juices and ades were new only a few months ago. They were instantly successful because they make it easy for foodshoppers to buy a month or more supply of juices and store without fear of rusting. Also the foil-lined fiberboard can is satisfactory for certain frozen concentrate juices and much less expensive than aluminum cans. Another development in frozen concentrate containers is an extra thin tin plate which competes in cost with both the other mentioned materials. Two new tops for cans of frozen concentrate juices are eliminating the can opener. One is a tab device, which when lifted, releases the entire top of the can. The other needs only a hook type can opener to release the metal lid.

Farmers Allotted $10,000 For Flood Damage Repair; Practices Are Explained

Floyd county has been designated by Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman as a "disaster" county to receive help in restoring land damaged by excessive rainfall or flooding this spring, according to Elder Goble, office manager of the local agricultural Stabilization Conservation committee.

Allotted to farmers in this county is an additional $10,000 to assist in the restoration of drainage systems or taking other corrective measures where conservation problems were created as a result of excessive rains and flooding.

Daniel Akers, chairman of the local ASC committee, reports that according to a preliminary survey made of the county, several farmers have had ditches filled with sand and gravel making them ineffective for drainage purposes. Much damage has occurred to waterways making it necessary to rework them preparatory to re-seeding. Other damage to farmland has been reported, Mr. Akers stated.

Measures eligible for ACP emergency cost-sharing includes (1) filling and shaping of gullies and watersheds, (2) renovation of terraces, pond dams and diversion channels, (3) shaping eroded land, (4) streambank restoration, (5) restoration of drainage systems damaged or destroyed by floods, and (6) removal of accumulated debris.

Farmers who have suffered damage the early part of this year and who need ACP cost-sharing assistance are invited to call at the county ASC office.

One of the biggest lumbering operations in Eastern Kentucky was that of the Rockcastle Lumber Company in Martin county in the second decade of the present century. Many Floyd countians found employment there.

The trees were cut, hauled out of the mountains by mules and oxen, loaded on a "dinky" train with a mechanical loader and transported to a large band mill on Rockcastle Creek where they were manufactured into lumber.

EFFECTS OF ALCOHOLISM NOT ACCURATELY MEASURED

Alcoholism kills, yet the deaths it causes often are not accurately recorded.

Instead death certificates indicated heart failure, cirrhosis or other ailments. Sometimes alcoholism is the direct cause; in other cases it is indirectly responsible.

So there is no way to measure accurately the devastating effects of the disease. Sometimes it kills quickly. Many times the death is slow, painful and agonizing.

"This is the sad side of the alcoholism picture," says John Dawes, control coordinator of the State Health Department's Division of Alcoholism. "Many of these people can be helped—if we understand them, if they understand themselves, if they understand themselves and if we develop a satisfactory program of physical, psychological and social assistance."

There are two basic types of alcoholics—the steady alcoholic and the periodic alcoholic. Other types are compulsive drinkers; both are headed for eventual physical and mental collapse if something is not done.

The steady alcoholic is the type people usually associate with the term "alcoholic." He drinks daily and excessively without showing extreme drunkenness. He reaches a plateau—never completely drunk but never completely sober—and stays there day after day.

The periodic alcoholic follows a pattern of alternate periods of excessive drinking and of abstinence or moderation. His cycle is relatively regular, the length being an individual characteristic. After staying sober for weeks or even months, he suddenly gets conspicuously drunk. His family, and he in particular, believes his ability to control drinking between the lapses is evidence of will power. They look upon his lapses as deliberate choice.

If an alcoholic were able to recognize the early-stage symptoms of alcoholism he could seek help and defeat his problem before it became too late. Most of them, however, continually insist that drinking is no problem for them.

Memory loss, anti-social behavior and attempts to justify drinking are often among the final signs before alcohol demands surrender of the victim's personality. It is the point of no return—for then he begins to drink against his will.

His body gradually builds a tolerance for alcohol. Many far-gone alcoholics can drink as much as three fifths of whiskey a day, Dawes says, without becoming staggering, falling-down drunk. The danger for them is that their tolerance becomes too high. Never passing out as nature intended, they can drink enough to kill them because of that very tolerance.

The alcoholic in the next stage usually experiences tremors, fears, apprehensions. He can, as doctors say, "shake it out" over a period of three to five days or relieve his discomfort immediately by taking another drink. Too often he takes the drink.

More advanced signs are delirium tremens, convulsions and occasionally epileptic-type seizures, known in the old days as "rum fits." These seizures frequently result in death.

Heavy and prolonged drinking, some doctors say, also eventually results in countless cases of physical and mental disease. It disturbs the body's metabolism and impairs the drinker's appetite. The alcoholic tends to secure his calories from alcohol rather than food.

Since alcohol is rich in calories it produces substantial amounts of energy. But the body system lacks vitamins, minerals and other nutrients necessary for proper functioning. Thus, many diseases of alcoholism are the result of improper diet and hygiene.

Gastrointestinal disorders, cirrhosis of the liver, high blood pressure, nerve disturbances and mental illness all are said to have been traced directly to the disease.

"And once an alcoholic crosses the line—becoming a slave to drink—there is no turning back," says Dawes. "All the damage done is permanent and can never be undone. If he somehow manages to quit drinking for a long period and then goes back to the bottle enough physical and mental deterioration can occur almost overnight to put him in the same condition he would have been in had he never stopped."

Many of these diseased people can be helped. Some of them, however, who have suffered permanent damage have only custodial care to look forward to—if facilities are available.

"To avoid this hopeless condition we must get to these sick people before they have a complete breakdown," Dawes says. "And once we have the chance to help an alcoholic, it is important that we do not give up if he fails to stay sober the first time. About 50 per cent are able to break away from the bottle after the first drying out, but more and more are able to conquer alcoholism as the process is repeated."

The number of alcoholics in Kentucky now is alarming, Dawes says. In Louisville there are an estimated 37,000 who are victims of the illness. Also shocking is the rate of increase. Estimates indicate that in 1940 there were 3,800 alcoholics per 100,000 population in Kentucky's largest city. In 1960 that figure had risen to 5,820 per 100,000.

Nationally an estimated 75 per cent of the country's men use alcoholic beverages to some extent, as do 56 per cent of the women.

The chance of any one drinker becoming an alcoholic is about one in 15, according to estimates by researchers.

RADIOACTIVE FALLOUT TO BE MEASURED AT FRANKFORT

Frankfort, Ky. — With the resumption of atmospheric nuclear tests by the United States, the Division of Radiological Health, Kentucky State Department of Health, is sampling the radioactive fallout in both air and water on a 24-hour, 7-day a week basis, Charles L. Weaver, division director, said.

The division established its air sampling station, located on the roof of the Health Services building, Frankfort, last September at the time the Russians began nuclear testing. Collection of rain water samples from the same unit for radiation analysis was initiated in February, 1962.

Results to date show that the amount of radioactive particles in the air and water is well below any level that causes any danger to health, and it is doubtful that it will reach such a level. "Our division, however, is prepared to inform the public if any emergency should arise," Mr. Weaver said.

The sample collection station in Frankfort is a participating station in the U. S. Public Health Service Radiation Surveillance Network, which covers every state.

Results of air measurements are called in daily to the U. S. Public Health Service, Division of Radiological Health, and rain water samples when collected are mailed to its laboratories.

The Kentucky Division of Radiological Health receives from the U. S. Public Health Service weekly figures on radioactivity in the air and water and monthly information on the iodine levels in milk.

HIGH QUALITY

To make sure of high quality in frozen pies, package them carefully for freezer storage. Make containers moisture-vapor-proof by using freezer tape, heat sealing, or tight fastening with wire or rubber bands. Use specially designed freezer containers, wrap, foil or cellophane. A paper plate turned over a pie before wrapping gives added protection. Freezer temperature should be at least 0 degrees.

BEE BUSINESS

In very hot weather, bees may spend more time cooling their hives than producing honey or pollinating crops. Cooling is done by the bees flapping their wings to evaporate water they take into the hives. As temperatures rise above 100 degrees, the bees use more water. Research has shown that bee colonies die within 24 hours when temperatures are over 100 degrees and no water is available.

SCALF FUNERAL CONDUCTED

Among relatives attending the funeral were Rush Scalf, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Webb, Miss Lucy Scalf, all of Lincoln Park, Mich., Mr. and Mrs. Roland Scalf, Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Scalf, Mrs. James Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Carada Terry, all of Prestonsburg, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Thompson, Mrs. Goldie Lewis, Mrs. Wibby Adkins, Mrs. Georgia Collins, Mrs. Hassell Collins, Mrs. Tom Collins, Mrs. Stella Stratton, all of Stanville.

Milk, Eggs Plentiful
At Floyd-Co. Markets

Milk, eggs and broiler-fryers will be plentiful at Floyd county food markets during May, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

These three foods, along with cottage cheese, canned peaches, margarine and vegetable shortening, are listed as wise buys for food stamp coupon recipients in USDA's food guide for May.

Other good buys in May will be wheat, flour, rolled oats, green cabbage, potatoes and spring vegetables.

The foods listed in the monthly food guide—a special service for foodstamps in food stamp project areas—are particularly recommended for food stamp coupon recipients to help them stretch their food buying power.

USDA food coupon users and other budget-minded shoppers will find a list of the May "wise buys" posted at most grocery stores in Floyd county, to help them when shopping.

NATURE TRAILS

By RUFUS M. REED

CONSERVATION AND NATURE

I can remember back before we had any game laws. I've often seen hunters coming from the woods with their breech-loading shotguns and "toting" on their backs a sack-load of squirrels. I've seen men carry in as many as fifty at one time. Sometimes men would take the squirrels and peddle them around the coal camps. Luckily we got some laws to regulate the slaughter of the squirrels, and yet there are some regions where they can never make a come-back. Our squirrels are the tree-planters of nature, and when they are all killed off, the forests soon begin to decline. They dig down and hide thousands of nuts every fall and most of these sprout up to make new trees.

Another thing that made our squirrels much scarcer is, the nut-bearing trees on which they depend for food, have nearly all been destroyed. I once knew a large land company that sent men into their forest, with orders to deaden all the beech timber, so as to give the other trees a better chance. Too late these men realized this was an unwise thing to do. It destroyed the source of food supply for squirrels, grouse and many other kinds of wildlife.

Nature is delicately woven and balanced together, with all things tied together like links in a chain, and when we destroy one kind of life, we break some of nature's links and endanger other kinds of life.

Nature has ever been man's best friend and ally. She has been his keeper, his helper, his healer, the source of his food supply, but man has not been a friend to nature. He has destroyed her creatures, broken her chains, has taken out of her reserve bank of natural resources and put nothing back.

Let's take our wild ginseng. What a friend and helper this beautiful wild plant has been to our forefathers. It helped them over many a barren period, after their crops were laid by and their larders were empty. When I was a lad some fifty-odd years ago, I often went to the woods to help the crews of root-diggers dig the wild ginseng and the yellow root (golden seal).

It was a great adventure for me to go into the deep woods with the old, seasoned root-diggers, to hunt for the ginseng. We had just laid by our crops and were short of rations. We could take the ginseng roots to the store and swap them to flour, bacon, lard, coffee, sugar and other household necessities.

Ginseng was our friend in those days, but we showed it little mercy. Many times when we'd be searching through the woods, we'd find a big patch of ginseng, perhaps a dozen large four-prongs, and clustered around these were maybe from 50 to 100 plants of three-prongs, two-prongs and the tiny three-leaves. What a find that was! We root-diggers never looked ahead to the conservation of the ginseng that meant bread and meat to us in those days. We'd pitch in and dig the whole patch, leaving not a single plant. Often the old trained sangers would dig as much as two pounds of "green sang" in one day. They would take it and dry it in the sun, and then trade it at the country store for badly needed necessities.

As time passed, we saw the ginseng growing scarcer and scarcer. Some men made a living in those days by digging the ginseng and yellow root—and others, I venture to say that if one should search through the woods of West Virginia or Kentucky one would find now, he would scarcely be rewarded with more than one dozen plants of wild ginseng. It is nearly all gone from our hills, due to a lack of conservation.

Many of our most beautiful wild flowers have suffered a like fate at the hands of greedy root-diggers. Take our beautiful lady slippers, which used to be abundant. One has to search through many miles of woods now to find a golden yellow or a pink lady's slipper. They have been almost completely wiped out by the root-diggers, and for a few paltry dollars, our most beautiful wild flowers have been destroyed.

I have painted a dark picture of our wilful and wholesale destruction of our natural resources. But it is high time for us to wake up! We are beginning to wake up but in many cases, the awakening has come too late! We have some good conservation laws on our books but we need more. We need laws to stop the pollution of our streams by acids and wastes. We need more and better laws to regulate the removal of timber from our mountain slopes. We need laws requiring the transplanting of two trees for every one cut and removed from the forest. We need laws requiring nut-bearing trees left for our wildlife.

We need more and better laws to regulate the conservation of our soil and water. Too many of our old hillsides have been cleared and left to the mercy of the elements. It doesn't take the heavy rains long to fill an old barren hillside with unsightly gullies and to transport its soil down into the streams.

Reforestation should be required in all mountain regions, and all cleared land left to the mercies of the winds and winter rains should at once be covered with trees. We need reforestation on a wide scale if we are to save our mountain lands from ruin and prevent disastrous floods.

We also need more forest preserves set aside, for the protection of our game and other wildlife, the preservation of our birds, and the conservation of our soil and water. Some time in the not too distant future, we are going to be faced with a serious water shortage, despite the floods we are having. The water all runs off much too rapidly now, and our mountain streams soon become bone dry in the hot suns of summer. This is because the trees have been removed and the forest floor dries out too quickly. Some day our rivers will run dry, choked up by debris, sediment and waste. Our streams are going to become the graveyards of our wanton wastefulness and lack of conservation. Nature is our best friend and helper when we respect her laws and work in harmony with them. But if we outrage nature, she also becomes our worst destroyer. Perhaps we also need to put on a great conservation campaign through the press, schools, radio and TV, to educate the public to the crying need of conservation in all departments of nature, if we are to thrive in the future.

INTERFERENCE IS DEPLORED

Extra-Curricular Days In Schools Under Study; Lower Rating Is Threat

A new standard may be used by the State Board of Education in its special session at Frankfort May 2 for accreditation of public schools.

Wendell P. Butler, state superintendent of public instruction, said that for the first time accreditation is being considered as a weapon against extra-curricular interference with the classroom. Too many unnecessary outside activities would lower a school's rating.

"A good way to correct abuses is to tie them in with accreditation," Butler said. "The time has come to provide leadership in this matter."

Both the State Board of Education and the Commission on Public Education in their last regular meetings discussed with concern the growing problem of extra-curricular activities. The State Board directed that a letter be sent to superintendents asking local educational leadership for suggestions at the state level.

Fund-raising operations have been the focus of the Board's worry and athletics on school nights the Commission's chief concern. And such other events as senior, 4-H, FFA and Home-makers "days," the Kentucky Youth Assembly and other activities not directly connected with schools have entered discussions.

The two groups may meet in joint session next month to discuss a solution.

Superintendent Butler believes a law to abolish all interferences with school studies would not be feasible. He does favor a voluntary solution worked out on the local level with the cooperation of local educational leadership.

"Many schools are overdoing extra-curricular activities," Butler pointed out. "Yet some are not doing enough. The situation is not always clear-cut."

Now accreditation depends on factors ranging from teacher experience to adequacy of libraries. High school ratings range downward from "Comprehensive," meaning good courses in both academic and vocational areas, to "standard," then "provisional" and finally "emergency." An emergency school may indicate not only curriculum inadequacies but also low enrollment.

Elementary schools are rated either standard or provisional.

In the special session May 2, some 500 high schools and 900 elementary schools with at least eight teachers are to be accredited.

100 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky

By JOE JORDAN
(Kentucky Civil War Commission)

One hundred years ago this week a list was published of soldiers who had died in military hospitals in Louisville, and the causes of the deaths. While there were a few more than 100 names in the list, only the first 100 were counted, so that each case would represent one percentage point. Of these 100 deaths, only four were attributed to gunshot wounds.

Typhoid fever was the leading killer, responsible for 38 per cent of the deaths. Pneumonia was next at 20 per cent, and chronic diarrhea was third at 11 per cent. The other causes, some of them accounting for only one or two deaths, and none of them as many as 10, were: continued fever, congestive fever, remittent fever, smallpox, variola, rubeola, catarrh, bronchitis, hepatitis, debility, erysipelas and consumption. If battlefield deaths had been added to these deaths in hospitals, of course the percentage due to gunshot wounds would have increased.

A Confederate soldier, one A. Kyle of the 18th Louisiana Infantry Regiment, had been wounded in the Battle of Shiloh and, as a prisoner of war, was being taken on a river steamer to Louisville for treatment in a hospital. He died on the way. The boat stopped at Owensboro, where his body was put ashore for burial.

"A meeting was called by the Southern citizens of the town, and preparations made for a suitable burial," according to the Southern Shield, a newspaper published at Owensboro. "Long before the appointed time our streets were thronged with people from all sections of the county who had come to witness the solemn ceremony." It said between 1,000 and 1,500 attended funeral services at an Owensboro church, and the minister made an "eloquent" address. The coffin was covered with a Confederate flag.

"After the exercises at the church were concluded," the story said, "the procession repaired to the cemetery where they deposited the remains of the brave soldier who died while nobly battling in defence of his country and his country's cause."

The Louisville Journal reprinted the Southern Shield story and said: "The comments of the Owensboro paper explain and go far to justify the recently promulgated order forbidding the burial of the rebel dead in our state."

The Paris Citizen reported that

Alleged Hazard Robbers Moved To Fayette County For Security Reasons

Lexington, Ky., April 20—Three men accused of robbing a hazard doctor and pistol-whipping his wife have been brought to Fayette County Jail for security reasons.

Hazard Policeman Sam Luttrell said several strange cars were seen passing the Hazard Jail Thursday. He indicated the men were transferred by Hazard and State Police to ensure their safety.

Police Chief Bud Luttrell said a fingerprint check by State Police at Frankfort established Thursday that a man who gave his name as Dale O'Connell, Tampa, Fla., was Roy Gambriel, no address given.

The other two were listed as Cecil Nichols, Lexington, and Russell Reid Gotherman, Hamilton, Ohio. Chief Luttrell said Gotherman told him he was on parole from a London, Ohio, penitentiary on charges of armed robbery and second-degree murder.

The three are accused of robbing Dr. L. H. Wagers of $1,300 Tuesday night, after tying up the doctor and a neighbor, also of later slugging Wagers' wife when she returned from a church meeting. They were captured at a roadblock shortly afterward Tuesday night and held for the May term of Perry Circuit Court.

McKenzie Bros. Get 40 and 30 Barrel Wells On Lease Near Red Bush

(Licking Valley Courier)

Manford McKenzie, of Detroit, and his brother, Herbert McKenzie, of Florida and West Liberty, now have two good-producing oil wells on pump on leases they hold near Red Bush in Johnson county. One well is producing about 30 barrels daily and the other approximately 40 barrels. One is on the farm of Freeman Salyers and the other on the farm of Orville Ferguson, near Red Bush, comprising a lease of 185 acres.

One of the wells was drilled in three weeks ago and 'fracked' two weeks ago, and put on pump Sunday. The other had been drilled in December. Both are in a 40-foot strata of Wier.

McKenzies say they plan to drill about ten more wells on their leases.

STATE EDUCATION GAINS DOCUMENTED BY REPORT

Frankfort, May 1. (Spl.)—Kentucky's gains in education are documented in the National Education Association Research Report, "Rankings of the States, 1962," which ranks the 50 states in 74 categories.

The extensive research was conducted by N. E. A. in response to numerous inquiries from over the country on how the schools of one state compare with others in such important areas as taxation, enrollment and attendance, teacher preparation and salaries, revenues and expenditures, length of school term, school construction and other related comparisons.

Kentucky, which for so many years before the Foundation Program was at or near the bottom in so many categories, now ranks near the average in many and even higher than the national average in others.

Among the significant favorable comparisons reported, Kentucky ranked seventh in the nation in 1960 in per cent of funds (38.1) allocated to public education from total revenue of state and local governments. In this, Kentucky is well above the national average of 33.9 per cent, which ranges from 24.9 in Massachusetts to 44.2 in Utah.

The Bluegrass State now stands 16th in per cent of increase (70) in current expenditures per pupil in average daily attendance since 1952. Again in this, Kentucky is above the national average of 69.5 per cent. By comparison, during the same period Mississippi reached the highest position with 129.8 per cent while New Mexico made the least gain with 38.5 per cent.

Naturally, teacher education standards and certification requirements vary from state to state. Not all states require elementary teachers to have degrees. However, four years of college or a degree is now considered the minimum. Since 1960 Kentucky has required a four-year degree for elementary certification. Practical advantages in having this high standard are revealed in the fact that in 1960-61, 63 per cent of Kentucky elementary teachers had at least four years of college preparation. (This year over 80 per cent of 26,000 elementary and high school teachers and school administrators in the state have the bachelor's or master's degree or higher.) Oklahoma, with 99.7 per cent, is at the top in training of its teachers; and South Dakota, with 22.6 per cent, is at the bottom among 36 states reporting teacher-preparation data to N. E. A.

Kentucky pupils now are receiving more individual attention in classroom instruction. The average number of students per classroom teacher in 1961-62 is 26.3 in public elementary and secondary schools, almost exactly that of the national average of 25.7 and placing Kentucky 30th in this ranking.

Kentucky teachers' salaries have been on the rise since the adoption of the Foundation Program. With more revenue from the sales tax, last year Kentucky ranked first in the nation in per cent of increase in teacher salaries. Kentucky now ranks eighth (77.6 per cent) in increase of salaries for instructional staffs over the past decade.

Kentucky is still low (45th) in average salary ($4,125) of classroom teachers in the current school year compared with the national median of $5,527. The State average salary for instructional personnel of all kinds is $4,250 compared with $5,716 nationally.

In a nationwide comparison of average educational qualifications of elementary teachers, Kentucky has improved greatly but still ranks 42nd out of 50 states. With respect to the qualifications of high school teachers, Kentucky ranks somewhat higher—2nd out of 50—with only 4.1 per cent holding less than standard certificates.

According to the latest report available on school terms (1957-58), Kentucky ranks 44th in average length of the school year (172.6 days), compared with the national average of 177.6 days. Missouri had the longest school year, 182.1 days. Arizona and Mississippi the shortest of only 170 days.

In the latest reported national rankings (1957-58), 89.1 per cent of Kentucky elementary and secondary pupils were enrolled in public schools—26th-highest rating in this category—leaving only 10.9 per cent in private and parochial schools—25th highest in the non-public schools.

During 1960 Kentucky ranked 30th in the nation in revenue for public schools in relation to personal income. The national median is 3.7 per cent and Kentucky's percentage was 3.6.

Expenditures in excess of revenues for capital outlay have resulted in varying amounts of indebtedness for most of the states. At the end of the 1960 fiscal year, Kentucky was 28th among the 50 states with a full faith and credit per capita debt of $21.72. The N. E. A. Report shows Kentucky to be far below the national average of 737.58 and far below the highest, Delaware's 6413.76.

The report of state and local governmental expenditures for all public education in 1960 shows that Kentucky ranked 29th with 31.7 per cent of governmental expenditures. This is slightly higher than the national average (30.7). Massachusetts was lowest at 22.1 per cent and Utah highest at 41.1 per cent.

In per capita expenditures of both state and local governments for all public education, Kentucky was 50th in 1960 with 670, compared with the national average of $105 and the high of $171.99 (Wyoming).

In per capita expenditures by state governments only for all public education, Kentucky ranked 39th with the State spending $37.28 per capita. The average expenditure for all states was $49.60.

The 1960 study also showed Kentucky's per capita governmental expenditures for all purposes was $133.69, with Kentucky again 39th among the 50 states.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Ty Martin, who died Feb. 1, 1960:

Another birthday has come, A precious one from me has gone, A voice I loved is stilled, A place is vacant in my home Which never can be filled. Just when his life was bright and gay, He was called from this world of sorrow To go home to eternal rest. In my heart his memory lingers, always true; There's no day or night that I don't think of you. But until we reach that City where grief is all consoled, We will never know the joy he has found beyond the sunset gold. Sadly missed by his wife and son.

MRS. TY MARTIN

PIONEER KENTUCKY EXPLORER Dr. Thomas Walker was the first white man to build a house in Kentucky. The Virginia surveyor and physician led a land company expedition through Cumberland Gap 20 years ahead of Daniel Boone. He and his followers cleared land near Barboursville in the Cumberland Mountains and erected a one-room log cabin as the base for their exploration in 1750. Today this replica of that cabin is the feature attraction of Dr. Thomas Walker State Park on the site overlooking the winding Cumberland River. Walker himself named the mountains and river for the Duke of Cumberland, son of King George II of England. The 12-acre park situated in the foothills of the Cumberland Mountains also contains an unusual stone marker designating the spot where the Walker party first made camp. Excellent picnic facilities and a shelter house are available at no admission charge to park visitors. The log house is open daily from 8 to 5:30.
