Allen Lions Receive Charter from Moore; Williams Is President

District Governor Ray G. Moore of the Lions clubs presented a charter to the Allen Lions Club, Saturday evening at the MAY Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park. James L. Williams, recently-elected president of the new service organization, received the charter for his club.

Tension, bred of bitterness, violence and fear, gripped all sections of this county this week where small coal mines are operating after two dynamitings, a night battle with rifles and the wounding of one man had taken place.

Latest violence in the weeks-long series of disturbances was the wounding Tuesday night at his East McDowell home of Calloway Page, aged about 50, owner of a truck-mine operation.

The preceding night, two dynamite blasts were set off on the hill above the home of B. F. Reed, at Drift, and there ensued a gun battle in which an estimated 300 shots were fired without known casualty.

No warrants had been issued in either case as of Wednesday noon. Page, who told Sheriff Henry C. Hale he had not operated his mine since the picketing began eight weeks ago, was shot in the right leg, between the ankle and knee, the bullet shattering the bone. He was first taken to the Beaver Valley hospital at Martin, later to a Lexington hospital.

State Police reported her Wednesday morning that the shooting into the Page home on Frazier Creek occurred around 9:30 p.m. Their investigation disclosed that seven bullets struck the home.

Page and that six others were fired in the yard. Twelve bullets hit the home of Wade Frazier, a neighbor. Officers found 30 empty cartridge cases at the scene. Of these, they said, 12 were .44 specials, two were 9mm. and some were .30-.30s.

The report said the Page home was fired upon from the nearby hill and from three different positions. Page told Sheriff Hale that he, his wife, a daughter and their infant grandchild were in the house at the time of the shooting. He said they turned off all lights and that after that all they could do was wait for the firing to cease. He lay wounded through the night without medical attention. Mrs. Page reported the shooting, soon after daybreak, and her husband was taken to the Martin hospital.

BANK NAMES FLOYD MAN

Former Representative Voices Faith In Area; Developments Are Cited

Jerry Fonce Howell, Price businessman and former State Representative from this county, is executive vice-president and cashier of the new Citizens Bank which opened for business at Jackson last Saturday.

The bank was chartered earlier this year by Jackson businessmen. It was capitalized at $100,000 with a surplus of $100,000.

Other officers of the bank are Judge Ervine Turner, Jackson, president; Thoms Eversole, Booneville, assistant cashier; and Green Rose and Dr. F. C. Lewis, both of Jackson, vice-presidents.

Howell cited the "anticipated growth" of Breathitt county as the reason the bank was started by businessmen. He noted a wood research center is to be built at the University of Kentucky's Quicksand station outside Jackson; the town is getting a new district highway building; and that the proposed Mountain Parkway is expected to develop new business for Breathitt county.

"These are just some of the things that should make this area grow," he added.

Members of the board of directors also include Mrs. Marie R. Turner, superintendent of the Breathitt county school system, and Jeff D. Howell, Jackson businessman, who is a brother of Jerry Fonce Howell. The bank opened in a building formerly occupied by the Harris Bank, which closed during the depression. The building has been modeled.

This Town-- That World

It's Thanksgiving Day, in the mornin', and I'm duly thankful. But don't pin me down. I know there are so many things we all should be thankful, eternally thankful, for; but when trouble looms in every direction you look and when folks about you are unhappy and express their dread of things to come, it becomes hard indeed to rattle off, with wonted glibness, all your blessings.

Blessings we do have, many of them, even if they are hard to sort out of the mess we've made of things. I suppose the best way to count them at times such as this is simply to think what life would be like if we were deprived of what we have.

COUNT YOUR BLESSIN'S

To Mrs. D. B. Harris, a former Floyd countian now residing on Route 2, Patriot, Ohio, we are indebted for the following, which may be the only bit of brightness we'll be able to drum up this week:

Women today, whose most difficult washday chore may be getting the soap carton open, can get some idea of how far things have improved since great-grandma's day from the following item out of the past.

It's an authentic Kentucky "receipt," in its original spelling, for washing clothes, contributed by a reader to the Colorado Interstate Gas Company magazine:

1. bid a fire in back yard to heat kettle of rain water.
 2. set tubs so smoke won't blow in eyes if wind is per.
 3. shave one hole cake soap in bilin water.
 4. sort things, make three piles, one pile white, one pile cullord, one pile work britches and rags.
 5. stir flour in cold water to smooth then thin down with bilin water.
 6. rub dirty spots on board, scrub hard, then ble. rub cullord but don't bile--just rench and starch.
 7. take white things out of kettle with broom stick handle then rench, blew and starch.
 8. hang old rags on fence.

MAY SLAYING CASE RESET

Three Convicted Men Meted Pen Sentences; Four Bonds Forfeited

Because of the strong possibility that Thanksgiving would have broken into the hearing of the case, the trial of Deputy Sheriffs Troy Mullins and Marion Martin, charged with the slaying of Ex-Magistrate John May, was continued Monday till next Monday, November 26.

Since the present criminal term convened November 12, three men have been convicted and given two-year pen terms each. The first to be convicted, George Sweeney, entered a plea of guilty to child desertion. Hershell Shepherd, accused of child desertion, and Joe Martin, charged with shooting and wounding, lodged against Victoria Collins, was dismissed. Commonwealth's Attorney Conley noted that the prosecuting witness failed to appear and that "defendant was justified in taking the action." It was said that Mrs. Collins fired on a group of men who were throwing rocks at her house after they had been refused admittance.

A severance was granted in the case of Amos Lee Duncan and Denver Coburn, who were jointly charged with breaking and entering. The Commonwealth elected to bring Duncan to trial first, and the hearing was set for November 27. Bonds forfeited:

Harrison Reed, accused of breaking and entering, $2,000 bond; Davis B. Mullette and Willie Stone, each charged with child desertion, $1,000 each.

REED URGES USE DENIAL

School Facilities Open To All Parties, Clark Notes After Request

B. F. Reed, of Drift, this week lodged with members of the Floyd County Board of Education a strong protest against the Board's policy of permitting the use of school property by groups who, he alleged, are using the property for the use of planning violence.

But the Board of Education apparently has no idea at this time of acceding to the protest. Said County Superintendent Charles Clark:

"I am sure the present board (See Story No. 5, Page 6)

BIDS OF CONTRACTORS TO BE OPENED DEC. 4

THEATRE PLAN AT PARK HERE IS RELEASED

Paul Green To Write Drama On Mrs. Wiley; Park Improvements Set

Contractors' bids on the construction of an amphitheatre for the presentation at Jenny Wiley State Park of a drama written around the pioneer figure whose name the park bears will be opened at Frankfort, December 4, it was said here this week.

The amphitheatre, which will be built in the head of a cove in the vicinity of the park boat dock, will seat 800 persons. The site, selected months ago, is calculated to provide a woodland setting for the outdoor drama.

Paul Green, Pulitzer Prize-winning North Carolina dramatist, has already begun the writing of the drama. Central figure in the play will be Jenny Wiley.

Amphitheatre construction is expected to be completed by next spring, it was said.

Besides the outdoor drama presentation, which is calculated to attract thousands to the county and area, other improvements at the park are designed to make the spot a mecca to vacationists. Marvin Music, of Prestonsburg, member of the Kentucky Park Commission, said Wednesday that six miles of woodland hiking trails are now in process of being cut and readied for the coming season. Horseback riding will be added to the recreational program there next spring. A location for stables will be made next week.

Robert Wise, fulltime recreation director, arrived recently at the park, and the program which he will develop will be similar to that which has been found so interesting at Kenlake and other state lodges and parks. Shuffleboard, table tennis, horseshoes, a wide variety of children's games, square dancing, folk dancing and nature study will be provided to interest visitors of all age groups.

Mr. Music said the proposal made by the Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources to provide cover for fish in Dewey Lake by sinking old car bodies and trees or brush in the impoundment has already been given Department of Parks approval. Permission must also be granted by the U. S. Corps of Engineers before this work is undertaken, however.

SUIT ASSAILS STRIP-MINING

Federal Court To Hear Case from Letcher-Co.; Overrules Dismiss Move

A suit which may have great effect on the strip-mining industry in Kentucky has been cleared for trial in U. S. district court.

Trial of the case became certain recently when U. S. District Judge Mac Swinford overruled a motion to dismiss it.

The court action involves a Pike county property-owner, Elbert Roberts, of Marrowbone Creek, who claims the Twin Fork Coal Company is strip-mining coal in his land against his wishes. The stripping operation is being done under Twin Fork's lease from the Big Sandy Corporation. Title to the coal goes back to an old Northern Coal & Coke Company deed.

Roberts' attorneys, Harry M. Caull, of Whitesburg, and Grant Knuckles, Pineville, contend strip-mining of the coal under the old Northern Coal & Coke deed is a violation of the U. S. Constitutional provision that no person shall be deprived of property without due compensation. The petition argues that, although the deeds give the holder of mineral right broad powers, they are designed to reserve something of value to the holder of the surface rights. That something, the petition continues, is the surface land, and, since strip mining destroys what is reserved by the land-owner, the reservation is nullified and the property is taken without due compensation.

PICKETS ASK WAGE SCALE

Union Contract Terms Compliance Is Demand; UMW Desertion Charged

Lee Howell, leader of mine picketing activities in this county, gave positive and emphatic answer here Tuesday afternoon to the question, "What do you and the men want?"

"We want, and intend to get before they start operating again, the union contract wage scale, $24.25 a shift, $200 vacation pay and the 40 cents per ton paid into the welfare fund," the East McDowell man said. "That," he added, "is exactly the contract the operators signed. But when the men started back to work they said they couldn't pay the scale. In fact, after the men went back to work after they signed the contract, the operators cut the men 10 cents below what they had been getting."

A Times representative who interviewed Howell explained that most people not connected directly with the coal mining industry do not understand the situation and what he and those who are the picket line want. After he had stated the terms on which agreement could be reached he said:

"If anybody wants to know where we stand, we have big mass meetings and they're as open as a boot-jack. Anybody can come to them—B. F. Reed or anybody else. I don't care who hears what I have to say."

Howell said the United Mine Workers of America are having nothing to do with him and the men associated with him. No help has come from the U.M.W.A., and he apparently expects none.

He spoke of the hospital cards of many miners having been picked up. "The union deserted us," he said.

Discussing the situation further, Howell said that three or four years ago, when mining on a tonnage basis was started, the per ton rate was so high that some men made as much as $35 a shift. "But," he said, "when they got them all signed up, they cut off the $14.25 portal-to-portal pay and the men wound up making about $5 a day."

On Labor Day of this year, he said, he was paid $24.83 for five shifts of work, one of which was a double shift. At the contract scale, he figured, he should have been paid about $145.

As he discussed the alleged desertion by the U.M.W.A. of the small-mine workers Howell was asked if there is a possibility that these workers may be organized under another union.

"There is," he said, "and the new union would be a lot tougher than the one they've got."

Howell accused B. F. Reed and George E. Evans, big purchasers of truck-mine coal, of cutting the price per ton paid to the "little operator" so low that they could not pay their employees a decent wage.

AFTERMATH OF RECEDING WATER . . . Placid and beautiful Dewey Lake, fringed with a lakeside road and the variegated hues of deciduous trees, yields to desolation, with the impoundment almost drained of its water. This scene of Brandy Keg Cove, near May Lodge, reveals nothing of its former attractions except the ducks which gather and feed in the muddy water of residual pools. These ducks were once wild, or their forebears were, but they've become so tame they are staying on at the lake when it's no longer a lake. Release of the water of Dewey Lake, impounded since 1949, was requested by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources to rid it of rough fish. The lake will be restocked next year.

Howell, Reed Explain Dispute Between Miners and Operators

REED POINTS TO CONTRACT

Operator Leader Says Remedies for Complaints Provided In Agreement

In an effort to ascertain the point of dispute between Floyd coal mine operators and those who have been picketing the operations, The Times this week called on B. F. Reed, of Drift, treasurer of the Turner Elkhorn Mining Company, which is perhaps the biggest single purchaser of truck-mine coal in the county.

Said Mr. Reed:

"There has been a contract signed between the small operators and the United Mine Workers of America. It is the standard contract, the same as that which was signed by other operators.

"There is no reason for any controversy," he added. "If there are complaints, there are remedies in the contract. That contract was negotiated with recognized representatives of District 30."

Reed said that Lee Howell and his group are not recognized representatives, "and we can't carry on negotiations with them. We talk to the recognized representatives of the United Mine Workers."

At the same time Reed posted a reward of $2,500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons guilty of dynamiting at Drift and Garth Hollow.

The Times, in an effort to clarify the confusion existing in the public mind in regard to the desires of opposing forces in the coal field dispute, presents their respective positions as a public service.

SCHOOL DAZE
Remember the good, old days when teacher laid down ironclad rules? Remember how much fun it was to break them? I recall one which forbade any "scholar" to climb "higher than his head," but it didn't work. The boys pointed out that their heads always remained higher than the point to which they climbed.

The following is a partial list of punishments in effect, back in 1948, at an academy in Stokes county, North Carolina, according to The School News, issued by the Floyd County Board of Education:

1. Boys and girls playing together—four lashes.
2. Quarrelling—the same.
3. Playing cards at school—10 lashes.
4. Telling a lie—seven lashes.
5. Swearing—eight lashes.
6. Misbehaving to girls—10.
7. For wearing long fingernails, blotting your copy book, failing to make a bow when leaving school for home or not replying, "Yes, Sir" or "No, sir"... two stripes for each such offense.
8. For playing about the mill or creek was six lashes. But drinking liquor at school got the miscreant only two more.

AND THIS FOR DEAR TEACHER
And the same publication lists this among other rules adopted by a Manhattan elementary school for dear teacher in the good year 1872:
"Any teacher who smokes, uses liquor in any form, frequents pool or public halls, or gets shaved in a barber shop will give good reason to suspect his worth, intentions, integrity and honesty."
Another reads:
"Men teachers may take one evening each week for courting purposes, or two evenings a week if they go to church regularly."

It was said here that Wade Frazer, whose home was hit by a dozen bullets, was not at home Tuesday night. This report said that only his wife and children were inside the house. All escaped injury.

When the two dynamite blasts were set off in the vicinity of the Reed home at Drift Monday night, according to a statement made here by B. F. Reed, two persons were sent to investigate but encountered rifle fire. About 30 minutes later, he said, a "posse" was formed to go up the hill. Then began the heavy exchange of rifle fire.

The statement said David Reed, Paul Borders and John P. Sammons saw what appeared to be three persons disappear over the ridge at Hays Branch of Turkey Creek, which is across the mountain from Left Beaver Creek.

It was the second dynamiting to take place in the vicinity of the Reed home. The first was on September 30.

While these and other scattered incidents were occurring in this county pickets continued their movements in Floyd, Perry and Knott. In Perry, a county bridge leading to a truck mine was dynamited. Another blast had utility poles near a mine as the target. Who set off the charges is apparently not known.

Hearing of several cases against persons involved in the mine disturbances in this county was held in quarterly court here, Wednesday morning. Some of the defendants were placed under peace bond. Details of the court action were not available, early Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Ada Scalf Mayo, Age 89, Prestonsburg, Dies At Home Wednesday
Mrs. Ada Scalf Mayo, 89, of Prestonsburg, died at home early Wednesday morning following an illness of several weeks. She had been hospitalized but, her condition improving, she was removed to her home a few days previous to her death.

Mrs. Mayo was a native of Pike county, a daughter of James and Rebecca Scott Scalf. She was married three times. Her first husband was John Riley Nunnery and following his death she was married to Thomas Crum who also preceded her in death. Her third husband, Walker Mayo, died several years ago. She was a member of the Free Will Baptist Church.

Surviving sons and daughters are T. O. Nunnery, of Endicott, Clarence Crum, Stanville, Mrs. Goldie Layne, of Lancer, and Mrs. Alice May McCoy, of Washington Court House, Ohio. She was the mother of the late J. H. Nunnery, Prestonsburg.

Surviving are two brothers and two sisters: William Scalf, of Pikeville, C. C. Scalf, of Justell, Mrs. Lethia Scalf, of Gunlare, and Mrs. Ruth O'Neil, Williamson, West Virginia. Surviving are 19 grandchildren, 34 great-grandchildren and 11 great-great-grandchildren.

Funeral rites will be conducted Friday at 10 a.m. from the Highland Avenue Free Will Baptist Church, the Revs. William Amburgey, Carl Senters and others officiating. Burial will be made in the May cemetery at Cliff under the direction of Floyd Funeral Home.

He asked the delegates to use their influence with the people for continued support of the state sales tax.

"We cannot stand by and see the level of financing education in Kentucky reduced," he declared.

Because of the importance of retaining and increasing the financial situation of schools in the state, Dr. Doran announced that the delegates assembly of KEA has called an executive session for January 4 and 5 in Louisville to adopt a program now being reframed by the planning committee.

The special meeting was necessary, he said, to determine the program to be placed before candidates for state and legislative offices next year.

Dr. Doran also advocated an increase in EKEA membership to gain representation in leadership in KEA.

VAUGHAN INJURED
John Vaughan, 47, of Prestonsburg, was severely injured last Thursday morning when he was caught by a boring machine which he was operating for the Ranier Construction Company on a Pike county project. He suffered pulled muscles in his shoulder, chest and arm and a dislocated hip. He is at the Methodist hospital, Pikeville.

MARTIN FOR STATE SENATOR
Without any solicitation from Senator Martin, we take this means of bringing to the attention of the general public and the Democratic voters of this county the immediate need of having Burnis Martin return to the State Senate to represent the people.

His record in the state senate for the school teachers and the schools, for the establishment of the college in Floyd county and his record in the state senate of having never voted wrong on a labor issue should especially endear him to the Democratic voters of this county.

Senator Martin has had four years experience in the State Senate, would make a strong candidate in the two Democratic counties of Floyd and Knott, and knowing his way in and around Frankfort and the maneuverings of the legislative process, the Democrats should all unite and get behind Senator Martin and return him to the State Senate where he can be of great benefit to the people.

If you want a man you can have confidence in, a man who will stand and fight for the interests of the common, laboring class of people, a man of experience and unquestioned ability, a man who, at the last session of the legislature, was named by a poll of the newspapers as an outstanding Legislator, I urge all Democrats and Republicans alike to get behind Senator Martin and request that he run for re-election.

will not deny the use of school buildings to the unions, and, further, I am certain the board will not deny the facilities to the coal operators, individually or collectively, and neither of those groups must be of the same political party, religious denomination or race as we in order to be granted the privilege."

In his letter to Board Members Ray Howard, Ross Cooley, Bill Blair, John G. Hall and John M. Stumbo, Mr. Reed said, in part: "As a taxpayer of this county and as a taxpayer who does not ask for special favors and has no intention of so doing, I urge you to help put to a stop the kind of destruction that is taking place in Floyd county these past eight weeks. Much of it is made possible by the use of the facilities of the Floyd County Board of Education."

Superintendent Clark commented:

"The policy of the Floyd County Board of Education regarding the use of school property for citizen meetings is long standing, and it is this:

"Any citizen group may use the facilities as long as they assume responsibility for any damage to the property and restore the rooms to the condition they found them in. We do not presume to police the meetings, nor do we deny the use of the property to any group because we do not agree with their politics, their religion or their color."

Chairman Ray Howard said Wednesday that he expects this issue to be discussed further, possibly at the December board meeting.

WATER-POWERED MILLS OF AREA BUILT EARLY BY FIRST SETTLERS

The Leslie grist and saw mill, powered by the diverted waters of Johns Creek in a manner similar to that of the Combs mill at Dwarf on Troublesome Creek, served a wide area for over half a century. This picture was taken in the 1890's.

BY HENRY P. SCALF

The early pioneers of Eastern Kentucky, faced with the necessity of crushing corn into meal, utilized many devices, chief of which was a variation of an Indian contrivance.

A two- or three-foot segment of a hollow log was cleaned out, mounted on a heavy, flat stone or block of wood and a long "sweep," similar to that used to lift water from a well, was erected over it. A long rope, attached to the balanced sweep, held a heavy weight. The pioneer pulled the rope, the weight descended into the hollowed-out section of log and pounded corn into an acceptable meal.

Many ground corn or wheat by other devices, sometimes merely crushing it with rude pestles and sifting out the finer substances for food. There were no mills, horse-drawn or water-driven, in Eastern Kentucky until the end of the first decade of the last century.

Favorite type was the water mill, built over some rushing mountain stream which drove a crude wooden turbine. Two mill stones, placed one over the other, crushed corn into meal or wheat into flour. Quality was regulated somewhat by adjusting the space between the stones by a simple lifting mechanism.

Often a well-to-do farmer, living far from a stream with enough water, would patiently erect a horse mill. This required a heavy stone, weighing a quarter of a ton, and a much smaller one that revolved as a horse drew a long pole around in a circle much as a cane mill operates to produce sorghum. These stones were chiseled out by hand from sandstone. Water-mill stones were made by skilled masons from specially quarried stone, preferably from what was known as "hall grit."

This type of stone was abundant in the Big Sandy valley near the Breaks, not far from the present Elkhorn City. Many stones were quarried by early settlers there and the place is still known as Mill Point.

It took the lapse of three quarters of a century to make the number of water mills in this section great enough so that farmers could have corn or wheat milled without long trips. The first water mill in middle Tennessee on the Cumberland River was of such importance that historians accorded it recognition as an event comparable to Indian massacres or statewide elections.

The first water mill in Eastern Kentucky, built by John Cox on Blackwater Creek near the present Hazel Green, was erected about 1810 under circumstances of extreme difficulty, the legend of how it was accomplished coming down to the present embellished with elaborate details.

Cox, a descendant of an old colonial family that had survived Indian war and massacre, with his wife, Judith Sexton, migrated across the mountains to Eastern Kentucky in 1800 and settled on Blackwater Creek near the present Hazel Green. The region was a vast sylvan wilderness.

He had two slaves, London and Barney, his father had given him in Virginia and they helped with the herculean labor of building cabins, barns, fencing and clearing the forest. One of their chores was the grinding of corn into meal on a crude pestle described in the beginning of this article. John Cox, watching the slow and inefficient production of meal and flour, decided to install a water mill like his people had back in Grayson county, Virginia.

He discussed the project with his brothers, James Robertson and Solomon Cox, who had settled nearby and it was decided that John and the two slaves would travel to the Breaks section of the Russell Fork River and quarry millstones from "hall grit." Laden with tools and provisions for a long trip the three started on the long and arduous journey.

Two days later they were in the rugged Cumberlands not far from the present Elkhorn City and were beginning the slow task of quarrying the stones. When the stones took form it was decided to begin the journey back west. Cox and the two slaves hoisted a stone on each of the horses, tied them thoroughly and moved out on the trail, leading the animals.

Difficulties met them at every turn of the trail or creek crossing. The horses stumbled with the great burdens or dragged the stones off against the side of a tree. Time and again Cox and his two Negro slaves reloaded the partially finished stones onto the backs of the animals. The end of the day came and they found they had made scarcely any progress on the trip home. They sat down on the trail, defeat written on their faces.

They camped that night only a few miles from Mill Point but the next morning they were up early with John Cox swinging an ax on nearby saplings. He constructed a crude axle, mounted the two stones as wheels and hitched a horse to what was probably the most un-usual cart to ever traverse the wilderness. The two slaves went in front of the slow moving vehicle, cutting away bushes and trees, moving the larger stones and digging out a track for the stone wheels to follow.

It was slow and difficult work but the party made progress, and finally, after days through an almost uncharted wilderness, they arrived back in the present Wolfe county.

The stones were finished with the aid of James Robertson and Solomon Cox and a mill dam was built across Blackwater Creek. A few more days of labor, in which their genius for improvisation was taxed to the utmost, a water "head" was slowly turned against the wooden turbine and meal poured from the hopper. It was a festive day for the

PRE-SEASON TOURNAMENT

The annual Floyd county pre-season basketball tournament will open play in the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse next Wednesday night at 7 o'clock.

In the first game, host Prestonsburg will meet the Betsy Layne Bob Cats. In the second game of the evening, Wayland and McDowell will tangle for the first time this season.

Thursday's opening game has Garrett matched against Wheelwright in the 7 p.m. game, and in the final of the first round Maytown squares off against Martin.

Tommy Boyd's Wayland Wasps are the defending champs. Maytown was runner-up last season.

Only Martin and Maytown have met prior to tournament play. Martin won, 63-57, on Maytown's floor last Friday night.

There is no clear-cut favorite this season as any one of six teams could win the affair. Prestonsburg, delayed by football, has been practicing only three weeks and Betsy Layne has not played up to par, except in one game when they downed Garrett, 63-59.

Goebel Ritter, Whitesburg athletic director, and Nelson Allen, Bellefonte grade school principal, will officiate, and Frank Heinze and Johnny Ellis, of Prestonsburg, will serve as timekeeper and scorekeeper, respectively.

The Eastern Kentucky Mountain Conference will hold its annual fall conference at Hazard Monday at 6 p.m. The official football championship will be awarded to Hazard and the runner-up honor to Whitesburg. The all-league football team will be selected and other matters pertaining to the four-sport conference will be discussed.

Wayland will celebrate homecoming Saturday night, when Denzil Halbert's Martin Purple Flash move to battle the Wasps. This game will be preceded by an oldtimers' game featuring former Wayland cage stars.

NATURE TRAILS

By RUFUS M. REED

When Teddy Roosevelt, who was a great naturalist, bolted the Republican party in 1912 to run against William Howard Taft, he chose the lordly and magnificent bull moose as the emblem of his new party. Roosevelt had hunted these powerful beasts and knew them as monarchs of the evergreen forest belt and icy lakes of the Far North. The moose is a strange and fascinating animal to study. Many towns and cities have been named in honor of the moose, lakes, too; Moosehead Lake is in Maine, where moose were once numerous.

Those who have never seen a bull moose in the wilds can have no clear idea of its immense size. A full-grown bull moose measures over nine feet in length, stands from six to eight feet high at the shoulders and weighs over 1,000 pounds! Larger ones have been found that weighed up to 1,800 pounds—almost a ton! A moose is fantastic in shape and looks—a huge beast that has adapted itself to live in sub-zero winters of the north. His body is covered with coarse, brittle hairs, bristling out from the hide. Each hair has a pith of air cells, to insulate the body against the severe cold. His color is dark brown, with a faint tinge of blue on the big nose and lower face. His legs are quite long and slender, his neck, thick and short. With such long legs and short neck, the moose cannot eat grass like an ox, but has to get down on his knees to graze! He is mostly a browser on twigs and leaves and often rides down large saplings to eat the tops. He is also fond of water plants of all kinds and often feeds along streams. He will dive into a lake and stay under water several minutes, fishing out the roots of water lilies, cattails, arrowheads and other aquatic plants. In order to drink, the moose has to wade out until the water is above his knees. He often browses on willows along streams, as he is fond of these.

The moose has a long, overhanging upper lip and huge nostrils that hang down. His sense of smell is exceedingly keen, perhaps as good as that of a grizzly, as he can smell a man or a wolf a mile or more away! He has large "radar" ears like a bat, trained to catch the faintest sound. He moves his ears back and forth constantly, to catch every snap of a twig. He is a hard animal to stalk! His small eyes are the weakest part of his robust anatomy. He carries a long, hanging-down flap of flesh and skin, like a wattle under his neck. In younger moose, this "bell" as it is called, hangs down 36 inches! His long legs give him the appearance of walking on stilts! But his antlers are the most amazing structures found in nature! While the antlers of an elk are round and branched like the limb of a tree, the antlers of a bull moose are great fan-shaped, spreading palms, like those of a gigantic human hand spread out wide, with rows of sharp-pointed fingers all around the palm! These great antlers are six or eight feet wide and weigh over 60 pounds! Armed with such spearlike points, these antlers are a formidable weapon, and a big bull moose can get the best of a powerful grizzly in a fight! While grizzlies attack and kill the younger moose, or the aged ones, they hesitate to attack a large bull moose in his prime.

The moose is the tallest animal in North America and the largest antlered ungulate in the known world! Only the bison is larger but he does not have antlers. A moose sheds his antlers every year, usually in early January. They soon begin to grow out again and by late summer are in their prime. They are covered with fine velvet, which the moose rubs off on the trees, as he makes ready to fight other bull moose!

Moose are now found in the coniferous forests of the north, to the limit of trees, and south to Maine and west to Washington, Idaho and Wyoming. Moose love the broken, hilly and open forests and the sunlit glades around lakes and rivers.

The moose has no teeth in his upper jaws; he takes the food in with his long, raspy tongue and stores it away in the paunch. A moose can rear up on his hind legs and browse off the trees to a height of 20 feet! After he fills his paunch, he lies down in some secluded spot to belch up the food in the form of pellets, which are chewed thoroughly and then passed down to the second stomach for digestion. The moose then is a ruminant, a cud-chewer; he is also an even-toed ungulate; he walks on his toes, two to each hoof, but he also has extra toes, two to each foot, called "dew claws," which come in handy when the moose is wading through swamps.

Many northern natives often hunt for the shed antlers of a moose, but these are seldom found. As soon as they fall off, the rodents, wolves and foxes begin to gnaw on them and soon devour them!

A STRANGE GOOD LUCK CHARM
The Indians of the north always look eagerly when they skin a moose to find the "good-luck hunting charm," or "the little medicine moose," as they call this. Their name for this is peetonong-sons, meaning "the little moose in the big moose's hide." It is a peculiar growth, a cyst of some kind, forming a pocket in the skin, and which stimulates the growth of the skin, teeth, hair and nails. The Indian who is lucky enough to find this "good-luck charm" believes he will always have good moose-hunting forever, and that he will also have the power to call up a big bull moose!

Two huge bull moose often latch into a fight to see which one will be the master of the herd. No quarter is given and they fight until one kills the other! Sometimes the two antagonists get their huge antlers hopelessly interlocked and cannot free them. Then both fighters die of starvation!

Sometimes the cow moose will bear twins, which stay with her for two or three years. The young calf is born with its eyes open and it can stand up and nurse within one hour after birth. The mother cow moose will fight off the fiercest grizzly in defense of her young.

In the fall, the moose's meat is mild, tender and delicious, and a big moose will dress out more meat than a beef steer. During the mating season, the meat takes on a taint that makes it unpalatable. The Yukon Indians depend upon moose for most of their meat supply, and they make birch bark horns to call up the bull moose, so they can kill them.

Wayland Defeats Hindman, 50-49

Wayland, Ky.—Bromley Williams, who scored 20 points, got his most important markers in the final minutes as Wayland's Wasps came from behind to nose out Hindman here Tuesday night, 50-49.

It was a tight game all the way but Wayland led most of the game. However, the Yellow Jackets from Hindman moved into a four point lead within three minutes to go and only some clutch shooting by Williams brought the Wasps from behind. Williams got some help from Phillip Coleman who dropped in two important foul tosses.

Hindman led by two at the first period but Wayland was on top by four at the half and also had a three point edge going into the final period. It was the second win without a defeat for Wayland.

Cox, Lacy, O'Hair, Wills and other pioneer families.

The place where John Cox built his mill became known as Cox's Mill Settlement and Eastern Kentucky's first water mill ground corn, wheat and rye for years. It was there during the Civil War as were the two old slaves, London and Barney. They were growing old and one of their duties was to hold the horse's bridle as backwoods women dismounted. Tying the horse to a nearby fence, the old darkies would carry the "turn" of grain into the mill house and stack it in the long row of other bags awaiting their "turn" to be ground.

John Cox grew old and the area was still economically backward. There wasn't a saw mill in the whole area and lumber was made with a whipsaw, slowly and laboriously by hand. On his death bed he told his family not to go to the labor of whipsawing new lumber and constructing a coffin. His beloved trundle bed would do. He had made it decades before when he was creating an estate from the wilderness.

A trundle bed, a necessary piece of furniture in a crowded mountain home, was a narrow, low bed that could be pushed into a corner or under a larger bed when not in use. John Cox died and the family acceded to his wish. The neighbors laid him out where he had slept so many years. Mrs. Zarilda Wills Day, one of those who viewed the body, recalled time and again in her old age that the old miller lay in his unusual "coffin" as if he were resting from an arduous day of labor. Friends and relatives took the body out to what his now Cox's Mill Graveyard and lowered it into the grave. Wooden beams, split from young trees, were laid across him as he lay in his long sleep in the trundle bed. Filling the grave with earth they hitched oxen to a heavy flat stone that had already been prepared. It was hauled to the site and laid across the grave.

The Cox mill served a vast area in the present Wolfe, Morgan and Powell counties but there was a vast hinterland on the Kentucky River where meal or flour had to be ground Indian fashion. Sam and Felix Combs, grandsons of a pioneer Combs, lived at the present Dwarf on Troublesome Creek. The stream makes a great horseshoe bend here and comes back close to the beginning of the curve with a sharp backbone of a low ridge separating the stream beds. The Combs brothers decided to tunnel through the mountain and let the water of Troublesome Creek operate a mill. The story of their accomplishment, like that of John Cox's return trip from The Breaks, is a never-dying legend.

With crude blasting tools and gunpowder brought in from Virginia they began the task of boring into the hillside. Year after year, with dogged determination, they worked at their task. They farmed in the summer but every day they could spare from their crops they were back in the tunnel, slowly boring through to the other side of troublesome Creek. In the winter the task of blasting and chiseling through the mountain was continued for months. It took them four years to complete the tunnel. When water poured through the 172-foot tunnel settlers came for miles to see what to them was the eighth wonder of the world.

History and legend are obscure as to the date the tunnel was completed. Old-timers always said it started grinding in the "hard summer," the year when it was so cold that crops would not grow. The Hard Summer of the Eastern United States was featured by cold rains, snow in June and heavy frosts in July. Seeds rotted in the ground and settlers lived almost exclusively on a meat diet. The year was 1812, two years after John Cox built his mill on the Blackwater. That date is fixed in history with certainty. Old-timers of the Kentucky River section called it the Hard Summer with good reason.

Here to Tunnel Mill came the early pioneer families, the Combses, Engles, Ritchies, Owensens and Fugates. In a few years the Combs brothers set up a sawmill to produce lumber and not long afterward a carding machine, all powered by the waters of Troublesome Creek as it plunged five to seven feet on its way through the tunnel.

Now a carding machine, invented years before John Cox or the Combs brothers built their mills, was an advance in early technology that relieved wool processors of a most onerous task. John Cox did not set up one but the Combses did. Sheep raisers from Breathitt, Perry, Lee and many other counties took wool to Tunnel Mill.

The most famous carding mill in Eastern Kentucky was erected by James Drake on Swift's Camp Creek in the present Wolfe county, not far below the present county seat of Campton.

J. M. Gevedon, of Grassy Creek and a historian of the region, wrote a few years ago of Drake's factory and of a trip made with his father to the place.

"Not far below the town (Campton) the creek plunges into a gorge where it cascades for a few miles to the floor of the main canyon, then flowing along for several miles it empties into Red River near Sky Bridge," Gevedon wrote in his description of the place. "The sides of this canyon consist of a series of cliffs with gaps and benches, where none but sure-footed animals or human pedestrians dare to tread . . ."

It was there James Drake built his famous carding factory, powered by the waters of Swift's Camp Creek. From miles and miles the settlers of the mountains brought wool to the place where the Drake machine would clean and process it for cloth. The water-powered factory was used extensively up to and through the Civil War and long afterward.

In the middle of the Nineteenth Century water mills were appearing all over Eastern Kentucky, chiefly at the mouth of streams or nearby where the stream plunged swiftly to a lower level. Usually it was necessary to build a dam to "catch a head of water," as the old millers said. When the dam was full, the miller ground corn. A sudden freshet was a bit of good luck for many millers.

Johns Creek is a long stream, thrusting its headwaters back close to the Virginia state line, and in its upper course it plunges swiftly toward its junction with the Big Sandy River. However, by the time the stream is near the mouth of Bent Branch, one of its larger tributaries, the swift waters are tame and placid. Swinging in a great curve, it moves north, turns back abruptly and passes near where it began to flow north, leaving a narrow mountain backbone, as does Troublesome Creek, in between the two sections of the stream.

Nearby lived Pharmer Leslie, son of the pioneer Robert Leslie. Pharmer, who had the distinction of being the first white child born in the present Pike county, owned thousands of acres of the valley, including what is known locally as the "Johns Creek Bend."

Pharmer Leslie may never have heard of Tunnel Mill on Troublesome Creek but he determined to blast a hole through the razor-like mountain of the Johns Creek Bend and use the diverted water for a mill.

While Pharmer Leslie was pondering the task of boring through the mountain, Tom Davis, a Welsh stonemason, came into the Johns Creek country. The year was 1851. Davis and Leslie talked for a long time before attempting the herculean task, but finally, after insistence on Leslie's part, Davis agreed to do the job. They sent to Virginia and brought $900 worth of gunpowder back. That was in itself a large outlay in cash for the times.

Davis went to work but almost immediately became discouraged and quit. The opening he had made in the side of the hill remained a challenge to Leslie until 1853 when he began operations himself with the help of hired farmers. For two years he blasted and bored, wheeling the stones out and dumping them on the side of the hill. The stone pile grew larger, the tunnel moved deeper into the mountain. Leslie timed the last few shots when Johns Creek was low so that he would not be trapped by the water. The task was finished in the late summer of 1855 and in October John Bevins, a nearby farmer-carpenter, erected the mill house.

In the meantime, Leslie had sent a team to The Breaks to quarry stones for his mill and by the time Bevins had completed the mill house the stones, or "burrs" as they were called, were ready to be installed. Absalom Hurt took a wooden bar, turned the waters of Johns Creek onto the wooden turbine. The Leslie mill, famous for many decades, was in use.

Pharmer Leslie was, as the mill exhibited, a man of enterprise and vision. His grandfather, William Robert Leslie, had been buried decades before in a large hollow popular log instead of a coffin made out of lumber for it was scarce in the valley even as late as the 1850's. The mill owner decided to add a sawmill to his installation. Here for decades the diverted waters of the stream powered the grist mill and the sawmill. Many of the old homes of the last part of the Nineteenth Century in the area were built of lumber sawed at Leslie's mill.

One, if not the first mill of any kind in Floyd county, was a horse mill built by the pioneer James S. Layne near the present bridge at Betsy Layne. History and legend do not preserve the date it was built but it was in the first few decades after 1800, probably around 1825. Layne discontinued use of the horse mill and his son, Judge Lindsay Layne, built a mill on Mud Creek, about a mile from Harold.

Old residents testifying in 1901 in a lawsuit between several of the Layne heirs and James Honaker, said that before this mill was built the nearest was at the mouth of Brushy Creek, "about 15 miles away."

The aged Moses S. Layne gave his evidence in 1901 that he knew the mill was erected in either 1841 or 1842. He said that the mill was in operation 18 years.

The contention in the suit between the Laynes and Honaker was over a road that had been closed and Moses S. Layne testified to a bit of history:

"That road existed until the termination of the War Between the States. There was a grist mill by the side of this road owned by father (Lindsay Layne) and I think it remained there about 18 years. There were a good many people and in fact most all of them from Mud and Prater Creeks and along the river attended this mill for it was the only mill in the neighborhood. The nearest one I knew of was at the mouth of Brushy Creek at least 15 miles from that place . . ."

The mill at the mouth of Brushy Creek, referred to by Layne, was a water mill and dam built by the pioneer Samuel James. James was drowned in Johns Creek in 1836, so the mill antedates that date. It stood for decades and was the only one on Johns Creek when Pharmer Leslie blasted through the mountain at Johns Creek Bend.

Family legend preserves the story of discussions between old Samuel James and his much younger wife, Viney Dean James, about the old mill. He owned hundreds of acres of land but the mill was the backbone of their economic security. Samuel, in pondering on the division of his estate, asked his wife if she would want her chief portion of the estate in land or would she rather have a much smaller part of the reality and the water mill. She chose the latter.

After Samuel's untimely death, Viney James became the first, and perhaps last, woman miller of the region. She lived many years after the death of Samuel and only extreme old age forced her to surrender proprietorship of the mill.

The old mills fell victim to modern milling and a few in nearby states are museum pieces, for the enlightenment of the curious tourist. In 1950 when Floyd county was holding its Sesquicentennial Celebration an enterprising "outsider" brought to Prestonsburg corn meal ground on an old water mill in another region. It was neatly packaged in pound bags, and the public bought it up quickly.

Only a few oldsters remember the mill dams, the rushing waters turned through wooden turbines and the dusty interiors of the old millhouses.

What Does God's Law Say— "BETWEEN The Lines?"

Few Christians will deny that the Ten Commandments are God's design for human conduct. Some so-called Christians think they are out-moded.

But how many know what they really mean?

"Thou shalt not steal," for example, obviously forbids robbery, burglary and embezzlement. What many evidently do not realize is that this Commandment also forbids evasion of just debts, bribery to gain political and business advantages, lending money at usurious rates, and other sharp practices which are often dishonestly excused as "smart business."

The Commandments speak only in broad, general terms. Their full meaning can be understood only in the light of the teaching of the New Testament. "I am the Lord, thy God; thou shalt not have strange gods before me," is taken by some to mean only that they must believe in a Supreme Being. Actually, it obliges us to prayer, gratitude, hope and worship, even though these words are not mentioned.

Most Christians agree that The Lord's Day must be kept holy. Yet there is a wide difference of opinion as to how this should be done . . . indeed, there is even some disagreement as to when the Lord's Day should be observed.

When God said "Thou shalt not kill," He was not warning mankind merely against murder due to greed, lust or vengeance. He was telling us plainly that He, Who alone had the power to create human life, was reserving for Himself the right to take it away. And He made no exceptions for deliberate abortion and the so-called "mercy killings" which some Christians seek to justify today.

A wide variance of opinion also prevails as to the meaning of the Commandment: "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." Some apparently think this is a prohibition only against perjury in a courtroom. Actually, it is a warning against lies of all descriptions and all acts of commission and omission which injure the good name and reputation of another.

You hear people say, with smug assurance: "I keep the Commandments—that's enough." And it would indeed be enough if they truly understood what the Commandments require. But we must read "between the lines" if we are rightly to understand God's instructions and to live according to His design. If you want to be sure . . . if you want to refresh your mind on the true and full meaning of God's rules of life . . . write today for our free Pamphlet No. KC-12. It will be sent to you in a plain wrapper, and nobody will call on you.

Done to a turn with kilowatts from seven states

...another way AEP keeps your electric costs low

Bits of electricity that cooked the ham may have traveled across several state boundaries to your electric range.

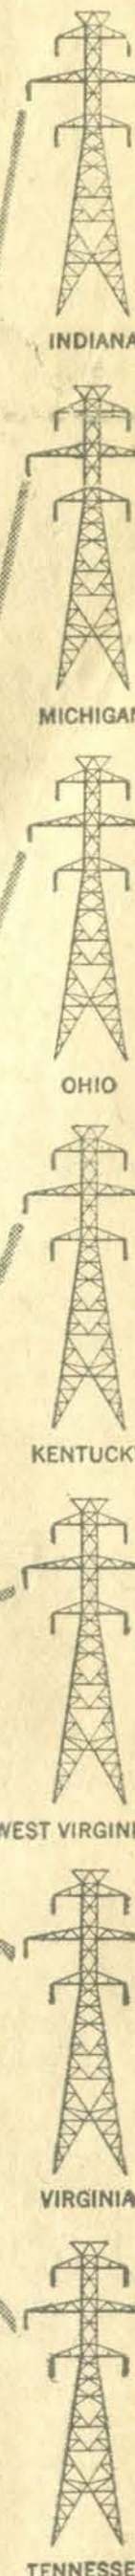

Our power system is interconnected by giant high-voltage transmission lines to facilities of five other American Electric Power companies. When our customers need more kilowatts than we have available, we buy or borrow from another AEP company that has a surplus.

Doing things in new ways to improve service and efficiency is one big reason why the average unit price of electricity, for customers of Kentucky Power Company, has not gone up during twenty years of inflation.

Your service is better, your rates are lower because Kentucky Power Company is a part of the American Electric Power System. Supplying more electricity than any other investor-owned utility, AEP aids the economic growth of 2,350 communities in seven states. Through integrated operations, progressive engineering, research and coordination management, the six member companies of AEP bring you low-cost power with greatest dependability.

THE DEPENDABLES FROM DODGE!

DON'T LET THE NAMEPLATE FOOL YOU...

THIS BIG ONE'S IN THE LOW-PRICE FIELD

DODGE DIVISION CHRYSLER GROUP CORPORATION

INTRODUCING THE 1963 DODGE

The low-price field is about the last place a traditionalist would expect to find Dodge. The Dodge name has been associated with the medium-price boys since Hector was a pup. But the fact remains: the '63 Dodge is priced down with good old cars "F" and "C". Now, you can stay with a low price and get a lot more car. The name proves it: Dodge! You get the comfort Dodge is famous for. You get a smooth torsion-bar ride; experts call it best in the business. You get a V8 loaded for bear. (Or, the famous gas-saving 6 with the muscle of conventional V8's.) If that isn't enough to turn the other two green with envy, how's this for a clincher? Every 1963 Dodge is backed by a revolutionary new 5-year/50,000 mile warranty.*

*Your authorized Dodge Dealer's Warranty against defects in material and workmanship on 1963 cars has been expanded to include parts replacement or repair without charge for required parts or labor for 5 years or 50,000 miles, whichever comes first, on the engine block, head and internal parts; transmission case and internal parts (excluding manual clutch); torque converter, drive shaft, universal joints (excluding dust covers), rear axle and differential, and rear wheel bearings—provided the vehicle has been serviced at reasonable intervals according to the Dodge Certified Car Care schedule.

COUNTY GARDEN IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM
Two hundred eighteen Floyd county families joined 3,200 other Eastern Kentucky families in finding that growing their own vegetables at home saves money and provides better meals. These families took part in the Family Garden Improvement program, which was conducted for the third time last summer. The program reached families in 22 Eastern Kentucky counties.

J. L. Lafferty, Sr., Cliff, was the first place winner in Floyd county. Other Floyd county prize winners were Dick Davis, Prestonsburg, and Garland Martin, Langley.

The Garden Improvement program was started three years ago by the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service. Various farm agencies and organizations have helped in carrying out the program.

This program's three main purposes are to teach better planning of home gardens, better garden methods, and aid to teach better methods of food preservation.

The Family Garden Improvement program will be continued next year and enrollment will be taken in Floyd county during January and February.

100 YEARS AGO
THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky
By JOE JORDAN
(Kentucky Civil War Commission)

One hundred years ago this week the Louisville Journal, strongly pro-Union newspaper edited by outspoken George D. Prentice, impartially denounced both sides for executing a total of 25 men in southeastern Kentucky early in November. Sixteen men, charged with being bushwhackers (civilians illegally firing upon troops), had been hanged by Confederate soldiers of Lt. Gen. Edmund Kirby Smith's retreating army in the vicinity of Cumberland Gap. In retaliation, Union men had hanged nine Confederate soldiers, described by the Louisville newspaper as sick or wounded men left behind by the Southern troops as they withdrew from the state.

While the first sixteen had been hanged on charges that they had themselves been guilty of crimes, Prentice pointed out that there had not been even a pretense that the nine disabled Confederates had done anything for which they should be punished; they had been executed purely in retaliation for the first hangings. His conclusion was that both sides had been "guilty of murder."

Prentice's protest was to go unheeded. Throughout the rest of the Civil War there would be hasty hangings and retaliatory executions, the latter sometimes in the ratio of four to one. It was a barbarous practice in what otherwise was in many ways a chivalrous sort of warfare, and it particularly afflicted Kentucky.

Prentice had exerted all the influence of Kentucky's largest newspaper to keep the Commonwealth in the Union at a time when many leading citizens favored seceding and going with the Confederacy. He argued that it would be to the advantage of slaveholders to keep the state in the Union, since they could rely upon President Lincoln's statement in his inaugural address that he had "no purpose directly or indirectly to interfere with the institution of slavery in the states where it exists." But if Kentucky seceded and the Confederacy became a separate nation, Prentice said, runaway Kentucky slaves who got across the Ohio River would not be returned to their owners.

Prentice was bitter about the Emancipation Proclamation which, as President Lincoln had announced in September, would go into effect January 1, 1863, but he remained loyal to the Union.

Another Kentuckian who was bitter about the same things was Lt. U. S. Johnson, of the 17th Kentucky (Union) Infantry. He resigned his commission in protest. Arrested and sent in irons to a military prison at Louisville, he later was released and ordered back to his regiment because no formal charge had been filed. He again resigned. That time he was charged with "mutinous language and insubordinate action" and was dismissed from the service. During the week under review, in the presence of the whole regiment at Bowling Green, Johnson was stripped of his rank and expelled. He had a brother, Col. Adam Johnson, in the Confederate States Army.

JAMES HONAKER
Copied from Kniffen, Perrin and Battle's History of Kentucky is this brief biography of James Honaker. The book was published in the 1880's. The biographical sketch follows:

"James Honaker, a native of Pikeville, Pike county, Kentucky, was born December 21, 1831, and is the youngest child born to James and Louisa Owens Honaker, natives of Virginia. James Honaker, Sr., was county and circuit court clerk and county surveyor of Pike county at the time of his death, which occurred February 7, 1832; he was a farmer, stock raiser and a soldier of the War of 1812.

"Thomas Owens, maternal grandfather of our subject, came to Kentucky from Virginia about 1825 and settled in Pikeville where for many years he was a merchant; he served as magistrate and county judge, and died in 1855, aged about eighty-five years.

"James Honaker, subject of this sketch, passed his early life on the farm, three miles below Pikeville, and received but a limited education; he has always farmed. In 1862 he enlisted in the Tenth Kentucky Infantry, Confederate Army, served all through the war, receiving two wounds in the Saltville battle. At the close of the war he returned to Pikeville and resumed farming; he owns 300 acres of land three miles west of Pikeville. In 1860 he married Malinda Clark, of Floyd county, a daughter of L. D. Clark. They are the parents of five children, viz: James M. L., Emer P., Robert, Sophia C., and Thomas H. Mr. Honaker affiliates with the Democratic party and is a member of the Masonic fraternity."

WILLIAM ADAMS
Copying again from the old history of Kentucky is this biography of William Adams, North Carolina native and resident of Magoffin county.

"William Adams, a native of Wilkes county, North Carolina, was born September 16, 1862, and came to Kentucky in 1810 and settled in Letcher county, where he remained ten years and then moved to Magoffin county. His father was Stephen Adams, of North Carolina, a farmer.

"William Adams was reared on a farm and his educational advantages were those of the common schools only; he also learned the blacksmith's trade. He was the founder of Magoffin county, where he engaged in blacksmithing and merchandising. He owns about 2,500 acres of land and donated the land for the church and public school building of Salyersville.

He first married a Miss Williams, of Magoffin county, who died leaving three children, viz: Cynthia, Lucinda, and W. S. Mr. Adams next married Nancy A. Fuller, a native of Virginia but a resident of Morgan county, Kentucky, a daughter of Hosea and Dorcas Cyphus Fuller, of Virginia. They had four children, viz: H. N., who married Amanda Frater; Green F., Jennie, wife of W. C. Kendall, of Morgan county, and George B. H. N. Williams (Adams?) has three children: Richard M., G. W. and C. B. Jennie has one child, William Adams, subject of this sketch, died July 22, 1881; he was a Republican politically."

GREEN F. ADAMS
Copying further from the old history is this short sketch of Green F. Adams.

"Green F. Adams was born in Magoffin county, Kentucky, October 15, 1857. He was reared on the farm and educated in the common schools. When fourteen years of age he began merchandising in his native county and in 1885 removed to Johnson county where he is a merchant. In 1880 he married Samantha Preston, a daughter of Montgomery and Miranda Price Preston, of Johnson county; his wife died in August, 1887, leaving three children: Helen, Samantha and William W. Mr. Adams is a member of the Masonic lodge of Paintsville, and casts his vote with the Republicans."

LEVI M. ATKINS
Another short sketch of a prominent Eastern Kentuckian copied from the old history is that of Levi M. Atkins.

"Levi M. Atkins, a native of Pike county, Kentucky, was born July 22, 1841, and is a son of Anderson and Nancy Thornberry Atkins, natives respectively of Virginia and Tennessee. Anderson was a farmer and died when Levi M. was quite young. The latter was reared on the home farm, received a fair education and in October, 1861, enlisted in Company H, Fourteenth Kentucky Volunteers, Federal service, and was mustered out in January, 1865, as duty sergeant. In 1865, he located in Louisa and in 1876 built the Chattahoochee hotel, which he conducted until March, 1881, when he sold out and engaged in the lumber trade, now doing a business of $30,000 per annum. May 20, 1865, he married Miss Sarah Elizabeth Burchett, daughter of Armstead Burchett, and had born to him two children, both now dead. Mr. Atkins is the owner of 1,400 acres of land in Johnson county, Kentucky, and 5,000 acres in Wayne county, West Virginia. He is a Freemason and a Republican, and in 1874-75 was town marshal of Louisa. Mr. Atkins is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church."

WAYLAND

ENTERTAINS DAUGHTER CLUBS

The Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club entertained its daughter clubs Monday evening, November 11, with a turkey dinner at its clubhouse here. Eleven members from the Wheelwright Woman's Club and nine from the Drift Woman's Club attended. James V. Bolen, principal, Wayland high school, was guest speaker and was introduced by Mrs. L. B. Price, of Wayland.

"Learning is something that results in changed behavior," said Mr. Bolen, speaking on the subject of "Education." Mr. Bolen further pointed out that education is the training necessary for an individual to meet daily problems and solve them in such a way as to be an asset to the society in which he lives.

According to the speaker, the eight cardinal aims of education are: 1. Health; 2. Worthy home membership; 3. Ethical character; 4. Citizenship; 5. Vocational efficiency; 6. Worthy use of leisure time; 7. Command of all processes; 8. World-mindedness.

He stressed the point that education should not end with high school or college, but should continue throughout life. "We must not grow old intellectually. We should be educated in all areas and not allow our minds to become lopsided and thus be known as 'educated fools,'" he concluded.

Prior to the program, Mrs. Hazel Vinson conducted a brief devotional period on the subject, "Education of the Heart."

Visitors included Mr. and Mrs. Bolen, Mesdames Reba T. Martin, Mary Jane Martin, Ruby Akers, Anna Sue Stumbo, Isabel Reed, Nora Martin, Celia Little, Marguerite Martin, Imogene S. Moore from the Drift Woman's Club; Mesdames Virginia Jamerson, Eleanor G. Grimm, Louise Cury, Marie Cury, Alma Souleyrette, Arthur Bradbury, Ruby Dickerson, Daniel Autore, G. W. Lockin, Rex Martin and Leon E. Porter from the Wheelwright Woman's Club. Twenty-five members of the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland club were present.

Betsy Layne Salesman Robbed At Pikeville; Police Investigating

Pikeville city police are investigating the assault and robbery of James McClanahan, 34, of Betsy Layne, salesman for the Kentucky Wholesale Company, of Pikeville, who was robbed of an undetermined amount of cash and checks about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, November 13, Pikeville Police Chief Joe B. Scott says.

Scott said McClanahan stated that he was struck in the head and the neck as he got out of his car in the alleyway between Ward Supply Company and the Odd Fellows building on Second Street.

The alleyway is near the wholesale company on Second Street and McClanahan had intended to check in the office when assaulted, Scott said.

Scott said McClanahan did not see his assailant or assailants and apparently was stunned by the assault. The chief said an occupant of a nearby apartment heard McClanahan groaning and reported to police.

McClanahan was removed to the Pikeville Methodist hospital where he was reported in fair condition.
