ROOSEVELT TO CONFER WITH COMBS AT LODGE

TASK FORCE HEAD SLATES AREA VISIT

Five Appalachian States To Be Visited by Party; Action Plan Envisioned

Undersecretary of Commerce Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., will head a task force of federal representatives who will confer with Governor Bert Combs, other state officials and area leaders at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park in an all-day meeting next Thursday.

The Floyd county stop of Mr. Roosevelt and party is an item of an itinerary which will include visits to five Appalachian-area states next week for talks designed to provide a "framework" in which the joint federal-state committee which he heads will form a plan of action for economic development of the Appalachian area.

Jenny Wiley State Park will be the only Kentucky stop for the party. Other states to be visited include Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Tennessee and North Carolina, Maryland and Virginia will be visited a week later.

The party will leave Huntington, late Wednesday, to spend the night at May Lodge. Thursday will be devoted to talks which, Mr. Roosevelt hopes, will provide a picture of major problems which face the Appalachian region.

In his letter to Governors of the five states to be visited he emphasized that "we should avoid discussion of specific projects."

The proposals for Kentucky and the other states which have difficult economic problems will be presented to President Kennedy, next January 1.

Toney Named Manager Of Jenny Wiley Park; Succeeds Ransome Stout

W. A. (Bud) Toney, who has been assistant to the head of the construction and maintenance division Kentucky Department of Parks, has been named manager of Jenny Wiley State Park. He began work at the park this week.

Mr. Toney, a resident of Paintsville, succeeds Ransome Stout, who has been transferred to the Frankfort office of the Department of Parks. The new manager has been with the parks department throughout the Combs administration.

SCOUT CAMP SEASON SET

Four-Week Period To Begin June 23; Activities Listed

Boy Scout Camp Shawnee, located on Dewey Lake, will open for a four-week camping season June 23, according to Byron F. Pennebaker, Scout executive for the Lonesome Pine Council. Scouts from all over Eastern Kentucky and Western Virginia will be leaving for the camp near here to enjoy a fun-filled week in the out-of-doors.

Included in the program of activities will be swimming, motorboating, canoeing, pioneering, native study, archery, marksmanship and hiking, and handicrafts.

The staff, made up of 26 older boys and men, is trained especially to teach boys. The directors of all areas are now in training at the Boy Scout National Camping School at Yellow Springs, Ohio. Donald G. Martin, camp director, said, "If a boy comes to camp, there is no reason why he should not advance a complete rank because our staff is well qualified, and our program is the best ever."

From the opening campfire on Sunday night until closing campfires on Friday nights, the password will be "Go, go, go." Boys may learn to swim, to paddle a canoe, to construct signal towers and monkey bridges, to use an axe properly and safely, to shoot a gun and a bow, and to identify trees. A special added attraction this year will be a Klondike Derby on Fridays. Boys are organized into patrols and compete in contests of swimming, physical fitness, archery, fire building and leaf identification. An archery tournament and a mile swim will also be held.

The Order of the Arrow, a national organization, will also be held. (See Story No. 5, Page 2)

COUNCIL ASKS FEDERAL AID

Extension, Improvement Of Water Lines Viewed; Earl Flower Appointed

Prestonsburg's City Council last Friday evening authorized the filing of an application for federal aid under the Accelerated Public Works Act for the extension and improvement of water lines here.

It is estimated that if a loan and grant is effected, with water mains extended and existing mains enlarged to meet current needs, Prestonsburg will be reduced in actuarial rating from the seventh to the sixth class. This, it was said, would mean a saving in insurance rates to residents here of more than the cost of construction.

A special meeting is slated this week to consider the filing of an application for similar aid on the street improvement program. C. Alan Reed, Prestonsburg engineer, has headed the engineering and planning for this project, which would include both streets and sidewalks.

Dr. James D. Adams was named to the Prestonsburg Housing Commission at Friday's meeting. He succeeds Otis Cooley, whose term expired.

James R. Carnicia resigned his membership on the City Planning Commission, and Earl Flower was appointed in his stead. Mr. Flower also was named new chairman of the commission.

3 QUESTIONED AT HEARING HELD HERE

Report Music Jumped From Auto at Lake; No Charges Filed

The Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad, following a search of the lakeside and a dragging operation in the lake itself Monday, failed to find Hillard Music, 18, who has been missing since Sunday afternoon, shortly after he jumped from a car driven by Fred McCoy, near Hager Gap.

Phillip Dean Ray, 23, Prestonsburg, and McCoy, 19, of East Point, were recognized before the September grand jury after a hearing held Tuesday afternoon.

Ray, McCoy and Dora Skeens, 17, of West Prestonsburg, testified at the hearing, and each told substantially the same story with a few minor differences.

Ray and Music, who had gone together to a movie here Saturday night, met here again, the next day. They bought some beer, got a taxi to the Cliff bridge and walked south on the railway tracks to West Prestonsburg where they met McCoy, who was driving a 1955 Studebaker. They returned to Prestonsburg, bought some whiskey from a taxicab driver.

The trio left Prestonsburg and went to the Middle Creek section, where they picked up Miss Skeens. Going to the park by way of Brandy Gap, they had some car trouble near the swimming area at Stratton Branch. State Trooper Don Goble checked them while there and told them to go home. Meanwhile, Music and Ray had offered assistance to another man whose car had stopped, and when they returned to the car McCoy was driving, Miss Skeens had left the rear seat where she (See Story No. 2, Page 4)

BOOTLEGGING SITUATION HIT BY MINISTER HERE

Material, even cultural, progress is not enough for youth, the Rev. W. D. Jagers, pastor of Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church here, told members of the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club last Thursday evening.

"You and I need—you and I must—see to it that these, our boys and girls, sons and daughters, have every opportunity to grow into the moral and spiritual persons that have made America great," he declared.

The speaker hit particularly at the bootlegging situation here and elsewhere in the county.

"It is not enough to have beautiful buildings, excellent streets and many cultural advantages," he added. "Our children must have that wholesome atmosphere which is conducive to moral and spiritual growth."

Specifically, the minister spoke of the promiscuous sale of intoxicants, even to minors; of the ease with which alcoholic beverages are procured through taxicab operators and clubs, and of the deplorable condition represented by the fact that even young children know of the bootleg traffic and where whiskey or beer may be bought.

Where lies the fault?

The Rev. Jagers pointed that it lies with five groups:

1. The people in the churches who have failed to take a staunch stand for Christian principles and ideals in the community. "Perhaps the witness of our churches has been weak and effeminate. In some instances the churches may have become the masks for hiding those who would fill the pews as saints while they have sold out to the devil himself."

2. The preachers who have bent the knee to individuals or to pressures from individuals. "Thus, the prophetic voice crying out against sin and immorality has been rather anemic."

3. The parents who have neither set the proper example nor given sound advice. "If the child is not taught respect for authority as administered by a loving parent, then why should we expect him to respect authority not given within the confines of love?"

4. Public officials who would not make the law what it should be. "Any laws written on paper are just as good, or just as bad, just as effective or as ineffective as the men who have been duly elected and appointed to uphold them. It is sad but true that some would exploit the public's trust. Others would establish themselves as little dictators in a democracy such as ours. And still others lack compassion, care and concern for the people, seeking only to 'scratch the backs' of those who seek their own comfort." (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

POLICE NAB AWOL SOLDIER

Prison Escapee Taken Near Leitchfield, Ky. Following 3-Day Hunt

Jailed at Leitchfield, Grayson county, last week were a prison escapee and an AWOL soldier said to be from this county.

Charles Allen, 19, AWOL from Camp Polk, Louisiana, and said to be from near Prestonsburg, was arrested last Wednesday night. Edd Willis Mercer, 24, with whom Allen was said to have been travelling, was taken early Saturday after a three-day chase as he slept in an abandoned house, 12 miles from Leitchfield.

The FBI said Mercer had been sought since May 3 when he escaped from the Wisconsin state reformatory at Green Bay. He was serving an 18-month burglary term. The Grayson county manhunt began after an occupant of an automobile exchanged shots with Sheriff Haycraft of that county. The two occupants of the car ran into the woods.

Allen was arrested soon-afterward. Mercer was not armed when captured. (See Story No. 7, Page 4)

Former Floyd School Leader Heart Victim In Philadelphia

John C. Wells, 59, former principal of three Floyd county schools and for years a leader in the county educational system, died Sunday at Pennsylvania hospital, Philadelphia, following an illness of two months. A heart attack was given as the direct cause of death.

At the time he was stricken by illness Mr. Wells was teaching in the Medford, New Jersey schools. He had lived at South Beverly, New Jersey, the last 18 months, after resigning the principalship of the Prestonsburg elementary school. Before heading the local school, he was principal at Lackey and Auxier.

A son of the late James R. and Laura Belle Wells, he was born in the Auxier vicinity. He was a member of the East Point Masonic Lodge. Mr. Wells received his early education in the Floyd county schools, later attended the Bowling Green College of Commerce, received his A.B. degree from the University of Kentucky and his master's from the University of West Virginia.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Josephine R. Wells, and three sons, John C., Jr., James Everett and Joseph Michael. He also leaves three sisters, Mrs. Clabe Bingham, of Prestonsburg, Mrs. Ollie Burchett and Mrs. Stella Harmon, of Auxier.

JOHN C. WELLS

Funeral rites were conducted at 10 a.m. Wednesday from the chapel of the Carter & Callihan Funeral Home by the Rev. Harold W. Dorsey and the Rev. Orrin M. Simmerman, Sr. Burial was made in the family cemetery on the Auxier Road under direction of the Carter & Callihan Funeral Home.

This Town . . . That World

I don't mind my women-folks dictating what I should or shouldn't wear, but the next time they decide a tie with that kind of sport-shirt is simply terrible, wish they'd down me and yank it off before I wear it half a day.

MAYBE NOT SO SAD

The poet may have been a bit off-center when he wrote, "The saddest words of tongue or pen are these, 'It might have been.'" You know, come to think of it, it might have been a lot worse than it is. For which reason we at this late date come to question the bard's accuracy.

REQUEST GRANTED

Five-year-old Stephen Douglas Herald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Herald, is in the hospital here with severe burns on his feet after stepping onto hot charcoal left Sunday by picnickers at Dewey Lake. He has asked that this column pass on to other picnickers a request that they emulate Smoky Bear and be sure their fire is out. He also points out for the benefit of other youngsters that hot coals aren't necessarily red.

It was hot over the week-end, we all admit. So hot that a blacksnake by some unknown trick succeeded in getting into a certain house and, failing to get inside the refrigerator, crawled under it.

COINCIDENCE

Our friend, Red Hazelett, has been a patient at the hospital here, threatened with pneumonia. It just happened that while Red was at the hospital (at Blue Cross expense?) employees of his were painting third-story rooms of the building, the boss thereby staying close to the job.

RECOMMENDED READING

Recommended for serious consideration: the Rev. W. D. Jagers' discussion of the bootlegging situation before the Kiwanis Club last Thursday (see Page 1 story). We regret that, in the rush, we did not give it better treatment.

"Thank God for the grace of poverty," said the late Pope John, and those are words most of us should give a second reading.

Yea, Team-White or Black!

It might require a little more time, but the most peaceful way to integration of schools would be to let athletics do it.

Let those colleges which admit Negro students enlist the top athletes of that race; let the segregated schools continue with their all-white teams—then sit back and wait.

Americans can face defeat in other areas, and smile. They can "live down" dishonor, even. But they cannot abide a losing team.

Those teams which play Negro athletes are making the all-white opposition look bad, mighty bad. And any old grad will tell you this must not be.

This line of attack on the problem would forget all about the concept that all men are born free and equal or that "Christian" America is willing to go along with God whose love is for all, white or black, and no respecter of persons.

It would forget all the heated arguments men toss back and forth. All would sit back and listen to the alumni scream, "Team, team!" and yell for the coach's scalp.

Finally would come the peaceful surrender. For dear, old Kiwash must have her place on the sports pages, must have her all-Americans and her athletic place in the sun.

Let the colored boys, scorned as they may be in other areas of life, die for dear, old Kiwash—rah, rah!

100 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky

By JOE JORDAN (Kentucky Civil War Commission)

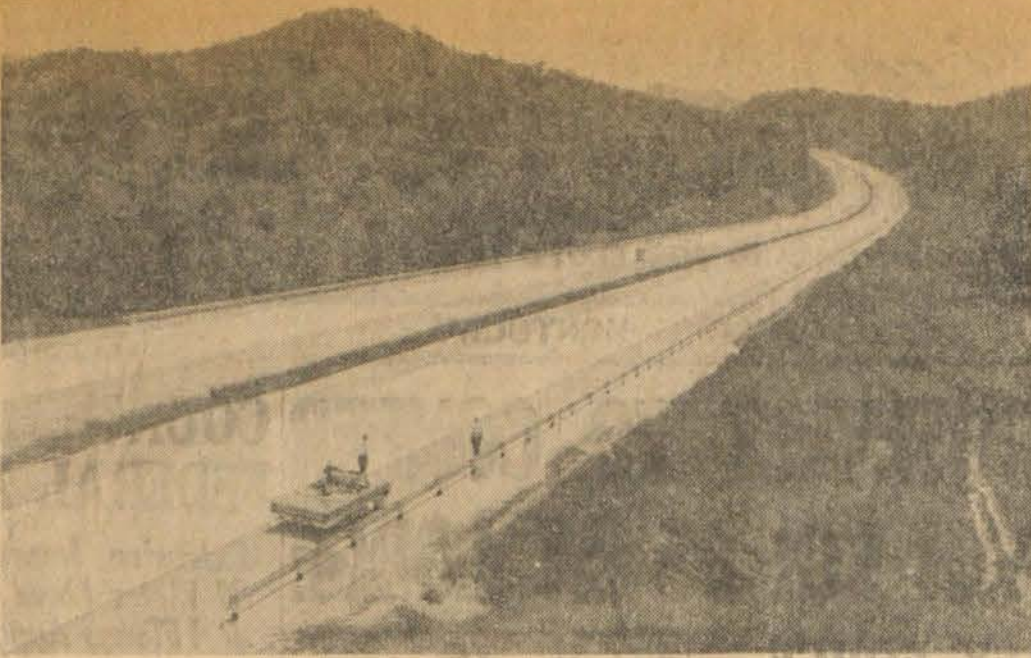

One hundred years ago this week the Third Confederate Cavalry Division, composed largely of Kentuckians, left its camp at Alexandria, Tennessee, and rode to the Cumberland River, which it crossed not far from the small town of Rome. Its commander, Brig. Gen. John Hunt Morgan, for some time had wished to attack a Federal force which occupied a strongly fortified position at Carthage, Tennessee, and at last Confederate Gen. Braxton Bragg had authorized him to do so.

The division marched on two or three miles north of the river and encamped for the night—all of it except a part of one regiment, under Col. W. W. Ward, which had been assigned a special mission. This force rode on until it reached a bridge which connected Carthage and Hartsville, Tennessee. The Confederates had learned that the United States mail passed along that road two or three times a week, escorted by Union soldiers, and that sutlers' wagons often accompanied it in order to have the protection of the escort. (Sutlers were civilian merchants who accompanied or followed the troops and sold food delicacies, liquor, and other supplies not issued by the government.)

In return, but the escort manifested plainly that it felt a very inferior degree of interest in the integrity of postal affairs. Few prisoners were taken, but the mail and the wagons were secured. In one of the latter, a corpulent sutler was found wedged in a corner, and much alarmed. He was past speaking when drawn out, but faintly signed that a bottle he had in his pocket should be placed to his lips.

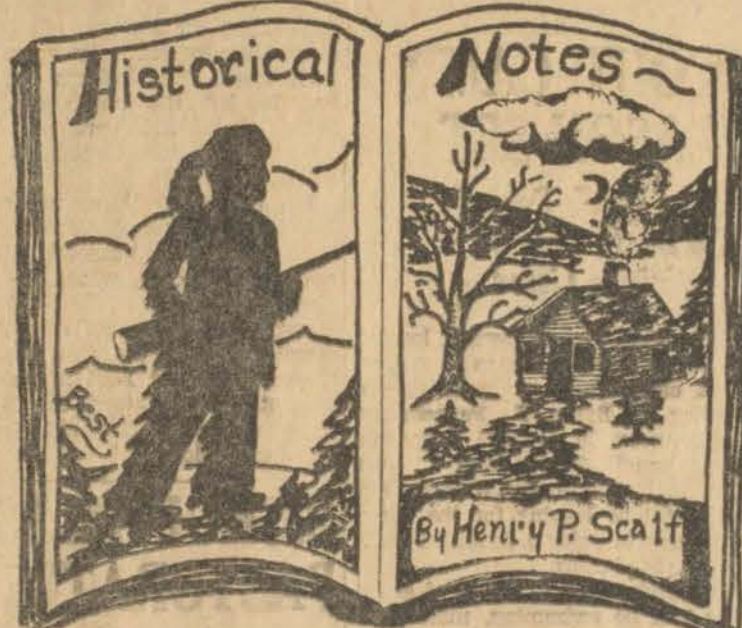

That night, as the Confederate troopers divided the goodies found in the sutlers' wagons, an officer of Gen. Bragg's staff rode into camp with orders for Morgan. The carriage attack was called off; Morgan was ordered to set out with his division and ride with all possible speed to Monticello, Kentucky. A Federal raiding party had broken into East Tennessee and was threatening Knoxville. Morgan must try to intercept it when it returned to Kentucky.

So the Confederates crossed back over the Cumberland and headed east. They soon got into rugged country, with very poor roads. At Livingston, Tennessee, they were overtaken by a tremendous rain, which continued pouring down for nearly three days. The dirt roads became almost impassable. Time after time the division's four mounted guns and the artillery caissons sank axle-deep into mudholes from which they were dragged out with great difficulty. The Confederates reached Albany, Kentucky, three days later than they should have, to learn that the enemy raiders had escaped.

First High-Speed Road To Eastern Kentucky

SMOOTH, SAFE, AND MODERN stretch of The Mountain Parkway, now open 43 miles from Winchester to Campton, gives little hint of the engineering problems which had to be overcome. Construction was "cut and fill" for much of the 43 miles. In recent dedication ceremonies Gov. Bert Combs called the Parkway a lasting symbol of the perseverance and hopes of the mountain people. The Governor said "it will pay for itself—not only financially but by answering the dreams of a people too long isolated, by rewarding their hopeful patience, and by instilling in them new hope and confidence for the future." This 43-mile section cost $40.5 million. Another toll section is now being constructed between Campton and Salyersville, a distance of 33 miles. It will be opened this year. Two major freeway access roads from Campton 80 miles to Whitesburg and from Salyersville 46 miles to Pikeville are in the construction stage.

MILLARD F. HAMPTON

This biography of Millard F. Hampton and those following were compiled from Kniffen, Perrin and Battle's History of Kentucky, published in the 1880's.

"Millard F. Hampton, circuit clerk of Boyd county, Kentucky, was born in Cadetsburg, June 15, 1849, and is the only son of Levi J. and Elizabeth Henderson Hampton, natives of Virginia. Levi J. Hampton settled in Boyd county about 1835. In the recent war he was Adjutant of the Thirty-Ninth Kentucky Infantry (Federal) and while in command of three or four companies was killed near Prestonsburg, in December, 1862.

"M. F. Hampton was reared in Cadetsburg, but was educated in the Asbury University, Indiana, which he attended from 1865 to 1867. In the latter year he returned to Boyd county, Kentucky, and began the study of law under John W. Hampton, at Ashland. In 1868 he entered the circuit clerk's office under Oliver Hampton, under whom he served as deputy six years, and in 1874 was elected to the office of clerk, the third term of which he is now filling.

"January 20, 1873, Mr. Hampton married Miss Kate, daughter of Capt. Wash Honshell, and to this union one child has been born, Augustus, in 1874. Mr. Hampton is an efficient officer and is an honored member of the I.O.O.F."

Again left a widower, Mr. Hargis married Sarah Pelfry, of Rowan county.

"Kenaz F. Hargis was reared and educated in Jackson, Kentucky. He commenced the study of law when young, and was licensed to practice in 1838, being admitted to the bar the same year. He soon afterward moved to Beattyville, Lee county, and engaged in mercantile pursuits with W. P. Hill, continuing in this business until 1830. At the close of the war he engaged in business at Booneboro, remaining there until 1857, when he removed to Beattyville, and resumed the practice of law. He was elected circuit and county clerk of Lee county at the time of its organization in 1870, serving one term. In August, 1886, he was elected county attorney.

"February 19, 1957, he married Miss Elizabeth A. McGlasson, a daughter of John C. and Eliza England McGlasson, of Fleming county. To their union were born two children, both of whom are deceased. Politically Mr. Hargis is a Democrat."

WALTER S. HARKINS
"Walter S. Harkins, lawyer, whose portrait is found in this work, is a native of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, born September 25, 1857, and is a grandson of Hugh Harkins and a nephew of John Harkins, deceased, a prominent lawyer of Prestonsburg before his death. The Harkins family came of old Pennsylvania stock. The subject was reared in Prestonsburg. At an early age he began to read law with Hampton & Hager, and was admitted to the Floyd county bar in 1877. At the age of twenty-three he was elected by a sweeping majority to the office of county attorney, a position he filled with honor to himself and to the satisfaction of the people. This office is all he ever filled.

"Having turned his mind entirely to the profession, he has made a success in every sense of the word. His law office in Prestonsburg is a model of convenience and beauty, and is not surpassed in the state; it contains a well selected library, the Kentucky Supreme court reports as well as the best textbooks and cost $25,000. He is what might be termed one of the most prosperous, successful and energetic young attorneys of Eastern Kentucky.

"He was married November 17, 1880, to Miss Jessie, daughter of Joseph M. Davidson, deceased, who was one of the most prominent citizens of the Big Sandy Valley, and who was born in Floyd county, June 24, 1837. Her father was Samuel Davidson, from Virginia, and her mother was Judith Lackey, a daughter of Gen. Alexander Lackey, J. M. Davidson represented Floyd county with marked ability four years, but had served as sheriff of the county before that. He was a shrewd and bright politician and at the time of his death in 1882 had the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Tenth District. This marriage alliance connects Mr. Harkins with one of the most ancient and honorable families of north-eastern Kentucky. In politics Mr. Harkins is a staunch Democrat, and has a very lucrative law practice that is entirely due to his own energy and thorough business training."

Jest Among Us . . .

By Jack Wild

It's about time again to take up my annual battle with the chipmunks.

This thing started three spring-times ago when I noticed a couple of small round holes bored in the ground near the foundation of my house. Well, I thought, one of our little animal friends is lonesome and wants to move in with us. And isn't that nice.

So I sat back and watched to see what was happening, and bless my soul if a cute little chipmunk didn't pop his head out of the hole nearest the grease trap. I looked at him and he looked at me, and I thought, well, at least he's not a snake. I don't know what he thought.

At any rate, he didn't bother me and I didn't bother him, and the arrangement seemed to work out all right. That was before the rest of his family moved in too. Also it was before the spring rains came.

By late May I had counted fourteen chipmunk holes in my yard. Let's see, there were two in the peonies out in back, one by each of the downspouts, three under the shrubs in front of the house, and the others at strategic points about the premises. All of them had back doors opening into what I bragged about as my watertight basement.

The spring rains came then, gully-washers by golly, but still I wasn't too upset. I'd just plug up the holes, the chipmunks would disappear, and my basement would be all cozy and dry again. So I scooped up a bushel or so of crushed rock and carefully poured it in all the holes I could find. Next morning I went out to take a look, just in time to see the pappy chipmy kick the last little rock out of the last little hole. If you think I was disgusted, you should have seen the expression on his face.

Ever since then, it's been a running battle between us, and I'm glad to report that some progress is being made. Yesterday I made the usual check and counted only nine holes. I can either fill them up again or put in a miniature golf course. One should never underestimate the tenacity of a ground squirrel. Pebbles, bottles, tin cans, concrete—nothing stops him. I'm toying with the idea now of pouring molasses or marshmallow topping in the holes, but I'm afraid that would only lead to one of those sticky situations you hear about.

Dr. Lee Townsend, of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, knows all about such things and he says the only sure way to get rid of the pests is to poison them. But shucks, I don't want to kill the furry little fellows. I just want to run 'em off. That gives me another idea. Via Portmann, who is secretary-manager of the Kentucky Press Association, lives next door and he hails from Minnesota where they have all sorts of wild animals. Maybe he'd like to have some cute little chipmunks over at his house. I think I'll ask him.

CARD OF THANKS
We wish to acknowledge our debt of gratitude to all who were so kind to us and gave us the consolation of friendly acts and words in our bereavement upon the tragic death of our son. But for the good people of this community we would have found our burden too heavy to bear. We would especially thank the Rev. W. D. Jaegers and members of the Prestonsburg General Hospital staff for their hours spent with us.

Danville celebrated the 171st anniversary this June of the adoption of Kentucky's first Constitution. It was drawn up in 1792 at Constitution Square State Park in Danville, "the cradle of Kentucky statehood."

Kentucky Folklore

By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D.

When you consider how long some of our folk beliefs and practices prevailed before modern thinking somewhat threw them into the discard, you can't help wondering whether our lives as a whole have sufficient continuity to preserve our ways, whether folkways or the standardized ways that we all now have. If I actually believed that the passing of folkways as my generation—and hundreds of generations before us—knew them, you would vote—and rightly so—for me, an old man whose brain cells had hardened, I won't admit that life has been any less wonderful or any less active since many of the folkways I knew as a boy, back in the 1890's have almost ceased to function. Suppose we look at some of these practices and let you judge for yourself whether you and I are worse off.

Many a child in the school at Fidelity wore an asafetida bag around his neck. If some of the children, and they were probably few in number, did not believe in the efficacy of asafetida as a preventive of disease, they were courteous enough not to laugh in the presence of the wearers of the very smelly bags. I can recall no teacher's taking up the subject; he would probably have been overwhelmed with protestations from the children and their relatives. Some other practices then used seem fully as ancient: putting soot on an open wound, covering an open sore or a cut with cobwebs, drinking gallons of catnip tea. Fortunately, most folk remedies as practiced at Fidelity were relatively harmless. I do not remember any of the more violent kinds or repulsive ones, though mere hearsay had it that some were used. I never saw a chicken cut open and, still kicking, applied to a snakebite or a dogbite. In fact, I never saw, at Fidelity, a snakebite of any kind and only a few dogbites that were perfectly harmless, acquired while playing with a rowdy, but healthy house dog.

A few of my old neighbors fairly wore out their almanacs while working out the correct signs for doing all sorts of farm work: breaking ground, planting all the crops, butchering hogs, harvesting the crops, even such necessary work as castrating pigs. The rest of us discreetly kept our mouths shut while watching this ancient hokum and then did our similar work when we got ready. Our crops and our stock seemed as good as those of the almanac-gazers. I never helped plant a garden on Good Friday unless that particular day had brought enough warmth and dryness for us to tackle the garden. In fact, by that time, regardless of whether Easter came early or late, we had already planted such things as potatoes, peas, onions, beets, radishes, lettuce, and mustard. Of course, these are relatively hardy vegetables and can stand cold weather; beans were, according to the tradition, to be planted on Good Friday, hot or cold, moist or dry. But I have

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

SUGGESTS HELP FOR YOUTH Editor, The Times:

The greatest deterrent to wayward children and errant teenagers would be for their parents to have them attend Sunday School. They should be compelled to do this with strict regularity, for here they would be taught something about the humble life of Jesus, how He ministered to the sick and unfortunate, what He said and the great lesson He taught in His Sermon on the Mount. They would learn that His life was lived in complete devotion to God and to others, and for His own personal welfare He never gave a thought. To this day He is the greatest living symbol of all life.

I witnessed a scene the other day that demonstrates the need for Christ's teachings today. A weak, ill-dressed man was pushing a buggy containing a sickly looking lady, probably his mother, apparently on their way to the Employment Office. Two children—in their early teens—passed and one said, "Look what a baby he's got," and then they both screamed with laughter. The two teen-age girls were on their way to school, yet they are starting out in a bad way to amount to anything in this life, or the life in hereafter. Erring youth may learn what the atom is composed of, with its electrons, neutrons, and protons orbiting the nucleus; but they learn nothing about life's greatest lesson in Jesus Christ.

5. The private citizens who have "shucked" their responsibility. "There are two things that the forces of evil cannot stand. One is light—they must work in the dark. Citizens must bring the truth to the light. The private citizen ought to reveal what he knows. Public officials cannot act effectively until we show strength on the part of those desiring good. Evil does not vanish by our closing our eyes to it, just as the enemy of the ostrich does not disappear when it sticks its head in the sand."

To point up the fact that bootlegging here is common knowledge, is known even to the very young, the speaker told of the birthday party at a Prestonsburg home. Tiring of the normal activities, the youngsters turned to a different type of amusement. They called a taxicab and asked the driver to deliver a pint of whiskey and gave the address of the people who lived next door. Then the boys and girls gleefully watched through the window as the cab driver arrived in front of the neighboring home, blowing in vain to announce that he had arrived with his "delivery."

"I ask you," the minister challenged members of the club, "what will it take to cause us to do something about this problem? Into this atmosphere where it is more difficult to get a hot dog from a restaurant than it is to get a pint of whiskey (which is delivered)—into this atmosphere where we are going to bring young men and young ladies for their college training. One wonders who will have the greater influence—the beer, the bottles and the bootleggers or the Christians, the churches and Christ."

Concluding, the Rev. Jagers told the story of the hen which sat on snake's eggs. A swallow flew over and said, "You'd better get off there." "Why?" asked the hen. "I'm just hatching some eggs." The swallow then reminded her, "You're hatching your own destruction."

"What are we 'hatching in Floyd county?" he asked his hearers.

had been sitting with Music and was now sitting in the front seat with McCoy. Music and Miss Skeens had been dating for a few weeks, it was testified.
Ray, who was now sitting in the rear seat by himself, said Music began quarreling at the girl for dancing with someone at eighth grade graduation night. He also threatened to whip McCoy, Ray said. McCoy testified that Music threatened to whip Miss Skeens and began to beat on the dashboard. McCoy said he ordered him out of the car.
Music got out of the car while it was still moving and ran over the rocky hill south of the gap. Ray said Music rushed over the side of the hill and fell. He saw him get up and rush on toward the lake. Ray yelled at him, urged him to return to the car so they could go home. Following that, Ray went back to the car and asked McCoy and Miss Skeens to aid in searching for Music.
Ray said he didn't follow the running man over the hill but only walked along a path where he could see him below. The trio then searched and called for Music, who had disappeared.
Not finding Music, they returned to near Auxier, bought some gas and after another search of the highways in the lake area, returned to town. Ray got out of the car on Third street. Checking both the city and county jails for Music who, he thought, could have been arrested, and also going to the theatre to look for him, he decided to hire a taxi. In company with Oliver (Boss) Music, father of the missing youth, who lives in the Bull Creek section, they toured the lake roads looking for him.
Questioned about a rock he had carried, immediately after Music went over the hill, Ray said the stone was for McCoy, who was reluctant to help in the search. He testified that he put the rock under the rear seat.
McCoy testified that he had known Music about five years but it was the first time he had ever been anywhere with Ray.
During the hearing held Tuesday afternoon, County Judge Henry Stumbo telephoned Hence Terry, boat dock operator, who said that a man appeared at the dock between 4 and 6 p.m., left the dock and went down the left side toward the dam.
Ray testified that Music was wearing Levis, a white sweater shirt and boots "like Army boots."
Chief discrepancy in the stories told by Ray and McCoy referred to a whiskey transaction. Ray said he gave McCoy the money at the taxicab stand to buy the whiskey. McCoy said he didn't know from whom the whiskey was purchased, that he was waiting below the First National Bank and didn't buy it. He affirmed that the only time Ray ever gave him any money was to buy gasoline.
Ray and McCoy were confronted with these different stories but didn't change them. The girl was recalled but she could only say that while at the taxicab stand, with McCoy driving, the "taxi man got in the other side of the car in the front seat." She couldn't identify him, she said, neither could Ray or McCoy.
Ray subsequently identified the man from whom they bought the beer on Auxier Road as Junior Wells.
At the hearing were Trial Commissioner Glenn Burchett, Sheriff Henry Hale, Commonwealth's Attorney Hollie Conley, Oliver Music and State Trooper Don Goble.
Conley questioned Ray closely for his refusal or inability to identify the taxicab operator who sold them the whiskey. Ray said they keep the whiskey in their cars.
"They'll sell to anybody," Ray said. "They didn't know me the first time I went there, either. Whenever you pull in they walk up on the driver's side."

Rev. Orin M. Simmerman, Sr., performed the double-ring ceremony in a setting of white gladoli, palms, and candelabra. The wedding musicians were Miss Shirley Harmon, vocalist, and Mrs. Chalmer Frazier, organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of silk taffeta with long sleeves coming to a point over the crown, fitted bodice with off-shoulder neckline outlined with re-embroidered lace, and seed pearls, new control skirt with appliques on skirt of re-embroider lace and pearls with button-back detail and chapel train. Her three-tiered veil of English illusion was caught with a pearl and crystal crown. She carried a crescent-shaped arrangement of white gladioli centered with a detachable white orchid corsage and satin streamers.

Mrs. David Allen served as matron of honor. Miss Charlotte Arnett, the bride's sister, served as junior maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Catherine Remington and Mrs. Charlie Allen, both of Lexington.

The matron of honor, junior maid of honor, and bridesmaids wore street-length dresses of hyacinth blue silk organza designed with a dome-shaped skirt and off shoulder neckline, short sleeves and a crushed cummerbund from the fitted waist-line. They wore matching headpieces with circular veil.

HISTORIC VALLEY ROAD PIONEER WAY TO WEST

BY HENRY P. SCALF

The old road connecting Virginia and the west by way of Big Sandy valley is gone now except for bits of wagon trail that have survived at the back of bottoms or around hill-sides.

Between Ivel and Tram on the north side of the river and above U. S. Highway 23 a short segment begins at a field fence and ends a few hundred feet south in a yard at the top of a low hill. It is gathering leaves, twigs and rolling stones.

From the top of the hill where the short stretch of ancient road ends in a yard you can see the village of Tram and the white houses in the river bottoms. Down under the promontory are the remains of the old log house that domiciled the domestic slaves of Col. Harry Stratton, explorer, one of the founders of Floyd county and an early justice. Water birches grow in a clump where his house stood and where the first Methodist class was held in the Big Sandy valley in 1796.

Eight years after Col. Harry built the house the Virginia Road was authorized. The old pioneers who had come from Virginia to Kentucky wanted a road back east over which they could drive their herds of hogs and cattle to market. The lawmakers at Frankfort authorized it in 1802. It began at Mt. Sterling, ended at Pound, then Sounding Gap. There it joined a road to Richmond. By most it was called the Virginia Road, by others the Sounding Gap Road.

At first it was not really a road, only a path beaten out by the hogs and Indians and after them the first immigrants. It followed ridges and streams and the first attempts to negotiate it with ox-drawn wagons were foolhardy adventures inviting disaster. Many are the traditions of broken axes that forced some of the founding families to settle in Eastern Kentucky when they had originally planned to reach the Blue Grass.

After that first legislative notice in 1802 the lawmakers neglected or forgot the section for 15 years. In 1817, when Alexander Lackey, of Prestonsburg, was a member of the Kentucky House of Representatives, a bill was passed to open a road from Mt. Sterling, via Prestonsburg, to the Kentucky-Virginia line. Lackey was named one of the three commissioners to establish it. For many years this road was the subject of several legislative acts and many Floyd county court orders.

In the period of 1836-1847, the legislature was really "generous" on Eastern Kentucky roads. Between Owingsville and the Big Sandy River it spent $168,783.83, between Mt. Sterling and the Virginia line the lawmakers authorized the expenditure of $23,243.40 but recognizing that the road between Pikeville and Sounding Gap was in atrocious terrain, the sum of $8,324 was authorized. These sums did little more than make the roads passable for most of the year.

Before and after the road was improved, it was a "highway" for immigrants. They emerged through Pound Gap, traveled down Shelby Creek, followed the river north and west, the covered wagons rolling and swaying with the slow movement of the oxen that drew the families and their possessions west. Scores of the migrating families stopped at Col. Harry's and stayed at night. It was a house of good cheer and commodious for company.

The year the road was built the county of Floyd was a wilderness empire, broken here and there by pioneer cabins. The town of Prestonsburg, then a log cabin hamlet of less than a dozen people, was the only town between Abingdon, Virginia, in the east and Washington, in the present Mason county to the northwest. Floyd county began at Pound or Sounding Gap, extended west to Blackwater Creek in the present Morgan county. Its northern boundary was the Tug River and on the south it bordered the North Fork of the Kentucky River. The year the road was built the legislature cut off Clay county from Floyd, for the inhabitants were quarreling about the hundred and fifty miles of rough trail they had to ride to reach their county seat of Prestonsburg.

Col. Harry sat in his huge living room and before the fireplace bright with burning logs listened to the immigrants going west. The territory of Ohio was now a state and the town of Chillicothe was the new state capital. A few score miles from Chillicothe was the Wabash River and across it was the vast, waiting acres of Indiana. Farther west was Illinois.

Many were the nights that Col. Harry had old Spencer Adkins from the present Millard, Pike county, for company. The two were fast friends, had hunted and explored the valley when the creeks had no name. Years later when litigation over land titles arose, Stratton and Adkins were witnesses in court. Universally referred to as the Old Hunters, they told of finding streams that had already been named but most were unnamed at all. Harry and Spencer named a few themselves.

You can walk a few steps on the ancient highway and with your foot rake back the gathering leaves. Down under them lies the rotted organic matter of the years. Under that is a rutted ditchline, cut first in the stony bed by the wheels of covered wagons going west, later by the loaded iron carts going east. The enterprising Pennsylvanians, Marylanders and Virginians had found the iron hills on the Ohio River in the present Greenup and Carter counties, Kentucky, and across the Ohio in the Hanging Rock section. Bars of raw iron were shipped back east, much of it going up the Big Sandy and through Sounding Gap.

The iron trade to the east reached its height before the Civil War but some of it lingered on until after the interecne struggle. The road of empire was to the west and demand turned the laden wagons around. The creaking vehicles and the struggling, straining oxen on the Sounding Gap road ceased and memory of them faded. Only a few old records exist to remind us of a forgotten chapter in our area history.

Col. Harry prospered on his vast plantation, his slaves tending the herds of cattle and hogs and hoeing in the fields. Once a year Col. Harry and some of the Laynes or other pioneer families gathered hundreds of hogs and moved slowly out on the road east. In two months they would return from Lynchburg with the proceeds of the great herd and settle with their neighbors. The hogs, moving slowly and feasting on the mast besides the road, had arrived in Lynchburg in good shape and sold for three cents a pound.

South of the Col. Harry Stratton plantation were the other Stratton estates and beyond them, principally around the present Harold, were the Laynes. Richard Stratton had settled at the mouth of Mare Creek in 1796 and being still fearful of Indians despite the licking "Mad" Anthony Wayne had given them at the Battle of Fallen Timbers the year before, built his cabin upon a rocky promontory high above the river. Wise in the ways of the frontier, Uncle Dickie as he was called, cleared the woods back of his cabin as far as a rifle ball would carry.

A few years after Uncle Dickie cleared the land and built his cabin at Mare Creek Narrows, the road was built. Under his cabin the hill descended as a rocky declivity to the river. The builders cut a narrow road in the rocky hillside above the river. It added emphasis to the name, the Mare Creek Narrows.

North of Col. Harry's home the road hugged the back of a giant bottom and when it reached the mouth of Ivy Creek it followed across on a crude, wooden bridge. South of that the hillside also came down to the river and the road was cut, seven feet wide, through the rock for a hundred feet or more. Residents promptly named the place the Ivy Narrows.

New Detection Technique Assists In Tuberculosis Fight In Kentucky, Said

Frankfort, Ky., June 13—The fight against tuberculosis in Kentucky is resulting in the discovery and treatment of cases which would have gone undetected except for better reporting and case finding techniques.

Dr. M. Stuart Lauder of the State Health Department reported that 3,229 active cases of tuberculosis are now known in the state compared with 2,308 five years ago. He also reported that the number of inactive cases dropped from 14,678 to 5,824 during the same period.

Crash Seedling Planting Program Begins

THE CRASH PROGRAM to plant 2 million or more pine seedlings on denuded Eastern Kentucky mountain slopes is under way by the State Division of Forestry along the headwaters of the Cumberland, Big Sandy, and Kentucky rivers. The planting is designed as the first step in an over-all program to help control future floods in Eastern Kentucky. Gov. Bert Combs has allocated $20,000 from his contingency fund to finance planting of 1 million seedlings, $20,000 in Federal funds has been set aside by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service for planting another million, and Governor Combs has asked Eastern Kentuckians themselves to plant a third million. Private firms have also agreed to speed up their own tree-planting work. Here a crew near Cumberland sets out seedlings on a steep, rocky, and gullied hillside.

Application of Mulch May Be Made Following Planting Or Before, Said

Plastic or paper mulch can be applied before seeds are planted or soon after plants come up. If applied before planting seeds, open the paper or plastic just above the row to allow the plants to come through. These materials usually are held in place by putting soil along the edge.

Mulch usually is spread evenly over the surface of the soil between the rows and around the plants (except when paper or plastic is used). Thickness of the mulch varies from one to three inches, depending on the material and the cost. Organic mulches, such as straw and sawdust, can be applied immediately after the first cultivation. If you plan to mulch, sidedress with ammonium nitrate at the rate of 1½ pounds per 100 feet of row before the cultivate.

The advantages of mulching also include: less water run-off in summer months, more even vegetable growth, less soil compaction, better water movement in the soil, and less soil damage to vegetables. Mulch also improves soil temperature and adds organic matter to soil when plowed under.

Many kinds of material can be used as mulch. Some of the more common are leaves, rotted hay, straw, sawdust, plaining mill shavings, paper and plastic. When you can get such materials at little or no cost, it probably will pay you to mulch. However, you'll want to consider whether the advantages outweigh the extra work and cost. Remember that more nitrogen fertilizer will be needed if you mulch and that some mulching materials are expensive.

Methodist Conference Hits Commercialization Of Sabbath Tendency

The Kentucky Annual Conference of the Methodist Church, Wednesday, June 5, went on record opposing the commercialization of the Sabbath and "the general practice of making it into a holiday instead of a holy day."

Meeting at Eastern Kentucky State College, Richmond, approximately 400 ministers and lay delegates adopted a resolution "that the people called Methodists be urged to use their example and influence to discourage the use of the Lord's Day as a holiday or for commercial purposes."

The 143rd annual conference, which began Tuesday, June 4, ended three days later with the reading of new appointments by Bishop Walter C. Gum, who presided. The resolution stated that "the commercialization of the Lord's Day is increasing, and if allowed to continue, will eventually result in all business places staying open on Sunday for competitive purposes, thus resulting in more and more persons having to be employed on Sunday and deprived of the privileges of spiritual growth."

"It is the responsibility of each individual Christian to set the proper example before the world..." The ministers of the conference were urged "to preach on the spiritual values of the Lord's Day as a day for the worship of God and Christian education and the values of the Christian home."

Japan's national income has tripled since 1952, reports the June Reader's Digest. Today only the U. S., the Soviet Union and West Germany are ahead in total industrial production and Japan may be on the point of overtaking West Germany. Each year the Japanese put more than a quarter of their national income into new investment.

Lexington, Ky.—U. K. Ag Experiment Station animal husbandry researchers, after three years of experiments, still are hunting a material to go with fat and urea in steer rations. Their latest test, reported recently by Neil Bradley, researcher, showed again "no particularly favorable results" from the use of distillers' dried grains with solubles (DDG/S) with fat and urea rations.

USE GROUND BEEF
With ground beef plentiful in June, USDA suggests hamburger pancakes as a simple, tasty variation. To prepare, stir a cup of cooked, seasoned ground beef crumbles into medium-thick pancake batter. Cook as for regular pancakes and serve in stacks with mushroom gravy toppings.

A tree cricket can tell you the temperature, says the June Reader's Digest. Count the number of his chirps in 15 seconds, and add 39—this will give you the temperature in degrees Fahrenheit. A less-known fact about all crickets is that their song changes when they are in love.

What's Going On in FISH & WILDLIFE

By MINOR CLARK, Commissioner
Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources

Q. We own a farm in Breckinridge County but do not live on it yet. Is that considered a residence and do I have free fishing? Louis Wimpelberg, Evansville, Indiana.

A. Ownership of a pond does not constitute a residency. Therefore, until you move to your farm you will be required to purchase a valid fishing license to fish in your pond. In your case the valid license would be a non-resident, costing $5.00. When you move to your farm, of course, no licenses will be required to either hunt or fish on it.

Q. I've been hearing many reports about the fabulous white bass fishing in Kentucky's major lakes. Night fishing is producing the greatest yields, according to reports. I was wondering, since the creel limit is 60 per day, could a man fish all night, that is, start before midnight and end up the next day and have two limits in his possession? Not that I'd ever catch that many, but I'd just like to know, in case. R. W. C., Madison, Ind.

A. You have misinterpreted the limits allowed on white bass. The creel and possession limits are the same—60. Therefore, a person could have but 60 in his possession regardless of the time fished.

Q. What are the hours for visiting the Game Farm? Are there picnic tables available? G. B. H., Shelbyville

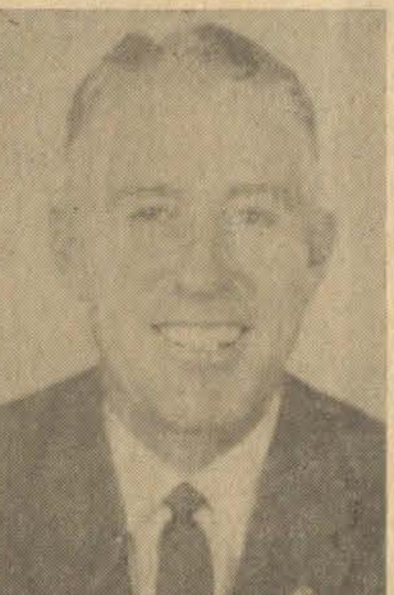

A. The Game Farm, which is located three miles west of Frankfort on Highway 60, is open to visitors from eight in the morning until 5 p.m. A shelter house and picnic areas are available. The Farm is open seven days a week.

What's Your Question about the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources? Send it to Minor Clark, commissioner, Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Frankfort, Ky., and it will be answered in this column in the near future. All questions must be signed by the sender but initials only will be used in the column, if desired.

Reynolds Thanks People

I am deeply grateful to the voters of Legislative District No. 95 for their support in my successful race for the Democratic nomination for Representative. I wish it were possible for me to say, "Thank you," to each of you personally, but, since this is not possible, please accept this statement as my sincere expression of gratitude to you all. I also would congratulate my opponents upon their sportsmanlike conduct, and I wish each of them well. My concept of my duty to the people is now, after the election, the same as it was before. I will work hard for the greatest good for the greatest number of our people. Sincerely, W. J. "Bill" REYNOLDS, JR.

FOR DELIGHT AND A FIGHT TRY WHITE BASS AT NIGHT

Frankfort, Ky. (Spl.)—White bass populations in Kentucky's major lakes afford excellent sport for night fishermen who use live bait, according to the Fisheries Division of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

More and more sportsmen are trying their hand at the art of white bass fishing and it is not too uncommon for a pair of fishermen to return to the dock and throw a string of whites on the scales that will weigh well over a hundred pounds.

Fishing for white bass at night, as a rule, takes place after the fish have completed their spawning run to the tributary streams and have returned to the lake proper.

Fishermen need the following equipment to be comfortable as well as to have the necessary gear for this special type of angling: Warm clothes such as insulated underwear, insulated boots, head gear that will keep the ears warm, heavy jacket and pants, rain gear, thermos bottles for coffee and soup, flash light, gasoline or coal oil lanterns (at least two are needed equipped with reflectors to cast the light towards the open water and out of the eyes of the fisherman) at least 100 large minnows per fisherman, two anchors with at least one hundred feet of rope for each anchor, minnow dipnets, large landing net optional, at least three rods and reels per fisherman, and a good supply of assorted sized hooks and sinkers.

White bass seem to strike better when the moon is not visible or during the period that the

Geological Map Program Of Kentucky Outstanding In Nation, Dr. Nolan Says

Frankfort, Ky., June 13—The State of Kentucky is "getting ready for tomorrow" in carrying out a statewide geological mapping program, according to Dr. Thomas B. Nolan, Washington, director of the U. S. Geological Survey.

Keynote speaker at a Frankfort meeting concerning progress and importance of the Kentucky mapping work begun in 1960, Dr. Nolan added that "at the conclusion of this program, Kentucky will be well ahead of the rest of the nation" in detailed knowledge of rock formations found in the Commonwealth.

He said that the $12 million program will have many practical results, including a knowledge of "what minerals and construction materials can be obtained from the land and what types of structures can safely be built on it." The program is being financed by federal and state matching funds.

The speaker pointed out that geological mapping is different from other forms of mapping in that "much that is depicted on geological maps is unseen." He said that the geologist "actually sees less than one per cent of all the rock formations" depicted on his maps.

Dr. Nolan pointed out that "only 20 per cent of the nation has been mapped at a scale of one mile to the inch" and added that many of the individual maps are "old, crude and out of date," and praised Kentucky for its statewide geological mapping program to be completed about 1970.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

seen many a bean so highly favored frozen or frosted down; something must have bot crossed up with the signs, as happened with my potatoes in 1918: I do not know when they were planted, but they froze to the ground on the night of May 1. I hope that this calamity, which I shared, of course, with all my neighbors, was not brought on by my neglecting to plant my spuds in the dark of the moon. But all the other taters froze, too, regardless of the time of their planting.

How about the weather signs that you used to believe in? Do you still cling to them, so as not to lose connection with Pa and Grandpa? Or do you look first, as I do, at each morning or afternoon paper to see what the weather promises to be for the next day or two? And do you still cling to the ancient belief that only your political party or your church or your social group knows and knew all the answers? If you do, why try to adjust to a changing world, which must look very short-sighted and wicked to you?

KENTUCKIANS CHALLENGED IN RIFLE CONTROVERSY

Frankfort, Ky., June 13—Ol' Dan'l Boone would have turned over in his grave if he could have seen what was going on in Frankfort last week.

Eight Pennsylvanians, clad in frontier garb and armed with the weapon Boone made famous, the "Kentucky" Long Rifle, rode into Kentucky's capital city on horseback and issued a challenge to Kentuckians to prove their claims to the old, muzzle-loading, flint-lock weapon.

They were met by a militia of buckskin-clad Kentuckians also brandishing the long rifles.

The Northern invaders, who had just completed the more than 900-mile, 20-day trip from Reading, Pa., claimed the weapon is misnamed because it was developed in Pennsylvania before being brought to Kentucky by Boone and other frontiersmen. Kentuckians admit this but point out the rifle was made famous in the Blue Grass state.

Fred Gehm, leader of the riders and in real life a television producer in Mechanicsburg, Pa., read a challenge to Gov. Bert Combs from Pennsylvania Governor William Scranton.

Among other things, the proclamation challenged Kentucky to a shootout to settle the dispute, once and for all.

In responding to the challenge, Governor Combs said, "We congratulate you on getting here. Actually, we thought you never would. Without the aid and comfort of the 'Kentucky' Long Rifles you carried, you probably wouldn't have made it."

The oldest member of the Pennsylvania group, J. E. McCracken, 75, of Bethlehem, Pa., was awarded a Kentucky Colony by Combs.

Col. George M. Chinn, director of the Kentucky Historical Society, said the Pennsylvanians "are the claimant bunch of people I have ever met."

"They claimed Pennsylvania wrote 'My Old Kentucky Home' and the Kentucky Constitution," Chinn said, "and even claimed they first grew the Kentucky state flower, the Goldenrod."

"I thought I had them the other day when we saw a Kentucky Cardinal," Chinn continued, "but they told me it was only a Pennsylvania sparrow suffering from high blood pressure."

Chinn met the group when they first entered Kentucky at the Cumberland Gap on May 30.

Details for the shootouts will be worked out between the two states. One match will be held in Kentucky, the other in Pennsylvania.

The strawberry season will move northward this month, but supplies are expected to be somewhat limited because of a small crop. Rhubarb will continue in season through June. Also in June, watermelons, a few grapes, cantaloupes, and blueberries will begin to appear. Pineapple supplies will begin to dwindle by the middle of the month. Good quality apples will be available, but apple prices will begin to rise this month because of lessening supplies in storage.

Stephens Discusses Election

The Primary election held on May 29, 1963, was what you call a duzies or bundlinger. The voting machines are a grand thing if operated by honest people, and the introduction of these machines has brought some of the biggest steals in history; but, since the world is now going at a fast pace, the people are demanding speed, notwithstanding the result.

There were many people selected as election officers who did not serve and a lot of the best ones were no doubt persuaded not to serve as there was a desire to replace them with other officers of the election who would go along in the Big Deal, and it has been demonstrated beyond a reasonable doubt that in many places where the two judges were of the same opinion as to candidates for the various offices, there is ample reason to believe that any person who entered the booth to vote and could not handle these machines the switches or levers were turned or perhaps could not read or write, and in this manner the person voting was voted opposite to what he advised the officers and were voted for the agreed plan by the two judges. I don't mean that this happened in all precincts but it did happen in many of them.

The old ballot system was far more honest in that the ballot of the person who could not read or write was checked with a dot in the square of his choice and the voter retired to his place of voting and placed his stencil where designated if he so desired or he could change it, and this was done in the presence of all the officers and there was no chance of a BIG DEAL. The only person under the OLD SYSTEM who would vote on the table was a blind person. I think it better to wait a few days later to know the true count than to be in a mad rush to know the result quickly. However, the WORLD IS IN A MAD RUSH, not knowing where it is going or what will be the out come.

I do not believe in CONTEST SUITS and never did and I am of the opinion that the majority of the people do not, so it is better in the long run to abide by the result and let the people be the judge.

In this Primary I had many kinfolk, cousins and double cousins who were so strong for Governor Breathitt that some of them would not dare even mention my name as it might hurt Breathitt. Although I had been a teacher for six years in the rural schools of Floyd county, and notwithstanding that they or part of them lined me up with Chandler. I had more than six thousand dollars in the campaign of Breathitt but I was given the BUM'S rush and pushed by the way-side. You know in elections you may do a thousand accommodations for your friends, but when it comes a time that you cannot do one more favor, your best friends will turn against you because you couldn't do the last one. Well, I might say in closing this article, that I have won a victory in that I am rid of the beggars, bums and deadbeats, and at least I can have a little peace and rest.

The people may get tired of reading what I have to say, but I have plenty more to come. Whether they like the truth or not, it will ultimately prevail in the end, regardless of what they think.

TUBERCULOSIS CASE TOTAL FOR KENTUCKY IS 9,222

Frankfort, Ky., June 2 (Spl.)—The state register of tuberculosis cases has been brought up to date with 9,222 active and inactive cases listed, according to Dr. M. Stuart Lauder, director of the program for the Kentucky State Department of Health.

Dr. Lauder noted that this was a reduction of the total number of cases from 16,986. The greater part of this has been in the inactive cases which have come down from 14,678 to 5,924 largely due to omitting cases which have not been heard from in the past five years. If these cases turn up in the future, they will again be listed with complete information.

On the other hand, Dr. Lauder stated, the number of active cases has increased from 2,305 to 3,298 which represents, to a considerable extent, better reporting and case finding.

Work is continuing on setting up county registers and should be completed within a year's time. The registers for Hart, Rockcastle and Franklin counties have been completed and show 78, 75 and 85 cases respectively.

This work on the registers and laboratory research on sensitivity to various drugs of tuberculosis organisms isolated from cases was

It was there at Ivy Narrows that "Bull" Nelson, the Union commander and Capt. Andrew Jackson, Confederate, contested for supremacy in the valley on that cold, gray day of November 8, 1861. Col. Harry was dead then. He departed in 1850, at an advanced age, the decades on the frontier and in the new country of the Big Sandy valley having lain lightly on him. He lived much longer than most of his pioneer compatriots.

Right where the section of the Sounding Gap road ends in a private yard a couple of hundred feet above Col. Harry's old home, the Confederate cavalrymen hitched their horses after rushing hurriedly from Pikeville to re-inforce Capt. May at the Battle of Ivy Mountain. There the horses stood and pawed the earth as the cannon rolled half a mile away. They were still there swinging the limbs to which they were tied when the fleeing Confederates reclaimed them to ride south toward Pikeston.

Gone now are the covered wagons, the iron-laden ox carts and the herds of half-wild hogs driven eastward. The roll of Nelson's cannon is but a footnote in history and the fleeing Confederates are not even ghosts along the way.

Remaining at the site of the Col. Harry Stratton home are only the almost impenetrable thicket of water birches and a few decayed logs of the slave house.

Overlooking the historic home site are only a few hundred feet of the Sounding Gap Road that begins at a wire fence and ends in a yard, but a century and a half go it began at the top of the Cumberland ridge and connected with highways to the eastern seaboard.

West it wended its way into the wilderness, carrying a bit of that restless tide of empire that was building America.

John Wesley Wallace, 53, Brother of Floyd Man, Dies At Hamilton, Ohio

John Wesley Wallace, 53, of 690 Rost Hill Drive, Hamilton, Ohio, died last Friday in Hughes Memorial hospital. Although he had been hospitalized previously and had been in failing health for a year, his death was a shock to relatives and his many friends.

Mr. Wallace was born in Johnson county, Dec. 4, 1909, a son of William F. and Florence Arrowood Wallace. He was educated in the schools of the county and at Pikeville. On June 21, 1934, he married Burlie Turner in Wayland, Ky.

Mr. Wallace was a supervisor at the National Lead Plant in Hamilton for several years and for nine months had been employed by the Monsanto Chemical Corp., at Miamisburg, Ohio.

He was an ardent golfer, was an active member of the James W. Alley Lodge 689, Free and Accepted Masons, Wayland, and had a wide circle of friends.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Burlie Wallace; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Wallace, Wayland; a son, Larry Wallace, a daughter, Mrs. Ruby Lee Tufts, both of Hamilton; three brothers, James Wallace, Hamilton, Thomas Wallace, Wayland, Robert Wallace, Prestonsburg; a sister, Mrs. Walter Adams, Louisa, and five grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at 2 p.m. Monday in the Webb Funeral Home chapel, with Rev. F. C. Tuttle, pastor of the Southern Hills Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was in the Rose Hill Memorial Park.

A Pictorial Review of East Kentucky
(No. 241 in a Series)

Prof. Walter Montgomery Byington (1861-1934)

Prof. Walter M. Byington, one of the most beloved Eastern Kentucky educators, was born at East Fork, Lawrence county, Ky., May 9, 1861. He received his college education at Marshall College, Huntington, W. Va., and at Ohio State College, Columbus, O. Early dedicating himself to teaching, he entered the profession at Inez but came to Prestonsburg in 1892 where he established the Eastern Kentucky Normal School. Such was the fame of the Prestonsburg institution that more than 700 pupils were in attendance at one time.

From Prestonsburg, Prof. Byington moved to Louisa where he established the Eastern Kentucky Normal College, a preparatory school for teachers. Following years of service at Louisa, he went to Martin, Floyd County, for two years. At the time of his death he was Boyle County (Ky.) Superintendent of Schools, at Danville. He died July 6, 1934, and lies buried at Rose Hill cemetery, Ashland.

The First National Bank salutes the memory of the beloved educator and the hundreds of men and women who studied under him and afterward embarked upon careers that contributed greatly to the development of our region.
