CITY COUNCIL VOTES PURCHASE OF TRACT COMMUNITY PLAYGROUND IS PLANNED

22-Acres On Middle Cr. Cost Set At $11,000; Dr. Archer Comments

The Prestonsburg City Council voted Tuesday night to purchase from the heirs of the late Hiram Harris 22 acres of land at the outskirts of West Prestonsburg as a start toward realization of a community dream of a city park and general recreation area.

The acreage, lying on both sides of Middle Creek upstream from the access bridge from the Mountain Parkway into West Prestonsburg, will be bought for $11,000.

"This is something I've been trying to do, ever since I became Mayor," commented Mayor George P. Archer.

Asked about plans for the development, Mayor Archer said, "This is something you can use your imagination on; the only limit is money and our willingness to work."

He said there is no present assurance of federal financial help. "But we're trying," he added, saying that he had contacted the Physical Fitness Program and 18 other federal agencies.

Development plans include:

1. A city park, with stream clearance and beautification to provide picnic grounds; flagstone walkways along either bank of the stream, with small bridges crossing it; benches and grills.

2. A playground to serve both sexes of all ages; Baseball and softball fields, tennis courts, basketball courts, croquet, horseshoes and other games.

Mayor Archer said a lease of 10 adjoining acres from the C. & O. Railway Company will be sought to enlarge the recreation area and make it the finest in Eastern Kentucky.

Discussing the beautification of the area, Dr. Archer said local clubs may be interested in rock gardens and other projects. The Junior Woman's Club, he said, already has indicated that it will accept preparation of tennis courts as one of its projects.

A shelter house, drinking water and rest-rooms are included in the long-range plan.

The Mayor pointed to the wide publicity given Mount Vernon, West Virginia, where a similar development has been made on a 100-acre tract to invite not only residents of that city but to claim the interest of industries seeking locations where such facilities are provided.

Cline Hale is the new manager of the golf course, succeeding Tommy Boyd who resigned to resume high school coaching and teaching work.

This Town... That World

This Redmore can gouge at point-blank range or from clear across the country. I got a card from him last week in which he told about being in L. A., visiting Disneyland, etcetera, and now, gung ho! off by jet for Hawaii. And does he wind up with a "Wish you were here?" Don't be naive! He signs off, instead, with this admonition to a desk-bound slave of the economic treadmill: "Work hard."

AHEAD OF TIME

THE FLOYD COUNTY TIMES was at least three weeks ahead of TIME Magazine with that set of curious coincidences in the lives of Presidents Kennedy and Lincoln and the Vice Presidents Johnson. TIME got it into print only this week, with this addition from the G.O.P. camp: Name of the President who succeeded President Andrew Johnson began with a G.

Another of Burke's elephant jokes:

What do you do when an elephant climbs a tree? Don't know? Why, you simply chase him out onto the tip of a leaf and wait for fall.

VICIOUS DOG

This rather well-known character of a dog around town encounters a cat. A black-as-Satan job with greenish eyes, he was, and he arches his back and spits something awful at the very sight of the dog. Then this feline proof that black cats consider themselves as good as white dogs ambles as calmly away as a cat can amble. And what does his dogship do? He strolls over to a nearby tree, inspects the bark, figures it's a sweet gum, by gum, then decides the nearest telephone pole is too near that black rooster, anyhow.

THE OLD DIESEL OIL

They say, "Laughter is the best medicine." So we prescribe a sure cure for whatever ails you. Take one envelope used by the C. & O. Railway Company and read what they have printed across the face thereof—hee, hee!

It says—"Do it better with coal." I'm cured by that one line of everything but a stitch in the side, doc. It's killing me! "Do it better with coal." And they burn only diesel oil to haul the stuff.

A stenographer, it says here, is a girl you pay while she is learning to type while waiting to get married.

STAMP PLAN TO EXPAND

Floyd Pilot Program Demonstrated Results; Sales Up 11 Percent

As a direct result of lessons learned in Floyd county and seven other areas where the program has been operated on an experimental basis since mid-1961, Congress has decided to expand the food-stamp program.

Yet to be financed, the expanded program will permit up to $75 million to be spent in the 12-month period which began July 1. The total would rise to $100 million next year, and in the third year up to $200 million could be spent.

Results of the pilot effort, which had been documented in Congressional testimony and studies by the Department of Agriculture, show that the food stamps have:

1. Spurred needy families to increase their expenditures for food and to buy more nutritious food.

2. Made significant contributions to the economies of local communities, including depressed areas.

3. Helped hold down the nation's agricultural surpluses of grain.

These studies, based on statistics gathered in Floyd and other pilot areas, show that the consumption of meat and poultry—the products of grain-consuming animals—and flour increased significantly among food-stamp recipients.

In Detroit, for example, it was found that the switch from the surplus-commodity food program to the food-stamp program caused the consumption of meat among recipients of the stamps to increase by 37 percent, flour by 19 percent, and poultry by 32 percent.

This increased consumption pulled into the commercial market grains that would have otherwise ended up in government storage at an expense to taxpayers.

Studies in Detroit and Pennsylvania in addition to revealing

WAGE RATES TO REMAIN

Management, Union Negotiate Agreement Affecting Hospitals

Appalachian Regional Hospitals, Inc., and district 50 of the United Mine Workers have agreed to keep in effect present wage rates for nonprofessional workers in the five eastern Kentucky hospitals A.R.H. acquired last year.

Wage rates in the five additional hospitals acquired by A.R.H. July 1, and the possibility of a wage reopener, will be submitted to binding arbitration.

The agreement on the new contracts was announced Friday by S. W. Duncan and William J. Meagher of the Federal Mediation & Conciliation Service.

Dr. Karl S. Klicka, president of the nonprofit A.R.H., which acquired the hospitals from the union's Welfare and Retirement Fund, had sought a 2 percent wage decrease for the employees. The pay cut was to assure continued operation of the hospitals, he said.

The hospitals had sought the pay reduction in the contract covering about 300 workers in the initial group of hospitals acquired and also in the new contract to be negotiated for workers in the second group of hospitals.

FLOYD MAN IS CHARGED

With Assault, Battery; Fayette Prisoner Says James Morell Beat Him

James Morell, Jr., 30, former Prestonsburg man who was Fayette county's deputy jailer from January 6 till early July, this year, was held last Wednesday to the Fayette grand jury following a hearing in quarterly court at Lexington on an assault and battery charge filed against him by a prisoner who claimed Morell had beaten him.

The action came as a result of a warrant obtained by the prisoner, Billy Joe Eldridge.

Morell, who reportedly told Jailer John Luby that he was defending himself, did not testify.

Eldridge, arrested for being drunk and carrying a razor concealed July 7, testified that the beating occurred as Morell booked him into the jail.

The Lexington Leader thus reported the hearing:

The man testified that Morell struck him with a "slap-jack" loaded with lead two or three times after he was ordered to take his clothing off and that later "he slapped me five or six times with the slap-jack about the face and head.

"I dropped my ring and he pushed and shoved me . . . he ripped my shirt off me . . . I was hit across the kidneys twice . . . he stomped me after I fell over the stove . . ." Eldridge said.

Eldridge paused in his testimony periodically to detail his appearance:

"I had on my crash helmet (I ride a motorcycle), a leather jacket and tight riding boots and a pair of thin trousers . . . He threw my $50 jacket down . . . It made me mad . . . That shirt cost $25 or $30 . . . The boots were tight and wet and I couldn't get them off by myself."

Asked by Assistant County Attorney Lawson King if he was afraid during the assault, Eldridge replied:

"No, I wasn't afraid . . . I was scared, but not afraid . . . I knew I was going to take a beating."

Defense Attorney John Core asked whether he cursed the officer, Eldridge replied that he did not. "Sure I cussed . . . every time he hit me I cussed, but not at him . . . I just cussed," he said.

Eldridge also told of being mistreated while being placed on the elevator and accused Morell of trying to "come inside the cell after me . . . but the other guys told him I'd had enough and lined up to keep him out."

Prestonsburg Businessmen Issue Invitation To Big Mud Residents To Discuss Need Of Bus Service

Residents of the upper section of this county are requested to visit with the managers of Prestonsburg stores and give their views on the establishment of a bus line to serve them, it was said this week by a spokesman for the Prestonsburg Chamber of Commerce.

Plans at present call for two or three trips each day by a city bus line from Prestonsburg to serve shoppers and college students commuters in the section above Allen. The bus line would extend to Harold in order to afford facilities to people living on Mud Creek.

"We would like to meet and become acquainted with shoppers and people doing business in Prestonsburg from the upper section of the county," the Chamber of Commerce member said.

"Come in, ask to see the manager and let's talk about how the proposed bus line can better serve you."

The Chamber, as a feature of good will is distributing 500 free copies of The Floyd County Times each week from Harold to Beaver, it was pointed out. This is being done to acquaint people with Prestonsburg stores and businessmen.

ALMOST DESERTED BUT NOT QUITE. This little knot of visitors remained to chat and while away the time on the porch of the old courthouse here after the building had been vacated, a few days ago, by county offices.

UK AND AFFILIATES OFFER NEW PROGRAM

Prestonsburg's brand-new Community College will have a part this year, in association with its parent institution, the University of Kentucky, in a program few institutions of higher learning in the United States have ever offered.

Officially known as the Herman L. Donovan Senior Citizens Fellowship Program, it will provide for persons 65 years or older to enroll in classes at the University, or at community colleges operating under the aegis of the University, without fee obligation.

Dr. John W. Oswald, UK president, described it as a program which is not an experiment or a basis for research "but a means of demonstrating that an institution such as this can constantly increase its resources and services to all."

"Now," said Dr. Oswald, "we have an opportunity to do something for Kentucky's senior citizens, and we feel that the classroom aid we render will not only enrich their lives but will serve as a stepping stone in the state's goal for a better educated, better informed populace."

Any person over 65, regardless of his educational background, may enroll without charge for classwork on the main UK campus at Lexington, at the Prestonsburg Community College or elsewhere at Ashland, Henderson, Cumberland, Covington, Elizabethtown, Fort Knox or Hopkinsville.

One of the regulations is that a class professor must approve an enrollment for his course under this plan.

Regular night courses offered on the main campus also may be taken but extension courses, correspondence courses and special classes organized on a non-credit basis are excluded. All regular requirements must be completed if a participant desires credit for a course.

The deadline for returning completed application forms is August 28.

Dr. Earl Kauffman, director of the Council on Aging, will receive applications from persons who wish to participate in the program on the Lexington campus. Application for course work at the Prestonsburg Community College must be made through its director, Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr.

Application forms and additional information on the program may be obtained from the office of the Council on Aging, Alumni Gymnasium Building, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky.

304 APPLY AT COLLEGE
Enrollment Expected To Reach 325 Total; Courses Announced

With the opening of the Prestonsburg Community College about two weeks ahead, 304 students had filed applications, Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr., director of the college, said Tuesday.

Two hundred thirty-four students took part in pre-registration activities at the college last week, and the student body, exclusive of night and extension classes, is expected to reach 325 by opening day, September 3. The deadline for acceptance of applications still stands at September 2.

At an organizational meeting Monday, approximately 75 persons interested in attending evening classes on the freshman and sophomore levels for residence credit organized five classes with an average of 14 persons per class. Each class was set up to meet two days a week and each person enrolled during the same evening if he or she wished to do so. Following is the schedule of evening classes, based on the demands of those persons present for the organizational meeting.

English 201—Business English, Tuesday and Thursday, 6:6-50 p.m.; Commerce 112—Short-hand, Tuesday and Thursday, 7:8-15 p.m.; Biology 125—General Plant Biology, Tuesday and Thursday, 7:30-8:45 p.m.; Education 101—Teacher in American Schools, Tuesday and Thursday, 6:7-15 p.m.; Commerce 107—Principles of Accounting, Monday and Wednesday, 6:7-15 p.m.

Registration for admittance to these evening classes will not be closed until after the first meeting on September 7.

This is the arrangement that the majority of those attending the organizational meeting have requested. However, if a change in the time or day is preferred, this will be a matter to be decided by the class when it meets with the instructor.

SIX STILLS DESTROYED

Raiders Hit Shiners On Little Mud, Beaver; Hale Uses Bloodhound

One day's work last week by county, state and federal officers reduced the number of moonshine stills operating in the county by six.

Working alone, Tuesday of last week, Deputy Sheriff Harold Johnson confiscated a two-barrel still and nine half-gallons of whiskey and arrested Walker and Okie Hall at the still on the head of Little Mud Creek.

The same afternoon, he, Deputy Sheriffs Sam Hale and Lonnie Herald returned to Little Mud and captured a still in the next hollow above the site of the first. The fire was still going, but the operators had fled.

Johnson took his prisoners before the U. S. Commissioner at Ashland. (The office of commissioner at Pikeville has been vacated by resignation and has not been filled, it was said.)

The same day, State ABC Agent Claude A. Flanery and Federal Agent Sam Simpson cut up three stills, one at the mouth of Lick Fork of Salt Lick Creek, another on Garbage Hollow, near Allen, and the third on Toler's Creek. Nobody was arrested at either operation.

Sheriff Henry C. Hale put to work his bloodhound Sunday night after Hall's Store on the head of Branham's Creek had a been broken into. The dog trailed a youth from the store to a house and there singled him out of a group of seven persons, officers said. The boy denied guilt. State Police are studying fingerprints.

Chief of Police Bill Potter and Policeman Ralph Thornsbury jailed Bill Smith last Thursday on a charge of selling whiskey here. Smith's trial in police court was set for Wednesday of this week. Policemen Ray Click and Woodrow Salvors arrested G. W. Cornett on a drunk driving charge, Saturday night. Others booked at the county jail, charges lodged against them, and names of arresting officers follow:

Trimbie Smith, hunting without license, jailed by Conservation Officer Don Meade, who also booked F. R. Robinson on a charge of possessing a squirrel.

MOTEL NEED CITED IF PLAY PRESENTED

What are the chances of the staging next year of the Jenny Wiley drama now being written by Paul Greene, famed playwright, at the Jenny Wiley amphitheatre?

If recent experiences are to be considered, those chances are slim.

Last week-end, when "Oklahoma!" was presented at the amphitheatre by a cast of Lexington high school and college students, all motels in Prestonsburg, Paintsville and Pikeville and points between were filled to capacity, it was reported. The attendance both nights averaged about 600.

When a representative of the Louisville Symphony Orchestra came here recently to make preparations for an appearance at the amphitheatre next month, he could not book motel accommodations for the 90 musicians. Returning to Louisville, he wrote Chalmers H. Frazier, president of the Jenny Wiley Drama Association, sponsor of the series of the amphitheatre attractions this year, that the orchestra would not come here this year because of lack of housing but would be glad to come when such accommodations are available.

What would be the situation if the Jenny Wiley drama were in production at the amphitheatre, running nightly? Is the question pestering the thinking of members of the drama association?

The lodge and vacation cabins at Jenny Wiley State Park are full till after Labor Day, and no let-up in the demand for accommodations there is seen next year. Tourists in ever-growing numbers are visiting this park and other scenic spots in the area, and park accommodations fall far short of meeting the demand for rooms. There is a possibility that additional vacation cottages will be built, but these will not meet the demand. The motel business in the valley hit an all-time peak this year, and present accommodations are unable to meet any sizeable influx of new customers.

What, then, will the situation be next year, or the next, as the Eastern Kentucky mountains call the vacationers more strongly to the vacation-minded from a large area of the nation? And what would it be if the Jenny Wiley drama were staged, attracting additional thousands to Jenny Wiley State Park and the area?

SMALL-MINE BILL FAILS

Safety Act Exemption Was Provided in Bill; Howard Smith Opposed

An effort to bring coal mines employing fewer than 15 miners under the enforcement provisions of the Federal Mines Safety Act failed in the House Monday.

Although a vote of 202 to 151 favored the bill, it was short of the two-thirds majority needed under the parliamentary procedure that got the bill to a vote.

The late President Kennedy sought this measure after statistics showed that from 1940 to 1962 there were 250 accidents in small underground mines in which 94 men were killed and 183 were injured.

The bill would have repealed the exemption from the safety act now given mines employing fewer than 15 miners.

Federal mine inspectors now may inspect the small mines, but lack the power to shut them down if they find safety violations.

Opponents charged that the real issue was a struggle by big mines to take over little ones. There were several provisions that mine closings would follow the bill's enactment.

"This should be called the miners unemployment act of 1964," said Representative W. Pat Jennings (D., Va.), a leader of the opposition.

But Representative John P. Saylor (R., Pa.), a supporter of the bill, contended that the only question involved was, "Do you want to give the operators of small mines a license to kill?"

Jennings said that small mines have a better safety record than big ones and that the states are capable of enforcing their own safety standards.

This was disputed by Representative John H. Dent (D., Pa.), author of the bill. He cited a mine accident in Pennsylvania in 1963 that occurred eight days after a federal inspector recommended that the mine be shut down. One man was killed and two saved after a perilous rescue operation.

Rules Committee Chairman Howard Smith (D., Va.) was against even bringing the bill out of committee for a vote.

"It seems interesting to me that we've just appropriated $1 billion to cure poverty in the anti-

CARTER BUYS PARTNERSHIP

Callihan Accepts Job With Statewide Group; Present Staff Retained

W. R. Callihan, who has been employed as field counsel by the Kentucky Funeral Directors and Embalmers Association, has sold his interest in the Carter & Callihan Funeral Home here to his partner in the business, Coroner James J. Carter.

Mr. Carter assumed full control of the business on August 1, the day Mr. Callihan began work with the state organization, it was said.

Callihan's work covers the entire state, and his duties will involve the ethical and legal operation of all Kentucky funeral homes.

The two Prestonsburg men had been associated in the operation of the Carter & Callihan Funeral Home here since its founding in May, 1946. They acquired the Arnold Funeral Home in March, 1952, after the death of E. P. Arnold, and merged the two businesses.

The business will continue to bear the name of the Carter & Callihan Funeral Home.

Mr. Carter said he will retain his present staff of assistants. "With these employees I will work to continue the same friendly and efficient service Mr. Callihan and I have offered the people over the last 18 years," he said.

ENTRY RIGHT FROM COURT IS REQUIRED

All Offices Vacated By County Officials; Surfacing Bids Seen

Clifford B. Latta, executive director of the Municipal Housing Commission, said Tuesday that the work of razing the old Floyd county courthouse may be begun Monday if the fiscal court grants right of entry.

The 73-year-old structure has been vacated by all county offices, only the old jail still being occupied as the new jail in the third story of the new courthouse is being completed. Transfer of prisoners to the new jail is not expected before September 1.

Razing of the old court building and clearing of the lot will be the biggest job to be undertaken in the urban renewal development here. Clearing of the site of the Central Business District project, between Front and Second streets is almost complete.

Bids will be asked within two weeks for surfacing of both projects, Latta said, although that work must await clearing of the grounds. Sidewalk construction will be done before the Central Business District paving is begun, and surfacing there may not start for another 30 days.

Both areas will provide large parking lots and will be developed also to beautify the town.

AREA HELP ENVISIONED

War On Poverty Law Enacted by Congress; Provisions Explained

Floyd county officials say they have no information on the immediate plans of the federal government in Eastern Kentucky under the President's war on poverty program but they are ready to cooperate with the law's implementation as soon as plans are outlined.

This section is marked for massive aid in the program, news dispatches from Washington say. A total of $6.5 million is earmarked under formulas for Kentucky in three of the nine programs authorized by the recently-enacted law. Congress earmarked the funds for Kentucky state government, communities and colleges. Specifically, this money will aid community action programs in local battles against poverty, assist college students to continue their education and to teach adults to read and write.

The latter program has already been initiated by the Floyd County Board of Education here, under the supervision of James Salisbury.

Some of the other provisions of the law is the creation of youth camps to train young men and women in new skills and give them outdoor conservation experience. The bill also provides aid to small businessmen and farmers.

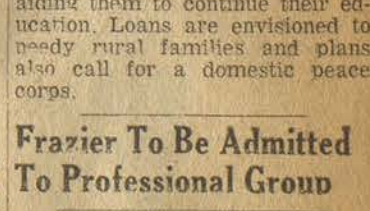

Needy youths between the ages of 16 and 21 would be put in a youth corps with the purpose of aiding them to continue their education. Loans are envisioned to needy rural families and plans also call for a domestic peace corps.

VOICES OF OLD MEN RECALL
FAMILY HISTORY FOR COURT

Two and a quarter centuries ago William Patrick Vaughan rode into the wilderness of Western North Carolina and claimed a Cherokee maid, Fair-a-Bee-Lunah, as a bride. Two centuries later, a descendant of this union left Eastern Kentucky and married Clarence Hokiashsee, full-blood Osage, in Oklahoma. Between those two events Vaughans pioneered Northwest Arkansas and Eastern Kentucky. Many moved on west with the tide of empire.

Following the marriage of Nellie Burchett and Clarence Hokiashsee, Prestonsburg attorneys found themselves engrossed with the strangest litigation of their experience as they probed the centuries for a record. Not finding it, they read the past by listening to the voices of old men.

The young trader came out on a sharp promontory, brought his string of pack-laden horses to a halt. The evening sun was dropping below the high horizon of the Western North Carolina woods, and dusk was entering the deep valleys.

Down under him, the trail descended sharply to the foot of the mountain and then snaked across an expanse of level land, marked by deadened trees where Indian corn had grown. A quarter-mile away, half-hidden by towering hardwoods, the Cherokee tepees stood like giant harvest shocks around a central log council house. Smoke drifted lazily from the bark and skin houses. The trader knew that the Cherokees were partaking of the evening meal.

He swung a long trader's whip, and the horses began the arduous descent, dropping to their haunches at times, weaving and fighting themselves with their burden of trade goods. At the foot of the mountain he halted the pack strings, examined the tied bundles and with dexterous strokes of the whip drew the animals into a single file. Leading himself, he rode into the Indian village.

The first sentinel dog to bark was the signal for village turmoil. The yelping canines, appearing from half a hundred places, gathered into a giant pack, many of them threatening to bite the horses' ankles but discreetly retiring from the poised feet. Simultaneously with the massing of the dogs, warriors, squaws and children erupted from the tepees into the village street. Around William Patrick Vaughan was a swirling mass of dogs and savages.

The Indians would not wait until the next day to view the goods and Vaughan spread them out in the council house. Like spoiled children, they examined the trinkets, cloth, cooking utensils, bright ribbons and scores of other articles. The gunpowder was unloaded and set aside. The rifles were stacked where no sneaking buck could steal away with one without the wary eye of the white man seeing him.

An Indian girl nudged Vaughan and held up a bolt of bright cloth. He turned, stood non-plussed for a moment at the beauty of this child of the forest. She spoke bits of English for traders had been here before.

Tradition tells us that Vaughan was so stricken that he forgot his canny Welsh trade talk. Bronzed with the summer suns and lissome as the willows, she moved with grace and poise among her people. Her father, sub-chief of the tribe, called her Fair-a-Bee-Lunah. It was his way of expressing with broken English and French that his daughter was "fair as the moon."

In a few days William Patrick Vaughan and his Indian bride moved out on the trail to other savage villages. They had been married by the simple Cherokee custom of tying a blanket around them. There had been much feasting, merry-making and bits of devility as the Indians celebrated the marriage of their fairest one to the great trader. Vaughan had acquired a bride, but his stock of trade goods was much reduced by the demands of the celebration. He had been easy game, but he felt no loss.

Two sons, probably others, and several daughters were born to the union. The two sons were William and Ayres. William pioneered Tennessee and, finally, Northwest Arkansas. Ayres came with the earliest homeseekers to Eastern Kentucky. Their descendants were prolific, wherever they went, naming their children Ayres, Patrick, LeRoy, Gabriel, Burwell, and other Welsh, Irish and English names, for the family had ancient forgotten roots in the English Isles.

Around ancient Tretower Castle in Wales, so old that antiquarians place it as being built before the Romans came to Britain, the Vaughans lived for hundreds of years. Many were mere yeomen, cut off by the laws of primogeniture from inheritance, but many others were prominent. Henry Vaughan, the Silurist, was the greatest of Welsh poets. Many met violent deaths. Sir Thomas Vaughan was beheaded by Richard III. Thomas Vaughan was executed by Henry VI for siding with the rebellious Yorks. Sir Roger Vaughan, another Yorkist, fell at the Battle of Danesmoor.

It was the yeoman Vaughans, men without title or land, who came to the New World. A title had no significance in America, and land was free. In England and Wales the Vaughans had ambition to serve their kings, in America they served themselves by acquiring property and land. William Patrick Vaughan acquired a competence before he died. His children sold it and with Indian blood coursing in their veins, moved west.

William Patrick, while in his prime, moved with his wife's people to East Tennessee. Here he prospered as he traded continually with the savages. He made long trips east to buy goods and his pack horses were well-known along the mountainous trails. Early in the first decade of the nineteenth century stories of Northwest Arkansas, then part of Missouri Territory, began to drift east, especially carried by the far-off Osage Indians who came to trade with Vaughan. They referred to the country of the Ozarks as The Land of Blue Skies and Laughing Waters. These far-ranging Indians told Vaughan a most unbelievable tale of medicinal springs that wrought wonders in curing the savages of disease. One in particular, they told Vaughan, was Magic Healing Spring, the most potent of all. An Osage took a stick and there before the tribal fire drew a diagram of its location and form. It was half-way up a mountain and flowed into a basin chiselled out of limestone.

what is now Northwest Arkansas. The date was a year just prior to 1823.

The family seat of the Vaughans was at Sweetens Cove, near the present Fayetteville, Tennessee. The Vaughans owned slaves and they had always extended them humane treatment. Among some of them was a genuine affection for the domestic help and the separation of 11-year-old Molly Vaughan from a Negro mammy for whom there was no room in a wagon, was heart-rending. She cried her self to sleep, night after night, as the wagon creaked westward.

The little colony went by way of the present Port Smith, then Belle Point. They pushed up into the Boston Mountains, then unnamed. Earlier William Vaughan had traveled east and visited the Massachusetts city and ever afterward he was wont to refer to anything big as "Boston." Getting over the mountain range then without anything better than an Indian trail or buffalo trace was a prodigious undertaking. When they had laboriously reached the top of the highest range and were ready to descend, William Vaughan looked out over the ridges and peaks, said: "They certainly are Bostons."

The Vaughans settled in the present Washington county and became its first pioneers. Phillip Harp went on farther to the present Carroll county. Mrs. Call, the Ozark writer, describes the homes they built for two of them were still standing in 1960.

In her book, WITHIN MY OZARK VALLEY, she wrote: "They were what is known as the Tennessee type log house, sometimes called the saddle-back type. They had two large rooms below, with a fireplace opening out from an open hallway between the two rooms called a 'dog trot.' . . . There were two upstairs rooms with a fireplace opening out into each room. The houses were built from the finest hand-squared logs to be found in the virgin forest."

Being the first settlers, they had no neighbors for years. Finally the Stones came to Northwest Arkansas. Molly Vaughan, who had left Tennessee as a mere slip of a girl, grew to womanhood and married Solomon Stone but she never ceased to talk of Sweeten's Cove. Northwest Arkansas owes much to the Tennessee Vaughans and the Kentucky Harps for it was they who widened out the buffalo traces and Indian trails to take the first wagon into the heart of the Ozarks and found a settlement. They were part of the vanguard of restless America always pushing west.

Ayres Vaughan, eldest son of William Patrick Vaughan and Fair-a-Bee-Lunah, had left the ancestral acres long before his brothers and sisters migrated to Arkansas. They never knew where he went. He had simply disappeared on the frontier. He could have been killed by Indians or met some fatal accident for all they knew.

He was very much alive, though, having reversed the usual trend of migration and come north to Virginia. Somewhere in his wanderings he found a wife. He was married and had several children when he came to the Big Sandy River and settled near Blockhouse Bottom, which was founded by the Harmons and Auxiers in the early 1790's. One of the sons was William W., named for his father and brother.

Ayres, born 1742, became the patriarch of the Big Sandy Vaughans. His descendants called him Grand sire and by the time he had reached the century mark and died his people had almost forgotten his name. He was Grand sire Vaughan in his lifetime and Grand sire Vaughan to all who recall the family traditions today.

He was proud of his Indian mother and told and retold the story of William Patrick Vaughan and Fair-a-Bee-Lunah. Born to an Indian mother and daily associated with redskin cousins, he became more familiar with his mother's tongue than his father's. All of his life he spoke broken English. To his grandchildren and great-grandchildren he was the most wonderful man in the world as he told Cherokee folk tales and at their behest chattered in the Indian language.

Farming, a little logging and much hunting occupied his entire life. Like his mother's tribe, he enjoyed the fascination of the chase and the deep solitudes of the woods. Game was plentiful in the Big Sandy valley the first quarter of the nineteenth century and Grand sire, pronounced Groncer by all who knew him, spent days of every season in the wilderness. Only in his extreme old age did he forego the pleasures of the hunt.

We know little of William W., his son, only that like his father there were several children in the family. There was Patrick, who married Susanna Hatfield in 1819; Susannah, one of the younger girls, who married Andrew Riddle in 1837; Elizabeth, still younger, who married William Crider in 1841, just a year before Grand sire died; and LeRoy, one of the eldest of the children. He was born either 1809 or 1810. Burwell was probably one of the children of William W. and grandson of Ayres. He married Susannah Hendricks in 1823 and left a numerous progeny in the valley.

LeRoy was the favorite grandchild of Grand sire Vaughan, probably because he had more Indian attributes than the other Vaughans. Before he died Grand sire had an instrument drawn up in which he conveyed to LeRoy a fine, young colt. In the instrument, now in the Floyd County Court Clerk's records, he was recognized as a grandson. That reference in the future would be an important piece of genealogical evidence as a Grand sire descendant sought to prove her Indian blood.

Grand sire Vaughan died at the home of a son on the river farm north of Prestonsburg. They buried him in the family cemetery; already beginning to fill with its members. Today it is known as the Old Vaughan Graveyard. A simple sandstone marker was erected and his people carved the inscription, "A.T.V. Age 100 DSD, Feb. 18, 1842."

In the decades that followed the death of Grand sire Vaughan his grave became a shrine of mystic attraction for his people and was visited by hundreds. Thomas Andrew Jackson Burchett, a grandson who was born in 1869 and knew him well, described him in a deposition in 1946. He was "dark, had coal black eyes and bright hair. Burchett was asked if Roy had the appearance of an Indian.

"Yes, sir, all the appearance of the old," he replied. "I remember when we used to go to school on Johns Creek and about that time that they would call us 'Indian kids.'"

Many of the oldest who knew Roy when a youngster deposed in 1946 as to his characteristics. He would manage to start an argument between his mates and when the inevitable fight resulted Roy would run off and laugh at the combatants. He carried these traits into manhood, delighting always in the discomfiture of those he had bested by a trick.

Typical of the stories told of Roy was how he maneuvered a traveler into trading a fine horse to a "plug" Roy, who was living on Buffalo Creek during the Civil War, had a horseman ride up one evening and ask for accommodations for the night. Roy, always garrulous and fond of company, accepted him as guest and took his horse to the barn. The animal was a fine specimen of the equine breed and Roy hatched a plan in his fertile brain.

Night came and his guest being sound asleep, Roy went out to the barn, removed nails from the animal's shoes and drove others back in place to thoroughly and temporarily lame it. The next morning Roy went to the barn and fed his horse and that of his guest but reported that the traveler's animal was lame. Examination of the animal revealed no cause and being in a hurry to leave, the traveler asked Roy how he would trade his work mare to the lame animal. After much verbal jockeying the trade was made and the traveler went his way. Roy immediately went in and drew out the laming nails.

A favorite expression of Eastern Kentuckians is, "Roy wants it all," and the majority of those using it have no inkling of its origin. Yet the story in which it is based is widely current today.

Roy's mother lay on her death bed, oldests begin the story. All the children were called in and they say silently around the bedside, awaiting the Grim Reaper. They were sitting in silence when Roy got up from his chair, gestured quietly to his brothers and sisters, said: "Be quiet, I think mother wants to say something." Going over to the bed, he put his ear down to her face as if listening. The children waited anxiously for Roy to speak. Curiosity got the best of one and she asked: "What did mother say, Roy?" Unabashed, Roy affirmed solemnly what his mother's last words were supposed to have been: "She said I could have everything she had but the little broke-leg calf and you could have that."

This was born a tale that has lived for three-quarters of a century and given the folk an expression to describe a man who is unashamedly acquisitive.

If you were the raconteur who told the story to a group some one would be sure to remember the method by which Roy acquired a new pair of boots.

Roy rode horseback down to the mouth of Buffalo Creek in the lean years following the Civil War and threw down the reins of his horse at the store house door. A drummer rode up at the same time and going in to the counter, lay down a new kind of leather boot he was introducing. Roy listened as the drummer expounded on the qualities of the shoemaker's skill.

The devility in Roy was running deep as he saw the boots examined on the counter.

"By Juks," he said to the drummer, "how you trade those boots to these shoes of mine?"

The drummer looked at Roy's torn and worn shoes, laughed and replied: "I don't believe I want to swap."

"By Juks," and that was Roy's favorite expression, "there can't be any harm in trying them on."

The drummer said there could not and Roy pulled off his left shoe, put the new boot on.

"By Juks, it's a fit, let me try the other one on."

When he had both boots on he slipped his spur on over the right one as the drummer was beginning to think he had gone far enough in accommodating this eccentric old man.

Suddenly Roy sprang for the door, vaulted into the saddle and spurred his horse, riding as if possessed up Buffalo Creek.

Another folk expression, "You can get it like Roy," was born and survives today.

One of Roy's daughters by Amanda Riddle Mills, was Letitia, or Tish, a beautiful young woman exhibiting physical features of her Indian ancestry. She married Thomas Burchett and moved to Missouri where they died. One of her several children was George Washington Burchett, called Wash by his neighbors. Wash resided on Johns Creek, a mile or less down the creek from the Criders and slightly above that of the Fraley families. He was a hard-working, honest and well-liked member of the community. An only son was Fred Burchett. Fred married Zellie Ward and lived for many years on Johns Creek just above Souders' Creek.

The yen to go west had always existed with many of the Burchett families and in the early 1890's Andrew Jackson (Jack) Burchett pulled out for Kansas.

Others of his relatives followed. Jack married Grace Randolph in 1887 at Oak Valley, Kansas, but in the late 1890's moved to Oklahoma. Here the family became intimately acquainted with the Cherokees and Osages.

Fred Burchett followed his uncle to Oklahoma in 1929 and in a few years his daughter Nellie married Clarence Hokiashsee, an Osage. Hokiashsee had become wealthy when oil was discovered on the tribal land but he did not live long to enjoy it. He died in May, 1943, leaving his wealth, the widow Nellie and an unborn child.

Under federal law governing the inheritance and distribution of the estate of a deceased Osage no person without Indian blood can inherit the property. Nellie Burchett Hokiashsee faced the possibility that her husband's sister, Ruth Hokiashsee Robinson, would claim the estate, which she did.

However, Nellie and her father Fred remembered the old, old tradition of the Cherokee blood. She knew nothing of William Patrick Vaughan and Fair-a-Bee-Lunah but they did recall the legendary Grand sire Vaughan. She went to Muskogee, employed Kelly Brown, an eminent attorney. Soon afterward her daughter Priscilla Lynn was born. The stage was set for the strangest and most unusual lawsuit Prestonsburg barristers ever knew.

None of the litigants or any of the attorneys had ever heard of William Patrick Vaughan or Fair-a-Bee-Lunah but they knew that they had to prove they lived, bore children and that Nellie Burchett Hokiashsee was a direct lineal descendant of the Cherokee maid. To successfully lay claim to the fortune left by Clarence Hokiashsee the widow's attorneys would have to prove two centuries of time for two people whose names they didn't even know.

They knew of Grand sire Vaughan, early Big Sandy valley settler, and lawyers turned into genealogists, putting the family tree together by work at the Floyd county (Ky.) courthouse. Nellie Burchett Hokiashsee was a daughter of Fred Burchett, he was a son of George Washington Burchett and he was a son of Thomas and Letitia Vaughan Burchett. That was easy to do but much difficulty was encountered in proving that Letitia or Tish was the daughter of LeRoy Vaughan. It was finally done, however, and there for awhile the research stopped. After much poring over records the instrument by which Grand sire Ayres Vaughan conveyed a colt to LeRoy and in which he was recognized as a grandson, was found. (Turn to page 7)

Appalachia, As Seen
By Two Congressmen

Virginia's Congressman Howard Smith, as chairman of the powerful Rules committee, may have succeeded in killing present hopes of passage of the Appalachian bill. He may have, in effect, sentenced a large part of his own state and those other states which constitute the retarded area known as Appalachia to more of the same neglect that has been their lot for generations.

He considered the bill an unnecessary "boondoggle," and stopped his committee from granting it the clearance it required before getting to a vote. Actually, Congressman Smith, a reactionary of the Byrd brand, is prejudiced against federal efforts to help undeveloped and underprivileged areas and peoples. He is an apostle of the doctrine of "survival of the fittest," and dismisses with the "boondoggle" label all efforts of his government to meet human need.

The Times proudly points to the opposite views expressed by Congressman Carl D. Perkins, of the Seventh district of Kentucky, in appealing to the Virginia Congressman to let the bill move onto the House floor for a vote.

"The funds provided in this bill are not handouts to a poor region, even though the region is in need, but rather are funds with which modern highways and development roads can be constructed and other public facilities obtained in order for the region to form a sustaining economic base. All of the projects authorized by the bill would return far more than the investment in the form of increased gross national product and more taxpaying citizens."

Congressman Perkins said that the provisions of the Appalachian Bill did not overlap or conflict with the anti-poverty measure recently passed by the Congress. "The Poverty Bill," said Perkins, "concerns itself with meeting the immediate employment, education, training, and loan needs of individuals and small families." The Appalachian Bill primarily concerns itself with construction of public works and the development of natural resources. Perkins pointed out that the bill authorized 2,850 miles of development highways and local access roads, that $840 million of the cost of these highways would be borne by the federal government and the states in the Appalachian region would supply about $360 million to the total program. The bill also contemplates the actual construction of health facilities including hospitals, and diagnostic and treatment centers for which the federal share of the cost would be 80%. For the first two fiscal years of the program $41 million would be authorized for this purpose.

Another provision would assist small farmers in the development of pasture land, he said, with $17 million authorized for the first two fiscal years to provide 80% of the cost of such projects. Perkins said that such programs if appropriately utilized could be particularly helpful in many instances in eliminating the devastating effect of land destruction through modern mining methods. He also outlined critical urgency provisions in the bill providing $21.5 million to enable the U. S. Department of Interior to develop solutions to the tragic destruction of land resources by surface mining which could pave the way for development of the area for public recreation, reforestation, for the restoration of scenic values and for other objectives which would fit in with the development needs of the region.

The Kentucky Congressman also pointed out that provisions in the bill permitting the construction of vocational school facilities to complement the provisions of the Vocational Education Act of 1963 would enable the Appalachian school system to achieve the status and standards now attained by the nation's most advanced school systems.

Thus do two men see the plight of the "have-not" areas of the United States. One, and all others who think as he does, would condemn as a giant boondoggle any national effort to raise Appalachia from its isolation and underdevelopment. The other recognizes Appalachia and its people as a part, a very vital part, of these United States and entitled to the help which must some day come if ever the mountainous sections of Kentucky and other states of the area are to escape the unhappy role of stepchild to the body politic, wanted only to feed its natural resources into the national industrial maw.

We have long been thankful for Congressman Carl D. Perkins. And Congressman Smith makes us doubly thankful for him.

4-COUNTY PROGRAM INITIATED IN AREA

James V. Bolen, principal of Wayland high school, who was recently granted a leave of absence by the board of education, has accepted a position as a graduate assistant to work in an educational project in the field of school administration. He will begin work September 1. The project, financed by federal funds, is being sponsored by the University of Kentucky. Four university professors will head the work. Four other assistants, besides Bolen, will work with them. These are Claude Frady, principal of Hindman high school, Morris Caudill, a Kentucky teacher, Robert Staggs, of Whitesburg, and John Pollack, principal of a Louisville city school.

Four counties in the eastern part of the state have been assigned to the team of nine persons, it is said. These are Bell, Clay, Morgan and Letcher. The program will run for a year. Each assistant will receive $3,000 a year and will be permitted to earn 24 hours credit toward a doctorate. Bolen, former principal here and at Wayland for the last four years, explained the program in which he will participate. "It is an effort to take the work of the institution of higher learning to the county or community level," he said. "The opportunity to work with the local administrative staff will help the college personnel to be more realistic in teacher training programs."

"In exchange the local community may profit from ideas shared by the group working on specific problems," Bolen continued. "It will be an opportunity for both parties to learn and grow professionally."

He pointed out a specific instance of how the work will be carried to the local level. If a county administrative staff has a transportation problem the group will assist in finding a solution. A first phase of the program will be to identify the problems.

PERKINS ASKS FUNDS FOR FLOOD CONTROL

More than $100 million in federal water development funds were asked last Thursday by Congressman Carl D. Perkins for flood control protection in the Seventh Congressional district. Appearing with other members of the Kentucky delegation before the Bureau of the Budget, Perkins said that the constant threat of floods blocked industrial development throughout the Eastern Kentucky area.

Perkins stressed the importance of five main streams and their tributaries to Eastern Kentucky economic development—the Kentucky, Big Sandy, Licking, Little Sandy and Ohio rivers.

On the Big Sandy River, Perkins called for the completion of Fishtrap Reservoir with an appropriation of $20 million. The completion of the John Flanagan Reservoir with $3 million, and the completion of the North Fork of the Pound Reservoir with $1 million. To initiate advanced engineering on new flood control reservoirs, Perkins asked $1 million for the Big Sandy River and its tributaries so as to pave the way for new construction starts in the near future.

On the Upper Kentucky River, Perkins called for $5 million to continue construction of the Carrs Fork Reservoir, $2,105,000 to complete the planning and the initiation of construction on Red River Reservoir. Perkins also asked that $500,000 be provided for planning on other Upper Kentucky River flood control reservoirs including the Walkers Creek project, and $219,000 for the completion of planning on the Booneville Reservoir. At the same time he requested that an additional $1 million be budgeted for the project so as to obtain a construction start just as soon as the planning had been completed. Perkins urged that $25,000 be authorized to complete the re-investigation of the flood control needs of the Upper Kentucky River.

On the Upper Licking River, Perkins maintained that at least $7 million should be budgeted to make the most rapid progress possible on the Cave Run Reservoir. Perkins said that he had obtained assurance from the Corps of Engineers that funds previously provided by Congress would enable the completion of the Corps' investigation and study of additional flood control projects required in the Upper Licking River. Perkins said that of critical importance was the initiation of flood control work in the Salyersville area.

On the Little Sandy River, Perkins asked that $7 million be budgeted to continue the construction of the Grayson Reservoir.

In addition to requesting the Bureau of the Budget to provide sufficient funds to make the greatest amount of progress possible on flood control reservoirs planned for Eastern Kentucky rivers and tributaries, Perkins asked that $65 million be provided to enable the Corps of Engineers to do extensive cleaning and dredging of streams and tributaries throughout Eastern Kentucky areas. Such action will not only minimize damaging flash flooding on such streams as Beaver Creek, Levisa Fork, Tus, Pond and others throughout Floyd, Johnson, Martin, Lawrence, Boyd, Greenup, Elliott, Pike, Carter, Morgan, Rowan, Lewis, Mason, Fleming, Bath,

Barbers Name Branham Head of Organization; 250 Members Enrolled

Paul Branham, of Prestonsburg, is president of the United Barbers of Kentucky, the first statewide organization of barbers to be formed. Organization was effected in a meeting at Louisville, August 4, with approximately 250 members of the trade enrolled.

Other officers are Frank Farmer, Louisville, vice-president, and Elmer Reynolds, Louisville, secretary-treasurer. There are about 5,000 barbers in Kentucky whose participation will be sought.

Branham said the new organization will seek higher standards and will also work for new legislation which would give barbers a voice in the naming of members of the Board of Barbers and Beauticians.

The first chapter of the new organization is Louisville's; the second, Prestonsburg, and the third is composed of Johnson county barbers.

THE WORLD'S FINEST USED CARS ARE BUILT BY CADILLAC.

To prove our point, we offer as evidence the three Cadillacs shown above.

From top to bottom in our illustration are a 1960 Sedan de Ville, a 1962 Coupe de Ville and a 1963 Sixty Special. Each is unmistakably Cadillac. Each, regardless of vintage, will have special appeal to the man who desires the comfort, convenience and pride of ownership that only Cadillac can offer.

That's why thousands of wise car buyers favor a previously owned Cadillac over new cars of other makes. First of all, they realize that Cadillac engineering is so far advanced that "newness" becomes a relative term. ## Ten Years Ago

(August 19, 1954)

Officials of the Division of Parks, Conservation and Highways will visit Dewey Lake, Friday, to make tentative location of a scenic highway route along the lake from Stratton Branch to the road which connects with Hager Gap and later will connect with the dam itself. A suit filed by the town of Martin, seeking the annexation of extensive territory to the corporate limits, reached the courts last Friday, and at least one attorney has been employed by dissenting citizens to fight the move. One-fifth of the more than 130,000 persons in 27 counties who are beneficiaries of the commodity relief program live in Floyd and Pike counties, survey figures released this week show. A suit growing out of a two-truck collision last November 27 was filed in circuit court, Friday, asking a total of $55,000 for the two plaintiffs, Patsy Jean Osborne and her mother, Mrs. Irene Osborne. The Senate approved Tuesday an amendment to the Rivers and Harbors Bill which directs the Army Corps of Engineers to re-survey the Big Sandy river and its two forks for possible canalization. East Kentucky is making, through the cooperation of Senator John Sherman Cooper, a determined bid for a substantial part of the 10 million tons of American gift coal to be shipped to friendly countries before next June 30. ## Voices of Old Men Recall Family History

They were now one generation away from Grandire Vaughan and this posed a further problem in research. They examined deeds, marriage licenses, checked suits and many other legal instruments. Finally, too, this was solved. The father of Roy Vaughan and son of Grandire Vaughan was William W. Vaughan.

Back in Oklahoma the battle over the estate shaped up. Ruth Hokiashie Robinson, sister of the deceased Clarence, claimed that since Nellie Burchett Hokiashie was white, she couldn't inherit the property, estimated by many to be worth a quarter-million dollars and with headrights income valued at several thousand dollars per month. The birth of her daughter, Priscilla Lynn, immeasurably enhanced the widow's legal position. Mrs. Robinson's counsel, Oklahoma State Senator J. C. Cornett, became discouraged.

The Indian Agency, however, wouldn't accept discouragement as a reason for allowing the litigation to lag or lapse. It had to have proof of Mrs. Hokiashie's Indian blood, even if Mrs. Robinson was evincing an intent to quit the suit.

Attorney Kelly Brown, Mrs. Hokiashie and others came to Prestonsburg and consulted the oldsters who knew still older Vaughans. They went down to the Old Vaughan Graveyard and stood above the simple sandstone that marked the grave of Grandire Vaughan. Mrs. Hokiashie was looking down on the grave of an ancestor who was only one generation removed from his Indian mother. She didn't know that, neither did her attorneys. They finally concluded that they had to prove Indian ancestry some way other than by direct genealogical research.

On July 24, 1944, representatives of the litigants and witnesses gathered in the offices of J. W. Howard and W. Porter Mayo in Prestonsburg, to prove, as Kelly Brown said, "a 200-year-old legend."

Brown, a native of Morgan county but a resident of Oklahoma for years, represented the widow and child. Senator J. C. Cornett, attorney for Ruth Hokiashie Robinson, sister of the deceased Clarence and claimant adverse to the widow, had designated B. F. Combs of the law firm of Combs & Combs to represent him and his client's interest. Present were L. M. Colville, of Pawhuska, Oklahoma, who had been appointed guardian ad litem for the child, Priscilla Lynn Hokiashie. Witnesses who awaited an opportunity to testify were two former Floyd county magistrates, Will Vaughan and James Clark. Present also were the aged Reuben Taylor and Mrs. Clark.

"Squire Will" deposed under questioning by Brown that he was 79 years of age, was a son of John Vaughan and a grandson of Patrick Vaughan. He said that Ayres or "Groncer" Vaughan was his great-grandfather and was buried in the Old Vaughan Graveyard near Patrick Swiri a few miles below Prestonsburg on the river. He had visited the grave of Grandire Vaughan many times, usually in company with his father, John Vaughan. He went on to say that he was familiar with the family tradition that the Vaughans had Indian ancestry.

He knew his distant relatives, the Burchetts, only casually, he added. He had visited their homes in the Johns Creek area a few times in connection with court business. He recalled that his grandfather, Patrick Vaughan, had always said the Burchetts, as well as the Vaughans, had Indian blood.

J. W. Howard continued direct examination of Squire Will and under the probing of the Prestonsburg attorney the witness described the Old Vaughan Graveyard. "A lot of people are buried there," he said. "They are not all Vaughans but they are kin. My grandfather had twelve children and they married and some had other names."

His grandfather, Patrick, had pointed out the grave of Grandire Vaughan. "If you noticed (when you were there) it was down on a little point, I imagine it was the first grave there."

He never saw Roy Vaughan but once or twice and then when he was a very young boy and Roy was an old man, the former Magistrate and deputy sheriff said when questioned by Colville. He described Roy as rather slim. Of Patrick Vaughan he had more recollection. Patrick was black-headed and hump-shouldered. There was a similarity in physical features between Roy and Patrick Vaughan and Wash Burchett, grandson of Roy.

B. F. Combs took the witness and Squire Will said that he was born in 1865, the last year of the Civil War. His father, John Vaughan, a Confederate soldier, was a prisoner of the Federals when he was born. John came home and lived until the witness was 26 years old, John Vaughan had never talked about their Indian blood, however. Always, it had been Patrick Vaughan and a few others but never John Vaughan. Just why the witness didn't know, John died at about the age of 69 but Patrick lived to his eighties.

103-Year-Old Magoffin Native To Observe Birthday At Lackey; Is Authority On Early Families

Wiley Rice, Magoffin county native who now resides at the Golden Years Rest Home, Lackey, will observe his 103rd birthday Saturday. The celebration is scheduled one day early in order to allow some of his relatives to attend. Mr. Rice was born August 23, 1861, four months after the firing on Fort Sumter that sparked the Civil War. He resided in the Salyersville area all his life until he retired to the Lackey institution. He is an authority on the families of Magoffin and adjacent counties and knew personally many prominent men of the early development period. He was regularly consulted by genealogists and students. He remembers the organization of the county when the site of Salyersville was called Adamsville from the Adams family and was acquainted with Samuel Salyers, founder of Magoffin county.

His grandson, Mark Rice, Wayland music teacher, attends to the wants of his centenarian grandfather and visits him regularly at the rest home.

poverty bill and tomorrow we're holding hearings in Rules on the Appalachia bill and here we're putting these people out of work by Government intervention," Smith said.

Because of the Rules Committee's refusal to vote the bill out, House leaders had to bring it up under a procedure that required a two-thirds majority. Had it been brought to the floor with committee clearance, only a simple majority would have been needed for passage.

The area acquired here, as is that at Moundsville, sometimes is flooded. But, it is pointed out, flood damage is slight and installations of concrete are easily washed down after the waters have receded.

Work of cleaning the area will be begun, almost immediately. Two planners supplied without charge by the University of Kentucky extension department will help in planning the recreation program.

The agreement provides that the contract covering the hospitals at McDowell, Hazard, Middlesboro, Harlan and Whitesburg will remain in effect until December 31, 1967, its expiration date.

The agreement also extends this contract to the five recently acquired hospitals at Wise, Va., Beckley and Man, W. Va., and Pikeville and South Williamson, Ky.

In addition, the contract covering the Wise, Va., hospital will be amended to conform with Virginia's "right-to-work law."

that the food stamps increased the consumption of meat and poultry, also showed the needy increased their purchases of vegetables by as much as 125 percent and fresh fruit by 96 percent.

"There was a substantial improvement in the quality of diets among households participating in the (food stamp) program," the department concludes.

It estimates from the study that, while nearly two-fifths to almost one-half of the families had good diets under the food-stamp program, only slightly more than one-fourth had good diets before the program.

Studies of the economic impact of the food stamps show that groceries have increased their business by eight percent.

The economic spillover has been felt in the creation of new jobs, the sale of automobiles, and other local commercial activity, the department believes.

Retail grocery sales in Floyd county, Silver Bow county, Minnesota, and McDowell county, West Virginia—all critically depressed areas when the food stamp program was inaugurated—rose by over 11 percent.

Floyd County Youths Join Marine Corps

Pikeville, Ky., August 14 (Spl.).—Choosing the United States Marine Corps as their occupation for the next four years were Oscar Lee Carroll, of Martin, and Lawrence Edward Clark, of Amba.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Carroll, the Martin Marine is presently undergoing recruit training at Parris Island, South Carolina, where he will receive instruction on such subjects as drill, Marine Corps history and tradition, first aid and basic weapons.

Clark, son of Cecil B. Clark, enlisted through the "Delay Program" which entitles him to wait up to as many as 120 days before reporting for active duty. This delay time is very definitely not dead time, as it counts fully toward pay, promotion, and the military obligation. Clark will report for his active duty and recruit training September 10.

A Pictorial Review of East Kentucky

(No. 296 in a Series)

Home of Elijah and Margaret Richmond Auxier at Auxier

This pre-Civil War home of Elijah and Margaret Richmond Auxier at the present Auxier was built about 1850. It was representative of the better homes of the section. This photograph was made in 1910. It burned down in 1916. Many Indian artifacts were unearthed when the home was constructed for it was built upon a mound on the site of the present home of Mr. and Mrs. LeGrand Mayo.

Elijah Auxier sold in 1910 the land upon which the present town of Auxier was built, to the North East Coal Company and the new mining town was named for him. Both Mr. and Mrs. Auxier died in 1911, survived by seven children. Only one now survives: Mrs. Agnes Auxier Spradlin, 91, of Prestonsburg. The others were Mrs. Margaret May, Mrs. Dora May, Mrs. Annie L. May, James W. Auxier, S. B. Auxier and C. R. Auxier.

The First National Bank presents these pictures of the region in recognition of our historic heritage.

SPORTS CHATTER

BY GORDON MOORE

Most football-playing Eastern Kentucky high schools will open their season on the week-end of August 23. Virtually all schools will begin the 1964-65 year this coming Monday.

All area schools are in two different regions of the Kentucky High School Athletic Association football playoffs.

In Class AA, Region 4, District 2 will be Belfry, Hazard, Jenkins, Leslie County, M. C. Napier, Prestonsburg, Wheelwright and Whitesburg. Jenkins is the defending champion in this district.

In Class A, Region 3, District 2 are Elkhorn City, Fleming, Neon, Morgan County, Paintsville, Pikeville. Elkhorn City is the defending district champion.

E. B. May, Jr., Eastern Kentucky football rules clinic director, represented the area at the school for officials in Lexington last week. He will conduct clinics in various schools throughout the coming weeks.

Bobby Cray, Morehead State College graduate, has replaced William Nardo as assistant football coach at Prestonsburg high. Nardo has accepted a similar position near Charleston, West Virginia.

A recent discussion among several fishermen at nearby Dewey Lake centered on "what causes a lake to turn over and when does this usually occur?"

Quizzing several authorities, we learned that the "turn over" of a lake is a physical fact and usually is based on temperature differences in different levels of water in a lake. Some turning can also be caused by creation of gas by decaying vegetation on a lake bottom, with the gas rising to the top and carrying some deep water to the top with it.

Under normal conditions warmer water is found near the surface of a lake and anyone who has gone swimming knows that they'll encounter temperatures several degrees cooler only a few feet down. The surface is warmed by the sun and the air and, unless disturbed, warm water rises by convection.

But, in the winter, the process may be reversed. Air above the water will be considerably colder than the water. It will chill the surface water to a lower temperature than the water lower down. The chilled water will then sink, forcing the warmer water to the surface and, in effect "turn over" the lake.

The "turning over" of a body of water can occur any time such conditions prevail: when the air temperature is well below that of the water surface, so it might happen to a small degree every night. But it usually is most pronounced, particularly in northern lakes, shortly after the winter's ice breaks up.

HALE FAMILY

A letter from W. H. Hale, 1521 Chestnut Drive, Ashland, Kentucky, is an inquiry about an Emory Hale who lived in Prestonsburg many years ago.

"The purpose of this letter is to find something in regard to an Emory Hale who lived in Prestonsburg and died, perhaps about 20 or 25 years ago and who was around 75 or 80 years old when he died. I wonder if it might be possible to locate one of his children or grandchildren through a notice in your column by merely saying that anyone having knowledge of a grandchild of Emory Hale to please write me. I believe if I can find some one like this and learn who the parents were of Emory Hale that I might be able to connect up some other facts in my search.

"In Order Book 6 or 7 (Floyd County Clerk's office) it lists several children being bound out by Elizabeth Hale and showing them as children of William Hale, deceased, but no mention of this Elizabeth Hale's maiden name and I cannot find a marriage license. This particular marriage license could have been, by mistake, folded in with some other marriage license in those boxes and was not seen by the persons making up the index books years ago. . . . All I want is the maiden name of the Elizabeth Hale that I think was the wife of this William Hale."

AMBURGEY FAMILY

A letter from Mrs. Dorothy Griffith, 9514 Minerva, Overland, Missouri, offers information on the Amburgey family in America.

"In early 1700 Conrad Amburger (spelling correct) established a home in what is now Madison county, Virginia. He died in 1742, leaving a wife and one son. This son, John, was born about 1730.

"Conrad Amburger was a German and also a Lutheran. He came from Alsace-Palatinate region of Germany.

"John inherited his father's land, married, had a daughter Anne, a son, John, Jr., and possibly two other sons. The name became Amburge in those days. In 1775 John, Sr., sold his land and for four years nothing is known of him and his family.

"1779 finds John, Sr., buying land in Wilkes county, North Carolina. He is in the company of Daniel Boone. Both Johns are reported to have fought in the Revolution, one under Francis Marion, the Swamp Fox. Name is now spelled Amburgey.

"John, Jr., married Elizabeth Hammons in 1787 and, about 1800 they moved to Russell county, Virginia. Copies of old land deeds have shown Amburgeys obtaining land in Kentucky in 1828. My theory is that John, Jr., had been to Kentucky and had land there before that time."

WILLIAM MYNHEIR

We reprint two biographies, that of William Mynheir and Jay H. Northrup from Kniffen, Perrin and Battle's History of Kentucky, published in 1887.

"William Mynheir was born in Morgan county, Kentucky, October 13, 1821, and is the eldest of a family of six children born to John and Sallie McKenzie Mynheir, John Mynheir, a native of Virginia, settled in Fleming county, Kentucky, in an early day; he was a silversmith by trade. Mrs. Sallie Mynheir, a native of Giles county, Virginia, was a daughter of Isaac McKenzie, also a native of Virginia, who removed to Morgan county, Kentucky, in 1817. He was a soldier in the War of 1812. William Mynheir was reared in Fleming county, Kentucky, where he received a common school education.

"In 1847 he returned to Morgan county, his birth place, of which county he was elected sheriff in 1852, serving one term, when he was elected circuit clerk in 1856, which position he retained five years. In 1861 he enlisted in the Confederate army, Company A, Fifth Kentucky Infantry, and was mustered out as first lieutenant, being subsequently promoted to a captaincy. In 1862 he organized a regiment of which he acted as major until the close of the war, September, 1862, at the battle of Chickamauga, he was injured in the thigh one inch below the hip joint, being confined to the hospital until February, when he returned to service, taking part in the campaigns from Dalton, Georgia, confronting Sherman to Savannah, Georgia, endeavoring to prevent his march to the sea. At the close of the war Mr. Mynheir returned to Morgan county, Kentucky, and in 1867 was elected county judge of that county, holding the position four years, when he was appointed Master Commissioner of the Morgan county circuit court under Judge J. M. Elliott, retaining the office until March, 1884, then resigning and removing to Mt. Sterling, Montgomery county, where he has since resided.

"In December, 1826, he was appointed Master Commissioner of the Montgomery county circuit court by Judge John E. Copper, which office he still holds. Previously Mr. Mynheir represented Rowan, Morgan, Mazon and Elliott counties in the Legislature. August 27, 1838, he married Miss Sallie Cartmill, of Morgan county, Kentucky, a daughter of W. H. and Lucy (Farrish) Cartmill. Four children have been born to this union, viz: Lucile, Nannie, Ernest and Mary May. Mr. and Mrs. Mynheir with Lucile and Nannie are members of the Christian Church. Mr. Mynheir owns ten acres of land in Montgomery county, Kentucky. He is a Master Mason."

SENATE AUTHORIZES FUNDS FOR AREA RIVER PROJECTS

The Senate Appropriations Committee last Wednesday approved funds to continue the construction of projects which will provide protection for the people of the Big Sandy River basin: Fishtrap Reservoir, $18 million; Flannagan Reservoir, $5 million, and North Fork of Pound Reservoir, $3 million.

These amounts had been approved previously by the House, and last week the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee for Corps of Engineers projects voted the full amount for each project. "I am confident that the Senate will adopt these recommendations of its Appropriations Committee," said Senator John Sherman Cooper, a committee member.

After the Senate passes the Public Works Appropriations Bill for fiscal 1965, probably this week, the bill will go to conference to resolve differences between amounts approved by the Senate and the House of Representatives. However, since the House has already agreed on the appropriation for each of these projects, no changes will be made in these items and the funds will be made available to the Corps of Engineers as soon as the bill is signed by the President after final Senate-House passage.

Senator Cooper said that within the next few weeks he will go before the Bureau of the Budget to request appropriations for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1965. "I will ask that approval be given to sums needed to complete construction of Flannagan and Pound Reservoirs, and to the

The bride's mother wore a light blue arnal jersey dress with a corsage of white carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore a beige silk sheath dress, matching hat and corsage of white carnations.

NEW LODGE IS DEDICATED BY GOVERNOR BREATHITT

The new lodge at Buckhorn Lake State Park, dedicated last Friday by Governor Edward T. Breathitt, is the final item in the vast state parks expansion project undertaken by Kentucky in 1960.

The 10th such luxury resort to be built under the $20 million program, Buckhorn Lodge adds the crowning touch to what has become America's finest state park system. Governor Breathitt, speaking at the dedication, said the Blue Grass state now wants to catch its breath, hang onto the prize it has won with so much effort and make sure its beautiful properties are maintained in tip-top shape.

"When more money becomes available," he said, "we'll add more jewels to the crown."

The lodge was designed by Gillig-Christman and Miller, architectural associates of Lexington, Kentucky, and built by W. D. Johnson, of Ashland, Kentucky. Charles E. Locke of Louisville's Furniture Mart, Inc. did the furnishing and decorating.

The tri-level structure's 24 units extend in two wings on either side of the lobby-dining room area. Each unit has two double beds, year-round fingertip control of heating and cooling, ceramic tiled, ultra-modern bath with tub and glass shower enclosure, TV, phone, individual outdoor balcony overlooking the lake with floor to ceiling sliding glass doors and drapes, indirect lighting, wall-to-wall carpeting and sumptuous modern furniture. The lodge's exterior is of native stone and wood with every advantage taken of the breathtaking beauty of the mountain setting. The feel of the mountainous outdoors has been brought inside by the lavish use of planters with flowers and ivy climbing up the central stone column of the lobby. The rustic outdoor colors are reflected into the lobby by reversible draperies that were specially designed to shield the immense glass window areas from the afternoon sun without destroying the magnificent scenic views. The same material is used in the dining room.

The theme of Kentucky's heritage is subtly suggested throughout the graceful structure and decor of Buckhorn Lodge. It is dramatically pointed up in the lobby by a great piece of coal from which springs a life-like Japonica tree.

Buckhorn Lake State Park is off Kentucky Highway 28, 25 miles from Hazard.

Kentucky's parks commissioner, Robert D. Bell, says that with all its advantages of spectacular scenery, magnificent fishing and every modern vacation facility, Buckhorn's success as a family resort is assured.

On the program with the Governor at dedication of the eighth new lodge to be completed in the $20 million state parks expansion program—plus additions to two other lodges—were Former Governor Bert T. Combs, State Highway Commissioner Henry Ward; State Parks Commissioner Robert D. Bell.

Construction of the new 24-room lodge was started during the Combs Administration as part of the expansion program and while Ward was chairman of the State Parks Commission.

Invited to the dedication last Friday also were these other members of the old parks commission: Herndon J. Evans, Lexington; Marvin Music, Prestonsburg, and John Ed Pearce, Louisville.

105 STRIKE AT HOSPITAL DESPITE PLEAS OF UNION

Some 105 nonprofessional employees at the Appalachian Regional Hospital, South Williamson, Ky., stayed off the job Sunday, despite efforts by United Mine Workers officials to get them back to work.

Clerical and supervisory employees joined doctors and nurses to continue operation at the 145-bed hospital. It had 104 patients. Officials said that if the walkout continued surgery might be curtailed.

Members of District 50 of the U.M.W.—kitchen workers, janitors, housekeeping employees, orderlies, and maintenance employees—walked off the job shortly after midnight Saturday, saying they would not work without a contract.

But Reid Davis, representative of District 50, received a telegram from Elwood Moffett of Washington, District 50 president, which said: "You are hereby instructed to immediately order members of Local Union 14398, composed of employees of the Appalachian Regional Hospital South Williamson not to interrupt work at the hospital and to continue working as a contract is now in effect covering the hospital."

Contracts with U.M.W. for five A.R.H. hospitals including the one at South Williamson were agreed to Friday. Both sides agreed to submit wage disputes to a mediator. The old contracts expired at midnight Saturday.

Hospital officials said Davis and two assistants tried unsuccessfully yesterday to get the employees back to work.

EAST KY. SQUIRREL SEASON TO BEGIN AUGUST 29th

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 7 (Spl.)— Kentucky's small game hunting season began last Saturday, August 15, with the opening of one zone of the squirrel season in Kentucky. The Western zone season, composed of most of the Bluegrass area and all of western sections of Kentucky, will be continuous, the closing date being November 15.

For the Eastern Zone, designated by Commissioner Minor Clark, of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, as Lewis, Rowan, Menifee, Powell, Estill, Jackson, Rockcastle, Pulaski and McCreary and all counties lying to the east of this tier, the opening date for the first season is August 29, to continue through November 15. A second season in that zone opens on December 1 and continues through December 14.

Again this year the bag limit will be six squirrels with a possession limit of 12 after two or more days of hunting.

Although the harvest of quail last year was below the normal harvest indications are that the squirrel population this season will be good with the take depending on the weather conditions. Biologists of the Department point out that the squirrel population of last season also was good but the harvest declined because of extremely poor hunting conditions and due to the fact that because of the forest fire menace the season had to be actually closed down for a number of days.

The Department reports that most crop (nuts, buds and berries on which squirrels feed) was unusually good last season and usually this indicates a good supply of squirrels for the following season. This has been borne out by reports from field men who indicate a greater number of young squirrels this past spring. According to spot surveys conducted by the Department, last year almost two million fox squirrels and grey squirrels were harvested, notwithstanding the unfavorable hunting conditions during much of the season.

CAMPING SEASON NEAR END

The conservation education summer camps at Lake Cumberland and Kentucky Lake will close on August 22, with indications of the greatest enrollment ever experienced at these two camps.

NEW PROJECTS IN SCHOOLS

Five new projects in conservation education work are being prepared for use in the schools for the 1964-65 term and will be in the hands of conservation officers and district supervisors by September 1.

CORRECT DOVE SEASON

The dove season is as follows: September 1 through October 30 and December 1 through December 10. The bag limit is 12 with a possession limit of 24 after two or more days of hunting.

QUAIL DELIVERIES ENDED

Quail deliveries to sportsmen's clubs ended in July with the total distributed, from both winter and summer hatches, being 96,783. In addition some of the new quail were held over for broodstock for next year.

FINAL TROUT DELIVERY

The final trout delivery of the year was completed by the fish management crew in late July, with 20,000 being added to various streams. Among the various streams stocked were tailwaters of Buckhorn Lake and Lake Cumberland dam.

NEW LAKES AWAIT APPROVAL

Work on three new lakes will be started as soon as bids, submitted to the Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources, are approved by engineers of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Atlanta. They are: Martin county, Kingdom Come State Park and Pulaski county.

EXPECTS ENFORCEMENT

Skating limits at Dewey Lake have been marked off, and the Floyd County Fish & Game Club is looking to the Division of Boating for strict enforcement of regulations.

100 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky
 By JOE JORDAN
 (Kentucky Civil War Commission)

One hundred years ago this week, a Confederate States Army force under Col. Adam R. Johnson was in possession of considerable territory in Western Kentucky, far behind Union Army lines. The Rebels were making themselves at home, taking it easy, and acting with an assurance that bordered on audacity.

Johnson issued a proclamation and a series of general orders, all headed "Headquarters Confederate States Forces, Union County, Kentucky." He announced that the Confederate States War Department had appointed him commander of the "District of Southern Kentucky," and ordered all Confederate soldiers in his district who had taken the oath of amnesty offered by Federal authorities to report to him without delay, "the Confederate States government having decided such oath is not binding." It was thought his mission was to collect remnants of Morgan's command scattered by the disastrous defeat of Morgan's June raid. He even made a move to enforce the Confederate draft law, ordering up all male citizens 17 to 45 not exempt from military duty.

One of Johnson's officers, Maj. J. Walker Taylor, crossed the Ohio River from Henderson, Kentucky, to Evansville, Indiana, under a flag of truce and was escorted up the north side of the river by a U. S. naval officer to New Albany, where he told a Union Army colonel he wished to cross over to Louisville and see Maj. Gen. S. G. Burbridge, who commanded all Federal troops in Kentucky.

Taylor carried a letter which Johnson had addressed to Burbridge, requesting a definition of the latter's order regarding guerrillas and asking "if all Confederate soldiers were to be placed upon the list and to be punished for the lawless acts of renegades from both armies." He referred to the execution of two Confederate soldiers at Henderson and said "if this precedent was followed up, Confederate soldiers could be held responsible for all murders committed on the continent."

Burbridge refused to receive the communication, declaring that Johnson must be either a Confederate soldier or a guerrilla, and he had "failed to prove that he is the former." Johnson had been one of Morgan's brigade commanders on the Indiana-Ohio Raid; Burbridge could scarcely have failed to know that he was a duly commissioned Confederate officer, Maj. Taylor was escorted to Memphis and passed through the lines to Confederate territory.

The Evansville Journal reported that Johnson had at his Morganfield headquarters 700 to 800 men "finely armed and equipped and well mounted." In Crittenden county, it said, there was a company of 125 "under command of one Clements," that was expected to join up with Johnson. In the fourth year of a bloody war, the excited Evansville editor asked what must have been a strictly rhetorical question, "Now does any man suppose that these Rebel forces are concentrated there for a peaceful purpose?"

SPORTS AFIELD

By TED KESTING

No fresh-water fish fights harder for its size than does the bluegill; and certainly few fish are its peer on the table.

When summer comes and the water warms, big bluegills start feeding heavily. Juicy live crickets are the best natural bait in both spring and summer; but in hot weather, other baits as well become real killers. Insects that are falling into the water and on which bluegills can be seen feeding are always top summer baits. So are live catalpa worms turned inside out. Earthworms native to the bank of the stream or lake that one is fishing are usually good. Sometimes, when none of the above baits are available, red wigglers will take lunker summer bluegills too.

The effectiveness of artificials against king-size bluegills also hits its peak during the warm summer months. For summer fishing, favorites among the artificials are small popping bugs (for surface-feeding periods) and tiny slow-sinking spiders and dark bodies and long white legs (for below-surface feeding).

"Catching big bluegills during most of the summer months is usually just a matter of being able to locate the beds," points out Col. Dave Harbour in the current issue of Sports Afield Magazine. In most waters, scores or even hundreds of big adult bluegills congregate in one small area to begin spawning. The industrious old bulls go to work digging beds about a foot in diameter, about a foot apart and in water that's only about a foot deep. The intensive operation usually takes place in a sandy or gravel bottom. After the female has finished her brief chore of egg laying, she takes off for good, leaving the old bull to guard the eggs. He does this job well for several days, expending his almost unbelievable remaining energy in chasing off any fish, big or small, that ventures near his bed and in going for almost all food that drifts or floats by. All this should help you locate a bluegill bed and then catch those old bulls!

PERSPECTIVE
BY ROBERT J. HASTINGS

Praying Hands
In his book, NO COMMON TASK, George Reindrop describes the prayer habits of a nurse. Accustomed to working with her hands, she developed a routine on her fingers that disciplined her to pray regularly. Her plan was very simple. Here is how it worked.

Each finger stood for someone. Her thumb being nearest to her body, it reminded her to pray for those near and dear such as relatives and close friends. The second, or pointer, finger was a symbol of those who supervise and direct, and suggested that she pray for those who were her superiors. The third finger, the tallest, stood for those in high positions of leadership or government. When she looked at her fourth finger, the weakest, she remembered to pray for those who suffer from illness, disappointment, or grief. The little finger—smallest of all—she took to represent herself. Thus with meekness and humility, she expressed her own needs last of all.

We are not saying that prayer should be a routine counting of one's fingers. But we are saying that even the simplest objects of life can remind us that God is as close as breathing, and that He is anxious for us to talk with Him as we go about the ordinary affairs of life.

If you did not fertilize the lawn last fall or this spring, and if you live outside the bluegrass area, use a 10-10-10 analysis (or equivalent) at three times the recommended rate for ammonium nitrate. If the lawn hasn't been fertilized in recent years, use about 15 pounds of 10-10-10 per 1,000 square feet.

Historical Notes

1843, and is a son of Ephraim and Elmina Hicks Northrup, of the same county and state, and both of English descent. The settlement of the Northrup family can be traced to the year 1636 in Rhode Island, and one of the ancestors of our subject was a signer of the original compact between the colonies. Jay H. Northrup was reared on the home farm and received his education at the common schools, but was sufficiently well trained to follow teaching himself. In October, 1861, he enlisted in the Ninety-third New York Infantry, and a year and a half later was promoted to the rank of Second Lieutenant; then rose to be First Lieutenant, Captain and Major, and July 17, 1865, was mustered out as Lieutenant Colonel.

"In the fall of the latter year he came to Kentucky and located at Louisa. He was one of the projectors of the Chattahoochee road, which position he still fills. March 11, 1867, he married Miss Emily E. Wood, of Hatford, Washington county, New York, and is now the father of four children. In 1885 and 1886 the Colonel was chairman of the State Board of Equalization."

JOHN PRESTON WELLS

This biography of John Preston Wells was copied from History of Kentucky, by Kniffen, Perrin and Battle, published in 1907.

"John Preston Wells was born in Johnson county, Kentucky, in 1854, and is a son of William G. and Mary Butcher Wells, natives of Virginia. William Wells settled in Floyd county, Kentucky, in 1836, and when Johnson county was formed from Floyd county in 1843-44 was cut off with Johnson county; he was a farmer and physician. Richard M. Wells, paternal grandfather of our subject, was born in Pennsylvania, he moved from there to Virginia and subsequently settled in Kentucky; he was a farmer and trader and served in the War of 1812; his wife was a Miss Porter before marriage.

"John P. Wells received his education in the common and select schools of Paintsville, he studied law under James E. Stewart, of Louisa, Kentucky, and began practice in his native town in 1877, where he now enjoys a large and lucrative patronage. In 1884 he married Julia Howes, of Johnson county, a daughter of John and Jane Howes. They have three children, viz: Marcus Lindsay, Jimsson Kendrick, and Virgie Lee. Mr. Wells is a Democrat in politics and represented Johnson and Floyd county in the Legislature in 1883-84. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South."

BEVERLY C. MAY

This biography of Beverly C. May, Prestonsburg, was also copied from Kniffen, Perrin and Battle's History of Kentucky.

"Beverly C. May was born in Floyd county, Kentucky, September 29, 1860, and is a son of William J. and Cynthia Power May, natives of Pike and Magoffin counties. His paternal grandfather, Thomas May, was a farmer, came from Tennessee to Pike county, Kentucky, in 1800 or 1812, and for several years was a magistrate. Lewis Power, maternal grandfather of our subject, was a native of South Carolina. William J. May was born in 1819, was county surveyor many years, accumulated 10,000 acres of land in Floyd and adjacent counties and had been a resident of Floyd county for forty years at the time of his death which occurred in July, 1883. Beverly C. May was elected sheriff of Floyd county in August, 1884, and re-elected in August, 1886. He is a farmer and owns a tract of 500 acres in Floyd county, 3,000 in Magoffin county, and twenty-eight acres in Bath county."

Leather Goods Buyers Are Urged To Choose Purchases Carefully

Choose carefully when you buy those garments of leather or simulated leather that are so popular in fall clothes, recommends Dorothy Threlkeld, UK Extension clothing specialist. Because such items can present cleaning problems, be sure to read the hang tags or labels before you buy.

Most simulated leather must be wetcleaned, although some are labeled as dry-cleanable. Often, simulated sueded flock and other simulated leathers stiffen when dry-cleaned. Some dyes used on genuine leather will bleed in dry-cleaning solvent—other leather dyes may bleed in water. Because of these possibilities, check to see that hang tag gives instructions on cleaning.

When you buy a garment trimmed with suede, grain or simulated leather, be sure that both garment and trim require the same cleaning techniques. For example, a garment that can only be drycleaned combined with a trim that must be wetcleaned would be an expensive buy, no matter what the original cost. Often, such a garment can be cleaned only by removing the trim.

Because special cleaning techniques usually are necessary for leather, send such garments to a dry cleaner who is properly equipped and trained in leather cleaning and finishing. Always give the dry cleaner the manufacturer's care instructions given on the hang tag.

If you buy a garment made of or trimmed with leather or simulated leather, follow the manufacturer's directions and if you do not get satisfactory results, report this to the store from which you bought the garment and also to the manufacturer.

Here are some hints from USDA home economists on using spray starches. Shake the can vigorously before every use. Protect the ironing board and any nearby furniture; it's hard to keep the spray in a small area.

Reduction of Highway Fatalities Sought By Stiffening Penalties

Governor Edward T. Breathitt moved Tuesday to cut down Kentucky's mounting highway accident toll by stiffening penalties imposed under the state's system of assessing "points" for traffic violations.

Under the system, put into effect in 1957, varying numbers of points are assessed for various types of violations. The more serious the offense, the greater are the number of points assessed.

If a driver accumulates 12 points during a three year period his driving privilege is suspended for six months. Points assessed for any violation remain on a driver's record for three years and are then removed.

In signing the order stiffening penalties for most violations, Breathitt explained that the changes were designed to hit hardest at those traffic violations primarily responsible for the spiraling number of accidents on Kentucky highways.

Statistics compiled by the State Department of Public Safety's Bureau of Records show that speeding—the prime target of point system changes—was a contributing factor in 25 per cent of Kentucky's 568 fatal traffic accidents in 1963. Also, 15 per cent of the 2,242 injury accidents recorded last year were caused by speeding.

From January through May, 1964, there was one fatal traffic accident in Floyd county. Traffic fatalities for the past four years in this county were: 1963, six; 1962, eight fatalities; 1961, four; and 1960, 13 fatalities.

As part of Governor Breathitt's "all-out war" on the mounting highway death and injury toll, these changes in Kentucky's driver point system are now in effect:

| Violation   | Points Formerly Assessed | Points Now Assessed                   |
|---|--------------------------|---------------------------------------|
| Racing   |                          |                                       |
| First Offense   | 3                        | 90-day suspension of driver's license |
| Second Offense  | 3                        | 1-year suspension of driver's license |
| Third Offense   | 3                        | 3-year suspension of driver's license |
| Speeding   |                          |                                       |
| Up to 16 mph over speed limit   | 3                        | 3                                     |
