

PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY

SPEAKING OF AND FOR FLOYD COUNTY

THURSDAY, AUGUST 5, 1965

This Town . . . That World

There's an imaginary line which by crossing you lose a day. And there's one not so imaginary on the highway which, if crossed, can lose you a lot more.

I'm worried. I've just recalled that either July or August was, or is, National Hot Dog Month, and I can't remember which has that deathless honor.

NO COMMENT

Last week, this column invited letters from readers stating their views on the proposal that a curfew be established in this county. One nice youngster stopped by to give his views. He opposes a curfew and expresses some skepticism of the situation as reported to The Times by an officer. Adults saith not.

BOTH HAD A PROBLEM

The fact that the General Assembly will be in special session soon, facing the hopeless task of satisfying frightened taxpayers, recalls this story:

Two men got together on a train, and one said to the other, "I just got out of prison this morning - it's going to be tough facing old friends." "Cheer up, son," said the other. "You think you've got a problem - I'm on my way home from the Legislature."

The apple crop doesn't look too encouraging this year, but it begins to look like we'll have to prop up our pawpaws.

TO START BUILDING NEW CHURCH FRIDAY

Contract for construction of the First Presbyterian Church building in its new location on U. S. 23 here has been awarded to the Paden Company, Cleburne, Texas, and construction was scheduled to begin Friday.

The pastor of the church, the Rev. T. W. Chisholm, said completion of the church has been promised within four months.

The various contracts for material and work add up to between $65,000 and $75,000, exclusive of furnishings and the site which was purchased about two years ago from Mr. and Mrs. Rainley White.

Martin Line, representative of the general contractor, has sub-contracted to local contractors a variety of jobs in connection with the structure. One wing of the L-shape building will house the san-

ATTRACTION TO BE READY NEXT SEASON

Lift to Mountaintop To Be First in State; Extra Acreage Leased

By June 1, next, Jenny Wiley State Park will have an added attraction which will be unique in the Kentucky parks system and possibly so among all the state parks of the nation.

The proposed addition to the attractions of Dewey Lake and its surrounding park will be a privately owned chair-lift from a point near the Stratton Branch recreation area to the top of a lofty escarpment on the mountain-top, almost half a mile away.

Edward Music, of Prestonsburg, president of the Mountain Parkway Chair-Lift Co., Inc., which will own and operate the concession, announced Tuesday that his firm had contracted for the Ridlet Tramway Co., Spokane, Wash., to

IGA Store Reopening Here Scheduled Soon

The Prestonsburg IGA Store will reopen within the next few days after an interruption of operation over a period of a few weeks, it was said Tuesday by Quentin Thompson, new owner of the business.

Renovation of the storeroom and placing of all-new stock is expected to be completed this week. The store was temporarily closed when Ollie Watts left here a few weeks ago.

Mr. Thompson has operated IGA stores at Russell, Mt. Sterling, Sandy Hook and Olive Hill.

MERCY-BENT PAIR BOMBED

Nurse, Sister Injured In Leslie As Vehicle Caught in Explosion

Hyden, Ky.—A crudely made bomb was exploded last week by the wheels of a frontier Nursing Service jeep, severely injuring her sister, a visitor from Englang.

State Police Sgt. L. T. Owen said the explosive—fashioned from four sticks of dynamite with detonating gear in a paper sack—apparently was intended for another vehicle.

Miss Helen Browne, FNS director, said at the Appalachian Regional Hospital in Harlan that the victims were hurt badly but "miraculously saved from sudden death."

The injured were Miss Molly Lee, 45, a nurse at the service for 11 years, and her sister, Nora, 43, who came recently to this county to observe the work of FNS.

Frontier Nursing Service was formed to give midwife care to expectant mothers in remote mountain sections of Leslie, Harlan and Perry counties who might otherwise give birth to children unattended.

Miss Browne said the Lee sisters were on their way to visit a couple in the Flacky section of Leslie.

The explosion, which demolished the jeep, occurred about a quarter mile off KY 80 between Hyden and Hazard, seven miles east of Hyden. The one-lane road serves five families.

Sgt. Owens said no clues had been uncovered to indicate the intended victims.

"The bomb was fixed to go off under pressure, such as a vehicle hitting it," he said. "We believe it was set for somebody, but we don't know who as of this time. There is no reason to suspect that it was set for the Lee sisters."

Owen said at least two other cars used the road before the FNS jeep came along shortly before 1 p.m.

At Harlan, Miss Browne said the sisters could provide no information.

"All they can say is that they heard a bang and saw some smoke," she said.

Apprenticeship By Mistake To Pirates Is Focal Point In Drama Group Production

A young man "apprenticed by mistake" to a pirate band by a deaf nurse provides the focal point for the rollicking "Pirates of Penzance" to be presented August 6 and 7 at the Jenny Wiley amphitheatre. Curtain time is 8:30.

The lively Gilbert and Sullivan musical is being staged by the Jenny Wiley Drama Association composed of Prestonsburg, Pikeville, and Paintsville talent.

Frederic, the ill-fated hero, is played by Richard Cummings. His hard of hearing nurse, Ruth, is portrayed by Mrs. Vivian Shannon.

The scenes become complicated as the 10 daughters of General Stanley, Doug Smith, appear and the pirates attempt to marry all of the girls.

Mabel, sung by Miss Shari Hall, is not too unhappy about the idea since she already has designs on Frederic.

General Stanley's trick to save his daughters from the unwanted marriages fails and the Sergeant of Police, Darrel Mollette, and his trusty guards are called out to overpower the pirate band.

Two of General Stanley's daughters are Mrs. Margaret Rowe and Mrs. Jeanne Beckett, who sing the solo roles of Edith and Kate.

King of the Pirates is Ronald Cole with Otto Baldridge playing Samuel, his trusty aide. The supporting cast is composed of vocalists from the surrounding area.

Miss Judy Warren, University of Kentucky graduate student in music, will handle the musical direction, with Mrs. Christine Goodman and Jack Walters as directors.

SPINDLETOP ADVISES CUT IN PARK SEASON

Jenny Wiley State Park, which has operated on a 12-month basis, will have its season cut, if a recommendation made Tuesday by Spindletop Research is put into effect.

Spindletop suggested for Jenny Wiley a March 1 to Nov. 30 season. But it did recommend for the park here or the Rough River State Park, or both, the addition of a "sportsman's center," with facilities for shooting, archery and bait-casting as well as their present capacity for water sports.

Last year, only Jenny Wiley and Kentucky Dam Village remained open through the winter.

Recommendations for other state parks made by Spindletop after a study which cost the state $38,700 follow:

Buckhorn Lake State Park—Presently open May 1-Oct. 31; no extension of season recommended.

Carter Caves—Season extended, May 1 to Dec. 1.

Cumberland Falls—Year-round operation recommended.

General Butler—Year-round operation.

Kenlake—Open May 1 through Oct. 31.

Kentucky Dam Village—Year-round operation.

Lake Cumberland—March 15-Oct. 31, with boat dock open all year.

Natural Bridge—Open May 15-Oct. 31.

Pine Mountain—Open May 15-Sept. 30.

Rough River—Open March 15-Oct. 31.

"All parks open at times other than the summer season should be equipped with heated and covered swimming pools, an adequately equipped game room and facilities for conventions and meetings," the report asserted.

"Every effort should be made to attract group meeting business to the parks, particularly in areas where adequate private facilities are not available. Meeting business can be a major source of extended-season revenue."

"State agencies should be encouraged to use the parks wherever possible for their activities and operations during the off season."

In view of climatological and physical-terrain conditions, Spindletop said it did not recommend a formal program of winter sports in Kentucky state parks, though occasional local skiing and ice skating events might be feasible when weather conditions permit.

Floyd Countian Hurt As Pike Man Killed In 2-Car Collision

A Pike countian was killed and a resident of Ivel, this county, was injured at 1:30 a.m. last Wednesday in a two-car collision at Blairtown, near Pikeville.

Frank Rodney Coleman, 29, of Elkhorn City, was killed. The injured man is T. J. Hall, 42, of Ivel.

State police said Coleman was driving toward Pikeville when his car, coming out of a curve, collided with the northbound auto driven by Hall. Both men were alone at the time of the smash-up.

Hall suffered a broken rib and nose. His condition was described Tuesday at the Methodist hospital, Pikeville, as satisfactory.

Body of Coleman was taken to the home of his mother, Mrs. Ada Coleman, at Elkhorn City.

DRAFT CALLS SEEN FOR MARRIED MEN

Masonic Grand Master Will Speak at Martin District 37 Meeting

Masonic District No. 37 will hold its annual meeting Saturday evening at Martin, with John W. Hall Lodge at Martin as host.

The meeting will begin at 5:30 p.m. with a banquet, at which Joe C. McClanahan, grand master of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky, will be the principal speaker. John H. Turnley, district deputy grand master, will welcome visiting Masons and their guests to the meeting.

500 IMPRESS OEO OFFICIAL

Interest of Mud Creek In Community Program Emphasized at Meeting

The interest evinced by the Mud Creek community in opportunities for improvement is being heard about in Washington.

When an estimated 500 persons turned out for a special meeting, called for last Tuesday evening at the John M. Stumbo elementary school by the Floyd Community Action office, Dominic Garofalo, field representative of the Office of Economic Opportunity, Washington, was there.

And Garofalo said the meeting was the largest of its kind to be held in Kentucky and possibly was the largest held in the entire country. Impressed by the size of the gathering as well as by its enthusiasm, he took pictures of the meeting back to Washington with him for the benefit of the O. E. O. staff.

DEFERMENTS TO STUDENTS UNAFFECTED

Doubled Draft May Result in Induction Of 35,000 from State

Sometime this fall it is very probable that Kentucky's draft calls will include married men who have no dependents except their wives, Lt. Col. Joseph Kinnard, manpower officer for Selective Service in Kentucky, said in Frankfort Tuesday.

Student deferments will not be affected, at least for the present, he said. He explained that the military feels it's more important to have young men in school than in the service.

If the pool of draft-age men continues to drop even after calling married men without children, he said, the Selective Service system might have to review student deferments and require students to meet certain academic standards in order to remain draft-free.

Under current regulations, any student who is taking a full-time course of study at an accredited school is deferred.

Kinnard noted that the last time a qualification was placed on student deferments was during the Korean War. He said that even under the current quota, student deferments would still be offered for work in graduate or professional schools.

Kinnard reported that the draft call has already been extended to some 20-year-olds. And he reaffirmed that 19-year-olds would be called sometime this fall, maybe as early as September if their examinations can be completed.

By October or November the monthly draft is expected to reach 35,000 men. President Johnson doubled the draft to meet requirements of the widening war in Viet Nam.

REYNOLDS COMPANY GROWTH IS MARKED

George W. King, 47, Former Floyd Countian, Succumbs In Cincinnati

George W. King, 47, died Monday evening in St. Mary's hospital, in Cincinnati, where he had resided for the past 13 years. A former resident of Floyd county, he was born in Breathitt county, a son of Cal and Fanny Holland King, and was married to Verna B. Davidson King. He was employed by a dental laboratory and was a member of the Baptist church.

Other survivors are a son, George Victor King, two daughters, Marie and Letta Ann King, all of Cincinnati; two brothers, Richard and Troy King, both of Ft. Wayne, Ind., and four sisters, Mrs. Geneva Banks, Cornettesville, Ky., Mrs. Hazel Hunter, Monroeville, O., Mrs. Janet Manns, Columbia, Ind., Mrs. Marceline Freeman, Watergap.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday from the Providence Regular Baptist Church at Dry Creek, ministers of the church officiating. Burial in the Sonny Hall cemetery at Topmist was directed by the Merion Funeral Chapel.

Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock this morning (See Story No. 5, Page 6)

A onetime welder who "got interested in seeing things made" is making things on a bigger scale than he and a lot of other folks dreamed when he started.

He is Marcum Reynolds, president of the Reynolds Body Co., Inc., of Allen, and the coal-truck bodies and special steel bodies of all kinds which his firm produces are in use as far away as Florida.

Reynolds, who began making things of steel and other metals at Hazard, moved his plant two years ago into a new 60x270-foot building on U. S. 23, between Allen and Emma. At that time he employed only 18 persons. Today he has 32 on his $100,000-a-year payroll, and his sales are running past half a million dollars annually.

The firm works with steel, aluminum and other metals. The materials come in large sheets, and are fashioned into truck bodies. Equipment used in the plant includes steel presses, shears, fork-lift trucks, saws, welding machines, electric hoists and a variety of other smaller pieces.

The finished products go, mainly, into Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, West Virginia and Virginia.

The horse show, first ever to be held in this county, will be divided into 12 classes, and a total of $650 in prizes will be awarded, success of other horse shows in the valley and an increasing interest in fine horses caused the club to decide on an annual show here. A large number of gaited horses are owned by Floyd countians, and the Floyd County Saddle Club has regular meets on grounds which it purchased and developed on Right Beaver Creek, near Hueysville.

The classes of competition at the August 28 show here follow, showing entry fees and awards to be made:

Two Republican candidates for Martin county office this week lost nominations which they thought they had won.

Andy Kirk, the apparent winner for Sheriff, and Mike Haney, who led in the original returns for County Court Clerk, lost their nominations on a decision handed down Monday by Special Judge Chesley A. Lycans, of Louisa, presiding judge in the trial of six consolidated election suits filed at Inez.

Kirk, who on the original returns led O. W. Davis, 1,530 votes to 962, was adjudged the loser, with Davis receiving 990 votes to 616 for Kirk. (Kirk in the final count actually trailed Bennie Moore, who had not been regarded a serious contender.)

And Haney, who at first had 1,430 votes to James A. Muncy's 710 in the race for County Court Clerk wound up the loser with 446 votes to Muncy's 723.

Dismissed were these suits: Joe E. Radcliffe vs. Albert Dempsey, et al, in the race for Representative; Bennie Moore vs. Kirk and Davis, in the Sheriff's race; C. H. Preece vs. Willie Kirk for County Judge, and Ed Tipton vs. Thomas J. Muncy for Jailer.

"The evidence," wrote Judge Lycans, "indicates that the tampering (with the voting machines) was skillfully done and in a manner surprising officers and manufacturers of the machines."

The machines were set by E. O. Hutchens, Knoxville, Tenn., a representative of the Shoup Voting Machine Company. Sometime between May 11 and May 25 the machines were tampered with by the pasting of decals bearing false zeroes over some of the counters in the columns to count the vote in the Sheriff's and County Clerk's races only.

In Turkey Creek precinct the election officers discovered that the number of votes for these two offices was greater than the total number of voters shown by the public counter. By the next day the same situation was found to exist in all the other 10 precincts.

The machines were gathered up, and the last was returned to the courthouse at Inez around 11 p.m., May 27, after which all were kept under guard until the impoundment order was lifted for the reanalysis of the machines by three special election commissioners on July 8, 9 and 10.

Judge Lycans held the voting machines had not been tampered with or altered after the election. He noted that 99 "false" votes were recorded in each of seven precincts, 90 in each of two, 50 in one and 69 in another—all giving Kirk and Haney 992 spurious votes.

Commenting on the use of the machines, the judge wrote: "A voting machine such as used in Martin county is a new concept. Instead of a man on a mule, carrying two ballot boxes, headed through the dark for the courthouse, we have a bulky piece of machinery requiring a truck and several husky men to transport it."

In the original canvass of the votes Haney received 1,430 votes to 710 for Muncy and 1,163 for other candidates for County Clerk, for a total of 3,303 votes. Kirk on the basis of this count received 1,530 to 962 for Davis, 615 for Bennie Moore and 240 for other candidates for Sheriff. Only 2,808 Republican voters were registered.

This is how the Martin county vote in the Republican primary now stands, as fixed by Judge Lycans' order: For Representative—Albert Dempsey, 865; Joe E. Radcliffe, 604; William Jeff Baldrige, 604. For County Judge—Willie Kirk, 1,242 (his vote was originally certified at 1,238); C. H. Preece, 730; four others, 496.

For Sheriff—O. W. Davis, 990; Andy Kirk, 616; Bennie Moore, 627; 244 for seven others. For Jailer—Thomas J. Muncy, 533; Edd Tipton, 490; 1,195 for 11 others.

Joe Hobson, Prestonsburg attorney, represented the plaintiffs in the cases.

AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Two years ago, the Driver's Education program was initiated in the Floyd county school system. Last year this program was extended to every high school in the county.

And these are the outstanding results of this work undertaken with younger drivers in the schools:

1. Not one accident involving any of those students who took the Driver Education courses has been recorded in these two years; and
2. Cost of insurance for these young drivers has been reduced 15%.

As we happily review this record we wish to acknowledge the assistance of these automobile dealers in supplying Driver Training Cars for use in the schools:

Music & Colvin Motor Car Company, B & D Motor Company and Jack Walters Ford.

Without their help the program could not have been carried out. We solicit for the coming school year the help of these and other automobile dealers.

Last year, the Driver Education program was extended to all the high schools. These schools and the instructor who served each school are:

Betsy Layne—Ned Bush; Martin-Maytown-McDowell—Wayne Ratliff, Jr.; Prestonsburg—Bert Dixon; Wayland-Garrett—John Campbell, Jr.; Wheelwright—Wilbur Jamerson.

We congratulate the schools, their students and instructors and all who helped to make the program possible.

13 State Troopers Arrest Uncle Dan

(The Mountain Eagle, Whitesburg)

Uncle Dan Gibson, 81, picked up his .22-rifle a few days ago and climbed to the top of the hill above his home.

Gibson's purpose was to make it clear to the Kentucky Oaks Coal Co., that it was not to strip mine the 235-acres of land owned by Uncle Dan's wife's heirs.

Dan says he was sitting in the shade of some trees eating lunch which had been brought up to him by two young grandsons. His rifle was leaning against some rocks behind him.

Dan says he looked up, and saw six state troopers, heavily armed, coming his way.

Dan says they asked him to go with them, and he refused, seeing as how he was sitting on his own property eating lunch and wasn't bothering anybody.

Dan says the troopers went away, and apparently radioed for help. Soon, 13 troopers and a Knott county sheriff's deputy showed up.

By this time, some of Dan's friends and neighbors became upset, fearing for the life of the old man.

Dan says that to placate them, he went with the troopers into town.

He was charged with flourishing a deadly weapon, and was held under $5,000 bond.

Dan says he learned that state police had gone about saying that he was a crazy old man armed with a high-powered rifle, and had sent out word for 40 reinforcements so as to surround and overpower him.

The people in Dan's neighborhood are greatly upset with state police these days.

They say that after Dan had come off the mountain and away from the strip mines, long after he was in custody—state police who remained on the mountain-top fired off several rounds of shots.

What purpose did state police have in firing the shots except to scare and intimidate the Knott countians who oppose strip mining, they ask.

They are also asking why it is that it takes the ordinary citizen hours and hours to get help from state police when traffic accidents occur, yet great numbers of state troopers can show up immediately when called by strip coal mine operators.

Dan says he tried to call Gov. Edward T. Breathitt to talk to him about the situation, but was not able to get through to him.

HITS AWARD TO AGENCY

Floyd Men's Competitor Protests State Award To Lexington Agency

Awarding of the state's workmen's compensation insurance business to the Hartford Accident & Indemnity Company whose Lexington agency is owned by three former Floyd countians was protested last week by the branch manager of a competing company.

Hartford's Lexington agency is owned by Ex-Governor Bert T. Combs, Former Floyd County Clerk DuRan Moore and Charles Moore, all of whom are presently residents of Lexington. William N. Ward, Lexington, branch manager of the Old Republic Insurance Company, protested the award to the Hartford agency in a letter to Purchasing Director James King.

The purchasing director said ownership of the Hartford agency did not enter into discussions or into determination of the award.

Ward wrote: "It would seem to this writer that the successful bidding company and agency will get the experience necessary to handle this account at the expense of the commonwealth and its source of income, the taxpaying public."

"The only consideration in making the award was the written proposals submitted by the four companies responding to our invitation," King said in an answer to Ward July 8.

State Rep. Don Ball, R-Lexington, chairman of the Republican Fiscal Affairs Committee, said the award could have been politically motivated.

He said the GOP group will introduce legislation that will require disclosure of the ownership of companies bidding on state contracts.

This year, for the first time, the state opened the workmen's compensation policy for competitive bidding. Old Republic, through the Hargus Sexton Insurance Agency, Lexington, held the policy last year. It was "among bidders this year."

King said the premiums have to be the same, but there can be a difference in services offered by insurance companies. The annual premium cost to the state will be about $600,000.

One of the main reasons Hartford got the policy was the fact it offered to furnish a full-time "loss control engineer" to the state, King said. The engineer will study what causes accidents and what can be done to prevent them.

A committee composed of representatives from the departments of insurance, personnel and economic security evaluated the bids and came up with this conclusion on awarding the contract:

"The consensus of the group was that the best written proposal as to service was submitted by the Hartford Accident and Indemnity Co. Considerable support was given to the Old Republic Insurance Co. for the quality of administration during the past year."

But the committee said the Hartford proposal was more specific and detailed while the Old Republic proposal did not say how claims would be handled.

The purchasing director said it didn't make much difference which agency handled the business, nor who owned it. "If I had known, it wouldn't have made any difference," he said.

Ward's letter said:

"The state in June, 1964, nearly had to place its workmen's compensation coverage in an assigned risk pool after Bituminous Casualty Co. refused to renew the policy. Old Republic offered to accept the risk and was awarded the contract."

Old Republic's bid was $71,600 lower in cost on June 18. He said Hartford was given a second chance to bid.

King said the dollar amount Ward mentioned was not technically correct.

He said bidders were given a chance to recalculate their bids after new information on accident experience was supplied the state by the Southeastern Compensation Rating Bureau just before the bid opening.

MOUNTAIN PARKWAY IS KEY—The Mountain Parkway, shown here by heavy black line, was the key to approval of a route in the Appalachian Highway System which will connect Interstate 64 in Kentucky with Interstate Highways 77 and 81 in Virginia. Highway Commissioner Henry Ward said the fact that the Parkway is completed or under construction from Interstate 64 to Prestonsburg played a deciding role in approval of the entire east-west connection. The Mountain Parkway is complete from Interstate 64 to Salyersville, and the section from Salyersville to Prestonsburg is to open this fall. The Parkway Extension from Prestonsburg to Pikeville was approved as part of the Appalachian System.

JOBLESS FATHERS PROGRAM TO HELP END ILLITERACY

Frankfort, Ky. — The unemployed fathers' program is undergoing a drastic change that will help end illiteracy in Eastern Kentucky, was the belief expressed here last week.

Economic Security Commissioner Les Dawson said almost all of the 4,000 jobless parents in the project are attending school in some form or another.

“We're no longer dealing with a make-work program or a disguised form of public assistance,” he said. “We have heartening evidence that people are learning basic skills as well as reading and writing.”

The new concept is required by the federal government which since Jan. 1 has pumped $15 million into the program in 19 mountain counties.

The original plan was simple: Put needy fathers to work on local projects—thereby giving them something to do, helping communities recruit unskilled labor and lessening the financial burden on the state.

Then federal authorities envisioned wider horizons. They reasoned that the cycle of poverty could best be fought by victims learning while earning—with the hope that the man receiving charity might gain self-respect and new skills.

Dawson said the result has been amazing.

One little girl from Perry county said of her father, who is struggling to learn to read and write: “Someday, maybe daddy can help me with my homework.”

A Clay county man discovered a small new world merely by the ability to read road signs — “I was always ashamed to ask.”

A Breathitt county man learned to do block and stone work while building a retaining wall at Jackson under the program. Now he has a private job paying $4 an hour, formerly a day's assistance or wages.

The variety of education available ranges from the first grade of elementary school to the equivalent of the 12th grade. Only Breathitt county, one of the original nine in the program, has high school pupils among the fathers, but Dawson said similar classes are being prepared every-manufacture the lift and all necessary equipment and also had entered into a contract with the Red Eye Sling and Cable Co., Port Huron, Mich., for its installation.

The contract provides for the chair-lift to be in operation on or before June 1, 1966.

Clearing of a 30-foot-wide right-of-way swath up the mountainside to its top for the chair-lift will begin within the next few days, Music said. “Home base” for the lift will be in the parking area, at the rear of the Stratton Branch beach, and it will extend to the top of an 80-foot cliff on the mountain top overlooking the lake, lodge and miles of surrounding mountains and lowlands.

The 4480-foot-long round-trip will require 22 minutes, Music said the chair-lift will be 60 feet from the ground at its highest point.

He added that the concrete towers atop the mountain to serve as anchors for the suspension cables will probably be poured from a helicopter because of the inaccessibility of the spot.

Present plans for development on the top of the mountain call only for hiking trails, picnic tables, an observation post and a souvenir shop. But, eventually, Music said, development will be done there which may involve the expenditure of a quarter of a million dollars.

Rights for the chair-lift and subsidiary concessions were procured from the U. S. Corps of Engineers, and the Kentucky Department of Parks. Looking toward development over a period of years, the Mountain Parkway Chair-Lift Company has leased from James S. Harless land extending about 2,000 feet along the ridge and extending down the opposite side of the divide, a distance of 200 feet.

The head of the firm also said the 30-foot right-of-way to be cleared for the chair-lift to the top of the mountain will be sodded and that flowers will be planted on either side.

The chair-lift is one of a variety of attractions which has made Jenny Wiley State Park and Dewey Lake one of the most popular vacation spots in Kentucky. Others include, in addition to a million-dollar lodge and vacation cabins, a nine-hole golf course, horseback riding, boating, swimming and fishing. Next year, a community-size swimming pool and a camping area with full accommodations are planned at the park.

LOOK WHO'S TALKING!

"Keep Kentucky Green," the slogan-makers write, and state departments charged with conservation of natural resources (among which is the resource of natural beauty) pound home the message with reams of publicity.

It's a fine slogan. The publicity is good. The announced purpose is a great one.

But it all appears hypocritical in the light of what the state of Kentucky does and permits others to do. For instance:

A helicopter hovers over a privately owned right-of-way area crossing the hills and sprays a chemical which kills vegetation, even bushes.

And the State Highway Department, eschewing the much-maligned "weed-cutters" of other years, sends a machine up and down major highways, spraying the roadsides with the same deadly chemical.

Keep Kentucky green — except in those areas where it's easier and less costly to make it brown? Kill another resource, the birds which wage unending war on every insect enemy? If the state of Kentucky has no deeper or more genuine interest in its natural beauty and resources, it weakens its position when it appeals to the ordinary citizen to guard against forest fires, erosion, stream pollution and all the long list of crimes which we Kentuckians, with or without malice aforethought, commit against nature.

The Martin County Lesson

Because vote-hungry politicians whose cupidity was matched by their cleverness succeeded in manipulating voting machines in Martin county, there are those who are quick to condemn the machines and express a longing for the good, old days and paper ballots.

The condemnation belongs, rather, to men. Machines are as safe or effective, or even as honest, as their human operators make them—as witness the automobile, the commonplace lawmower or the Space Age computer.

To return to the paper ballot would be a retreat into a past which was replete with election chicanery and crime: ballot-box stuffing, the chain ballot, the expensive and often fraudulent long-count and a variety of other means of thwarting the will of the electorate.

The Times happily records the fact that the use of voting machines in Floyd county has not been marred by any such fraud as marred the recent Martin county primary. But it could happen here. The machines will not fail their purpose if the purpose of those who are in charge of them remains honest.

The lesson this and all other counties should learn from Martin county's experience is that greater care should be taken in the selection of election officers and in the handling of the machines prior to the opening and immediately after the closing of the polls.

Retarded Children Can Be Helped

BY MRS. EDGAR R. MAY Mathias, W. Va.

Readers have been asked to help erect a small school for trainable retardees, by donating services, materials and money. Often only those familiar with benefits these children derive from special education favor their training them. Though academic incompetents, retardates can make items that sell, perform many skills creditably, contribute to society in various ways. Only three percent of all retardates are completely dependent, incapable of partial support. Thirteen percent can become partially independent if trained. The remainder can be completely independent if taught, and if society accepts and helps them. Effort and expense for those who never become self-supporting are still worthwhile because training enriches the life of the child, promotes mutual adjustment between him and society, helps his family, and benefits benefactors most because it is better to give than to receive.

Persons not interested in retardates for the sake of the children themselves should be concerned about them from selfish motives, which beat none: 1. Providing special classes for retardates helps normal pupils and their teachers by removing those who hold back any group. 2. If these children are not trained, they require ultimate lifelong maintenance from society in one form or another. The attention untrained ones demand often hampers the production and services of those who care for them. "Repetition" is the major key to success in training trainables. No parent has the constant time essential to developing them. This explains why the teacher-load of trainables is very low, and why many volunteers are donating services to help teachers in cities. One brain-damaged child is equivalent to three normals. Many retardees are not brain-damaged, and some are quite docile. Still, teaching retardates is the most complex type of teaching. Attempting to teach them without training or experience is like seeing an M.D. try to perform surgery when no surgeon is available. Those who assume that the task is a snap and that baby-sitting is the only thing involved, should teach a special class one day. In several foreign countries teachers must prove themselves outstanding in general education before being permitted to attempt teaching retarded children. The special teacher must be a jack-of-all trades because highly specialized techniques for helping these children physically, mentally, socially and morally, have been developed. The teacher must possess many qualifications to do the job halfway. She is the connecting link between the child and the school, the child and the many professions whose services he requires (unlike normals) continuously, the child and society. She may accomplish more outside the classroom for the child than on the inside because she is the logical one to coordinate all efforts and services for these children, to help see that retardees receive assistance, often from the cradle to the grave.

Instead of thinking that we are too busy to aid this cause we should look at the adult retardate and think that but for the grace of God we would be standing in his shoes. As parents, teachers, and leaders we should instruct and train all children to be the kindest to the unfortunate ones, not to leave them out of social functions and recreational activities. They have emotions and needs like normal boys and girls, yet, life by-passes most of them.

Most people want to live for others, but often the desire to do so is confined to lip service. Actions speak louder than words. What will you do to help this cause?

Our Yesterdays

Thirty Years Ago

(July 26, 1935)

Body of nine-year-old Thomas James Hyden was found on a hillside, near Weeksburg, Friday morning, a day after he had almost been decapitated by the slash of a knife. The Court of Appeals this week ruled on a Floyd county case and its opinion virtually ousted 5,000 school sub-district trustees from office. David D. May, of Prestonsburg, was sworn in July 1 as a cadet at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. First of the new WPA projects approved in this county is the road from Harold to Branham's Creek. Married: Miss Margaret Mayo and Mr. Joseph A. Spradlin, both of Prestonsburg, July 7 at West Liberty. Born: To Mr. and Mrs. Orville Horner, of Langley, a son. There died: G. M. Elder, of Wayland, victim of a truck-auto collision Saturday, near Emma; Mrs. Patsy Bolen, 106, on Rock Fork Creek, near Garrett, recently; Clara Jean Childers, 8 months, Saturday at Martin; Mrs. Bruce Blair, about 40, Friday at Water Gap.

(Aug. 2, 1935)

Circuit Judge John W. Caudill promised this week that the grand jury will investigate next Saturday's primary. Harrison Elliott's opera, "Call of the Cumberlands," will be heard Aug. 24 over the NBC radio network. The Floyd county story-song of the mountains has drawn high critical acclaim. Mrs. E. R. May announced this week that she had resigned as relief worker in this county. She may be succeeded by Miss Edna Prater. Dr. J. T. Cottrell, of Catlettsburg, is the first Floyd county native to become a full-fledged air pilot. There died: Win Burchett, 28, formerly of Buffalo Creek, July 22 at Beckley, W. Va.; Mrs. Mary Hall, 74, July 19 at Grethel.

Twenty Years Ago

(July 26, 1945)

Charles Chumley, new president of the Kiwanis Club here, said last week that soon after the present political campaign is over the Floyd County Club will be organized with a membership of 10,000 the goal. James Johns, 46, was critically wounded Friday night at Mare Creek by a shotgun blast. A. J. Martin has purchased the Court street restaurant opened by Mr. and Mrs. Florio Goble, and Worley Boyd has begun operation of the restaurant adjoining the bus station which he has leased from J. M. TIDBITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

Western Kentucky Teachers' College, Bowling Green, Ky.

"CASH ON THE BARREL HEAD"

A long study of some of the aspects of folk medicine has brought this rather startling fact to light: most of the practitioners of folk medicine do not charge for their services. Of course, some nosy folks who patronize these upstart fellows who have gone away to medical colleges might stir up some trouble if any charging were done. But the folk doctors themselves declare that they would lose their powers, especially those of a magical nature, if they accepted anything so earthly as cash.

There is, however, a hitch in this altruistic attitude. No folk doctor seems averse to accepting a good square meal, or many, for his services, or anything that is presented to him, just so it isn't money. A few of the more Scotch kind have been known to suggest that they wouldn't mind having this or that of the patient's possessions. Of course, when a fellow is sick, he is glad to promise a simple thing like this. Ordinarily, I have heard and read, the folk doctor takes no chances and gets his present even before the patient finally snaps out of his disease or passes to his reward.

Being a folk doctor, you see, is not just another job. A fellow is called to it. For example, he is born with a caul, a piece of membrane that sticks to his forehead when he is born. If his parents are wise, they dry this membrane and save it for him, as a sure warrant of his being called to practice certain mysteries of folk medicine and hocus pocus. If he is the seventh son, he is thus pointed out as an ex officio curer of thrush (usually called thrash), that disease that makes small children so miserable. Merely by blowing his breath into the child's mouth, he brings about a cure. And that breath in no way takes his own appetite for some good victuals served by the child's mother. Any seventh son can do this; and any seventh daughter, too. But if you are the seventh son of a seventh son, you are a doctor in spite of yourself; you just can't help curing babies of thrush and hives. However, this marvelous native power must be shared with any one born after the death of his father, with any ordained minister, and any confirmed old maid (age not specified).

Most of this knowledge about medicine is inherited or passed on from parent to child as a sort of favor after the skilled parent knows the general ability and nature of the girl or boy who is to carry on the family tradition of being a faith doctor. I have had a good many people tell me of their being so chosen and their feeling that they had been ordained, as it were, to heal the sick. What is diploma as compared with that?

NATURE TRAILS

By RUFUS M. REED

Many people are surprised to know the dangerously poisonous water hemlock is all too common in Kentucky. Very few seem to recognize this plant or know about its danger. Recently along the banks of Big Paint Creek, I found dozens of the hemlock plants growing in wet places. I dug up one plant, which was about four feet high and brought it to the 4-H Club camp, where I was teaching Nature Study. Only one person in the whole camp knew the name of the plant! Several of the 4-H leaders had never seen it before.

Water hemlock bears finger-like tubers on the roots, and these are so deadly poisonous there is no known antidote. A small piece of one of these tubers will kill a cow in a short time. Many persons have dug up the roots in the spring, thinking they were "wild parsnips," and have been poisoned to death. Not long ago, a boy in Cabell county, W. Va., went out to find some oregano root to chew; he found the water hemlock sprouting in the edge of a pond and thought it was "wild parsnip." (Their roots smell like garden parsnip.) He ate one of the tubers and soon died.

Cows often find water hemlock sprouting in early spring and eat the young shoots, or pull it up from the soggy ground where it grows to eat the roots. Other names of the plant are "cowbane" and "beaver poison." The plant causes the death of beavers around ponds, where it grows. When a cow eats the plant or the roots, she soon develops convulsive spasms, which become extremely violent until death occurs. In cases of hemlock poison, the only thing the

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

RESPONSIBILITY TO CHILDREN The Sermon on the Mount, the Beatitudes, these are the rules Jesus gave us to live by. Those who do not abide by these rules through absolute wilfulness are on their way to remorseful troubles in this world and eternal agony in another.

This brings to mind parents and teachers. The children of today will be the men of tomorrow. Parents' responsibility is to teach their children from infancy—teach them in the way Jesus lived when He was a child. Teach them to respect the aged, the handicapped, and all who are unfortunate. And all parents should have their children attend Sunday school.

In the classroom, also, the teachers have their responsibility. The great electrical wizard, Steinmetz, was a hunchback. But he had a mind that amazed the General Electric Company. He gave us the dynamo, and a host of other electrical conveniences. He did not look good, but he was a genius.

I urge all teachers and parents to teach their children the way Christ lived, and to abide by the lesson He gave us in His Sermon on the Mount.

These diseases are curable and arrestable but the damaged organ cannot be repaired or made to function as before once the germ has entered the organ of the body; nor does having these diseases before build up an immunity, but quite the contrary, the disease builds an immunity to the medication being used for treatment.

In syphilis, the incubation or growth period is variable (10 to 90 days, rarely longer) and is easily recognizable in both sexes. The first sore of primary or early syphilis appears at the site of entrance of the germ into the body. This sore or chancre may last from one to six weeks and heals with or without treatment.

Secondary syphilis may appear in the form of spotty skin rash (often faintly copper colored). This rash appears three to eight weeks or longer after the appearance of the chancre. There may also be raised bumps, sore throat, patches in the mouth and partial loss of hair. These signs usually disappear within about three weeks. If untreated they may reappear one or more times as relapses.

Latent syphilis is that stage of the disease in which clinical signs and symptoms of infection are absent. It may lay dormant from one to 20 years and the disease show up in the forms mentioned last week.

Gonorrhea has an incubation period of one to 14 days, usually three to five days. This organism, or germ, has an affinity for the mucus membrane surfaces of the body. This disease is usually characterized by a creamy yellow discharge from the urethra and is quite painful in the male, but giving little if any discomfort to the female. Without proper treatment the disease may be prolonged; but with penicillin treatment will disappear in one to two days.

veterinarian can do is to give the poisoned animal morphine to ease the suffering.

Like all dangerous things, water hemlock is a tall, slender, graceful plant, with beautiful, compound leaves. One sure way to tell it is to look at the leaflets on the underside; the veins end at the notches between the teeth of the leaflets. Another sure way to tell water hemlock is to observe the sheaths at the base of the long leaf petioles; these sheaths partly cover the long, slender stalk.

There is also a danger sign placed on this plant by the wise provision of nature. This danger sign is a reddish-purple splotch at the base of the leaf petioles, where they fork, and it seems to warn, "Do not eat this plant!"

The roots form a cluster of tubers—another sure way to tell this dangerous plant. The stem is also light green, or yellowish-green, and it is marked with fine lines or ridges, and is often spotted. Water hemlock bears compound umbels of small, white flowers placed at the tops of the branches, and these are quite showy. This plant is closely related to the deadly hemlock of Europe, which was used to put criminals to death in ancient Greece. It was this hemlock that the great Greek philosopher, Socrates, drank; it is also called "spotted hemlock," because it has spots on the stems; it has been introduced into America and is now fairly common around ponds and wet places, but the root of the deadly hemlock does not bear tubers like the water hemlock; it has a long root like a garden parsnip. Both of these poisonous hemlocks belong to the parsley family.

KENTUCKY'S HARD WINTER

By Anna M. Cartledge

From the middle of November, 1779, to mid-March, 1780, the North American continent was subjected to a never-ending succession of storms accompanied by bleak, piercing winds. Snow piled on snow continuously, with only an occasional thaw. In Kentucky by January 10, there were 17 inches, and practically every day more accumulated. During the month of January, the temperature only once rose to 30 degrees. Most of the time, it hovered between 10 and 15 below zero. On January 9, an attempt was made at Logan's Fort to open a grave, and the ground was found to be frozen to a depth of 14 inches.

Every spring and stream was frozen solid. The ice in the Kentucky River was two feet thick. Col. William Fleming wrote in his diary on December 29 that his party had crossed their horses on the ice. From December 1 to March 14, the Delaware River was closed with ice two to three feet in thickness. Chesapeake Bay was frozen from its head to the mouth of the Potomac. At Annapolis, the ice was five to seven inches thick clear across, a distance of 5 1/2 miles. Even Bayou St. John at New Orleans was frozen for awhile.

Kentucky had always been regarded by the Indians as neutral ground, and any attempt by the whites to make permanent settlements within its boundaries was resented. Knowing this and knowing, also, the difficulty of fortifying such a vast wilderness, the British government in 1763 fixed the crest of the Appalachians as the western limit of settlement. But regardless, more and more people crossed the mountains in an attempt to find a better life, particularly after the French and Indian Wars; for Virginia awarded land to all of her veterans as a bonus for their services in the Militia—and the only land to be had was on the other side of the Appalachians. Surveyors were sent into Kentucky to establish the claims, and in their wake came adventurers who had left their women and children along and attempted permanent settlements.

By the Treaty of Pittsburgh in 1763, however, the Indians pledged their neutrality in exchange for a pledge from the Virginians that the Ohio River would be a permanent boundary between the Indian country to the north and the settlements in Kentucky. But the Americans were greedy, and the land to the north looked mighty green. Gradually, more and more settlers built their cabins on the wrong side of the river, and the Indians felt justified in retaliatory raids on the settlements to the south. They were poorly armed, though, and didn't pose a danger sufficient to keep the land-hungry settlers from pouring into Kentucky.

All this changed in June, 1777, when Governor Henry Hamilton in Detroit received orders from his superiors that he was to use Indians in his war against the settlers along the frontier. Up until this time, he had tried to keep the savages in check. The raiding had been entirely their own idea. Now, they were provided with arms and ammunition and sent on their way with the blessing of His Majesty's government. They needed no coaxing!

The Indian raids started on a grand scale in "The Year of the Three Sevens," and conditions along the frontier became so hazardous that all permanent settlements in Kentucky were either abandoned or reduced to a size where defense was almost impossible. Within six months, the entire fighting population of Kentucky consisted of about 100 men and boys.

In 1779 General Sullivan completely wiped out the Iroquois and their civilization in the north. This, coupled with Clark's successful campaigns in the Ohio and Illinois country and the capture of Henry Hamilton himself, led the people in the colonies along the coast to think the danger from the Indians was at an end and the Kentucky country once more safe for settlers.

In this same year, Virginia passed a law which allowed any man who had resided in Kentucky for one year prior to March, 1780, or had raised a crop of corn, the privilege of taking up a free homestead of 400 acres with the right to pre-empt 1,000 more. He was required to pay only a small fee but had to have his survey made himself.

This was a strong inducement to men who wanted the chance for a better life. Unfortunately, it was an equal inducement to an undesirable element—those in trouble with the law, footloose younger sons, land speculators, run a way bondsmen, failures, bankrupts, draft dodgers. The last, though, soon found that their running was to no avail. They must either fight or perish, for the period of peace was short-lived.

During 1779 and 1780, settlers poured into Kentucky by the hundreds. By the summer of 1780, the population had swelled to about 20,000. Those from Virginia and the Carolinas traveled overland through Cumberland Gap, nearly 3,000 coming that way during the Fall and Winter. Some were held up at the Gap by the cold and depth of the snow, but those who did make the trip suffered enormous losses in cattle and horses. It is estimated that as many as 500 cattle perished on the journey. Some families were forced to stop and build huts to shelter them while they waited for the snow to melt and open the roads.

Frostbite, frozen toes and fingers were common. Untold travelers died from exposure. Many were found dead beside the trail. Just before Christmas, a family named Davis camped on a slight rise in Rockcastle in the fork of a creek. A hard rain during the evening put out their fire. When Dr. Davis attempted to swim the creek to get help, he drowned in the turbulent waters; and with no fire, the rest of the family froze to death during the night. Such occurrences were not rarities. But still the people came!

Those from Pennsylvania and the north fared a little better. Most of them traveled by water; and since the Ohio was impassable, they were forced to spend the winter months at Fort Pitt while they waited for the ice to break up. When Spring finally came, there were no less than 300 family boats which arrived at the Falls of the Ohio.

Conditions in the Kentucky settlements were almost as bad. Many people who had arrived late in the season were caught without adequate shelter. Some were forced to live in tents and wagons for weeks until cabins could be built. The cabins and forts which had been erected were hastily and poorly constructed and not designed for such continuous and bitter cold. Attempts at insulation were made, such as lining the walls with furs, but the terrible cold still penetrated. On January 19, John Floyd, who had a home on Beargrass Creek near present St. Matthews wrote to Col. William Preston, "When I attempted to write in December the ink froze in the pen and it is no better yet as the snow has never melted off the south side of the cabin since the first of last month."

All water for drinking, washing and cooking had to come from melted snow and ice. Corn was very scarce as most of the crops had been destroyed by the Indians the summer before, causing the price to increase from $30 per bushel in September, 1779, to $200 by the next February. Salt was $500 a bushel, and meat was impossible to secure at any price. These costs, of course, were in Continental paper money, which was almost worthless. A dollar in January, 1779, was worth only 12¢; by the end of the year, it had dropped to 2¢; and in the next year, it was down to 1/10th of a cent. A Mexican silver dollar was worth $1,000 in U. S. paper. Any type of hard money was much sought after. One frequently found coin was a Half-Johanna, or Half-Jo, Brablian money worth about $8.00. Without hard money, it was almost impossible to buy anything—that is, if anything was available.

Most settlers were forced to rely on primitive barter to secure the necessities of life or depend on some friend or relative bringing what they needed as he came across the mountains. On January 19, John Floyd wrote to Col. Preston, "We have no prospect of getting any linen, which we will be in very great want of. Jenny desires to know whether it will be possible for Charles (Floyd's brother) to get anything to clothe her and the little boy." On May 31, he wrote, "Do order Charles to bring all the net profits of the crop, etc., in Arcadia in clothing or we shall be obliged to use Fig leaves." Since Charles didn't get there until the following December, the clothing situation must, by that time, have been desperate.

As Spring approached, these raids became more and more frequent. On March 8, a young man was wounded near Riddle's Station and some people killed from the trees; buffalo, deer, Callaway and Pemberton Rawlins were killed and two Negroes captured. On the 20th, a man was unable to find any food or water, nor were they able to escape the penetrating cold. The settlers were frequently awakened in the night by the roaring and bellowing of buffalo battling over positions of shelter from the wind or of warmth against the cabin chimneys.

In the forests, maple sap froze in the trees, causing them to burst with a crack like a pistol shot.

The domestic animals and the wild creatures in the forests were suffering even more than the humans. Birds dropped frozen from the trees; buffalo, deer, wolves, bear and other wild animals died by the thousands from cold and starvation. They were unable to find any food or water, nor were they able to escape the penetrating cold. The settlers were frequently awakened in the night by the roaring and bellowing of buffalo battling over positions of shelter from the wind or of warmth against the cabin chimneys.

The Hard Winter was over—and so was the time of peace. For years to come, no white man in Kentucky would be safe, particularly if he were foolhardy enough to venture out alone.

Sept. 4th Is Deadline For Voter Registration

September 4 is the deadline to register to vote for the November, 1965 election in Kentucky.

Registration books throughout the state will be closed on that date, 59 days before the November 2 election, until November 8, five days after.

The only statewide question before the people this year will be whether to issue $176 million in general obligation bonds to obtain funds for roads and capital construction.

County and city officials throughout the state will be elected from the districts in which they are candidates. All 100 state representatives and 19 of the 38 state senators will be elected.

To be eligible to vote in Kentucky, one must have lived in the state one year, in his county six months and in his precinct 60 days, and must be 18 on or before election day.

Registration throughout Kentucky is at the county courthouses, except in Louisville and Jefferson County where it is at Convention Center.

Once registered to vote, a Kentuckian does not have to re-register unless he moves from one precinct or one county to another, or, in the case of a woman, she changes her name by marriage.

The name of a person who fails to vote for two consecutive years may be challenged and removed from the registration books unless he seeks and obtains reinstatement.

Primary election day is the Tuesday following the fourth Monday in May of each year. A person may vote only in the primary of the party with which he is affiliated. Persons registered as Independent may not vote in primaries.

A voter may change his registration from one party to another at any time the books are open but if the change is made after a November election he may not vote in the next primary election.

Polls are open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., standard time, for a general election and from 6 a.m. to 5 p.m. for other elections.

P'BURG WOMAN LEADER IN STATE CLUB PROJECT

Kentucky clubwomen have committed over $40,000 toward construction of a rehabilitation center for delinquent girls to be operated by the State Department of Child Welfare.

Some 14,000 women, members of 258 local organizations affiliated with the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs, are at work on the project, which is headed by Mrs. R. V. May, of Prestonsburg, and have set a goal of $105,000 for it. Groundbreaking for the center, planned at Anchorage in Jefferson County, is expected next spring.

A dozen state and regional officers of the Federation visited Kentucky Village near Lexington recently to see firsthand the services and facilities available there for delinquent girls. The institution, near Lexington, is operated by the Department of Child Welfare and has an average population of 115 girls and 325 boys aged 10 to 18.

Several of the girls led the visitors on a tour of the dormitory and classrooms, and the kitchen, sewing room, and home economics center which double as vocational training and work assignment areas.

Kentucky Village Superintendent Robert G. McClure explained that the proposed rehabilitation center, with a probable capacity of 30 to 40 girls, would offer an improved atmosphere and more individual attention to girls with similar needs for education, vocational training, and guidance.

Forester Offers Help To Owners of Timber

BY W. D. WILLIAMS
Service Forester

Floyd county is very fortunate in having abundant stands of poplar growing in old fields. As you know, poplar has good form, grows well, and brings a good price for sawtimber. In fact, it is one of the most promising species that we have.

However, we often neglect our young stands of timber, which costs us in the long run. Timber is a long range crop, and we need to manage it as we do other crops which we grow for income.

Many young stands of poplar are being stunted or deformed by numerous grapevines. Some young poplars which could bring an income in the future are being suppressed and crowded out by cull and undesirable trees of little value. In addition, many of our stands are too thick and need to be thinned to reduce the competition for the vital sunlight and moisture. Stands under these conditions need help to grow at their maximum rate.

If you have a stand which needs timber stand improvement work, you need to start right now. Contact the Division of Forestry or the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) office. Your stand may very easily qualify for cost-share on timber stand improvement work.

PERKINS' SUBCOMMITTEE BEGINS SCHOOL HEARINGS

Public hearings on school construction legislation were initiated Tuesday by the general subcommittee on Education, U. S. House of Representatives.

Representative Carl D. Perkins (D., Ky.), chairman of the subcommittee, announced that the scope of the hearings was to consider H. R. 9948, a bill which he had introduced on July 20 calling for federal grants to local school districts for the express purpose of financing:

1. The replacement or restoration of hazardous or unsafe school buildings; 2. The consolidation of school facilities; 3. The modernization or replacement of facilities which are antiquated or functionally obsolescent; and 4. The modernization or replacement of facilities to provide innovative or new approaches to elementary and secondary education.

In addition, the subcommittee will seek testimony on other legislative approaches to meeting the critical school construction needs of the nation in the elementary and secondary education field.

Perkins said Monday that the first day of hearings would involve testimony and reports from administrators and experts in the U. S. Office of Education concerning a nationwide study and survey of the adequacy of elementary and secondary school facilities. On the following day, the subcommittee will receive testimony from local school officials and administrators with respect to specific elementary and secondary school construction requirements and that on Thursday, July 29, statements and testimony from representatives of the national Education Association will be received.

The Perkins School Construction Bill would distribute funds to local school districts according to a formula similar to the formula contained in the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, which was also sponsored by Mr. Perkins. This formula distributes funds according to the number of children who come from families whose income is less than $2,000 per annum, thus assuring that the funds go to school districts where the greatest need exists. The new proposal by Perkins would modify the existing formula by paying the school district 50% of the national average per pupil expenditure, or the state average per pupil expenditure, whichever is higher for each such child. This modification would be of benefit to low per capita income states such as Kentucky where the average per pupil expenditure is about $150 less than the national average. At the same time it would give states spending more than the national average the benefit of the additional state and local financing effort.

In his opening remarks at Tuesday's hearing, Perkins said that the Elementary and Secondary Education Act created new educational opportunities in schools attended by concentrations of children coming from low-income families but that it was essential that these school districts be furnished funds to provide modern school buildings and facilities. "Many of our school facilities today are themselves stark examples of poverty and it is difficult for the best education programs to meet the needs of disadvantaged children in overcoming poverty in a setting of poverty," stated Perkins.

Perkins indicated that the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, which would increase the local school budgets of many Eastern Kentucky communities by as much as 30%, will, nevertheless, enable far too little construction. He added that the new funds would be available for new teaching equipment and improved programs but that without appropriate facilities in which to install the equipment many programs would lack the effectiveness that was desired by the Congress in enacting the law, last April.

UK To Continue
Forestry Course
In Breathitt County

Registration for a new term of the University of Kentucky's associate degree program in forestry and wood utilization is scheduled for August 30 and 31 at the UK Wood Utilization Center at Quicksand, Breathitt county.

Plans for the new term were announced jointly in Lexington by Dr. Ellis F. Hartford, dean of the University's community college system; Dr. Stanley Wall, associate dean of the College of Agriculture, and Dr. Dean B. Richards, chairman of the Department of Forestry.

Young men who have had one year of college work, including English, math and science, may begin classes at Quicksand on September 1. They will complete the forestry and wood utilization courses by early May, in time to accept full-time jobs in the summer of 1966.

A student who has had one year of college, except for a deficit of three to six hours, may take the needed courses after attending classes at Quicksand and thus obtain an associate degree at the end of the 1966 summer term.

Students from the University's Prestonsburg Community College and its Southeast Community College at Cumberland can maintain their enrollment there while taking forestry classes at Quicksand. Students from other UK community colleges or from another college in or out of Kentucky may enroll for credit for the second year of college work at either Prestonsburg or Cumberland.

Fees are the same as those for any other year of instruction at UK, $125 per semester for residents of Kentucky. Two officials of the Wood Utilization Center, Director C. Austin Eckerline and Superintendent John E. Ford, will assist students in arranging for room and board in the vicinity of Quicksand.

Students who complete the new associate degree program will be qualified to manage wood utilization plants and sawmills and to work in fire protection and forestry management programs. UK officials say there is a great demand for the services of students who have completed earlier programs of instruction at the Wood Utilization Center.

Young men at any UK community college may obtain additional information about the forestry program from the director of their college. Students interested in transferring from another college should write Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr., director of Prestonsburg Community College, Prestonsburg.

SPECIAL TAX SESSION SCHEDULED AUGUST 23

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Edward T. Breathitt announced last Thursday he will call the General Assembly into special session August 23 to consider property-tax legislation.
 The special session is necessary, Breathitt said, because of public reaction to the June 3 ruling of the Court of Appeals requiring 1966 assessment of property at 100 percent of fair cash value. The statewide average now is only 27 percent.
 Although city, county and school officials have the power to lower 1966 tax rates so that actual tax bills will not be increased, Breathitt said the public needs assurance of protection. "Since the court decision," he said, "I have written over 3,000 letters to local officials charged with responsibility for rate-making, asking them to reassure the public by announcing tax rates for next year under the 100 percent assessment. The actions of many of these officials have been helpful.

 "However, I find there is still great misunderstanding and concern over the effect of the court decision, which could have a serious effect upon our business climate and upon our taxpayers—their plans to build homes, buy farms and go into business.
 "They need leadership and guidance from the governor, they look to him for that leadership, and I intend to do my duty and give it to them."
 Breathitt said he will also include two other subjects in his call:
 1. The amendment to the federal constitution concerning presidential succession.
 2. A proposal to call a limited constitutional convention, restricted to consideration of the document now under preparation by the Constitution Revision Assembly.
 (Thus the 1966 regular session would have a choice of two plans—an unlimited convention, as first proposed by the 1964 regular session, and a limited convention, as expected to be proposed by the special session. Enactment by a second session would be required before either question could be put to a vote of the people.)
 Pinball machines, strip-mining and civil rights are other subjects for which a special session has been advocated recently.
 "I have no present plans to enlarge the call," Breathitt said at his morning news conference.
 However, at an afternoon meeting, the governor said he might call a second special session to outlaw pinball machines, if other efforts to curb them are not successful. That session, if necessary, would immediately follow the first.

MILLER AMONG PRINCIPALS STUDYING 'TRICKLE-DOWN' POTENTIAL IN EDUCATION

Hugo E. Miller, of Drift, principal of the Drift grade school, is among the 25 elementary school principals from 17 states who are studying at Rhode Island College in Providence in an effort to find out if the "trickle-down" theory can be applied to education.

In economics, the theory has it, the general population can benefit from an infusion of prosperity among the community's elite. Through spending and so on, their good fortune can trickle down to everybody else.

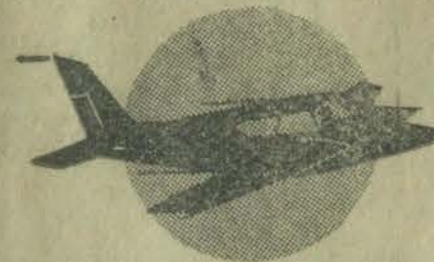

That, according to RIC Associate Professor of Education Coleman Morrison, is approximately how his six-week "Reading Institute for Elementary School Principals" is supposed to work in the improving of reading instruction in the nation's schools.

Financed by a $32,300 grant under the National Defense Education Act, the RIC institute is one of 52 federally-sponsored reading institutes being held across the country this summer. The one at RIC, however is the only one whose membership is limited to principals.

That was Dr. Morrison's idea. "If you just enrolled, say, 25 teachers," he explains, "you might, in a year, influence 750 youngsters, if each teacher had about 30 in his or her class."

"But by working on the principals instead, we hope to influence the 20 or 25 teachers in each of their schools, and pupils each of them has."
 By that kind of figuring, the result, instead of 750 youngsters influenced in a year, is closer to 16,000 to 17,000.

KEEP WATERWAYS CLEAN, GOV. BREATHITT URGES

Frankfort — "Let's keep our waterways clean and free of litter — or someday Kentucky just won't have the water it needs, for drinking or recreation or anything else."

So declared Governor Edward T. Breathitt in endorsing a statewide "Clean Waterways Crusade."

"I know it's hard for most Kentuckians to imagine that this prime vacationland, the second-ranking U. S. state in miles of navigable waterways, could ever run out of good water," Breathitt said.

"But some northeastern states felt the same way only a few years ago about their water supplies, and now you can hardly pick up a newspaper without reading of the dire scarcity and half-filled city reservoirs there."

Plans for the crusade were made at a recent meeting conducted by State Natural Resources Commissioner J. O. Matlick, who is also vice-chairman of the Ohio River Valley Water Sanitation Commission (ORSANCO).

Attending were key officials of the Kentucky Departments of Natural Resources, Public Safety, and Fish and Wildlife Resources; the State Water Pollution Control Commission; the U. S. Coast Guard, and the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Littering of the waterways is already subject to stiff federal penalties, including a fine of not less than $500 per offense or imprisonment for not less than 30 days, or both.

"However, with so many miles to cover and so few men to enforce the law, it's no easy matter to nab and prosecute litterbugs," Matlick noted. "What we are trying to do is to work up public enthusiasm and cooperation in preventing the crime."

To cope with the increasing manufacture and use of so-called "throw-away" receptacles and the doubling of pleasure-boat traffic, he said, these steps are being taken:

* A poster campaign is under way, with the slogan: "Littering Speaking, Don't Go Overboard" as a personalized reminder from the interstate commission.

* Plastic litter-bags, purchased by private industry, are being distributed to provide a handy container to get rid of trash-bits aboard boats. These, too, bear the ORSANCO slogan and a notation of the Federal penalties for littering, and will cost the boater nothing.

* As soon as they become available, large oil drums to collect litter will be distributed to cooperating marinas and boat docks, particularly in heavily recreation-congested areas and where there are adequate on-shore facilities for ultimate disposal of the waste material.

* When feasible, speaking engagements will be set up, in connection with Kentucky's overall clean-up and beautification campaign, and support by newspapers, radio and television, civic groups and private clubs will be sought.

"If anyone wishes to help in any way in this campaign or more information is desired," Matlick added, "my staff and I are available, as are those of the other supporting agencies."

Inquiries may be addressed to Commissioner Matlick or to Mrs. Connie Quinn, Clean-up and Beautification Director, at Natural Resources Department, New Capitol Annex, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Family Life Seminar Set At UK In October

Lexington, Ky.—A Family Life Seminar concerned with the changing needs of Kentucky families will be held this fall as one of the special events of the University of Kentucky Centennial celebration.

Planned both for UK students and for the general public, the Seminar is scheduled Oct. 4-8, according to Dr. Burt Coody, family life specialist with the UK Cooperative Extension Service. Although attendance at daily seminar sessions will be limited to registered participants, night programs will be open to all persons interested in problems facing the modern family.

Major speakers, who also will serve as seminar leaders, will be Dr. David Mace, executive director of the American Association of Marriage Counselors, and Dr. Jessie Bernard, sociologist. Representatives of such fields as psychology, religion, law, medicine and sociology also will serve as panel members at the night sessions.

Among the major concerns of the seminar discussion will be: changing needs of families in the light of cultural, economic and governmental factors; various problems related to marriage and parenthood; moral issues facing the family of the future; women's role in the family and community; the role of father and husband in the modern family; and the family's responsibility preventing school drop-outs.
