NO POLIO IN KENTUCKY REPORTED IN TWO YEARS

Frankfort, Ky. — No polio in Kentucky for more than two years!
 That's the happy record through December, 1964, reported by Dr. Russell E. Teague, state health commissioner.
 The last reported case in Kentucky was in November, 1962, Dr. Teague said. The year 1963 was the first one in which Kentucky went a full 12 months of any calendar year without a case of polio, and 1964 made it more than two calendar years in a row.

Several suspected cases have been reported in the more than two-year span, Dr. Teague said, but laboratory tests proved these to be something else—such as TB, meningitis, neuritis, and other viral diseases.

Kentucky's perfect record for 25 months is particularly significant, Teague said, because of a 10-year state average of 434 cases and 26 fatalities per year from 1951 through 1960.

The record polio year in Kentucky was 1952, when 1,762 cases were reported, 924 of these paralytic. The death total that year was 129, also a record.

Dr. Teague attributed the steady decline and now the case-free record to the Salk and Sabin vaccines. The Sabin variety, a weakened strain of the live virus, is used mostly in the state now, Dr. Teague added.

He reported that some six million doses of Sabin oral polio vaccine have now been administered in the three different types.

"About 75 percent of Kentucky's population has been immunized against polio," according to Dr. Teague. "Some of the counties have reached 90 percent in immunization."

"Our clinics all over the state usually were sponsored by the local medical societies and volunteer organizations in cooperation with county health departments. Vaccine has been available to everyone in Kentucky. It still is available in most of the 120 counties," Dr. Teague pointed out.

A tremendous drop in polio cases first was noted in Kentucky in 1961 and 1962. Only 28 cases were reported in 1961 and just 26 in 1962, compared with the 10-year average of 434 cases from 1951 through 1960. Paralytic cases, however, still were proportionately high, even in those two waning years of incidence, Dr. Teague recalled. There were 19 paralytics in 1961 and 26 in 1962.

However, no deaths resulted in Kentucky in 1961 nor in 1962, in comparison with the 1951-1960 average of 26 fatalities per year.
 Nationally, the polio record improved tremendously last year, too, Dr. Teague reported. Just 119 cases (92 paralytic) were reported in all the 50 states in 1964, as compared to 431 cases (368 paralytic) in 1963, according to the Communicable Disease Center of the U. S. Public Health Service, in Atlanta, Georgia.

New York had the most cases, 11, and Florida the next-highest total, nine, last year. Texas was third with eight and North Carolina fourth with seven. Ranked next-highest in polio statistics, were Indiana having six cases and Illinois, five.

TIDBITS of Kentucky Folklore

"STATUS SYMBOLS AGAIN"

If we would be honest with ourselves, we would have to admit that a very large part of what we do, or eat, or wear, or say has to do with keeping up appearances. In more recent years this is called using certain status symbols. The most interesting phase of this tireless effort to keep up with the Joneses is that what puts us into the first place in one generation usually brands us as far below first in the next generation or even a period of time much shorter than that. In my three quarters of a century I have seen probably a dozen genuine periods of change in symbols. In fact, nearly all of these nearly 1,550 articles in this column could be classed under this heading.

Living in a remote, back-country section, I was acquainted with customs that had become somewhat old-fashioned elsewhere. Since vehicles have long branded us as to our social positions, that would be a good place to begin. People who owned buggies at Fidelity felt sorry for the poorer folks who had to travel by wagon, even when they went to Quarterly Meeting at Sulphur Springs. Hosts of people whom I had known in my earliest years did not own buggies until well after 1900. And some owned brand-new buggies as late as the 1920's. The mere buggy got a terrible jolt not long before 1906, the year I left home to go to school; the rubber-tired buggy came in and made the old steel-rimmed buggy look antiquated and tacky. The boy with the rubber-tired buggy certainly knew that he was up in the world, even though the dusty, muddy roads were the same that they had been back in wagon days. I did not get to witness the coming of the automobile at Fidelity, for I was living elsewhere; however, I can recall how big a splash the T-model made in Bowling Green and how envious the mere rubber-tired buggy owners were. And, good psychologists that they were and are, the makers of cars soon developed the car as a status symbol and changed it so fast that many people felt disgraced when they were still seen driving a car a few years old.

And that changing status symbol still is with us, so much so that some people have to strain their bank accounts to keep up with the very latest. A friend of mine said, truly, about her father that he was the very type of fellow who thought that smoking a certain brand of tobacco or driving a certain type of car brought distinction. Shades of the rubber-tired buggy that drove in state up to Sulphur Springs Church along about 1903!

Since I, like all human beings, have to eat several times a day to keep going, I often find myself laughing at the social status given by one's eating or serving his guests certain foods. We brats at Fidelity school used to look down our dirty noses at the children who brought some food to school to eat at the noon recess that did not match up to what we had in our buckets or baskets. In fact, a basket was ever so much more aristocratic than a mere bucket. When Mark and Elmus appeared one day with some fried bread, we thought the end of things had come, little realizing that they and their folks were eating doughnuts. The rest of us had not known the taste of doughnuts and supposed them something fancy or fancier than the fried cakes the boys had. We were queer brats ourselves, but how much queerer were we than some of the grown-ups I have known, even lately, who railed against pasteurized milk and fairly raised the roof when it was suggested that margarine was good? Years ago I exulted when the doctors said good words for turnip greens; I am afraid that I gazed my aristocratic neighbor a bit too much when I told her that I had been justified at last, for I had always eaten greens of all kinds unashamedly. If you have tried in recent years to get some good soups at the supermarket, you will know that lots of folks nowadays buy up the good soups almost at once, people whose immediate forebears would have died of starvation before they would have been caught buying soups or, especially, eating it. Ho, hum! What next?

1965 IS HOMECOMING YEAR FOR KENTUCKY

The year 1965, designated Homecoming Year for Kentucky, is expected to see the greatest influx of visitors—former residents coming home, plus an ever-growing throng of tourists in the history of the Commonwealth.

This was the opinion expressed by Marvin Music, Prestonsburg, member of the Homecoming committee recently named by Governor Breathitt, after he, City Manager Curtis Clark and Marvin E. Music, Jr., had attended a Tourist Travel meeting in Louisville recently.

To assist Kentucky counties in publicizing their attractions and otherwise developing community tourism promotion programs, the 1964 General Assembly appropriated $115,000. This is apportioned between the 12 regions of the state on a matching basis, and Region 12, which includes Floyd and seven other counties of this area, is eligible to receive a total of $3,094.24.

Sharing in the eight-way split of $1,000 allocated the region, plus $415 allowed each county, plus 1 1/2 cents per population (Floyd's is listed at 41,642), Floyd county is eligible to receive from this fund a total of $1,164 if it will match that amount with funds raised locally.

Mr. Music has called a meeting to be held at 2:30 p.m., January 26 at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, for the purpose of organizing a regional council, determining projects each county would like to sponsor and planning for participation in the program. Leaders

PERSPECTIVE

BY ROBERT J. HASTINGS

CLEAN LIVING

A doctor quickly decided to make an incision in the throat of a patient who was choking to death. His nurse could not find the first surgical instrument he requested. "Then give me anything," he said, "so long as it is clean."

A mother had just bathed and dressed her small son for a trip and was now spending a few minutes dressing herself. When she was ready, to her dismay her little boy was all dirty again. "But mother, I was only playing in the dirt," he apologized. "Yes," she replied, "but when will you learn that you cannot play in the dirt without getting dirty?"

How are these two incidents related, and what is their bearing on the lives of persons such as you and me? Just this: there is no substitute for personal integrity, for clean living, for high moral standards. We may be clever and talented and well-educated and successful according to worldly standards. But moral cleanliness is needed if parents and teachers and business leaders and government officials do their jobs properly. Nor should we fool ourselves that we can occasionally play in the dirt without getting dirty, any more than a child can play with matches without getting burned.

Morality is not something we can put on when we dress for church on Sunday mornings, and then hang in the closet when we get home. Morality is what we are day by day, what we are in our innermost thoughts, what we are when we think no one is looking. A clean life—like a clean surgeon's scalpel—is the one tool needed for every job. Are you qualified?

SPEAKS AT CLARK SCHOOL

The Clark elementary school P.T.A. had its regular meeting Friday, January 22. Members voted to buy a portable science laboratory for the school. The guest-speaker of the evening was James Templeton, a representative of the Council of Southern Mountains. His topic was mainly concerned with the purpose of the Council and how it benefits education and the community.

DR. HYDEN
WANTS TO BE YOUR COUNTY JUDGE

A man who offers experience and who is interested in better financial management, efficient administration, and a revamped, progressive road-building program for Floyd county. A man who believes that the oath of office is a sacred trust to be honored as such, and believes that justice should be impartially administered, though tempered with mercy.

MY REASONS FOR WANTING TO SERVE YOU:

1. While a student at Caney Junior College I took an unwritten pledge to return to the mountains to serve my people. It was my understanding that such service would be rendered in whatever field that my talents would permit and that personal sacrifice would not stand in the way. I have prepared myself, through twenty years of study in public schools and colleges, through health service in the dental field and through extensive interest in public affairs.
2. I believe that I am better prepared to offer a forward program of cooperation with both local, state and federal governments in bringing their assistance to Floyd county.
3. I believe that it is my duty, with the help of all Floyd countians, to return the office of County Judge to the people. It is my belief that, after 26 years in office, any man should step aside for younger people. I ask for only four years.
4. I believe that too many of our people in the hollows and creeks have been long neglected in the road-building program—to them I will be dedicated and only by serving as your County Judge will I be able to help.
5. I want to be your County Judge because I believe that I can better provide leadership in economic development by encouraging a better climate for industrial growth and job opportunities.
6. I want to be your County Judge because I think this is one of the greatest honors any man can have bestowed upon him, one in which his descendents will be proud. Should we select only one man every 25 years?—Then there would only be 4 different ones every 100 years.

By your vote you can help me to help you.

PROBE SHOWS HIRING ROLE

Tax Case Testimony Tells of Employment Of Two Ex-Governors

Engineering consultant William H. May, of Frankfort, formerly of Prestonsburg, has testified in depositions filed in a federal tax case that Kentucky State Highway Department officials were placed on his company payrolls as part-time employees during the late 1950's. The Courier-Journal's Washington bureau reported recently.

They included Robert O. Beaucamp, director of highway design for the department, and numerous employees in the department's Louisville district office. They were hired while May held state engineering contracts.

He testified that it has been a "common practice" for engineering consultants to hire highway department employees for "moonlighting" jobs.

"No stigma about it," he testified. "Nothing that affronts anybody about it. . . it was an accepted practice here that was known by all. It was not an ulterior operation at all. Their employers were glad for them to have supplemental income. Wages were disgracefully low and nobody objected to it."

James E. Fahey, attorney for William H. May and his companies, issued the following statement:

"The material contained in this story was taken from depositions taken by attorneys for the Government in the course of their preparation for the trial of the case.

"No effort was made by our witnesses to explain or elaborate upon their answers, or to put in the record facts which support our case, because this is not the place for such material. The facts which support our case are reserved for presentation at the trial. When they are laid before the court, we are confident that a decision in our favor will be rendered."

May, now chairman of the Kentucky Racing Commission, also testified that:

During this same period he financed a college education for the son of Bert Kiser, who was state highway commissioner and deputy highway commissioner during that time.

He paid "finder's" fees as high as $23,000 to obtain engineering contracts in various states including Oklahoma and Indiana.

Two governors whose administrations awarded his companies large contracts went on his payroll shortly after leaving office — Lawrence Weatherby, of Kentucky, in 1955, and George Craig, of Indiana, in 1956.

He hired two men linked several years later to former Senate Secretary Bobby Baker to help him get business in the United States and foreign countries.

NEW HEALTH JOB STARTS

Martin County Plans Physical and Dental Exams for Population

The Martin county health program began Wednesday, Jan. 20, a three-month project which will offer thorough physical and dental examinations to approximately 3,000 persons—roughly, 22% of the county's population.

Three groups have been selected to receive these examinations:

1. All children born in 1958 who are now enrolled in the first grade in Martin county;
2. The entire families of those children listed in the first grade; and
3. Other families of the county to total 22% of the population. These families have been chosen at random from the census files of the Tuberculosis Eradication Project.

The selection was done by means of a computer at the University of Kentucky's Department of Community Medicine. Included in the tests which these families may receive will be thorough physical and dental examinations, several laboratory tests (blood and urine), vision and hearing tests, chest x-rays, measurement of height, weight and temperature, an electrocardiogram, a Pap smear for women (cancer), and pulmonary function (lungs) and blood pressure tests for many adults. If given by a private physician, these tests would cost more than $150, but they are offered by this program without charge, it is pointed out.

Performing these tests will be a public health team from the Kentucky State Department of Health and the U. S. Public Health Service. This team consists of four physicians, a dentist, three nurses, two laboratory technicians, an x-ray technician, two clerks, and 15 auxiliary workers employed in Martin county. The team has established its headquarters in Inez, and the testing will be carried on there for the duration of the program.

The health program is being offered through the combined efforts of the Kentucky State Department of Health (Multiple screening project) and the University of Kentucky Department of Community Medicine (tuberculosis eradication project). The multiple screening project began a year ago as part of the late President Kennedy's Community Services and Facilities Act of 1961. During the past 12 months the screening team has given physical and dental examinations to a large percentage of the first-grade children in 13 counties of Eastern Kentucky.

The tuberculosis eradication project began two years ago in Martin county, and has in that time given tuberculin tests to more than 99% of the school children and 60% of the adults in the county. Its long-range objective is the complete control of tuberculosis within the county, and an accurate census of every household.

These two projects have now joined forces to bring to Martin county an extensive health program. The screening team will provide the diagnostic services, and plans are under way at the University of Kentucky and the State Department of Health to provide such clinics and other follow-up procedures as are indicated by the results of the examinations and tests.

COMMEMORATIVE STAMP TO PROMOTE SAFETY

Frankfort, Ky.—One of the seven commemorative stamps to be issued during 1965 will promote traffic safety in the United States, according to U. S. Postmaster General John A. Gronouski. The stamp is being issued in an effort to call public attention to the rising death toll on our highways, and the need for stricter traffic regulations.

He regularly sent gifts, such as boxes of cigars, to highway officials in Indiana and Michigan and paid the expenses at the 1956 Democratic National Convention for Mrs. Dillon Geiger, whose husband was a member of the Indiana Toll Roads Commission. He said that, one Christmas, candelabra were sent to Governor A. B. Chandler.

He placed eight politicians—including seven state legislators—on his payroll as the price of getting state business during Governor Chandler's last administration. This gesture cost his companies about $50,000, according to Justice Department attorneys. But it produced, by May's estimate, about $1 million in engineering contracts.

These and other details of May's political and business operations are laid out in depositions filed with the United States Court of Claims in Washington. The depositions contain sworn testimony from May, Weatherby, and other officials of May's companies—Tecon Engineering, Brighton Engineering, and Capital Engineering, which is now defunct.

The suit producing the testimony was filed by May and his companies for a refund of federal income taxes.

Highway Commissioner Henry Ward said this week that no employees of his department have, to his knowledge, been employed by either of the engineering firms since he became commissioner in September, 1959. "I've had no information that they have," said Ward. "I've had assurance from Tecon and Brighton that they have not."

Farmers are reminded of the annual Louisville barrow show and sale to be held at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center, February 4-6.

SET OPENING 3-BILLIONTH TON OF COAL DUE SOON FROM KY. MINES

Lodge Rates Increased, Announcement by Bell; Jenny Wiley Yet Open

Opening dates for nine vacation-type Kentucky state parks, which were closed this winter, have been announced by State Parks Commissioner Robert D. Bell.

First to open on March 15 will be Lake Cumberland, near Jamestown, and Rough River, between Hardinsburg and Leitchfield, Bell said.

Three others will open April 15. They are Audubon, near Henderson; Kentucky Lake, near Hardin; and Natural Bridge, near Slade.

Opening May 1 will be Buckhorn, between Hazard and Booneville.

On May 15 Carter Caves, near Olive Hill; Pennyrile Forest, near Dawson Springs; and Pine Mountain, near Pineville, will open, Bell added.

The other four vacation-type state parks remained open throughout the winter. They are Jenny Wiley, near Prestonsburg; Kentucky Dam Village, near Gilbertsville; General Butler, near Carrollton; and Cumberland Falls, near Corbin.

A nine-hole golf course is to be completed at Pine Mountain State Park in time for its opening, Bell reported, and another nine-hole course is under construction at Audubon.

Kenlake Hotel, at Kenlake State Park, will have a $100,000 renovation project—a complete refurbishing of all guest rooms and the recreation room—ready for its first guests.

An increase in lodge-room rates was also announced by Bell. The basic rate for a single occupancy will be $9, and for a double $14. They were $8 and $12.

"We think this raise is justified, not only because of increasing costs of operation, but also based on a state-wide survey we made of comparable local facilities," Bell pointed out. "We do have some lower-priced lodge accommodations available."

The Central Reservation Information Office at Frankfort already has re-opened for the year, Bell added. Free calls for reservations at, or information about, any state park can be made direct to Frankfort by calling 583-9796 in Louisville, 252-4913 in Lexington, and 261-2643 in the Covington-Cincinnati area. The Frankfort number for toll calls is 223-2326. The office is open 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, except for state and legal holidays.

ANNOUNCE BIRTH

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Hackworth, of Ashland, announce the birth of their first child, a son, Jerry Marshall, January 19, at King's Daughters' hospital, Ashland. Mrs. Hackworth is the former Nancy Marshall.

Many farmers and agricultural leaders from all over the state will want to attend the meeting of the Governor's Commission on Agriculture to be held February 3-4 at the Sheraton hotel in Louisville.

Three billion tons of coal is quite a hunk, whichever way you happen to look at it. For Kentucky's coal industry, it is no longer a distant goal—rather it's a proud record of light, heat and power furnished to countless cities, farms, and families over many, many years.

Any day now this month, in some mine somewhere in the state, the historic three-billionth ton will be lifted from the ground and presented to Governor Edward T. Breathitt as a symbolic tourist attraction.

The Governor, however, has already anticipated the "gift," and at a recent luncheon at the Executive Mansion in Frankfort, he presented an achievement plaque to the industry. Fred B. Bullard, president of the Kentucky Coal Association, accepted the award as industry representative. "The three-billionth ton of coal," Breathitt noted, "reflects the solid growth of the coal industry and its importance to the economic development of our Commonwealth. Kentucky's top mineral resource and the key attraction for new industry is our abundant supply of coal, with mine production and our share of the export market growing every year."

Then he announced that a new Floyd county mine, eventually employing 200 men, will be opened by the Evans Elkhorn Coal Company.

"The future looks bright," Governor Breathitt told the luncheon gathering. "I understand the Steel Company of Canada is also planning another large underground mine in Pike county. Then, too, as you all know, the Kentucky Carbon Corporation will employ up to 300 men in another Pike county mine and Bethlehem Mines Elkhorn Division will start construction soon on its new mining and preparation plant, near Jenkins."

"Research under way by the coal industry, private organizations, and on the federal and state levels promises to find new markets and uses for coal. Right now there are some 130 synthetic products made from coal, and there will be more, I'm sure."

REVISED POINT SYSTEM TO PROTECT DRIVERS

The revised Kentucky point system is an effort on the part of the Kentucky Department of Public Safety to protect Kentucky drivers and ensure a safe driving future for them. Point value is determined by the offense and is based upon individual driver records submitted to the department by the courts.

Frankfort, Ky.—Advance highlights of the 1964 Copeland survey of travel expenditures in Kentucky show an $18 million increase in the total spent here by out-of-state travelers last year.

State Senator Fairis Johnson, of Garrett, is one of four state legislators listed as delinquent in filing their federal income tax returns for either one or both years, 1962 and 1963, according to G.
