ACID WATER AREA THREAT

Federal Study Shows Appalachia's Streams Are Made Inadequate

Acid drainage from mines and the problem of floods pose difficulties for the future of the Appalachian region, government water specialists said this week. "In Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky and elsewhere in Appalachia, acid mine drainage is contaminating streams and rendering them inadequate for general use," said William J. Schneider, a Geological Survey hydrologist.

Schneider and his associates have just completed an 11-page report on water resources of the Appalachian region.

In their summary of acid mine drainage, the authors said the condition exists in areas where coal has been left exposed through mining. The exposure triggers a chemical reaction forming sulphuric acid. Rainfall and runoff carry the acid into streams, where it has a deleterious effect on flora and fauna and shortens the life of bridges, pipes, boats and almost anything it touches.

"Geological survey data shows that the Monongahela River, draining parts of West Virginia and Pennsylvania, empties over 200,000 tons of sulphuric acid into the Ohio River each year," Schneider said.

The survey team also reported that more than six million acres of lowlands are flooded on an average of at least once every 10 years. The hydrologists expressed belief that further development of Appalachia may aggravate flood problems and increase flood damage unless measures are taken to regulate stream flow.

The report says an average of 150 billion gallons of water leave Appalachia each day as flow in rivers. Based on current national averages, this is enough to supply six times the water needs of the area's present population of 15.5 million.

The report said geography will continue to influence the region's development. Growth of communities and transportation routes generally has been limited to the stream valleys.

Surface streams will supply most of the future demands for industrial water, the report said, and consequently those areas where good surface water and good transportation routes coincide may offer the best industrial sites.

100 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky

By JOE JORDAN

One hundred years ago this week the Kentucky legislature continued to delay voting on a proposed amendment to the U. S. Constitution, abolishing slavery, and the issue was the subject of hot discussions throughout the Commonwealth, especially in the newspapers. The Lexington Observer and Reporter came out strongly against ratification of the anti-slavery amendment.

"When the rebellion was originated," the editorial said, "Kentucky took her position firmly, and by a majority decision at the polls, in favor of the Union. Her people were told that it was no part of the object of those engaged in the effort to put down the rebellion to interfere with the domestic institutions of the states, that the preservation of the Union and the restoration of the national authority were alone the objects of the war. It was not even hinted that slavery might ultimately fall in the struggle.

"The people of Kentucky were assured by those to whom they gave their confidence that no such intention was entertained, and upon the assurance thus given they did not hesitate to sever the ties which bound them to their brethren of the South... and stand firmly in opposition to them in their insane desire to disrupt the government. "Mr. Lincoln himself in his inaugural address took no equivocal position upon this subject. He there distinctly announced that neither he nor the party with which he was identified had either the right or the disposition to interfere with slavery in the states. The platform of the Chicago Convention, which he declared should be a law unto him, had also enunciated the same position. And yet, what is now proposed? The very identical thing they stated they would not do, because they had neither the power nor the disposition, they are speeding with all haste to accomplish."

Grayson County Home Guards attacked guerrillas encamped near Hartford, in Ohio county, and in a brisk skirmish killed six and wounded four. One of

Produce Firm Offers Resolutions Of Respect for Morrison Family

To a faithful and loyal employee, to one who was ever ready to shoulder the load, to a young man well loved by his fellow employees and his employer and one who never shirked his responsibility, we offer in our frail way these words of consolation to the family and friends of Bobby Morrison.

Not in our 25 years in business have we been faced with a similar occurrence of having a valued and faithful employee removed from our midst by accident. But we shall not here question the powers on high, nor the One who knows all things. But rather let us look forward to the hope that the kind Master of the universe, and great builder of all things will look down with compassion upon a young man so kind and considerate of his fellowman.

Remembering the words of Christ, the Savior, in Mark 10:41, "For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you he shall not lose his reward."

Let us also look forward to the hope that Bobby will some day reach that great Country from which no traveler has ever yet returned, and which the Patriarch Job described as being "Where the wicked ceased from troubling, and where the weary be at rest."

"O, that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time and remember me." (Job 14:13.)

Respectfully submitted to the family

Resolutions of Respect

In Memory of Brother Jesse Dale,
who died March 1, 1965

Once again bath death summoned a Brother Odd Fellow, and the golden gateway to the Eternal City has opened to welcome him to his home. He has completed his work in ministering to the wants of the afflicted, in shedding light into darkened souls, and in bringing joy into the places of misery, and as his reward has received the plaudit "well done" from the Supreme Master.

WHEREAS, The all-wise and merciful Master of the Universe has called our beloved and respected Brother home, and he having been a true and faithful member of our beloved Order, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That Prestonsburg Lodge No. 293, I.O.O.F., of Kentucky, in testimony of its loss, drape its Charter in mourning for thirty days, that we tender to the family our sincere condolence in their deep affliction, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family.

the Home Guards was killed and another wounded.

The legislature adopted a resolution welcoming Maj. Gen. John M. Palmer, who had been appointed to succeed Maj. Gen. Stephen G. Burbridge as commander of Union Army forces in Kentucky.

In their relief at the prospect of getting rid of Burbridge, a good many editors throughout the state praised Palmer. The Louisville Journal said: "The people of the state may congratulate themselves... The change of military commanders will prove immensely beneficial to the state." The National Unionist, published at Lexington, was better informed than most. It said it had learned "the outlines of his policy." That would later be proved essentially correct.

What My Religion Means To Me

(No. 3 in a series of Pre-Easter articles sponsored by the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club)

BY FRED JAMES

Strange that I have been chosen to be asked this question. But is it really strange? Why not me? When I was first asked to do this article, I was reluctant.

I looked at the times in which we live, the times of Viet Nam, South and North. We live in times of fear of war with Russia and China. We live in times of fear for race relations that boil to explosive points in this, our land of freedom.

I know my church gives me the feeling of security and relieves the strains of earthly fears. When I attend and take an active part in my church I forget the fears that press upon my mind while I go about my daily tasks.

There is a question which comes to my mind: What is this place called church? Is it a building in which we gather to sing our praises, read the word of God, and ask for our sins to be forgiven; a place in which we who believe in the same manner may congregate? I say, "No."

Oh, there are times when we may stray and not remember our teachings. Then we awaken to find ourselves in a position when we must again call on Christ to give us help. This reminds me of the story when Peter asked Christ, "How many times are we to forgive?"

What does my church mean to me? How many pages could any of us write on this and still not cover the subject completely? I have found out that the best way to answer a difficult question is by asking a question. So—just what does your church mean to you?

STATE PLANS STUDY FOR THE UNEMPLOYED

The State Economic Security Department is attempting to meet a self-imposed April 1 deadline to prepare unemployed parents in Floyd and eight other counties for basic education classes now being established by local boards of education, Commissioner C. Leslie Dawson said this week.

"We also want to be prepared to refer our participants to basic education classes as soon as the federal government approves a grant to finance this adult education program," Dawson said.

The request for funds, made by the State Education Department, is now pending in the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The project will be carried out under the department's work experience and training program, part of an unemployed fathers project currently financed by a $9.6 million federal grant under the Economic Opportunity Act in the "war on poverty."

Preparation for the project will include interviewing applicants, evaluating their needs and determining their present educational level, to see what training they should be referred to.

Members of the Frankfort central office staff in public assistance and supervisors from the nine-county area in Eastern Kentucky where the project will be carried out, met March 11 and 12 to work out details of the work experience and training program.

Dawson said that in the future a much greater emphasis upon training the unemployed parent will prepare him to enter the labor market by developing or conserving his job skills.

The fathers and step-fathers in the nine counties will be assigned to adult basic education classes if their previous schooling was less than the eighth grade level, the commissioner said. If the parent attended school above the eighth grade, an attempt will be made to assign him to vocational education classes, the manpower development program, and specially-selected training programs designed to meet the needs of individual participants.

The nine counties involved in the unemployed parents program are Bell, Harlan, Perry, Floyd, Breathitt, Pike, Leslie, Letcher and Knott.

"In order to continue to benefit from the work experience and training program," Dawson said, "the parent must show a desire to improve his job skills and must work and train a specified number of hours each month."

Dawson said that the emphasis upon finding suitable private employment for persons under the program also means that the parent must be willing to accept a job offer when the time comes.

"Federal rules provide that no one may be continued under the program if he refuses a suitable offer of work," Dawson explained.

The economic security program will be carried out in cooperation with the State Education Department in both adult basic education and vocational training.

Local school systems will play a vital role in providing classroom space and instructors for adult basic education, Dawson said.

TIDBITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

Western Kentucky Teachers' College, Bowling Green, Ky.

"REGIONAL WORDS"

The most misunderstood group of words in our language are what are now called regional words. For generations English teachers have somewhat ignored or even condemned these distinctive words, classifying them with barbarisms and other recognized forms of substandard English.

Some time ago I mentioned our regional foods and how they are often used to attract tourists. Though there is no money in it, a use of regional words can and does add distinction to an area quite as much as regional foods.

In a winter-long search for certain words of a regional nature, I have been given some queer experiences. I have found in certain studies that a shedroom is called a linter, apparently a dictionary spelling for the word, which is widely known as a lean-to. Our good old friend ambeer, may be a bit too well known around the stove in the country store, does not yet rate in the college dictionaries; it must be rudely shocking to the makers of such texts.

Some students of language are perfectly willing to unlearn their own regional words and pronunciations for everyday things and acquire, often with great effort, the regional words, and especially pronunciations, of New England, seeming to believe that what the New Englanders say is always right. I have no prejudice against the New Englanders and their language; in fact, I love to hear it when it is genuine and not acquired by somebody who spent a few years in some New England college, or by somebody who hopes to raise his social image by dropping a few New England words into his ordinary conversation.

Years ago two teachers came to Western, one from Michigan, the other from Wisconsin. In formal speech they and I talked the same language; we never seemed to need any footnotes. But in ordinary chatter or informal conversation, I often got lost when the Michigan professor was speaking; he would have to offer some substitute words for his first usages; I would have to do the same thing when I was talking with him. The Wisconsin professor and I rarely had to stop long enough to insert a better-known word—that is, better-known to me. I was surprised until I learned that the original settlers in southwest Wisconsin, where he came from, arrived there from Cave City, Kentucky. After I learned that, neither of us felt any strain on our normal everyday speech when we were just "passing the time of day." I deeply regret that I do not know more of the native Michigan speech, though from several summer vacations spent in central Michigan, I did learn what a walehole is. That is a marsh or swamp in Kentucky lingo, a slightly different one, maybe as most Michigan swaleholes are shallow glacial lakes that have filled up with silt and vegetation.

Soil Conservation
BY GERALD N. HART
Work Unit Conservationist

There are over 60,000 acres in the Floyd County Soil Conservation district that need establishment and reinforcement of timber stand, according to a conservation needs inventory, conducted by the Soil Conservation Service and other agencies. This 60,000 acres in a lot of places is lying idle and there is no income being produced for the present or future.

One of the conservation practices best suited to most of this land is tree planting. Farmers and landowners that are interested in planting trees can receive cost sharing from the A.S.C.S. office, located over Cox's Department store in Prestonsburg.

The local A.S.C.S. office will pay for the cost of the trees and pay $9.00 per acre on planting them. Anyone interested in planting trees should place this order as soon as possible. For further information on tree planting, contact any one of the following offices: A.S.C.S., Extension Service, Kentucky Division of Forestry or the Soil Conservation Service.

BOYD IN TRAINING
San Antonio, Texas — Airman Roger Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Boyd, of Dana, Kentucky, has completed Air Force basic military training at Lackland AFB, Texas. Airman Boyd has been selected for technical training as an aircraft equipment repairman at the Air Training Command (ATC) school at Chanute AFB, Illinois. His new unit is part of the vast ATC system which trains airmen and officers in the diverse skills required by the nation's aerospace force.

$2 MILLION SAVED ON ROAD CONTRACTS

Frankfort, Ky., March 9 (Sp.) — A total of $2,130,383 in highway construction costs was saved in the first two groups of contracts awarded this year, Commissioner of Highways Henry Ward announced today.

Ward said that the total of contracts awarded as a result of bids received on January 15 and February 19 was $13,610,780. The Department's own estimates of what the cost of these projects would be was $15,741,163.

"I am particularly pleased with this development because it offers conclusive proof that a relatively new procedure put into effect in the Department of Highways produces the most economical use of the funds available for construction purposes," Ward said. "Too often in the past the Department of Highways did not advertise or award contracts for construction until up in the summer or even in the early fall. Obviously, little construction could be done before the winter, because the Department normally requires a contractor to stop construction on November 15."

"In conversations with contractors, I became convinced that the Department actually could get much better bids if it timed award of contracts properly. Because normal construction season on highway work is from April 1 to November 15, advertising and awarding of contracts well in advance of April 1 means that contractors would have the entire normal work year to perform their contracts. It also means that contractors, during the fall and winter months, can make their plans, bid intelligently and stockpile materials on work to be done during the coming construction season. All of this saves the contractor money and, therefore, he can submit a lower bid on the work to be performed.

"The Department had a perfect example of the benefits from this procedure in connection with the advertising and awarding of contracts for paving the 70 miles of the Central Kentucky Parkway. All contracts for paving were awarded last October. This meant that contractors had all winter to stockpile materials and be ready to start paving operations April 1. This assured the Department that the Parkway can be completed and opened to traffic by this fall and also resulted in a very substantial saving to the state.

"The total bids for paving on the Parkway amounted to $3 million under the engineers estimate of what paving costs might be."

The airman is a graduate of Prestonsburg high school. His wife, Janet, is the daughter of Edmon Fannin, of Manchester.

IN MEMORIAM
In memory of my husband, Herbert L. Stratton, who passed away one year ago, March 19, 1964:

INSIDE THE GATE
I wonder if they rang the bells For him inside the gate And if the angels rushed to tell The many friends who wait.

Were they anxious that he see The shining Jasper wall, The golden streets, the crystal stream, The splendor of it all?

I wonder if he has received His mansion and reward And if his voice already blends In praises to his Lord—

Or if they gently bade him rest Beside a golden stair, Knowing he would think it best To wait till you are there.

RESOLUTION
In Re: Road Limit Auxier Road
On motion of Edward Caudill, seconded by Bryant DeRossett, it is moved that a maximum load limit of 12 tons be placed on the County Road from the Auxier bridge to and including the town of Auxier, to take effect March 1, 1965.

The motion being put to a vote, all members being present voted unanimously for favor of the adoption.

The Court hereby directs the County Clerk to advertise this notice in the Floyd County Times.

This the 24th day of February, 1965.

HENRY STUMBO, County Judge
BRYANT DEROSSETT, District No. 1
ZEB OUSLEY, District No. 2
EDWARD CAUDILL, District No. 3
FRED CONN, District No. 4

Ward emphasized that these results were not just "paper savings."
Cost estimates on proposed federal projects are carefully reviewed by the Bureau of Public Roads long before projects are advertised and a Bureau official meets with the Highway Awards Committee after each bid opening to recommend to the Commissioner awarding of contracts. Any bid a few percentage points above the estimate is analyzed item by item by the committee and if not adequately substantiated by the contractor it is not awarded.

"If our estimates on projects were too high when presented to the Bureau with plans and specifications, the projects could not be advertised; and if the bids are too high when opened and analyzed, the contracts will not be awarded," Ward explained. "We know, therefore, that bids below the estimates on large lettings such as we are having earlier than ever before represent an actual savings."

"Because we have this excellent check on federal projects, and because the bids are running below estimates across the board on all other projects, including turnpike, state projects and rural secondary projects, we know conclusively that our procedure is saving money and thereby providing Kentucky motorists and taxpayers with more roads for their tax dollar. We will continue to effect every possible economy within the Department of Highways to put the maximum tax revenue where it belongs—on the roads," he said.

DIRTY WATER

Water is a MUST for everything that lives. The supply of good, clean water is running out—that's why we've got a problem and YOU have a problem.

Can it happen here? IT IS HAPPENING HERE and all over America. Pollution—by individuals, communities and industry—is claiming a terrific toll. The Old Swimming Hole of other days is the Cesspool of 1965.

Pollution control is a national concern, just as water pollution is a national disgrace. At the national level it is the responsibility of the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. At the state level it is the State Department of Health; and at the county level, the County Health Department.

THE LAW AGAINST POLLUTION IS ADEQUATE — ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAW IS NOT!

KRS 150.460, Subsection 1, says:

"No person, firm or corporation, whether acting in a private or a public capacity, shall place or cause to be placed in any public waters any substance that might injure, interfere with or cause the water to be unfit for the support of aquatic life, etc. Each day that this section is violated shall constitute a separate offense."

Subsection 4: "Conservation officers and other persons appointed by the commission, and ALL PEACE OFFICERS (capitals ours) have the authority to enforce KRS 220.580 to 220.990 (known as the Water Pollution Laws)."

If you as a citizen care to register complaints about water pollution, the Floyd County Fish & Game Club, Langley, Kentucky, will receive them and then see that they reach the proper agency, or you may send them directly to the Water Pollution Control Commission, State Department of Health, 275 E. Main St., Frankfort, Kentucky.

If pollution is coming from outside Kentucky into waters of this state, complaint may be made to the Ohio River Valley Water Sanitation Commission, 414 Walnut St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Information in such complaints must include the place, time and date of violation, the person, persons or company committing the violation, your name and address.

The fight on pollution is not a matter to be carried on only during this week, which is National Wildlife Week. It is a battle that must be continued, day after day, week after week, year after year, till the war is won. Join this continuing battle today — insist on the strict enforcement of all laws, let your influence be felt, insist on the education of the public to the responsibility of Floyd county, the state and the nation in this all-important matter.

The time may not be too distant when clean, pure water will be so precious that it will be sold by the quart!

THE SITUATION IS BAD and IT IS GROWING WORSE. NOW IS the TIME-- DO SOMETHING--THIS IS A PROBLEM THAT CONFRONTS US ALL!

Martin's first-round opponent in the state high school basketball tournament—Breckinridge County—was the runner-up to state champion Seneca last year and has all-star Butch Beard as a hold-over from that team.

Beard has guided the Bearcats to a 33-3 slate with his 23-point average. He is the only starter over six feet. Both Prestonsburg radio stations will beam the 10:45 Thursday morning game back to Floyd county from Louisville's spacious Freedom Hall.

Last week's 15th regional tournament was the richest financial meet in local history as the four-day event grossed $10,709. Each participating school netted $1,000.79, and Prestonsburg high school realized $3,300 from concessions and rental of the gymnasium along with other services...

HALL IN GERMANY

Grafenwohr, Germany—Army Pvt. Bobby N. Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hall, of Hunter, Kentucky, participated in a two-week winter field training exercise conducted by the 3rd Armored Division near Grafenwohr, Germany.

During the maneuvers, which ended March 8, Hall received extensive training in weapons firing and small unit tactics. Hall is assigned to Company C, 2nd Battalion of the division's 32nd Armor near Kirch Gons, Germany. He entered the Army in May, 1964, and completed basic training at Fort Knox, Kentucky.

The 19-year-old soldier was graduated from Martin high school in 1964.

Control of pollution is America's most pressing conservation problem, says the National Wildlife Federation. By 1980, the nation will need to re-use existing water supplies at least six times in order to meet domestic, industrial and agricultural needs.

Sports Afield By TED KESTING

The biggest bass are caught at night. Carefully kept statistics and honest answers from guides and dock owner leave no doubt about this fact.

But where do you find these big fish after dark? The simplest answer is—around cover. Said cover can be weed beds, logs, bushes, gravel bars, submerged trees and so forth. And this is logical, because cover is where the bass's food is found.

Around the aforementioned types of cover will be found worms, frogs, leeches, crawfish, insects, hellgrammites and other larvae and many smaller species of fish.

How do you locate this cover? The best way is to fish during the day and become familiar with a number of spots that have desirable underwater cover. Comparatively few big bass are taken on the surface. Nearly all are taken from a few feet down to 60 feet deep.

Of course, the very best way is to go with an experienced night fisherman who knows where and how deep and let him teach you the ways of night fishing. Hiring a good guide could be one of the smartest fishing tactics you've ever employed.

If you forget all else about night fishing, remember this one all-important point: most really big bass, those in the eight-to-ten-pound class, are caught at one most propitious moment—just as the lure drops off a root, limb, weed, rock or other underwater protuberance.

This will come as surprise to many, too many, fishermen who think underwater cover like this is a snag to be avoided because it might cost them a lure.

Remember: to catch big bass, you've got to fish where they are, around cover. So expect to lose some lures, but use lures that are designed to come through snaggy cover most of the time.

Such lures are a weedless jig, a weedless spoon or a pork chunk on a weedless hook.

RIGHTS COMMISSION ASKS INTEGRATION OF SCHOOLS

Frankfort—The Kentucky Commission on Human Rights has urged Kentucky school superintendents to assign teachers without regard to race to achieve "a genuinely integrated school."

In letters mailed to superintendents whose districts last year had all-Negro schools staffed by all-Negro faculties, the Reverend Robert W. Estill, Commission chairman, quoted new federal regulations pursuant to Title VI of the Civil Rights Act, and said they "definitely forbid a school district receiving federal aid from assigning Negro teachers to teach Negro children because of their race."

Mr. Estill explained, "It is a violation of the child's right for a school system to use race as a basis for assigning teachers. Since it is the child's right, superintendents cannot properly evade it by saying that Negro teachers prefer to teach Negro children."

The chairman added that the State Education Department is doing a commendable job in providing leadership for compliance with federal regulations, but that there is little written information from the U. S. Office of Education regarding teacher assignment under the regulations.

"The State Education Department," he said, "last year listed 130 segregated schools with all-Negro enrollments, staffed by more than 1,000 Negro teachers. . . . Kentucky can ill-afford to lose the services of trained teachers or federal aid."

KENTUCKY CLEAN-UP IS URGED FOR APRIL

Frankfort, Ky.—Governor Edward T. Breathitt has proclaimed April "Kentucky Clean-Up and Beautification Month." "Whereas the year 1965 has been designated Kentucky Homecoming Year," the Governor said, "we want our beautiful and scenic state to be clean and attractive for our many visitors."

In making the proclamation, Breathitt called upon all citizens, civic and religious organizations, schools and news media to work together in making Kentucky "a cleaner, more beautiful state—now and forever."

This can be accomplished, he suggested, by removing accumulations of litter and trash and by planting more flowers, trees and shrubs all across Kentucky. State Natural Resources Commissioner J. O. Matlick seconded the Governor's action, saying "it should focus needed public attention on the work which must be done for Kentucky's own good."

In addition, he reminded all Kentuckians of his department's standing invitation to submit, by May 1, their recommendations for clean-up awards to Mrs. Connie Quinn, beautification director, A-361 Capitol Annex Building, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

The recognition awards are to be presented at the statewide Kentucky Clean-Up and Beautification Conference, May 19-20, at the Phoenix Hotel, Lexington.
