SPEAKING OF AND FOR FLOYD COUNTY

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 1966

This Town . . . That World

We fisher folk are crazy, but we're mild cases. We don't shoot up the premises.

UPWARD BOUND

The housewife worried about the rising cost of food, employers blanched at mounting wages and taxpayers yelped at soaring taxes. And now we all can get in on the act, since they're raising the interest rates on what we owe—oh, oh!

If the way up is so painful, wonder what it will be like, coming down?

CAMPAIGN DOPE

I liked that recent yarn told by Joe Creason in his Courier-Journal column about the candidate who, like so many of us, thought he would flunk the course if he didn't keep his tongue wagging. He took his wife campaigning with him and during the course of their travels came upon a family with whom he had only a slight acquaintance and no common topic of conversation.

So he hatched a topic of his own. He took his text on the pope and gave him the merry what-for. His wife squirmed through the ordeal, sensitive to the sudden drop in temperature thereabouts, and, once outside, proceeded to tell the Great Man he had done a better job than usual at sticking his foot in his mouth.

He wanted to know why, and she asked, "Didn't you know that those folks are Catholic?" "Sure," the Glad-Hander replied, "but I didn't know the pope was."

HOPELESS

Friend of mine asks me to use my influence with these people who take mangy, half-starved, unwanted dogs, load them up in their cars and drop them off on the first innocent homeowner who isn't looking.

Dear lady, I have no influence with these people. I would beg to them, might even threaten—but people who do such things don't, or can't, read. (See Story No. 3, Page 6)

Her funeral was conducted Monday from the Arkansas Church of Christ, and burial was made in the family cemetery on Arkansas Creek, the Hall Brothers Funeral Home directing.

NO CHANGE IN PLAN FOR 4 LANES SEEN

Highway Commissioner Henry Ward's office said Wednesday that the decision of the Appalachian Regional Commission to approve two-lane roads for its mountain system of highways is not expected to affect the proposed four-lane section of U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Aulen.

A public hearing on the route was held here, and the Kentucky Department of Highways then recommended to the U.S. Bureau of Roads four-lane construction between the two points. The recommendation was based on present traffic and a projection of the traffic picture, a few years hence.

Four-laning of U.S. 23 all the way from here to Shelbyville, Pike county, has been recommended. Kentucky will get the second largest share—$181,811,000—of the money under the terms of the agreement. West Virginia gets the largest total: $253,083,000.

NO MURDERS ON DOCKET FOR TERM

Names of 72 Listed For Service on Juries; Term To Begin Sept. 6

Seventy-two Floyd countians are listed for possible jury service at the criminal term of circuit court which will convene here September 6, it was announced Wednesday by Circuit Clerk Frank DeRossett.

The trial docket, as prepared to date, is light, with only 69 cases listed, but that number could be swelled by new indictments voted during the coming grand jury session.

The docket is distinguished not only by the fact that not a murder case is listed for trial and none are to be investigated by the grand jury but also by the absence of cases in which defendants are accused of attempts at murder by shooting, cutting or striking and wounding.

Eighteen of the 69 cases docketed charge defendants with child desertion. Thirteen liquor cases are set down for trial during the term, and 10 accused defendants of larceny, breaking and entering and knowingly receiving stolen property.

The list of prospective jurors from which the grand and petit juries will be empanelled follows: (See Story No. 2, Page 6)

CLUB OPENS TILL SEPT. 8

AMVETS Post Bond Pending Hearing Date On Restraining Order

The AMVETS Club at Martin, which had been closed by circuit court order for several weeks, was permitted last Thursday to reopen until a final hearing of the petition asking a permanent restraining order is held on Sept. 8. The veterans' organization was required to post $1,000 peace bond.

Circuit Judge Hollie Conley said he permitted the club to reopen only after hearing of the injunction proceeding had been postponed three times when witnesses for the Commonwealth failed to appear. The last continuance of the case was made last week, and after that the judge decided to permit reopening of the club until a hearing can be held.

Judge Conley said he and other officials have had complaints from citizens at Martin. He explained that members of the club have been ready for hearing, each time the case has been set, that those interested in keeping the club closed did not appear, and that under the law the club is entitled to trial of the case.

"Those interested in this matter must appear in court Sept. 8," he emphasized. "For on that date a final disposition of the case will be made." The club was closed on statements alleging that quantities of intoxicants had been found in it by officers and that it constituted a nuisance.

Rescue Squad Members Undergo Scuba Training

Members of the Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad are making like Lloyd Bridges this week as they participate in a two-week scuba diving course being held at the new Archer Park pool.

Taking the course, which consists of 36 hours' training, are nine members of the squad and one non-member—Miss Barbara Safriet, of Paintsville, lifeguard at the May Lodge swimming pool.

The course was begun last week and will be completed next Wednesday.

3 BOYS ROAM HILLS 8 DAYS, JUDGE TOLD

"They handed us four sacks and a mactock and told us to dig 'em full by dinnertime or we'd wish we had, and it was pouring the rain—so we just took off."

So said Leonard Dawsie Parsons, 14, eldest of three brothers who appeared Monday morning at the office here of County Judge Henry Stumbo, explaining why he and his younger brothers began an over-the-hills odyssey during which they claim to have spent eight days and nights in the hills to avoid being found by a half-sister with whom their mother had left them.

The brothers—Leonard Dawsie, 14, John Arthur Sidney, 12, and Sant Arvet, 9—said they were 11 days, in all, on the trip from the Coon Creek section of Pike county to the home of a half-sister, Mrs. Melvina Parsons Miller, on Mud Creek, this county.

They said they were dressed exactly as they appear in the accompanying photograph—one shirt between them, all barefoot and hatless.

By highway, it is 30 miles or more between the points they travelled. Across the hills, the distance is shorter, but the miles were far rougher. Some of the eight days they stayed in the hills were burning hot. At night, the temperature dropped into the 40's. Frequent rains drove them to shelter beneath fallen trees or in small "rockhouse" caves.

Retired Nurse, Widow Of Hospital Founder, Found Dead Monday

Mrs. Mae Dingus Gearheart, 57, widow of Dr. Orris Gearheart, of this county, was found dead late Monday afternoon by her foster-son, James, in her apartment at 612 Marcom Terrace, Huntington, West Virginia.

Her body was submerged in the water of a bathtub, Huntington police said. Neighbors reported last seeing her about 3 p.m.

Mrs. Gearheart worked as a nurse with her husband, a well-known Floyd physician, who founded the Gearheart hospital and the Martin General, which now is Our Lady of the Way hospital. She attended school at Berea, the Good Samaritan Hospital Nursing School, Lexington, and the Ashland Trade School.

Mrs. Gearheart had retired after moving to Huntington and had been in ill health for some time.

She was a daughter of the late David C. and Bathsheba Webb Dingus, and was born July 21, 1909, near Martin. Her husband preceded her in death, in 1954. She was a member of the Church of Christ.

Surviving, besides her son, are one brother, Sam P. Dingus, Ervin, Texas, and three sisters, Mrs. Charles Stumbo, of Lancer, Mrs. Sarah Patton, Ashland, and Mrs. Vera Oaks, of Jenkins.

The body is at the Merion Funeral Chapel, Martin, and funeral services will be conducted there at 1 p.m. Friday by John Billiter, Church of Christ minister. Burial will be made in the Gearheart cemetery at Harold.

First School Term Day Next Monday To Give Pupils One-Day Break

Although Floyd county's school term will officially begin Monday, pupils will not attend school that day, since all teachers will be attending an in-service meeting at the Prestonsburg grade school.

Pupils will report to their respective schools, the next morning.

Congressman Carl D. Perkins and U. S. Senator John Sherman Cooper announced last Friday that the chief of engineers, U. S. Army Corps of Engineers, has allocated $59,000 for channel improvement and flood protection measures on Left Beaver Creek.

The work, which will be similar to that done earlier on Right Beaver Creek, will extend from Hunter to .9 mile above the mouth of Frazier's Creek. The appeal of county officials and others for extension of the work to Price apparently has not been granted.

Before work can be begun, the county must procure easements from landowners on both sides of the stream. The Floyd fiscal court also will be required to contract to maintain the project and to keep safe against damages the federal agencies involved.

The work to be done on Left Beaver Creek will mainly involve snagging and clearing of the stream.

Right Beaver communities have reported a big drop in property damage from flooding since that stream was cleared.

BELL MOVES TO RESTRICT OPEN AREAS

Gun Blasts Disturb Park Visitors; Hunters Find No Warning Signs

Opening of the Dewey Lake game refuge to squirrel-hunting last Saturday brought to Jenny Wiley State Park, its lodge and other installations an influx of hunters who have created a situation unusual to state parks.

Shooting in the area of the lodge and vacation cottages, hiking trails, bridle trails and other recreation areas precipitated action closing all these areas to hunting.

State Parks Commissioner Robert D. Bell said Monday that hunting at state parks or on any property owned or leased by the Department of Parks is strictly prohibited and that persons who willfully violate these restrictions will be subject to arrest and fine.

He added that hunting is permitted in some sections of an 11,500-acre tract of land around the lake which has been leased jointly by the Department of Parks and Fish & Wildlife Resources.

None of the restricted areas had been posted when the season opened, and posting still awaited, as of Wednesday, the arrival of properly printed signs. "Posted" signs printed locally on the initiative of the Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources last week were not placed in the area because they excluded only the lodge and dock areas from hunting.

MEET SLATED BY COLLEGE

Session to Explain A.S. Degree Program; Final Registration Set

Dr. Henry A. Campbell, director, announced this week that a special counselling session for all students interested in terminal degree programs will be held at Prestonsburg Community College at 1 p.m., August 23. At that time information about the Associate of Science degree programs in Secretarial Science, Mining Technology, Forestry, Wood Utilization and Laboratory Technology will be available. Information concerning the first two years of the four-year nursing program can also be obtained.

"A great many of our young people are not taking advantage of some of these programs and are thereby missing a golden opportunity," Dr. Campbell said. "We hope that this session will help answer any questions a student might have about these programs and it will not be too late for him to enroll in one of these this fall."

Any student completing either the mining technology or forestry program can immediately step into well-paying positions with private industry, and several scholarships are available for students interested in these programs, it was said.

The college has announced the schedule for final registration and payment of fees for the fall semester. Dr. Campbell said that all work-study students will complete their registration and pay fees on Tuesday, August 23, at 8 a.m.

For all other students who pre-registered for fall classes, the schedule follows: August 24, 8 a.m., all sophomores A-L; August 24, 1 p.m., all sophomores M-Z; August 25, 8 a.m., all freshmen A-L; August 25, 1 p.m., all freshmen M-Z.

Any student who did not pre-register will register for classes on Friday, August 26, at 8 a.m. Students who must make changes in their pre-registration schedules will be able to do so when scheduled for final registration.

Final registration for the evening program will be held on August 29-30, at 7 p.m.

BEACH AREA WATER IS LESS POLLUTED

Water in the beach area at Stratton Branch on Dewey Lake is less polluted this year than last, but it still leaves much to be desired.

Results of tests of the water vary widely, the State Health Department reported recently. Six of 14 water samples taken this summer showed "gross pollution." Three of the samples, however, were pure enough to meet drinking water standards.

The Floyd County Health Department maintains close check on the water at the beach, and every morning chlorine, or a similar substance, is introduced. Besides, pumps are used to agitate the water and reduce stagnation. These were installed last year after the beach had been temporarily closed.

A community-size swimming pool has been talked for more than a year now to take the place of the polluted swimming area which draws thousands annually. Bids have not been asked on the installation, pending completion of plans, but it was said recently that the pool is expected to be completed in time for use next season. Discussing the Stratton Branch beach situation, Herman Regan, assistant director of the State Health Department's sanitation program, said:

"The significant point is that not all the samples have shown a coliform count of over 1,000."

"Last year it was something if one sample was below 1,000. That's really how bad it was."

By State Health Department standards, a coliform count of less than 240 is satisfactory for lake swimming. If the count is between 240 and 1,000, the purity of the water is questionable and more samples are requested. A count of over 1,000 indicates gross pollution.

A coliform count of less than one is required for drinking water and swimming pools, Regan said. A coliform count is an actual count of the number of colonies of a particular bacteria in a sample of water. "The presence of this bacteria, which is found in every warm-blooded animal, is an indication of fecal contamination," Regan said.

THIS IS ABOUT "YOU"

DO YOU REALIZE THAT...

... you could be fined up to $300 for littering roadways and waterways in Kentucky?

Sure, we printed that same editorial feature last week on this very same page. But we wanted you to see it again. Read it carefully—it pertains to "you."

First of all, note that this is a product of the Kentucky Department of Natural Resources. Then read the statement:

"Do you realize that you could be fined up to $300 for littering roadways and waterways in Kentucky?"

This is a clever piece of publicity, done in a good cause. But our reaction to it is plain anger.

"You" could be fined up to $300! Who is "you"? Just some plain Joe without prestige, popularity or "pull"?

"You" could be fined $300 for dumping litter into Dewey Lake, for instance, and you should be. But what can be done about corporations, big operators who create a situation which can, and surely will, mean the dumping of tons of coal dust and mine waste into the stream which feeds Dewey Lake?

The Department of Natural Resources, the Pollution Control Commission, and all the multiplicity of agencies, state and federal—all maintain what might be termed a discreet silence in the face of this urgent question.

WILL POLLUTION RUIN DEWEY LAKE?

(An editorial in The Courier-Journal)
"THERE IS A GOOD CHANCE," says an editorial in the current issue of Life Magazine, "that 1966 will be remembered as the year when Americans finally got fed up with pollution. Voters are proving at the polls that they have had enough."
We hope so. But it is one thing to get sick and tired of having our country ruined, and another to know how to stop it. The administration of Governor Edward Breathitt will deservedly go into the records as having made the greatest effort in history to save Kentucky from land destroyers and water polluters. But are the laws passed by recent legislatures being enforced with the same determination that the Governor and his legislative leaders showed in getting them enacted?

For example, two Rubbertown plants in Louisville's West End have been discovered by the State Water Pollution Control Commission to be polluting the Ohio River, and one has been ordered by the Commission to submit plans for building a waste-treatment facility by December 21. Does this mean that between now and December 21 the plant will be permitted to contaminate the water Kentuckians must drink and use on their farms?

An equally serious, though less publicized case of pollution exists on a Pike county stretch of Johns Creek, which forms the headwaters of Dewey Lake. There a half-dozen new mining operations are throwing acid dirt, slate and slag, mine refuse and dust into a fork of Johns Creek or piling it along the banks where it washes or seeps into the stream. Already the waters of this fork are discolored and silted. Continued rains could start downstream pollution of Dewey Lake, where the state and private investors have invested millions in tourist facilities.

Not only would pollution of Dewey Lake destroy a scenic gem that is a favorite of sportsmen and tourists throughout the region; it would deal a disastrous blow to the region's economy. For this reason, businessmen and civic leaders as well as the Dewey Lake Fish and Game Club have been begging Frankfort for help. They haven't received much comfort.

The Department of Mines and Minerals, which should have been included in the Department of Natural Resources but wasn't, has uncertain jurisdiction over pollution by deep mines, and has shown no interest in such enforcement. Water Pollution officials, when questioned about the case at a recent Prestonsburg meeting, would say only that they are "keeping an eye on it." How long they must keep an eye on it before they stop it, they didn't say.

& Wildlife Resources said the Department of Parks was notified as long as five months ago that hunting of squirrel in the refuge area around the lake would be authorized this season.

In the absence of signs marking restricted areas, hunters blazed away, around vacation cottages and the new section of the lodge, killing a large number of squirrels which had become almost tame. They rode jeeps onto bridle paths and followed hiking trails, banging away at squirrels and causing considerable alarm and annoyance to campers, cottage occupants and lodge guests.

Baker, park manager, said squirrels were shot from cars driving along roads inside the park. He added that he counted 20 automobiles and trucks, each containing from one to four hunters, Saturday morning between the riding stables and the cottages in the vicinity of the lodge.

Homer D. Neeley, owner of the Jenny Wiley Riding Academy (horseback riding concession), said jeeps were driven up the mountain at the stables and that hunters blocked riding trails.

Commissioner Bell ascribed many of the hunting infractions to confusion over the leasing arrangement. Lack of liaison between the two departments, Parks and Fish & Wildlife Resources, was blamed by others.

The game refuge was opened to hunters of squirrel, a few years ago, but only on the east side of the lake (across the lake from the park properties).

A map designating the restricted park areas was expected here Wednesday, and posting of the area also may be done at that time.

Specifically, the areas in which Bell said hunting is forbidden are May Lodge, the cottage areas, golf course, boat dock, the amphitheatre, the chair lift, the Stratton Branch section where the beach and picnic areas are located, the riding stables area and its bridle paths and all hiking trails.

A proposal by the Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources that the Dewey Lake game refuge be opened this year to deer-hunting already has been protested by both Floyd county fish and game clubs, it was said this week. The deer herd, sadly decimated in past seasons, has not regained its former size, they claim.

Our Yesterdays

(Items taken from files of The Floyd County Times of 30 and 20 years ago.)

Thirty Years Ago

(August 14, 1936)

Despairing of finding sufficient funds to repair the Floyd county courthouse and build an addition to the present structure, the fiscal court Thursday contemplated having only necessary repair work done at the smallest possible outlay. Construction of a 35-room, two-story brick hospital—new home to be of the Gearheart hospital—is well under way at Martin, according to Dr. Orris Gearheart, head of the hospital. Melvin J. Meador, 38 years old, was shot and killed in a gunfight here early Monday morning. A seven-foot wall of water swept Stone Coal Creek, near Garrett, Monday afternoon as the result of a cloudburst, creating extensive property damage. Alex Stone, 36, of Garrett, was killed Monday afternoon when he was caught beneath a slidefall in the mine of the Elk Horn Coal Corporation on Stone Coal, near Garrett. Married: Miss Dora Goble, of Prestonsburg, and Mr. Ernest B. Osborne, of Allen, July 10; Miss Alta Hall, of Morehead, and Mr. Edward B. Leslie, of Emma, July 30 at Sandy Hook; Miss Garnet Griffith, of West Williamson, West Virginia, and Mr. Dale Roberts, of Osborne, August 1. Miss Gladys Hyden, of West Prestonsburg, and Mr. Victor Reed, West Liberty, August 9. There died: Mrs. Sallie Calhoun Branham, 70, at her home near Cliff, Saturday; Ben Franklin Hale, 25, of Blue River, Thursday evening; Mrs. Dick Patton, of West Prestonsburg, Monday at the Paintsville hospital; Delmas Warix, at the home of his parents on Bull Creek, August 4; Elisha McDowell, 28, at his mother's home on Salt Lick Creek, last week.

Twenty Years Ago

As a result of failure of Local No. 214, Transport Workers of America, to approve applications for membership of two drivers, Bernard Francis and Fonso (Hoover) Harrington, buses of the Sparks Brothers Bus Company sat idle again Wednesday, less than a month after their operation was resumed after a three-month strike. After escaping injury from a "kettlebottom" which fell from the roof of the Inland Steel Company mine at Wheelwright last Wednesday afternoon, John C. Childers, 29 years old, was instantly killed by a second fall as he prepared to blast the first fall and remove it. Henry Allen, 47, was found Wednesday night on the railroad tracks near Lackey in a serious condition after having been struck by a train during the night. Prestonsburg's state championship baseball team will leave here Friday morning for Wichita Falls, Kansas, where it will compete next week for the national title. Of the 123 cases docketed for trial at the September term of the Floyd circuit court, beginning with Labor Day, deadly weapons figure in 44 of them—knife or gun wounding some individual or being carried or recklessly used. Married: Miss Dorothy Preusser, of Ft. Wayne, Indiana, and Mr. Robert J. Salisbury, of Prestonsburg, recently at Ft. Wayne; Miss Noma Jean Osborne, of Hite, and Mr. Eugene Crisp, of Bypro, Saturday evening at Salisbury. Born: To Mr. and Mrs. Henry Davidson Fitzpatrick, Jr., of Prestonsburg, a daughter—Jane Mayo—Monday at Hazard General hospital; to Mr. and Mrs. James Brewer, a daughter—Frances Ann—August 9 at the Prestonsburg General hospital. There died: Wiley Carver, 86, at his home at Alpharetta, Friday; Mrs. Robert Chaffins, 69, Sunday night at home on Rock Fork Creek.

Rev. and Mrs. Ervin Hillard, Jr. will be guest-speakers at the First Assembly of God, West Prestonsburg, Friday at 7:30 p.m. Rev. and Mrs. Hillard are missionaries under appointment of the General Council of the Assemblies of God and minister to the Apache Indians of White River, Arizona. The public is invited to hear them and to see slides of their work with the Indians.

ANOTHER KIND OF CROW

I thought this week I had me a fit subject for a dissertation in this space when there came in the mails an important-looking envelope which bore the return address: "The Society for the Preservation of the Crow."

This, I mused, takes the proverbial cake—an organization to preserve the smartest, pekiest, noisiest and, generally speaking, the hardest fowl that's on the wing. For one cent, I thought, I'd write these people back, offering to join up if they would join my Society to Perpetuate the Observance of Dog-Days.

Then I opened the envelope, and was mortified to learn that this was a contest sort of thing to advertise Old Crow.

Preserve that sort of Crow? Better use your time on pickle juice.

DAVID MUSICK TRAGEDY STORY TOLD AT REUNION OF FAMILY

By HENRY P. SCALF

David Musick, father of Abraham Musick, Floyd county settler, was killed by Indians, August 12, 1792, near Honaker, Virginia, and his wife and five children were carried into captivity. They were rescued, the next day, by settlers at the present Haysi, Virginia.

The tenth reunion of the family was held Sunday, August 7, at the Haysi high school building near the site of the family's rescue. The following account of the Indian atrocity was part of a speech delivered by the writer:

Abraham Musick was born to tragedy, for as a child he saw his father, David Musick, killed by an Indian tomahawk. His mother and others of the family were carried into captivity. We are meeting today near the site of the family's rescue from savage claws.

For the story of Abraham Musick let us go back to the beginning, to that date of 1629 when the first Musick impressed himself upon the records of Colonial Virginia. In that year, 37 years ago, a Musick, his first name unknown, engaged in land litigation with others in the Isle of Wight county. The record of George Musick, Sr. begins nearly 100 years later and entries on court books are copious in Spotsylvania county, Virginia. He became possessed of a vast amount of land and built a fine manor house with a spacious lawn. Tradition of the mansion and its spacious grounds lingers on today with Musick descendants in the mid-West. Genealogists of the family trace their ancestry back to George Musick, Sr. who is named "The Pioneer." He was born about 1664, died in 1754 in Spotsylvania county.

George Musick, Sr., The Pioneer, had six sons, one of them Elezious Musick, born in Spotsylvania county about 1718. Elezious inherited the home plantation from his father but the border restlessness with which the Musicks became imbued led Elezious and several others of the family to migrate to the Carolinas. One of his sons, David Musick, married Anne McKinney, while they were living in Rutherford county, North Carolina. In 1782 he and his sons migrated from Henry county to Washington county, Virginia. They located in the vicinity of Cedar Bluff, Virginia, now Tazewell county.

David Musick, his wife, Anne McKinney Musick, and five children were living in the summer of 1782 in the New Garden section, near the present Honaker. It was a time of trouble on the border, for Indians from the Ohio country were ranging over the Southwest Virginia region, carrying murder and pillage wherever they went. Captives were carried west, many to disappear in the western woods. That David Musick and Anne McKinney Musick elected to build their home on the edge of the forest from which often issued Indians bent on massacre and plunder is an indication of their frontier fearlessness. They were of that indomitable army of Americans, born to hardship and courage, who were leading in the conquest of the West.

David Musick was aware of the dangers of the border because he was familiar with the Indian depredation stories carried to his cabin door. On June 29, 1785, three years after David Musick moved to New Garden, occurred the Scott family massacre. Archibald Scott and five of his children were tomahawked in bed, in Powell's Valley, and his wife, Fannie Dickenson Scott, was carried into captivity. She escaped, wended her way through the high Cumberlands, merged onto the eastern slope of the mountains, met a Mr. Musick, whom we are sure was David Musick, and was cared for at his cabin. It was an augury of his future.

Less than three years before the bloody August of 1792, on October 1, 1789, Mrs. Jenny Wiley was captured on Walker's Creek while her husband was away. A brother and three of her children were killed and scalped and another child, an infant, was murdered on the trail into the western wilderness. Mrs. Wiley escaped within seven months from the Indians in the Big Sandy valley and sought refuge in a pioneer fort, Harman's Station, at the present East Point, Kentucky. Matthias Harman, founder of the settlement, abandoned his fort and escorted Mrs. Wiley back to Virginia. I mention the Wiley massacre because it has an aftermath connection with the David Musick tragedy.

Andrew Lewis, Jr., in charge of the frontier militia guarding the little settlements in Southwest Virginia, was stationed at Fort Lee, Rye Cove, now Scott county. Sometime in the first few days of August, 1792, news was brought to him of a large band of Indians encamped in Eastern Kentucky, who were evidently on a mission of massacre and pillage into Virginia. Lewis gathered a force of 34 men, and on August 12 marched westward toward Kentucky to find and do battle with the encroaching savages. The Indians he was attempting to intercept had eluded him before he started and had carried desolation and tragedy all over the New Garden settlements. A runner sent to recall Lewis overtook him after he had penetrated the forest for only seven or eight miles. He wheeled his command around, began a terribly arduous journey over mountains to get in front of the savages as they descended the Big Sandy River. We leave him racing for the Big Sandy and return to the New Garden.

The Indians, numbering about 40, according to Lewis in a report to the Governor of Virginia, dated August 24, 1792, had entered the settled area one or two days earlier. August 11, they came upon a young Brumley girl churning at a spring, scalped her and left her for dead. Strangely, she survived the ordeal. The savages, however, saved several heinous atrocities for the next day. Approaching the David Musick cabin, in the Big A Mountain section, they found a vantage point for observation in a nearby thicket.

The Musicks were unaware of the skulking savages. In the home were David, his wife, Anne, and five children, Abraham, Elijah, Samuel, Elezious and Phoebe, who was six years old. Abraham was a youth of about 15 years, Elijah was a few years younger.

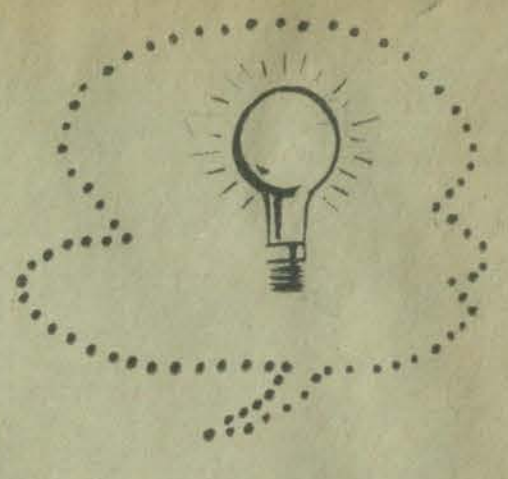

Early in the morning, Abraham and Elijah went out to perform chores, one to drive in the cows and the other to chop wood. They discovered the savages and raced for the cabin. The door was closed and David Musick took down his rifle, pushed it through a porthole to fire at the Indians who were now beating on the door. The weapon, however, had been damaged in a fire and now in this dire emergency, would not fire. A savage seized the protruding gun, wrung it from David's hands. Bullets were being fired at the door and a chance shot struck David Musick in the thigh, severing an artery. He fell to the floor, was rapidly sinking into unconsciousness when the Indians broke down the door, tomahawked and scalped him.

Following the death of David, and while the wife and children were defenseless, the Indians plundered the house for food and ate with gory hands. Killing a steer from the family herd, they wrapped the meat in the skin and, seizing Mrs. Musick and the children, they prepared to depart. The meat of the steer was flung across David Musick's mare and Abraham, who had red hair, of which the Indians were fond, was allowed to ride. All the others walked.

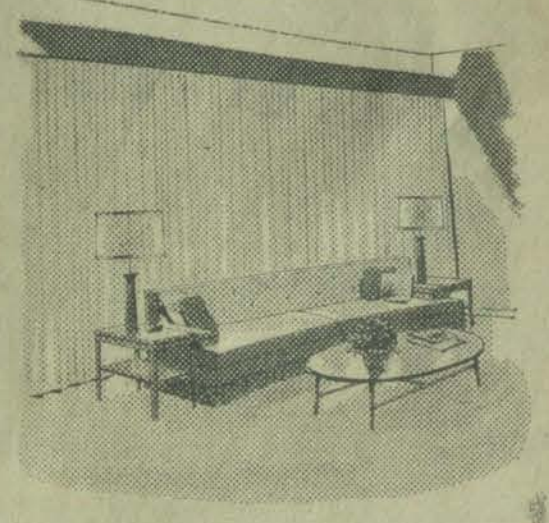

That journey into the forests was one of horror for the Musick family. Anne Musick, stricken with the tragedy that had engulfed her, was beyond tears but young Elezious cried continuously. He refused to eat the raw beef offered him. The savages thrust his face against a tree and rubbed it on the bark until he was scarred for life. Mrs. Musick aided her young children as they crossed streams or ascended mountains. For 30 miles they endured the agony, crossing Big A Mountain, traversing Indian Ridge, and late in the day debouching onto Russell Fork River. They descended the stream to near where we are gathered today, at the junction of Russell Fork River with Russell Prater Creek. The two streams, primitive and unspoiled by man, had formed an island upon which the savages encamped. They lay down on the SAVE EYE-STRAIN with adequate bulbs (150 or R-40") in reading lamps. Light should be slightly to one side of reading material.

DECORATE WITH LIGHTS. Vellances, cornices and wall-brackets create relaxing atmosphere. Use lights to establish "moods" in your home.

EXTRA KITCHEN lights reduce fatigue. Lights under wall cabinets illuminate counter space and create a cheerful character.

Ministerial Students Church, Classroom

Frankfort—The State Reception Center for juvenile delinquents near Louisville will be a church and classroom for six ministerial students this fall. Child Welfare Commissioner Maurice A. Harmon said four students from two Louisville seminaries will be assistant chaplains for a year at the center and at Kentucky Children's Home. For two other ministers who have completed theological studies, the center will be a training ground for social work in downtown churches.

ground. Mrs. Musick gathered her children to her for a sleepless night.

Back in the New Garden, John Fletcher had hastily gathered a posse to follow the trail of the captives and near dusk they saw the light of the Indian campfire. Fearing that the captives would possibly be killed in the confusion of a night attack, they decided to wait until morning to assault the savages. They hid behind a knoll on the river side where they could keep the camp under observation.

In the meantime Andrew Lewis, Jr. had pressed westward through Pound Gap and hurried over rugged trails. He planned to continue his westward journey to a point where he could swing north to the Big Sandy and lie in ambush for the retreating Indians. He wrote in his report to the Governor:

"I suppose such a chain of mountains was never crossed by any set of men before with 15 days provisions on our backs. The distance I had to travel before I would strike their trail was 150 miles unless I had fallen too far behind them. My intention was, if possible, to strike Sandy River low down, so as to be before them or shortly after."

Back at the Indian encampment here (the present Hays), Captain Fletcher imposed a noiseless night upon his possemen, one of whom was Ephraim Hatfield, then 28 years of age. The order to fire, Fletcher said, would be given at the first sign of dawn. From where they were hidden they could see the fitful shadows of Indians and the captives. The blaze of the camp fire died and only red embers pierced the night.

Daybreak came and the Indians stirred. Mrs. Musick began to broil some beef for the children over the renewed fire. The Indians ate the meat raw. Back of the knoll that hid John Fletcher's men, the tension increased. Suddenly, a posseman, unable to restrain himself any longer, fired prematurely at the encampment. Now that the battle was joined, Fletcher led his men across the stream to the island. Mrs. Musick, at the sound of the first shot, grabbed Phoebie in her arms and, herding the other children with her, raced toward the rescuers. An Indian threw a tomahawk at her but missed. Other Indians, in blind rage, threw burning brands at the children.

The fighting was over within minutes. One Indian was killed and another, screaming from a wound, fled with his fellows. Years later, the skeleton of an adult man, presumably that of the wounded savage who had died near the scene of fighting, was found under a cliff. None of the whites were wounded. The posse and the rescued captives, unharmed in the fighting, began their return journey to New Garden.

Here I would like to quote your historian, Rev. Grover C. Musick, who wrote in GENEALOGY OF THE MUSICK FAMILIES:

"On their return journey from Hays to Russell county and when the party reached Sandy Ridge, which divides Dickenson and Buchanan counties from Russell, they decided to camp at a large spring at the foot of Sandy Ridge. They were worn out from the long trip, the strain and excitement. Mrs. Musick insisted they cross Sandy Ridge into Russell county and it was afterward proven she was wise in her insistence. The Indians pursued them and camped on the same spot at the big spring, giving up the chase and returning to Ohio. The rescuing party and Mrs. Musick crossed Sandy Ridge to the Russell side through a low gap in this mountain where the old postoffice, Rasmack, Virginia, was located for many years, now discontinued. This low gap was a passageway from Buchanan to Russell county in pioneer days and is in line with the large spring which is at the foot of the mountain on the Buchanan county side."

We now return to Andrew Lewis and his frontiersmen who were probing deeper and deeper into the Big Sandy River. On August 17, four days after the rescue of the Musicks of which he had no knowledge, Lewis and his men struck the Big Sandy River near the present Prestonsburg, four miles from the fort built by Mathias Harman in 1789 and later evacuated in order to escort Jenny Wiley back to Virginia. The Indians, who had killed David Musick and had given up the chase of the Fletcher party at the big spring at the foot of Sandy Ridge, had hastily retreated back down Big Sandy and were just entering the station area when Lewis emerged upon the scene on the opposite side of the river.

The Lewis report to the Governor of Virginia is found in the Calendar of Virginia State Papers, at Richmond, Volume 6, page 40. I want to quote from this document, only recently found and never published:

"On the 17th, in the evening, I struck the river, about four miles from the Station evacuated by our people last spring. We found there only the sign of some coming into the settlement which we supposed to be the same. There was no person with me who had ever been to the Station and I expected if I could find it to see more sign but unluckily took the wrong side of the river and (in) the thick cane brakes and was at a loss to find it. I halted and sent two of the Scouts in search of it. They had not been gone but a few minutes before they returned and said from the noise of fire and smoke that the houses had been fired but could not cross the river to be certain.

"I then found myself in a disagreeable situation as I fully expected they were there and I knew nothing of the recovery of the prisoners. As we had made considerable sign on both sides of the river and were then on the contrary side from them I knew delay would not do. I expected if the Station was afire, that they were about to move off and would of course fall on our sign on which they would immediately murder the prisoners. I divided my men, determined to risk a battle with half their number as I had then no reason to believe their number to be under 40. I sent one half down the river to cross and marched the other party up and crossed a small distance above them, so had they left the place we would meet. As soon as I got over we found the houses were not fired but (the Indians) had encamped in the yard, by the direction of the smoke for the weeds, cane and hemp was so tall that we could not tell their number nor even see them until we were within 15 steps of them and just as we got sight of them, and our guns presented, they discovered us and ran. Several guns were fired at them but as they were in a few steps out of sight, cannot be certain that any were killed but one. We got every kind of arms and accoutrements they had and nine horses they had stolen from the Garden which I returned to the owners. As they are gone naked and without either arms or ammunition I doubt their ever seeing their own country."

Lewis and his frontier posse returned immediately to Virginia after the fighting at the evacuated station. He had not rescued the captive Musick family but he had made a heroic attempt. He was satisfied that he had driven them into the forest without weapons or clothes and that they would perish before they could return to Ohio.

The body of David Musick was interred after the return of the Fletcher party and the rescued captives. The grave is about a quarter mile from the site of the cabin in which he met his death defending his loved ones.

In 1795 Annie McKinney Musick married Ephraim Hatfield, a member of the posse that had rescued her and her children. Within a few years they acquired land on Blackberry Creek, a tributary of Tug River, now in county, Kentucky. They became the parents of five children. The years rested lightly upon Ephraim and Annie, both living to be very old. She died in either 1853 or 1854, at the age of 95 years. Her husband survived only a few months.

I need not account to you of the sons and descendants of David Musick and Annie McKinney Musick. Your historian, Rev. G. C. Musick, has done that more ably than I could hope to do. They married into the historic families of Southwest Virginia and many of their progeny went with the empire. Elexious, upon whose face was imprinted the scars of Indian savagery, married Lydia Thompson and was blessed with a large family. He died in 1874. Many of you here today are his descendants.

Abraham Musick, he of the red hair and who was treated with such respect when captured, came to Pound River in 1832 but within a few years he removed to the Big Sandy Valley after marrying Sarah Todd, of Russell county. The date was probably 1848. His first wife died and he married secondly to Betty Higgins.

Abraham Musick, like many of the second generation of pioneers who conquered the Appalachians for settlement, was restless and yearned for the golden west. Twice he journeyed to Missouri but returned, feeling, I am sure, that his years were too advanced for the stamina needed to resettle in a distant state.

He died in 1880 at more than 100 years of age, probably 101, possibly 102 years old. He lies buried on Little Paint Creek, near the postoffice of East Point, very near the border of Johnson and Floyd county.

FLOYD COUNTY STUDENTS RECEIVE $52,440 IN GRANTS FROM ALICE LLOYD COLLEGE

Alice Lloyd College has announced educational grants totaling $52,440 to 106 Floyd county students enrolled in the private junior college for the fall semester.

The grants are part of a total $161,188 awarded 326 students from 13 Eastern Kentucky counties.

According to R. Donn Martin, Alice Lloyd dean of students, the grants, ranging from $350 to $920, were given on the basis of leadership potential and demonstrated need.

Martin said the aid is a portion of a budgeted $317,000 to be provided by the gift investment of individuals, corporations and foundations throughout the nation and applied against the students' educational costs.

In addition to the grants to Kentucky youth, 11 out-of-state students will receive a total of $5,020 in educational aid. States represented by these students are Ohio, Virginia, Indiana, New Jersey and Montana.

The grants to out-of-state students are part of a newly initiated program to promote a cultural interplay between Appalachia and the rest of America. Dean Martin said the college plans to take up to five percent of its enrollment from states other than Kentucky.

Other Kentucky counties represented by students receiving the Alice Lloyd grants were Knott, with 118 awards totaling $68,028; Letcher, 49 totaling $23,250; and Perry, 33 totaling $15,970.

Counties receiving lesser amounts were Harlan, Lawrence, Lee, Magoffin, Leslie, Wolfe and Clay.

PLAN MEETS ON PROGRAM

School Leaders, Others To Hear Plan for Help To Students Loans

Frankfort, Ky.—The Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority plans to hold regional meetings to acquaint school officials and lending institutions with the State scholarship loan program.

The program, created by the 1966 Legislature, was advanced by Governor Edward T. Breathitt. It provides $100,000 a year for the next two years to aid Kentucky students attending college and business, nursing or vocational schools.

The Authority has selected United Student Aid Funds, Inc. as administrative agent to handle state and federal funds allocated for low-cost loans for higher education. The organization is a non-profit firm which has arranged for more than 125,000 loans worth more than $65.5 million in the 24 states. For each $1 deposited with USAF, it will guarantee and underwrite student loans of $10.

Under the program, Kentucky students would be able to borrow up to $1,000 a year, or $1,500 if a graduate student. The Authority voted to combine the state's $100,000 with $32,750 in federal funds allocated to Kentucky. From the total, $400,000 will be placed on deposit with USAF which could generate up to $4 million in guaranteed loans to Kentucky students.

KEA ACTS TO HALT UNIONIZATION DRIVE

Obviously disturbed by the drive of the American Federation of Teachers (AFL-CIO) to unionize teachers, the Kentucky Education Association Monday began a drive of its own which is intended to effect "professional negotiation" agreements between school boards and teacher groups in all the state's local districts.

The idea is to give teachers a bigger role in formulating educational policies in each school district.

The KEA effort includes a proposal for a state law setting out the legal machinery for professional negotiation agreements. Kentucky law now is silent on the subject.

Official endorsement of professional negotiation—or PN, as it is called—was made by the KEA last December. The parent National Education Association has endorsed such agreements since 1961.

Behind the drive is the belief that teachers, as professional persons, should be consulted fully and formally on matters of salaries, working conditions, curriculum, class size and other important aspects of public education.

Jack Kleinman, director of NEA special services, said Monday:

"Unless we can cover the nation with professional negotiation agreements in the next few years, we are in danger of losing what we've had all these years."

Kleinman was careful to say that the push for professional negotiation agreements was not just a reaction to the unionization drive. He added, however, that the union's efforts were making the NEA drive more pressing.

Both Kleinman and J. M. Dodson, executive secretary of the KEA, stressed that if the KEA is not successful in obtaining a state law on professional negotiations, then the unions will move in with proposals to tailor a law to their needs.

Kleinman said the participation of teachers in formulating school policies is a right, not a favor to be granted to them.

He made clear that although teachers should help develop policies, the actual enactment of such policies must always be done by the school boards, which have the legal responsibility.

Kleinman said the process of negotiating with school boards requires that teachers abandon the "hat-in-hand approach."

KY. VERSION MEDICARE NOW BEING UNFOLDED

Frankfort, Ky. — An estimated 100,000 Kentuckians in need of medical care and unable to pay for it will become eligible for medical assistance this fiscal year. Dawson said these persons will be considered medically indigent, provided they are unable to meet care; Dentists — The emergency treatment of pain, severe bleeding of the gums, infection, pulling or filling teeth, and necessary x-rays can be paid for; Dentists can also be reimbursed for some repair of dentures.
