COUNCIL TO FOUND CLARK BR. CENTER

COUPLE HERE OFFERS FARM TO PROJECT

First Pupils To Start School Next Summer; Construction Planned

Plans for development by the Council of Southern Mountains and citizens of the community of an outpost community center on the Clark Branch of Buffalo Creek were outlined here this week.

An 80-acre tract of land—their entire Clark Branch farm—has been made available by Mr. and Mrs. Tom James, of Prestonsburg, for the community project. To begin with, from 10 to 30 children, ages 6 to 16, will be taught, trained and afforded boarding facilities at the center. Construction of a building for classes is scheduled to begin by April 1. Later in the year, dormitory and dining facilities and teachers' quarters will be erected.

Schoolwise, the program will be tailored to get into classes—not only for the 3 R's but also for vocational training—those youngsters who for some reason have not been fully successful in school or who are not in school.

But the outpost will be more than merely a school. Flem Messer, of the Council of Southern Mountains, said. It will seek to involve the people of the community in various types of cooperative and constructive planning and endeavor. Messer said plans are not yet fully developed, but he was positive in his statement that "We want to help the people to help themselves. We don't want to project great, big programs of our own doing, we want the people themselves involved."

ENCHANTMENT REDISCOVERED?

Houses yield the most unexpected things, sometimes. My wife, prowling about in some odd cranny the other day, came up with a book that has been in and out of my thoughts for years now. It's THE ROSARY, by Florence L. Barclay. Remember?

This book, circa 1910 and bought by yours truly for a dollar in pre-war (pre-War I) money, barely escaped the discard when I first began reading it and discovered that the heroine, Jane, was a bit on the plain side. In those days every heroine worth her salt was a dream-girl. Her eyes were never merely blue, they were of cerulean hue, and her complexion was either alabaster-white or petal-soft. None of these gals

Mr. Akers' office will not reopen till Monday morning.

A son of Mrs. Anna Martin Akers, of Drift, and the late Hiram Akers, Mr. Akers was, prior to election to his first term of office in 1941, a high school principal and athletic coach at McDowell, Drift and Prestonsburg. PRISONER HERE ADDS 3 CRIMES TO RECORD

A federal prisoner held in the Floyd county jail under the Dyer Act (transporting a stolen vehicle across state lines) Tuesday afternoon and night added three more crimes to his record.

He fled jail, around 4:30 p.m. Less than an hour later, he stole the automobile of George Cecil Brown and fled town in it. At Salyersville he abandoned the Brown auto and transferred to another.

The fugitive, Charles S. Wilson, age about 18, was captured late that night at West Liberty by state troopers.

Wilson requested of Jailer Lawrence Hale permission to use his office telephone. Once in the office, he told Hale he had forgotten the number he wanted to call at Jackson, Kentucky, and asked to be permitted to return to his cell and get it. As the jailer was unlocking the door to pass Wilson inside to get the number the prisoner suddenly dashed down the stairway. Jailer Hale pursued him but fell twice on the stairway. His right foot was either sprained or broken.

While state and county officers were being alerted Wilson saw Brown's car, a Chevy II, parked alongside the Brown Produce Company on Third street here, the keys in the car. Unobserved, he drove away, and it was not till several minutes later that the theft was discovered.

A truckdriver with whom Wilson had a slight collision at Salyersville told officers he and Wilson inspected the damage and that when he saw his truck was unhurt but that the car driven by Wilson was dented he asked the other if he wanted to call "the law." Wilson replied that he was willing to forget the matter.

Brown's auto was left in a Salyersville parking lot, its gasoline tank nearly empty. Driving on to West Liberty in another auto taken at Salyersville, Wilson was arrested around 10:30 Wednesday night. He is in the Magoffin county jail at Salyersville.

Wilson and a man listed as Cecil Hurley were jailed here Saturday by Deputy Marshal Joe R. Mullins. Hurley also was booked under the Dyer Act.

A juvenile jailed here by State Trooper Combs has confessed that he and James Hall, who also was jailed with him, broke into the home of Mrs. J. M. Turner at Wayland last

RED CROSS FUND DRIVE

To Begin March 8th With $6,000 As Goal To Get Blood Program

The 1966 America Red Cross drive for funds will be launched March 8, and every effort will be made to reach a goal of $6,000, it was announced this week by Clyde B. Burchett, of Prestonsburg, campaign chairman.

Attainment of the goal at which the drive is aimed is doubly important this year, it was pointed out, because if the full quota is subscribed Floyd Red Cross Chapter will be able to re-enter the Red Cross blood program.

The program, popularly known as "the blood bank," was discontinued seven years ago because of a lack of funds and failure of the county to afford adequate financial support. Without the blood bank, dangerous, even fatal, delays are experienced in cases where blood is needed for the injured or critically ill. Volunteer donors must be found, blood typed, examinations made—all, time-consuming.

Return of the blood program to this county has been endorsed by the Floyd County Medical Society, the Floyd County Health Department, various hospitals and physicians.

The Rev. W. D. Jagers, pastor of Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church, has been named

The Council of Southern Mountains has a small grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity to start the development. Private funds also will be solicited. Timber on the James farm will probably be cut and traded to seasoned lumber which will go into the proposed buildings. Unemployed fathers living in the area of the outpost center will help with construction work, it is hoped.

Mr. Messer said the Council will be working closely with Superintendent Charles Clark and the Floyd County Board of Education in development of the center. "Mr. and Mrs. James, of course, will be closely involved in our planning," he added.

The outpost center idea really began with Mrs. James who, as early as 1963, wrote Spindletop Research and, later, Congressman Carl D. Perkins, to suggest such a development. They were interested, and enlisted the interest of others.

"These boys and girls," Mrs. James wrote, "are being encouraged to return to their native environment to live and work. What I believe could and should be done is not to change their mode of living but to build on to what they already have."

Mr. and Mrs. James backed up the proposal with the offer of land as a site for the project. Natural gas is available to the farm, and a year-around road passes the mouth of Clark Branch.

The Council of Southern Mountains envisions the outpost as not only a school but as a center where residents of the community may meet, decide for themselves what should and can be done, and from that work together with others to realize their hopes.

The Clark Branch enterprise is among the first, if not the first, of the educational centers to be developed in the Appalachian area with the help of OEO funds. Aided by Fellowship grants, the Council of Southern Mountains has employed 20 community interns to work with their people, the Council and other agencies. Some of these will enter college after a year of work. Others are already college students. Five hundred college students will work this summer with the Appalachian Volunteers, and some of the students of Prestonsburg Community College are now at work in this county.

The Council hopes to have a summer program going on Clark Branch this year and to be ready by next fall for a full-fledged work calendar.

said. Presently, he noted, Martin countians must travel KY 40 to Paintsville and then take US 23 — US 460 to Prestonsburg, a distance of 38.7 miles. He said the new route, via Debord, Davella and Odds, will decrease mileage from Inez to Prestonsburg by 12 miles.

"The improvements will serve as a tremendous boost to the economy and well-being of Martin county and also will benefit Floyd and Johnson counties. It will give Martin countians direct and convenient access to the recreational facilities at Dewey Lake and Jenny Wiley State Park, to the educational opportunities offered at Prestonsburg Community College and to the Mountain Parkway Extension at Prestonsburg. The Highway Department considers this project a vital link in the development of a modern and functional highway system to serve this important area of our Commonwealth," Ward concluded.

Cucumbers are planted as early in May as conditions will permit. Harvesting normally will begin, late in June, and is completed within six weeks. Growers are advised to harvest, every other day, and to market on the same day the cucumbers are gathered, if possible.

On good soils, with proper management, yields of 400 bushels an acre are not unusual, and gross returns on pickles have ranged as high as $1,000 an acre.

No Misnomer, Troublesome—

SEWER, WATER SYSTEM SUFFER HEAVY DAMAGE

Troublesome Creek was so named, long ago, for a definite reason—it was troublesome and trouble often visited it.

One of its most recent manifestations of that nature came recently when rains sent the stream roaring out of its banks and damaged Hindman's new $713,000 sewer and water system before it was completed.

Sections of pipeline, which had been mounted on concrete piers to take it across the stream at a height of two to five feet above the low-water level, collapsed under the pressure of Troublesome's boiling waters in the February 13 "rise."

And few residents of Hindman entertain hope that future washouts will not create the same troublesome problem. This fear of future trouble lies in the fact that some of the pipes are laid on the stream bed while other sections cross the stream at a height ranging from only two to five feet above the low-water level.

Some of the people are now guessing that impoundments caused by the washing of debris against concrete piers used to support the pipe will cause collapses each time there is a heavy wash.

Engineers responsible for the system's design discount the speculation, even while acknowledging that occasional washouts will occur.

Hindman, the hometown of Congressman Carl D. Perkins, usually recognized as father of the poverty program, is located in rugged country. Engineers had to consider exacting grade requirements in the placement of sewer lines to meet sanitation standards.

H. A. Spalding, Hazard, the consulting and design engineer, said the cost of a more elaborate system involving the placement of all pipes underground would be prohibitive in view of available money.

The alternative, he said, would be to construct five more pumping stations at a cost of about $60,000, plus operational and maintenance expenses.

"It would be more feasible from a financial standpoint to replace the pipe occasionally than to go to this extra expense," Spalding said.

Hindman's fear is that it cannot afford repeated replacement of pipes that cross Troublesome Creek.

W. R. Smith, state representative and president of Hindman Bank, said the city "does well to pay our policemen and our electric bills."

Smith said he was informed by the contractor, Audrey W. Collins, that the February 13 damages amount to about $30,000.

Spalding said that the repairs, using the same prices involved in the contract for construction, would cost $2,283 if all pipe can be salvaged. Hindman's City Council authorized a $290,000 revenue bond issue to meet the city's portion of the construction costs. The federal government granted $423,013 under the accelerated public works program.

Fiscal experts say that revenue from water and sewer customers will meet recurring reconstruction costs when the creek knocks down the lines.

The sewer system's breakdown created no serious problems after the recent flooding. Only two customers had been connected to the sewer lines.

Some of the water customers had to obtain water from neighbors still using their wells—or go without it for four days.

City Judge Homer Pigman fears that the washout will cause many residents to be reluctant to connect to the water and sewer lines, fearing that they will face repeated disruptions.

"If it comes about," he said, "we will have a time trying to pay off the bonds."

The engineers are more optimistic. They believe the citizens will find the luxury of a modern sewer and water system worth an occasional disruption.

Smith, the state representative and banker, said the people will not be satisfied until federal engineers come in for a close inspection and approval of the prospects of disruptions.

"We think we ought to have something to meet the requirements of people who will pay off the bonds," he said. "Collins (the contractor) told me a federal man has been in, said he approves of everything and said he won't be back."

Collins said he has been ill and unable to inspect the full damage. He said he has tried to do the job according to plans and specifications.

Sheldon Maggard, operator of a clothing store, was angry.

"This is the biggest fraud I have ever seen," he said. "I would like to know when they (contractors) are able to obstruct the flow of the stream when I can't, under the law, do the same thing. Somebody needs to be brought to law on this thing."

"This damming (by using piers under the pipelines) makes my property part of the creek bed. I'd rather have 10 feet of property above the creek than an acre on the creek bed. Floods are our greatest problem. This thing aggravates the flood problem."

No one in an official capacity is sure yet who will have to pay for repairs needed after the February 13 damages. City councilmen say Hindman hasn't yet accepted the system and therefore will rely on payment by the contractor or design engineer.

Joe Craft, Hazard, city attorney for Hindman, said Hindman will "have to wait and see what they (Spalding's engineers) come up with in the matter of recommendations. We will be guided by what they have to offer."

In memory of Lula Josephine Hayes. Written by her foster sister Corena Lewis.

"LORI"

Lou, they have taken you away from us. We'll never see each other again down here. But I pray that we'll meet in heaven. Where we'll have so many million years.

You left your family heart-broken, And your children all alone; And your poor, dear mother and father, And memories of our own.

And don't forget your brothers and sisters Who have been so close to you; We're all unhappy to see you go. But Lou, there's nothing we can do.

You died upon your husband's birthday. To him you gave your love; But now you've found a different home Of heaven eternal above. I can't believe it's real, Lou, I can't believe you're gone; It won't seem right to us any more, Walking into your home.

Seeing the things you used to do, Knowing the places you used to go. Lou, other children's roses are red still. But your children's have turned to white. God bless you and may you rest in peace.

Development Group's Booklet Tells Findings Of Committee Study

The Floyd County Development Association, Inc. recently released a 50-page book which represents its findings in a study of the county's resources and needs and also its recommendations for future action.

The work is a compilation of findings and views of 10 or more committees. Discussed are several main topics—Better Family Living, Health and Safety, Education, Community Facilities, Business and Industry, Land Use, Tourism and Recreation, Agriculture, Welfare and Minerals.

In a foreword, which credits members of the Association as volunteer workers and the Floyd County Extension Service with the major part of the work on the report, Paul D. Gearheart, chairman of the Floyd County Development Association, wrote:

"While federal assistance should be utilized where practical, it should not be considered a permanent solution but only a means to bridge the gap to a self-sufficient economy."

Pastor Is Speaker As College Group In Friday Meeting

The importance of being prepared to meet the many challenges of today and tomorrow was emphasized by the Rev. W. D. Jagers, pastor of Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church, as guest-speaker at Friday's luncheon meeting of the Prestonsburg Community College's Circle K Club.

Said the minister: "Our objective in life should have a greater purpose than mere financial success. Acquiring such success and material possessions will never bring satisfaction, because the more we acquire the more we desire."

In a brief business session the club decided that all proceeds from the dance scheduled at the college March 5 will be donated to the Heart Fund.

had legs, as such, but they got around and managed, somehow, to make an unforgettable impression on callow youth.

Then to come upon one such as Jane who wasn't, as they pictured their heroines back then, either insouciant or Hebe personified, was a shock which was almost too strong for one of my sensitive nature and aesthetic taste. But I read on and fell in love with the gal. She could play the piano (or was it the organ?) and sing—so-o-o softly—"The Rosary," and I could do neither, which scored heavily in her favor.

I shall read this book again, skim past the archaisms and the declamations which passed in those days for dialogue. At this point I highly recommend the book to you, if you are old enough. After I read it again, I may see another idol collapse in dust and wonder, all over again, what my I. Q. was in those early days, if any.

ON THE HIGH C's Description of a fishermen's quartet: First tuna, second tuna, barracuda and bass. Most of the time they sing on porpoise, rest of the time just on the halibut. —Tulsa Tribune.

Every such quartet should first be given a trout.

"APPROXIMATELY" MY EYE! I suppose we all use words and phrases which grate on somebody's nerves. One of my pet peeves (in addition to copy written in all-capitals) is the statement such as this: "There were approximately 63 persons present."

It always strikes me that 63 is too exact to be used for "approximately" or "about."

This fellow slides up to me in the drugstore and quietly asks, "Do you know why the elephant sat on the marshmallow?" I replied with the expected, No, and he said, "So he wouldn't fall into the hot chocolate." And then sidled away.

SUGGESTION FROM AN EXPERT

I always hesitate to offer any advice to farmers, since I have no callouses—at least, none where they should be—and never distinguished myself as a son of toil, even when I lived on the farm, but it does seem that Floyd county might profitably imitate neighboring Johnson by going after this apple-growing business in earnest. The thriving Johnson county orchards are so near that there can't be any great climatic change to forbid the same results here.

Restaurant Ass'n Urges 'Coffee Day,' Heart Fund Benefit

The coffee you drink at your favorite eating place on Tuesday, March 1, will benefit the local Heart Fund drive, thanks to the Kentucky Restaurant Association.

The Association is urging its 3,500 members and the other 1,500 restaurants throughout Kentucky to observe that date as "Coffee Day" and to cooperate in this statewide effort to aid the battle against America's number one health problem, heart and blood vessel diseases.

All money spent for coffee in cooperating restaurants that day, plus extra donations that customers may place in special containers for that purpose, will go to finance needed research into the causes of these diseases and to find cures for them as quickly as possible.

We urge all local restaurants to cooperate fully in this worthy campaign, and we ask all persons of good will to remember the Heart Fund when they take a coffee break or eat out on Tuesday, March 1.

Coffee Day chairman here is Mrs. C. E. Roberts. Mrs. Harris Howard is Heart Fund chairman.

NEW TRAVEL RECORD SET IN KENTUCKY LAST YEAR

Frankfort — New travel industry records were set in Kentucky during 1965, including a 9% growth in spending by people from other states and for the first time exceeding the quarter-billion dollar mark in tourist income.

The record-setting information was contained in the Seventh Annual Kentucky Tourist Report, prepared by Dr. Lewis C. Copeland, University of Tennessee economist, for Kentucky's Department of Public Information.

The report revealed that all travelers spent $378 million last year on trips away from home in Kentucky. Twenty-million tourists from other states contributed $260 million of this total. This increase of two million people and $22 million over 1964 exceeds any previous increase in Kentucky's tourist business.

The Copeland report listed this additional information:

- The rate of growth of tourist spending in Kentucky has exceeded the national rate of growth for the fifth consecutive year.

- Tourists paid a larger share of the state's tax burden in 1965, with travelers from other states contributing $22 million in Kentucky State taxes — 6% of state revenue collections.

J. D. PAYNE

- The travel and transportation business for Kentucky rose to $876 million. Copeland predicts the travel and transportation business (lodging, eating, recreation facilities, auto servicing, and rail, bus, and air passenger carriers) will become a billion dollar industry in Kentucky by 1967.

- Thirty-three cents out of each tourist dollar brought into the state can be traced as income to someone in Kentucky.

- Money spent by out-of-state tourists created enough business to give jobs to 23,000 persons last year with a personal income of $86 million.

- Travelers are served by 14,670 Kentucky firms (about one-fifth of the active business concerns in the state) employing 73,000 persons with a payroll last year of $139 million.

- The combined sales of the travel industry accounts for almost one-fifth of the $4 billion retail business in the state.

The report pointed out that Kentucky is most favorably located for travel business. It is able to attract tourists from the high-income levels of the urbanized Midwestern states, and at the same time it is traversed by large volumes of tourist traffic on the way to the Gulf Coast and the Southwest.

The University of Kentucky maintains 52 laboratories for special research.

Revenue from Kentucky's highway toll facilities totaled $606,518 during January—an increase of more than $150,000 over the same month a year ago, Commissioner of Highways Henry Ward announced this week.

The Blue Grass Parkway accounted for $90,979 of this increase. The Parkway was opened to toll traffic on October 27, 1965.

In Jefferson county, $17,014 was collected at the Outer Loop ramps and $5,199 at the Fern Valley ramps on the Kentucky Turnpike.

Gross receipts of the toll facilities for January of 1966 and 1965, reported by the Department:

Shawneetown Bridge, $21,020 and $17,442; Kentucky Turnpike, $304,085 and $282,068; Mountain Parkway, $61,865 and $54,594; Western Kentucky Parkway, $128,569 and $101,625; Blue Grass Parkway, which opened last October, $90,979.

TESTING SET

Continuous Program
Set Up for Kentucky;
New System Installed

A continuous statewide diabetes testing program is being set up by the Chronic Disease Control Program and the Division of Laboratory Services, Kentucky State Department of Health. This is made possible with the recent purchase of an auto-analyzer, an automated system for continuous chemical examination.

Blood sugar determinations will be made on minute samples of blood. This is a much more accurate and delicate test than the urine test. Collection equipment will be made available through county health departments. Emphasis will be placed on testing high risk groups, those related to diabetes, overweight persons, and persons over 40 years of age.

Diabetes is the seventh leading cause of death both in Kentucky and nationwide. In 1963, 591 Kentuckians died of this disease, and it is estimated that one person in every 50 has diabetes, many of whom do not know it.

Diabetes can be controlled by diet, exercise, and, when necessary, insulin or, in older and milder cases, one of the oral compounds. A planned diet, however, is always a basic fundamental of diabetes treatment.

Neglect of diabetes may lead to development of complications, the most serious of which are heart disease, failing eyesight, hardening of the arteries, kidney disorders, gangrene, cerebral hemorrhage, and diabetic coma.

WHILE GOING TO THE TEACHERS!
KEA STUDY SEEKS ANSWER

Louisville, Ky. (ENS) — Thirty-three went to a school system in Jefferson county and 30 to one in Fayette county.

By broad geographical area, excluding the three categories previously mentioned for teachers who moved but stayed in the state, this breakdown occurred: Central Kentucky got 59 teachers; Western Kentucky, 56; Eastern, 44; Southern, 31; Northern, 22; and Northwestern, 15. Some teachers, of course, moved from a school system within a geographical area to another system in the same geographical area.

Roy McDonald, chairman of the KEA Committee for the Study of the Foundation Program, emphasized that the results of the survey are preliminary. The committee will continue to seek more complete information.

"We would like to try to find out why these teachers left their districts," McDonald said, "although the attraction of higher salaries would seem to be the main reason."

"Salaries undoubtedly were the major reason Kentucky teachers went to other states," he added. "Kentucky is fourth from the bottom this year in average salary paid to classroom teachers. Only Arkansas, South Carolina, South Dakota, and Mississippi pay less than the Kentucky average of $4,930."

McDonald, superintendent of Trigg county schools, is one of 14 members of the KEA committee, which was established by authority of the KEA delegate assembly in December, 1964. It is composed of one member from each of KEA's 11 districts plus three officers of the KEA Department of Classroom Teachers.

At the request of the committee Dr. Harry Sparks, state superintendent of public instruction, appointed a 20-member citizens advisory group to work with the study group.

The committee will issue its final report by January 1, 1967. Its recommendations for revisions in the 12-year-old foundation program for education will be directed toward the 1968 General Assembly.

Soybean Production
Increase Is Asked
Of State Farmers

Frankfort—In keeping with President Johnson's recently announced five-year "food for peace" program, Governor Edward T. Breathitt has urged Kentucky farmers to increase soybean production.

The 1966 domestic food production program, outlined by the President, includes a million-acre increase in soybean plantings, a boost of about 3% nationally. There is no acreage allotment program in effect for soybean production, however.

Governor Breathitt suggested that farmers who have available land suited to growing soybeans plant them this year or increase their present acreage, if they have soybean programs. Kentucky farmers planted 312,000 acres in soybeans during 1965 with crops being sold for about $2.60 a bushel.

"Soybeans can be grown on any land which will support corn or other grains," the Governor said.

Four factors favor soybean production in Kentucky, Breathitt said:

- The purchase of new equipment is not necessary as the crop can be tended and harvested with existing farm machinery.
- Soybeans can be grown successfully on heavy soils.
- The demand for soybeans is increasing faster than the supply.
- Soybeans are a key cash crop and a ready market is available.

"Kentucky is not keeping pace with other states in the production of soybeans," the Governor said. "Soybeans offer farmers an excellent opportunity to boost individual farm income."

The President's "food-for-peace" program is designed to give food assistance and technical self-help instruction to hungry areas of the world.

THIS IS A POSTAL CARD
(Exact in size and shape)

Suppose you use postal cards for direct mail advertising. Five thousand cards will cost you $200.

Forget the cost of printing and addressing the cards—but remember they alone cost $200.

Why do we suggest 5,000? Because that is almost the exact number of copies of the Floyd County Times that go to subscribers each week. (We mention 5,000 subscribers—only a fraction of the number who read The Times, weekly. The most authoritative study yet made shows at least 4 1-3 persons read each copy of a weekly newspaper. So at least 20,000 read The Floyd County Times every week of the year.)

Now, how much does an advertisement in The Times, exactly the same size as a postal card, cost you with no extras for printing, addressing and mailing? EXACTLY $6.82½. COMPARE THAT WITH $200! It Pays To Advertise in The Times.

WATCH THE LANGUAGE! . . .

As we and others attempt to describe our products, we turn to the heavy use of adjectives — "best," "finest," and so on.

As one oldtimer put it, we all sometimes are guilty of "kivvering" too much territory.

So we hesitate to say ours are "the best" and "the finest" products of their kind ever made. But we do say —

"Try to find a finer!"

POPULATION EXPLOSION THREAT TO POLLUTION FIGHT

(Editor's Note: The following article is reprinted from the February issue of "Our Heritage," a monthly publication of the Kentucky Department of Natural Resources.)

Although nearly all of Kentucky's urban population is being served by sewer and treatment plant facilities—thanks to a lion's share of federal funds—state officials foresee no letup in the drive to wipe out stream pollution. Instead, faced with a limited budget, they cast a wary eye at the changing pattern of an exploding population.

This is the picture, in capsule form, as gleaned from interviews with Ralph Pickard, executive director of the Kentucky Water Pollution Control Commission, and its legal counsel, David Sebree:

1. Of the 1.7 million urban dwellers, about 99 percent utilize sewer outlets and treatment plants.

2. The remaining 1.3 million citizens, who live on farms or in rural areas of Eastern Kentucky, use inadequate septic tanks or have no indoor plumbing at all.

3. In 1962-'64, 80 communities took advantage of matching funds under the Accelerated Public Works Program and either completed, started construction of, or planned for water pollution control projects at a total cost of $52.3 million. The number of projects ranked first nationally and the dollar volume was second among the states. The federal funds matched local monies on a 50-50 basis, but the U. S. share went as high as 75 percent in some instances.

4. Currently under construction are 12 pollution-control projects that will cost $9.4 million, primarily in the Lexington and Louisville areas. With a federal grant of $5,223,467, Louisville's Metropolitan Sewer District is undertaking a long-term, multi-stage project that eventually will cost $17,578,000—one of the first of its kind in the U. S. The district received 10 percent of the grant because it was able to show the Kentucky Water Pollution Control Commission that it had a master plan to follow in solving present and future sewage problems.

Sebree cited the Big Sandy River valley as an outstanding example of progress in pollution control. Four years ago, the bigger towns dumped raw sewage into the river. They now have sewers and treatment plants.

Complimenting citizens for their cooperation, Pickard said the commission's progress merely reminds one of the "obligations for the future. The population explosion dictates not only the extension of sewers to new areas but in many instances will dictate the expansion of the sewage treatment plant."

"The demand of the public for cleaner waters will dictate further the need for a higher degree of treatment. Increased recreational use of our streams will cut the pattern of the future and treatment plants will have to be adjusted to fit the pattern."

A major problem of the future, Pickard said, will be the constant surveillance of treatment plants to insure their proper operation. The federal government has already begun to perform "inspectional audits" on those plants built with the help of federal grants to see whether they are being operated properly.

Other problems include the replacement of obsolete plants with new ones and the control of mine-acid drainage.

Pickard noted that a "sizeable task" immediately ahead is that of carrying out the state's role under the Water Quality Act passed recently by Congress. Under the bill, each state has until June 30, 1967, to establish water quality standards for all interstate streams and tributaries within its borders and adopt a plan to enforce them.

Without assistance from the public works program, Sebree said, it would have been economically impossible for the 80 communities to comply with anti-pollution laws in the short span of two years. Until that time, the state averaged about 10 projects totaling about $8 to $10 million every two years.

Under other legislation passed recently by Congress, the smaller communities will become eligible for funds to help build water pollution control facilities.

The water pollution commission oversees about 1,000 sewage treatment plants and processes some 500 applications and plans yearly with a staff of 26. The recommended number under these circumstances is 45.

Pickard noted the commission operates on a budget of $200,000. An independent research agency in Chicago recommended that Kentucky "should have a minimum budget of $237,000, and a desirable one would be $410,000 for a program of its scope."

Other studies show that Kentucky presently spends 6½ cents per person on pollution control, while the recommended figure for that purpose is 13 cents.

Sebree said the area worst in need of sewage facilities is Jefferson county. In a portion of the county, the board of health outlawed septic tanks after learning they failed to allow the septic material to percolate into the ground. The city of Lexington and urban areas of Kenton and Campbell counties also need sewers because of failing septic tanks, he said.

U. S. Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman summed up the water situation in Kentucky and elsewhere recently when he said:

"The availability of pure water is today a major national challenge. The problem of waste disposal from our cities, our manufacturing plants, and our farms is becoming increasingly acute. It is clear that the steps we have taken so far to use and reuse water are insufficient to sustain an adequate supply.

FORMER FLOYD COUNTY SIGNS PUBLICATION PACT

Richard D. Howard, Hueysville native who is a special education teacher at Senior high school, Miamisburg, Ohio, has signed a contract with the Frank E. Richards Publishers, Phoenix, New York, for the publication of his book entitled "Unemployed Ugles."

The book is a guidance tool for occupational classes and deals with the reasons that persons lose jobs and become "unemployed ugles." It will be published in the form of a teacher's guide with a packet of loose leaf materials.

Each page deals with a specific incident that could cause a person to be laid off or fired from his job. A cartoon and a jingle present the problem. For instance, one cartoon shows a young female waitress with unkempt hair and a customer pulling a hair from his soup. The cartoon reads, "Cyclone Sally should have a care, and do something about her hair."

The page continues with discussion questions about what could have been done to avoid the incident, why it may not have been done, what the customer's reaction probably was, and how his attitude would affect the employer.

Mr. Howard hopes to produce five other teacher's guides by September. The six guides would make a year-long study for vocational classes, special education classes, and programs for Job Corps youth.

A Miamisburg teacher, Mrs. Doyle Wilkerson, drew the illustrations for the book.

Mr. Howard taught at West Carrollton from 1956 to 1961 and has been on the faculty since 1962. He earned his B.S. from Eastern Kentucky State College and his M.Ed. from Miami University. He also has studied at Pikeville College, the University of Dayton, Wittenberg University, Ohio State University and the University of Cincinnati.

The former Floyd county last summer conducted at Pikeville College a workshop in the field of Mental Retardation. He will present an enlarged program in the same field at Pikeville this summer (July 11-26), and teachers and students may earn as much as six hours' credit during the course.

This house will sell for considerably more...Why?

Because the second home uses an electric heat pump for year-round cooling and heating. The other uses an old-fashioned flame-type heating method.

An electric heat pump is the modern way to "comfort-condition" a home. Keeps it comfortably cool in summer, soothingly warm in winter. You just set the dial. That's all there is to it. The temperature stays the way you want it... all the time.

You can be sure of the dependable quality of an electric heat pump. Your actual cooling and heating costs can be calculated in advance, too. No wonder an electric heat pump increases the value of any home. Check with us today for all the facts... then put "eternal springtime" in your home.

TECHNICAL KNOW-HOW HELPS TIMBER OWNERS GET THE TOP DOLLAR

Kentucky's private landowners are pocketing the top dollar for their timber under a state program that provides technical know-how in marking tracts of woodlands for cutting and marketing.

The State Division of Forestry fills requests for guidance and assistance in forest management through its 37 service foresters spread over nine administrative districts. Under the Co-operative Forest Management Program foresters spend most of their time in encouraging good management of privately-owned timberlands, including woodland examinations, marking the other activities related to the protection and conservation of trees.

The story of the CFM Program is told largely by these statistics from "Our Heritage:"

In the 1964-'65 fiscal year ending June 30, state foresters serviced 3,541 requests for assistance and marked 12,668,000 board feet of timber which put $291,700 into the pockets of the owners. These figures compare with a five-year average of 4,766 requests serviced and marking of 11,440,000 board feet of timber which returned $219,476 to owners.

In receiving the report from the Forestry Division, Natural Resources Commissioner J. O. Matlock said, "I am real happy that we have expanded state services to private woodland owners, through our highly qualified service foresters, and look forward to an even greater program in the future."

According to K. B. McClintick, supervisor of the CFM Program, the service forester's worth to timber owners—in terms of dollars and cents—is irrefutably proved in these examples of record:

A landowner in Livingston county was offered $5,000 for all his timber on a 200-acre tract. A forester marked the timber, and it sold for $9,000.

R. S. Cannon, of Graves county, was offered $400 for all the timber on a 20-acre tract. The timber was marked by a forester and it later sold for $1,610.

The DeWeese Brothers, of Hickman county, were offered $3,500 for all timber on a 100-acre tract. Marked by a forester, it later sold for $5,500.

A recent letter to Gene Butcher, state director of forestry, is typical of the reaction to the work done by service foresters. Complimenting a forester for his marking of timber in Butler county, the landowner told Butcher:

"The report prepared (by the forester) is excellent along with forms to be used for sale advertising and cutting contracts. It is a pleasure to see this type of work prepared and the fine manner in which it was assembled. I am sure that the continuation of such quality work will enhance the income from timberland and insure a forward place for Kentucky in the proper management, use and marketing of our forest products."

From the beginning of the expanded program, the woodland owner has been expected to cooperate with the forester by accompanying him in the work, expressing an interest in good forestry, and showing his intent to follow proper recommendations. In return, the landowner could expect free service for woodland examinations, tree planting assistance, and guidance in all phases of forest management. He gets timber marked for a nominal charge—40 cents per 1,000 board feet. Proceeds are used to provide for marking plant and other expenses.
