SPEAKING OF AND FOR FLOYD COUNTY

THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1966

This Town . . . That World

A thought for all who belong to the Spoilers, who take away and give nothing back: Even the lowly bee fertilizes the flower it robs.

I sat down to this chore, determined not to mention the heat. But it has required so much effort to veer away from that subject that I can't think of anything to write. So . . .

THE OUTSIDER LOSES

I regret that I am unable to give a complete report on this game that has been going on, over on Bull Creek, for some time now. I must rely on a barber shop report from Ray Collins and Smoky Joe Meadows.

Ralph Marshall and some of those on the inside seem to have things pretty well their own way, over there. They have this horse-shoe game going in a conveniently cool spot, and no outsider has a chance. Their unfortunate opponents declare they have the judge bribed and the jury packed.

When one of the boys wound up, skunked, tailored and discomfited—after much measuring, weighty deliberation and perhaps a bit of chicanery—he plaintively remarked, "But, boys, I'm from Bull Creek, too."

The winners agreed. "But you're from 'way down on Bull," he was informed.

BANNER MAN AUTO VICTIM

Crum Fatally Hurt En Route to Bedside Of His Granddaughter

Malcolm Crum died this (Thursday) morning at the Paintsville Clinic.

Miss Sheila Blackburn, of Banner, was severely injured Sunday night when her car went out of control on KY 80, near Allen, and two days later her grandfather, Malcolm Crum, also of Banner, was critically hurt as he was en route to a Huntington hospital, taking blood donors there for his granddaughter.

Mr. Crum, a man in his 60's, suffered head and chest injuries, and his condition was later described at the Paintsville Clinic as serious. His grandson, Tony Blackburn, driver of the car, was hospitalized but was not seriously hurt. Two others, David Collins, of Ivel, and Hezlie Sammons, Jr., of Banner, escaped with superficial hurts.

It was reported here that the Crum car missed the approach to the bridge spanning the Big Sandy, near Paintsville, and plunged over a high embankment. The accident took place around 4 a.m. Wednesday during heavy rain.

Miss Blackburn's car struck the cliff opposite the Allen golf course. She was taken to St. (See Story No. 6, Page 6)

2nd FLOYD RESIDENT CLAIMED BY WRECK

The death last Wednesday night at the Paintsville hospital of Miss Cora Lou Stanley, 17, of Buckingham, brought to three the death toll exacted by a two-car collision that afternoon on the Mountain Parkway, about 10 miles west of Salyersville.

Almost instantly killed in the crash were Willie Hall, Jr., 43, St. Mary's, O., formerly of Bevinville, and Ray Arnett, 35, of Lakeville, Magoffin county.

The fourth person involved in the wreck, 17-year-old Wilma Lee Hall, daughter of Willie Hall, Jr. and close friend of the Stanley girl, is in critical condition at the Paintsville hospital. She underwent surgery last Thursday.

State Police were quoted as saying the Hall girl may have been driving her father's auto which apparently skidded across the highway as it descended a hill and pinned Arnett's car against a guardrail. The wreck took place during a rainstorm.

Scene of the tragedy was on the hill, a short distance west of the first toll station on the Parkway.

Hall was the son of Mrs. Martha Newsome Hall, of Buckingham, and the late Lee Hall. He was a former miner, a veteran of World War II, and had resided in St. Mary's, O., for the past 12 years.

Additional survivors include the widow, Mrs. Inez Morris Hall; seven brothers, James Hall of Topmost, Ky., Ernest, Darnest and Bobby Gene Hall of Ashabula, O., Arlie Gene Hall and Carl Hall of Wabash, Ind., and Delmer Hall of Marion, Ind., and four sisters, Mrs. Siller Johnson, of Louisville, Mrs. Grethel Bates, of Printer, and Mrs. Marie Johnson and Mrs. Anna Lee Hall, of Buckingham.

Hall was buried in the Buckingham cemetery after graveside rites conducted by ministers of the Regular Baptist Church. The rites were under direction of the Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

Funeral services for Miss Stanley were conducted at 1 p.m. Sunday from the home of her parents, Robert and Dorthula Hall Stanley, with ministers from the Regular Baptist Church officiating. Burial was in the Buckingham cemetery, the Merion Funeral Chapel directing.

She was born on June 18,

WOMAN HIT, PROBE SEEN

Mrs. Fitzpatrick Hurt, Truck Flees the Scene Of Middle Cr. Incident

Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo said Wednesday that he and State Detective Chester D. Potter will investigate the injury Monday night of Mrs. Maude Fitzpatrick, of the Middle Creek road, to determine if she was pushed or thrown into the path of an oncoming car or if she simply walked into it.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick, a woman of about 70, is in the Prestonsburg General hospital with a broken pelvis and mangled arm. She is expected to recover.

She was struck on the highway by a car driven by Franklin D. Goble, of Auxier, as he drove toward David to work. No blame for her injury was attached to Goble.

What authorities are interested in knowing is the identity of the driver of a truck which apparently had stopped on the highway, headed toward Prestonsburg, and why the driver hurriedly left the scene. It was described as a green-and-white Fleetside Chevrolet.

Goble said the door of the truck appeared to be open when he first observed it. He added that the woman suddenly passed across the front of the truck into the path of his car. He said her movement was so quick he could not say if she were shoved or if she ran across the highway.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick was quoted as saying she didn't know what happened.

Dwale Soldier, 20, Seriously Wounded

Sp. 4 James M. Slone, 20, was seriously wounded Saturday in action against the enemy in Viet Nam, his mother, Mrs. Ida Slone, of Dwale, was notified the following day.

The information received by Mrs. Slone said her son suffered metal fragment wounds in his head and neck. She later learned, through the assistance of Congressman Carl D. Perkins, that the wounded man had undergone surgery at the Third field hospital and had regained consciousness. Word received Tuesday through Perkins' office said he is "doing as well as could be expected."

WOMAN FINED

Evelyn Dolan, of Cincinnati, was fined $33.50 in quarterly court here after her arrest June 24 by Conservation Officer Raymond Copley on a charge of fishing without license.

STATE, COUNTY SIGN COUNTY ROADS PACT

The Department of Highways in its recently executed contract with the Floyd fiscal court proposes the maintenance of 157.8 miles of county roads during the fiscal year. An apportionment of $107,206.57 of rural highway funds is to cover the cost of this work.

The Department contracts to furnish the supervision, labor, materials, equipment and supplies to do maintenance operations which include routine and special surface operations, ditching and shouldering, roadside drainage, mowing of rights-of-way, snow and ice control of roads which have bituminous surfacing, and disaster maintenance.

The county is to provide rights-of-way and to hold safe the state against damages.

Latest of the roads to be added to the county system is the Big Branch of Mud Creek route, beginning at Route 979 and extending to the head of the branch.

At a previous meeting R. R. Allen was employed as auditor for four years and W. J. May as county treasurer for the same period, each to be paid a salary of $1,200 a year.

The court voted a 10% increase in revenues for the tax years 1966 and 1967.

STRIP-MINE 'REPAIR' COST, $250 MILLION

"Basic" repair of the damage done by strip-mining to land in the Appalachian area will cost $250 million, an Interior Department report has concluded.

The repair job, the report adds, may be the problem of the federal government, for the most part, but it adds that federal spending would be "questionable" unless the states affected pitch in with effective laws to prevent or remedy future damage.

The report, called for by last year's Appalachian Regional Development Act, estimates that 800,000 acres in the 12-state region have been "disturbed" by miners stripping away the soil from fields and hillsides to get at the coal beneath.

Kentucky, Pennsylvania and several other Appalachian states have strip-mine control statutes, but the report finds their control efforts have been largely inadequate. Unless the states do a better job, it warns, Congress may have to step in with federal remedies.

Strip mines, frequently more economical to the operators than traditional underground digging, pollute streams, cause serious soil erosion, destroy forests and scenery and threaten public health and safety, the report notes.

Though about 96 percent of Appalachia's strip-mined lands are privately owned, the Interior Department justifies public spending on reclaiming them as a "deferred social cost." That is, the report blames "former public indifference" rather than the mining companies themselves for lack of land repair.

While landowners are unlikely to reclaim much of this land at their own expense, Interior asserts, "current protests against despoilment of the land imply that now, however, the public is probably willing to pay."

To further justify spending large federal sums, the department also states that "many of the problems associated with past strip-mined lands are interstate in character." In particular: stream pollution from mine-acid drainage and sediment.

In cases where the state, local government and landowner can't or won't help reclaim the land, the report says the federal government may have to bear the full cost including—in some instances—actually buying the property.

The purpose of "basic" reclamation would be to improve the quality of downstream water supplies. The rough $250 million price tag would cover controlling drainage at the mine by grading and planting grass or other greenery, and various steps to prevent acid leakage. Secretary of Interior Stewart L. Udall called this "the minimum action required." It wouldn't mean restoring the terrain to its pre-mining contours.

The Interior Department reasons that if an owner sells land which has increased greatly in value as a result of federally-financed restoration, "a proportionate share of the revenue" should go to the government.

Beyond the "basic" work, old mine sites could be further improved as parks, artificial lakes or factory locations to boost both (See Story No. 4, Page 6)

FLOYD TEAM WINS AWARD

Tree-Planting Effort Posts Record for State; 438,000 Seedlings Set

Tree-planting teams from Floyd and Muhlenberg counties have won the annual Tree Planting Award Program, sponsored by the State Department of Natural Resources.

Members of the winning teams will receive a three-day expense-paid vacation at the Kentucky State Park of their choice, Natural Resources Commissioner J. O. Matlock said Monday.

Members of the competing teams must be composed of representatives on the county level of at least three of the following agencies:

U.S. Forest Service, Soil Conservation Service, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the State Education Department's Bureau of Vocational Education, the State Division of Forestry and the University of Kentucky Extension Service.

Harry Nadler, associate director of the state division of forestry, said the purpose of the program is to promote the planting of trees through closer cooperation of efforts by local representatives of these agencies.

Efforts by the Floyd county team, winner in the Eastern division, resulted in the planting of 438,000 tree seedlings, with 121 landowners participating in the planting.

The Muhlenberg county team, the Western division winner, was responsible for the planting of 324,000 seedlings.

Nadler said the two teams also excelled in other areas on which the county programs are judged.

In addition to the expense-paid vacations, the winning teams will receive plaques.

Members of the Floyd county team are Elder Goble, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service; County Agent Hubert E. Ball; Gerald Hart, Soil Conservation Service; Lloyd Wells, state division of Vocational Agriculture, and Charles Foster, state division of Forestry.

POST OFFICE AWARD MADE

Mrs. Runnels To Build West P'burg Structure, Lease to Department

Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien announced last week that a contract has been awarded to Mrs. Fannie Runnels, of West Prestonsburg, to build the new Post Office at West Prestonsburg and lease it to the Post Office Department.

Announcement of the award to the successful bidder advances the construction stage. When fully operational, the Postmaster General said, the additional space and more modern equipment will, in the long run, more than offset the extra cost involved in producing more efficient handling of the mail, in accordance with President Johnson's directive to provide the best possible postal service at the least possible cost.

The new West Prestonsburg building will be located on the south side of Harris street, 250 feet from the present Post Office. It will be leased to the Department for five years with renewal options running through 20 (See Story No. 2, Page 6)

EMERGENCY RESOLUTION IS ADOPTED

State, U.S. Agencies Represented at Meet On Water Shortage

Mud Creek and its tributaries have a water problem which amounts to an emergency, and state and federal agencies will be asked to initiate action on that basis to meet needs of that section of the county.

This was decided at a mass meeting held at the John M. Stumbo elementary school at Grethel, Tuesday evening, after representatives of state and federal agencies had toured the valley and had seen the situation for themselves.

A resolution adopted at the meeting called on Gov. Edward T. Breathitt to declare Mud Creek an emergency area. Such a classification, it is said, would place Mud Creek in line to get emergency funds quickly.

The resolution will be conveyed to Governor Breathitt in person by County Judge Henry Stumbo and County Attorney Barkley J. Sturgill.

A representative of the Office of Economic Opportunity said OEO will provide funds to employ a consulting geologist who would make a survey of sites for future drilling of water wells. Reports of the study made during the tour and of test (See Story No. 3, Page 5)

Cooper and Brown Scheduled To Speak At Annual C. of C. Day

U.S. Senatorial candidates, incumbent Senator John Sherman Cooper (R), Somerset, and John Y. Brown (D), Lexington, majority leader of the Kentucky House of Representatives, have accepted invitations to express their views at the 14th Annual Kentucky Chamber of Commerce Day luncheon August 23 at the Kentucky State Fair.

All congressional candidates also have been invited to attend. The luncheon will be held at noon in Rooms A-B-C of Freedom Hall at the Kentucky State Fair and Exposition Center.

John W. Woods, Jr., of Ashland, president of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, in making the announcement pointed out that "since this is an election year all business and professional men should take every opportunity to become better acquainted with all candidates and their views. We feel this program will provide that opportunity."

The annual KCC Day is set aside each year to honor all chambers of commerce in Kentucky for their many endeavors both state and local, in building better business for Kentucky.

SCD NOTES

BIRD FOOD THE YEAR ROUND People who like to see songbirds in their backyards the year round can have them there by providing the right combination of plants, according to Homer A. Taff, state conservationist for the USDA Soil Conservation Service, headquartered at Lexington.

"Twenty top-quality trees and shrubs will do the trick in most parts of Kentucky," says Taff. "These plants bear seeds or fruits that are available at different seasons, thus assuring the birds of a ready supply of food, no matter what the time of year."

Spring and early summer food is provided by American elm, red mulberry, and wild black cherry. Regular summer fare is produced by blackberry, elderberry and serviceberry. Grape, red cedar, and flowering dogwood can be depended upon for fall food. Later on, during the critical winter months when food is normally scarce, smooth sumac, coralberry, and greenbrier will keep the birds alive until spring.

"Not only do these plants provide food for the birds, but they also furnish shelter from weather and natural enemies," notes the SCS official. "And while they are benefiting the birds they are at the same time protecting the soil and helping to beautify the landscape."

Girl Sues School Board And Insurer for $25,000 In School Bus Accident

A suit asking $25,000 was filed in the Floyd circuit court last Friday against the Travelers Indemnity Company and the Floyd County Board of Education for injuries allegedly suffered by a Floyd county girl.

The plaintiff, Gerrylene Tackett, suing by her father, Jim Tackett, claims she was struck, October 18, last, by a school bus owned by the board of education and driven by one of its employees on a regular bus run.

In another action, filed the same day, Dock Hall seeks to recover from the Kentucky Power Company $5,000 damages which he claims resulted from suspension of electric service to his home for a period of 24 days. He claims he was not in arrears on his bill and that service was wrongfully suspended. Hall also asks recovery of $5.67 which, he says, was charged him as a re-connection charge.

KY. HEAD-START PROGRAM JUMPS FROM 7th to 2nd

By JACK AYER Courier-Journal Staff Writer

Washington—Kentucky has the second largest summer Head-Start program in the country, the Office of Economic Opportunity said here yesterday.

Kentucky has been given about $5 million to stage summer programs for 24,000 children, according to the poverty agency.

Only Texas, with $6.4 million and 34,000 children is larger, it was reported. Head Start is the program to help young people from poverty-stricken backgrounds prepare for school. The OEO contends it has had great success in readying children medically and physically for regular school.

Kentucky was seventh in the nation last summer. New York was first, with $6.5 million at that time.

New York and several other states have soaled down their summer programs to emphasize the year-round Head Start.

Kentucky's summer program last year involved 24,000 children at a cost of $3.8 million. The per-pupil cost of the program has risen almost everywhere since last year, spokesmen said.

Malcolm McCullough, coordinator of the OEO programs for the Department of Education in Frankfort, said 158 of 201 school districts in the state are participating in the program. Only 12 counties, mainly in Western Kentucky, have no Head-Start centers, he said.

Between 1,800 and 1,900 teachers are involved in the summer programs. OEO pays them the salaries they earn as teachers. Teacher aides, recruited in the communities served, must be paid at least $1.25 an hour.

McCullough said Head-Start is not limited to the summer, but because many school districts have no facilities for conducting the program during the regular school term, they must conduct it in the summer.

The teachers of pre-school economically deprived children were trained at seven Kentucky colleges, instead of by regional officers from national headquarters.

McCullough said Kentucky led the nation with its training program.

This year, the Universities of Louisville and Kentucky, Western, Eastern, Morehead and Murray state universities, and Kentucky State College formed a "college consortium" and proposed to train Head-Start teachers on the ground they were aware of the needs and problems in Kentucky. The government approved and financed the training project at a cost of about $60,000.

Not only were Kentucky's Head-Start teachers trained in the state, but 1,400 from other states, including Wyoming, Michigan, New Jersey, Texas and Mississippi.

The OEO says that some 500,000 children in 2,500 communities in the nation will participate in this summer's program: An increase of 20,000 children and 100 communities over last summer.

Year-round pre-school training was provided for 180,000 children last year.

The OEO, in claiming great success for Head Start, says government-sponsored studies show an 8-to-10-point boost in the IQ's of children in a summer program, and as much as 16 points for children in a year-round program.

Reading problems were circumvented by the discovery of visual defects.

The OEO says that local Head-Start programs have uncovered and corrected physical defects in one-third of the participating children. Medical exams identified defects ranging from malnutrition to deafness, which might otherwise have gone unnoticed.

The program has also provided employment for some mothers of the poor as teacher aides and the like.

Discussed at the community meeting were two possible plans of action—one to drill strategically located water wells and pipe the water to individual homes; the other, to build an impoundment upon which homes and businesses would be able to draw.

In addition to OEO, the Health, Education and Welfare federal agency, the U.S. Geological Survey, the Kentucky departments of Health, Geology, Economic Security and others were represented on the tour and at the meeting.

At one point in the meeting Nick Johnson, chief of the sanitation engineering division, State Department of Health, asked if any Appalachian Regional people were present. Told there was none, he commented: "They have the money and aren't spending it except on roads."

Tuesday's meeting developed from an earlier community gathering held at the Stumbo school at which Congressman Carl D. Perkins conferred with community leaders and others on Mud Creek's plight. The official interest in the situation was spurred by Charles Dagnan, Appalachian Volunteers community intern, and the mass meeting Tuesday was sponsored by the Big Sandy Area Community Action Program, with the cooperation of the Appalachian Volunteers.

FRENCH CAR PRICES TO RISE

Paris—Michel Debre, minister of finance and economy, signed an agreement with the French Automobile Manufacturers' Association which abolished the price freeze on automobiles, meaning that French car prices will now rise. This follows a similar unblocking of prices on electrical household appliances. Thus France is easing off on the stabilization policy which has been holding wages and prices relatively steady.

This represents the lowest of four bids received by the Department on a competitive basis, and reflects what Departmental studies have determined to be a reasonable and economical rental for leased space in this area.

The new Post Office will have an interior space of 322 square feet, with 4,710 square feet for parking and movement of postal vehicles. It is expected to be completed by January 1, 1967.

Mr. O'Brien explained that the Department's capital investment is limited substantially to postal equipment. The building will remain under private ownership, with the owner paying local real estate taxes.

SENDS FLAG TO SCHOOL

ONE VIRTUE

Our recent story about the saintly little lady who would speak ill of nobody and who, pushed, remarked that even the Devil has his points—his industrious—recalled for an acquaintance an equally saintly old gentleman who not only would say nothing of a derogatory nature about anybody but who also had a word of praise for everybody.

There was a man in the community who was as totally bad as they get — beat his wife, starved his children, stole from his neighbors, in truth omitted everything that was good from his life and embraced everything that was bad. When he died the boys were plumb irreverent and they listed all the evil acts, habits and ways that were his.

"Now, there comes Uncle . . . . Let's see if he can find one good thing to say about this one."

Then they painstakingly reviewed the lousy life of the decedent and wound up with the question: "Now, what do you say?"

The old fellow ruminated a moment, then spoke his encomium: "Come to think of it, boys, he was as good a whistler as I ever saw pucker a lip."

THE EXPLANATION

This six-year-old whom I know had her younger brother in solemn conference. She was acquainting him with the Facts of Life. Said she:

"The stork didn't bring you to this house, Mamma did. She carried you, and you were born. Did you know? — at first you were a bean!"

Little Brother wasn't too interested, but Mother was, and she continued the matter. "This bean bit—where did you get that idea?" she asked her daughter.

And daughter left her without an answer with this: "We're all human beans, aren't we, Mamma?"

Commissioner A. H. Mandt, of the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals, has issued a warning against mining hazards which follow vacation periods, when mines are idle. He has asked that all miners be even more alert than usual to mining dangers when they return to their work. Records show that personal accidents increase immediately following vacations and extended idle periods. Some of these accidents result from changes in the physical condition of mines while they are not operating and others are caused by miners failing to condition themselves properly to their work upon resuming their duties, he added.

The Department of Mines urges all operators to see that mines are well-ventilated and examined for dangerous conditions before men are permitted to enter.

A TOURIST COMPLAINS

The following letter from Dr. G. Daniel Miller, 37880 Forrest Drive, Oconomowac, Wisconsin, clearly states a situation which demands the most careful thought and, we think, prompt attention:

"Since the pen is still mightier than the sword, I have chosen to write to you concerning a problem Prestonsburg has.

"My family and I have just returned from your area after joining the nation in a Kentucky vacation. I would like to alert your readers about a poor public relations program carried out by the police department of Prestonsburg. While parked from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. on 3rd Street, Monday, June 27, I received a ticket because I failed to insert a coin in the meter. Needless to say, the 50c fine is not great but the principle does have merit. There are no signs stating the hours the parking meters must be used and, even if there were, a ticket on an obviously out-of-state auto does not make me anxious to return to Jenny Wiley very soon. A little thing? Maybe, but little things often rankle in one's memory. The park, I might say, was fine and the people we met were more than cordial.

"I hope this letter will dissuade the police from this campaign to keep tourist money out of your area, for Kentucky's sake."

NATURE TRAILS

By RUFUS M. REED

The huge timber rattle of which I write herein was an old resident of the mountains, called by the naturalists, Crotalus horridus, and feared and hated by every creature of the woods. For the fifteen years or more of his life, he had holed up under a large sandstone on top of a ridge, and under it he had hibernated every winter. He was 50 inches long, and the middle of his body was more than half the size of a man's thigh. He had fifteen rattlers and a button on the end of his charcoal black tail. The rest of his big body was a dull, golden yellow and crisscrossed by triangular bands. His head was big, flat and triangular and in the upper jaw were two fangs spaced about an inch apart. The fangs rested against his jaw but when he reared up to strike a victim they shot forward and looked like the unsheathed claws of a cat. At the base of each fang there was a poison sac and the fangs were like hypodermic needles for injecting the poison in a victim.

The heat and the drought had made life on the mountain unbearable for the big snake. And thousands of chiggers eating on him didn't help his disposition. The sandstone under which he lived was like an oven in the hot sun and the snake knew he had to find water to cool his side soon or the heat would destroy him. So he started crawling fast down the mountainside. He was so desperate to reach water he bore off 12 of his rattlers when they got fouled up in some brush.

The chipmunks saw him coming and, creaking with terror, they dived for their burrows. Many species of birds gathered in the air above the snake as he crawled and berated him, calling him "killer" in their language. They knew he was a deadly killer. He hadn't a single friend in all that big mountain. Both man and beast feared him and sought to destroy him on sight. Even the deer would cut him to ribbons with their hoofs if they should find him crawling down. So the big snake gave no quarter and asked for none. He was ready to destroy any creature that might cross his path.

At last, he was crawling near the foot of the mountain. A sudden movement in the weeds at the brookside caught his watchful eye, and he stopped and lay still, licking out his forked tongue. He soon caught the vibrations from a warm-blooded animal hiding in the vegetation and he slithered silently toward it. It was a half-grown rabbit, and, sensing danger, it leaped out. But the big snake was too quick for it. His head shot out like lightning and the fangs caught the rabbit. It gave a few leaps and fell gasping. He crawled to it and got it in his big mouth. He slid on down to the brook and coiled in a puddle of water. While his parched hide was cooling off, he swallowed the rabbit at leisure.

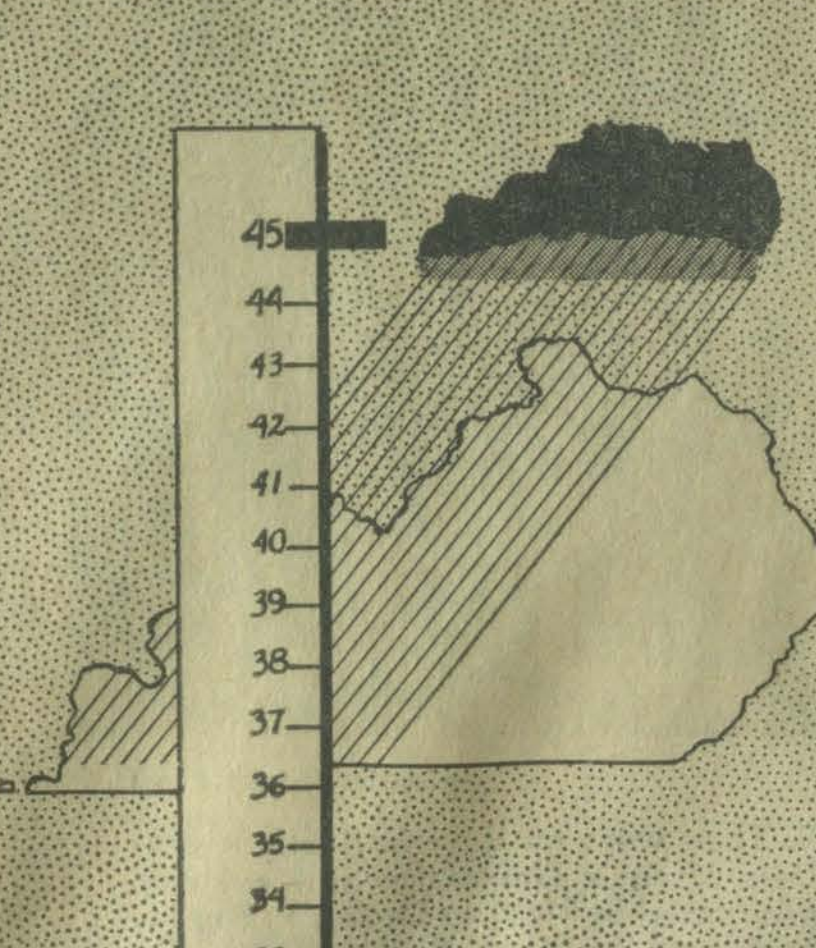

Bob Chapman and I were walking along the brook. He had taken many groups of people along this same path in the spring to show them our wild flowers. But the path was now "running away" in weeds. We never thought of seeing a rattler in our Sanctuary.

Suddenly we began to hear a faint hiss. "A jarfly," Bob said. A jarfly in the weeds is frightening. But it usually hisses once or twice and then stops. This whirring hiss kept going on. Sometimes it sounded as if nearby; then again it seemed faint and faraway. We began to look carefully. We found the big snake coiled in the water. He was so cross and vicious looking, he reared up, licking out his tongue and hissing. Bob decided to run to the house for the shotgun while I stood guard. He soon came back and shot the snake's body almost in two, right at the bulge. The half-grown rabbit, partly digested, rolled out.

Three days later, we found his mate stretched out near his decaying body. She lay as if stricken, half dead from grief. She was the only living thing in all that piece of woods that grieved over the death of the big snake!

STRANGE SEQUEL: The above true story has a strange and tragic sequel. A couple of pups chasing a rabbit found one of the rattlers shortly after it was killed, and evidently decided to sample its flesh as an article of diet. They ate the head, swallowed all the poison, chewed on the fangs and ate part of the neck. The following day, one of the pups was found dead and the other almost died.

NATURE TRAILS

MOUNTAIN RAZORBACK
In the early 1900's, wild hogs were abundant in all the wooded mountains of our region. But it has now been 50 years since I have heard of a wild hog, except for one big wild boar that was killed in the hills of Martin county in 1927. This boar was four or five feet long. He had two large tusks curving up out of his lower jaw, which he used like a saber to slash his enemies. His snout was large and well-made for rooting. His head was enormous and his forequarters were larger than his hindquarters. His entire body tapered from the head to the rear, and he had a long, ratlike tail. Not a dog in the country could outrun him and very few would dare to tackle him. Packs of dogs were set on his trail and they chased him for weeks but never did put him at bay.

He was finally shot, and this ended an era. It was the last of a colorful race of mountain razorbacks gone back to the wild state. Of these hardy razorbacks, Will Rogers, the humorist, once wrote that they would eat rattlesnakes and could whip their weight in wildcats.

In the days when wild hogs flourished in our mountains there were large forests of all kinds of oak, which bore a bounteous crop of acorns each season. There were also plenty of beechnuts for the hogs and other wild animals. In those days, the farmers saved their corn by turning their hogs out to fatten on the mast — the acorns and beechnuts. And most of these hogs went as wild as bucks. Many of them strayed far into the forest, where they bred the famous race of hardy mountain razorbacks. These wild hogs had hind legs much longer than the front ones, and they could outrun a fox. They could literally fly up a steep mountain slope, and few dogs could catch them.

The farmers would let them alone until winter came. Then they would form gangs with dogs to go out and run them down. Dogs had to be especially trained for this work. Each drove of wild hogs was championed by at least one old, fighting boar, who housed his family in a cove or under some cliff and stood guard. He would lunge savagely at dogs or men, the white foam flying from his mouth, his tusks slashing, right and left. I used to go with the men to help track down these wild hogs, and I've seen dogs cut to ribbons by a vicious wild boar.

The best dogs to cope with the wild boars were those mongrels made up of about half bulldog and half cur. When they finally got a wild hog by the leg, they held on for dear life. The boars usually had to be shot before the men could capture the shoats. Many times, the grown-up hogs were butchered, right there in the woods, then they were skinned and the meat saved for family use. It was pretty oily from a steady diet of beechnuts and acorns but it had a delicious wildwood tang. It was all meat, very little fat.

The wild shoats were usually caught and divided among the men and carried home in bur-lap bags to be raised for meat. But these shoats were so wild they wouldn't eat or drink for several days and would try to leap to the top of the pig-pen when any person approached. All night long, they would make sort of strange, moaning sound, and you could tell they were grieving because they were no longer free to roam the wilds. Finally, they were starved into eating corn and slop but they did their eating mostly at night.

A few of the farmers could locate their wild hogs by marks they had put in the ears of the sows before turning them out to feed on the mast. I distinctly remember one farmer's ear brand was two smooth craps, one to each ear, then a split in the right ear. Another farmer I knew used this brand for the ears: An underbit in the left ear, a swaller fork in the right.

During heavy snows these wild hogs holed up in dens under mountain cliffs, or in caves, but just as soon as the snows began to melt they were out rooting in the leaves for the acorns, which were sweetened by the winter freeze.

The wild hogs have vanished from our hills, never to come back. The cutting away of the oak timber, the change in the ways of living, the introduction of registered hogs to the farms — all this served to end the era of the wild mountain razorbacks.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

WHAT THE VISITORS WON'T SEE

When I look over interesting and well-illustrated guides to Kentucky, I am pleased to realize again how many things in our state are worthy of being seen. Our varied geography, our equally varied industries and ways of life—those make a good showing in anybody's Kentucky guide. Somehow, after looking over even the best of these advertisements of what we are or have, I am disappointed. The real Kentucky cannot be photographed or certainly has never been. We make much of distinguished places and people; we love to parade our spectacular or obvious scenes. How seldom does an average fellow, like the readers of this column and me, fit into any scheme that shows Kentucky! We are just taken for granted, like the trainer who is leading a Kentucky thoroughbred.

In the twenty-nine years that I have spent many days at all seasons in the Mammoth Cave National Park, I have seen thousands of tourists. On many occasions I have had a chance to speak to some of them. Even though they are nearly always courteous, there seems in many of them a sort of disappointment: Kentuckians and Kentucky do not seem so spectacular, so Hollywoodish as the advertisements would indicate. Some tourists, widely-traveled and able to judge people and places, accept the state and its people for what they are and do not try to make either the state or its people fit some preconceived notion, which was probably built up by some person who merely saw what he was looking for and nothing else.

Much is made in some professions of what is called the image. A great business loves to seize upon some aspect of its history or its service and make that into a sort of glorified picture of the business. If a good slogan can be worked into this, so much the better. The British are much better at this game than we, for they seem to thrive on images. If some great British institution played a great part in history, the latter generations are not allowed to forget it.

Kentucky is a big and varied state. Maybe no one image could or should be adequate. If it did, it would have to take in the Jackson Purchase as well as the Mountains, the Knobs, the Bluegrass, the Western Coalfields, and the Pennyrile. We are not all Kentucky Colonels, we do not own race horses everywhere, we do not live up a hollow or on top of a mountain. We are neither down-at-the-heel and on charity nor affluent. And yet, all of us, whether born here or Kentuckians by choice, somehow love to be regarded as typical of whatever it is that is pure Kentucky spirit. In more than three quarters of a century of being a Kentuckian I have tried to find out the common denominator of being a Kentuckian. I am still searching for a solution to my problem.

With the great intermingling of our native Kentucky population and that of just about everywhere else, it becomes more and more difficult to isolate some one characteristic that belongs to us all. I have rejoiced when some little nook or bend of the river was regarded as hardly like the rest of us; my rejoicing came from the spunkiness that these out-of-the-way places showed when they asserted their loyalty to Kentucky. I myself was reared so close to the Tennessee-Kentucky state line that my father, a country doctor, had a third of his practice in Tennessee. But my little Fidelity and even the folks four miles farther south, whose farms touched the state line, proudly boasted of our being Kentuckians and nothing else.

What is this quality that we are born with or acquire in some way? And how can it be developed into even finer loyalty? Many of the people who have written fan letters to me have been out of the state for years but still take the home-town paper. And many of them protest that they are still Kentuckians, no matter how many decades separate them from their native state. I still wonder just what this common denominator is.

A LOOK AT THE PROPOSED NEW STATE CONSTITUTION

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of articles outlining the differences between the present constitution of Kentucky and the proposed draft of a new constitution prepared by the Constitution Revision Assembly. This week's article deals with the office of the Governor.)

By ALBERT E. DIX

The biggest change contained in Article V of the new constitution allows the Governor and Lt. Governor to succeed themselves for a second four-year term.

The Governor, as chief magistrate of the Commonwealth, is still commander-in-chief of the army and navy of Kentucky, except when they are called into the service of the U.S., but he can't command the state's army and navy in the field unless he is so advised by a General Assembly resolution.

When he takes the oath of office, gone will be that portion in which he pledges not to fight a duel. He still must have the same qualifications, take office the same day as prescribed in the old document, (fifth Tuesday after his election) and receive an annual salary.

But some changes have been made regarding his power over the legislature, and the line of succession should he die or become incapacitated.

In the calling of a special session, the rules have been changed. Under the proposed constitution the Governor may call a special session and outline just what is to be considered. Nothing else can be acted upon by the legislature. The Governor also has the power to set a time limit on a special session, a power he does not have under the present document. He still must bring the Assembly together in Frankfort, unless "that should have become dangerous from an enemy or from contagious diseases."

plantings, etc. the Governor can call the early session.

Five key words in Section 10 "be absent from the state," have been removed from the old document, and their deletion prevents the Lt. Governor from taking over as Governor when the Governor is out of the state.

For years this has been a source of irritation and confusion to Governors who find themselves feuding with their Lt. Governors.

The new constitution, in the second paragraph of Section 10, makes provisions for naming a new Governor in case one should become incapacitated.

It is a new section, put in the proposed document after much debate in the Revision Assembly. It provides that the inability of a Governor to discharge his duties will be determined by a majority of the members of the Supreme Court of the Commonwealth upon a request and written certification by the Auditor, Attorney General, and doctor designated according to law. The Supreme Court (created in another article of the proposed constitution) is the final arbiter, determining the Governor's inability to serve and whether or not that inability ceases.

Both constitutions provide the Lt. Governor becomes Governor in cases when, for one of various reasons, the elected Governor can't serve.

Both also confer the next step of succession on the President Pro Tempore of the Senate.

tors go home, and a bill is vetoed. So long as an election does not intervene to change the makeup of the Houses, the session convening the next year gets the chance to override that veto.

Or, if the session is extended the additional 30 days as provided in another section of the draft, the legislators get the chance in the extra period to override the veto.

This change is expected to eliminate the huge log jam of bills allowed to pile up at the end of present sessions.

If adopted, the new constitution provides for the election of only four constitutional officers: Governor, Lt. Governor, Auditor and Attorney General. Made appointive or elective posts are Treasurer, Secretary of State, Clerk of the Court of Appeals (Supreme Court), and Secretary of Agriculture, as determined by law.

The Revision Assembly felt these offices were on the same level with Highway Commissioner, Finance Commissioner, etc. and permits turning them into appointive positions.

The only other election called for in this article of the draft is that of Commonwealth's Attorney. He is elected for an eight-year term, the same as judges under the new court system, and will receive an annual salary, no fees.

The General Assembly is reserved the right to abolish the job, or to curtail the term of office to four years.

READ SAYS FLOYD MAKES SMOOTH MEDICARE START

The Medicare health insurance program is off to a smooth start in the Floyd county area, according to Thomas L. Read, Social Security district manager, Pikeville, who has been keeping track of the progress made in getting the new program into operation.

Hospitals in this area are braced for some increase in the number of over-65 patients, but not an overwhelming number. Several hospital administrators in this general area have stated that there has been no scheduling of elective surgery for July or August in anticipation of Medicare, and — for the present — they do not expect occupancy of the hospital beds to go significantly above normal.

Four hospitals in the Floyd county area, with a total of 167 beds, have been certified eligible to participate in the Medicare program. These hospitals have been surveyed by the Kentucky state agency and found to meet the standards for participation in Medicare. These hospitals have also been found by the Public Health Service to be in compliance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

All participating hospitals have been fully informed concerning the procedures for admission and billing under Medicare. Admitting a Medicare beneficiary will be much like admitting a patient covered by a private health insurance identification card which was sent to him in the mail. It is for this reason extremely important that the patient have this card with him when he enters the hospital.

An individual who loses his identification card should not wait until he needs to use the card to apply for a new one — he should apply for a new card at once at the nearest Social Security office. All physicians in Floyd county have by now received personal copies of the Physicians Reference Guide, along with copies of the Medicare Handbook that is in the process of being mailed to the 19.1 million people over age 65 who are covered by the Medicare program. The Medicare Handbook for physicians describes the benefits payable for the nation's elderly people under the hospital insurance phase of the program, and the payments for doctor's bills and for other medical services covered under the voluntary program of medical insurance for which 9 out of 10 of those 65 and over have enrolled.

In Kentucky, the Blue Cross Corporation, Louisville, will be the intermediary for most participating Kentucky hospitals. When a beneficiary enters the hospital under the Medicare program, the hospital will immediately notify the intermediary, who will check with the Social Security Administration before notifying the hospital involved as to: (1) the patient's eligibility, (2) the number of hospital days he has remaining of the 90 days covered in each spell of illness, and (3) whether or not the patient has met the $40 deductible that is payable by the patient toward the hospital bills for each spell of illness. This check of Social Security's records will ordinarily take no more than 48 hours.

In Kentucky, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, Lexington, will receive and pay physicians' bills under the Medicare program, determining the "reasonable charges" that will be the basis of reimbursement. The first claims for payment under the voluntary medical insurance plan are not expected for a few days at least, Read said. This is because payment under the medical insurance phase of Medicare does not begin until after the patient has incurred expenses of at least $50 for services provided on July 1 or later.

The Cadillac car holds its value far beyond any other automobile at or near its price. Let your Cadillac dealer explain today why now, more than ever, it's great... going Cadillac!

There is one simple way to measure the worth of any other luxury car: compare it to the way a Cadillac keeps its value. For Cadillac is the grand champion in this most telling of all motor car tests—and at resale returns a higher percentage of its original cost than any other car built in the land. There are many reasons. The first is Cadillac quality—recognized wherever automobiles are known. Then there is Cadillac beauty and luxury—so advanced that the car retains its desirability long after others have lost their appeal. And there is Cadillac safety, performance, dependability and operating economy. What will your car be worth a year—or even three years—from now? If it's a Cadillac, the answer is predictably pleasant. Get the facts today from your authorized dealer. He's an expert in serving the world's most demanding motorists—and his interest in your complete satisfaction will continue throughout your ownership. Isn't it time you put a Cadillac in your life?
