NEW-JOB AID FUNDS SEEN NEXT MONTH

Floyd Among Areas Qualifying for Funds To Create New Jobs

A total of 909 areas of the nation will be qualified, effective July 1, for federal financial aid to help create new jobs in needy communities, Eugene P. Foley, assistant secretary of Commerce for Economic Development, announced this week. Fifty-nine Kentucky counties, including Floyd, will be eligible for public works grants and loans and business loans. Six will qualify for public works grants only.

The assistance, based chiefly on high unemployment or low family income, is provided by the Economic Development Administration, U.S. Department of Commerce.

EDA funds are available in the form of grants and loans to help finance public works and facilities needed to support existing industry and encourage new business development. Loans are also available for industrial and commercial projects which will open new and permanent jobs.

A total of 1,315—mainly counties and labor areas—have qualified for EDA help since last fall when legislation was enacted establishing the program. A number of areas were included because they were eligible under a previous redevelopment program.

NOT TO MENTION TEMPERATURE

Robins bouncing cheerily over the greensward in dead of winter, Frost in June. I'd say, Kentucky weather has a mercurial temperament.

DAMAGING DROUTH

And now a dry spell that's doing nothing and nobody any good. Nothing is growing. Why, one of my friends caught a 20-inch bass at Dewey Lake last Friday evening, and it hadn't grown more than an inch by Monday morning. In rainy seasons, or even at times when they thought maybe it might rain, I've had maybes to grow more than that, overnight.

On the other hand, Jailer Lawrence Hale says the light showers we had this week have hurt the cabbage. You know—giving them the big-head.

From the squirrel's point of view: Little acorns from great oaks grow.

MORE OF THE WEATHER

If there's any harm in indulging in banalities such as talk of the weather, my friend Jake Akers and I beg to be excused.

Down from Dwayne the other day, he recalled weather of the '90's when it was plumb wintry. Said he could tell me not only the date but the day of the week when a five-inch snow fell in 1894, in Carter county. Remembered it so well because it was his first trip to the city of Olive Hill, then a bustling metropolis of perhaps 200 and full of wonder to a country boy. He recalls riding homeward on horseback. STAGE PERSONALITY ON COLLEGE STAFF

Three faculty appointments for the high school enrichment program at Prestonsburg Community College have been announced by Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr., director of the college.

Joining the faculty for the summer will be Marshall Schneider in foreign languages, Miss Judy Warren in music and Miss Jeanne Jerrens in dramatic arts.

Mrs. Jerrens, who will be joining the faculty as a permanent member, comes to Prestonsburg with a variety of stage experience. She has a master's degree in directing from the Goodman Theatre in Chicago and has done advanced study at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York City and the Conservatoire of Paris, France.

As a professional actress, Mrs. Jerrens has appeared in several films and television shows, but the major part of her work has been on stage and includes 12 seasons of summer stock, nine off-Broadway shows and several Broadway shows. Twice she has been an understudy for Miss Julie Harris, and she played opposite Michael Redgrave in the Broadway production of "Tiger at the Gates."

As a director she has worked in professional summer stock and off-Broadway. She taught acting in the Opera Theatre Department of the famed Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

Mr. Schneider, whose major area is Spanish, received his A.B. degree from the City College of New York in 1962 and was granted an M.A. from the University of Connecticut in 1966. He is recently married.

Miss Warren, who worked with the cast of "The Pirates of Penzance" last year at the Jenny Wiley Amphitheatre, has degrees from Mt. Union College and the University of Kentucky. She is currently teaching at the Shenandoah Conservatory in Winchester, Virginia.

"These individuals are just an example of the fine personnel that we have either brought or are bringing to Prestonsburg to work with our area high school students in this enrichment program," Dr. Campbell commented.

COLLINS DIES OF INJURIES

Wayland Man, Hurt In KY 7 Wreck, Dies At Martin Hospital

Ervin Collins, Jr., 47 years old, of Wayland, died at 6 o'clock Saturday evening at the Beaver Valley hospital, Martin, of injuries sustained that afternoon when the auto in which he was riding wrecked on Rt. 7, 1 1/2 miles south of Wayland.

Also involved in the accident were three Knott countians: Cantrell Gibson, of Kite, driver of the car, Denzil Gibson, of Raven, owner of the car, and Hop Harris, of Topmost. Denzil Gibson was treated for minor injuries at Beaver Valley and released Monday.

Collins, a farmer, was a son of Mrs. Mousie Combs Collins, of Wayland, and the late Ervin Collins.

He is survived by one son, Donald Collins, of Iberia, Ohio; two daughters, Mrs. Muriel Gibbons and Miss Shirley Collins, both of Crestline, Ohio; two brothers, Lawrence and Raymond Collins, both of Wayland, and a sister, Mrs. Eva Amberliff, Dayton, Ohio.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday at 10 a.m. from the home of the victim's mother, ministers of the Regular Baptist Church officiating. Burial was made in the Collins cemetery at Wayland, Hall Brothers Funeral Home directing.

JUDGE HILL IN DISSENT

From Majority Opinion Of Appellate Court On November Voting

The Kentucky Court of Appeals last week held by a 6 to 1 vote that Kentuckians shall have an opportunity to vote on a new state constitution at the Nov. 8 election as provided by act of the General Assembly—and the lone dissenting vote was cast by Floyd county's Judge Edward P. Hill.

Judge Hill contended that provisions in the present Constitution for its revision and that the action of the Legislature in approving the work of the Constitution Revision Assembly and directing a vote on the new Constitution in November bypasses the means of revision clearly provided for by the existing constitution.

The majority ruling said the power of the people to change the Constitution is fundamental under the state bill of rights, but rejected the claim that revision methods specifically prescribed by the present Constitution are the only steps that are permissible.

Argued Judge Hill: "The authors of our Constitution outlined in section 253 definite and specific steps for its revision. This is the one and only mode of revision contained therein. Had the authors intended any other mode of revision, they would have said so. Had they intended its revision in 'any manner as they (the people) may deem proper,' as is urged by appellees, section 253 would have been an indulgence in idle curiosity and speculation . . .

"The proponents of this Act apparently contend that the legislature is 'the people.' I (See Story No. 10, Page 5)

60 YEARS OF SERVICE END

Dr. Mark Dempsey, dean of Floyd county doctors, died Sunday at his home at Garrett after a brief illness at the age of 91.

A practicing physician in the West Virginia and Kentucky hill regions for 60 years, he never retired. A back injury suffered at his home ended his active work, only a few weeks ago.

A native of Logan county, W. Va., he came to this county in 1924, practicing his profession first in the county with the late Dr. M. V. Wicker in the Elk Horn Coal Corporation towns of Garrett and Wayland. He had resided at Garrett since that time.

Dr. Dempsey's practice extended up the creeks and hollows of this and adjoining Knott and Magoffin counties. At first he rode horseback across the hills; later with the improvement of roads, traveling by auto but never driving one. His generosity and his sympathy for the underprivileged were proverbial in hundreds of households over the area of his practice.

The doctor was a third cousin of Jack Dempsey, boxing's famed Mannassa Mauler, but he never sought to impress anybody with that fact. "A lot of people were kin to Jack," he dryly commented.

A teetotaler, and that included the use of tobacco, Dr. Dempsey, though a New Dealer-Democrat who "made no bones about it," often declared neither the state nor federal government should allow any person one cent of

BOARD EMPLOYS 479 FOR 1966-'67 TERM

The Floyd County Board of Education last Saturday employed at the recommendation of County Superintendent Charles Clark, 479 teachers, and these, the superintendent said, represent a complete teaching staff, with the exception of 31 others employed under Public Law I for remedial reading and other work financed by federal funds.

As yet unplaced are about 50 other qualified teachers who have applied for positions in the school system, Clark said. The recommendation of the teachers was made on the condition that some of those nominated and employed procure certificates to teach in the particular position to which assigned and to comply with all regulations of the State Department of Education and the State and County Boards. Persons eligible for emergency certification only are not considered to be employed, since their proper certification must be procured before the opening of the school term.

The Superintendent and Board of Education reserved the right to transfer any and all personnel employed from one position to another as they deem necessary for the proper operation of the school system.

The list of teachers follows: Bonanza—Edna Saunders, Josephine Spradlin, Josephine Whitaker; Neeley—Walter L. Mann; Home Branch—Curtis Jervis, Thurman Sellards; Clark—Mabel Blackburn; Upper Cow Creek—Norma Stepp; Daniels Creek—Cinda Justice; Tram—Jessie T. Honaker; Mare Creek—Emma G. Hartley; Banner—Elizabeth Bailey; Prater—David Hinchman, Mrs. Gladys Conn, Mildred Brooks; Spruce Pine—Robert Jones, Jo Allyn Howell, Mazie Tackett; Mink Branch—Hazel Hamilton; Head of Branham's Creek—Georgia S. Hall; Forks of Toler—Charles Goodman, Leo Roberts; Left Toler—Jim Spurlock; Right Toler—Milford Stevens; Arkansas—Velva W. MAY CHANGE 'NEEDY' RULE

Legislation Revision On Land Improvement Is Indicated by Burke

The requirement of the Kentucky 203 program that priority shall be given to needy landowners in a land improvement undertaking such as has been initiated on Middle Creek may not be ironclad, it was indicated recently in a letter from Fred B. Burke, special assistant to the federal co-chairman of the Appalachian Regional Commission.

Writing Congressman Perkins in response to an inquiry from H. D. Fitzpatrick, Jr., of Prestonsburg, Mr. Burke said:

"Most of the projects in Kentucky call for the improving of lands adjacent to reservoirs or watershed projects." (See Story No. 4, Page 8)

"But, Officer, I Didn't . . ."

VISITOR FROM OHIO GETS CITATION HERE

Jimmie Justice, a visitor to Prestonsburg from Warsaw, Ind., was halted last Wednesday morning by Policeman C. W. Booth and given a ticket, for no apparent reason.

He, his wife and three children were driving along Lake Drive, en route to another part of the county to visit relatives, and he had broken no traffic regulation. But the summons came, rather gruffly, from the officer: "Let's see your driver's license."

All his papers were shipshape. He had not run a traffic light, had not been guilty of speeding or of any other infraction. But Policeman Booth handed him a citation. "I never had a citation in my life," stammered the confused visitor. But he had one now.

Then the officer suggested that Justice read what he had given him. On the line of description of offense were the words, "Welcome to Prestonsburg."

Justice was the first motorist to be lucky enough to be stopped by the officer in a tourist promotion program being staged by the Prestonsburg Chamber of Commerce, with the cooperation of a number of business firms. He was handed an official greeting from the Chamber, signed by Homer D. Neeley, president, and informing him and his family that they were invited to enjoy these facilities and favors without cost.

DEPT. HEADS ARE LISTED

Young Succeeds Lawson As Business Manager, Campbell Announces

Several administrative appointments at Prestonsburg Community College have been announced by Dr. Henry A. Campbell, director.

Matthew P. Young has been named business manager and registrar. He succeeds Randall Lawson, who has been appointed coordinator of the High School Enrichment Program, sponsored by the Big Sandy Area Development Council.

Chairmen have also been named to head the recently organized academic divisions at the college. Those appointed were Gus Kalos, Humanities division; Joseph Jefferies, Division of Physical Sciences; Ray Reed, Division of Biological Sciences; and Larry Stanley, Social Studies Division.

Mr. Young, who has taught in the Business Administration department at the college here for the past two years, is from Louisville. He received his B.S. degree from Eastern Kentucky State College in 1953 and his M.A. degree from the University of Kentucky in 1961. Before coming to Prestonsburg he taught in Franklin county, Paul Blazer high school, Ashland, and Morehead State College. He is an active Mason, a member of the Kiwanis Club, and the First Methodist Church.

Mr. Kalos, whose division includes the departments of art, music, English, and modern foreign languages, received his degrees from the University of Kentucky and Indiana University. He has taught at Prestonsburg for one year. He also serves as minister of music at Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church here.

The Division of Physical Sciences is comprised of those departments in the math-physics areas. Mr. Jefferies, a native of Liberty, Kentucky, received his A.B. degree from the University of Kentucky in 1960 and his M.S. (See Story No. 6, Page 8)

DEDICATION SERVICE HELD HERE, SUNDAY

The congregation of the First Presbyterian Church here was joined Sunday afternoon by church leaders and others in the laying of the cornerstone and the dedication of the new church structure.

The cornerstone was laid by Thomas Burchett, Jr., grand master of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky Masons. Assisting in the Masonic rites were Davie J. Smith, Corbin, deputy grand master; James B. Patrick, Louisville, grand senior warden; John W. Chandler, Marion, Ky., grand junior warden; Carroll M. Curtis, Mount Olivet, Ky., acting grand chaplain; Elmon B. Davis, Flat Gap, grand marshal; Leonard Hall, Neon, assistant grand tiler; John W. Hall, Martin, past grand master; and Cliff Wilder, Louisville, grand lodge committeeman.

At 4 o'clock the dedication of the church was held. The music program was rendered by Mrs. E. R. Burke, at the organ which was recently dedicated to the memory of the late Alan Reed, chairman of the first building committee organized for the church construction project. The invocation was given by the Rev. Adrian J. Roberts, pastor of the First Methodist Church here, and the Rev. Coy Rigney, pastor of the First Church of God, brought greetings from the ministers of Prestonsburg. J. Richard Cummings presented the church choir in the anthem, "How Lovely Is Thy Dwelling Place."

The Rev. Gordon L. Corbett, of Lexington, delivered the dedicatory sermon prior to the presentation of memorials by James E. Goble. The presentation of the church structure was made by Powell Butler, representative of the contractor. Acceptance of the memorials and the church was acknowledged by Marvin E. Music, Jr. for the deacons and by Rainley White for the Session. The Act of Dedication was led by Miss Katherine Reed, C. C. W., the people and minister responding. The Rev. Heinrich B. Eiler, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Ashland, gave the dedicatory prayer.

Following the dedication, a reception was held at the church, with women of the church serving about 200 persons.

The Presbyterian Church was organized here Dec. 31, 1899 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Layne. The first trustees were Dr. Ralph Herman Leete, Dr. George W. Gardner and O. P. Powers. In 1902-'03 the first church was built. Ground for the new building was broken May 23, 1965.

TOTAL FLOYD ASSESSMENT $93,835,202

Equipment Evaluation Cut $2 Million But Gain Realized on Intangibles

Floyd countians will pay taxes next fall on a total assessment of $93,835,202—roughly, five times the assessment total of 1965.

This total was reached by the Board of Supervisors after its work on the first recapitulation of the assessment by the Tax Commissioner. The first recap total was $81,410,529.

Although a net gain of more than $12,000,000 resulted from the work of the supervisors, they reduced the assessment on drilling, mining and construction equipment by around $2,000,000—from the $6,294,208 listed by the Tax Commissioner to $4,230,462.

That loss was almost regained by an increase of approximately $2,000,000 on tangible personal property. But the $12,000,000 overall gain made in the final recap apparently was mainly realized on intangibles.

The final assessment figures follow, with those shown in the first recapitulation of the assessment appearing in parentheses:

EKSC MOVES MARTIN UP

Eastern Native Named College Vice-President; Hazard Man, New Dean

The Eastern Kentucky State College board of regents, meeting in Richmond, named Dr. Henry G. Martin, native of Floyd county, vice-president, for Student Affairs and appointed Donald R. Feltner dean of public affairs.

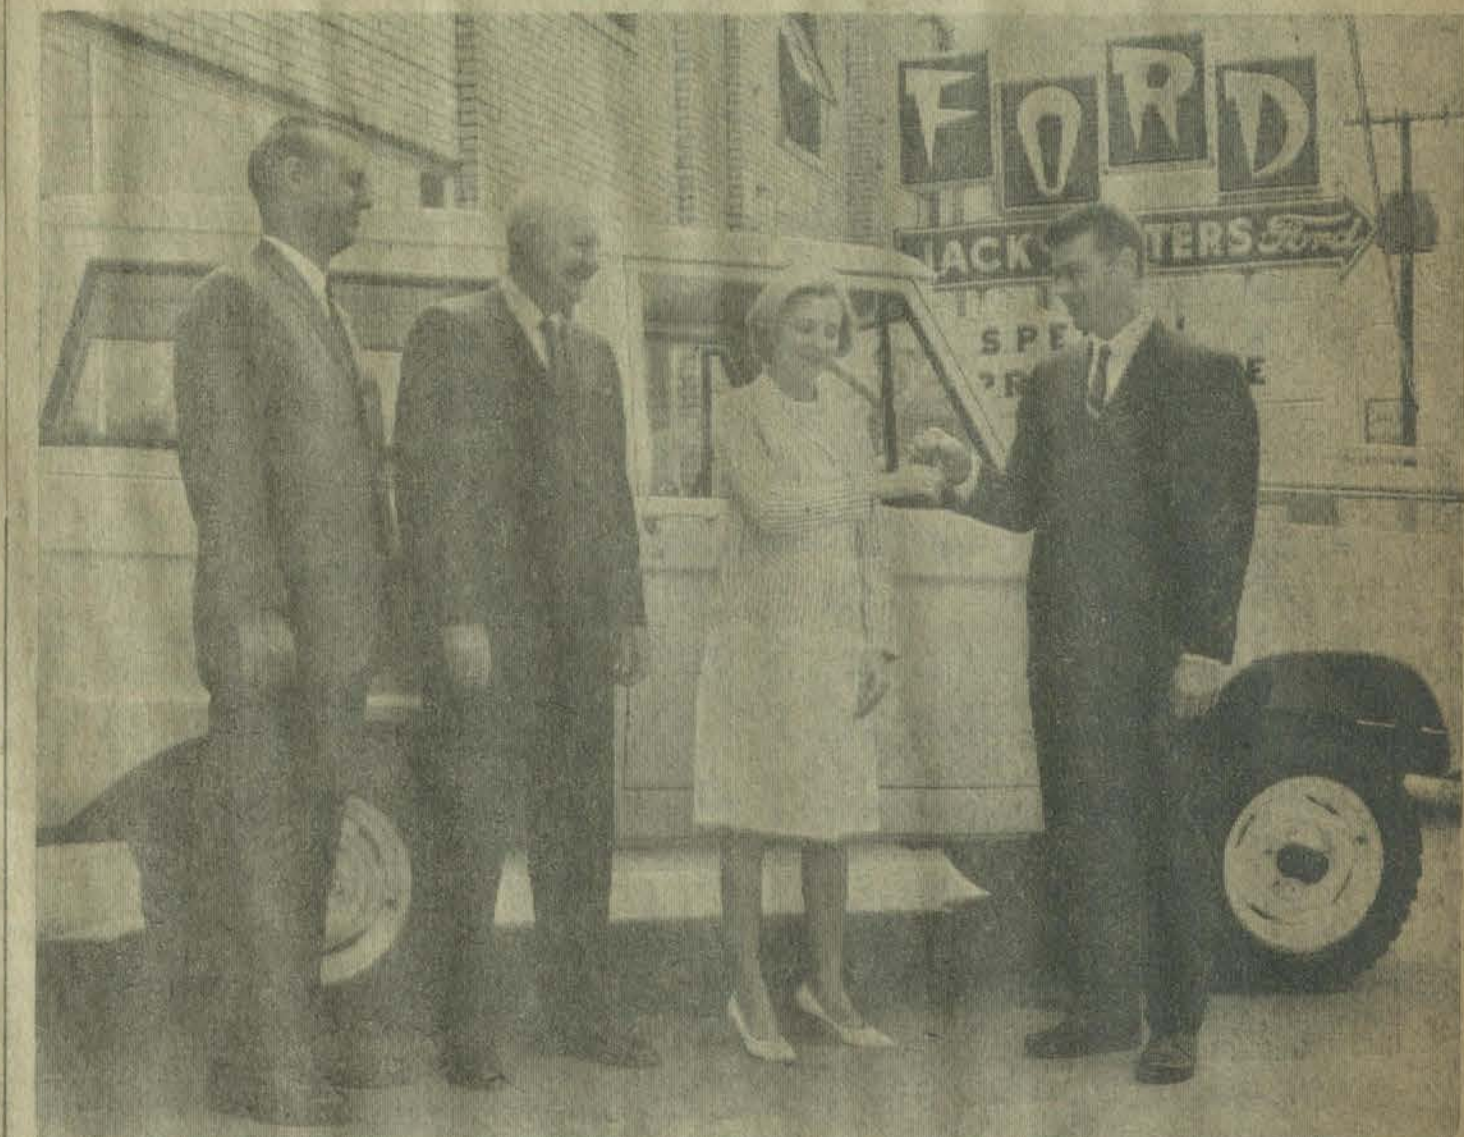

Martin, who has served as dean of students since 1961, will become the second vice-president in Eastern's new administrative organizational structure. Dr. Thomas Fisher Stovall was earlier named vice-president for Academic Affairs and dean of the faculties.

Feltner has been Coordinator of Public Affairs since 1961 and had served since 1956 as director of publicity and publications.

Both appointments are effective July 1, President Robert R. Martin said.

Martin, the new vice-president for student affairs, joined the Eastern faculty in 1955 as director of the elementary laboratory school. A native of Eastern and a son of W. S. Martin, he has taught at East Tennessee State University, and has served as teacher, principal, supervisor, atten-

Mrs. Helen B. Wells, administrative assistant for the Big Sandy Area Community Action Program, was presented a 1966 Ford Bronco for use in area projects. Bob Terrell, truck manager, and Sid Beauchamp, field manager, of Ford Motor Company, along with Dean Walters, local Ford dealer, made the presentation to Mrs. Wells.

Mrs. Wells' projects cover the counties of Floyd, Pike, Johnson, Martin, Magoffin and Lawrence.

Ford Motor Company has extended the Ford Bronco to Mrs. Wells for her use through September of next year. This is one of 24 Broncos that Ford has made available for community and area projects in the Appalachian area.

The presentation was made at Jack Walters Ford, Inc., Prestonsburg.

FOLEY VIEWS $346,200 GRANT ON PARK VACATION COMPLEX

Last week's approval of a $346,200 grant to the state of Kentucky was described by Eugene P. Foley, assistant secretary of commerce for economic development, as a fund to help build a vacation resort complex at Jenny Wiley State Park.

The funds from the Economic Development Administration, U.S. Department of Commerce, will go to the Department of State Parks. The applicant will invest $230,800 for a total project cost of $577,000.

The project will consist of a recreation center, vacation cottages and a swimming pool. It will result in seven year-round jobs and 27 six-to-eight-month jobs.

EDA noted, in announcing approval of the grant:

1. Jenny Wiley State Park is a mountain resort located on Dewey Lake, a Corps of Engineers impoundment of 1,200 acres. The 1,940 acres of park land were made available to the Department of Parks under a long-term lease. A scenic parkway encircles the lake.

2. In applying for the grant, the state noted that the Salversville-Pikeville portion of the Mountain Parkway, now completed, provides swift, pleasant travel to the park. The state has invested approximately $2.5 million for development and road work at the park.

3. Floyd county has a nine percent unemployment rate and a median family income of $2,802.

Two Begin Canoe Trip, Allen to Louisville

Two cousins began Wednesday a trip by canoe from Allen to Louisville, where they reside.

Sears married Leona Layne, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Layne, of Langley, and both are nephews of Mrs. Pershing Bentley, of that community.

IN APPRECIATION

We wish to express our appreciation for the kindness and sympathy of friends and neighbors who made our recent burden bearable. To the many who brought food, flowers or other articles, to the singers, the Carter and Callahan Funeral Home, to all who assisted in any way — accept this as our feeble attempt to say, "Thanks." READY FOR MEDICARE—Chalmer H. Frazier, administrator of Prestonsburg General hospital, signs an agreement which qualifies the hospital for the Medicare program, with State Health Commissioner Russell Teague (left) and Maurice D. Dewberry, of the Social Security Administration. Among the other five hospitals certified in Dr. Teague's office was Our Lady of the Way at Martin.

REED TELLS OPERATION OF MEDICARE PROGRAM

This is the second in a series of articles by Thomas L. Reed, social security district manager, Pikeville, on how Medicare will work when it begins in July. The information is based on "Your Medicare Handbook," the guide that will be issued to all Medicare beneficiaries during June.

There are two kinds of health insurance under Medicare: hospital insurance, which helps pay for certain covered hospital and hospital-related services; and medical insurance, which helps pay your doctor bills.

You may receive services covered by Medicare's hospital insurance in a participating hospital, an extended care facility (a skilled nursing home or a special part of a hospital), or in your home from a home health agency such as the visiting nurses association. The doctor or person arranging for these services for you will know whether an institution or agency is participating in the program.

To participate in the Medicare program, hospitals, extended care facilities and home health agencies must meet specified standards which demonstrate that they provide high quality health care. In addition, they must agree not to charge the Medicare beneficiary for services paid for by the program and they must abide by Title VI of the Civil Rights Act, which prohibits discrimination based on race, color, or national origin.

Hospital insurance payments will be made directly to the hospital or other organizations furnishing the services, by one of the organizations, such as Blue Cross or a private insurance company, designated to handle such claims. You show your health insurance card when you are asked about payment arrangements by a hospital, extended care facility, or home health agency. For example, if you go to a hospital, you will ordinarily show your health insurance card when you are admitted and will probably be asked to sign a form the hospital can use to make its claim for payment.

You will be notified whenever payment has been made for services you have received. The notice will show the number of days of care you have left in that "spell of illness" or the number of home health visits still available.

Benefits under the hospital insurance program are paid during a certain period of time, called a "spell of illness." This does not refer to any particular illness you may have, nor does it refer to a single stay in a hospital or extended care facility.

Your first "spell of illness" begins on the first day (after June 30, 1966) you receive covered hospital or extended care services. It ends when you have not been in any hospital or extended care facility for 60 consecutive days. Then a new "spell of illness" can begin the next time you receive covered hospital or extended care services.

Most people will not have to bother about trying to keep the details of this rule in mind. Usually, if you enter a hospital or extended care facility, you will not stay long enough to use all of your benefits. When you use hospital or extended care benefits, the Social Security Administration will keep track of your "spell of illness" for you and give you information on how many "benefit" days you have left.

The next article will describe what services are covered when you go to a hospital.

TIDBITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

"THE LION AND THE LIZARD"

As far back as I can remember, I was attracted by old-house sites, where a few stones or bricks and maybe a cellar remained of what used to be somebody's home. Though the Jackson Purchase was not open to settlement until 1819, by the time I arrived, in 1888, already there were dozens of old-house places in the Fidelity area. The earlier inhabitants usually built log cabins, often very simple ones, and then, as better times and a larger family came along, built a larger log house or made a tremendous step forward and built a frame house. Why, across the broad creek bottom, in plain sight from our tobacco barn on the hill south of our house, stood the first brick house on the whole side of our county. Two years ago, when I went by the old place, I found it deserted and gradually becoming a haunt for bats and lizards and snakes, our American denizens of deserted places.

In our small field south of our house had stood, at some time before my time, a cabin that had been home for a family or more since quite early Purchase days. In addition to the remains of the chimney there was, all my childhood, a fine wild plum thicket there, descended from the trees or maybe a single tree that the former owners has set out. In broad open daylight I was not afraid to go to that thicket in season and gather plums, or blackberries in neighboring abandoned areas of the field. But there was something slightly weird about the place when night began to come on. There were no graves near our farm, hence I never learned to be much afraid of graveyards. But the sites of old houses seemed haunted.

Just to the side of our orchard had been an Indian encampment, for there were thousands of flint chips and some pretty well-preserved arrows and other Indian relics. Long before my own time, a cabin had stood at the same place, so that chips of flint, broken bits of old blue china, and rusting pieces of metal were all together, especially after a hard rain had removed some of the poor soil from them. And across the creek had been a large Indian mound, near which an ancient house stood down into my own time. That old mound was in a bushy place and seemed a little too scary to visit alone. Only after I was nearly grown did I venture across the creek to probe in the rich soil of the old mound, hoping to find some arrowheads or other relics. But long cultivation of that mound had almost leveled it down, and apparently this plowing and burning for years had also destroyed the artifacts that I was seeking.

When I grew up and bought WALDEN, I was intrigued along with the chapter called "Former Inhabitants; and Winter Visitors," for I discovered that Thoreau had felt romantically toward these old house sites, even though they had sheltered only humble or transient people. His own cabin at Walden Pond had been built largely from a dismantled shack that had been the successive home for Irish railroad workers, a very humble and inadequate shelter but home, nevertheless, to some pioneers in our strange America.

My study of ornithology has taken me across hundreds of farms in south-central Kentucky, nearly all of which, certainly the larger ones, settlers, slaves, or prominent big land-owners all lie now away over in the pastures or in a young forest, far from the modern homes and the highways. Since 1938, when I began my study of the changing bird life of the Mammoth Cave

National Park, I have been more and more impressed with the signs of people who used to live where now the wild is taking over again. Alone or with companions, I cannot help re-people the young forests with the boys and girls who made that area their homes, and sometimes I feel almost as spooky as I did when I visited the old house site in the pasture south of my boyhood home or dug in the broken flint and pottery over by the orchard.

BEANE SAYS NO SHORTAGE

Of Mine Labor Because Of Relief Program; Says Many Benefits Result

C. E. Bean, president of the United Mine Workers, District 30, said this week that the only shortage of coal miners in Eastern Kentucky is for highly skilled workers such as electricians.

Bean said the work-experience program for unemployed fathers has nothing to do with that shortage.

"Some of those in the program are not qualified for work in the mines," he said.

"Those miners working in it are mostly unskilled. They would accept jobs back in the mines any time they could get them."

Cloyd McDowell, president of the Harlan County Coal Operators Association, said last Thursday that mines are faced with a manpower shortage caused by federal "give-away programs," particularly the "Happy Pappies" program.

McDowell said automation cut down the demand to less than 100 men for a mine that formerly employed 400. Still, he said, Harlan county mines alone are running 150 to 300 men short, with coal production at 60 to 70 percent of capacity when it should be at 100 percent.

Bean said the program is not causing a manpower shortage but "is alleviating hundreds of cases of distress."

Ky. Highlands Folk Festival To Be Held At Amphitheatre

Folks like Joan Baez, Pete Seeger and Burl Ives might have plenty to sing about if Eastern Kentuckians and the Jenny Wiley Drama Association have anything to say about it. The Drama Association is looking around for little-known folk songs which some day may well be included in the repertory of the nation's top folk singers.

The search is part of a folk promotion the Association is sponsoring, highlighted by a three-day celebration, the Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival, to be held June 24-26 at the Jenny Wiley State Park Amphitheatre. Performers from all over the state will be there to promote Kentucky's heritage.

Actually, there will be much more on the program than the singing of folk songs. Objectives of the festival are to encourage the use of folk songs, music, dances, legends and other lore in Eastern Kentucky, and the Jenny Wiley people plan to go all out to do just that. Besides performances, there will be an arts and crafts display from the Appalachian region, informal interchange of folkways and just plain remembrances of the good old days of yore.

Everyone is invited, and if you want to perform, alone or with a group, you can get an application form by writing to Mrs. Edith James, Director of Program, Jenny Wiley Drama Association, Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653. For accommodations information, write Mrs. James or Jenny Wiley State Park, Prestonsburg.

SIX-COUNTY GRANT ANNOUNCED MONDAY

Sidney H. Woolner, acting regional director, Middle Atlantic Regional Office (OEO), announced Monday a grant of $160,165 to Floyd, Knott, Leslie, Perry, Letcher and Magoffin counties for a three-month four component grant.

The applicant agency is Alice Lloyd College, and the local share of the grant is $12,544.

This four-part program provides for a Cultural Center program, an Enrichment Centers program, a Family Horizons Project, and an Eyesight program.

The Cultural Center, located at Alice Lloyd College, will present cultural programs for residents in 32 communities in the six-county area. The college will be responsible for administration, coordination and servicing of the other three components. This program will employ four professionals and seven non-professionals.

The 32 centers in the six-counties are designed to upgrade skills and initiative through general remedial work, to develop creative talents, to promote cooperation and teamwork through supervised recreation and to promote community organization through involving the parents and developing their interest in their children, their schools and their community. Benefiting 1,000 children and 500 parents, the staff will comprise 17 professionals and 66 non-professionals.

The Family Horizons program will endeavor to increase and enlarge the outlook and "horizons" of families in the most isolated areas of the six-county area. One worker will devote the summer to five or 10 families, gaining their confidence, determining their needs, and making them aware of what is being done in this area in which they can participate. This will entail the employment of 12 professional employees.

The Eyesight program will consist of eyesight screening and complete examinations where necessary, and the provision of glasses to eligible participants of OEO funded programs. This program will utilize the services of one professional.

Staff director for this four-part program has not yet been selected.

Mrs. Effie May has returned from Columbus, Ohio, where she attended a Bible Convention and also visited her sister, Miss Hazel Collins.

Mrs. W. H. Collins, of Auxier, who is 84, went fishing at Dewey Lake, Saturday. She caught a nice string of bluegills.

Martha Jane Collins, daughter of Kimble and Maggie Collins, of Auxier, is back home after spending a few days in the Prestonsburg General hospital. She is doing nicely.

Mrs. Bill Music has been sick but is improving some.

Mr. and Mrs. Meredith Spurlock, of Prestonsburg, was visiting Mr. and Mrs. Patrick May here recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Arson Crider visited Mrs. W. H. Collins here recently.

The U.S. Economic Development Administration has announced that Dr. Raymond Wells, 25, a native of Floyd county, will start practice in Inez on July 1, the day after he completes his internship at Baptist hospital, Nashville, Tennessee.

He will become Martin county's first fulltime physician in more than a decade. Residents now have to travel more than 20 miles over mountain roads to get to the nearest hospital.

The young physician will have rentfree use of a new $87,000 clinic at Inez to be built with the help of a $69,000 grant from the EDA.

Dr. Wells became acquainted with Martin county's need for medical service when he worked there as a college student on a tuberculosis eradication project.

Inez is one of the communities visited by President Johnson in April, 1964, during an anti-poverty inspection trip to Indiana, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia.

Last December, Martin county had an unemployment rate of 12.3 percent, three times the national level, according to the U.S. Labor Department.

In addition to the severe unemployment problem, more than half of the 2,215 families in Martin county were living on less than $3,000 a year.

NATURE TRAILS

By RUFUS M. REED

If you live in a town or a village and you want to study the ways of the chimney swifts, all you need to do is to look up at the sky in the afternoon and you'll see them flying and hear their chattering. But you'll not see or hear whippoorwills around town. You'll have to go far back in the wooded country — the wider the woods, the better your chances of hearing them — and you will have to go after dark.

I wanted to get a close-up shot to hear the whippoorwill. So I drove up a rural highway some eight miles, to a place where I had once seen whippoorwills fluttering across the road in the glare of my car's headlights.

I arrived at this place about 9 p.m. and parked beside the road. I got out and stood, listening. In less than a minute, a whippoorwill cut loose suddenly about fifty feet from where I was standing. It began singing above the highway, at the top of a high road cut, and I knew it was now doing its nightly stint of song on the ground. I closed my eyes and gave my whole attention to the bird's song, trying hard to catch its every tone and inflection and absorb the wild melody. At that distance, I could catch the throaty "tock" sound the bird made between the calls. Some say the bird makes a "chuck" sound but this one uttered a throaty tocking sound and then it sang the strange and plaintive song in three parts.

The bird began the song by a soft, melodious, rolling chant which said, "Weep-poor," and not "whip-poor." Then there was a split-second pause before the bird sent its loud and clear ringing "will!" resounding over the countryside. It put all the stress and power of its voice on that one word, "will!" It came out high, loud and shrill and echoed and echoed from the distant hills and seemed to rise and swirl far over the valley.

I stood stockstill about 15 minutes listening to that bird. As I stood there, I thought how the natives of the region rever the whippoorwill and some regard it with a superstitious awe. It is a sign of death in the family, they say, for the whippoorwill to come into the yard and sing. Nobody will dare to kill a whippoorwill, for its spirit will come back to haunt the killer and he'll hear ghostly calls of whippoorwill the rest of his days.

The bird's return from the south to our region in the spring is a big event and the news is broadcast by word of mouth. Persons tell their neighbors about hearing the first whippoorwill, saying with much fervor, "I heard the first whippoorwill last night."

This bird is indeed cloaked in an air of mystery. Its ways are uncanny, to say the least. It is a bird of the deep, shadowed night woods. In its ways and its strange song there is something of the loneliness and brooding of the eternal hills. Even the bird's comings and goings are cloaked in silence and mystery. It swoops down on noiseless wings to the garden or to the chimney corner to sing, and its lonesome cries sometimes bring tears to those who are weighed down with sorrow. The ways of this strange bird, its looks and appearance are enough to incite curiosity and awe. The bird builds no nest but lays two eggs in the old, brown leaves in some deep, impenetrable mountain fastness. The female on the nest blends so well with the brown leaves and the lights and shadows of the woods it is almost impossible to spot her, and if the intruder ventures too near, she will flutter away like something stricken, dragging her wings to decoy the intruder away from her young. If one is lucky enough to find the little ones, they will look like large, reddish-brown moths covered with fuzz.

And if one views an adult whippoorwill, he'll see a bird with whiskers like a cat and large, round, liquid eyes that peer curiously.

No doubt some of the superstitious beliefs about the whippoorwill hark back to the time when people believed they stole into the goat herds at night and milked them. So superstition has lacked onto their tribe a name they scarcely deserve. The Goat-suckers.

To go back to the whippoorwill first heard singing at the top of the road cut, I took a notion to slip up closer, and with the rays of my flashlight, I hoped to get a look at it. It kept right on singing, permitting me to move closer. But its tone began to change and when I got too near, it got its song all mixed up and began to sing, "Weep-pheep-powill!" Then I stopped and caught a glimpse of it. At each song, it was bowing like a stage singer and with all the grace and charm of a prima donna. I got too close and it stopped suddenly.

Then a second whippoorwill cut loose, about 100 feet up the road. This bird's song was loud, clear and shrill and had an entirely different pitch and tone from that of the first singer. I listened a few moments, and then I made a most amazing discovery. Not only was this bird a fine singer, he was also an expert ventriloquist! Here is the way he rendered his song: The first two syllables were sung in a soft, melodious chant as, "weep-poor-" and these came from the exact spot where the bird was sitting and bowing. But not so with the "will" note! It seemed to be thrown out a distance of about 40 feet or more from where the bird sat and it sounded as if two birds were singing the same song, in two parts, the first one singing, "weep-poor," and the second one adding "will" about 40 feet away!

This was the most unusual thing I ever heard and I tried to figure it out. Only one bird was doing the singing, of course, but the "will" note positively echoed and swirled from a different place than the first two notes of the song. This whippoorwill had the powers of a trained ventriloquist. It seemed he simply tossed the sound of "will" a distance of some 40 feet and then it seemed to bound up from the earth with a loud, shrill "will," and it echoed against the distant peaks.

I concluded this particular whippoorwill is a master vocalist, a ventriloquist of no mean accomplishment. His mouth is big and loud and his tongue sharp and shrill. His call, dropping down on the still, night air, has the power to vibrate the deep silence of the dark-shadowed woods and to penetrate the human heart and stir the deep wells of sorrow hidden therein.

SPORTS AFIELD

By TED KESTING

Bass fishing with surface lures is certainly the most sport; it is also certainly — especially when done with fly-rod poppers — the method that will get most strikes when bass are feeding shallow. But unfortunately, during a certain percentage of the time—high in some places, low in others—it simply won't work; will result in no strikes whatever.

Mid-depth fishing is the method that a great majority use most of the time; it's quite simple to do and lets anybody hook almost all his fish, if he'll just remember to set his hook well (except for those extremely rare days when we all feel bass plucking lightly and fail to hook most of them).

However, there's a great part of the time—over nine tenths of the daylight hours in midsummer—when either topwater or mid-depth fishing, in most places, will produce no more than a rare, sort of accidental and generally tiny bass.

"What does the fishermen of moderate experience do then?" asks Jason Lucas, Angling Editor of Sports Afield Magazine. The whole secret of nearly always making a good catch when "they're not hitting" is to find the deep spots where they're lying, and to face a hard fact, this is not easy.

The big question is, how deep will bass be? Generally, as deep as they can go without drowning. Hey, some will say, a fish can't drown! But that's what it amounts to, since he can die rapidly in the water from lack of oxygen—for just the same reason that a man dies if long underwater.

Since this pertains to the most advanced form of bass fishing—deep stuff in both senses of the word—we must discuss a peculiar phenomenon called the thermocline, something all fishermen should know about but few do. For fishing below a thermocline can get you no more fish of any species than you'd catch on your living-room floor. Briefly, it means that in summer only, on a lake of about average size and type, there are an upper layer of warmer water with plenty of oxygen in it and a lower, colder layer so devoid of it that a fish lowered there in a net would die even more quickly than if you tossed him up on shore. The upper layer is called the epilimnion; the lower, the hypolimnion—and there is no misunderstanding whatever about what these are like.

The trouble is that the position of the thermocline, below which fish can't live, will vary. Rarely, after stiff offshore winds have lasted some time, it may be only six feet down or so. Do not waste much time in fishing below 30 feet or so if you're getting no strikes, since, at the time, the thermocline may be above that. You'll find nearly all the fish just above the thermocline, since that's the coolest water in the epilimnion.

The fastest way to find the thermocline is by use of an expensive electronic thermometer, watching the dial as you lower the probe. You can find it more slowly by lowering a number of times a much cheaper registering thermometer—the kind you reset with a little magnet.

Then a second whippoorwill cut loose, about 100 feet up the road. This bird's song was loud, clear and shrill and had an entirely different pitch and tone from that of the first singer. I listened a few moments, and then I made a most amazing discovery. Not only was this bird a fine singer, consider this argument untenable. But if the proponents are correct in this contention and the legislature is vested with the unrestricted power ostensibly bestowed by section 4, then the provisions of the Constitution pertaining to revision are completely meaningless and useless. On this theory the legislature could from time to time alter or reform the Constitution in any manner it saw fit . . . Has this court been usurping the power of the legislature for generations by declaring legislative acts unconstitutional? The majority contended that "so long as the people have due and proper notice and opportunity to acquaint themselves with any revision, and make their choice directly by a free and popular election, their will is supreme, and it is to be done."

From a practical standpoint, said the majority, the intent of framers of the present Constitution "is more than satisfied" by the procedure followed by the legislature and the CRA. In fact, they said, it "goes even further" than requirements of Section 253 (revision by the convention method). "News and information are disseminated faster and more efficiently today than was anticipated when the Constitution was drafted (in 1890-91)," the opinion said. "But even more significant is the fact the people need not rely on a representative to speak for them. They participate directly and individually. Each person may cast his vote for or against the adoption of the proposed constitution knowing full well what it says. 'Another thing of significance is that until he casts his vote the document is as nothing. Only a majority vote of the people can give it force and effect.'"

BANNER

Miss Barker's room held a banquet for the eighth grade class of the Banner school, May 20. The Hawaiian motif was used. At the bottom of the steps was a grass hut and on either side of the steps stood very good facsimiles of palm trees. Guests were greeted at the door by Regina Hamilton and Kathy Smith who carried leis of rainbow hues and placed one around the neck of each person who entered. The white-covered tables had bouquets of pink peonies and were lighted by pink candles. Members of the eighth grade class and their parents were honored guests. Anna Rose Click, a member of the seventh grade, gave the welcoming address. The seventh grade led the singing of "My Old Kentucky" and "It's a Grand Old Flag" after which the Rev. Fred McGinnis gave the devotional.

Those who prepared and served the meal were Mrs. Martin Holbrook, Mrs. Sereda Brown, Dickie Akers, Maggie Akers, Regina Hamilton and Kathy Smith.

Suppose you use postal cards for direct mail advertising. Five thousand cards will cost you $200.

Forget the cost of printing and addressing the cards—but remember they alone cost $200.

Why do we suggest 5,000? Because that is almost the exact number of copies of the Floyd County Times that go to subscribers each week. (We mention 5,000 subscribers—only a fraction of the number who read The Times, weekly. The most authoritative study yet made shows that at least 1-3 persons read each copy of a weekly newspaper. So at least 20,000 read The Floyd County Times every week of the year.)

Venereal Disease A Serious National Problem, Says AMA

Venereal disease is spreading so rapidly that it now represents this nation's most urgent communicable disease problem.

VD is hitting particularly hard among teenagers and young adults, according to the American Medical Association.

The venereal diseases are infecting about two Americans a minute—3,000 a day, or 1,100,000 a year. Cases of infectious syphilis have almost tripled in this country in the past five years. More than a million new cases of gonorrhea are developing annually.

VD can blind, cripple, and even kill.

The ravages of venereal diseases are all needless tragedy, says the AMA, because both syphilis and gonorrhea can be avoided. If contracted, they can be cured by prompt medical treatment.

The cure for both diseases—penicillin—has been available since 1943. Any family physician or public health clinic can administer prompt treatment.

Venereal disease is caused by intimate personal contact.

Complacency, ignorance, and a free-and-easy attitude toward moral standards are partly responsible for the spread of VD; the increasing use of alcohol, especially among young people, also plays a role.

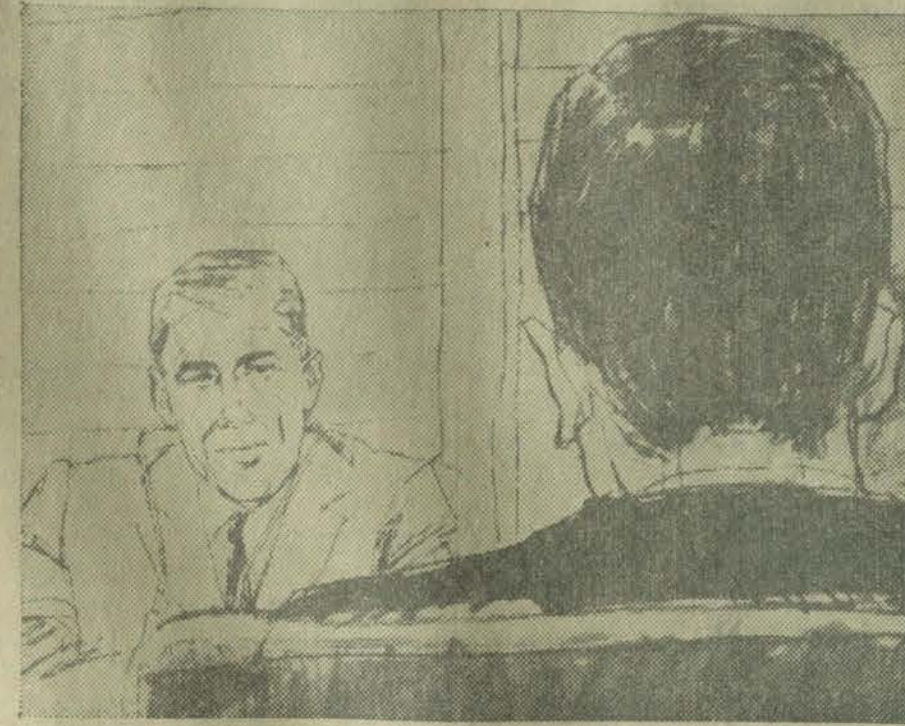

Authorities believe, however, that thousands of young people simply aren't aware of the dangers of VD. Once infected, they are complacent about treatment.

One of the first signs of syphilis may be a painless, ulcerating sore. Gonorrhea produces inflammation of the genital and urinary tracts, and a discharge of pus.

A person may contract syphilis and be unaware that he has the disease. After the first symptoms, the germs may remain hidden in the body for as long as 20 years before any damage is discovered. Then the person may become crippled, develop heart disease, blood vessel disease, blindness, or show mental symptoms. Even death may result from this hidden stage of syphilis.

If left untreated, gonorrhea may be responsible for arthritis, endocarditis, sterility, and blindness.

If a person suspects he may have contracted venereal disease, he should go to a physician immediately.

VD should be treated promptly by a physician.

Final Registration For PCC Summer Term To Be Thursday, Friday

Final registration for the summer term at Prestonsburg Community College will be held Thursday and Friday, this week.

Any students who have pre-registered for class but need to make changes in their schedules should do so on Thursday, June 9, beginning at 9 a.m. All transfer students and others who have not yet registered for classes will do so Friday at 9 a.m.

"As of now, we have 169 students who have registered, and we are expecting a total enrollment of 225," Matthew Young, bursar-recorder, said.

The addition of new staff members has made it possible to add several new courses to the summer schedule. Courses in beginning drawing and painting, orientation to drama, forms of dramatic literature, tennis and swimming will be offered for the first time. In addition, the college will offer three of the new humanities courses, introduction to western art, music in western civilization, and literature of the western world.

Development Council To Meet Tuesday

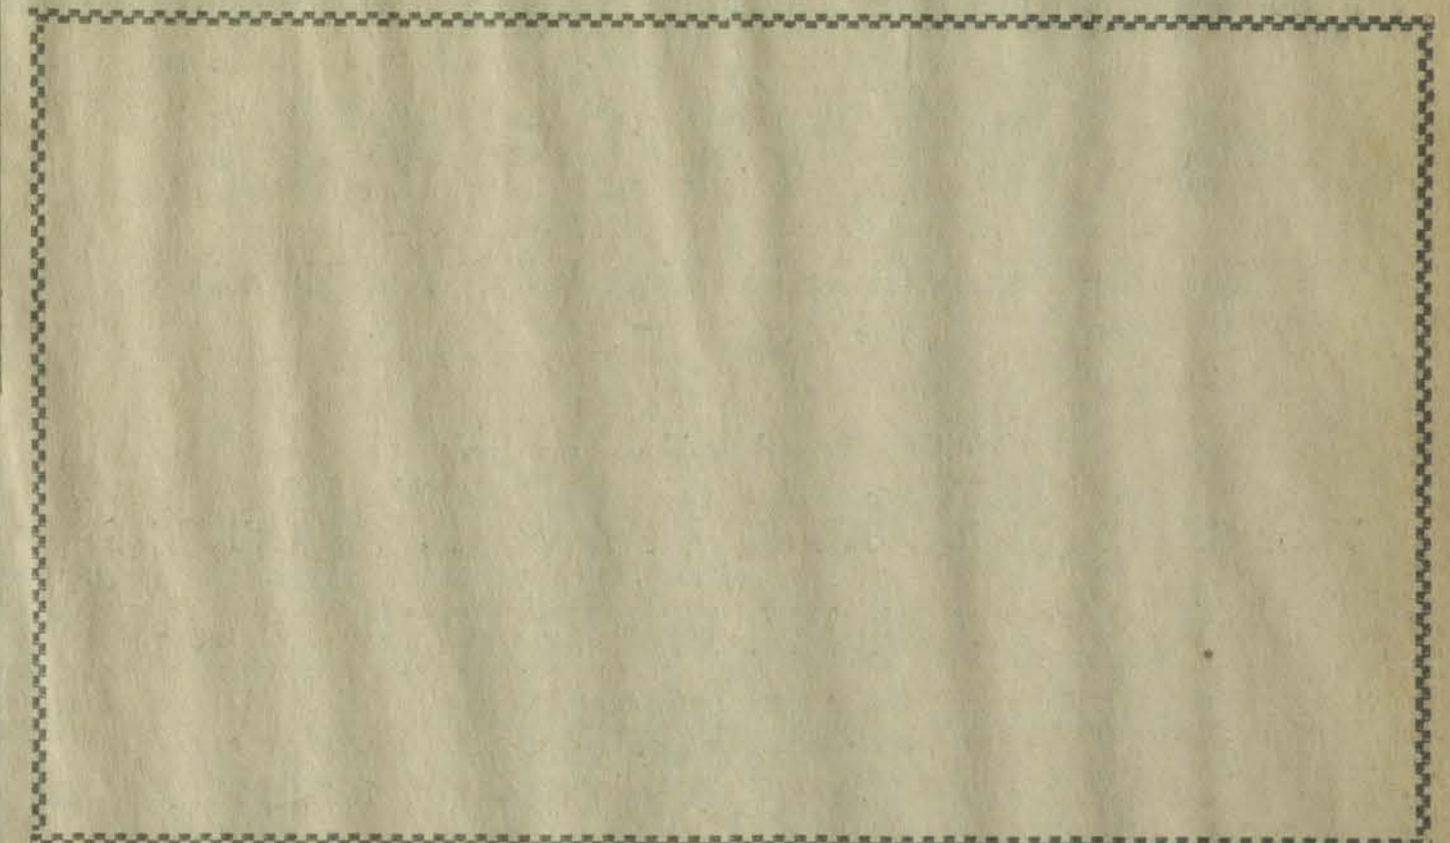

The June meeting of the Floyd County Planning and Development Association will be held at the Osborne school, Byrd, next Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m., according to Paul Gearheart, chairman of the association.

The meeting will begin with a meeting of the board of directors of the Floyd County Community Action Program.

All Floyd citizens interested in county development in all resource phases are encouraged to attend.

Feltner, a native of Hazard, served as sports publicity director from 1952-56, when he assumed overall publicity responsibilities for the college. He was named coordinator of college development in 1961. The objective of the plan is to improve 100% of the land over the five remaining years of the program. If some of this land is owned by owners who do not meet the 'needy' qualification, it would be necessary to involve them in the 203 program.

In a memorandum to the State ASC Committee, the Department of Agriculture has said:

"If you are notified that any county appears unable to use all of its allocation for needy applicants in the designated work project area(s), promptly forward copies of county reports to the Governor's representative on the ARC and to this office. Also, you should assist in helping analyze the situation and developing recommendations to the ARC whether the program should be extended to other areas or made available to other than needy applicants."

Liquor Defendant, Arrested Sunday, Hospital Patient

A Garrett woman who suffered a leg fracture in a fall last Saturday was arrested the next day on a liquor possession charge and soon afterward wound up in a hospital.

Sheriff Joe W. Lewis reported that 20 half-pints of whiskey were found in a raid on the premises of Mrs. Clara Allen Robinson, Sunday afternoon. While in the County Judge's office here, preparing to execute bond, she fell to the floor, aggravating the leg injury suffered the previous day. She was taken to the Beaver Valley hospital, Martin.

Although no whiskey was found by raiders, Everett Collins, of the Dema section of this county, and Bobby Hackworth, of Martin, were arrested on charges of selling intoxicants.

Among those jailed here within the week were: Charles Howard, accused of parole violation but later released by Probation Officer James Duff; Ronnie Childers and David Logan, jailed by Sgt. Berry as a.w.o.l. from the Army; Charles Garlinger, reckless driving, booked by State Troopers Herron and Harmon.

behind a woman, and of stopping at her home and remaining till after nightfall when his father came hunting him. When they went outside, the snow was flying.

That was May 19, 1894, a Saturday. And Mr. Akers would like to know if the coldest weather ever recorded in Kentucky—36 degrees below zero at Sandy Hook, Kentucky—was on a Friday. He thinks it was, and here's why: It was on a Friday night when his father walked outside his house, to return a few minutes later and announce: "Doggone, it's so cold out there you could throw a pitcher of water in the air and it would freeze before it hit the ground!"

Mr. Akers has a long memory, but he can't remember any June frosts till June, 1966.

Now at the ripe, old age of 9, the Dalmatian appears to have learned he can play with frogs without getting warts on his paws but that they (the frogs) aren't to be tasted.

When the doctor asked the man why he had A-53 tattooed on his back, he informed his questioner: "That's no tattoo—that's where my wife backed our truck into me while I was trying to open the garage door."

Books are costly, these days, but the costliest is the history being written by us, overseas.

Occasionally, we get a letter which tempts us to get real generous. Such a one came, a few days ago, from a subscriber. He wrote:

"A few lines to let you know that I will not subscribe for the paper this year. I appreciate the paper, but I have got my leg broke and cannot get to the post-office. I live three miles from the postoffice and up a hollow a mile from the mail route. I have got no one to go to the office for me."

If we had some way to get it to him, the paper would be sent, despite his cancellation instructions.

A total of 406 areas are being removed from the list effective July 1 because they no longer meet the statistical or legal qualifications of the legislation.

Four major cities presently qualified as redevelopment areas—San Diego, Oakland, Miami and Newark—will remain on the EDA list. Four other major cities—Cleveland, Toledo, Buffalo, and Philadelphia—are being removed from eligibility.

A four-county labor area in Pennsylvania which includes the city of Pittsburgh is also being removed.

The revised list was drawn up under provisions of the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965 which calls for an annual review of all areas authorized to participate in the job-creating program.

The law also provides that the termination of an area's eligibility will not effect pending applications for financial aid.

Mrs. Easter Kilgore Passes Away Tuesday At Home at Blue River

Mrs. Easter Kilgore, one of Floyd county's oldest residents, passed away Tuesday at her home at Blue River at the age of 98.

Osborne Hurt Here In Truck Collision

Ernest B. Osborne, Prestonsburg contractor, was severely injured late Monday afternoon when his truck was hit by a coal truck driven by Gary Ridout, of Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mr. Osborne suffered three rib fractures and severe cuts about the body. He is at the Prestonsburg General hospital.

The collision occurred on South Lake Drive, near the Leake Service Station. A light drizzle had fallen, and the truck, traveling north, skidded or swung wide, hitting Osborne's truck and reducing it to wreckage. Minutes later, an auto driven by a woman spun out of control on the same curve and came to a stop in the lawn of Mrs. Alice Ball.

EDA To Study Ways To Remove And Process Junk Car Bodies From Eastern Kentucky Roads

A $45,000 study of ways to remove and process junked car bodies in a 38-county area of Eastern Kentucky was approved this week by Eugene P. Foley, assistant secretary of commerce for Economic Development.

These technical assistance funds will come from the Economic Development Administration, U.S. Department of Commerce.

The study, to be carried out by a qualified consultant yet to be selected, will examine the various techniques for collecting, processing, and marketing auto bodies, to determine the best ways to remove them from junkyards and from along highways.

Objectives will be beautification of the area to make it more attractive for residents and tourists, opening of new employment, and the development of high-grade scrap iron.

The goal of the study will be a program which can be operated efficiently and at low cost.

VACCINATION OF PETS AGAINST RABIES URGED

Dr. R. L. Hall, Floyd county health officer, this week urged all pet owners to have their dogs and cats vaccinated against rabies. Rabies, once developed, is always fatal in both man and animals, and is a constant danger because the virus is frequently transmitted by wild and stray animals, he pointed out.

Last year, there were 104 confirmed cases of animal rabies in Kentucky. Foxes were the leading victims with 42 cases confirmed. Dogs were second with 28 cases, and cats third with 15. Other animals with confirmed cases were skunks, mules, horses, bats and cattle. These laboratory-diagnosed cases represent only a fraction of the true total. All warm-blooded animals are susceptible.

Rabies is caused by a virus which is transmitted in the saliva of an infected animal through a break or cut in the skin. During 1965, the vaccine depot of the Kentucky State Department of Health distributed 3,974 doses of anti-rabies vaccine for persons who had been exposed to rabies.

Man's greatest threat of rabies is from dogs and cats, since they are so closely associated with humans. "The problem of rabies immunization is great," said Dr. Hall, "because there are between 50 and 60 million dogs and cats in the United States today. It is the legal and moral responsibility of each pet owner to be sure his own pet is protected and is not a threat to others."

He advised: If you hear of rabies in your community, keep your pet in a pen or on a leash. Other precautions include reporting all suspicious stray animals to your local law enforcement officers. If you are bitten or scratched by any animal, see your doctor at once to determine whether anti-rabies treatment is necessary.

If you suspect rabies in an animal, lock it in a pen and contact your local veterinarian. Rabies symptoms develop within 14 days. Never destroy the head of an animal suspected of rabies. Your veterinarian or the Floyd County Health Department will instruct you on how to prepare and ship the head of the suspect for testing at the Kentucky State Department of Health at Frankfort.

Local Insurance Agent At National Meeting

Troy B. Sturgill, Prestonsburg agent for The Mutual Benefit Insurance Company, attended the company's 1966 national meeting in Hollywood, Florida last week. Only the top quarter of Mutual Benefit's 1500-man field force qualified for the meeting. Eligibility is based on outstanding sales achievement for the year.

Sturgill qualified for the 1966 President's Club and Honor Roll, both sales honor groups of Mutual Benefit, on the basis of his 1965 production. Since joining Mutual Benefit in 1953, Sturgill has twice placed in force over $1 million of permanent life insurance in one year.

Mrs. Sturgill accompanied her husband to the meeting in Florida.

Sturgill is associated with the Earl G. Robbins Agency, of Lexington, but maintains offices here.

END LEGISLATION BY JUDICIAL DECREE

The Times does not presume to essay the role of constitutional lawyer, but it would express its admiration of the courage of Appellate Judge Edward P. Hill in dissenting from the Court of Appeals opinion which last week upheld the constitutionality of the procedure by which the question of a new state constitution will go on the November ballot.

Judge Hill apparently takes the position that the constitution means what it says and that it is not the province of the Court of Appeals to say for it what it thinks was meant to be said.

We agree with him (and that does not mean that we are, as of this date, opposed to a new state constitution). The courts, both Appellate and Supreme, have already done too much legislating by their opinions.

The supreme law of the state or nation should be so written that it meets the needs of all the people of a modern age. And what is written should not be changed by judicial interpretation or legislative abrogation.

THE WAR ON POVERTY

The Floyd County Times does not join those who have nothing but criticism for the so-called "War on Poverty," yet it has its misgivings at certain points.

Before we write off the entire program, the greatest national effort ever made to reach the needy and underprivileged groups, we need to find a substitute for it—food for those who have no food, jobs for the jobless, funds for communities which need to but cannot improve themselves, homes for those who have only hovels.

Or, if we propose to eliminate some parts of the program, we must decide which to toss out and which to retain.

Perhaps the more sensible thing to do would be to retain most, or all, phases of the program and to concentrate on making them practical and helpful to those needing help without being damaging to the ordinary taxpayer who pays the bill.

It is easy to be critical, especially of public enterprises. We recall, even yet, the jibes of "We Piddle Along" when WPA was struggling with the Great Depression and human misery in the '30's. Today, many of those who carp at WPA say they would like to see the work-experience training of "unemployed" fathers converted to a modernized WPA, because WPA resulted in the construction of most of the early year-round rural roads in this county.

The present program should be administered sensibly, constructively, with a minimum of waste. Men should be put to work (as they already presumably are), and they should have a boss who has the authority to demand and get an honest day's work. Those who cannot find private employment should be placed on the public payroll, but they should not be kept there indefinitely.

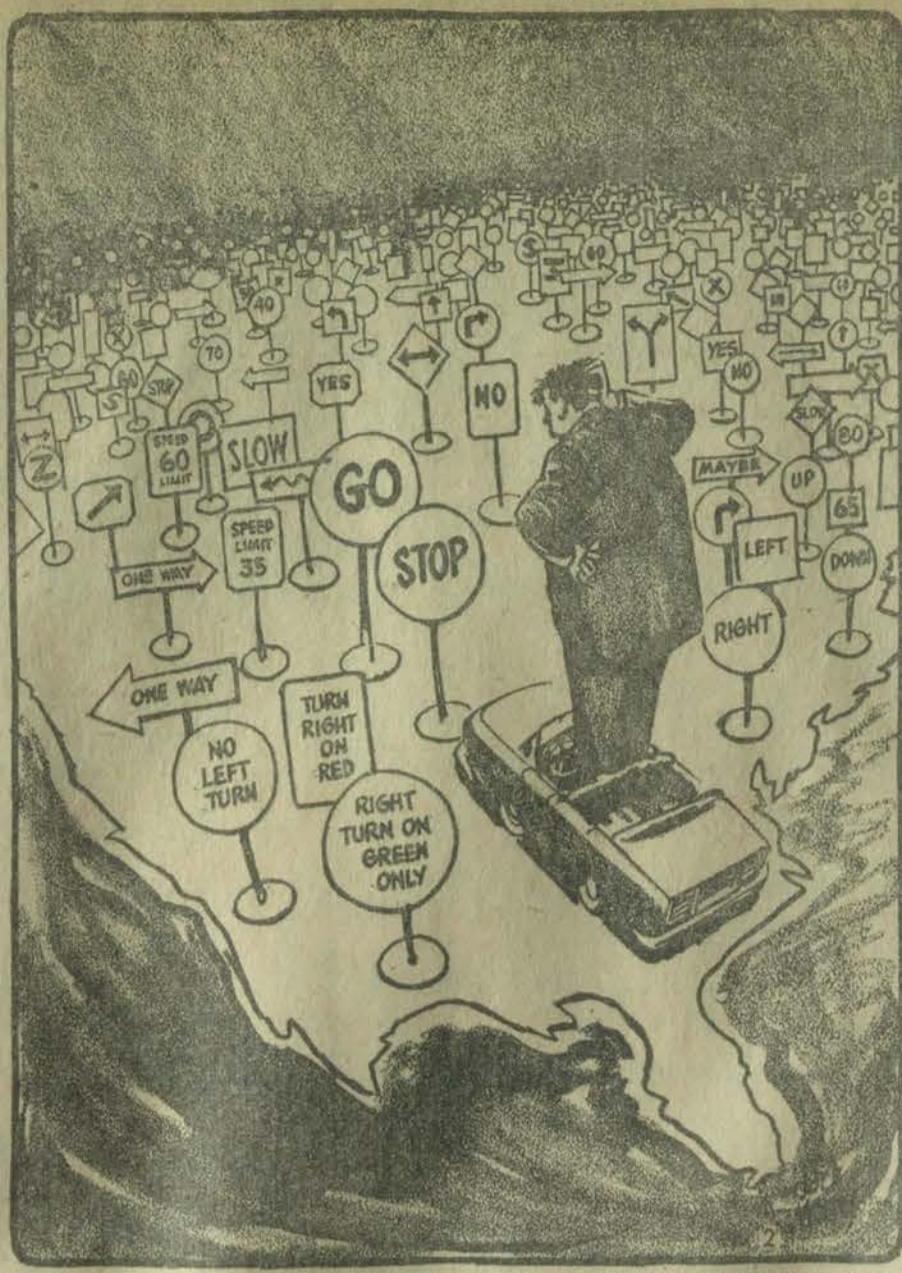

Since the federal government is spending billions on this and other programs, it should pay just a bit more and employ personnel to see that no man who is offered private employment at a decent wage is kept on the public payroll. It should be their job, too, to see that private industry, which joins the rest of us in supporting this and other programs in the "War on Poverty," does not suffer for lack of workers because competent workmen are on relief and insist on staying there.

If this is truly a work-experience training program and those employed are to become the self-supporting individuals they should be, the program should be preparing these men for private employment and better jobs and a chance at the better life that is the stated aim of the program, in the first place.

Some good work has been done by these unemployed fathers. More could be done. More could be learned, and the move from the relief rolls to private payrolls could be more rapid if the program were placed on a strictly business basis.

Neither Viet Nam nor the War on Poverty should be given perpetuity for lack of planning or earnestness in executing those plans.

Needed: Uniform Traffic Regulation.

HOW MUCH POLITICS IN WORK PROGRAM?

By SY RAMSEY (In The Courier-Journal)

Frankfort, Ky.—How much politics is involved in the work-experience training program in Eastern Kentucky?

State officials insist the so-called Happy Pappies are free from any taint of it in all 19 counties in spite of recurring rumors to the contrary.

But state administration pronouncements are suspect by some because no official is going to admit openly that the political game is played.

Assurance from federal officials would be another matter—provided these officials were in close contact with the program.

Such a man is Ralph Gentile, a representative of regional headquarters at Charlottesville, West Virginia.

"In a program as broad as this, we get the usual number of crank letters," he said. "Invariably we find no substance for complaint."

The bulk of mail his agency receives is a blend of the hard-core variety—"Please do something for me, etc."

Most other complaints, he said, deal with inconveniences in the program. The workers live too far from projects or transportation is difficult.

"We have been unable to pinpoint a case of real political interference," Gentile said.

He believes the nature of the work-experience training program is insurance against political abuse.

"We make periodic audits," he said. "There is, after all, a state merit system. Everyone asking for aid must show need as outlined clearly in welfare regulations and they can get a hearing if rejected."

WHAT TO EXPECT FROM 'MEDICARE'

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of columns by Thomas L. Read, Social Security district manager, Pikeville, explaining what you can expect when the health insurance benefits go into effect. The series is based on the Medicare Handbook to be released in June.)

On July 1, about 19 million older Americans will be protected under medicare's hospital insurance program. More than 17 million—the nine out of 10—who have signed up for the supplementary medical insurance will also have protection for the payment of doctor bills and a wide variety of other medical services, even if they do not go to the hospital.

The Social Security Administration, the agency responsible for running medicare, has been hard at work since last summer informing Americans 65 or over of their rights under medicare, enrolling them in the voluntary medical insurance plan, and setting up the machinery that will begin to roll on the 1st of July.

Hospitals, doctors, insurance organizations have been consulted and have taken part in formulating the policies for the health insurance program, and all policies have been considered by the Health Insurance Benefits Advisory Council, a 16-member group, appointed under the law to advise on medicare policy.

Records have been set up for everyone 65 or over who is eligible for hospital and medical insurance under medicare, and health insurance identification cards have already been sent to most of the people who have signed up for both parts of the medicare program. Cards for people who have hospital insurance protection, but did not sign up for medical insurance, will be sent out during June.

A BOY AND A DOG - A STORY BORDERING ON TRAGEDY

(Editor's Note: The Floyd County Health Department describes, in the following article, a hypothetical case and its tragic possibilities in an effort to emphasize an urgent need for public cooperation in meeting a very real threat to human life.)

It was a mild evening in May when the quiet that had descended on the community was suddenly shattered by a series of shrill, childish screams. From between two houses, a small, blond-haired boy was seen running, holding his arm and crying. Following slowly behind was a dog, not quite as large as a collie and of a mixed breed. The boy ran toward the house, screaming for his mother, who, hearing the child's cry, came out the door. Neighbors from up and down the street also gathered to see what was causing the commotion.

The mother, whom we will call Mrs. Jones, was finally able to quiet her small son, and between sobs the boy told her he had been bitten by the Smiths' dog. The Smith family, who had just moved into town, had come from another state.

Mrs. Jones placed the boy in the car and immediately took her son to the family physician. The doctor treated the boy, took the name of the next door family, a complete description of the dog and informed Mrs. Jones he would contact the county sanitarian at the Health Department.

The next morning, the sanitarian visited the Smith family. He noted the state they had just moved from was having a serious outbreak of rabies among its wildlife and domestic stock. He examined the dog and noticed the anti-rabies vaccine had expired the preceding week. The dog seemed friendly enough and didn't appear to be "rabid," but the sanitarian, wishing to be certain, placed the dog in quarantine for two weeks. After the quarantine period, if the dog still seemed normal, it would be safe to assume it was not sick and the child would not have to take the painful rabies treatment.

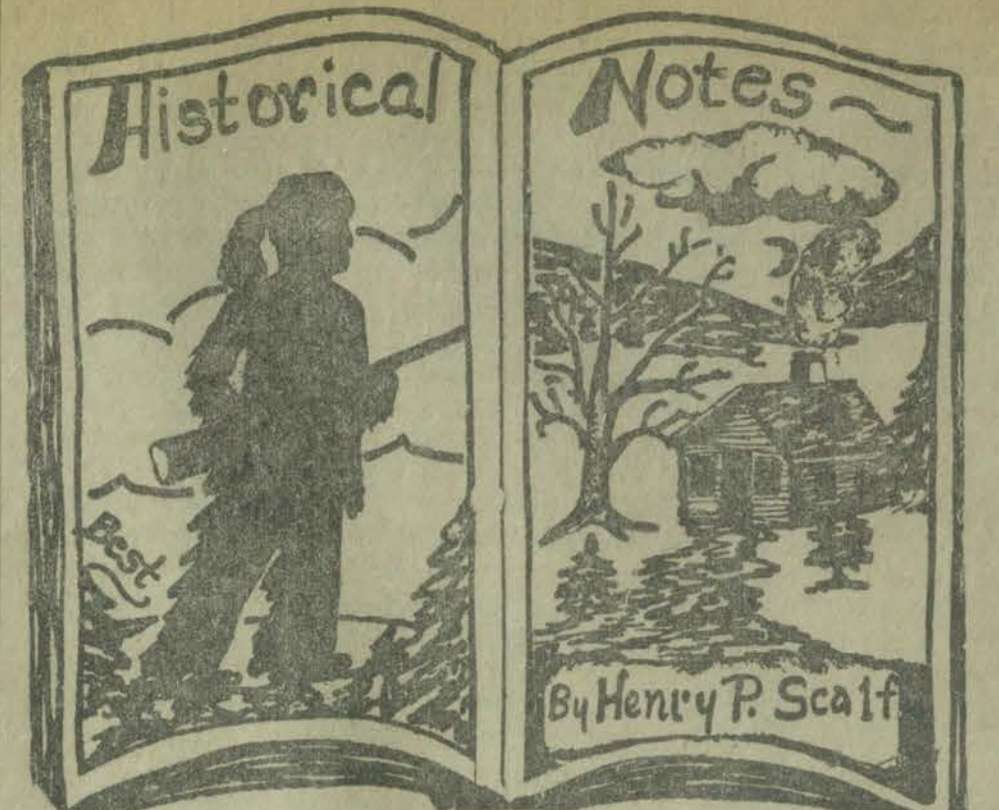

The next three days were ones of constant anxiety for both the Smith and the Jones families. The boy, other than having a swollen, sore and "hot" arm, was apparently none the worse for his experience. The dog, however, became less active, yet restless, and started to refuse its food. Mr. Smith attributed this to the fact that the dog had never been confined before.

On the fourth day the dog began to perk up, started eating again and became the friendly pet it usually was. The two families gave a slight sigh of relief. The ninth day following the attack, the child awoke complaining of a fever, headache and aching arms and legs. Mrs. Jones called the doctor, who gave a temporary diagnosis of "flu."

The next day was one of compounded misery and worry, because sometime during the night the dog had broken loose.

"Could the baby have rabies," the mother wondered. "Should I call the doctor or shall I call the Health Department?"

On the thirteenth day, the dog was found, but it had been hit by a car and was dead. Now it was the doctor's decision. He called the health officer and talked the situation over. There were two questions to be answered: Had the dog exhibited the signs and symptoms of rabies and should they wait before starting the rabies treatment? In the doctor's mind was the vision of the untold suffering of the child; the sensitivity to light and air, the constant restlessness, the ever-present drooling from the mouth, the convulsions and spasms, and finally the inevitable death. On the other hand, the treatment was extremely painful and took so long to complete. Then there were the two

FRANCIS-BURCHETT-ALLEN named his wife as Margaret. It is my opinion that David, Jr., evidently the oldest of that family, was the father of Samuel Maggard. The Henry mentioned herein is thought to have been a soldier of the Revolution, later settling in Sullivan county, Tennessee. The early Virginia Maggards were evidently prosperous plantation owners. David Magert, Sr. seemingly was concerned that his children should prosper in the new land since he specified in his will that his children should be taught a trade and if they refused that they should be bound out and forced to learn.

"Samuel Maggard, supposed grandson of David Magert, Sr. (the name was spelled Maggard by 1822) was born in 1774 in Virginia according to the U.S. Census Bureau. He was married at an early age to Rebecca Robinson, born 1776 (or Robertson), an Irish immigrant. They remained in Virginia a short while after marriage and then sold their vast holdings there and started to the Blue Grass section of Kentucky in a caravan of fifteen wagons.

"Arriving at what is now Pound Gap and finding it impassable they backtracked to Flat Gap and came over to the head of the Poor Fork of the Cumberland River in what is now Letcher county, Kentucky. The trip took a great while as they had to cut their roads as they traveled. While on the head of Cumberland two wagons broke down and while repairs were being made Samuel strolled through the woods, hunting. He so liked the country and game he saw he decided to stay there. He spent several days blazing out his lines which probably ran from what is today known as Sam's Ridge to far Upper Cumberland. He built a huge log house on what was later known as the Joe Day and later as the Wilson Creech farm. At least, seven sons and five daughters were born to them, being reared (though some born in Virginia) on the Cumberland valley farm."

Anyone having information on any of these families are requested to write Mrs. Hampton.

LIBRARY NOTES BY HOMER LEE HALL, Regional Librarian

In recent weeks the Floyd County Library has been expanding its services to include a wide variety of non-book material. At present we are improving our collection of records, films, and filmstrips.

Our records number approximately one thousand and include recordings of foreign languages, poetry, Shakespeare, opera, history and government, dictation, Broadway musicals, classical and American folk music. The library realizes it is far from having a complete representation of every artist but contends the collection is a representative cross section of the best recordings.

The collection of filmstrips is rapidly becoming an outstanding service and with the wide range of subjects our filmstrips are certain to become an important facet in the educational media. Subjects included: Guidance, Mechanical Drawing, Machining, Engine Lathe, Community Services, School Community, Conservation, Food and Christmas Stories.

The library is very fortunate to have access to several thousand films that may be loaned to any club or organization. This is an excellent opportunity for club leaders to plan any type of program they desire.

Two new outstanding reference works have recently been acquired by the library.

Richard H. Collins' History of Kentucky has been reprinted by the Kentucky Historical Society, in two volumes. This reference work embraces biographical sketches of distinguished pioneers, soldiers, statesmen, jurists, lawyers, and historians; geographical descriptions; the churches;

A LOOK AT THE PROPOSED NEW STATE CONSTITUTION

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The Kentucky General Assembly may soon begin debating the draft of a new constitution. It has taken the Constitution Revision Assembly almost two years to come up with a document containing 13,000 words in 14 articles and 157 sections. The following is the first of a series explaining the differences between the draft and the constitution of 1891 which has been the Commonwealth's governing document.)

By November of this year the people of Kentucky may get the chance to change the basic law of the Commonwealth.

A new constitution, done article by article, section by section, makes some major changes in the allowed government of Kentucky.

Seventy percent of the new document is taken from the 1891 constitution. Many sections of the old have been lifted verbatim and placed in the new. Yet the judiciary of Kentucky in the proposed constitution has been given a major overhauling.

The draft is shorter, less specific. The Revision Assembly has taken most of the "legislation" out of the draft and replaced it with guidelines for future General Assemblies.

One are controversial paragraphs and amendments which stirred mighty debates in Kentucky. As one person put it, "it's not so much what's said in the new constitution, it's what's not said."

It is a more flexible document, written for the 20th and the 21st centuries. It is the result of almost two years of work, thousands of comparison debates, conflicts and compromises.

Two years ago on Thursday, February 17, 1964, 50 delegates from all sections of the state met in Frankfort. They comprised the Constitution Revision Assembly.

One delegate came from each of the 38 senatorial districts. Seven former Governors were included; five men were named from the state at-large.

Republicans and Democrats, they set out to bring the basic constitutional guarantees of the state into focus with today and the future.

Their work has been completed. While there is every indication the delegates will support adoption of the new constitution, each can find a section with which he does not agree.

This is an explanation of the first two articles of the new constitution, and how they differ from the old.

BILL OF RIGHTS

The 1891 constitution contains 26 paragraphs beginning with the preamble: "That the great and essential principles of liberty and free government may be recognized and established, we declare that..."

These 26 basic rights are retained in the new constitution, verbatim with three additional rights added.

Section 26 of the new document says an accused person who has the right to trial by indictment, may on the advice of his attorney, waive that right and be tried by information.

Basically, it means an accused person has the right to ask for a trial on the basis of what the prosecutor knows without waiting for the grand jury to determine if a case against him exists.

Under the old constitution, persons accused of a crime who did not have enough money to meet bail had to stay in jail until the next term of the grand jury. In countries where the grand jury meets infrequently the accused had as much as a four-month wait.

The accused must request trial by information, and must do so only on the advice of his lawyer.

Section 27 of the new document deals with the detention of witnesses. It is basically a prohibition against imprisoning for questioning a person who is a material witness to a crime. The new section says a witness cannot be detained for more than a reasonable time.

What constitutes a reasonable time will depend on the crime, a standard applied to the circumstances. In a murder case a witness could be held for questioning perhaps as much as two days. But in a misdemeanor, a reasonable time may constitute only an hour.

The section was written to stop isolated cases of witnesses or suspects being detained for long periods without a charge being lodged against them.

Section 28 of the new document pertains to wiretapping, and its strong language virtually prohibits the use of any device which invades a person's privacy.

In Kentucky, any electrical, electronic or mechanical device used to intercept a message or conversation is outlawed. The delegates to the Revision Assembly debated this issue at length and there were attempts to amend the section to allow forms of wiretapping on a court order. Federal authorities are not excluded from using these means, even though a case exists inside the borders of Kentucky.

Section 26 of the old document has been transferred and made the last paragraph of Section 28 of the new document in the Bill of Rights.

The Bill of Rights in the new document comprises Article I, Section I through 23.

Article II of the new document, outlining the general powers of government, comprises one section in two paragraphs.

The words are exactly the same as in the old constitution. They divide the government of Kentucky into three branches, legislative, judicial and executive, constituting the traditional checks and balances contained in the U.S. constitution.

Public Demand Would Curb Death Toll, Says Breathitt

BY GOVERNOR EDWARD T. BREATHITT

Frankfort — Public opinion and public demand will bring about, quicker than anything else, a reduction of traffic deaths on Kentucky highways. I become more convinced of this day by day as the numbers of fatalities during the current year continue to break the records set for comparable periods in 1965.

Crackdowns help. So do roving roadblocks and the use of radar, sky-patrol speed-clocking and other preventive measures, all under the responsible vigilance of our alert and dedicated State Police.

These things I ordered in an all-out effort from the government standpoint, to keep to a minimum the dreadful toll taken of highway travelers during the long Memorial Day week-end that just passed.

The kind of action taken is fine, typical of what should be done, but it is not enough, not nearly enough, because Kentucky will not attain the objective of appreciably reducing the number of traffic deaths until we get active, militant, statewide public support.

I am not interested, I assure you, in chalking up for the record a long list of arrests and convictions, but I do think that the book should be thrown at the drunk or drinking driver, who menaces the lives of others on our highways, as well as the fellow who drives when unlicensed or under suspension.

Records show that more than 85% of the drivers on our highways are sober, careful drivers who obey traffic regulations. What I seek to do is to protect these drivers and their families.

When drivers in the bad category are made to realize Kentucky means business, when the speeding, reckless, drinking driver is impressed with the fact that our traffic laws are going to be enforced, and that conviction of violation will result in punishment, then he will fall in line.

Notices that my campaign to promote highway safety had been broadened and intensified were included in a letter I wrote several days ago to county judges, traffic court judges, county attorneys, city attorneys and mayors of cities of the first four classes.

I told them that I had directed the State Police to conduct an all-out crackdown through an extended period until slaughter on the highways could be reduced, and I urged local officials to join me in this campaign — using all the resources at their command to make it succeed.

Support of the citizenry of Kentucky on a statewide basis is an absolute requirement of any drive to reduce traffic deaths and injuries. Our traffic courts and judges, as well as our prosecuting county and state's attorneys only reflect the will of the people.

Good, safe and careful driving must be made fashionable in Kentucky. Drivers of all ages must look on it as "in" and look on reckless, feckless driving as "out". They must be ready themselves to pay the penalty for conviction of a violation and must insist that others do likewise.

Floyd SCD Cooperators Seed Food Plot Areas, More To Follow Suit

BY GERALD HART Soil Conservationist

Wildlife Habitat Development Cooperators of the Floyd County Soil Conservation District have seeded 20 acres of food plots during the past few days. Thomas Lemaster, on Abbott Creek, has four acres completed. G. C. Holbrook, on Middle Creek, has 16 acres completed.

Landowners on Middle Creek alone have planned to seed 40 acres of wildlife food plots. Most of this work is the result of the recently approved Appalachian project for Middle Creek. Conservation and development plans have been developed with 21 landowners in this project and 47 landowners have requested this type of assistance. Engineering surveys are now under way on several stream-bank development projects, three fish ponds, 500 feet of diversion channel construction, and one sod chute. Planning also has been completed on 100 acres of woodland improvement work and 375 acres of pasture improvement work.

A replica of the first white man's house in Kentucky, the Dr. Thomas Walker State Shrine at Barbourville honors the discoverer of the Cumberland Mountains, Cumberland River and Cumberland Gap. It is visited by thousands of tourists annually.

ALICE LLOYD GRADS HEAR UK'S OSWALD

Pippa Passes, Ky. — At its spring commencement, June 5, Dr. John W. Oswald, president of the University of Kentucky, noted that most members of the Alice Lloyd College graduating class are continuing their education in to senior college and congratulated the students on such a commitment.

"You students going ahead in higher education will have an even greater opportunity to serve your fellow man," he said.

Oswald was featured speaker at the commencement exercise, which also marked the inauguration of the college's year-long 50th anniversary observance.

A board of trustees statement officially proclaiming the 1966-1967 academic year as Founder's Year, a commemoration of the coming of Mrs. Alice Lloyd to the site of the college on Caney Creek, was read by Quentin Bogart, assistant to the president for development, and an allocation of $25,000 for special Alice Lloyd Memorial Scholarships was announced by Circuit Judge John Chris Cornett, of Hindman, chairman of the executive committee of the ALC board.

Alice Lloyd President William S. Hayes said the special year would attempt to define Alice Lloyd's life on Caney Creek "in terms of the self-reliant educational program she developed there, the high principles she promoted and the uplifting change she wrought through the hills and hollows of Eastern Kentucky."

Dr. Oswald was given honorary recognition by the college "for his dedicated service to American higher education," and two retiring instructors, Mrs. Katherine C. Wright and Dr. Merton W. Jones, were cited for "long and personal inspiration to the youth of Appalachia."

To graduates with high scholastic achievement, the college awarded a total of $15,000 in scholarships and grants to senior colleges and universities.

LABOR SHORTAGE LAID TO ANTI-POVERTY JOBS

By KYLE VANCE
(In The Courier-Journal)

Harlan, Ky.—A labor shortage in coal mines resulting from anti-poverty spending has reached a critical point, a spokesman for the industry said yesterday.

Cloyd McDowell, president of the Harlan County Coal Operators Association, said jobs that offer $2 to $3 an hour are going begging in spite of ambitious efforts to recruit and train personnel.

He said that in Harlan county alone the shortage of men runs around 150 to 300, with coal production 60 to 70 percent of capacity when it could be 100 percent.

McDowell put some of the blame on the government's so-called "Happy Pappy" program, which offers work experience and training to unemployed fathers.

"The situation we have now is a reverse of what we had a year and a half ago," he said in an interview. "Then we had an over-supply of labor resulting from automation in the mines. Now we can't fill some jobs for love or money."

"We get plenty of outside men where not much experience is required, but we can't get men for skilled jobs such as loader operators, cutting machine operators, shuttle car drivers and repairmen."

The labor shortage prevails, McDowell said, even though automation has sharply reduced labor demand. A mine that formerly employed 400 would need less than 100 men now.

"If they (the Government) come up with any more give-away programs, we may have to close down," McDowell continued. "I know of some men with mining experience who are out cutting bushes if they are on their feet at all."

"It seems to me that the people in charge of the Happy Pappy program get the men on their rolls and then undertake to protect them from private employment."

"In any event, they are over-protective to the extent that they won't send men around to talk jobs."

He said the Office of Economic Opportunity, the government's anti-poverty agency, has been encouraged by operators to train coal-mine repairmen with assurance that jobs would be waiting.

"They gave us a lot of dead-beats who couldn't learn anything," McDowell said. "Out of 22 that took the course, six of them were young men qualified to step into good jobs with a long future. The six took welding jobs as soon as they learned welding, without finishing the repairman course."

He said the shortage will become even more acute as new mines open.

"Our miners are making $6,000 to $7,000 a year," he said. "They can earn all they want to earn with overtime."

Harlan operators have tried various forms of recruitment, including advertising in newspapers, personal contacts in surrounding counties, and applications to the state employment office.

KENTUCKY SECOND BEST

Last year, Kentucky ranked second in the nation in the number of mentally ill persons rehabilitated per 100,000 population—with 1,710 people restored to useful lives.

Bituminous Casualty Quits Ky. Coal Mines

Frankfort, Ky.—An Illinois insurance company, Bituminous Casualty Corporation of Rock Island, has notified the Kentucky Department of Insurance it will cease writing Workmen's Compensation insurance on underground coal mines in Kentucky and surrounding states.

S. Roy Woodall, Jr., State Insurance Commissioner, said the firm will continue, however, to write industrial workmen's compensation in Kentucky.

Woodall added that, prior to the Bituminous decision to end writing workmen's compensation insurance on underground coal mines, only two licensed insurance companies were voluntarily writing this line of coverage in Kentucky. The other firm is the Old Republic Insurance Company of Greensburg, Pennsylvania.

Clarence G. Price, 77, Former Mine Foreman At Glo, Dies Thursday

Clarence G. Price, 77, of West Van Lear, former foreman for the Glogora Coal Company at Glo, this county, died last Thursday in a Paintsville hospital.

Funeral services were conducted at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Paintsville United Baptist Church by the Rev. O. I. Williams, the Rev. Elza Banks and the Rev. F. F. Rigby. Burial was in the Highland Memorial Park at Stafofordsville.

Born June 15, 1888, at Meally, he was a son of the late N. K. and Jenny Preston Price. His first wife, Mary Hall Price, died in 1929, and his second wife, Evelyn Williams Crothers Price, died in 1962.

Survivors include a son, Cleburn Price, of West Van Lear; two daughters, Mrs. Pauline McCourt and Mrs. Coleen Crothers, of West Van Lear; five step-sons, Tommy Crothers, of West Van Lear; Robert Crothers, of Santa Barbara, California, and Billy and Dennis Crothers, of Jackson, Ohio, and James Brusdal, of Pikeville; a step-daughter, Mrs. Olive Justice, of Covington, Kentucky; six brothers, Turner Price, of Williamson, Jess, Jack and Junior Price, of Ypsilanti, Michigan, Willie Price, of Patriot, Ohio, and Jonah Price, of Catlettsburg, and two sisters, Mrs. Ann Blankenship, of Warsaw, Indiana, and Mrs. Wilma Smith, of Ypsilanti.

Also being sent to medicare beneficiaries during June is a book on health insurance under social security. It is called "Your Medicare Handbook," and contains all the information each person over 65 should need to take part in medicare when it begins on July 1st.

The medicare handbook explains how the two health insurance plans work and tells what services are covered and how payments will be made. It also includes a copy of the simple form to be used in requesting payment of doctor's bills under the medical insurance program.

The handbook also has a listing of all the Blue Shield and private insurance organizations that will be handling medical insurance claims, so beneficiaries can quickly see where to send their payment claims for doctor bills, home health services, and other services included in the supplementary plan.

"Your Medicare Handbook" is designed as a ready source of information and guidance for each person covered by medicare. Along with the red, white and blue health insurance identification cards, it is the older American's key to his medicare protection.

Because of the importance of medicare to all Americans, everyone 65 or over, everyone with a parent 65 or over, and anyone who is thinking about his future health care needs, will want to know how the program is going to work. So that people may have the information ahead of time, Thomas L. Reed, social security district manager in Pikeville, Kentucky, has prepared a series of articles based on the medicare handbook. The Floyd County Times will print the series over the next several weeks. Readers may want to clip, save and discuss the articles as they appear. The social security office people are ready to answer any questions that may come up.

Wayland Woman's Club Installs 1966 Officers

Wayland, Ky.—On the 75th anniversary of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Zella S. Archer, 7th district governor, chose for her theme a brief history of the Federation, speaking recently at the annual installation breakfast of the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Women's Club.

"Seventy-five years ago there were many little bands of women's clubs across the nation which needed to be organized to bring them all together under a common purpose. That purpose was service to others, and the motto 'Unity and Diversity' was chosen to signify that they were unified in effort even though their scope of service was diversified, explained Mrs. Archer.

Mrs. Archer listed a few of the main projects which the Federation has sponsored: 1962-64 was successful in getting started more than 100 libraries, the Care Program throughout the world, "get-out-the-vote campaign," and incidentally has been so successful in getting women to register that there are now more women registered than men. The Federation has scholarship programs and offers prizes in art, music, and many other fields of endeavor. Currently there is the project of the rehabilitation center for girls in Kentucky, sponsored by the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs.

In advising on the local club level, Mrs. Archer asked her hearers to take time to make the proper choices in planning ahead for programs in order that they be worthwhile and of the greatest benefit to all.

After speaking, Mrs. Archer installed the following officers for the new club year:

Mrs. L. B. Price, president; Mrs. Mervil Dixon, vice-president; Mrs. J. T. Spillman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles Hornsby, recording secretary; Mrs. Milton Trusty, Jr., treasurer.

At the conclusion of the installation ceremony, Mrs. Archer presented an Honor Certificate to the club.

Mrs. Earl Castle was hostess at her residence on Estill Heights, with Mrs. Charles Hughes assisting. There were 17 present, including the guest, Mrs. Archer.

Often you must fish close to the bottom in water, roughly 15 to 35 feet deep to do any good. This holds particularly true in summer everywhere, and in winter in the South. And it's where the real old granddaddy lunkers are practically all caught, at any time.—Sports Afield.

COUNCIL SCOUT EXECUTIVE RETIREMENT ANNOUNCED

William J. Baird, president of the Lonesome Pine Council, Boy Scouts of America, announced this week the retirement of Byron F. Pennebaker as Scout executive, effective June 1.

Mr. Pennebaker has served Lonesome Pine Council since 1957 when he came to the Council from Lexington. He entered Scouting professionally from the education field in 1945, starting his Scouting career at Louisville.

Mr. Pennebaker plans to associate with Pennebaker, Inc., a family corporation, with headquarters at Lexington. He will eventually retire to a recently completed home at Beau Rivage, Florida.

Mr. Baird pointed out that retirement is obligatory in Scouting at age 65.

Baird announced the appointment of a Selection Committee to choose a successor, the committee to be headed by Walter P. Walters, and to include B. F. Reed, of Drift, John Fischer, P. B. Fowler, A. R. Barber, and D. A. Zegeer. This committee will meet immediately so that there may be continuity in the Council operation.
