SPEAKING OF AND FOR FLOYD COUNTY

THURSDAY, MAY 5, 1966

ASSESSMENT REVIEW TO BEGIN ON MAY 9

SUPERVISORS TO CONVENE DURING MAY

Request by Letter Needed for Hearing Before Supervisors

The inspection period during which Floyd county taxpayers may look over the assessment lists at the office of the tax commissioner here will begin Monday, May 9 and continue through May 13, it was announced this week by Mrs. Orpha C. Akers, tax commissioner.

The office will be open between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Taxpayers may not only check their own assessment figures but also compare them with others in the county.

Any taxpayer who disagrees with the assessment may ask the county clerk by letter for a hearing before the board of supervisors. Further appeal can be taken to the courts and the Kentucky Board of Tax Appeals.

The board of supervisors, composed of Jack Branham, of Betsy Layne, Wayne Stumbo, of McDowell, and Homer Salsbury, of Prestonsburg, will convene after the conclusion of the inspection period.

Mrs. Akers said Wednesday that the recapitulation of assessment figures is expected to be completed by Monday.

Governor Edward T. Breathitt this week advised those taxpayers who did not list their property with the county tax commissioner during January.

This Town ... That World

Received but not at hand (I lost it) is a letter from an absolute stranger, down in Texas, who opines that this column sounds as if I enjoy writing it. I appreciate that comment, though my unknown friend is dead wrong. Sometimes, it comes easy; most of the time, it's attended by too much agonizing for my taste.

John M. Bentley writes from Ohio to renew his subscription, and he passes along a bit of wisdom:

"The man who has everything needs something more: somebody to help him make the payments."

FAIR BOARD FINDS HOME

Votes Construction Of 36x200 Structure On City Park Grounds

The Floyd County Fair after years of uncertainty as to location and facilities for exhibition will at last find a permanent home if plans approved Thursday evening, last week, are implemented.

The Fair Board, which met at the courthouse, voted to construct a building, 36 by 200 feet, at the Municipal Park. It is envisioned that the work can be completed in time for the fair this year, slated for September 5-10.

More than 20 persons interested in the exhibition attended the meeting. J. L. Laferty, Sr., vice-chairman of the board, presided in the absence of Garland Martin, chairman.

Eugene Ball, Extension agent, chairman of a committee appointed at a previous meeting to formulate building plans, reported on efforts to procure a Quonset hut but, encountering difficulties in procuring one, worked out an alternate plan to construct a wooden structure. City Manager Curtis Clark expressed the opinion that federal matching funds would be available for construction from money allocated by the government for development of the municipal park.

An annual feature of the fair in the past has been the amusement facilities of Gooding Amusement Company. A contract with Gooding was signed recently by Garland Martin, Fair Board chairman.

It was voted by the board to schedule a band day on Saturday, Sept. 10. The various county high school bands will be asked to participate and $25 was approved for each band's expenses.

P'BURG JC'S PICK STUMBO

New Officers Elected Here; Hicks Is Chosen At Regional Election

Jack Stumbo, Prestonsburg postmaster, was elected president of the Prestonsburg Junior Chamber of Commerce, at its annual election of officers, April 25. Mr. Stumbo succeeds Claude Swiney.

A member of the board of directors of the Prestonsburg Jaycees, Ted Hicks, was elected state vice-president of Area B Sunday at the Region VI meeting at Hazard of Kentucky Jaycees. Mr. Hicks will have the Breathitt county, Harlan county, Hazard, Knott county, Magoffin county, Prestonsburg, Paintsville and Pikeville clubs under his supervision.

Other officers of the Prestonsburg Jaycees elected last week are: Harold Cooley, vice-president; Alvin Webb, secretary; Bobby Crager, treasurer.

Its new board of directors is composed of Ted Hicks, Dick Clark, Lloyd Walker, and the outgoing president, Mr. Swiney.

The awards and installation banquet will be held May 27 at the LaDale Restaurant, it was announced.

COURT TERM ENDS FRIDAY

Nine Are Convicted In Final Week; Three File Probation Pleas

Circuit court completed its criminal session last Friday after the last major case on the docket, that of Mrs. Maude Fitzpatrick, charged with aiding and counseling in the commission of a felony, had been continued.

During the week nine persons were convicted:

Palmer Hall, charge of grand larceny reduced to petty larceny, plea of guilty entered, six-month jail term; Luther and James Hall, plea of guilty to a charge of arson, one year each; T. J. Kendrick, indecent exposure, plea of guilty, six months in jail (probation later granted, Kendrick already having been in jail five months); F. B. Kidd, assault and battery, $50 fine and 90 days in jail; T. J. Little, assault and battery, $50 fine and 60 days; Carl Luther Loftis, child desertion, plea of guilty, one year; Hiram and Delmas Pennington, grand larceny and knowingly receiving stolen property, plea of guilty to later charge, two years each.

Palmer Hall, Luther Hall and Hiram Pennington have filed pleas for probation.

The case against Sadie Click, charged with selling alcoholic beverages, was continued till the September court term, with rule to try. Hanson Holbrook, Jr. won dismissal of his liquor case when it was established that the affidavit for the search warrant was insufficient. The cases against Heuen Spencer, charged with child desertion, and Dick Burchett, of cutting and wounding, were dismissed at the request of the prosecuting witnesses.

The $4,000 bond of Larry Sexton, accused of grand larceny and knowingly receiving stolen property, was forfeited, and so was the $2,000 bond of Tivis Ham (See Story No. 6, Page 8)

SMALL MINES IDLE, THOUGH PACT SIGNED

Union coal miners of the county were back at work in the larger mines this week, with a brand-new contract. But none of the small mines in the county which are covered by the contract had reopened.

The non-union Terry Mining Company continued operation at Lick Branch, near here, and the Mable Coal Company reopened its preparation plant and tube at Auler, Monday morning. Picketing continued at Lick Branch, but the pickets were fewer.

The problem with smaller unionized mines apparently rests in the cost of trucking the coal they produce to a tipple or processing plant. Operators of small mines point out that the cost of producing a ton of coal at their mines is approximately twice the cost at a large, mechanized operation, and that the added cost of 60-70 cents a ton for trucking their coal simply puts them out of competition.

The new soft coal contract, which is retroactive to April 1, this year, provides a raise of $1.32 a day for inside electricians, mechanics and continuous mining machine operators and $1 a day for all other mine workers.

It establishes eight part non-days: New Year's Day, April 1, Memorial Day, July 4, Labor Day, Veterans' Day, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas; employees who work on holidays to be paid triple time. Vacation pay was raised from a flat $225 to 10 times a worker's daily rate.

Vacation periods were set for June 25-July 9 or July 9-23, 1966; June 24-July 8 or July 8-22, 1967; and June 22-July 6 or July 6-20, 1968. In 1967 and 1968 the operator has the option of running his mine continuously and giving individual miners vacations of 14 consecutive days during the year. The seniority clause was revised to allow employees of a closed or abandoned mine to be placed on the panel of mines operated by the same company in the same UMW district.

The contract gives UMW jurisdiction over all hauling of coal, overburden or refuse in or about the mine. It provides that helpers on loading machines or continuous miners shall be paid the operator's rate while running the machine, and the cutting machine operator's rate otherwise. The contract also calls for free bathhouses or other satisfactory arrangements. Day-rate men are guaranteed four hours of pay, once they enter the mine. Second and third shift differentials are increased to eight and 10 cents an hour respectively.

OEO APPROVES FUND FOR LIGON PROJECT

Moore and Newman On Election Board

The State Election Commission last week named two new election commissioners for this county.

The new commissioners are Charles Newman, Hi Hat Democrat, and L. B. Moore, Prestonsburg Republican. Sheriff Joe W. Lewis is the ex-officio member of the board.

Moore and Newman succeed Bill Darby, Republican, and Glenn Burchett, Democrat.

MAN JAILED AS SUSPECT

In Mine Wire Thefts; Curiosity of Sheriff Results in Arrests

When Sheriff Joe W. Lewis passed an Allen scrap metal dealer's place of business Saturday morning he saw metal being weighed, and his curiosity resulted in the arrest of three.

One of the trio was booked as Willard Blankenship, Jr., and he was held for investigation of the loss of copper wire from mines. Blankenship told Sheriff Lewis he was given the wiring he had on hand, but Lewis said the two juveniles with Blankenship implicated him in wire thefts. Lewis said he has learned that eight mines have been raided.

Charles E. Stewart and Preston Smith were jailed Sunday night by Lewis, Trooper Combs and Deputy Sheriffs C. B. Hall and Lark Hunt on a charge of breaking and entering the home of Oliver Goble, Jr., of Tram. Items taken from the home included meats, $23 in cash and a shotgun. The gun was recovered.

Others jailed within the week, charges against each and names of arresting officers follow:

LARGE-SCALE EFFORT, PLAN OF PROGRAM

Sanitation, Health, Beautification Work Is Provided by Grant

A large-scale attack on the problem of sanitation and a general health and community beautification program is scheduled to begin at Ligon, on Left Beaver Creek, May 16 under the auspices of the Big Sandy Area Community Action Program.

The Office of Economic Opportunity has approved a grant of $59,151 to carry out the 12-month community development program.

Eight persons will be employed, fulltime, on the work, with 20 working part-time. Unemployed fathers will be used in completing the undertaking, and property-owners in the community will themselves become involved.

John Milton Stumbo, Floyd County Health Department sanitarian, has been given a leave of absence to enable him to serve as program director.

Lack of sanitation, incidence of intestinal parasites and the need for improved health standards were cited by the Floyd County Community Action Program. (See Story No. 7, Page 4)

P. C. LINKOUS DIES MONDAY

Chrch, Civic Leader At Wright Victim Of Two-Week Illness

Paul C. Linkous, 59, personnel director of the Evans Elkhorn Division of the Island Creek Coal Company operations at Wheelwright, died Monday evening at the Methodist hospital, Pikeville, of the effects of a heart attack suffered two weeks earlier.

A native of Snowville, Virginia, he had lived the past 33 years at Wheelwright, where he was employed by the Inland Steel Company until its recent acquisition by Island Creek. He was a member of the Community Methodist Church there, superintendent of its Sunday School, and was involved in many civic activities. At the time of his death he was president of the Beaver Valley Kiwanis Club of Wheelwright, a past master of Masonic Lodge No. 889 and a past patron of Eastern Star Chapter No. 477. Mr. Linkous also was a former director of the National Management Association.

He was a son of the late Madison Allen and Lola Bandy Linkous. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Anita Grant Linkous, one son, David Linkous, of Bardston Air Force Base, Louisiana, a daughter, Mrs. Billie Joyce Dameron, of Wheelwright, a brother, Eugene Linkous, Holden, West Virginia, and one sister, Mrs. Mary Blair, Dublin, Virginia. ## WETS PETITION VOTE IN COUNTY, JULY 2

A petition asking County Judge Henry Shumbo to set July 2 as the date of a local option election in this county was filed by wet forces Friday.

Signatures of those purported to be asking such an election were contained on 278 numbered pages. Not all these pages were filled, but it was estimated that they contained upwards of 6,000 names.

Judge Shumbo was absent this week, and no action has been taken on the request. Dry forces are expected to question the genuineness of many of the signatures.

The vote would be to determine if privately owned whiskey and beer places would be legal.

A representative of the beer industry last week told Judge Shumbo the law requires three separate ballots—one for Prestonsburg, another for Martin and a third for the remainder of the county. He indicated that this would mean that either of the two towns or the county outside them would be wet or dry, according to their vote, and that the total vote of all the county would not govern any one of the three areas.

Attorneys questioned by The Times were not able to say if this position was founded in law.

SEVEN TO COMPETE SATURDAY FOR QUEEN TITLE

GLENDIA HALE, Betsy Layne High School; JACKIE SLONE, Maytown High School; MARY ELLEN DERMONT, Martin High School; PHYLLIS KEATHLEY, McDowell High School; JAN COLLINS, Prestonsburg High School; CONNIE MORRISON, Wayland High School; SANDRA TACKETT, Wheelwright High School

Music departments of seven high schools, with the backing of five local organizations, expect to stage here Saturday the largest of all the annual Floyd County Music Festivals.

The schools will be supported in their efforts by the Prestonsburg Chamber of Commerce, the Jaycees, the Kiwanis Club, and the City Fire and Police Departments.

Highlights of the event will be: 1. The parade of seven high school bands with their school queens and attendants.

2. The coronation of the Festival queen.

In the parade, which will start at 10 a.m. from the grade school grounds and pass through the business section, will also be the seven contestants for the title of "Miss Floyd County, 1966," the Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad with its varied equipment and horsemen from the Eastern Kentucky Saddle Club.

City Manager Curtis Clark will be marshal of the parade. Crowning of the Festival queen will be held at 11 a.m., at the Prestonsburg high school football field.

Trophies will be supplied by the Don Wilson Music Store, of Paintsville. "Huck" Francis, general parade chairman acting for the Chamber of Commerce, said.

To accommodate the parade, the Police Department has ordered that no parking will be permitted on Court street and the west side of First avenue from 8 till 11 a.m.

"But," said Mr. Francis, "for the first time there will be ample parking areas because of the two new municipal lots now available."

In the event of rain, the coronation will be at the Prestonsburg high school fieldhouse.

FINAL REPORT OF GRAND JURY DISCUSSES MAJOR FLOYD CRIMES

The Floyd circuit court grand jury, which adjourned last Friday, had no murder indictments to return but it investigated the gunshot deaths of two persons, one of whom, the jury decided, was accidentally shot; the other, the victim of a self-inflicted wound.

The shooting held accidental was that of Henry Ellis Osborne, who was fatally wounded here recently. The death resulting from what the jury termed a self-inflicted wound was that of Patsy Lee Williams.

Actually, crimes of violence consumed little of the time the jury spent during its three-day split session. One man was named in a shooting and wounding indictment. A few others were accused of assault and battery.

In its final report, made to Circuit Judge Hollie Conley last Friday, the jury said, "We have concluded that child desertion and offenses against property by force and fraud are the major criminal problems in Floyd county at this time."

The offenses against property include breaking and entering, theft of copper wire from mines and other acts of larceny.

The offenses involving fraud, it was indicated, were uncovered in a probe of insurance stock sales, and the jury's report commented: "... there are persons who are selling insurance stock in this county who are definitely not authorized to sell any type of stock. We recommend that our citizens be extremely cautious before purchasing stock in any company."

The grand jury report expressed the opinion that the liquor traffic and bootlegging are being slowed down. "The Sheriff, State Police and ABC agents are to be commended on their efforts against illegal liquor. . . . All citizens should cooperate with the Sheriff's office and other officers in their efforts to abate the bootlegging in this county."

The jury recommended:

1. That in the future the Jailor get the consent of the trial judge before any prisoner is used as a trusty.
2. That these defects in the new courthouse be corrected: the door between the grand jury room and the restroom be repaired; the position of the U.S. flag be changed to the opposite side of the judge's bench; the parking lot at the rear of the courthouse be surfaced and parking areas marked off; the door to the circuit courtroom from the hallway made sound proof; the men's shower in the jail repaired; the light at the entrance to the women's cells replaced; a bulletin board be constructed and the practice of posting notices on the walls of the courthouse stopped; the jail windows cleaned.

"We do not mean to be critical by the foregoing recommendation," the report added, "and we would like to state in this report that we are of the opinion that the courthouse is in splendid condition. The Jailor and his personnel should be commended for the cleanliness of the courthouse."

(Some damage to second-floor walls and ceilings has resulted from the overflow of commodes in the prisoners' quarters on the third floor, officials pointed out recently.)

"Child desertion," the jury statement pointed out, "is and will probably always be a major problem. In some cases we are of the opinion that both the father and the mother are guilty of neglecting their infant children. We recommend that the Department of Child Welfare institute legal proceedings to take custody of infant children in such cases."

The report was signed by Herman Harmon, foreman.

In all, the grand jury voted only 37 indictments. Major indictments listed are:

Alex Lee Adkins, Battle Creek, Michigan, child desertion; Arthur Belcher, Ft. Gay, West Virginia, child desertion; Lewis Dye, Servia, Indiana, non-support; George T. Flynn, child desertion; Raymond Hicks, Kendallville, Indiana, child desertion; Ballard Mosley, River Rouge, Michigan, deserting pregnant wife; Kenneth Salisbury, Encore, Michigan, deserting pregnant wife and child desertion; Alfred Tackett, Huntington, Indiana, child desertion; Earl Walters, child desertion; Ollie Lee Wright, Springfield, Ohio, child desertion; Alger B. Sizemore, knowingly receiving stolen property, copper wire valued at $400, taken from the Turner Elkhorn Mining Co.; Jackie Wallen, knowingly receiving stolen property and grand larceny, in the theft of two electric guitars valued at $269 and owned by Clarence Stephens and Kenneth Justice; Robert Lee Adkins, knowingly receiving stolen property and breaking and entering areas marked off; the door to the circuit courtroom from the hallway made sound proof; the men's shower in the jail repaired; the light at the entrance to the women's cells replaced; a bulletin board be constructed and the practice of posting notices on the walls of the courthouse stopped; the jail windows cleaned.

"We do not mean to be critical by the foregoing recommendation," the report added, "and we would like to state in this report that we are of the opinion that the courthouse is in splendid condition. The Jailor and his personnel should be commended for the cleanliness of the courthouse."

FLOYD WORK FUNDS SOUGHT AT HEARING

A request of $48,371,000 was made Tuesday by Rep. Carl D. Perkins for flood control and stream improvement in Eastern Kentucky.

In a public hearing of the U.S. House Public Works Appropriations Subcommittee, Perkins described flood needs calling for $4.8 million for the Carr Fork Reservoir in the Upper Kentucky River, $4.5 million for Cave Run Reservoir in the Upper Licking River, $9.6 million for Fishtrap Reservoir in the Upper Big Sandy River basin, $7,558,000 to complete the construction of the Grayson Reservoir on the Little Sandy River, $500,000 to initiate construction on the Booneville Reservoir in the Upper Kentucky River basin, and $400,000 to start construction on Red River Reservoir.

Thirty thousand dollars was asked for the operation and maintenance of Grayson Reservoir and $500,000 for maintenance of Kentucky River facilities.

Perkins also asked $200,000 for advanced engineering and design on the Paint Creek Reservoir in Johnson county and $200,000 for advanced engineering and design on the Yatesville Reservoir in Lawrence county.

Serious flood damage problems were described by Perkins in connection with Beaver Creek in this county. Perkins asked for $3,350,000 to extend the Right Beaver project from Martin downstream to where Beaver Creek enters the Big Sandy at Allen. Perkins explained that it would require $160,000 advanced engineering and design funds to complete this phase of the project and clear the way for construction.

Also in connection with the Beaver Creek project, Perkins asked for one million dollars to deepen, widen and clear Left Beaver Creek above Martin, and extending approximately eight miles upstream on Left Beaver Creek.

In connection with a similar project in Pike county, Perkins asked for $1 million for snagging, clearing and dredging of Pond Creek from its confluence with Tug Fork upstream for a distance of approximately five miles. Perkins explained that this stream is filled with coal debris, causing extensive flooding and damage to homes in the area.

In addition to the $9.6 million included in the budget for Fishtrap Reservoir, Perkins asked for an additional $5 million for the Fishtrap project so as to expedite completion of this facility and to assure the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers of the ability to construct additional access roads around the lake so as not to isolate people living in the communities of Grapevine, Feds Creek and Big Creek.

Perkins also expressed the hope at the hearings that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers would be given sufficient funds to complete preliminary investigation and planning of smaller reservoir projects such as the Kiniconick Creek project because of their importance to the total flood protection picture.

Throughout the hearings Perkins stressed the importance of flood control and water resource development to the total efforts being made to improve economic conditions in Eastern Kentucky's Appalachia.

"Stream clearing and reservoir construction are important to our developing highway program, essential to our developing tourist industry and vital to the protection of homes and property," Perkins argued. The Congressman said that industrial expansion and commercial development had been seriously restricted and hampered in Eastern Kentucky areas in view of the limited number of sites available not subject to frequent flooding.

"In view of this," said Perkins, "it is imperative that we continue our extensive investigations and surveys in the Big Sandy and Kentucky River Basins for the development of additional reservoir and flood control projects." The Kentucky Congressman asked $100,000 for each of these surveys for the coming fiscal year.

THIS IS A POSTAL CARD
(Exact in size and shape)

Suppose you use postal cards for direct mail advertising. Five thousand cards will cost you $200.

Forget the cost of printing and addressing the cards—but remember they alone cost $200.

Why do we suggest 5,000? Because that is almost the exact number of copies of the Floyd County Times that go to subscribers each week. (We mention 5,000 subscribers—only a fraction of the number who read The Times, weekly. The most authoritative study yet made shows at least 4 1-3 persons read each copy of a weekly newspaper. So at least 20,000 read The Floyd County Times every week of the year.)

Now, how much does an advertisement in The Times, exactly the same size as a postal card, cost you with no extras for printing, addressing and mailing? EXACTLY $6.82½. COMPARE THAT WITH $200! It Pays To Advertise in The Times.

The acts listed in the indictment stated that Pruitt and J. C. Williamson filed fraudulent affidavits to the OEP asserting that members of the Explorer Unit had put in labor amounting to $14,080 removing the drift.

County Judge Pruitt, the indictment charged, also issued a check to the Explorer Post for $25,740 and then instructed J. C. Williamson to deposit $10,240 of the amount in the post's account and return $10,000 of the $15,500 to the judge.

William Williamson was accused of drawing money from the Explorer Post's account to buy a car for Julius Williamson and a boat and motor for himself.

Judge Pruitt additionally was accused of falsely certifying to the Office of Civil Defense that the Explorer Post had performed the work in the amount of $34,320.

Hall Construction Co., according to the indictment, did substantially all of the work involved in removing the drifts.

The acts listed in both indictments against the officials allegedly occurred in 1963.

Pikeville City Manager Butcher said that the city had incurred $10,500 expenses in helping to remove the drifts and that the indictments were "ridiculous."

"There's a mixup somewhere," Butcher said.

County Judge Pruitt was not available Monday for comment.

Judge Wooten, who was accused of filing the false claim in the name of Cleon Couch to get $900, said last night the "whole thing is a misunderstanding."

He said Couch was given the money for repairing a bridge on Grassy Creek, near his home, but he really had not done the work. Judge Wooten said he found out that two other men had repaired the bridge.

The Leslie judge said he told Couch to sign the check and give it back to him. He said he then paid the $900 to men who had actually done the work.

"It's a political thing," Wooten said. "I have had a lot of political difficulties getting elected judge," he said.

County judges were responsible for distribution of flood relief funds in the Eastern Kentucky counties following several disastrous floods.

Our Yesterdays

(Items taken from files of The Floyd County Times of 30 and 20 years ago.)

Thirty Years Ago

(May 1, 1936)

Motion of counsel for John Scott to permit the filing on May 1 of his appeal from the decision of Circuit Judge John W. Caudill holding that neither he nor Dewey Roberts, who is contesting Scott's election as Magistrate in District No. 4, is entitled to the office, was granted by the Court of Appeals a few days ago. Bids on the construction of an addition to the Floyd county courthouse are being asked by the Floyd County Building Committee this week. While riding the running board of an automobile, Lonnie Tackett, 22 years old, of Melvin, was struck and killed by a truck, Saturday night, a short distance above Wheelwright. A. J. "Uncle Andy" Frazier, 96 years old, who, during the Civil War, carried General Lee's message ordering the famous charge at Gettysburg of General Pickett, died Wednesday morning at his home at Prestonsburg. Six men have been convicted here within the last week of committing offenses on or against the property of the C. & O. Railway Company. Cooperating with the Floyd county health department in its annual clean-up, paint-up drive here, Mayor A. C. Carter has designated the week beginning May 4 as Clean-Up week in Prestonsburg. There died: T. P. Branham, 44, mine foreman for the Elk Horn Coal Corporation at Wayland, Saturday at the Paintsville hospital; Prof. N. C. Boughton, principal of Prestonsburg high school, Sunday night at the Methodist hospital, Pikeville; Mrs. Minerva Clifton at her home here, last Thursday; Luther Bentley, 24, of Lackey, Wednesday at Martin; Dona Hunter, 49, of McDowell, Wednesday.

Twenty Years Ago

Agreement reached here Friday between the Floyd fiscal court and the State Highway Department on expenditure of the county's $72,800 rural highway fund for the year provides that $46,677 will be spent in the county's four magisterial districts in the construction of four new up-creek roads and two bridges. The two strikes directly affecting this section, in which coal production and bus transportation have been brought to a standstill, apparently remained this week as far distant from settlement as ever. Estill Collins, of Martin, was shot through the arm late Tuesday night at Martin. Prestonsburg high school's Ballard Branham pitched a no-hit, no-run game Friday against the visiting Russell high school baseball team. All Class I railroads joined April 15 in a petition filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission asking for authority to increase freight rates on bituminous coal. Fire, Friday, destroyed a small house, owned by J. E. Conley off Friend street and occupied by Elige Blanton and family. Deadline for procuring permits to keep hogs in incorporated towns of this county has been set for May 15. Dr. Marvin Ransdell announced this week. Born: To Mr. and Mrs. Jones Tallent, of Maytown, a son, Robert Jones Tallent, at the Beaver Valley hospital, Martin; to Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Dermont, of Martin, a daughter, Teresa Joyce, April 25 at the Gearheart hospital. There died: Jake Shepherd, 69, who sold to the Princess Elkhorn Coal Company the site for its mining town of David, April 23 at St. Mary's hospital, Huntington; Mrs. Susan Reed, 84, at home on Brush Creek near Hippo, Saturday; John Wesley Stratton, 91, at home at Ivel, Sunday; Miss Ann Thornsbury, 28, at the home of her parents at Lackey, Sunday.

LIFE, ELEMENTAL AND HARD IN NEPAL BUT FLOYD IFYE SAYS SHE WOULD GO BACK

A pretty girl who had never until this year really known the hardships of life tells you of a foreign land from which she has returned. Tells of the few roads, of traveling where motor transport was possible in bucking jeeps, at other times perched on an elephant or pony. Most of the time, grinding out the miles on foot.

She speaks of the heat, of crude living quarters, of a multiplicity of insects and their bites. Of disease, hunger.

Then you ask, "Would you go back?"

And without a split second's hesitation, she replies:

"I sure would—tomorrow!"

"And that brings up the question, 'Why?'"

To which she replies, "It's hard physical living, but these people are so friendly, so innocent and curious."

So it is with Melanie Ann Conley, daughter of Circuit Judge and Mrs. Hollie Conley, of East-ern, who only recently returned home after a stay in Nepal as an International Farm Youth Exchange (IFYE).

Miss Conley lived and worked with Nepalese farm families, also met many of those more prominent. Her fondest memories are of those who worked their little one-acre patches of rice, eking out a subsistence.

Her acquaintances ranged from the highest caste, the Brahmans, to the lowest, the Untouchables. She had the privilege of being a guest in two Brahmin homes, an honor accorded few who are not of that caste, but in one of these she was forbidden the kitchen.

Generally speaking, however, she found the informality of the people delightful.

"For example," she said, "I was taken, unawares, into the presence of the Prime Minister himself. Our jeep had broken down, and I had walked through mud in a pair of tennis shoes. But the informal atmosphere set me at ease. We all ate rice, just as the poorest do, and with our fingers."

These people who are face-to-face with the issues of life and death from day to day aren't overly concerned with such matters as war and peace, Miss Conley said. The educated express an interest, but others—no. The word, "America," means something to them, but the United States does not. Whatever of aid that reaches them from the U.S., it, to their minds, comes from America—and that includes both North and South.

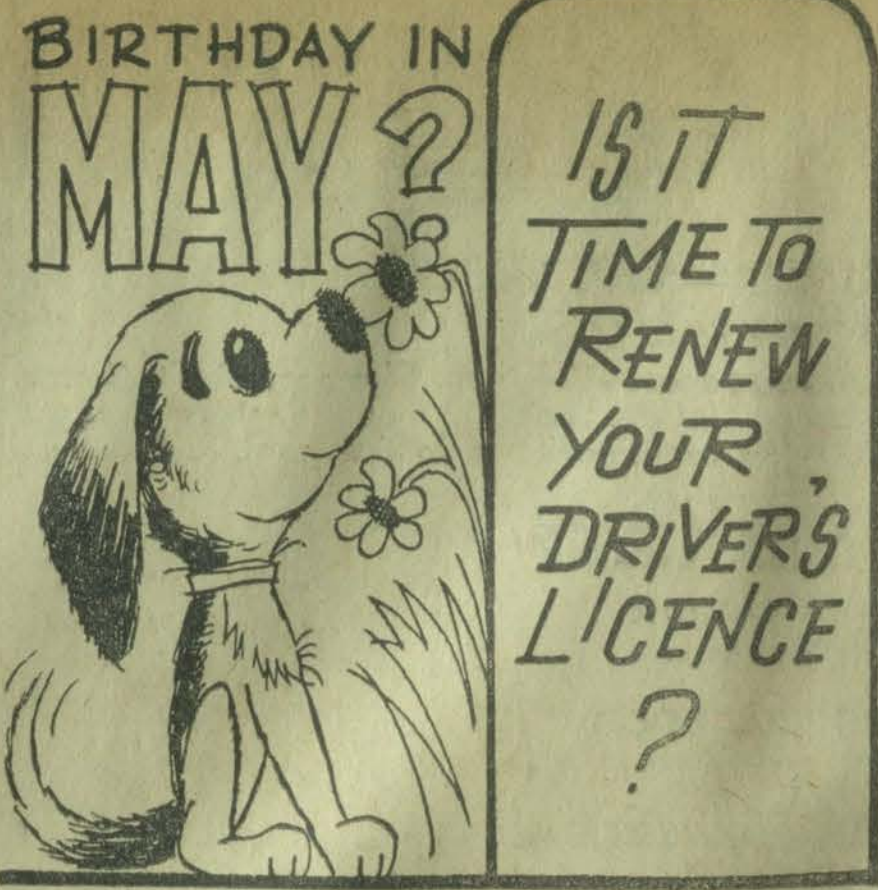

Miss Conley defined the widely disparate methods of Russia and the United States in their aid to Nepal. The Reds, she said, stress "impact" projects, tangible efforts which make for show, such as cigarette factories and sugar mills. In contrast, the United States is concentrating on helping the Nepalese improve their methods of farming, working to eradicate malaria and giving aid in similar areas.

She said she noted a dislike on the part of the people there for some Russians connected with a sugar mill. This feeling apparently arose, she explained, because the Russians maintained an attitude of aloofness to the people.

Malnutrition, smallpox, fevers—these are among the contributors to the high death rate in Nepal, where the average life span is 30 to 35 years. Smallpox, the Floyd IFYE said, may defy the best intentions and all the skills of U.S. medical science, for the people of Nepal refuse smallpox vaccine. The disease, they believe, is a visit from a god.

Though the lot of the great mass of the population of this land of strange contrasts is

LANDSCAPING NOTES

By FRANCES H. PITTS

A low house will have more style if you plant irregular-shaped, broad-leaved deciduous or broad-leaved evergreen shrubs at the corners rather than column- or cone-shaped, narrow-leaved evergreens. The softening effect of the broad-leaved shrubs de-emphasizes the corners, allowing emphasis at the entrance to direct visitors to the front door.

It also is important to select corner and all other foundation plants whose mature heights require minimum maintenance to keep them in proportion to the home. For instance, choose corner plants which will not grow much taller than two-thirds of the distance from ground to eaves. For below the windows, select plants which "break"

Plants styled by pruning to keep a disciplined natural shape effectively soften straight lines of buildings. The custom of shearing plants does not soften building lines. In addition, depth of foliage to sheared plants' interiors is shallow. This usually results in poorer growth and earlier death than with discipline-pruned plants.

Fads and fashions in landscaping may last long enough to become recognized as past or prescriptive customs, but only those which improve your home's appearance and are in style produce the most effective landscape. There is no reason to follow the landscaping fashion of a past period if it is not in style.

LITTLE, OLD BREATHITT WOMAN KEPT SECRET FOR 65 YEARS

By BERNICE T. HISER
(In The Lexington Herald)

Buckhorn, Ky. — When we bought our first house in Breathitt, I used to work from before daylight till noon, when school was not in session; and then I would sit on the front porch and read and watch my neighbors pass along Route 15 which ran right in front of our yard.

After awhile I got to know them by sight, if not by name; and one that always intrigued me was a tiny old lady about 80 years old who went to town most Fridays about one o'clock and back down the road about three.

She looked like a little old doll with her little black high-topped shoes about size three, and her long black dress with a white apron tied around her tiny waist, and her white curly hair; and she always carried in her hand one of the little gallon-sized home-made baskets that we called egg-baskets, painted a bright Chinese Red.

She always spoke me howdy in the old mountain way though we didn't know each other, and she watched me like a hawk with her big black eyes as she traveled by, sometimes turning to look back at me after she had gone past the upper or lower edges of our yard.

At first, I would go back to my reading; but after a while I too looked at her, wondering what she saw in me to stare at. I asked my neighbor Henry Hacker who she was, and he said she was Aunt Charity Morgan and that her old man Dandy was bedfast, had to be turned in a sheet, and was expected to die any minute. They lived about a mile up Hacker Branch which ran into the river just below us.

"Hasn't that poor little old soul got anybody to go to the store for her?" I asked. "Why, it must be four miles, the round trip."

"Hit it," Henry said soberly, spitting amber at the paper box he kept for the purpose on his front porch. "No, sir, she hasn't got nobody but old Uncle Dandy and he's a dying. They had 10 children, but they gradually died off, till now they ain't got a soul in the world."

After that I watched for her, and when she came by on her little old pattering feet, took her out a drink of ice water, and some little something, an apple or a cookie (which she always put in her little red basket with her pitifully few groceries to take home to Dandy.)

"Won't you come in and rest a while," I would tell her but she always refused, saying with tears in her eyes that she had to get back to "my Dandy."

She lay on my heart so much that I told my John about her. Next Sunday he walked up that way, most of the road up Hacker Branch being so bad he durstn't take his car up it.

He was really provoked when he got back. "We're poor," he said, "but you've never seen any thing like that. I told her that I'd fetch her groceries every Saturday night when I get paid, and she could pay me. They get $52 a month for one of their boys that got killed in World War I, and that's all they have to go on. But she wants to pay their way, she said. Her man is like a dead tree—just there. He looked up at me when I spoke to him. They have been an odd-looking couple in their day. He's twice as high as she is, I bet."

After that, school started, and I didn't see her for a month or six weeks; but John faithfully took her groceries Saturdays.

About the middle of October Dandy died. We went to the funeral on a Saturday on the hill back of our house where the Hacker graveyard was. My little friend was not able to be there. She was overcome with grief, they said.

That night after work, John walked up the hollow with me to her house taking her groceries. We knocked and went in, and, to our surprise, she was dressed in her best and had the house all cleaned up and was sitting before a tiny coal fire. Reading. She could hardly tear her eyes off the paper to greet us.

"Come in and have a cheer," she said in her little thin voice. "My two best friends."

We went in and sat in the little homemade "setting" chairs on the other side of the fireplace. "We feel for you," I told her. "Do you like to read?" I asked after a while. "Like to!" she exclaimed. "I love hit. And I've got 65 years of reading to ketch up on."

"How do you mean?" I asked. "Well, I'll tell you how it is," she said, gazing into the fire, while she held an old copy of The Lexington Herald clasped tightly to her little chest. "When I was a gal young'un, over 70 years ago, named Charity Moore, they weren't no schools that us children could go to, over yander in Lawrence county where I was raised. The winter I was eight years there come a feller from old Virginia and started a subscription school."

"My Pap took my two older brothers and my little brother Yancy and paid this here feller Mr. Mosely he was, the $8 it costs to go to the school eight weeks; but my Mammy couldn't get him to let me go. He said hit was a wastin' hard-earned cash to give a gal young'un larin, as they'd fly out and marry, and then, if they married a man hadn't any learnin his self, hit'd 'casion trouble in the family."

"My Mammy didn't hold with such doctrine. Course, she couldn't make Pap give any money, but next morning (I can see her yet—just as plain) she set out with a sheep under each arm, their legs tied together, and me beside her; and took me down, and rolled me in that school and paid the teacher with the two sheep. I learnt to read th' whole book the first of anybody in the school, and I guess they's a hundred; long afore my brothers did. Oh, how I loved it. I learnt all the words in the old blueback speier and afore the eight week was up, had read all of McGuffey's from the first through the highest one, even if I did have to borrow them from the other scholars; and was going strong on the

NATURE TRAILS

By RUFUS M. REED

Ants are the most abundant creatures on earth. They are found everywhere—even in trails where feet have tramped the soil hard, they dig tunnels. They are found on high mountains and in low valleys. If you should measure off an acre of an open field and count the ants, the number would run into many millions.

Ants are regarded as the most intelligent animals on earth. They do farming, keep cows and tend their gardens. They have soldiers organized into efficient armies. They keep slaves, valets, chambermaids and servants. Many of us despise the ants, especially when they get in our food, or invade the house. The tiny red ants are the worst offenders for invading houses.

But all things in nature have their place, and ants are also highly beneficial. They devour many kinds of pests such as caterpillars, bugs and flies. I have seen ants hauling large caterpillars to their burrows. They are fond of sugar and honey and can't resist the temptation to steal these. Some ants are called "honey ants," and these keep certain ones of their colony to be honey barrels. They store their honey in these until they become bloated to the size of a pea and can't even crawl. When the other ants want some honey, they take it from these bloated members of their colony.

Ants establish large colonies, some of which may contain as many as half a million members, mostly females. The males and queens have wings and fly out in the spring to mate. Then the females tear off their wings and get busy laying eggs. The small white objects you may have seen ants carrying around are not eggs but ant cocoons. Soon after the ants hatch, the older ones establish nurseries for them and carry the cocoons to the nursery, where they feed and care for them.

Ants can follow a trail through the forest, up hill and down, around logs, trees and rocks, and never get lost. They travel by the sense of smell, as they put formic acid on their trails, which they can follow by scent.

Ants gets slaves by sending their armies to invade the colonies of other ants and seize their cocoons. They carry these back home, carefully feed and nurse them and force them to be slaves. They also take good care of their chambermaids and valets, which are tiny crickets and beetles. These chambermaids and valets wash and bathe the ants and clean up their excreta. In return the ants furnish them food and shelter. The fungus ants of Texas and other southwestern states tend fungus gardens, which they prepare by chewing up green leaves and placing them in beds to mold. As soon as the chewed up leaves mold, the ants plant the spores of fungus on them, and these make food for the ants.

The queen ants live 10 or 15 years and lay multiplied millions of eggs.

The carpenter ants, the largest species, live in dead trees in the woods, in which they make galleries and many rooms. They eat the dead wood, much as termites do. They help to clean up the dead and decaying trees of the forest.

Ants are valuable in many other ways. They furnish much food supply for many birds and some animals; the flickers devour them by the millions and so do the black bears. The cocoons of ants are eaten by lizards, salamanders, birds and other animals. The Indians of the Southwest used to eat the bloated honey ants; they also use them for sweetening their food. Ants make their honey out of honey dew, mostly from the honey dew secreted by plant lice and the cinpid galls wasps.

The small black ants, called "cornfield ants," are perhaps the most abundant of all. These ants keep cows, which are plant lice, and pasture them out on corn and other plants. They milk these "cows" by stroking them with their antenna, to make them give down their milk.

Ants have a language, and talk to one another by means of stroking each other with their antenna—sort of a telegraphic code system.

King Solomon knew the ants were wise, for he said:

"Go to the ant, thou sluggard, and consider her ways and be wise."

Ants also are helpful to the farmer, as they dig tunnels and pits in the earth and loosen and mix up the soil. They even dig pits in hard ground and help to loosen it. When beech trees shed their scales in the spring, the ants gather these and carry them to their dens. No one seems to know why they do this. Perhaps they use the bud scales to decorate their nests.

There are over 2,500 species of ants known and there may be others as yet unknown. One scientist has said if a man knew as much as an ant, in proportion to the size of the brain, he would be able to master the earth and rule it. Darwin said, "An ant's brain is the most marvelous mechanism in nature."

An ant is also the strongest animal known for its size. A small ant can haul a large caterpillar or bug.

ALLOWS ADOPTIONS

Kentucky law allows U. S. Armed Services personnel stationed in Kentucky to adopt a child or to start the adoption procedure even though their legal residence is outside the state.

Overcrowding a vehicle with passengers is one of the most dangerous practices a driver can permit. Special care should be taken not to crowd the driver or to confine the driver's arm movements if he is required to act quickly in an emergency.

TIDBITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

SOME MENIAL LABOR

In far-away and long-ago Fidelity, though all of us were poor and basically humble, there were some taboos about labor that were pretty vigorous. I refer to work that women could do, for nothing was beneath the dignity of he-men. Working in the fields, except for some very dire emergency, was frowned on so much that probably not one woman in fifty had ever helped take up hay or gather corn. Dropping tobacco plants was permitted for teenage girls who wished to make a few nickels for pin money, but I cannot recall having ever seen a grown woman so engaged, except an occasional Negro woman, the wife or daughter of a tenant. Sawing wood was looked down upon as very un-lady-like work; I have heard a few women boast about having helped saw a few bits of wood for the fireplace; in their very tone they showed that they had been very daring, almost wicked. I fear that one of my two sisters would have huddled in a corner and tried to last out a cold spell of weather without enough fire in the house before she would have dared saw or chop wood; the other one, much younger, would have braved public opinion, even at Fidelity, to chop wood, saw wood, haul wood, or do any other farm chore if the need arose or even seemed to arise. The more than a dozen years between the ages of the two sisters marked a change in customs. But, in general, most women of Fidelity were like my older sister.

There was a time when doing the weekly washing was considered necessary but slightly degrading. It was so hard, of course, when water had to be drawn up from a cistern or well, carried in buckets from a spring, or hauled in a barrel from the spring or creek. Then the back-breaking job of hovering over a washboard really did use up a lot of energy and practically exhaust the washerwoman, so that she would hardly be able to start the ironing the next day. My father in his spare time as a country doctor tried to invent a washing machine, along the very line that modern inventors have used except, of course, his machine would have had to be turned by hand, like an old-fashioned grindstone. He managed to get some tanks of various sizes made for him by a tinsmith at Murray, but that is as far as the Wilson Washing Machine ever got. Those tanks, almost indestructible, came in handy as long as I lived on the farm—to haul water from the spring for the weekly washing; one was as large as a big barrel and had to be set into the wagon bed; the other one would fit into the buggy between the dashboard and the seat, provided I let my feet hang outside. Nobody would have welcomed the modern washing machine more than would have father, for he could see how hard the weekly chore of washing was on the womenfolk, white or black.

Some women I knew thought it slightly un-womanish to work in the garden, unless to do such small chores as dropping cabbage plants for the men to set or maybe sow the English peas in the furrows that men had made. Gathering vegetables, however, was usually a woman's work, for a mere man does not always have the right sense about the readiness of vegetables for cooking; green beans that are no longer green and not matured enough for shelly beans and

SAMUEL WEAVER

Remember the picture of the Revolutionary War soldier who served the visiting British general a dinner of roasted potatoes on a piece of bark when he came to negotiate with Gen. Francis Marion, "the Swamp Fox?"

Potatoes were all Marion's men had to eat and if they were good enough for Americans they were good enough for British. So thought Samuel Weaver, who roasted them and following the war settled in Laurel county, Kentucky.

Weaver was a Virginian, son of Daniel Weaver, an explorer of pre-Revolutionary War days, and Mary Ann Bollinger Weaver. The potato cook was a giant of a man, being seven feet four inches tall, strong and broad shoulders, agile and of athletic build. Gen. Marion was pleased with his services as aide-de-camp.

Weaver came to Laurel county very early, one of the first of that hardy band of settlers peopling the transmontane country. We know very little of him. He had 11 children, only three of their names known to us. They were Hezekiah, David and Joseph. David was born 1791, died 1954. Joseph was born 1808, died 1882. In 1823 Joseph married Frances Powell Bledsoe, daughter of an early Bluegrass pioneer family.

GALLION FAMILY

Mrs. Warner C. Parks, 934 8th St., Portsmouth, Ohio, writes for information on the Gallion family.

Her ancestor, Jonathan Gallion, born October 5, 1822, died 1889, married Elizabeth Atkins, born November 19, 1825, died 1904. Both are buried in the Old Gallion cemetery on the ancestral farm in Elliott county, Kentucky. Jonathan procured a land grant in 1879 for 42 acres and Arthur Gallion obtained a grant in 1888. Jonathan and Arthur are thought to have been brothers. The destruction of the Sandy Hook courthouse a few years ago was a blow to those doing research on the family.

Jonathan and Elizabeth Gallion had a son, William (Billy) Gallion, born September 26, 1844, died January 17, 1917. He married Elizabeth Marinda Estham, born February 22, 1851, died March 5, 1929. Both died in Scioto county, Ohio, at Franklin Furnace and are buried in the Old Buckeye cemetery there. Our correspondent thinks it is probable that both William and Elizabeth were born in Greenup county, Kentucky, and were living there when married.

One son of William and Elizabeth were George Washington Gallion, born July 6, 1875, died October 13, 1961. He married Rachel Hulda Wheeler, born April 25, 1875, died May 5, 1951. Both died at Franklin Furnace and are buried in Memorial Park cemetery at Wheelersburg, Ohio. One daughter of George Washington and Rachel Gallion was Carrie Gallion, born March 3, 1903. She married, first, Milton Charles Bailey, who died June 10, 1903. She married, second, Warner Cleveland Parks. Anyone having information on the family are requested to write Mrs. Parks.

"BALD-HEAD MIKE" AUXIER
Michael Auxier, son of Michael Auxier, the immigrant, has been the subject of much correspondence in recent weeks between this columnist and a Southwest Virginia historian, Emory L. Hamilton, Wise, Virginia. Somewhere on the Virginia borderland the Shawnees took his scalp, left him for dead but he survived, came to Kentucky, settled on Kinniconick Creek, Lewis county and reared a family. Since his hair never grew out everybody called him "Bald-Head Mike" Auxier.

wretchedly hard, measured by American standards, these are a happy people. The peasant has no more than an acre of land, which he breaks for planting by hand and, despite all attempts by Americans to urge other crops, plants his land to rice—whether his one acre is level or on a hillside.

Those who are rich became so because the king of Nepal, years ago, gave large tracts of land to favorites. These, in turn, rented their land to peasants, usually restricting the area per tenant to an acre. The sharecropper has barely existed and has been forced to borrow from his landlord at exorbitant interest—with the result that the favored became richer while the peasant became poorer.

This system of land ownership has been abolished by a law which provides that no man may own more than 40 acres, but the law isn't fully enforced. One reason for non-enforcement, Miss Conley explains, is that in many cases the peasant does not want more land and the attendant responsibilities of paying taxes and meeting other legal obligations.

The Nepalese husband and father may have little of this world's goods, but he is "lord of his castle" in the fullest sense, mainly because of the abject homage paid him by other members of his family. The father enters his home; his sons and daughters bow in his presence till their foreheads touch his feet. And his wife goes to him one better. She not only bows to kiss his feet; she washes them, and often, in an odd expression of devotion, drinks the water used in these ablutions!

These and many other interesting sidelights are being recounted by Miss Conley in appearances before 4-H Clubs, P.T.A. groups and other organizations.

Tonight (Thursday) she will speak at the meeting of the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club. Other appearances during the coming week:

uary and February to check on their new property tax assessments during the upcoming inspection period.

Assessments will be higher, Breathitt said, "but because of a law we passed last October, tax rates will be lower."

According to Breathitt, "Now is the time to check on your assessment, not after tax rates are set and your tax bills made out. By then it will be too late. I am asking you to do this so that the transition to fair valuation will not work a burden nor injustice on any individual taxpayer."

The new law directs that local authorities cannot use the new assessment to increase total tax collections above what they were in 1965, except by hearing. In no case can the total be increased more than 10% this year and 10% next.

Breathitt said, "If you have been paying extra taxes because someone else was underassessed, your taxes will now be lower. The property owner who has been underassessed compared to his neighbors will now pay his fair share. You can check your assessment and compare it with others. It should be no more than fair cash value on today's market."

A FRIEND
I am by this note reminded, sadly, of Paul Linkous, of Wheelwright, who died a few days ago. I spent perhaps no more than 10 minutes talking to Mr. Linkous, yet, somehow, always thought of him as a friend. For it was his annual custom upon renewing his subscription to append a note which brightened the day and often provided a paragraph or so for this column.

Happy is the man who is robbed of his friends only by death.

NO NEWS

I know that various and sundry individuals who are interested in my fishing misfortunes are waiting, as they say, with bated breath to hear how matters went with me at Norris Lake. Well, it rained and rained. The weather was miserable, but the surrounding hills with the snow of dogwoods making the cedars greener compensated for a lot of that. I didn't fall out of a boat, break a rod or hook myself in the seat of the pants while making a cast. And the fish were occasionally striking. So I have nothing of interest to report.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

The honest and honorable man who obeys the law but has two cars is not preventing another man from having one car. The man who owns a good house does not thereby force another man to dwell in the slums. Generally, men who are free do not remain economically equal, and men who remain economically equal are not free.—Judge Charles E. Whittaker.

TRIVIA

If you are a person who clutters up his mind with information he is unlikely to use in any way, amuse yourself with these figures: In 24 hours, an adult of average weight breathes 23,040 times, inhaling 438 cubic feet of air. His heart beats 103,689 times; his blood travels 168 million miles. He speaks 4,800 words, moves 750 muscles, and exercises seven million brain cells.

MOTHER'S DAY

Sunday is Mother's Day. A time when all who love their mothers may honestly attempt to express that affection—and when every ingrate who has never shown mother any of the love, respect and appreciation due her may try to redeem himself.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

roasting ears that only the family horse could gnaw are merely two kinds of vegetables that husband or son might bring in from the garden. No taboo prevented the women of the household from making tons of sauerkraut or bushels of dried apples or jars and jars of canned vegetables.

In many parts of the state there was a taboo about milking. In some families I knew the women never milked the cows; that was the man's work. In others, the rule was reversed. Personally, I learned to milk when I was very young, but my duties in feeding and caring for the stock usually took all my time early in the morning or late in the afternoon, when milking time was at hand. As a small boy I helped by building smudge fires to keep the flies and gnats off the cows while my sisters milked; I also was chief-valet-in-waiting to rope off the calves.

AREN'T our folkways funny, no matter how we look at them?

3 MILLION BABY ROCKFISH RELEASED IN NEW LAKE

Frankfort, Ky. — "They're just 'young fry' now, but it won't be long before they pan-fry."

That's the way Harry Towles, of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, summed up the recent stocking of Barkley Lake with some three million baby rockfish.

Towles said that if only 50 percent of the tiny fish survive, Barkley Lake fishermen can expect to harvest a fine crop of the land-locked ocean strippers which have adapted to fresh water.

A very tasty species, rockfish grow quite large with weights of 30 to 40 pounds not uncommon.

Kentucky's rockfish stocking program began in 1957 when a dozen fish ranging from two to 12 pounds were released in Lake Cumberland. Since that time, hundreds of rockfish in various stages of growth have been placed in Lake Cumberland, Lake Herrington and Kentucky Lake.

Kentucky fishermen are encouraged to report the taking of rockfish to conservation officers or the Fish and Wildlife Department so biologists can determine growth progress and other data on reproduction.

It is believed that rockfish will reproduce in Kentucky. Fertile eggs have been found in random samplings of stocked waters, Towles said, however no young fish have been found.

The young rockfish placed in Lake Barkley were raised in a hatchery operated by the South Carolina Fish and Game Commission. Eggs were taken from female rockfish this spring, fertilized and allowed to hatch.

They were flown to Ft. Campbell, Kentucky, aboard a Tennessee Valley Authority airplane, and received by biologists from Kentucky and Tennessee. The fish were then packaged in water-filled plastic bags, moved to Lake Barkley, and released at various locations along the huge lake, both in Kentucky and Tennessee.

Towles said some of the rockfish were taken to the federal hatchery at Frankfort where they may be studied more closely.

The rockfish stocking program is a cooperative venture with Kentucky, Tennessee, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, the TVA, Murray State College and numerous other state and federal groups.

gregations that all citizens are charged with moral obligations and responsibilities in "being good stewards of God's resources."

A statewide kick-off meeting will be held Sunday, May 15, at Lawrenceburg First Christian Church where the Rev. Jack Ervin will deliver a special sermon on the subject of soil stewardship.

Many local soil conservation districts have scheduled "old ham breakfasts" for local ministers, William C. Gayle, director, state division of soil and water resources said. The ministers will be presented with booklets to assist them in preparing sermons on soil stewardship.

The booklet notes: "There is a crisis in the countryside where nature and human resources commingle. Here the failures in stewardship are quickly seen in gullies, stripped areas, run-down farms, poverty, dwindling communities, and people without purpose or meaning left in their lives."

McDowell, Ky.—The Left Beaver Civil Defense and Rescue Squad planned a simulated disaster along with the cooperation of the Appalachian Regional hospital and the Daniel Boone Clinic at McDowell. The rescue was executed Sunday evening at the McDowell high school.

To be able to perform the simulated rescue in a safe and orderly manner the squad received approximately 50 hours of training in first aid and light rescue work. The training consisted of treating patients with broken backs, necks, legs, arms and all types of wounds and burns. Different types of manual artificial respiration, along with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation was taught.

The rescue unit consisted of 21 members, divided into three teams, six men to a team along with a director and a deputy director. Glenn Frazier, captain of the squad, was elected director of the exercise. James Conley was selected as the deputy director. The team captains for the three teams were Albert Hall, Jr., Edgar Moore, James Blevins.

The exercise consisted of lowering simulated casualties from the rooftop of the McDowell high school. To be able to perform this exercise safely, each individual was assigned a specific job that was well executed. "Victims" were also rescued from all floors.

Twenty-one citizens were selected to represent the casualties. They were rehearsed and prepared in the school building, some time before the scheduled exercise. Five locally-owned ambulances provided transportation from the site to the hospital.

The exercise required a considerable amount of supplies. Glen Frazier came up with most of the necessary materials. The Prestonsburg Civil Defense unit furnished a portable generator and four floodlights for the exercise. An extension ladder was borrowed from the Prestonsburg Fire Department. The Left Beaver unit acknowledges the help and cooperation received from all the contributing agencies and citizens.

A HOMESITE AND $5,000 WILL GET NEW HOME UNDER DEVELOPING PLAN

Your family now can have a new home built for about $5,000. This low-cost house has enough space for good family living and a lot of storage room. And it has three bedrooms, so it can be used by a family that has both boys and girls.

In some parts of Kentucky, where building costs are low, it will cost even less than $5,000 to build this house. And the plans meet Federal Housing Administration standards, too, so an FHA loan could be used to build it.

This $5,000 price does not include cost of the lot, says Mrs. Frances Pitts, Floyd county home Demonstration agent.

The 24x32-foot house built by this plan has a living room, dining room, kitchen, bathroom, hall, three bedrooms, front porch and back porch.

The living room and dining room don't have a wall between them, so the family has more space to use. The kitchen is planned to keep the cost low, but it still has plenty of room to work. It also has enough cabinets to store the things needed in a kitchen.

The plan is laid out so that entry room in the house is easy to get to. The hall goes from the living room and dining room to the bedrooms. The low-cost bathroom is just off the hall. The house also has an outside storage area on the back porch.

Insulation, to keep the house warm in winter and cool in summer, is also part of the plan. And the house has plenty of windows, placed so fresh air can move through the house in summer. A roomy overhang shades the front door and the concrete front porch.

In the plan, doors have been left off the closets to help keep down the cost of building. These can be added any time the family wishes. Shutters also can be put on outside the windows if the family wants them. Bevel weatherboard is used on the outside of the house, but vertical boards and batten or bricks or native stone could be used instead.

The plans for this low-cost house were drawn up by the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service and were based on an idea from the Kentucky Housing Development Committee.

Meetings will be held soon in different parts of Kentucky to explain the new house plan to builders, lumber dealers, and persons from private money-lending firms and from federal and state agencies that deal with housing and community development. All of these groups have shown much interest in the plan and one such meeting has already been held.

Copies of this new low-cost house plan may be ordered from the Department of Agricultural Engineering, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky, 40506. To pay for printing and paper costs, a charge of 75c is made for each set of blueprints.

Floyd-Produced Cookbook Given Favorable Review

"What's Cooking in Kentucky," the cookbook published by a group of Hueysville women, headed by Mrs. Rondal E. Hayes, postmaster there, is not only in its third edition—it has received a favorable review from Poppy Cannon in her syndicated column which is published in the Detroit Free Press, the Baltimore Sun and other metropolitan newspapers.

The columnist notes that the cookbook has been a labor of love undertaken by women of the Hueysville Church of Christ to help pay for a new roof for the church, and she describes "What's Cooking in Kentucky" as typically American, and "full of delectable recipes . . ."

The cookbook has been sold to individuals over a wide section of the nation and has been on sale at Kentucky state parks and in department stores in larger cities as well as at business centers in Floyd county.

HOUSE COMMITTEE OKS
FIVE-YEAR LIBRARY AID

Washington, D.C.—The House Education and Labor Committee last week approved a five-year extension of the federal library services and construction act that carries a $75 million authorization for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Kentucky's Rep. Carl D. Perkins, Hindman, led the fight for the bill in a narrowly divided committee. He had to settle for somewhat less money than he had sought, but he did win a substantial increase over the $7.5 million in President Johnson's budget, and over the $55 million appropriation for this year.

Rep. Sam Gibbons, a Florida Democrat, tried to persuade the committee to stick with the budget recommendations, but Perkins was able to override the opposition. Result of the committee vote was not announced.

Perkins said the bill as approved by the committee would permit Kentucky to carry on a broad program of library activity.

The measure could come before the full house for a vote within the next week.

The committee-approved bill provides $35 million for library services and $40 million for construction next fiscal year. The total amount escalates at the rate of $20 million a year for the next four years in these figures: 1968 — $45 million for services, $50 million for construction; 1969 — $55 million for services, $60 million for construction; 1970 — $65 million for services, $70 million for construction; 1971 — $71 million for services, $80 million for construction.

The bill, following the lines suggested by Rep. Roman Pucinski, D-Ill., chairman of the select subcommittee on education, is a compromise between the Perkins and administration proposals.

Mrs. Combs Speaks To Wayland Club

Wayland, Ky.—"Art and Beauty in the World Around Us" was the subject under discussion at a last week's meeting of the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club, with Mrs. T. A. Combs guest-speaker.

Mrs. Combs' talk was spiced with experiences and anecdotes from her last year's tour of Europe, during which she spent three days in Paris viewing works of the great masters at the Louvre. The Louvre was of particular interest to Mrs. Combs, since she is an art teacher at Garrett and formerly was of the Art Department of Eastern Kentucky State University.

Describing life in Rome, Mrs. Combs explained that one had to be one's own traffic cop when trying to cross a bustling thoroughfare. In a city with no stop signs and no speed limits, one crosses the street by holding up both of one's hands to stop the traffic, then amid the noise of screaming tires, one proceeds cautiously. The main meal of the day in Rome, as explained by Mrs. Combs, is at 1:30 in the afternoon, for which all shops are closed until siesta time is over at 4:30, when shops are reopened and remain open until 8:30 p.m.

Mrs. Combs marveled at how modern Roman architecture so beautifully encompasses the old without destroying the effect of antiquity.

Described as the highlight of her trip was an unexpected "sit-in" on part of a meeting of the Ecumenical Council at the Vatican.

After speaking, Mrs. Combs passed for viewing art books containing pictures of some of the great paintings she had seen in Paris and Rome, as well as souvenirs from her trip.

Prior to the program, Mrs. J. T. Spillman gave the devotions, and during a business meeting following the program, Mrs. Paul V. Rutledge, of Estill, was unanimously approved for club membership.

Mrs. Hansel Bradley and Mrs. Felix Coburn were hostesses. Mrs. Eugene Mullins was program leader.

Day-Care Group Shows 3.15-Point IQ Advance Within 10-Month Period

A group of Perry county children enrolled in the pre-school rural day-care center at Buckhorn, in 1964-65 showed an average 3.15-point gain on standard I.Q. tests at the end of the first 10 months of center operation, Child Welfare Department Commissioner Maurice A. Harmon has announced.

A second group of youngsters from the same area who were tested at the same time but who did not participate in the day care program showed an average loss of 4.75 I.Q. points over the 10-month period.

Announcing the release of the Buckhorn Center's progress report covering its first two years of operation, Harmon said, "The seven-point difference between the two groups is not statistically significant, but it does illustrate the trend we expected."

"Early reports from the first grade teacher in the Buckhorn school predicted these results. She said that children now in the first grade who were allowed to take advantage of pre-school day-care facilities are performing at a higher level than their older brothers and sisters to whom the enriched day-care program was not available.

"To confirm the early research results," Harmon continued, "the department's research staff hopes to make a long-term study of day-care youngsters, to keep tabs on their intellectual and social development over a period of years."

The Buckhorn center was the original day-care facility set up by the Child Welfare Department in cooperation with the Buckhorn Presbyterian child welfare agency, the Perry county school board, and the local board of health in 1964.

Harmon said, "The idea was to illustrate the value of early intellectual and social stimulation on poverty-isolated children and their families, but Center activities didn't stop with day-care for pre-school children.

"Caseworkers attached to the project were available to help mothers of the day-care children with new ideas on child care and for counseling with the families as a whole."

Commissioner Harmon pointed out that Buckhorn worked well as a demonstration project.

"The first center served as the basis of a grant asked for and received by the Kentucky Child Welfare Research Foundation from the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity which has made it possible to set up 20 more day-care centers in 10 Eastern Kentucky counties, serving approximately 600 children and their families.

"The fact that seven points separate the average I.Q. scores of children who were able to take advantage of day-care services from the scores of youngsters who did not participate is only one indication of the Buckhorn center's value," he said.

"Other factors that I.Q. tests can't measure show up in a youngster's total performance in school—things like the ability to work and play comfortably with other kids, the ability to give long-term attention to a single project and the development of curiosity that makes learning possible.

"Rural day-care programs can encourage these aspects of pre-school child development, and they all may combine to result in a higher I.Q. score.

"Research objectives and physical and psychological examinations will be continued with the children enrolled in 1965-66. The necessity of this was readily accepted by the parents, who helped plan testing appointments and made arrangements for their children's transportation to the center.

"The total effect of all the rural day-care projects operated by the Kentucky Child Welfare Research Foundation has not yet been assessed," Harmon said.

"Perhaps the total impact in terms of human values will never be measured, but I believe that services to Appalachian-area children and their families will result in the development of human resources previously untapped in Kentucky—a goal set by Governor Breathitt in 1963, when he pledged 'A better opportunity for every Kentuckian to realize his full potential.'"

COMMUNITY COLLEGES SAVED KY. PARENTS OVER $3 MILLION. FEATURE BY ALLEN CLAIMS

Lexington, Ky. — Kentucky parents this year have saved more than $3.1 million in the cost of giving their children a college education — thanks to the community college system.

That is the estimate given in an article in the Kentucky Alumnus, the magazine of the UK Alumni Association. Author of the feature article is Quentin D. Allen, editor of the publication.

The Prestonsburg native based his estimates on figures supplied by UK officials, who calculate that it costs $1,000 annually in living expenses for a student to attend college away from home. With more than 3,100 fulltime students enrolled in the University's community college system, the saving which results from that number's living at home figures out to more than $3 million.

The current issue of The Alumnus is a report to graduates and former students on the growth of the community college system and the criteria set up by the University for establishing such an institution in a community.

Allen also reports on the results of a survey made by three community college officials from the University of Florida. They said the UK system of organization is becoming a model for the nation.

Dr. Raymond Schultz of Florida State University praised the system as one way "to overcome the deficiencies of a huge senior college."

The current number of The Alumnus contains statements by Mayor George P. Archer, of Prestonsburg; Dr. Henry A. Campbell, president of the Prestonsburg Community College, and others.

NRA Names Halbert Firearms Instructor

T/Sgt. Donahue Halbert, of Langley, has been appointed a home firearms safety instructor by the National Rifle Association, sponsor of a new course designed to help reduce shooting accidents in the home.

The NRA course promotes safety among those who normally do not use firearms for recreations but have them in their home. It emphasizes the recognition of unsafe practices and conditions and points out how to correct them.

Halbert was awarded an NRA instructor's certificate following successful completion of a written examination. He is now qualified to conduct the course locally. It runs about four hours and requires no shooting range since actual firing is not included.

Alice Lloyd Award Goes to James Still, Poet and Novelist

Pippa Passes, Ky. — Alice Lloyd College has announced that its second annual Poetry Award has been granted to James Still, writer-in-residence at Morehead State College, for "Hounds on the Mountain," a collection of poems about the Appalachians.

First published in 1937, the collection has been reprinted recently by the Anvil Press, Lexington, Kentucky.

In citing "Hounds on the Mountain," Alice Lloyd College called the collection "exemplary of Still's poetic sensitivity to the mountain folk and his deep understanding of their culture."

The 1966 award is Alice Lloyd's first to a living author. Last year it honored posthumously Ann Cobb for her book of poetry entitled "Kinfolks."

Presentation of Still's award will be made during Alice Lloyd's Appalachian Arts festival, now underway.

Although Still was born in Alabama, and educated at Vanderbilt University and the University of Illinois, he has lived for several years in Eastern Kentucky. For six years he was librarian of the Hindman Settlement School at Hindman, Kentucky and still maintains a residence on Dead Mare Branch of Little Car Creek in Knott County, Kentucky.

Besides "Hounds on the Mountain," his principal works includes "River of Earth," a novel, and "On Troublesome Creek," a book of short stories.

Francis To Attend As Bar Delegate

Prestonsburg Attorney Fred G. Francis, representing the 31st circuit district, will be among 68 members of the House of Delegates meeting at the Kentucky State Bar Association convention in Louisville, May 25-26-27. The annual convention is expected to bring together nearly 1,000 state lawyers and judges for a program of seminars and addresses by eminent legal specialists at Louisville's Kentucky Hotel.
