LAND ON SHORELINE OF LAKE IMPROVED

DEWEY LAKE REFUGE JOB UNDER WAY

'Dozer Clears Acreage For Game Food Plots; Work Is 10% Complete

A move spearheaded by the Dewey Lake Fish & Game Club resulted last week in the beginning of work to make of the Dewey Lake area more than a game refuge in name only.

The work included the clearing of and for food plots, with a bulldozer tearing away underbrush, briars and other impediments, leveling the land and preparing it for seeding.

Approximately 15 acres in the Big Branch and McGuire Branch areas were prepared last week, and the area cleared was ready this week for sowing.

The overall program envisions similar work on all level shoreline, all the way from the German bridge to the Jenny Wiley State Park boat dock, Robert Burchett, president of the club, said.

Cooperating with the club are County Judge Henry Stumbo and the Floyd fiscal court, the U.S. Corps of Engineers, the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and the state departments of Parks, Forestry and Fish & Wildlife Resources.

Total cost of the undertaking is estimated at $10,000.

The Big Branch and McGuire Branch work was done through the use of the county's dozer for four days. This did approximately (See Story No. 4, Page 8)

This Town ... That World

May is so rightly named. It may rain today, and it may snow tomorrow.

CAUSE, ONE-THIRD KNOWN

We've received several guesses as to the cause of those earth tremors felt locally and reported in this column last week. One "scientist" is certain they were caused by jets flying out of sight and out-of-reason fast. Another thought it might be old mines collapsing, hereabouts. Then there was the claim that blasting at a nearby mining operation caused it.

I can't account for two of those jolts, but I can for one. It came when I hit the ceiling after taking a gander at my property assessment.

HEAVY USE IS SEEN FOR AMPHITHEATRE

"The Jenny Wiley Story," the pageant planned for writing by Paul Green and for staging at the Jenny Wiley State Park Amphitheatre, is no immediate probability, but the amphitheatre, one of the finest in the state parks system, will come in for rather steady use this season by the Jenny Wiley Drama Association and other groups.

Chalmer H. Frazier, president of the drama association, said the major production planned for the amphitheatre since its completion will await more motels to accommodate tourists and other visitors from whom the production would draw needed support. Mr. Green has done some preliminary work on the script but has expressed the belief that actual staging of the pageant should await further development of accommodations for those coming here to see the production.

The amphitheatre season began two weeks ago with the Community Chorus concert. Last Saturday, the Louisville Symphony Orchestra presented afternoon and evening concerts. Other events scheduled include "Mister President, the Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival, "South Pacific," "HMS Pinafore," "Annie, Get Your Gun" and "The Sound of Music."

Rabid Dog Report Causes Quarantine In Langley Vicinity

Acting on the report that rabid dogs may be at large in the vicinity of Langley, County Judge Henry Stumbo issued a quarantine order Wednesday.

The quarantine, effective for the next 45 days, provides that all dogs within a radius of one mile from the Langley postoffice shall be confined.

MAN ADMITS WOODS FIRES

Officer Says Mitchell Had Matches in Hand, Admitted 16-17 Blazes

George Mitchell, of the Mud Creek section, Monday was back in the county jail from which he had been released five days earlier.

He was given a sanity hearing recently but the jury disagreed and he was released May 11 from jail, in the custody of a relative. Before leaving, he had caused considerable damage at the jail, officials said.

Monday, he was arrested by Forest Warden Frank Parsons who booked him on a charge of deliberately and maliciously setting woodland fires. Parsons said he caught Mitchell in the woods with a box of matches in hand and that his prisoner admitted setting "16 or 17 fires," Sunday and Monday.

"If you'll pay my fine, I'll put them out," he quoted Mitchell as saying.

Many residents of the Mud Creek area have been terrorized by Mitchell's actions since his release from jail, the forester said.

Others booked at the jail within the week:

Norman C. Adams, Roddy Ferguson and Charles Whitehead, each booked as a.w.o.l. from the Army by Sgt. Berry; Anthony Akers, reckless driving, Sheriff Joe W. Lewis and Deputy Sheriff Wallace Frasure; Herschell Goble, drunk driving, by Deputy Sheriff Roy Reynolds; Harless Kilburn, speeding, reckless driving and resisting arrest, jailed by Deputy Sheriff Gene Prater; Arthur Tackett, drunk driving, by State Trooper Richard Ray; Denny Ainsworth Martin, driving while intoxicated, by State Trooper Harmon; Johnnie Doug Napier, adultery, arrested by Policeman A. J. Reed, of Martin; Ray Smith, no operator's license, by Deputy Sheriff Milt Hunt; Harry Dean Stone, reckless driving, by Policemen Sam Hale and C. W. Booth, of Prestonsburg.

FIRM RAZING OLD BUILDING

Ray Howard Furniture To Erect Two-Story Structure on Third

Razing of a Third street building was begun this week to make way for the construction by the Ray Howard Furniture Store of a two-story structure fronting 105 feet on Third.

The building will extend 115 feet in depth and will be of brick and concrete block. The project will involve an estimated $65,000 expenditure.

The structure now being leveled is the old Jeff Brown residence which has been used as a storeroom. Later, the present store building will be razed. The business will be operated while construction is being done from its Prestonsburg and Lancer warehouses.

The furniture firm hopes to begin construction by August. It plans to leave a 20-foot area between Third street and the front of the structure in order to provide adequate customer parking.

When completed, the building will house practically all of the stock, with the exception of that which will be stored in a nearby structure, and it also will permit display of a part of the stock of the Colonial House which the firm operates at West Prestonsburg.

MISS FLOYD-CO. PAGEANT TO BE AT AMPHITHEATRE CLIMAXING WEEKS OF WORK

Six weeks of work by the Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club will be climaxed at 8 p.m. Saturday by the crowning of Miss Floyd County at the Jenny Wiley State Park Amphitheatre. In the event of rain, the coronation will be held at Prestonsburg high school fieldhouse.

The winner of the Miss Floyd County Pageant, a preliminary to the Miss Kentucky and Miss America contests, will be crowned by Miss Floyd County, 1965, Sharon Collins.

The day's festivities will begin with a reception at 11:30 a.m. in the lounge of May Lodge at which the eight contestants will be introduced to the judges. The contestants will be guests at a luncheon at 12:15, given in their honor in the private dining room of the lodge. At 2 p.m. the pageant parade will be staged in downtown Prestonsburg, with the contestants, judges, the Prestonsburg high school band, Mayor George P. Archer and Miss Floyd County, 1965, taking part. The parade will start from the Prestonsburg grade school and continue through the business section.

The contestants are Ginny Archer, Karen Bussey, Deanna Campbell, Jan Collins, Brenda Rice, Jackie Sue Stone, Carolyn Thomas and Cheryl Tussey. They will be judged by the point system, appearing in both evening gowns and bathing suits and also will be judged on the basis of talent.

After the top three are selected, they will be asked a "personality" question. The winner of the Floyd County Pageant will receive a $100 scholarship from the Pepsi-Cola Company, a trophy, and a wardrobe from the Francis

LIGHT FLOYD VOTE SEEN FOR PRIMARY

What may be Kentucky's dull-est election will be held next Tuesday when the voters of the two major political parties will nominate candidates to compete in the November finals for the offices of U.S. Senator and U.S. Representative in Congress.

The primary campaign has been kept whisper-soft, and interest is at a minimum as nobody expects John Young Brown (D) or John Sherman Cooper, Republican incumbent, to have more than token opposition for the Senatorial nominations and as Congressman Carl D. Perkins is considered a shoo-in for re-nomination for Congress on the Democratic ticket.

Yet all have opposition. Brown is opposed by James Ward Lentz, Gaines P. Wilson, Jr. and Jessie Nicholas Ryan Cecil. Senator Cooper is opposed by Thurman Jerome Hamlin and Sam M. Ward, Congressman Perkins' opposition consists of Herbert Rowland and Warren J. Flanery.

Cliff See, of Louisa, has the Republican nomination for Congress from the Seventh district without opposition, and his name does not appear on the ballot for next Tuesday's primary.

The Floyd county election commissioners, Charles Newman, L.

B. Moore and Sheriff Joe W. Lewis, Saturday released the names of those who will serve at the primary as election officers.

The election officers named to serve in each of the county's 41 precincts follow, in each instance the names of the two judges, the clerk and sheriff appearing in order:

PRESTONSBURG NO. 1—Mrs. Brad Boyd, Mrs. Oma Hamilton, Paul Messer, Bill Callihan.

PRESTONSBURG NO. 2—Bill Pettrey, Tom G. Dingus, Harris Howard, Frank Blackburn.

PRESTONSBURG NO. 3 (Depot)—Watt Hale, Hobart Younce, Nora Fitzpatrick, Dexter Baldrige.

100 ATTEND 2-DAY MEET

Ky. Librarians Confer At May Lodge; Perkins Cited for Leadership

Librarians and Friends of Kentucky Libraries from all sections of the state attended the two-day annual spring conference of the Public Library Section of the Kentucky Library Association at May Lodge last Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. Barbara Miller, director of children's work, Louisville Free Public Library, was guest-consumant and gave demonstrations on "New Trends in Children's Literature" and "Story Telling and Programs for Children."

Approximately 100 persons attended the luncheon, Friday. Congressman Carl D. Perkins, invited guest speaker, was unable to attend. A citation from KLA, for Mr. Perkins' outstanding leadership in library legislation, was read in his behalf. The award will be presented at a later date.

Recognition was given to friends of Kentucky libraries present who have made an outstanding contribution. Those (See Story No. 8, Page 6)

BOARD O.K.'s NEW SYSTEM

New Accounting Plan Effective Next Year In County's Schools

A new system of internal accounting which will apply to the bookkeeping at individual schools of the county will go into effect next year.

New accounting regulations submitted by the State Department of Education were accepted by the Floyd County Board of Education at its May meeting. Accounting on the individual school level has been under study for the last three of four years. The result is a new type of bookkeeping.

The Board of Education voted unanimously to move in the direction of a 10% increase in tax revenues this year. It took this step, it was pointed out, on the recommendation of the Floyd County Parent-Teacher Council which adopted a resolution asking such an increase in income. The Kentucky Education Association has also pointed out that if the 10% increase possible under the new state law is not sought this year, an increase could not be gained next year, however great the need.

If the increase is granted, after a hearing, it would mean $48,777 more in revenues than last year.

NEW PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH DEDICATION SLATED JUNE 5

The date for the laying of the cornerstone and dedication of the First Presbyterian Church of Prestonsburg has been set for June 5, it was announced this week.

The cornerstone will be laid by the grand master of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky Masons, Thomas Burchett Jr., of Ashland.

This service will begin at 3:15, and will be followed by the presentation of the building by the Building Committee to the congregation and the dedication of the building and memorials that have been placed in it. The Rev. Gordon Corbett, of Lexington, synod executive, will be the principal speaker, with other ministers from the community and surrounding area assisting in the service. This service will begin at 4 p.m.

The public is invited to these services which are set for a time not to conflict with other religious services here, so that all will be free to attend.

FLOYD BERRY LOSS HEAVY

But Fair Yield Seen With Enough Rainfall And Proper Crop Care

Strawberry growers, who had hopes until recently of harvesting their best crop this year, apparently have lost as a result of frost and freezing weather from a third to half of their crops.

This estimate of the damage from the recent unseasonable weather was made this week by Gene Ball, of the Extension department, who has within the week visited a number of farms.

But, said Ball, some bloom is coming on the plants, and, given sufficient rainfall and care by the growers, a fair crop is yet possible. Strawberry growers should spray their plants with Capstan to prevent rot and mold, he said.

The damage by frost was spotty, a patch in one hollow being hit hard and another in a neighboring hollow escaping with little damage, it was said.

Potatoes and corn are shaking the effects of frostbite but beans, cabbages and tomatoes are lost. There was an especially keen demand for tomato plants this week as gardeners planned to replant.

Despite the prospects of a reduced crop, the strawberry processing plant here will begin operation next week, it was said. Crates were available this week to growers.

FUND DRIVE PLANS MADE

Alice Lloyd College Support from Section It Benefits Is Sought

Alice Lloyd College's first annual community support campaign got under way Monday with an organizational meeting at May Lodge.

R. V. May, new member of the college board of trustees, and chairman of the drive to gain continuing financial support for the private junior college, and a committee of local business leaders laid the groundwork at the meeting for the project's kick-off Monday, May 23.

"Floyd county owes much to Alice Lloyd," May said. "Probably 35 percent of our teachers began their education at Pippa Passes, for example."

"Also," he pointed out, "all colleges benefit when a community becomes actively aware of the financial requirements of education."

SUNDAY DESIGNATED A DAY OF PRAYER

The Floyd County Christian Dry League has designated Sunday, May 22, as a day of prayer when divine guidance and help will be asked in the effort to protect Floyd county against the return of legalized liquor.

Churches of the county are joining in observance of the day, and pastors are asking all Christians to add their prayers to this cause.

TAX REVIEW UNDER WAY

Extension of Time Possible If Board Work Not Complete

The Floyd Board of Supervisors was well into the difficult task of reviewing the tax assessment this week, but its members were not certain Wednesday that the work can be completed within the one-week period provided. An extension of time may be asked.

The number of those who filed with the county clerk written request to appear before the board is not great—115, to date—but some of these represent several parcels of property, requiring more time for hearing.

The supervisors—Jack Brannham, Homer Salisbury and Ellis Martin—said Wednesday that they will visit certain properties to determine as nearly as possible if the assessment values are correct. Wayne Stumbo, of Minnie, who was appointed to the board, was unable to serve.

For the first time, the daily sessions of the board were being attended by one or more representatives of the State Department of Revenue.

COAL TRUCKS AND 3 BUSES ARE BLOCKED

Citizens Protest Speed Of Coal Trucks; Mahan Says One Road Closed

A sitdown by women and school pupils stopped operation of coal trucks and three school buses at Auxier Tuesday morning, and less than 24 hours later the coal ramp of the Mahan Coal Company there was severely damaged by a fire of unknown origin.

How much of these events could be traced to continuing friction between members of the United Mine Workers of America and the Terry Elkhorn Coal Company and the Mahan firm, officials could not say.

The sitdown closed the Auxier grade school and prevented transportation of high school pupils from the Auxier vicinity to Prestonsburg high school.

It also halted operation of the Mahan Coal Company ramp and tippie. Mahan has been handling the product of the Terry Elkhorn Coal Company which has been picketed for several weeks while the UMWA attempted to organize it.

Mahan said he had not inspected the ramp after the fire but said its probable damage will range from $1,000 to $1,500. The operation had been closed since the sitdown and will remain closed for repairs.

He added that there was no electrical wiring on the ramp to cause the blaze.

A delegation of Auxier citizens visited the County Judge's office, Tuesday morning, to ask action against the coal trucks which they said, were overloaded and travelling at excessive speed past the school. G. C. Burchett, trial commissioner, said he would issue warrants on the affidavit of a citizen but told the group he would otherwise take no part in the controversy.

The three school buses which had been blocked were extricated by the intervention of State Police, around 10 a.m.

Mahan said the trucks had used a direct route to his tippie until it was closed and that they had been forced to use the more circuitous route via the school since that time.

Parents of schoolchildren at Auxier had protested against the speed and heavy-loading of coal on the trucks, pointing out that (See Story No. 3, Page 8)

4-H ENTERS NUCLEAR AGE WITH RADIATION PROJECT

The Floyd county 4-H Club program has become an active part of the Nuclear Age. Radiation—what it is and how it affects living things—is being studied by 1968 county boys and girls this spring through a new statewide 4-H Club program.

These 4-H members are finding out, by making actual experiments, some of the effects of radiation on plants. They've planted seeds that have been exposed to different levels of radiation and are now carefully comparing the growth of the various plants.

Connected with the increased emphasis on science in 4-H project work, this year's program is the first in a proposed series of 4-H radiation experiments for Big Sandy area 4-H members. The series is being developed by three specialists with the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service: Kenneth Evans, civil defense specialist; Kermit Mills, agricultural engineer; and Shirley Phillips, agronomist.

Three packets of corn and three of okra seed were supplied to those taking part in the experiments. One packet of each had only "background" radiation—that is, the normal amount of radiation present in the environment—which is small enough to be considered "zero" for purposes of the experiment. The second and third packets of each had been exposed to very high levels of radiation—45,000 rads and 100,000 rads (the rad is a measure of radiation exposure).

The 45,000 rad dose is several times as high as most areas would get from fallout after a nuclear war. However the seeds are completely safe to handle. Although they have been exposed to radiation, they are not radioactive, just as a person isn't radioactive after having a chest X-ray (a familiar use of radiation). But the seeds have been commercially treated for planting with fungicides and insecticides and should not be eaten.

Both corn and okra are being used in each experiment because radiation causes less injury and less reduction of growth to okra than to corn. Thus, the 4-Hers can compare how radiation affects different kinds of plants as well as the effect of different levels of radiation on the same type plant.

The seeds were exposed to radiation at Oak Ridge, Tennessee, and furnished to the 4-Hers by county Extension agents. The experiments are being supervised by local classroom teachers and volunteer leaders. In most cases, the teachers are using the experiment as a classroom project. Most members taking part are fifth, sixth and seventh graders.

The 4-Hers planted the seeds in small containers and are now keeping careful records for 10-12 days on growth of the plants. Both before and after the experiment, the members take a short test on their knowledge about radiation. Some older members plan to transplant the seedlings, allow the corn and okra to mature, plant seeds from them, and observe the "second generation" of radiated plants.

Careful control of temperature and amount of light and water are being stressed, since such factors also affect plant growth. Thus, the boys and girls are also learning the kind of care and observation needed to conduct a successful experiment.

Jack Friar, Floyd county Extension agent and chairman of youth programs in the Big Sandy extension area, points out:

"Radiation and radioactive materials are becoming more and more important in our lives. With the increasing peaceful use of nuclear energy in such fields as medicine, industry and agriculture, we need to understand radiation and how to live safely with it. And a knowledge of radiation's behavior, its effect on living cells and some principles of protection against radioactive fallout could save many lives in the event of nuclear war."

"This 4-H radiation project not only shows the members some effects of radiation on plants; they also learn some basic facts about the safe use of nuclear energy, and about the need for protection from fallout in case of nuclear war," Friar added.

Homemakers' Clubs Study Area Problems At Meet Last Thursday

Homemakers' clubs met in a planning session for the Big Sandy area last Thursday at Jenny Wiley State Park.

Eight specialists from the University of Kentucky conducted the workshop sessions to earmark problems of the area in each program topic, then to come up with ways of solving these problems. So many potential programs were found in these discussions that each workshop closed with a setting of priorities as to what phase needed to be emphasized first.

Areas covered were: Foods and nutrients, clothing, housing, home furnishings, issues and concerns, family living, cultural development and home management.

In all work areas the problems were seen to be of community-wide concern, rather than only the concern of one group. Reports from the workshops listed various groups that needed to be incorporated in overall plans for future lessons.

Some of the topics discussed were: the need to develop self-respect; pride and desire to improve conditions in the Big Sandy area; management lessons in financing home and business operations (this involves clothing, food, home furnishings and even buying a home); more emphasis in reaching youth with the educational programs in solving Eastern Kentucky's problems.

In four program areas the subject of knowledge and enforcement of planning and zoning on a county and area basis was emphasized.

Leaders emphasized that at the same time homemakers clubs are aiming toward more community participation in their goals, the idea of personal development must not be lost.

This was evidenced in the wide scope of cultural development programs outlined by the group such as public speaking, a study of art and perhaps even a special interest group working in art.

Developing potential skills that could produce future job opportunities for women was another area emphasized often in the all-day conference. This need in the Big Sandy area was pointed out by statistics showing that only 8% of the homemakers in this area are employed, while the figure in Kentucky is 25% and in the United States, 40%.

Mrs. Faye Kelly, of Johnson county, area homemakers secretary, presided at the meeting in the absence of the president, Mrs. L. M. Newsom, of Pike county, area president.

Mrs. Cohen Campbell, wife of the pastor of Lancer Baptist Chapel, was able to return to her home this week after receiving treatment for a heart condition at a Pikeville hospital.

College Awarded Federal Grants

Rediford Damron, acting president of Pikeville College, has announced that the college has been awarded $71,008 for the Work-Study Program operated by the college and $16,500 for the Educational Opportunity Grants Program for the 1966-'67 academic year.

The Educational Opportunity Grants will be awarded to students of high scholastic achievement and great financial need in order that they may continue to attend college. The minimum award is $200, and the student must be receiving aid of some other type, excluding the Work-Study Program, in an amount double that of the Educational Opportunity Grant. This aid may be in the form of National Defense Student Loans or regular college workshops, or both.

The College Work-Study Program has been in operation during the 1965-'66 academic year, when it was financed with a $42,014 federal grant and local matching funds on a nine to one basis. The students are working for the college itself, the city of Pikeville, the Methodist hospital, and the Council of the Southern Mountains, all public or private non-profit organizations.

Athletic Group Here To Support U-KATS; Program Explained

U-KATS (University of Kentucky Athletic Team Supporters) a nonprofit corporation founded for the purpose of boosting the University of Kentucky athletic programs and the improvement of athletics at the primary and secondary school levels in the state, is promised strong support from the Prestonsburg Athletic Association. The membership of U-KATS is composed of persons over 21 years of age who have sincere interest in the purposes of the group. A member need not be a University of Kentucky alumnus. In seeking members for U-KATS, the primary purpose is simply to gather as many people who will support the UK program as much as possible. Main work of the organization will be done through the enthusiasm and influence of these people. A secondary program involves membership dues for the group at $10 a year, and U-KATS expect to accomplish much through the combined strength of the membership dues. The monies will be placed in a central fund, from which they will be used solely to pay for the administrative costs of U-KATS and to be invested in Kentucky primary and secondary school programs. A man from Prestonsburg, for instance, designates Prestonsburg high school as the school he wishes to support through U-KATS. Five dollars of his membership dues will be held in escrow for Prestonsburg high school alone. If 1,000 members join who support Prestonsburg high school, then U-KATS will donate $5,000 to the Prestonsburg program as a need arises. However, the club is not limited in its aid to the $5 alone. Many members join without designating any particular high school. Their money, and any money that is not needed for the administrative costs of U-KATS, may be invested in any way the board of directors sees fit. So it may be possible for U-KATS to invest funds to begin a football program at a school that now does not have one. Next meeting of the Prestonsburg Athletic Association will be held at 7:30 p.m., June 14 at the Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad building. All interested persons are invited.

director, attended the meeting and gave his endorsement to the project. Noting Alice Lloyd's contribution of leadership to the Eastern Kentucky region, he said, "I know of no college more worthy of the community's support."

Alice Lloyd co-ordinator of the campaign, Robert L. Hoskins, said that in the past most of the college's support has come from out-of-state. "Although more than 90 percent of Alice Lloyd's graduates return to the mountains to practice their business or profession," he said, "the area has never been asked to contribute significantly to the Alice Lloyd program. Now, the rising cost of education requires it. We are sure the response will be generous."

"But aside from the money," Hoskins continued, "we also are seeking a demonstration of confidence in the college's program of leadership education. Many of the large foundations and corporations from which we seek gift investments are interested in what our own people think of us. Financial support of the school is one way to show them."

Investor's guide!

A Cadillac remains unmistakably a Cadillac regardless of year. New or previously-owned, its impressive size, its remarkable beauty and its continuity of styling have all contributed to Cadillac's reputation as the finest of all luxury car investments.

Every day, more and more wise car buyers are discovering that they can get more performance, luxury, distinction and pride of ownership in a previously-owned Cadillac than in many new cars of lesser stature. For example, Cadillac engineering has always been so advanced that many features of Cadillacs several years old are just now finding their way into new cars of other makes. And Cadillac has for years provided as standard equipment automatic transmission, power steering, power brakes, power windows and power seats on most models, automatic cornering lights and many other conveniences that even now cost extra on most new cars. Consider, too, the extra reassurance of motoring in an automobile of Cadillac's impressive size and stature. Before you buy your next car, be sure to look for your authorized Cadillac dealer's used car sign. It is the best possible landmark for a wide, attractively priced selection of well cared for, previously-owned Cadillac cars.

The Creation of a New Image

Somebody, somewhere along the line, has been doing for Kentucky more than readily meets the eye.

Time was, and it hasn't been too long ago, when a Kentucky attorney general received a letter from a woman who resided in another state, asking if it was safe for her to venture into Eastern Kentucky. Those were the days when newspaper and magazine writers came looking only for a log hut or a moonshine still or some "character" whose way of life and mode of dress and speech could be pinned onto the lot of us as "typical."

We recall those days just now, in particular, since only this week came to our desk the current number of RED BOOK magazine and its travel feature by Martin Cohen.

Cohen wrote of the Kentucky tour he, his wife and children enjoyed, and there was no suggestion that a god from Olympus had walked among us heathens; no condescension or supercilious comment. Instead, they were frankly enthralled — all the way from Kentucky Lake, in the western part of the state, into the Mountains.

He quoted his wife as saying at vacation's end: "I feel just as if we had discovered a secret island."

He wrote of Kentucky's beauty spots, of its great parks system, of the lakes and fields and streams; of Kentucky hospitality, the serenity he found.

"Frankly," Cohen wrote, "we were overwhelmed with Kentucky's wild, lush beauty."

Kentucky Lake, Cumberland Lake, Cumberland Falls, Shakertown, Berea, Harrodsburg—they visited them all. Only, they made the major mistake of failing to come farther into the Mountains where Jenny Wiley State Park and others with their hospitality and scenic beauty would have added even fonder memories of a great vacation.

This change in the thinking of "outsiders" didn't just happen. A lot of work has been done to bring into Kentucky responsible journalists and others who know the genuine article when they see it. All this has taken time, but it has resulted in a new image that becomes the state.

THREE YOUNG FLOYD MEDICS HIGH HONORS AT UNIVERSITY

Alpha Omega Alpha membership carries in the field of medicine the distinction of a Phi Beta Kappa key in the area of general scholarship, and this AOA honor has been won by three Floyd county medical students during the three years the honor group has existed at the University of Kentucky.

Dr. Raleigh Archer, son of Dr. and Mrs. George P. Archer, of Prestonsburg, was accorded the honor, the first year it was given at UK. This year, the third for AOA at the university, Dr. Lucien F. Burke, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Burke, of Prestonsburg, and Dr. Frank Scutchfield, son of Dr. and Mrs. Beecher L. Scutchfield, of Martin, were among the nine AOA's in a class of 68 at UK.

Dr. Burke was in Colombia, South America when honors were conferred at UK commencement exercises, and he was represented by his parents.

10% of the entire job, and the Division of Forestry has promised the use of its bulldozer on the remainder of the project.

Thirty-five unemployed fathers will be used in clean-up work and on miscellaneous jobs.

The food plots will be planted in an effort to restore the lake area to its former state as a fine habitat for quail and rabbit. Food also will be provided for deer, wild turkey and other game. Because of the lack of food, the once-plentiful quail and rabbit population in the area is extremely low, sportsmen say.

Gerald Hart, soil conservationist, is technical adviser on the work. The Division of Game has promised the club that quail and wild turkey will be released in the area as soon as seeding of the food plots is completed.

New 4-H Camping Look Is Planned for State This Year, Is Report

Lexington, Ky.—There's a new look in Kentucky 4-H camping this year, according to John H. Heller, UK Extension 4-H program specialist.

When 4-H camps open in June, the boys and girls attending will find many changes, he says. This new approach is planned to help every camper get every possible advantage from the 4-H camping experience.

Major changes will include a counselor system, programs oriented to the age of the camper, and several kinds of camps in addition to the traditional "conference" camp (attended by members of all ages from the same county).

Camper in the same age group will room together, and each cabin will have a counselor — an older 4-H member who will serve as "big brother or sister." This system will provide more personal contact and individual attention for each member, Heller points out.

At most camps, age-oriented programs will be held in the mornings. For example, 10-year-olds will take part in activities geared to their age level. Programs for groups without regard to age will be in the afternoon. Also, the more experienced campers will have more advanced programs. Awards, too, will differ for different age groups. "We hope this arrangement will encourage more development of the individual boy and girl," Heller says.

Among the different types of camps scheduled are junior camps, with younger members from several counties attending; senior camps, for older members from several counties; junior leadership camps, emphasizing leadership training; and special interest camps, devoted to such 4-H project areas as conservation, photography, entomology, home furnishings, and judging, Heller concludes.

Grains Specialist Says Frost-Bitten Corn May Recover from Damage

Don't disk up your corn field because above-ground portions of new plants show frost damage, says S. H. Phillips, UK Cooperative Extension Service grains specialist.

"The important parts of the corn plant are under the surface of the ground at this time of year," he says, "and these probably were not injured by the recent unexpected freeze. However, a lot of farmers are disking up their corn and replanting. This is probably not necessary."

Phillips said many corn plants showed blackened parts and leaves from the cold, but said this probably will not be a problem. "We think such frost-damaged corn will recover eventually."

He said it is better to let the existing plants recover than to replant. "Replanting costs the farmer money. Also, later plantings have reduced yields. Disking and replanting probably will cost the farmer more than letting frost-damaged corn recover."

There was frost damage throughout the state but last week's extremely low temperatures—a record low for May in many areas—apparently hit hardest in Eastern Kentucky. Much corn was already growing well when the freeze hit.

The Governor's Commission on Agriculture has informational brochures for farmers on the operation of vacation farms and hunting preserves. They may be obtained on request.

Alice Lloyd Alumna Notes Young Leaders' Opportunity

Pippa Passes, Ky. — "Opportunity" was the theme with which Lt. Cmdr. Simeon Fields, Alice Lloyd College alumna, challenged the junior college's graduating class to return to the mountains upon completion of their education.

"We no longer have to quote such overused terms as 'dedication' and 'devotion' . . . to persuade young people to remain in the mountains," the Navy officer said. "These mountains are not dead . . . Their potential is just beginning to be tapped."

Speaking last Thursday at Alice Lloyd's annual alumni-sophomore banquet, Fields, a native of Knott county and presently an assistant professor of naval science at the University of North Carolina, rejected the idea that young men and women must necessarily sacrifice to live and work in the mountains. Opportunity for young leaders is tremendous in the mountains, he said, because the need is so great.

"Today," Fields said, "Appalachia is getting new highways, reservoirs, various land and resource programs, recreation projects, tourist attractions, home improvements programs, vocational training schools, small craft factories and electrical generating plants . . . And such projects demand young, intelligent, local leadership."

"With the eyes of our federal and state governments focused on Appalachia and Eastern Kentucky," the lieutenant continued, "the need for local leadership is more than ever pronounced . . . We cannot leave it up to outside leaders and influences to solve our problems . . . It's up to the young leaders of this area."

Then, noting that leadership, like charity, begins at home, Fields enjoined the students to clean up "their own back yards" first. "We need a better outward image here in the mountains," he said. "Bury the trash, plant shrubbery around your house, reforest our hillsides, sow grass to hold down erosion, paint the house, tear down the shacks, install running water and a bathroom, get rid of the eyesores such as wrecked cars, build small watersheds."

"What is the cost of such improvement?" Fields asked. "Some money, yet, but primarily 'elbow grease' and 'backbone.'" At the banquet, the 72 new graduates were officially welcomed into the Alice Lloyd Alumni Association by Alumni President Cordell Martin, Hindman, and presented a year's free membership.

The percentage of Kentucky's population which is school age (5-17) is 26.7, or one percent over the national average.

The Board of Trustees of the City of Allen, Kentucky, hereby gives notice that until May 20, 1966, at the hour of 1 p.m., Eastern Standard Time, at the City Hall at Allen, Kentucky, it will receive sealed competitive bids for the purchase of $280,000.00 waterworks revenue bonds, dated February 1, 1966, being 280 negotiable coupon bonds registerable as to the principal, each in the denomination of $1,000.00 maturing serially on February 1, as follows:

Certain of the years 1967 through 1966, inclusive. Subject to redemption on and after February 1, 1982. Payable at Marine-Midland Grace Trust Company, New York, New York.

Provided that the city reserves the right to call for redemption all bonds maturing on February 1, 1982, and thereafter, in whole or from time to time in part, in the inverse numerical order of said bonds on February 1, 1981, and on any interest payment date thereafter, at the redemption price of the principal amount or par value thereof, plus accrued interest thereon to the redemption date plus a redemption premium equal to five percent of such principal amount or par value if the date stated for redemption is on or before February 1, 1992, and thereafter on the same terms except that the redemption premium shall be an amount equal to three percent of the principal amount or par value if the date stated for prior redemption is on or before February 1, 1996.

Bidders shall offer a sum in cash, (but not less than 98 percent of the face amount of the bonds plus accrued interest) for all bonds and stipulate interest coupon rate, provided each is a multiple of 1/8 or 1/10 of 1 percent.

None may exceed 6 percent per annum, the net interest rate shall not exceed six percent and only one interest rate shall be stipulated for a single maturity date. COMMISSION SLATES
BIG SANDY STUDY

The Kentucky Water Pollution Control Commission began this week to come to grips with a federal guideline on water control on streams which flow in Kentucky and at least one neighboring state, and this includes the Big Sandy River.

The guideline supplied by the Department of Interior is clouded at points, and it was indicated at Frankfort considerable explaining will be necessary.

The federal guideline stems from a congressional act establishing quality standards on all interstate waters within each state.

If a state does not create a plan by 1967, the federal government will do so.

Some commission members may be tempted to give up on unraveling the matter and let Uncle Sam step in, observers say.

"We're doing everything we can to protect the waters of Kentucky and we'd like to cooperate fully with Washington," Pickard said. "But some of these guidelines will make it awfully hard."

Pickard said the detailed requirements are sometimes vague, contradictory or simply beyond understanding.

Furthermore, he said, carrying them out would in some instances cost Kentucky plenty of money and lead it up into blind alleys as well.

The rivers affected by the federal guidelines are the Ohio, Mississippi, Green, Big Sandy, Tennessee and Cumberland.

But even by definition, not all is clear to Pickard or Commission attorney Dave Seebree. For example, they ask, would Tennessee's standards prevail for the Tennessee River flowing into Kentucky?

Pickard said a major concern is the requirement to set water standards for the Ohio River although a current federal study of that river won't be finished until possibly 1969.

Perhaps the biggest headache is the federal order for the state to draw up criteria for one length of a river and then hold hearings in that region to feel the public pulse.

One of the facts of life, Pickard said, is that organized interests will be most vocal at such hearings and true public feeling may be eclipsed by verbiage from groups which attend to testify.

"How are we then to determine real public opinion?" he said.

The cost of the hearings could be tremendous, he said, especially if each river is artificially divided into certain zones containing numerous cities and towns.

Pickard lists what he calls some of the discrepancies.

One paragraph of the federal guideline says economics must be one factor in determining proper use of a stream, yet another bans any standards which would allow transportation of waste.

"In some cases," he said, "the most appropriate use might be to transport wastes from an industry, so there is somewhat of a conflict."

8 National Magazines Accept Student Work

Students in the first fiction writing class ever held in Harlan county—at the Southeast Community College of the University of Kentucky at Cumberland—have had 41 pieces accepted by eight different national magazines.

"These students are the sons and daughters of 'Bloody Harlan.' They worked for me as no other students have worked," said their instructor, Lee Pennington.

Pennington said that at fall registration time he was told not to expect more than three or four students in the fiction-writing class, but 16 students signed.

Ten of the 13 students finishing the course have had creative writing pieces accepted. One student has been elected to the United Poetry Society of America. The students also published "Spirit Hollow," a paper-back which contains 51 pages of short stories and poetry by all of the class members.

The Kentucky Department of Child Welfare placed a record number of 1,458 children in foster care during the 1964-65 fiscal year.

Young drivers and old cars make a fatal combination in many instances, the Kentucky Department of Public Safety says. A study by the agency showed that young drivers of cars eight to nine years old were involved in numerous fatal accidents in 1964. Of the 1955-56 model cars involved in fatalities, 41.8 percent were driven by those in the 18-24 age group and 12.8 percent more were operated by drivers 16 to 17 years old.

Masons Invite Friends To Join In Celebration

Patriotic meetings in three different sections of the state are planned for Sunday, June 12, as a combined observance of this year's Masonic Fraternal Day in Kentucky and Flag Day.

Plans for the meetings, to be held simultaneously at 2:00 p.m., in Madisonville, Louisville and Richmond, were announced by Thomas Burchett, Jr., Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky Masons, Masons are encouraged to bring non-affiliated friends.

The fact that Flag Day falls on June 14, prompted Burchett's decision to combine its observance with Masonic Fraternal Day, which annually has been the subject of a proclamation by the Governor.

The three meetings will place special emphasis on the Constitution of the United States and on Americanism. All veterans and members of patriotic organizations are especially invited to attend.

The meetings will be held in these three Masonic areas of the state: At Rizpah Temple, Madisonville; Garnett Hall at the Masonic Home, Louisville; and Eastern State University Coliseum, Richmond.

The programs will be under the direction, respectively, of John W. Chandler, Grand Junior Warden; James B. Patrick, Grand Senior Warden, and Davie J. Smith, Deputy Grand Master. Each program will include introduction of various affiliated bodies, special music and a recorded address by Grand Master Burchett.

Highlights in Kentucky's public health history include the establishment of the first full-time county health department in the United States. It occurred in 1908 in Jefferson county.

UK Sororities Find Time To Give Help To Varied Causes

Lexington, Ky.—There's a serious side to sorority activities at the University of Kentucky, a side that goes generally unnoticed, both on-campus and off.

A recent report by UK sorority leaders reveals a variety of activity in philanthropic causes, ranging from educational help for a Cherokee Indian to supplying school books for pupils in depressed Appalachian communities.

Proceeds from a recent dinner given by Pi Beta Phi sorority provided much-needed assistance for the girls' Cherokee friend. The Tri-Deltas—Delta Delta Delta—are the textbook collectors.

One of UK's newest sororities, Gamma Phi Beta, has adopted a 15-year-old English girl, while Zeta Tau Alpha supports several "little sisters" at a local orphanage.

Delta Gamma, meanwhile, conducts a project that requires time as well as money. The girls contribute to a fund that provides scholarship assistance each year to a blind coed. In addition, the sorority members escort the handicapped student to class and record each lecture for her.

Each Alpha Delta Pi member puts aside a penny a day for a national philanthropy which aids crippled children and adults. Similar support is given to a national foundation for brain-damaged children by the sisters of the UK chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta.

Although the headlines usually go to beauty queens and assorted campus high jinks, many serious minded sorority members go quietly about the business of supporting worthy projects that require thousands of dollars and countless hours of work each year.

COAL NO LONGER THE SICKLY CHILD IN THE NATION'S INDUSTRIAL FAMILY

By LAURENCE BURD
(In The Los Angeles Times)

Washington, D. C. — Coal, for years a sickly child in the nation's industrial family, is putting on muscle and pulling off new stunts. Even coal's glamorous competitor, atomic energy, is finding coal a tough opponent in their toe-to-toe battle to feed the growing appetite of a power-hungry America. But even as coal warily eyes the atom, coal researchers are test-tubing it as the base for dozens of new consumer and other products unrecognizable as springing from those big black lumps in the mines. Some of the gasoline for your car may be refined a few years hence not from the black crude of an oil gusher but from plain old coal. Bricks for factories and homes may be kilned from fly ash, a cinder dust that is now a wasted nuisance by-product of coal burning. Coal is being tested as a key agent for desalting water. It is being tried out as a filter to decontaminate sewage and other wastes that are polluting rivers and lakes.

Diesel-type fuels for railroads, trucks and buses are being developed from a coal base in an effort to recapture part of the big diesel market that coal has lost to the oil industry. Coal is not going to do all this on a big scale overnight, but it is coming out of the doldrums it fell into after World War II. And even if only some of its dreams for new uses come to pass, the coal industry could enjoy a boom that would, among other things, help the coal-based, depressed Appalachia area get back on its feet.

Production of soft coal, which most coal is, increased in 1965 for the fourth consecutive year to 515 million tons, highest in 15 years. Although part of the industry has been strikebound for the last two weeks, output before the strike was running ahead of last year's level.

The possibility of being able to make high-test gasoline from coal at a price that could compete with gasoline from oil wells is one that has excited not only the coal, but the oil industry, too. Gasoline has been made from coal for some time—by the Germans in World War II, for example—but the process has been too expensive to meet competition.

The decision announced earlier this month to build a massive coal-fired electric power complex in the Southwest was a victory for coal over its nuclear rival. Much of the power generated in this project, known as "West" will actually be used in the Los Angeles area. This power will be generated by a giant plant at Mohave, Nevada, and sent over high-voltage transmission lines to Los Angeles.

The West project, jointly owned by half a dozen private and public power units, will by 1969-70 be gobbling up five to six million tons of coal a year, much of it from coal lands leased from the Navajo Indians.

Stringent air and water pollution controls were agreed to as part of the West project. Air pollution, especially, is one handicap that coal must overcome in its effort to expand its electric-power market.

Most coal-burning plants now catch and harmlessly dispose of the sooty "fly ash" that used to contaminate the air, but many still pollute the atmosphere with large amounts of sulphur dioxide gas.

This irritant gas can be trapped as it is burned and converted into sulphur, a basic chemical, but the high cost of the process under presently developed methods has prevented its being used on a large scale. Research is continuing to find an economical process.

Now, however, improved laboratory-tested techniques have convinced some experts in the coal and petroleum industries and in the government's research arm that coal-based gasoline can be made at a price that's right. Apparently with this in mind, a number of big oil companies have hedged their bets by getting into the coal business. For example, Continental Oil Co., eighth largest in the country, is in the process of taking over Consolidation Coal Co., one of the two largest in coal and a leader in coal-to-gasoline research.

Consolidation Coal is now building, under a federal research contract, a $10-million pilot plant at Cresap, West Virginia, to tap coal for high grade gasoline through a relatively new extraction process.

The plant is due to start operations late this year. If advance calculations are correct, it will turn out good gasoline for about 11 cents a gallon wholesale, which is actually a cent or so below the wholesale price now in some regions.

In 1965, 38 percent of the growing group of Americans aged 65 or over had full-time jobs, says the Kentucky Commission on Aging. As late as 1930, however, the proportion of older men in the labor force was 54 percent.

This doesn't mean that coal mines are going to put oil lumps out of business or anywhere near it. But with gasoline consumption due to keep climbing, the nation may need a new source in the next few decades. Besides coal, the source could be shale rock or tar sands.

But if coal accounted for just 10% of the gasoline burned by 1980, it would add 175 million tons a year of coal production and create up to 40,000 more jobs in coal mining, according to industry estimates.

One of the chief arguments for making gasoline from coal, aside from the price factor, is that coal is by far the nation's biggest reservoir of energy. There is an estimated 1.7 billion tons of coal still in the ground in the United States. Even if only half of this is economically recoverable, it would last for more than 1,500 years at the current consumption rate.

The electric power industry is still by far coal's biggest customer. In its drive to not only hold but expand this market in the face of nuclear power competition, coal has done some fast footwork.

Air pollution is less of a problem when coal-fired power plants are built in non-urban areas and the electric energy is shipped by wire into cities, as in the West project.

Meanwhile, the coal industry has found ways to cut costs, both in mining and transportation. By automating mines, the industry has tripled the output per man since World War II.

This has taken a severe toll in human misery, as in depressed Appalachia. The number of U.S. miners at work has dropped in two decades by 200,000, to only about 140,000. Hourly wages for miners have gone up 2½ times over the same span.

By cutting costs, producers have managed actually to reduce the price of coal by around 50 cents a ton in the last decade and at the same time to increase their profits.

Coal-carrying railroads, meanwhile, have cut freight rates — a major factor for an item as bulky as coal—on big shipments by using "unit-trains" or specially built coal cars. They are loaded at the mine in a few hours with 10,000 tons or more of coal and dumped just as quickly on a big customer's doorstep.

Nuclear power is also finding ways to cut costs and is capturing an increasing share of the electric power market.
