

Indian raids had not ceased in Kentucky when the territory became a state 175 years ago. More than a year after statehood was gained, Morgan's Station, near Mt. Sterling, was captured by Indians and 49 women and children were taken prisoners. The Commonwealth will have its 175th birthday celebration, June 1-3, at Danville, and commemorative events will be held throughout the year.

'GO FISHIN' WEEK,' APRIL 9-15, PROCLAIMED BY BREATHITT

Kentucky's importance as a fishing state will be emphasized during "Go Fishing Week," April 9-15.

"Go Fishing Week" was proclaimed by Gov. Edward T. Breathitt, who said, "All too many Kentuckians are not availing themselves of this wholesome and profitable recreation . . ."

While designating the week to call attention to fishing "outstanding in the Southeastern United States . . ." Gov. Breathitt's proclamation asserted that "wider participation in the sport of fishing will bolster the morale of all persons . . ."

The Commonwealth's Chief Executive is himself an avid angler.

Minor Clark, commissioner of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, said "Go Fishing Week" is being observed during April because of the month's importance as a fish producer.

Especially noteworthy is the April run of white bass in Dale Hollow, Lake Cumberland and Herrington and Dewey Lakes, the Commissioner pointed out. April also is a good month to take walleye, muskie and crappie, and to jig fish for black bass in any of Kentucky's 10 major lakes, he added.

Along with approximately 173,000 acres of fishing waters available in the major impoundments, Commissioner Clark said, the angler can try his luck in more than 50,000 farm ponds and in more miles of running water than in any state other than Alaska.

"Go Fishing Week" will be highlighted by specially prepared radio and television programs telling Kentucky's fishing story. The Fish & Wildlife department also is distributing 5,600 placards to business places throughout the state calling the sportsman's attention to the week-long observance.

Students Who Would Borrow from Fund Should Avoid Delay

Frankfort, Ky.—Kentucky college students wishing to borrow money from the state's student-aid fund for next school year should start getting their loans processed now.

This advice comes from Billy P. Hunt, secretary of the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority. He said students should apply early because some have had difficulty in obtaining loans from local banks.

Hunt explained that students obtain the loans directly from their banks and repayment is guaranteed by the state student-aid fund. He said there will be more than enough money from state and federal sources for needs next year.

There are only two major steps in obtaining a loan, he said:

1) The student attending an in-state institution makes application as to eligibility through the financial assistance officer at the college or university.

Students attending out-of-state institutions make their application as to eligibility through the Assistance Authority in Frankfort.

2) With his certification of eligibility, the student negotiates his loan through a local bank at not more than six percent interest.

The student need not begin repayment of the loan until the first day of the 10th month after he leaves school, Hunt said.

Louisville, Ky. (ENS)—Congressman Carl D. Perkins, the Kentuckian who recently became chairman of the House committee on education and labor, and Mrs. Thelma Davis, former president of the National Education Association (NEA) Department of Classroom Teachers, will deliver major addresses at this year's Kentucky Education Association (KEA) convention.

Another feature of the KEA's annual three-day meeting, opening here April 12, will be the dedication of the association's new $1,034,000 headquarters that opened last December at First and Walnut streets in downtown Louisville.

Convention-goers, expected to number about 14,000 have been invited to visit and tour the four-story structure from 1 to 5 p.m. on April 12 and 13 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on April 14.

Congressman Perkins, Hindman Democrat, who represents Kentucky's Seventh District, will speak at 7:30 p.m. April 14 at the last of three general sessions, all at Convention Center. The 129-member All-Kentucky Orchestra, conducted by Frederick Fennell, will present a concert at the same session. He is conductor of the University of Miami Symphony Orchestra.

Mrs. Davis, currently a member of the NEA's 11-member executive committee, will speak at the first general session at 9:30 a.m., April 13.

INFAMOUS GAMBLER

At the first court held in Kentucky, the racehorse state, a man was tried for playing the races. The court convened Jan. 16, 1781 in the blockhouse at Harrodsburg. One case was that of Hugh McGary on the gambling charge. He was found guilty and the court proclaimed him "an infamous gambler . . . not to be eligible to any office of trust or honor within the state"

LEGENDARY CASEY JONES STORY RETOLD BY DIGEST

Heroism of Casey Jones, Tennessee's "brave engineer" who died at the throttle of his locomotive, is recalled by an article in "The April Reader's Digest," largest circulating magazine in the world.

Titled "The Life and Death of Casey Jones," the Digest article by Tom Mahoney is condensed from the American Legion Magazine.

Mayor George Smith of Jackson, Tenn., where Casey's home is now a railroad museum, has written the author and the editors of the two magazines expressing the thanks of Jackson and the Jones family for the six-page article. In addition to recounting the dramatic events of Casey's life, this calls attention to the city-owned and operated museum.

Casey's son, Charles B. Jones, a retired Illinois Central shopman, lives in Jackson, and his son, Charles, Jr., Casey's grandson, is an Illinois Central diesel mechanic in Fulton, Ky. Casey's daughter, Helen, now Mrs. D. C. McKenzie, lives on Old Shell Road, Mobile, Alabama.

"We are happy that millions of Americans will read the story of our beloved Casey Jones," wrote Mayor Smith. "Casey was a kind young man of exemplary habits and many virtues. One was punctuality. He believed in being on time even if he had to drive his famous 382 locomotive at more than 100 miles an hour to do so.

"Whether he disregarded warning signals or not, he died a hero's death. He could have jumped as he had his fireman, Sim Webb, do. He did not and only Casey was killed. His fireman aid all his passengers lived, none was even seriously hurt, thanks to Casey's courage."

The famous engineer was born Jonathan Luther Jones in southern Missouri but spent his boyhood in Cayce, Ky., and because of this became known as Casey. He became an Illinois Central

They were going to restore faith and trust in government and then sent high-salaried men from the Blue Grass into the hills to set tax values on our Broom Sedge Rock Cliffs. Most of our people had their taxes doubled or tripled and the end is nowhere in sight. They agreed on a 10% raise for this year, another 10% for next year. And, after that—they couldn't agree.

HOW CAN WE GIVE YOU A 1000 MILE EXTENSION CORD?

We've got a system!

It takes more and more electricity to serve local needs every year. More in your home. More for industry. And more in reserve for the new business we want to settle here. In the next few years, millions more kilowatts will be needed.

But we'll be ready. For example, right now the world's most powerful transmission line is in the works. And a very special line it will be. It will carry 765,000 volts or five times as much as our present largest lines. This takes some doing. This 1000-mile extension cord will form another loop in our power system and provide more electricity for the future growth of the seven-state area served by our six companies.

Planning ahead for the growth of this area is another way we serve you better electrically.

body in the county for the time they are in session. "On what you do law enforcement in this county heavily depends," he commented. He warned grand jurors against discussing their work after they leave the jury room. Although he recommended close scrutiny of all crime, Judge Conley suggested that jurors "go slow" in making indictments when the case against the accused is doubtful. He explained this position by pointing out that, once an indictment is made, it stands against a defendant in the minds of many, even though the person indicted is later acquitted by a trial jury. The Rev. Harve Johnson, of Melvin, was named foreman of the grand jury. The petit jury will begin work today (Thursday).

COINCIDENCE

Fellow met me on the street this week, grasped my hand and asserted, "I can just feel that hand achin' for a plow-handle." I assured him that that ache had afflicted me but that it departed, shortly after Christmas. (I didn't say which Christmas.) What makes this seem so strange is the coincidence of a meeting, not 10 minutes later, with another who quoted somebody else as saying, "There's no excuse for laziness, and there's no cure for it."

Statistics figure that at the age of 85 there are seven women to every four men. But by that time who cares?

There's always something to be thankful for. Termites swarmed this week, all around me, and I don't have a peg-leg.

High-Flying Aircraft Passing Over Section At Super-Sonic Speed

Oftutt AFB, Neb.—Supersonic training flights by Strategic Air Command SR-71 reconnaissance aircraft began April 1 over states in the Ohio Valley, passing over Prestonsburg, Kentucky.

Due to the high altitude of these flights, most residents along the various routes will be unaware of the aircraft's presence. But noise of sonic booms may be heard as the SR-71 descends to about 30,000 feet, decreasing speed for aerial refueling by subsonic KC-135 jet tankers. Such training air refuelings are a routine and vital part of nearly all SAC missions to assure that bomber and reconnaissance aircraft have global range.

The SR-71 will use a specified air refueling route over which to practice numerous air refueling hookups. Residents in the following areas may experience disturbing but harmless noise or sonic booms:

From Potosi, Mo., the flight path extends easterly passing over Bloomsdale, Mo., and north of DuQuoin and Benton, Ill. The route goes just north of Evansville, Ind., over Jasper, Ind., and just to the north of Louisville, Kentucky.

The air refueling flight path terminates at Corinth, Kentucky. The SR-71 operates at altitudes above 80,000 feet at speeds up to Mach 3, which is approximately 2,000 miles per hour. This extreme altitude accounts for the relative weakness of sonic booms along the majority of the route over which the aircraft will fly.

Disabled Veteran Slain, Man Beaten Near Paintsville

A disabled World War II veteran was killed and another man beaten, apparently during an argument last Wednesday at Thelma, Johnson county.

Held on an open charge was Russell Dury, Jr., 19, of Meally. Police said Frank Caudill, 45, died shortly after he was found Wednesday in a locked shed at the rear of his home at Thelma. He had been beaten about the head.

Inside the house, Willis Patrick, 42, was lying unconscious on the floor. He was hospitalized for treatment of face wounds.

Police also found a hammer and a broken bottle in the kitchen.

They said more than a case of whisky was taken from Patrick's auto, parked in front of the house.

COUNTIES MAY LOSE CONTROL OF ANTI-POVERTY ACTIVITIES

The War on Poverty in Kentucky apparently will not be waged, from here on out, on a county-by-county basis but on multi-county fronts as the state is divided into districts composed of several counties.

Some view the move to districts as one through which the federal government will set up its own system of governmental units to promote public programs and improvements. These are those who, from this angle, foresee that individual counties and their officials will be deprived of any chance of winning approval of projects which local officials know, better than anybody else, are needed; and that action on any given project would necessarily have to depend upon the interest of the district organization in getting it approved and under way.

On the other hand, federal thinking is that some organization of the sort is necessary to get something done for those counties where officials and citizens are apathetic toward local needs.

Area Development Director Robert Cornett cites the division of Kentucky into 31 districts. Floyd, Pike, Johnson, Magoffin and Martin are tentatively placed in one district.

The proposed map dividing Kentucky into 31 districts is part of that effort. Cornett said that so far he has found "general acceptance" by county officials, once they understand what is at stake.

Eventually, Cornett hopes each district will be served by a single board, including the local county and city officials, but still broad enough to represent other community interests, too.

This group would serve as a funnel for state and federal-aid programs with some sort of veto power over the applications. It might even operate some of the areawide programs. Frankfort and Washington would put up the money to hire technical staff, the kind of professional planning and grantsmanship which few of these local governments now enjoy.

But that is off in the future. Cornett thinks agreement on the map would first help Kentucky sell that geographical division to the federal agencies. Then the "district council," or whatever it's called, might start with one aid program such as the Economic Development Act, which provides sewer-and-water grants to stimulate industrial development. As the board gains experience, it could take on responsibility for other aid programs with the distant goal of serving as the single coordinator in that area.

William Greider, writing in The Courier-Journal, gives the background story and what may develop:

At the state level, officials are warning county governments to get busy forming their own multi-county confederations — or else face invasion by a swarm of federally-endowed "area boards" and "district commissions," which eventually could eclipse local government.

"The gut issue," said Bernard F. Hillenbrand, executive director of the National Association of Counties, "is not the pride of local officials. The gut issue is who controls local government."

"We're not telling the counties they have to do anything," said Cornett. "We're just warning them what's coming."

In simplified terms, here is what's coming:

—At least five major federal-aid programs now either require or promote the use of the multi-county approach—the Appalachian Regional Development Act, the Economic Development Act, the Economic Opportunity Act, the Housing and Urban Development Act, and various health legislation. In addition, the U.S. Department of Agriculture is pushing "rural community development" legislation which would formalize the regional approach even more than the others.

—Some state governments, particularly where there are a large number of small and weak counties, were pushing "area development councils" and other multi-county organizations before the federal legislation. Kentucky now wants to formalize its effort more, and it has produced a tentative map proposing 15 major economic-development districts and 31 subdistricts. Ultimately, district organizations would be formed and these would become conduits for federal aid into these areas.

—In a different context, this push toward cooperative ventures has also touched school districts and urban governments. With the promise of federal aid, some Kentucky school districts have formed joint agencies to perform functions that none could afford individually: better audio-visual libraries, special teachers for the handicapped, and so forth.

Multi-county organizations — if they meet the various criteria set up by the federal agency involved — can now get money from Washington to buy park land or lay sewer lines or build new housing or open community health centers or do a dozen other things that need to be done in so many rural areas.

Some aid programs offer bonus money for those counties and towns that do work together. Some programs threaten penalties for those who don't. If the trend persists, it may some day be impossible, at least in the rural areas, for a single county or town to ask Washington for money on its own, without first going through some sort of regional organization.

The potential significance of this is reflected in President Johnson's recent prediction that federal aid to state and local governments will probably quadruple in the next five years. Alongside vast federal grants, the budget at the county courthouse is going to seem like small potatoes indeed.

John Whisman, the state's representative on the Appalachian Regional Commission, said, "It's a question of reaching an appropriate scale for attacking the problem — involving enough taxpayers, enough labor pool, enough geography to do the job right. It's like a school system: if you only have so many children, you can only have a one-room school."

Hillenbrand, whose organization speaks for county government in Washington, sees the multi-county approach as logical and necessary.

"Suppose," he said, "you have four counties who come together and none has a hospital. With some planning, they build one decent hospital instead of trying to build four lousy hospitals."

Too many problems — water pollution, poverty, industrial development, road building, to name a few — do not respect the sanctity of a city or county boundary. The federal government is saying, in effect, that it doesn't want to finance piecemeal solutions.

Everyone seems to buy that as reasonable. But the argument begins when the federal agencies and the local officials begin to (See Story No. 1, Page 7)

It was 50 years ago this Thursday, April 6, that the United States entered the war "to make the world safe for democracy."

It had been coming for a long time.

"The war stirred American feeling tremendously," says World Book Encyclopedia. "Strong ties bound the nation to Great Britain, France and Belgium, although some Americans sympathized with Germany and Austria-Hungary."

"Economic factors soon strengthened the country's sympathy for the Allies. The United States had developed a profitable trade with the British and French," the Encyclopedia continues.

Stories of German atrocities in Belgium inflamed the Americans. The sinking of the Lusitania in 1915—when 128 Americans were among the nearly 1,200 killed—helped move the U. S. toward war. German saboteurs were active. On January 31, 1917, Germany proclaimed unlimited submarine warfare, and the United States broke off diplomatic relations.

In March, the State Department released the infamous Zimmerman Telegram—an intercepted message in which Germany proposed that Mexico attack the United States.

On April 2, 1917, the 65th Congress met for the first time. President Wilson went before a joint session at 8:30 that evening.

He said the Imperial German government, like all autocracies,

On Insurance Rates Since Last February, Commissioner Says

Frankfort, Ky. — Increases in insurance rates make headlines while rejections of rate-increase applications receive very little publicity—if any at all.

In expressing this opinion, State Insurance Commissioner S. Roy Woodall announced that the Insurance Department has rejected 22 of 23 requests for automobile insurance rate increases since February.

Last February, the Department granted a 21.6 percent rate increase for 144 companies affiliated with the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters (a national rate-making organization) which write 30 percent of all the auto insurance in Kentucky.

Rejected were applications from independent, non-Bureau companies, which, according to Woodall, "wait until the Bureau earns a raise and then ask for a similar revision." Referring to these firms as "me-too-filers," Woodall said rate-requests were turned down because they did not produce individual statistics of their own to justify individual rate increases.

Because they are not a matter available to news media, rate increase applications do not make headlines. Under Kentucky law, requests for rate changes are kept secret unless the Insurance Department calls a public hearing or approves the request.

Woodall said he has made it departmental policy to "call a public hearing on every major rate filing to keep the public informed."

Notice of Public Hearing:

Notice is hereby given by the Prestonsburg Planning Commission of the City of Prestonsburg, Ky., that it will conduct a Public Hearing at the Municipal Building, in the City of Prestonsburg, Ky., on April 13, 1967, Thursday, at 7:30 p.m., for the purpose of hearing pertinent evidence concerning the following applications:

1. Application of Carl Wise, for rezoning of property owned by him, located between the building of Kentucky Dept. of Economic Security and Wise Restaurant, on U.S. 23, from R-2 (residential, medium density) to B-2 (general business).
2. 3. Application of Inez Hobson, et al. for rezoning of property owned by them, located on U.S. 23, from the south entrance of Richmond Cemetery to the Smith property, from R-1 (residential, low density) to B-2 (general business).

Tall and a Southpaw, Former P'burg Resident Ohio State Foil Star

Bill Music, formerly of Prestonsburg, now a senior at Ohio State, has learned that his 6-2 height and his left-handedness are not so secret weapons in his sport of fencing. He has the reach to score touches over shorter opponents and any opponent must adapt to fencing the rare left-hander. Combining these assets with his technical knowledge and coordination, Music has acquired a 32-4 season record, leading the Ohio State team with the best record for an Ohio State fencer in several years. He recently finished third in the Big Ten tournament at the University of Wisconsin.

Young Music began his fencing career in his freshman year when he found all other physical education courses closed. As a result of this "accident" he is now looking forward to being one of Ohio State's two representatives in the national NCAA fencing tournament in Los Angeles, March 29. This is a three-day meet and each fencer will be asked to fence in approximately 40 matches.

A pre-law student, he will receive his B.A. in June. He is the son of Donald Music, of Cincinnati, formerly of Auxier. His aunt, Mrs. Don Fitch, lives in Prestonsburg.

CLARK OUTLINES PLANS FOR SPECIAL EDUCATION

Before an audience at open house held in the Martin school last Sunday, Superintendent of Schools Charles Clark compared the past and present attitudes toward subnormal children, and announced that Floyd county will continue to expand special education as funds permit.

Two new classes will be started this fall.

Mr. Clark paid tribute to the Floyd County Council and its founders. The Rev. and Mrs. Bob Martin originated the work in this county. Mrs. Martin was unable to attend the program but will be presented a gift later. Rev. Martin had to leave early so the billfold for him was delivered later.

Dr. Mary Hall and Dr. George P. Archer and presidents of Woman's Clubs added to the program with their discussions of ways to prevent subnormalcy associated with RH negative, measles or X-rays during early pregnancy, premature babies and PKU. Off stage, several suggested that panels of this type should be conducted all over the county to inform prospective mothers (even school girls as future mothers) about how to avoid having a retarded child. Floyd county doctors, it was said, will gladly respond to invitations from civic groups.

A dozen citizens from various parts of the county spoke briefly in behalf of this work. Mrs. Chalmer Frazier's elementary choir sang songs about handicapped children. Little Miss Vicki Salyer, of Dwale, was named Poster Girl for Special Education for 1967, and Mrs. Paul Salyer, Mother of the year, Superintendent Clark presented each a cor-

SYMBOLS AND SIGNS

The bluebird is the traditional symbol of happiness, even as the robin is a sign or harbinger of Spring. But these are not infallible.

Nor is Home, as word or as physical structure, always synonymous with peace and contentment. Palatial surroundings are no assurance of these coveted states of being. Nor is the lowliest habitation a symbol of unhappiness.

Happiness, peace, contentment—these are not built into your home or ours. But the materials with which you build, plus your heart and mind and soul, can raise a structure which is sound and attractive and strong—and also create a place that is Home in the truest, finest sense of the word.

AUNT SAL REPORTS

Aunt Sal reports that from Potter Flats to the Pennyrile it is conceded that Louie B. Nunn will be the Republican nominee.

Aunt Sal reports that she talked to a large number of "outsiders," all Democrats, and that they were 93% for Louie for Governor.

Aunt Sal reports that she had the privilege and honor of attending a meeting in Lexington, Kentucky last week. There were approximately 1,500 ladies attending the meeting. A vote of confidence was taken in the Breathitt-Ward administration—the results of the voting being 93% NO CONFIDENCE.

Aunt Sal reports that she finds that KILROY has been making his rounds on behalf of Louie.

Last Sunday, while children all over Kentucky were rolling eggs in parks and backyards, Breathitt and Ward were laying goose eggs in Frankfort.

Aunt Sal says Breathitt and Ward ask the taxpayers—not wiggle their ears.

Former Langley Man
Juvenile Counselor
For Franklin County

Larry Logan, a native of Langley, has been named juvenile counselor for Franklin county by Commissioner Maurice A. Harmon, Kentucky Department of Child Welfare.

The department's juvenile counseling program is devised to provide full-time counseling and help to pre-delinquents and juveniles requiring rehabilitation in the community. Franklin county has been selected as a demonstration county for determining the statewide expansion of the program. The study will provide the department with an evaluation of the juvenile counseling program.

Logan's duties will involve aiding juveniles with personal problems, consulting with their families, working with school and law enforcement officials, and keeping detailed records for the Child Welfare Department.

Logan was graduated from Memorial high school, St. Mary, Ohio, in 1959 and is a December graduate of the University of Kentucky. He resides in Lexington.

discuss what sort of an organization will be formed to provide a broader base of attack. Who will appoint its members? How much power will it be given?

"The danger is very, very clear," warns Cornett at the state-government level. "It's a question of who runs the regions and where the power lies. The federal agencies understandably will each try to build a power base. They'll be trying to appoint local advisory committees and boards which will be attuned to them, not to the local government or to Frankfort."

Hillenbrand put it even more strongly:

"What we have now is the intercession of the federal government on a massive scale. It is setting up its own system of artificial units of local governments."

Picture, if you can, five or six federal agencies each establishing its own "district council" to administer or screen its aid program in that area. The boards might include many of the same faces or they might not. They might serve district with identical boundaries, or they might have totally different boundaries.

Hillenbrand complains: "The federal government says we have to create these new districts because of the fragmentation of local government. But, lo and behold, they're not practicing what they're preaching. OEO alone (the Office of Economic Opportunity) has created 1,800 new units of local government in the last three years."

He hastens to add that state and local governments have only themselves to blame for this development, a statement that would draw a loud "amen" from federal officials.

"It's happening because the people in these areas have failed to create decent machinery to solve their problems," Hillenbrand said. "If the states will not respond to these problems, then the federal government will. The President is just as responsible for the welfare of those people in rural counties as the governor of Kentucky is."

CLEAN

Old-fashioned cooking is easier with an electric range! It's clean because it's flameless; no odors or messy fumes. You select the best temperature for every dish. Once you've established a superior recipe, you'll repeat it successfully time after time. An electric range is cool, too, because heat is applied to the food, not the kitchen. It's economical, too, thanks to low-cost rural electric power.
