JUVENILE "REPEATERS" TO BE IDENTIFIED

Until this time the appellation, "juvenile," has protected lawbreakers from full publicity in this newspaper. In line with a policy followed by most newspapers, we have consistently omitted the names of such youthful offenders.

But, as of this date, our own policy toward juveniles is undergoing a change.

We shall continue to withhold the identities of first-time offenders, doing so on the premise that every youngster is entitled to a second chance. But, once that chance is given and the youngster again shows contempt for the law, his or her name will appear in the news columns of this newspaper.

We propose to follow this policy insofar as we are able to determine who is a "repeater." We doubt if we shall be able to keep track of all who have been held guilty of a wide variety of crimes and who have then been probated. But we will give it a try.

The Times has arrived at this decision after finding the names of the same juvenile violators showing up, again and again, on the court records. We do not believe that the coddling of youthful criminals, in either the courts or the newspapers, is helpful to either the young law-violator or to the public which the law has the job of protecting.

Mercy must not be overstrained to the point that young boys are encouraged to break the law. A second chance, yes—but not a third and a fourth and on and on.

WHO WILL PAY OFF?

The President's Council on Youth Opportunity estimates that almost a million youngsters will drop out of high school this year and that if the current dropout rate continues unabated there will be 32 million adults in the labor force without a high school education by the end of 1975.

With the schools of the land now resuming their work for a new school year, it is important that the folly of quitting school be emphasized. There's a payoff coming. The dropout will pay in earnings for his failure to complete high school; employers will pay more to those who earn their diplomas. Here are some figures that should interest those who might think staying in school doesn't pay:

- The median income for a high school dropout is about $1,000 less a year than for a graduate.
 - The worker with only a grade school education will earn an average of $2,000 less a year than the high school graduate.
 - During his working career, the high school graduate can expect to earn $63,000 more than one who has only an elementary school education.
- Young people often face disturbing situations during their school years. One of the most tragic is the case of the boy or girl who needs encouragement to remain in school and fails to get it from his or her own father and mother.

SLONE-MARTIN VOWS SAID

Miss Sandra Sue Slone became the bride of Mr. Wendell Lee Martin in a candlelight ceremony at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, Aug. 5, in the Wayland Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Marie B. Slone and the late Kermit E. Slone, Sr., of Wayland, Ky. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Martin, of Prestonsburg.

The Rev. Walter Webb officiated at the double-ring ceremony before an altar banked with greenery. Standards filled with white gladioli and mums, flanked by candelabra holding lighted white tapers, decorated the church. Pre-nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Adrian Hall, pianist, and Mrs. Roy D. Pressure, vocalist.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Kermit E. Slone, Jr., of Dayton, Ohio. She wore a floor-length gown of white taffeta satin reembroidered alencon lace with seed pearl and crystal. Her gown was designed with a fitted bodice, over an A-line skirt, featuring long sleeves of silk organza, enhanced with crystal and pearl traceries, draped to waist line, forming a train in the back with a row of satin-covered buttons. Her bouffant shoulder-length veil of imported French tissue net was held in place by a Queen Ann crown of crystal and pearl. Miss Slone's prayer book of white alencon lace was covered with a white orchid, roses and stephanotis tied with white satin streamers.

Miss Linda Slone, of Paintsville, Ky., sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She was attired in a sleeveless floor-length gown. The fitted bodice designed with Empire waistline was in pastel pink. Her short net veil was attached to a matching bow headpiece of pink satin, and she wore pink slippers. She carried a bouquet of white carnations trimmed with pink net and streamers.

AV-REQUESTED HEARING MAY NOT BE NECESSARY

Appalachian Volunteers, Inc., formally requested, last Thursday, "a full public hearing" on its Kentucky program. The request was sent by telegram to Office of Economic Opportunity director Sargent Shriver in Washington.

The telegram, sent from AV headquarters in Bristol, Tenn., by Milton Ogle, AV director, read:

"We call your attention to section 1009.4B federal regulations stipulating exact procedures to be followed prior to termination of any OEO program. In accordance with section 1009.4B we request a full public hearing to be held in Kentucky not later than September 22, at which Appalachian Volunteers, Inc. will be represented by Attorney Harry M. Caudill. We request that termination of Kentucky program be stayed pending results of hearing and that provision be made for testimony at hearing by eastern Kentuckians with whom we have been working."

"The federal regulations governing OEO programs are very clear," Ogle stated. "The announcement last Friday by Mr. Shriver's office that funds for AV programs in Kentucky would be withdrawn was not, in our view, consistent with these regulations. Section 1009.4B, which was endorsed by Mr. Shriver and published in the Federal Register of July 4, 1967, specifically states that no OEO program may be terminated without a hearing, unless the grant recipient chooses to waive the right to a hearing, or unless the issues in dispute are informally resolved before the date of the hearing."

But a hearing may not be necessary, since a statement released by Governor Breathitt's office, Tuesday of this week, indicated that federal funds have not been cut off from AV's whose contracts run into next spring. The Governor's statement, issued after further discussion of the situation with Sargent Shriver, OEO director, follows:

"Mr. Shriver informed me that arrangements had been made for the immediate departure of 120 Appalachian Volunteers from Kentucky," Breathitt said.

"He also indicated that a lesser number will not be leaving immediately because they are under contracts that extend to next spring."

"The procedure for canceling contracts apparently would be long drawnout and time-consuming."

"I have recommended to Mr. Shriver that the contracts not be renewed when they expire, and Mr. Shriver has indicated that he will give full consideration to this recommendation."

The statement also may resolve the question of a hearing for the volunteers, which they have demanded.

Shriver announced the withdrawal of AV Kentucky funds (See Story No. 1, Page 6)

Surgill To Head Arthritis Fund Drive Starting September 1

The appointment of County Attorney Barkley J. Surgill, Prestonsburg, to serve in the forthcoming 1967 Arthritis Foundation Drive in Floyd county was announced this week by Kentucky Chairman Katherine Peden, of Frankfort, State Commissioner of Commerce. The fund appeal will begin Sept. 1 and continues through the month.

The announcement also noted that Frank E. Harmon, of Prestonsburg, will serve as Prestonsburg Business Gifts chairman.

"It is my hope that a major breakthrough may be forthcoming soon to help Kentucky's 218,000 arthritics through a nationally coordinated research assault," Miss Peden said.

Funds received from the September campaign will be applied to further the arthritis program of research, free clinics, community services and health education.

P'BURG WINS OPENER OVER W'WRIGHT, 19 to 6

The Prestonsburg Black Cats and their new coach, Bobby Crager, got their season off to a good start here last Friday night when they defeated their only Floyd county grid rival, Wheelwright's Trojans, 19-6.
 Prestonsburg scored the first time it had control of the ball, with Darrel Leslie annexing the first touchdown of the new season. But Wheelwright was not to be outdone in this matter of early scoring. Gary Taylor took the ball on the visitors' first offensive play from scrimmage and raced 82 yard to paydirt.
 Mark Miller scored Prestonsburg's second and third t.d.'s, in the second and third quarters.

Phillip Haywood missed on the first two kicks for extra point but connected on the third.
 Crager said his team looked good for a first-game performance but added that it lacked aggressiveness. He described Wheelwright as a "real good-looking team, and they will win their share of games this year."
 Miller led offensively with his two touchdowns and 102 yards gained in 19 plays.
 Prestonsburg will meet Morgan County at 8 p.m. Friday in another home game.

UK REPORT TELLS NEED FOR MAINE CHANCE FARM

Between 2,200 and 2,400 head of beef and dairy cattle, hogs, horses and sheep are quartered on the University of Kentucky's Coldstream Farm on a normal day of operation, according to a special report presented to the UK Board of Trustees at its August meeting.

The figures highlighted the 15-page report showing the use of University farmland in the Lexington area. The document was prepared by a special board committee detailing long-range needs for added farm land to conduct research programs and the necessity for adding the 721-acre Maine Chance Farm.

Purchase of the farm, which lies between the university-owned Coldstream and Spindletop farms, was approved by University trustees at an earlier meeting.

The lengthy document also pointed out that the original experiment station farm, adjacent to the central campus at Lexington, is being diverted from agricultural research to other academic uses. Major portions of that site now are used for the University Medical Center, dormitory complexes, including the two new dormitory towers, the sports center, and the new educational television building now under construction. A VA hospital also is to be built on the site.

Spindletop Farm, the report pointed out, still has unassigned acreage available, but not in sufficient quantity to care for overall needs for agricultural research. Portions of that farm, the report showed, have been assigned to Spindletop Research, Inc., the Council of State Governments, the faculty-staff-alumni club, and other facilities, including a 50-acre plot for research into tobacco and health.

In outlining some of the uses for unassigned acreage at Spindletop and at Maine Chance farms, the report cited the need for added land for veterinary science, agronomy research, beef herd management development, forage management and breeding, dairy cattle, animal nutrition, plant pathology, entomology, and reproductive physiology.

The document also pointed out that no state tax funds were to be used in the $2 million purchase.

The report was approved by the entire board. Also approved by the membership was a resolution citing the need to obtain added farm land now before increased real estate costs in the Fayette county area become prohibitive. Action on the resolution was moved by Henry Besuden, Clark county farmer, and seconded by Smith Broadbent, Trigg county farmer.

SIX PRESIDENTS

Since 1878, the University of Kentucky has had six presidents. They are, in order, James K. Patterson, Henry S. Baker, Frank L. McVey, Herman L. Donovan, Frank G. Dickey, and John W. Oswald.

The University of Kentucky is a member of the Midwest Interlibrary Center of Chicago, and the four million volumes of this institution are available to UK graduate students and faculty members.

The University of Kentucky libraries regularly receive approximately 10,000 periodicals and are a depository for all U. S. Government publications. Some 25,000 other serials are received.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

In an effort to combat America's great social dangers of crime in the streets and death on the highways, Eastern Kentucky University's School of Law Enforcement offers comprehensive educational training programs for police personnel throughout Kentucky. Eastern is the only university in Kentucky which provides baccalaureate and associate degree programs in law enforcement.

The University has received seven grants and contracts supported by federal funds totaling over $100,000 since the program was established a year ago. One of the most significant grants permitted the establishment of the Kentucky Peace Officers' Standards and Training Council. The Traffic Safety Institute, directed by Leslie Leach, has received federal grants and contracts to focus on driver education programs throughout Kentucky and works closely with the School of Law Enforcement. Eastern U. Offers Law Enforcement Degree Program

Richmond, Ky., Aug. 30 (Sp.)—Two of the most important problems facing America's citizens are crime in the streets and death on the highways, and in an effort to combat these social perplexities Eastern Kentucky University's School of Law Enforcement and Traffic Safety Institute is developing a comprehensive educational training program for police personnel throughout the eastern United States.

Through a 39-hour curriculum, Eastern offers the only baccalaureate degree program in law enforcement in Kentucky. Bob Josey, former director of training for the Kentucky State Police, heads the school.

Major and two-year associate degree programs are offered in general law enforcement, juvenile training, corrections and industrial security.

The School of Law Enforcement assists those agencies in Kentucky responsible for the cycle of criminal justice—the police, courts and corrections—and helping improve its personnel.

Eastern has received seven grants and contracts, supported by federal funds, totaling over $100,000 since the program was established a year ago.

Fall semester registration begins Sept. 13 and continues through Sept. 16. Freshmen students will report Sept. 10 for orientation and classification programs.

MINE PERMIT CASE HEARD

Puritan Coal Appeals Cancelling of Permit To Mine Jink Ray Land

The State Reclamation Commission heard at Frankfort Wednesday the appeal of Puritan Coal Mines, Inc. from the order cancelling its permit to strip-mine land owned by Jink Ray.

Puritan Coal Mines, Inc., appealed last week to the state Reclamation Commission to overturn an order cancelling its permit to strip-mine land owned by Jink Ray in Pike county.

Assistant Atty. Gen. David Schneider said Von Johnson, president of Puritan, filed the motion through his attorneys.

Ray gained national attention when he stepped in front of a strip-mining bulldozer June 29 to keep it from entering his land. He claimed the operations would be a danger to his life and property.

The appeal was scheduled to be heard by the three-member Reclamation Commission — J. O. Matlick, commissioner of the department's Division of Strip Mining and Reclamation; Elmore Grim, director of the Division of Conservation and Reclamation, and Ambrose Mandt, director of the department's Division of Mines and Minerals.

Grim said Puritan's appeal was the first made under the state's new Strip Mine Control Act.

Grim ordered the cancellation of Puritan's permit Aug. 1 for mining of all undisturbed land owned by Ray. He said that mining the property would be a hazard to Ray's home.

The firm's permit had been temporarily suspended by Grim prior to the cancellation with the approval of Gov. Edward T. Breathitt. The suspension followed a Pike circuit court order prohibiting Ray from interfering with the mining operation.

Puritan claimed it had legal authority to mine the land under a broad-form deed that assigned it mineral rights on Ray's land.

HOW MUCH?

The difference between folk measurements and standard ones has always intrigued me. If we had had standardized equipment with us at all times at Fidelity, we would have lost most of the flavor of measuring things. In previous articles I discussed some of these folk measures; now let's look at some more.

Suppose we start off with distance, a subject that all of us know a lot about, with miles and their tenths. It isn't just some miles to A from B; it is 145 miles, or so says the table of distances on the road map I am looking at. But we did not have any road maps at Fidelity 60 years ago; we didn't need them, for we seldom went anywhere or, if we did, we knew approximately how far it was and how soon we would have to start from home to get there by a certain time, and we did not need to know exactly when we would arrive at our homes; we would be there when we got there. Most places more than five miles away were pretty far away or down the road several miles or a pretty far piece. Most of us were not going, anyway, and did not need exact measurements. Shorter distances were a little piece or a little ways or just down the road or path or creek. It did not take you long to go a little piece, but a far piece was likely to take the better part of a day. If it was farther than that, you expected to stay over night and come back the next day. As I said in another article, we knew it was exactly 10 miles from our village to the county seat, but that is the only exact distance we knew. All sorts of guesses were floated as to how far it was to New Providence or to Pottertown or to the Mouth of Sandy; but nobody knew exactly or especially cared.

Quantities were folkish, too.

Even a standardized thing like a bushel was of many sizes, some of them a third larger than the others. Grandpap had always said that this was a bushel; few people argued with this hallowed measure and went on using it without ever knowing whether Grandpap gave over-full or skimpy measure. A molasses bucket was regarded as a gallon that might be; I sometimes think that the very idea of molasses bucket suggested gallon. A big bottle of whatever size was a quart, whether it was to hold whiskey or something else. A smaller one was a pint; a very much smaller one was a half pint. That seemed good enough for lots of people, who rarely bought anything except at the store, where the merchant had the proper cans or measures. "Methodist" or "Baptist" or some other measure was used, according to the company listening, to indicate generous measure, "pressed down and running over," above the rim. We would have enjoyed the Louisiana French word "lagniappe" if we had ever heard it; it means something extra, something for good measure, something graciously given. An extra potato for lagniappe would have been very appropriate with us; we got that later anyway, call it whatever you like. After all, a potato was not pure gold and might be used to stick on a coal-oil can, anyway.

How much was some neighbor worth? He was well-fixed or well-to-do able; he had money (amount not specified) in the bank; he owned several farms; he even owned a surrey as well as a buggy and a wagon. He had three mule teams and milked three cows just for himself, his family, and the pigs. His house was weatherboarded and painted white. Hot dog! He "had it made," in later phrase. But what would have been his actual worth if all his property was put up for sale? Why, I never thought of that. In all probability a lot of juggling would be done with his stuff after he died, so that the meager sums brought at the auction must have been tricky or false. Besides, what did his neighbors have? Being a rich man was usually a very relative term, for richness or poorness is not measured in dollars and cents in folkish areas.

FLOYD FOOD STAMP USERS ABOVE PIKE'S

The U. S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service reports that 146,178 Kentuckians in 115 counties received food aid during July through its commodity distribution and food stamp programs.

This was 115 persons less than the number receiving aid in the two programs during June. In Kentucky, 52 counties offer low-income families food stamp assistance, while 63 counties take part in the commodity distribution program.

Floyd county had 4,725 persons participating in the food-stamp program when the report was issued, while Pike, the state's largest county, had 4,097. Knott, one of the less populous counties, had more than either Floyd or Pike with 4,901 listed. Harlan county's 6,903 was high for the state. Shelby county was low with 164.

Russell H. James, of Atlanta,

Southeast District director of consumer food programs for the Consumer and Marketing Service, pointed out that there have been two important changes in food stamp program regulations within the past few weeks that will allow more families to take part.

Effective Aug. 1, the minimum purchase requirement for families in the lowest income category was reduced to 50 cents per person per month, James noted.

The second major change, he said, is a special half-price offer available to all families that enter the food stamp program after Aug. 1, and to families that dropped out of the program before June 1, and re-entered after Aug. 1. Under this provision, the new food stamp families are only required to put up half of their normal purchase requirement the first 30 days they take part in the program.

Vehicle Safety Check Stated January 1st To Get Federal Aid

Frankfort, Ky.—Kentucky will get $216,970 in federal money to help begin its periodic motor vehicle inspection program, Gov. Edward T. Breathitt says.

The federal grant will be matched with the same amount of state money, making the total $433,940.

Inspection, under a 1966 Kentucky legislative act, will begin January 1.

The money will be used to train 20 vehicle inspectors and several thousand mechanics of garages and service stations which qualify to conduct the vehicle checks.

The maximum fee for an inspection, as set by state law, is $2.50. Inspection stations will pay $25 annual permit fees. Money from these sources will be used to match the federal funds.

The training will be conducted at vocational schools throughout Kentucky, Dunlap Elliott, director of the Division of Motor Vehicle Inspection, says.
