SPEAKING OF AND FOR FLOYD COUNTY

THURSDAY, JULY 27, 1967

This Town . . . That World

Would you say this elderly Dalmatian of mine is in his dotage?

THE PEACEFUL LAND

The messages have been coming in from former Floyd countians now living in Detroit, or nearby. Strange stories, these that they tell. Families in their homes, doors locked. American citizens gripped by fear . . . afraid to step outside their homes, to go to work . . . afraid to let their children play in the sunlight, perhaps afraid to go to church . . . One gets a picture of the old Pilgrim and his brood, churchward bound, with trusty flintlock under his arm. And, back here at home, we should be, if we aren't, thankful for the peace of these hills that some city folk would like to call bloody and violent.

You say you can't buy time? What's that you're doing, feeding a parking meter?

FOOD STAMP PACT SIGNED

Stumbo Action Extends Program Another Year; 5,200 Here Get Stamps

County Judge Henry Stumbo announced Tuesday that he has signed a contract between Floyd county and the Kentucky Department of Economic Security for continuance of the Food Stamp Program for the fiscal year which began July 1.

Carl R. Horn, supervisor of the program in this and several other Eastern Kentucky counties, said that 1,000 families, or 5,200 persons, are currently receiving food stamps in this county. Fifty-two Kentucky counties are participating in the program, and approximately 96,000 recipients are issued about $1.4 million worth of food stamps each month.

In Floyd county during the fiscal year ending June 30, coupon books worth $996,618 were issued. Of that amount recipients paid $616,636.

APPALACHIAN GROUP SLATES FLOYD TOUR

Federal, state, and county officials will participate this week in a two-day tour of Eastern Kentucky which will include Floyd county.

The tour has been organized by the Appalachian Group to save the Land and People, Inc., a citizens' organization which is opposed to surface mining on steep, mountain slopes.

Accompanying the government officials on the tour will be a number of prominent national and local conservationists, representatives of civic groups, lawyers, educators, and press representatives. The tour is slated to cover strip-mined areas in Bell, Breathitt, Floyd, Harlan, Knott, Letcher, Perry and Pike counties.

"We are concentrating on areas that have been stripped since the 1966 law was passed," said Morris Shepherd, a Knott county school teacher who is spokesman for the Appalachian group. "We want the people on the tour to see with their own

BUSY COURT TERM SEEN BY STUMBO

Two Murder Trials Docketed, 2 Others Could Be Indicted

The September term of the Floyd circuit court may be the busiest court session to be held here in several years, Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo said this week.

Two murder cases are certain to be called for trial, and possible grand jury action could result in two others being added to the docket.

Three shootings, two of which resulted in deaths, will be probed by the grand jury, which also is expected to investigate three negligent homicide cases developing from highway deaths.

Although the gunshot death of Bert Randall Patton at Estill has been described by eyewitnesses as accidental, Stumbo said the grand jury will be given an opportunity to look into the circumstances. "I am unwilling," he said, "to accept the responsibility of passing on such a case, myself."

The fatal shooting of Charles Bryant, near Melvin, and the Left Beaver Creek wounding of Ernest Hall are other cases to be investigated.

His death sentence reversed by the Court of Appeals, Roy Salisbury will be returned here soon and will be docketed for trial again. The other slaying, that of Glenn Goble at Harold, ment of Bobby Kinder and normally would reach the trial stage has already resulted in the indictment at the coming term.

The Commonwealth's Attorney said that persons interested in the prosecution of cases should contact him at his office here, this month or next, well before the convening of court, so that subpoenas may be issued for witnesses.

FLOYD GETS GRANT SHARE

For Day Care Work; Ten Area Counties Get $1.1 Million

The Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) announced approval last week of a $1,109,722 grant to continue for another year its "Project Hope" in Floyd and nine other Eastern Kentucky counties.

"Project Hope" is a program that provides day care for children from three to five. The OEO grant will be administered by the Kentucky Department of Child Welfare and will provide preschool training and medical, dental, social and psychological services for 615 children.

Other counties involved are Elliott, Lee, Wolfe, Owsley, Morgan, Magoffin, Knott, Letcher and Harlan. Each county will have two centers and will be served by a professional staff and aides.

In addition to the OEO money, the state is putting up $177,265 for the project, which is beginning its third year of operation. (See Story No. 6, Page 5)

Toler Creek Road To Get Surfacing

The project will begin at the Pike county line and extend northwesterly to 2.3 miles south-east of Ky. 979, a distance of 4.4 miles.

The five programs that will be offered are electrical engineering, mining engineering, home economics, respiratory therapy and junior management. The expansion of the curriculum has been made possible by the addition of both full and part-time instructors to the college staff.

The two engineering curricula will enable a student to receive, at the end of two years, the degree of Associate of Applied Science. All course work for these two programs will be available at the Community College. Some of (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

NLRB GETS UNFAIR PRACTICES CHARGES

One or more unfair labor practices complaints have been filed by District 50, United Mine Workers of America, against Kentucky Appalachian Industries, Inc., manufacturers at West Prestonsburg of parachutes, weather suits and other items for the armed forces.

The last such action, reportedly filed Monday at Cincinnati, alleged that KAI has laid off or discharged 35 employees because of their union membership.

L. E. Danielson, plant manager, said the only layoff of employees was a temporary one, caused by cancellation of a contract which KAI had received to furnish certain items. All those temporarily laid off were given an opportunity to return to work, he added.

The first unfair labor practices complaint was filed in early April. Two weeks ago, company and union representatives conferred at Lexington on the matter of setting a date for an election at which employees would vote. But there exists a difference of opinion about the list of employees eligible to vote, and a hearing was held here Monday as a step toward settling that issue.

When the election will be held has not been decided. The company has objected to a vote before the charge of unfair labor practices is heard.

COURT RULES AGAINST RAY

Coal Company Wins In Appellate Court Decision Made Monday

The Court of Appeals refused Monday to dissolve a Pike circuit court injunction prohibiting Jink Ray and his Island Creek neighbors from interfering with strip-mining operations on his property by Puritan Coal Mines, Inc.

Yet, Ray's land is safe from mining operations for at least a few days. The state Reclamation Division last week temporarily suspended Puritan's mining permit pending a reappraisal of the situation.

The Reclamation Commission is expected to decide Friday whether to reinstate Puritan's permit, to modify it, or to cancel it.

The commission is composed of Elmore Grim, director of the Reclamation Division, an agency of the Natural Resources Department; Natural Resources Commissioner J. O. Matlick; and Mine and Minerals Commissioner Ambrose Mandt.

Although the Court of Appeals is in summer recess, Chief Justice Squire Williams and Judges John Palmore and Morris Montgomery sat through legal arguments in the dispute.

Puritan Coal Mines, operated by Fon Johnson, holds a lease from Virginia Coal & Iron Co., owner of mineral rights under land to which Ray owns the surface. The lease gives Puritan the right to extract the subsurface coal by strip or auger mining.

Ray and his neighbors, however, have twice blocked the bulldozers as they attempted to move onto his land. Ray contends the operation threatens his home in the valley below and endangers his life and that of his wife because of the steep slope.

Puritan went to Pike circuit court and obtained an injunction forbidding Ray and his neighbors from interfering with the mining operation.

Ray went to the Court of Appeals in an unsuccessful effort to have the injunction dissolved.

William J. Baird and Henry V. Stratton, Pikeville, and J. W. Craft, Jr., Hazard, attorneys for Puritan, told the Court of Appeals that "substantial mineral deposits" are located just beyond Ray's property and can be reached only by going through Ray's land.

Jeon L. Auxier, Pikeville, former circuit judge and former U. S. district attorney who represents Ray, declared that Puritan could go back down into the valley and, bypassing Ray start a new mining road up the mountainside beyond.

Mrs. Music Escapes Fire Which Destroys Little Paint Residence

Fire of unknown origin destroyed the home of Mrs. Sam Music on Little Paint, early Wednesday morning, with all its contents.

Mrs. Music herself barely escaped from the burning building. When she left the basement of her home and emerged onto the main level, the house was filled with smoke. She crawled down a hallway to the outside. Her hair was singed and she suffered shock.

A small dog died in the burning structure. The home, of frame construction, contained eight rooms. No estimate of the damage was available.

Mrs. Music is at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Russell Rice.

WHERE DEATH OF A LAKE STARTS. Photo shows coal tipple across Johns Creek at Kimper, Pike county, with pile of coal dust extending to water's edge. A coal-black Dewey Lake, which is fed by these waters, is feared by sportsmen and conservationists. Heavy siltation of the lake is also resulting from cuts and fills made in the Johns Creek headwaters for the railroad serving this and other mining developments in the area.

YOUTH DIES OF INJURIES

Christopher Stewart, Visitor from Michigan, Hit by Cooley Vehicle

Christopher Hayes Stewart, 15-year-old Michigan boy, was fatally injured, late Saturday night, when struck by an automobile on a curve of Ky. 80, a short distance above the Almar Theatre, near Allen. He died at the Prestonsburg General hospital at 8 a.m. Sunday.

The youth, who was here from Livonia, Mich., visiting his uncle, Paul E. Hayes, and other relatives, was struck by an auto driven by Otis Cooley, Prestonsburg grocer. A member of Mr. Cooley's family quoted him as saying he did not see the boy till the moment of impact. This report said Cooley hit the brakes and the car went into the ditch, pinning the youth beneath it.

Trooper Marvin Smith, of the Kentucky State Police, who investigated the tragedy, said evidence indicated the boy was on the highway. He said skid marks measured 20 feet before the point of contact and that the car then travelled 60 feet into the ditch. Others who measured the distances said the car travelled no more than 8 to 10 feet into the ditch. They also claimed the Cooley car was travelling at comparatively low speed because it was one of a long line of autos, most of which were returning to Prestonsburg and vicinity from the auto races at Martin.

The victim was a son of Edward (Dick) Stewart and Edna Hayes Stewart, of Livonia, and was a student at Bryant junior high school there. Besides his parents, he leaves a sister, Carla Stewart, of Livonia, and his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Stewart, of Hi Hat. His maternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Hayes.

The body was taken Monday to Livonia, Mich., for burial.

WATER SYSTEM JOB WAITS PLAN FINISH

Engineering work on a water system development plan here is not expected to be completed in time for contracts to be awarded before Jan. 1, W. O. Goebel, Sr., chairman of the Municipal Water Commission, said this week.

The work, which will involve the expenditure of $684,000, will extend the water system outside Prestonsburg a distance of approximately eight miles along US 23.

In the planning is a new reservoir to be constructed on the hill overlooking the new Presbyterian church, the extension of lines downriver to the state-owned lot on the Auxier road (new US 23), and upriver, also along US 23, to the United Fuel Gas Company's pipe yard. Four river crossings may be made in the downriver sector as service is planned for the west (railroad) side of the river, beginning at Cliff, and also to avoid line construction around cliffs bordering US 23.

Bell Engineers, Lexington, is preparing the work plans. Of the $684,000 to be spent on the work, $474,000 will be paid by OEO grant.

The water system, however, must spend of its own funds approximately $65,000 to provide water to the site of the U. S. Shoe Company, across the river from Lancer. The line has been extended to the river on either side and now awaits a river crossing to be made by the Ranier Construction Company. Ranier also has a sewer construction contract from the shoe company, and the sewer crossing will be made at the same time the water main is laid.

U. S. Shoe this week was moving machinery onto the site, preparatory to beginning concrete foundation work for the plant. Cost of building and equipping the plant will be financed by a $900,000 municipal bond issue, with the shoe company paying rentals sufficient to amortize the bonded indebtedness.

TWO NAMED IN BURGLARY

Home Near Garrett Stripped of Contents, Hauled Away in Truck

The bold, daylight looting of a home near Garrett, which was literally stripped of its contents was described here Wednesday morning by Sheriff Joe W. Lewis, after a burglary warrant had been issued for one man and a juvenile had been arrested.

Sheriff Lewis and State Detective Chester D. Potter learned of the looting after James Farley, 18, had been arrested Tuesday night on a charge of selling copper wire which had been taken from the premises. The information Farley supplied sent the officers to the home, which is about a mile up Rock Fork Creek from Garrett.

They found an almost-empty house. All the furniture, the refrigerator and kitchen stove, rugs, even switchboxes and wiring from the house and barn, were gone. The basement television repair shop at one time operated by the owner of the home had been robbed of tools.

The juvenile was arrested, soon afterwards. A burglary (See Story No. 4, Page 5)

VOTE COUNT IS DELAYED

Judge Orders RECC Ballot Tally But Appeal Is Lodged

A "forthwith" count of the ballots cast in the recent election of directors of the Big Sandy Rural Electric Cooperative was directed last Saturday by Circuit Judge W. D. Sparks, but Joe Hobson, Prestonsburg, attorney for one 'ticket seeking election said Wednesday that the case is being taken to the Court of Appeals.

The order to count the ballots accompanied Judge Sparks' approval of a permanent injunction to prevent the ballots from being removed from the RECC's Paintsville office to this county for tabulation.

The injunction action, initiated by Bradis Goble, John Ed Shepherd and Hawley Scott, names the REA election commissioners, John Howard, Bill Wells and James Witten, as defendants. Goble is an incumbent board member.

The opposing slate was composed of Robert Younce and Arnold Lowe, incumbents, and Jim Crager.

The present board of directors will remain in office till successors qualify. Four places on the board were not involved in the voting. As now constituted, a 4-3 split exists, and the split is described as "deep and wide."

Kentucky State Police have embarked upon a program aimed at solving their manpower problems. Unable to fill the existing vacancies through normal procedures they have assigned eight officers to work full time for a month, July 15 to August 15, on recruiting qualified applicants.

These recruiting officers, stationed in Kentucky's eight state police districts have been actively engaged in safety education work in addition to regular police duties. During this trial period they will devote full time to recruiting.

Colonel James E. Bassett said this was necessary because the shortage of troopers is critical, causing a decline in patrol coverage of highways.

He added that the difficulty in recruiting would not cause the State Police to let up on any of the qualifications for troopers. They are: 1. United States citizenship; 2. Age 21 to 31; 3. Height 5 ft., 9 1/2 inches, weight 150 pounds; 4. High school graduate. Applicants must also pass physical, physical agility and character examinations.

The 1966 General Assembly provided funds for 50 additional state troopers in the past fiscal year and for another 50 this fiscal year which began July 1.

The recruiting officer in the Pikeville and Hazard area is Trooper Jerry Combs, of the Hazard post. All young men who are interested in becoming a member of the Kentucky State Police are urged to call these posts for appointments.

Examinations will be given at the Prestonsburg Community College as well as at the posts.

Boys interested in playing football this fall at Prestonsburg high school should report at the high school gym at 3:30 p.m., next week. Equipment will be issued at that time to both varsity and freshman players. The season grid schedule for the team follows: Aug. 25, Wheelwright, here; Sept. 1, Morgan County, here; Sept. 8, Elkhorn City, here; Sept. 15, Jenkins, away; Sept. 22, Pikeville, away; Sept. 29, Leslie County, away; Oct. 6, Belfry, here; Oct. 13, Whitesburg, away; Oct. 20, Hazard, here; Oct. 27, Louisa, away; Nov. 3, Paintsville, here.

WE SUPPORT BREATHITT

Supreme or appellate courts of five other states have held that the so-called "broad-form" mineral deeds which, more than half a century ago, transferred landowners' mineral rights, including other rights, do not go "hell deep," as one Knott countain stated it.

These courts ruled—and their opinions have not been overridden—that the "broad-form" deeds either do not allow strip-mining or, else, the owners of the surface land must be reimbursed for any damage done to their property by such mining.

The Kentucky Court of Appeals, in sharp contradistinction, however, held in 1956 that strip miners were liable for damages to the surface only if the destruction was "arbitrary, wanton or malicious."

One wonders why Kentucky's highest court veered so far in the direction of the strip-miner and left the rights of the landowner defendant only on the paper defense weapons of vague, hard-to-define, and equally hard to prove, terms such as "wanton," "arbitrary" and "malicious." This opinion becomes increasingly interesting in the light of those voiced to the contrary by the highest courts of five other states.

A Knott county case is now pending before the Kentucky Courts of Appeals. Circuit Judge John Chris Cornett in that case held, in effect, that the right to strip-mine coal was not conveyed under provisions of the "broad-form" deed because no such method of mining was then known or contemplated.

It was because this case awaits a decision from the appellate court, and because a tense situation had meanwhile arisen in which not only rights but also the issues of violence and death were involved, that Governor Breathitt last week directed that a Pike county firm's permit to mine coal in this fashion be suspended temporarily.

Governor Breathitt has been criticised roundly in some quarters for his action. We commend him. He recognizes the importance of the coal industry to Kentucky, but he also recognizes the importance of human rights.

Rev. Skiff Ordained, Installed As Pastor

The Rev. Milton E. Skiff was ordained to the Christian ministry and installed as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here by Ebenezer Presbytery of the United Presbyterian Church, USA, at the local church on the evening of July 19.

The service of installation was led by the Rev. James Evans; installation prayer, by the Rev. Michael Smathers, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church at Booneville; the charge to the pastor, by the Rev. John McLaren, pastor of the Providence United Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.; the charge to the congregation, by the Rev. Jack Weller, minister-at-large of the United Presbyterian Church in Eastern Kentucky. The anthem was presented by the choir; the Old Testament lesson, by Frank H. Layne; the New Testament lesson and sermon, by Dr. Thomas Johns, president of Pikeville College; the call to worship, by Rainey White.

the course work will be taught in the evening program.

The homemaking and junior management curricula will also lead to the degree of Associate in Applied Science and these programs will be available in the regular day program at the College.

The new respiratory therapy program is being offered in cooperation with the University of Kentucky Medical Center. During the first year of the program, the student will take general class work at the Community College and then transfer to the University Medical Center for a second year of work and training.

With the implementation of these new programs, Prestonsburg Community College will now be offering seven technological two-year programs. The other two programs which will be in operation at the college are forestry and wood technology and professional secretaryship. Among the new courses that will be added to the college curriculum through these programs are Introduction to Data Processing, Electrical Circuits, Basic Engineering Graphics, Mine Surveying, Food and Nutrition for Man, and Family Relationships and Child Development.

Dr. Campbell said that the college also hopes to begin implementation of two-year programs in the allied health fields by September, 1968, and the two-year Associate Degree program in Nursing by September, 1969. Commenting upon this expanded program, he said, "These programs will not only help to train our students for various job opportunities that will open up here in our own area but will also enable the Community College to expand its public service role to the community and the area it serves."

Classes will begin at Prestonsburg Community College on August 30, and an enrollment of 650 students is expected.

Information concerning the new curriculum or any program offered at the college may be procured by writing Mrs. Marcia Carter, Admissions Clerk, Prestonsburg Community College.

Puritan's lawyers pointed out that it is costing the firm $600 a day for its expensive equipment to be idle for its payrolls and for its lease payments to Virginia Coal & Iron.

Ray, dressed in overalls, was present during the hearing and from time to time answered questions put to him by the judges and lawyers.

Auxier questioned the deed under which Virginia Coal & Iron claims subsurface mineral rights which it has leased to Puritan. The original conveyance of the mineral rights was in 1887, he said, and the 1952 mineral deed held by Virginia Coal & Iron may attempt to convey rights not handed over by the older deed.

During the informal hearing before the three judges, Baird and Stratton assured the court that they have "every confidence" in the soundness of the title under which Puritan is mining the coal.

"You may have confidence in your title," observed Judge Palmore, "but what we're faced with here is this: suppose something is wrong with the title and in the meantime Ray's home is destroyed. We'd look mighty foolish if we let you go ahead and then you lost your lawsuit."

"Even a peasant's hovel is his home, and it can't be replaced," Palmore added.

The attorneys said they were cooperating in efforts to obtain an early court determination of the validity of the rights of both Puritan and Ray to the land and its minerals.

WAY BACK WHEN
It wasn't so long ago when county schools began their terms, along about this time of the year. The crops were pretty well "aid by," the young'uns could be spared from the farm, and an early start on that six-month school term would get them out by the time winter was at its worst.

I suppose anybody who ever attended one of those schools has a lot of recollections that to him or her are more precious or amusing or even tragic than they could ever be to those who merely hear about them.

In our schools there was the inevitable pet sheep, usually a ram, which came to school with malevolent intent or soon acquired a predilection for ramming his head into the backside of the first unsuspecting boy whose path he crossed. I'm so old I can remember the day when we ceased to be democratic and quit the common drinking cup, or dipper, for those collapsible cups you carried around in your pocket with all that other trivia which included marbles, pieces of string, chestnuts and the like. (Incidentally, I do not recall any youngster having ever contracted any disease or illness from that old dipper.)

As has been the case whenever youngsters gather in a schoolroom, we easily "broke up" over the slightest mistake or amusing happening that occurred. The first day of school had more than its share of such happenings, and one even now strikes me as amusing.

The teacher may have been a bit ahead of his time; anyhow, he was experimenting with this youngster who was spending his very first day in school, and was pointing in the kid's book to the picture of a cat, then to the word below.

"Know what that is?" he inquired.

And loud and clear came the child's reply:

"Shore—Old Yaller had three of 'em!"

PARTY RAINED OUT
The little, old lady was one whose faith was marvelous. The preacher called her to invite her to attend the garden party he and his wife were giving.

"It's no use," she informed him. "I've already prayed for rain."

"How far is it to the next town?" the motorist wanted to know.

"Five miles as the crow flies."

"But how far," the motorist persisted, "if the crow has to walk, carrying a can of gasoline?"

Langley Receives Engineering Award

Teddy L. Langley, of Price, has been awarded a scholarship in electrical engineering by the West Virginia-Ohio Valley Chapter of the National Electrical Contractors Association for the 1967-'68 school year.

Langley, who was a junior this year in the College of Engineering at the University of Kentucky, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Langley, of Price. He was one of six engineering students at four universities to receive a scholarship.

PRESERVATION OF RIVERS SUGGESTED BY PROFESSOR

An assistant professor of law at the University of Kentucky says planners should consider alternative means of accomplishing the goals for which a dam should be built, that free-flowing water is a public value which should be considered in any planning decision.

Writing in the current issue of Kentucky Law Journal, A. Dan Tarlock, who is making a study of Kentucky water law under a U. S. Department of Interior grant, says that existing laws governing water-planning and allocation favor short term uses of water.

"They make little provision for the possibility that future generations may assign different priorities to the uses of water," he continues. "The increase in leisure time and affluence of the majority of our citizens will demand that much more water be used primarily for recreational uses."

He suggests that greater consideration be given to locating major impoundments downstream rather than upstream, "since the stretches of river which merit preservation are generally in the upper reaches," adding that flood-plain zoning rather than flood-control dams should be considered. He encouraged the use of nuclear energy or fossil fuels as a source of power.

"We seem to be creating a technology which will make it possible for most of our citizens to spend at least half their waking hours in leisure activities, yet we are destroying the natural resources necessary to sustain a quality recreational experience."

Tarlock said there has been little recognition that in some instances preservation of a river in its free-flowing state should be its highest use. "Public demand that unspoiled stretches of the waterways be preserved is increasing," he added.

Mountain Parkway Tolls Up For June

Revenue from Kentucky's highway toll facilities totaled more than $1 million in June, Highway Commissioner Mitchell W. Tindler has announced.

Last month's receipts amounted to $1,000,783, an increase of $67,000 over June of last year.

Gross receipts of the toll facilities for June of 1967 and 1966, in that order, as reported by the Department: Kentucky Turnpike—$351,810 and $377,419; Shawnee-town Bridge—$31,750 and $30,663; Mountain Parkway, $126,147 and $105,798; Western Kentucky Parkway—$251,444 and $239,098; and Blue Grass Parkway—$239,629 and $180,464.

Included in the Kentucky Turnpike figures for last month are revenues collected from Jefferson County's Outer Loop ramps, which totaled $24,338, and the Fern Valley Ramps, which totaled $8,717.

BREATHITT DISCUSSES STRIP-MINE SITUATION

By GOV. EDW. T. BREATHITT

The last couple of weeks have brought strong tests of Kentucky's determination to regulate strip and auger mining more strictly, if need be, to keep it from destroying the land.

Legislation more restrictive than the reclamation bill passed by the regular 1966 session of the General Assembly, ruling out a special session, would have to await the 1968 regular session under a new governor. My term expires December 12.

In the meantime, under a provision of the 1966 law, I ordered suspension of the strip mine permit held by Puritan Mines, Inc., until it could be ascertained whether operation threatened ruinous surface damage to property owned and occupied as a home by Jink Ray in Pike county.

Ray and neighboring land owners were engaged in a fight that threatened violence to keep the strip-mining corporation that owned the mineral rights, but not the land surface, from extracting coal from the land on which he lived.

During the week preceding this development, I spoke on the subject of strip and auger mining at a state strip mining symposium in Owensboro. I followed this up on July 17 with a fact-finding trip to Eastern Kentucky where I saw both strip mine operations and damage done by a landslide at a state road construction project near Harlan.

Because of what I saw, I directed Natural Resources Commissioner J. O. Mallick and Highway Commissioner Mitchell W. Tindler to initiate hearings as soon as possible to determine whether present regulations in strip mining and road building in mountainous areas are adequate to protect lives and property.

In the meantime, at my direction, the state took steps to extend all the help it could to recompense the three families whose homes were destroyed by the big earthslide.

I told my audience at the Owensboro symposium that I was especially proud of the strip mine law passed by the last General Assembly and I believed that on a field trip the next day they would find it had produced excellent results in restoring land in the coal fields of Western Kentucky.

Nearly 5,000 acres of coal land in the area have been strip mined and regraded since our law went into effect. The difference between these acres and the parallel rows of spoil ridges and deep valleys left by previous strip mine operations is like comparing night and day.

In mountain-type strip and auger mining, significant reclamation has been accomplished in some areas, but serious problems still await fair and reasonable solutions.

Now, while I want it clearly understood that I desire to be fair to our coal mining industry, I believe that perhaps the most serious of these problems is the one which stems from the interpretation placed by the Kentucky Court of Appeals on the old "broad form" mineral deed.

The effect of the court's decisions have been to make the mineral owner's claim superior to that of the surface owner. The family that had lived on the land for years was threatened by landslides and general property destruction by the strip or auger mining operation of the mineral owner.

The Kentucky interpretation stands alone among the states and is contrary to the general rule. West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Colorado and other states have decided in favor of the landowner. The Kentucky court now has under consideration a case through which it could reverse previous interpretations.

USE PESTICIDES SAFELY, EXTENSION AGENT WARNS

Using pesticides is almost a necessity for a successful garden or an attractive lawn. Yet these chemicals that control lawn and garden pests can be dangerous if they are not used correctly, warns Mrs. Frances H. Pitts, area Extension agent.

The most important safety rule for pesticide use is a very simple one that people often forget—read the label carefully and follow the instructions to the letter. For your own protection, be sure to use the pesticide exactly as the manufacturer recommends on the label and heed all warnings listed there.

Mrs. Pitts lists several other safety rules to remember when using pesticides.

Don't breathe pesticide dust or spray mist.

Don't smoke when handling or applying pesticides. Wash your hands and face thoroughly before eating or drinking anything when you've been using pesticides.

Keep children and pets out of the area where pesticides are being used. And never use a garden pesticide on a house pet.

Be sure to wear natural rubber gloves and protective clothing if the manufacturer recommends this on the label. If you spill pesticide on your skin or clothing, wash immediately with soap and water and change clothing. As soon as you finish working with pesticides, bathe immediately. And clothing worn while using pesticides should be washed before it is used again.

STATE MAY SEEK STRICTER MINE LAW IN EAST KY. FIELD, OPINION VOICED

STRIP MINE LAW REVIEWED—Kentucky's 1966 strip mine law came under study on two fronts recently as efforts were made to determine its effectiveness. At left, Governor Edward T. Breathitt, along with Department of Natural Resources officials, looks down the outslope of an Eastern Kentucky operation that was graded under the year-old law and is complete with drainage facilities and well-planned to prevent slides.

Breathitt toured several Eastern Kentucky strip mine sites. At right, some of the more than 300 people attending a Strip Mine Symposium at Owensboro, sponsored by the Department of Natural Resources, took a field trip through the West Kentucky coalfield where they observed stripped land graded back to the approximate original contour.

Kentucky's 1966 strip mine law is accomplishing its purpose in Western Kentucky but may require some adjustments to become totally effective in the Eastern Kentucky coal field.

This appears to be the consensus that emerged from a recent strip mine symposium in Owensboro and a tour of Eastern Kentucky strip mine sites by Governor Edward T. Breathitt and officials of the Department of Natural Resources. The purpose of both was to examine the effectiveness of the new law.

State Natural Resources Commissioner J. O. Matlick says the heart of the law is this: Stripped lands in Western Kentucky, where the terrain is relatively flat, must be graded back to the approximate original contour; lands in mountainous Eastern Kentucky must be graded by the terrace-backfilling method, covering the coal seam with at least four feet of spoil and reducing the highwall. No slope steeper than 33 degrees can be stripped.

Some 170 of the more than 300 people attending the symposium toured strip mine sites in Western Kentucky came away praising the law as "effective." They saw lands graded back to a gentle, rolling topography and covered with vegetation.

Both conservationists and industry spokesmen were among members of the tour group and each side spoke of a "good law" and "a growing spirit of cooperation between the coal industry and conservationists."

After his tour of Eastern Kentucky, where he saw slide damage caused by strip-mine operations, Breathitt called for re-examination of standards under which both strip mining and highway construction are authorized in mountainous areas.

He directed Matlick and Highway Commissioner Mitchell W. Tindler to begin "fact-finding" hearings immediately to determine whether present regulations are adequate to protect lives and property.

Highway construction in mountainous areas is similar to strip-mine operations, but its maximum-slope restrictions are slightly more stringent than the 33 degrees allowed for stripping.

J. Cordell Moore, assistant secretary of the U. S. Department of the Interior, released new federal recommendations at the symposium that included the restriction of strip and auger mining to slopes of 23 degrees or less.

Breathitt, on the Eastern Kentucky trip, noted: "We have an Appalachian highway program ahead of us...I want us to solve these problems before these roads are built, rather than have to cope with them later."

Breathitt also visited Jink Ray at Island Creek, in Pike county. Ray had just lost a fight in Pike circuit court to prevent strip miners from extracting coal on his land, under a broad-form mineral right deed.

Declared valid in previous decisions of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, the broad-form deed was a common practice 50 to 60 years ago. Under them, landowners sold the rights to minerals on their property.

At the Owensboro meeting, Breathitt said the prevailing argument in court cases contesting the broad-form deed should be that stripmining could not have been contemplated when the mineral rights were bought many years ago.

"The Kentucky interpretation stands alone among the states and is contrary to the general rule of law," he said. "West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Colorado and other states have ruled on similar mineral deeds but in favor of the landowner."

Following Ray's defeat in Pike circuit court, Breathitt assured him, "We'll do all we can to expedite your appeal in the courts."

Upon his return to Frankfort, Breathitt granted Ray a temporary reprieve from the operations of the strip-mining company under a provision of the 1966 strip mine law. The Governor ordered State Reclamation Director Elmore Grim to suspend the company's stripping permit on the ground that it constituted a threat to property.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

APPROVES WELLER STATEMENT
Editor, The Times:

Dear Sir:
This letter is to second the recent remarks of Rev. Jack Weller in regard to the Unemployed Fathers Program. The Presbyterian minister from Hazard addressed the Kentucky Welfare Association in November, 1966:

"Consider the unemployed fathers programs in East Kentucky and West Virginia: the Work Experience and Training Program. It answers, I think, the charges brought most often against welfare. It is not a dole—men work for their money, and heaven knows we need lots of extra hands to do the work of clean-up, fix-up and keep-up in the mountains. Why shouldn't we hire men to maintain our public facilities instead of letting them rot in use? To stay on the program, the men must keep their children in school. This, too, is good. We don't want poverty perpetuating itself in the children because they lack basic education. These men themselves must attend school—and this is good. An educated person is almost always a better contributor to society. The family gets adequate medical care, and this is good. A sick man or a sick family cannot make a contribution to society like the healthy. The whole program adds up marvelously with built-in answers to every complaint."

"About a month ago," Rev. Weller continued, "I spoke briefly with a class of these men as they sat in a schoolroom after hours of work, reading out of second and third grade primers, learning how to read, I tried to speak words of encouragement to them, how I felt they were among the bravest men in the region, willing to start at the first grade when they were old, and how nice the road-sides looked since they started clearing them. One of the men who hungrily listened to what was said replied that these were the first words of encouragement they had ever received."

The Prestonsburg Municipal (Archer) Park, already the most developed city park in East Kentucky, has greatly benefitted from the work of unemployed fathers under the direction of City Manager Curtis Clark. Federal law prohibits work on private property, however, and a project of reforestation, which is urgently needed, cannot benefit from WE&T labor. I believe adjustments should be made whereby WE&T personnel could engage in an intensive reforestation program under the direction of the Department of Forestry. This would be infinitely more valuable over a long period than the present weed-cutting on county roads (even though this needs to be done).

This is not to suggest that there are not administrative problems involved in this and similar programs. But Unemployed Fathers Program, the Neighborhood Youth Corps, and the College work-study Program are all valuable contributions owed—through the Federal government—to an area which has surrendered many natural resources with little proportionate gain for itself and provided much labor to the industrialized areas to the north.

REV. WILLIAM G. POOLE

CIVIL DEFENSE PREPARES FOR POSSIBLE 'BLOWOUT'

FRANKFORT—"Civil Defense is like the spare tire in the trunk of your automobile. You're really not aware of the need for it until you have a blow-out."

With this analogy, Major General A. Y. Lloyd, state Civil Defense director, says the major mission of his organization "is to prevent, minimize and repair damage and injury resulting from disasters caused by enemy attack, sabotage or other hostile action, or from fire, flood or other causes."

The total Kentucky CD program, says Lloyd, "emphasizes preparedness for any eventuality on the state, county and local levels."

One function of the state CD division, according to Lloyd, is radiological defense. Its purpose is to measure deadly radiation in the event of a military disaster involving nuclear weapons.

Although the radiological defense program began in the early 1950s, Lloyd says it did not gain momentum until 1963 when the federal government contracted with the University of Kentucky to train CD personnel which would deliver to others instruction in the use of radiation detection equipment.

"This development beefed-up our radiological monitoring program," says Lloyd.

More than 300 persons have completed the 32-hour U.K. course. Of these, 57 are now licensed to give a 16-hour course of instruction in radiological monitoring, he said.

Since 1963, nearly 2,500 persons have been trained by these instructors as radiological monitors and radiation detection equipment has been placed in every county, but surveys point out that Kentucky needs 10,000 persons with this skill, the CD chief points out.

General Lloyd says he is optimistic that this number can be reached by 1970.

All Kentucky State Police cadets receive radiological monitoring instruction as part of their required classroom work. In the event of a disaster, powerful State Police radios in district offices are capable of relaying information to CD headquarters in Frankfort.

Employees in other areas of state government are also required to qualify as radiological monitors. These include personnel from the Departments of Health, Highways, Revenue, Agriculture, Fish and Wildlife Resources, Motor Transportation and the Division of Forestry.

The radiation monitoring instrument is a small, sophisticated device which is battery-operated. The lightweight machine is hand-held and radiation levels are recorded on a meter and translated by the operator.

Cheaper in the long run.

Gas will never cost you much. (You'll get about 27 miles to the gallon.)

And the amount of oil you use is like a drop in the bucket. (It only takes 27 quarts and almost never needs more between changes.)

And the engine is air-cooled, so you don't have to spend a red cent for anti-freeze or rust inhibitors.

And you get more than your money's worth out of a set of tires (around 40,000 miles).

But don't think buying a new Volkswagen is just another get-rich-quick scheme.

You have to wait until the second set of tires wear out.

STATE'S ACTIVE TB CASES DOWN 75%

TB DETECTION-CONTROL PROGRAM—The number of active tuberculosis cases in Kentucky has been reduced by two-thirds since 1950, primarily as a result of the State's effective detection and treatment program for TB which brings its services within reach of all Kentuckians through hospitals, field clinics and traveling X-ray units working with county health departments. The State operates six district hospitals, in addition to 56 field clinics which provide outpatient services for 59 counties (shaded). Additionally, six mobile chest X-ray units travel the state regularly, visiting every county except Jefferson, which administers its own chest X-ray program.

The number of active tuberculosis cases in Kentucky has been reduced by two-thirds since 1950 primarily as a result of the State's improved detection and treatment program for TB.

State Health Department statistics show that the total number of new TB cases in Kentucky dropped from more than 3,700 in 1950 to less than 1,300 in 1966. The case rate per each 100,000 persons fell from 125.2 to an estimated 41.6 for these same periods.

Thomas Layton, executive director of the Kentucky TB Hospital Commission, attributes the reduced number of cases to these factors:

- * More effective detection methods.
- * Improved new drugs which have helped shorten the treatment and hospitalization periods.

- * Employment of additional physicians at the TB Hospitals.
- * Effective use of out-patient clinics which were started in 1959.

- * Better diets brought about by a higher standard of living.

The state's treatment program, according to Layton, is centered in the operation of six regional tuberculosis hospitals by the TB Hospital Commission. These provide services for Kentuckians in all 120 counties. The hospitals are at Madisonville, Louisville, Paris, Ashland, London and Glasgow. The Louisville facility (Hazelwood) is the oldest in the hospital system and the only one that performs surgery.

Hospital personnel also operate 56 permanent field clinics which provide out-patient therapy for residents of 59 counties in which there is a high incidence of the disease, Layton said.

"Because of the improved situation, there are no long waiting lists for persons seeking admittance to the TB hospitals—as was the case until just a few years ago.

"Beds in the hospitals are no longer allocated on a county basis because of the more effective treatment and speedy release of patients, many of whom continue their course of treatment at one of the out-patient clinics," Layton reported.

Layton said, "A new, simpler skin-testing program—a screening test for active TB—will make possible the testing of an estimated one-half million Kentucky youngsters by the end of the 1968 fiscal year.

"This intensive program to seek out TB among school children was made possible by a $110,000 appropriation from the 1966 Legislature at the request of Governor Breathitt," Layton said.

The new program began with limited funds in 1964 and, at the end of the last school year, almost 250,000 youngsters had received skin-tests, according to Layton.

Besides helping detect new cases in children, follow-up procedures often lead to source cases, oftentimes parents of the children, who also receive treatment, he started.

Another facet of the detection program involves the use of mobile chest X-ray units by the State Health Department. These vehicles, most of which are donated by the Kentucky Chapter of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, travel the state regularly, visiting every county except Jefferson which administers its own chest X-ray program.

Local county health departments and the Kentucky Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association work in concert with the State's TB control program.

Layton is optimistic that the state's TB rate will decline again this year.

He pointed to statistics from the State Health Department which reveal that 634 new cases of TB had been reported through June 30 of this year. This compares with 666 new cases for the same period in 1966.

Layton cautioned that "despite this progress, tuberculosis remains a serious disease in Kentucky."

MANAGEMENT SPECIALIST
ASSIGNED TO BIG SANDY

Small businesses in two areas of the state, through a new agency at the University of Kentucky, may now take advantage of modern management techniques which have been proven in industry.

An extension program designed to provide technical assistance to small business in the Big Sandy and East Lake Cumberland areas will be offered through the Office of Development Services of the UK College of Business and Economics, with the cooperation of the Kentucky State Department of Commerce.

David W. Victor is the management specialist assigned to the Big Sandy area. Any business firm interested in his services, or in learning more about the service offered, should contact H. E. (Gene) Ball, area resource development specialist, Prestonsburg (phone 886-2688).

At present, the program is confined in this section to Floyd, Martin, Johnson, Magoffin and Pike counties.

Dean Charles F. Haywood of the UK college said H. K. Charlesworth will direct the new program, which has as a major goal the strengthening and training of local management resources.

"Lack of sufficient, effective management skill is an important problem impeding Kentucky's economic growth," Dean Haywood said. "There are pressing needs for professional and technical assistance in management counseling and training for foremen and other supervisory people in small and medium-sized manufacturing operations."

He said projects to be undertaken will not only have local and immediate impact, but will yield results which will be useful in the further development of the programs of the Kentucky Department of Commerce.

Air Pollution Rules Hearing Set Sept. 12; Four Regulations Seen

The State Air Pollution Control Commission will hold a public hearing here Sept. 12 on four proposed regulations designed to clean up Kentucky's air.

The regulations would not be effective until after the public hearing and final approval by the commission.

The regulations would: (1) prohibit open burning in the state, (2) prohibit emission of air contaminants, (3) prevent air pollution from discharge in waste burners and (4) prohibit air contamination from burning coal refuse piles.

The commission voted to exempt residential and farmstead leaf-burning from the regulations. But it directed the air-pollution staff to develop a program for future regulation of handling the leaf-burning problem.

The commission also authorized drafting of legislation to give sales, property and income tax incentives to industries that install air-pollution control equipment.
