SPEAKING OF AND FOR FLOYD COUNTY

THURSDAY, JUNE 15, 1967

This Town... That World

That isn't thunder rumbling on the distant horizon. It's the grumble about the heat from a number of us who, three weeks ago, were wishing warm weather would hurry along.

One of these precocious youngsters is quoted as asking his old man how the auto manufacturers could afford to put bucket seats in cars when there are so many sizes of buckets.

And this in Tuesday's mail: Dear Aging One:

Not being as old as you are, I'm just one of those in-between citizens who's at the wrong age and position in life—too young for Social Security and Medicare, too prosperous for Welfare, too urban for crop subsidies and too American (drat the luck!) for foreign aid.

Ethel Dickerson reminds me that worry kills more people than hard work... because more people worry.

Note to Hugh and Stella Hamilton, who were kind enough to Dal has, for the third time that I can recall, made a remarkable recovery—almost like a brand snatched from the burning. He made it to the office Tuesday under his own steam and promptly filed a request for a bit of assistance to his old place on top of the desk. Which, of course, he got. The old romantic really almost lost his head, this time.

OF KENTUCKY'S PARKS
You can, I believe, visit all of Kentucky's state parks and find that each has a personality all its own. I have not made the full cycle of parks, but each of those visited has certain characteristics which are peculiar to it.

This is as it should be. No body can say, "If you've seen one, you've seen them all." At each park there's something (See Story No. 2, Page 3)

ASSESSMENT RECAP TOTALS $95,643,674

TOTAL NEAR $2 MILLION ABOVE 1966

Board of Supervisors Reviews Assessment; Town Values Highest

The first recapitulation of Floyd county assessment for 1967 taxation totals $95,643,674, Mrs. Clive Akers, tax commissioner, said Wednesday.

This total is subject to reduction or increase by action of the board of supervisors, which is now in session, Mrs. Akers explained. The assessment total is about $1,800,000 over that of 1966.

Town residential lots and improvements represent the largest single assessment item, their value being placed at $22,284,100. These are included in the real estate classification, the total assessment of which is $63,502,369. Other assessment items in this classification are:

Mineral and timber, $5,776,584; commercial and industrial, $11,239,225; farm and land improvements, $18,325,084; rural residential lots and improvements, $5,784,250.

Tangible personal property was assessed at a total of $19,282,570. This included these items:

Motor vehicles, $8,837,462; aircraft, $73,650; water craft, 62,300; merchants' inventories and manufacturers' finished goods, $4,203,926; drilling, mining and construction equipment, $4,627,501.

Manufacturing machinery, which is subject only to state taxes, was assessed at $3,183,142.

Real estate assessed for the gym tax here totals $15,356,630, with tangible property amounting to $4,260,892 assessed for the same purpose.

These first assessment totals show that of the assessment of real estate, Prestonsburg property was listed at $15,637,380, with $35,183,825 listed for property elsewhere in the county.

Mrs. Akers said the tangible property assessment bears most of the increase made to date.

Paintsville Boy, 8, Drowns in Johns Cr., Below Dewey Dam

Anthony Wayne Kestner, eight-year-old Paintsville boy, drowned in Johns Creek, below Dewey Dam, shortly after noon today (Thursday) as his grandmother and others looked on, helpless to save him.

The child, a son of Mrs. Lenice Kestner, was wading in shallow water when he stepped into the deeper water of a catch basin, near the emergency spillway of the dam. The body was recovered at 2:30 p.m., about 45 minutes after the boy disappeared in the water.

The body was recovered by Raymond Copley and George Lovell, Corps of Engineers personnel. An accidental drowning verdict was rendered by a jury empaneled by Coroner James J. Carter.

TWO VICTIMS OF GUNSHOTS

Hyden, Slone, Natives Of County, Die June 8, Bullet Wound Victims

Two native Floyd county men died of gunshot wounds last Thursday.

Dick Hyden, 67, of Prestonsburg, was fatally wounded by a self-inflicted revolver bullet wound in his head, early that afternoon, dying shortly afterward at the Prestonsburg General hospital.

The second victim was Arthur Slone, 54, who died at Garner, Knott county, as the result of a .22-caliber rifle bullet in his head. The Hindman Funeral Home reported the Knott county coroner has held Slone's death accidental.

Hyden, who had resided in Prestonsburg and vicinity most of his life, had been a resident of Warsaw, Ind. for about six months prior to his death. He had been visiting friends and relatives here for several days.

The fatal shooting took place at the Thomas Hereford Company store here where Mr. Hyden had gone, ostensibly to buy a revolver. When a clerk turned from the counter, outside which Hyden was inspecting the weapon, the shot was fired.

Slone was shot while in an out-building, near his home at Garner. (See Story No. 4, Page 8)

CO-OP ROAD WORK TERMED 'LIFESAVER'

The cooperative program with the Rural Highway Division, whereby counties work out the cost of machinery, has been a lifesaver for this county, County Judge Henry Stumbo said this week.

Last year, the county paid for $71,000 worth of machinery in this way. This year, the amount will be $72,000.

"Without this program, we simply wouldn't be able to own any road machinery at today's prices," Judge Stumbo commented.

And the cooperative program is getting results that have drawn the praise of highway officials. Last year, the Turkey Creek road was completed, and so were three miles from KY 80 to the forks of Arkansas Creek.

COMMISSION ASKS 100 MORE UNITS

High School Class Finances Park Work Providing Bandstand

Another building is under construction at Archer Park here, this latest structure designed to provide a bandstand for dancing and band concerts.

Cost of the undertaking is being financed with funds raised by the senior class of Prestonsburg high school. The park tennis courts, which the building overlooks, will be used as a dance "floor" and, when concerts are given, as a seating area.

At the park a basketball clinic is being held from 8:30 to 9:45 a.m., and a tennis clinic from noon till 1 p.m. Babe Ruth League and softball for both boys and girls have their practice periods from 1:15 to 2:30 p.m. The softball practice, supervised by Jack F. Wells, is for grade school pupils only.

The recent heat wave has filled the Archer Park pool with bathers from a wide area, some coming from as far away as Salsville. City Manager Curtis Clark said.

PARK COURSE LIGHTS OK'D

Final Negotiations With Electric Co-Op Remain To Be Made

Although negotiations with the Big Sandy RECC have not been completed, the Department of Parks has decided to proceed with installation of lighting to permit night play at the Jenny Wiley State Park golf course.

The installation of lights will be the first step in under-taking a regulation nine-hole course at any Kentucky state park, Ralph Brewer, Jenny Wiley State Park manager, said.

The undertaking is not a costly one, it was indicated. Installation of lighting, including poles and wiring, has been estimated at $9,500. Big Sandy RECC has offered the Department of Parks its choice of plans:

1. RECC to install the entire lighting system and charge for electricity, plus monthly installments to pay the cost of the system. This paid, it would be the state's property.

2. RECC would install the lines and supply power at a monthly rental fee of $600 during the golf season.

Present plans call for about 45 lights, with poles to border fairways so that no electric wires will cross them. Wherever a crossing of fairways would be necessary, this would be made by underground conduits.

The daytime traffic on the course is heavy, and it is held that if the nine-hole layout is to accommodate those who play golf in the area, plus tourists who play, night play will be the answer.

RADIO STATION WDOC HIT BY NIGHT BLAZE

The fire which swept a major portion of the installations of Radio Station WDOC here, early last Friday morning, caused damage approximating $100,000, Gorman Collins, station manager, said this week. The loss is partially insured.

Its transmitter and control rooms ruined and the main studio badly damaged, WDOC has not resumed AM broadcasts. But by 6 o'clock of the evening following the fire FM broadcasting was resumed, and it still continues from a small room atop Abbott Mountain which was made available to the station by Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company.

The blaze started around 2:30 a.m. One electric clock in the transmitter room stopped at 2:45 a.m., another at 3:15. Doc Harmon, engineer, had worked at the station till 11 p.m., and a girl employee did not leave till about midnight, and she returned possibly a half-hour later to check the door. Mr. Collins said.

Collins said he suspects arson. He explained that every circuit in the transmitter room where the fire started was in conduit

SEEKS SITE FOR HOUSING ENTERPRISE

Plans Are Complete For 42-Unit Complex, Work Bids Expected

With final plans for 42 low-cost public housing units already in the hands of the Housing Assistance Administration, Atlanta, Ga., the Prestonsburg Municipal Housing Commission has filed application for 100 more units in a separate complex.

For this latest housing development the commission is now looking for a site, it was said this week.

Most of the 100 units applied for will be designed especially for elderly persons. If the full 100 units are approved for construction, the venture would entail the expenditure of more than a million dollars.

The 42-unit complex to be built at the mouth of May's Branch, in the vicinity of the present Green Acres development, will cost an estimated $690,000. Plans for these units have been submitted.

Of the 42 units planned for the May's Branch complex, 20 will be for the elderly, with the remainder designed for families, as are those in use at Green Acres.

A heavy backlog of applicants for housing has accumulated at the Municipal Housing Commission office, and the commission is certain that not only the 42 nearing the construction stage at May's Branch but also the 100 others applied for can readily be filled.

FLOOD WORK BIDS RE-SET

First Bids Submitted On Roads, Spans High; 7 Projects Are Listed

Bids will be received again by the U. S. Corps of Engineers' field office at Pikeville at 2 p.m., June 21, on restoration of flood-damaged roads and bridges in this county.

Bids submitted earlier were not accepted, reportedly because they were too high. Seven projects are listed for repair:

A washed-out road on Tom's Creek, one end of a bridge on Prater Creek washed out, a swinging bridge at West Garrett, a bridge on Rock Fork Creek, near Garrett, damaged, and the bridge spanning Beaver Creek near Dema.

The latter is considered a major project, since truck mines are unable to reach the main highway with their coal because a pier of the span is out and the steel girders collapsed.

The number of federal flood projects was reduced to seven by work done by the Floyd county highway crew, with state aid. County Judge Henry Stumbo said these workers were on the job six days a week for three weeks and that several roads and bridges were repaired.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Blanche Rackley Hall who passed away June 12, 1967.

In a cemetery safely sleeping, where the flowers gently wave, lies the one we loved so dear but whom we could not save. God knows how much we miss her. He counts the tears we shed and whispers that she only sleeps.

Your loved one is not dead who is gone, and not forgotten as long as there is a memory; we will always think of her.

Sadly missed by mother and sisters,
MARIE AND EULA

GROUND BONES

Thomas Jefferson owned a large collection of prehistoric animal bones excavated at Big Bone Lick in Northern Kentucky. His collection contained one of the best displays of mastodon bones ever found. But he lost it all when a servant, ignorant of the significance of the bones, ground them into bone meal for fertilizer.

Southern States Meet Slated Here, July 21

McDowell Senior Is State Postmasters' Scholarship Recipient

At the close of its state convention at Owensboro, Ky., recently the Educational Foundation of the Kentucky Chapter of the National Association of Postmasters awarded two scholarships worth $350 each.

Patricia Ann Meade, a graduate this spring of McDowell high school, was winner of one of the scholarships. Patricia Ann is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel G. Meade, of Ligon. Mr. Meade is postmaster at Ligon.

The second scholarship was awarded to Lula Carol Davidson, a sophomore at Eastern Kentucky University, Richmond. Lula Carol is the daughter of Mrs. Martha Davidson, Spruce, Kentucky.

THE SKY'S THE LIMIT—THE SKI NEEDS ONE, TOO

For some time now it has been agreed that one trouble with fishing is that there are more fishermen than fish. There is a remedy for this, of course, if the worst comes to the worst:

- 1. Add more fish; or, 2. Kill off some of the fishermen.

But now a new and even more serious problem arises:

There appears to be more boaters and water skiers than there are fishermen, and the fishing isn't good on dry land.

In more serious and sensible vein, Herndon J. Evans, editor of The Lexington Herald, editorially discussed the situation this week:

As the season for water sports approaches fishermen in all parts of Kentucky are voicing their annual complaints about the taking over of most lakes by water skiers. The state has made some efforts to control the problem but those who enjoy this type of water sport are loath to surrender what they consider their right to use the lake waters as they wish.

It would appear that Kentucky's lakes provide ample space for both fishermen and skiers. Some lakes have designated certain areas for the use of water sports and fishermen know to avoid these areas. But where there are no restrictions water skiers today can create problems for those who wish to fish. Consequently many fishermen have no patience with those who love to stir up the waters and create king-size waves. Few skiers, according to a report just received from a fisherman at Mount Lake, understood as "presently a fisherman's paradise," have much regard for fishermen. They run up and down the lakes, enter quiet coves and rock boats that are trying, with smaller motors, to get in some fishing, he said.

The fishermen, after all, provide most of the income of the docks at some parks through rental of boats, motors and selling of bait and supplies. Most of the skiers operate their own boats and make no use of the 5 or 7 1/2 horsepower motors offered for rental at the park docks. Motors of 50, 75 or even 100 horsepower keep the waters so stirred up, the fishermen report, that they are deserting the lakes in great numbers.

Some state agency, perhaps, should set up regulations governing the use of lake waters for skiing. Both the fishermen and the skiers have the right to enjoy the streams and lakes. It is unfortunate that sometimes skiers take the position that the lakes are for their special enjoyment. There is ample water for all, if some part can be worked out which would limit skiing to certain areas. After all, they seem to have the most fun when their antics can be watched by larger crowds.

Hand-Made Dulcimers To Aid Alice Lloyd's Upward Bound Work

Pippa Passes, Ky. — Hand-made mountain dulcimers stand ready for students of Alice Lloyd College's Upward Bound Project. The stringed instruments were crafted by Charlie Whitaker, ALC dean of students, and Carroll Shaver, guidance counselor, in their basement workshop.

During the summer, participants in Upward Bound will be taught to play the delicate dulcimers by Mrs. John Taylor, Louisville music instructor. Enjoyed in the project are 110 Junior and senior high school students from Knott, Floyd, Letcher, Perry, Magoffin and Leslie counties. Besides music, regular courses in science, mathematics, sociology and English will be offered. During their eight weeks on the Alice Lloyd campus, they will attend regular classes in mathematics, sociology, science and English, plus numerous extra-curricular activities. The overall program, directed by Kermit Evorage, of Carr Creek, is designed to encourage full development of educational potential.

Advice: Don't Let Ky. Be Place Where You Hear Birds Coughing

An expert in air-pollution control has urged Kentucky to concentrate on the problem and not become like California where "you can wake up and hear the birds coughing."

John Middleton estimates that pollutants are being released into the air over the United States at the rate of 130 million tons a year.

"That's something like a half ton for each of us," he told Kentucky's first statewide air pollution control conference at Louisville.

Middleton, director of the National Center for Air Pollution Control at Washington, D. C., said a solution will require a strong government and industry partnership.

Ralph Pickard, executive secretary of the Kentucky Air Pollution Control Commission, said public interest in controlling air pollution is growing and Kentucky officials should take advantage of this.

He urged all Kentucky industries to "get on the bandwagon."

TO THE GRADUATES OF 1967

(By Tom Anderson, in The Kentucky Farmer)

The beats and zens, "peaceniks" and hippies, bitterly complain about "the world we never made." Poor dears. Too bad they don't have the chance in life Abraham Lincoln, Henry Ford, Thomas Edison and George Washington Carver had.

Why does anybody owe you an education, security or anything else, except a chance? Life is not a cafeteria. The teenagers' main problems are too much too soon, permissive and submissive parents, privileges without responsibility.

Neither your parents nor government owe you entertainment or a living. You owe your parents and your country something.

Your parents should do nothing for you which you can do for yourself. The Federal Government should do nothing for us which the state or local government can do, as well or better — and that includes practically everything. No government should do anything for us which can be done as well or better by private organizations and individuals — and that too includes practically everything.

"But there are no more frontiers!" some exclaim. An open mind is a frontier. Obstacles exist to be overcome. Your opportunity today is unlimited (except by government). Eighty percent of the world's knowledge is only ten years old. And doubles every ten years. Of all scientists since Aristotle, nine out of ten are living today.

Nobody "has everything" and nobody "has it made." Keeping it is harder than getting it, and continuing to enjoy it is harder still. Nobody is invincible. "There never was a horse that couldn't be rode, and there never was a rider who couldn't be thrown."

Believe in faith not fate. Faith separates the enthusiast from the cynic. Enthusiasm is one of the greatest passports to success. Don't keep your cool when you should be warm.

As any failure can tell you, success is just a matter of luck.

Calvin Coolidge said, "Nothing in the world can take the place of persistence. Talent will not; nothing is more common than successful men with talent; unrewarded genius is almost a proverb. Education will not; the world is full of educated derelicts."

Probably the most difficult task of business today is to find, not college degrees, but people who want to give an honest day's work for an honest day's pay; to find people who ask "what can I do for you?" instead of "what can you do for me?" To find people who ask "what is the opportunity?" instead of "what's the security?"

People, like ships, arrive at the ports to which they chart their courses. But only about one person in twenty even bothers to chart a course. That's like playing a football game without any goal lines. If money and position and government are your only hope for independence, you will never have it. The only real security is inside you.

God could have made man secure. Instead, He made man free. Freedom is not free. It's not even cheap. Throughout history the greatest enemy of man has been government. Men fought, bled and died for centuries for freedom — God-given, individual freedom. You may have to do the same. The time to be a pacifist is behind the wheel. More Americans are killed on our highways every year than have ever been killed in any war.

Hamlet, a crazy, mixed-up kid, moaned: "The time is out of joint; oh, cursed spite that ever I was born to set it right." The time has never been more out of joint than now. If you don't set it right, who will? Young people are now in the majority in this country.

Nature has given us two ears and only one mouth and they should be used in proportion. But as Mark Twain said: "Let us be thankful for the fools. But for them the rest of us could not succeed."

Felix Schelling has said: "True education makes for inequality; the inequality of individually, the inequality of success; the glorious inequality of talent, of genius; for inequality, not mediocrity, individual superiority, not standardization, is the measure of the progress of the world."

There is not and cannot be any such thing as equality. Free men are not equal and equal men are not free. We should be equal before the law and nowhere else.

Anybody in this country who appreciates and wants a good education can get one. If you really want to get a good education, pull a few wires—TV, telephone and ignition.

It's what you learn after you know it all that counts. Go to school not to make a living, but to make a life. Schools should not be for producing degrees but for producing character. Many schools can't possibly do that because their principals lack principles. Their teachers, P.T.A.'s, curricula, school boards, buildings and athletic programs are devoid of character.

What counts most in life is not what you have in your pocket or head, but what you have in your heart. Character is all that you are. To fail is not to be lacking in character, but to be lacking in character is to fail. The little voice inside you should be your conscience and not your pocket radio. You are what you eat, think and do, and don't do. Some day you will sit down, alone, to a banquet of consequences. Your habits become you. Way start smoking to prove you are a man, when 20 years later you'll be trying to quit for the same reason? You know many fine folks who don't smoke or drink, but did you ever know a bum who didn't?

Your teacher might consider this ridiculous, if not illegal, but Patrick Henry was so right when he said: "This book (the Bible) is worth all the books which were ever printed."

Religion is the root of the morality tree.

Once a farmer standing on the river bank handed his son a pail of garbage and said: "son, get on your horse and take this garbage up to the bend in the river and dump it in and then ride immediately back here." Incredulous, but obedient, the son carried out his daddy's mission and returned to his daddy's side. In a few minutes the old man pointed toward the water. "See that can and those bottles and the rotten apple bobbing? This river is like your mind. It becomes what is dumped into it."

You can be better than your reputation but you can't be better than your principles. The same teenage girls who would scream if there were a mouse loose in the stadium think nothing of parking in the back seat with a rat. Now the line of least resistance and you'll be like a river—flood, unclean and crooked. The weakling seeks the front of the bus, the back of the church and the middle of the road, be strong, both for and against. Get involved. A small number of people make things happen; a larger group watch things happen; and the mass never understand what happened. Just because the majority decides a thing doesn't necessarily make it either right or true.

If recent surveys are true and if youth continues to think and do as surveys say, then our free Republic is doomed. The "open generation," according to these polls, is very disoriented with life today in the United States. They don't trust anyone over 30, say their parents annoy them. They would live away from home if they could, and 45 percent believe it is all right for a boy and a girl who are in love to live together. ("Make love not war.") A majority say sex before marriage is OK. "Love is more important than virginity." (Apes agree). They don't want to go into business because the profit motive is "wicked."

This has been the greatest nation in history because of three things: The American system of free enterprise (profit motive); the land and climate; and the kind of people who settled and made this country. And now the collectivists are deliberately destroying the system and the free Republic which produces on seven percent of the world's land, more than half of the world's goods.

With six percent of the world's people we Americans own 71 percent of its cars, 56 percent of its telephones, 83 percent of its TV sets, 90 percent of its bathubs. American business did this, not the government. Business did it in spite of its government, which has been anti-business for 30 years. Foreigners didn't do it and youth didn't do it. The "squares" over 30 and their parents did it. And then gave much of it to the world and to you, neither of which appreciated it. So if you want to help the world, yourself and your children, don't get into social work or into government. Get into business!

Sincerely, TOM ANDERSON

Commission Rejects Move To Lower Its Pollution Standards

Kentucky's Water Pollution Control Commission has adopted without change strict water pollution quality standards that have been the subject of seven public hearings.

Adoption of the standards without change had been strongly advised by Ralph C. Pickard, executive director of the commission, and his staff who resisted attempts to lower the minimum standards.

The commission adopted the standards by an 8-1 vote being cast by former Louisville Mayor Andrew Broaddus, who said the standards would impose financial hardships on some industries.

Broaddus suggested a more lenient limit on dissolved oxygen in rivers so that less sewerage treatment would be required.

Other commission members said the standards should be adopted with the possibility of later revision.

J. O. Matlock, commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Natural Resources and acting chairman of the commission, said the regulation including the standards is "subject to change if the commission feels it is justified." It applies to the Ohio, Mississippi, Tennessee, Cumberland and Big Sandy rivers.

"WHAS Reports: From Seed To Smoke" (9 p.m. Tuesday, June 13, Channel 11) tells about the revolution which took place in tobacco farming in the spring of 1864. Two Ohio farmers ran short of seeds, and borrowed some from a farmer across the river in Kentucky. The plants that came up were a strange yellow color and were destroyed. But one Ohio farmer, George Webb, persisted in the face of adverse advice and eventually cured 20,000 pounds of "white burley." When he won first and second prizes at the St. Louis fair two years later, burley started on its way.

"WHAS Reports: From Seed To Smoke" (9 p.m. Tuesday, June 13, Channel 11) tells the story of burley tobacco. Kentucky is the largest producer of burley in the world, and tobacco provides almost half of the farm income, although only two percent of Kentucky's cropland is planted in tobacco. Burley tobacco's ability to absorb moisture gives it its reputation. During "WHAS Reports: From Seed To Smoke" (9 p.m. Tuesday, June 13, Channel 11), films show tobacco being steamed by the farmer, in curing his crop, and later, during processing into cigarettes. The dry, crisp leaves of aged tobacco must be softened before processing. This conditioning process is done in a machine which handles six 1,600-pound hogsheads of tobacco at one time.

Gen. James H. Polk, commander of the U. S. Army in Europe, made the presentation of the second highest medal. Last June, Woods was commanding Company C, 327th Infantry, during a search and destroy operation near Trung Luong. His outfit came into contact with an entrenched Viet Cong force and he set up a perimeter. After repulsing an enemy assault June 20, Woods ordered two platoons to counterattack. When they suffered serious casualties, he committed his reserve. Using a helicopter on June 21, Woods found insurgent strongpoints surrounded his perimeter. He obtained reinforcements and deployed them in the defense for that night. Just before dawn on June 22, the Viet Cong launched an intense mortar attack, followed by human wave assaults. Woods directed fire and encouraged his men and at the end of the battle 96 insurgents had been killed.

WHAT MAKES NEWS WITH THE CHURCHES

By ROBERT WALLACE

Today many churches and church people are concerned not only with worship services but with diverse activities outside the church, such as schools for the retarded, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, mental health, church operated schools and hospitals, and recreation for young people. Some members believe, as one speaker said, they must associate themselves and their churches with the needs of the people or perish as a church. Also, some churches are trying to meet the challenges of the changing times and a troubled world by reappraising their own positions and activities.

To learn just how the various churches are involved in matters of public interest a count was made of column lines devoted to churches in The Courier-Journal during May, 1967. This count excluded Sunday announcements of church services in the Louisville area and the Sunday sermon. After the count it was noted that, with few exceptions, the news stories seldom were about individual churches but were about church-wide groups such as conferences, or the leader of a particular denomination. Some church activities are listed.

A Baptist convention approved a new budget, another heard a speaker urge Baptists to associate themselves more closely with the needs of the people or the church would perish.

A Presbyterian conference approved a new and different creed for use in worship. This same group urged adoption of open housing laws and an end to racial discrimination.

An American Baptist convention spokesman urged adoption of legalized abortion laws.

A Lutheran conference was told its church needs overhauling and heard a speaker brand the U. S. as "colonial and imperialistic" in Vietnam.

Two unidentified Negro churches in Lexington refused to permit a Black Power rally to use their buildings.

A Methodist conference approved mergers with two other groups—the Negro Central Conference and the Evangelical United Brethren.

Catholics, according to news stories, welcomed a new spiritual leader in Louisville and a new school head. One spokesman predicted the Vatican would approve use of "the pill." Another supported the right to participate in demonstrations. The Vatican repeated its policy of celibacy for priests, voiced disapproval of miniskirts, and permitted English to be spoken in saying Mass. The pope visited Fatima.

Drowning, Major Cause Of Accidental Deaths, Health Doctor Says

"Drowning is one of the major causes of accidental death in the United States today," said Dr. Russell L. Hall of the Floyd County Health Department. Excluding automobile and other transportation-connected mishaps, drowning ranks among the top three causes of fatal accidents, accounting for over 5,000 deaths each year.

One factor Dr. Hall cited is the growing number of people enjoying water sports in areas set aside for recreation, including fishing, camping, swimming, boating and water skiing. Drownings related to these activities appear to be on the increase, and many deaths could be avoided, the doctor said, by exercising caution and using common sense when in or on the water. He offered these suggestions for use of recreational water facilities:

1. Know rules and regulations of the local recreational area and abide by them.
2. Be sure you have all the proper equipment and know how to use it.
3. Wear U. S. Coast Guard-approved lifejackets when boating or water skiing.
4. Don't panic in emergency situations.
5. Stay with a capsized boat, if it is still afloat, until help arrives.
6. Don't overload your boat or use too powerful a motor on a light boat.
7. Stay away from water during storms.
8. Never swim alone.
9. Do not exceed your limitations as a swimmer.
10. Take lessons from an accredited instructor before engaging in skin-diving.
11. Learn artificial respiration or mouth-to-mouth breathing.

Dr. Hall also pointed out that water safety is not limited to public bathing and recreational facilities. The large numbers of home swimming pools and portable pools for children mean added responsibility for homeowners and parents to practice water safety on their premises.

"Never allowing children to play in or near water unless supervised by an adult, and knowing the swimming capabilities of guests before they use the home pool, are basic precautions for water safety in the home," he said.

Accidental drownings are not always the results of sport or play, Dr. Hall added. There are many instances each year of small children drowning when left alone in the bath tub or when they fall into an open well or cistern.

Dr. Hall concluded by urging everyone to be careful when using public and private recreational water facilities this summer, and to practice water safety the year around. "Many tragedies could be avoided," he said, "by practicing common sense rules of water safety."

AMERICANS MAY BURY SELVES IN OWN DEBRIS, SPEAKER SAYS

Unless Americans get serious about cleaning up the country, we will "go down in history as the crazy people who buried ourselves alive under our own debris."

That was the warning to the 300 delegates to the recent third annual Kentucky Clean-Up and Beautification Conference at Lexington from the man who has the task of cleaning up the nation's largest city.

Christopher Gilson, executive director of the Citizen's Committee to Keep New York City Clean, Inc., said the estimated 4.5 pounds per day per person disposal of refuse—including litter—will increase to 5.5 pounds by 1980.

"It's simple arithmetic to apply population-growth figures to these averages and see the staggering proportions of the problem," Gilson stated.

The problem can best be met, Gilson said, by applying these four factors to a clean-up program:

1. Addition of color. "Color has the unique power of being a dramatic catalyst," Gilson said, and the addition of color to one part of the city will "show up" the other parts of the city, with the final result being "painting leads to planting."

2. Desire for greater cleanliness. A few applications of color, Gilson said, can trigger a chain reaction resulting in a climate for an "honest-to-goodness city-wide clean-up program."

3. Deletion of a town's "barbarisms." A part of the chain reaction will be a public becoming "increasingly revolted" by open town dumps, roadside junkyards and other eyesores, Gilson said.

4. Development of good town planning. Out of the desire to do away with ugliness, Gilson said, will come codes and ordinances that "place emphasis on appearance tomorrow rather than on expediency today."

A highlight of the conference was presentation by Kentucky Natural Resources Commissioner J. O. Matlock of recognition awards for "outstanding achievement" in state clean-up programs to:

Globe-Upper Tygard community, Olive Hill; Mrs. Ben Allen Thomas, Shelbyville; Mrs. J. T. Rice, Kewell; Lester Locke, Kettle Island; Cadette Girl Scout Troop 150, Georgetown; Garden Forum, Maysville; Distributive Education Clubs of America, Simpson County High School chapter, Frankfort; Garden Club of Frankfort; Owen County Future Farmers of America chapter, Owenton; Hawesville Homemakers Club; Garden Club of Danville, and Bernheim Forest, Frank H. Hall Brothers Add Second Chapel; Other Improvements Made

The Hall Brothers Funeral Home at Martin recently completed a building and remodeling undertaking at a cost of about $15,000, it was said last week.

The work involved a 50x24-foot addition which provides a second chapel and a chapel seating capacity of 175. Interior paneling, central air-conditioning and a background music system were features of the improvement program.

Johnny C. Hall, a member of the firm, said the second chapel was added because of the growing use of funeral home chapels or funeral services.

LOTTERY NOT THE ANSWER FOR KENTUCKY, SAYS SOULE

"A lottery doesn't share the cost of government on a rational basis—it assumes that if some people are foolish enough to risk a dollar or more for $100,000 (the odds against winning are 4,150-to-one) then the state should take advantage of them," a University of Kentucky researcher said this week.

Dr. Don M. Soule, assistant director of the UK Bureau of Business Research, says he does not approve of using a lottery to subsidize taxes—even though he sees greater financial aid to education as inevitable.

The rapid rise in school enrollment and other demands on state government since the beginning of the 1960's has placed more and more of a burden on Kentucky taxpayers, and since the lottery has been successful in two states, Dr. Soule sees increased agitation for the use of the lottery as a means to increased revenue.

New Hampshire and New York are attempting to answer the increased demands by legalizing the lottery, while at the same time giving some lucky ticket holder as much as $100,000. "Theoretically, a lottery and other similar means of raising money are based on the idea that something is wrong with taxes," Dr. Soule said. "Taxes are merely a means of distributing in a fair manner government expenditures."

He says that approval of a state lottery would in essence be a public condonation of gambling. "Besides, there wouldn't be that big a yield."

New Hampshire's sweepstakes is three years old. During the first two years the state grossed $10.5 million from ticket sales at $3 a ticket. After deducting money for the winners (the highest amount paid was $100,000) and operation expenses, the state distributed $5,255,000 over a period of two years, among local school districts.

Assuming that Kentucky would sell the same number of tickets at $3 each, the state could expect to yield the same amount as New Hampshire — or approximately $2.7 million a year, Dr. Soule estimates.

The lottery ticket occupies a unique spot in Kentucky's history. In fact, lotteries are responsible for the early growth of Kentucky's state universities and colleges.

About the time of the creation of "Kentucky Academy" and Transylvania Seminary, the state legislature made available a land endowment for private schools and academies scattered throughout the state.

The schools were so poor that most could not afford the cost of locating and surveying the land. The legislature allowed them to use a lottery—if they raised no more than $1,000.

Emperor Nero, centuries ago, used lotteries to please his subjects, giving away houses and slaves. Lotteries were also a prominent feature of the renowned court hospitality of Louis XIV.

A lottery was authorized in 1811 to raise $10,000 for improvement of the navigation of the Kentucky River. In 1812, $4,100 was raised by a lottery to complete the building of a house of public worship on Frankfort's public square.

Arguments in favor of reorganizing a state lottery emphasize the desirability of getting taxes paid by people from out-of-state. "If Kentucky could operate a lottery around the derby, it might prove successful," Dr. Soule said.

"The Kentucky Derby is always an attraction and could not be duplicated by other states," he explained. "The lottery would have a secondary effect of advertising the derby and state officials could wither opposition by naming the yield for a definite purpose, like education or mental health."

A UK political science professor said this week that "Kentuckians apparently do not favor legalizing the lottery since former Senator C. W. McCann, of Louisville, was defeated in the spring primary."

Dr. Soule agreed that a state lottery would be "more trouble than it's worth." In 1965, Kentucky's state aid to education was approximately $125 million. The $2.7 million collected from a lottery would amount to only 2.2 percent of this figure.

"If Kentucky increased the cents on the dollar, it could raise $41 million for education in a year's time," Dr. Soule added. One aspect of a lottery which most people don't realize, Dr. Soule said, is that it is self-destructive.

"As most states get lotteries, each state will get smaller out-of-state sales," he said.

What Are the Most Important Things To Look for When You Go To Buy Furniture?

By JOHN W. CONLEY

There are three words to remember when you buy furniture and if you keep these three words in mind, you'll be happier with your purchase and you'll eliminate the confusion and indecision some people are troubled with.

You can use these three words as a sort of check list before you buy. The three words are: comfort . . . style . . . and, construction. Let's look at them individually.

It's amazing how many people fail to consider comfort when buying a chair, sofa or bed. They fail to realize this is the basic purpose of these pieces. Be sure you take this into consideration.

The next thing to consider is style. Which pieces will look best in your decorating scheme? We'll be glad to help you with suggestions.

The third thing is construction. Unfortunately, this is something you can't always see or know about for sure. That's why it's important to deal with a reputable store. You must take the store's word on construction. It's good to know, however, that good stores carry only well-constructed furniture and you may put your trust in us.

By following the above tips, you'll be able to get more for your furniture dollar and you'll be surer to have furniture you like. We invite you to visit

SPORTS AFIELD
By TED KESTING

Fishermen are noted for their easy going dispositions. But ask one his opinion of speedboaters—and in particular, water skiers—and he will be likely to turn the air blue with his invective.

Actually, there isn't a thing wrong with water skiing or speedboating in itself. It's the abusers of speedboating that bring the wrath of fishermen on all.

A typical example is a lake in Minnesota. With a mile of open water outside, where there was no fishing, skiers and more rarely others with fast boats, insisted on swinging in near shore to buzz fisherman. Perhaps it was pure sadism with some, a delight in seeing that terrified look come to the face of some little old lady fishing for bluegills. But with most it was probably a very childish form of showing off—not knowing that they were being heartily cursed instead of admired, or maybe not caring. It was exhibitionism of the lowest type.

However, one group was a noted exception. The village had a club of devoted water skiers, and these had agreed quietly, without a complaint or even a hint from the fishermen, to confine their skiing to a certain stretch where the fishing was so poor as not to be worth bothering with—and to swing a long way out from the occasional swimmer there. Most or all water-skiing clubs probably have the same rules—so if all skiers could be persuaded to join such clubs, and abide by their rules, there would be no problem for the anglers.

Some lakes, and large stretches of all lakes, have such poor fishing that they can well be turned over to skiers, giving them plenty of room without bothering fishermen. State game officials, could, with a lot of red tape and wasted time, say which should be skiing places. It would be far faster and simpler, if there's a water skiers' club around, for some of its members to get together with some from the angling club, and in an hour or so they'd have decided the matter in a spirit of sweet and beautiful friendship.

An exceedingly simple method is now used in some places, reports Jason Lucas, Angling Editor of Sports Afield Magazine. Skiing and speedboating are allowed only between, say, 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. That's when the sun is highest to give the skiers that mahogany tan that many of them seem to want. It is also when fishing is generally very poor, and it leaves the good morning and evening hours to the anglers.

new, a different atmosphere, a variety of attractions and all these in a variety of arrangements. The result is, the last park you visit is just about the nicest of all.

Our own Jenny Wiley State Park has almost everything: Dewey Lake for water sports, the luxurious appointment of its lodge and vacation cottages, its golf course and the finest greens to be found, horseback riding, the scenic chair-lift, hiking trails, perhaps the finest amphitheatre in Kentucky—you name it, Jenny's got it.

Buckhorn State Park, the latest of those graced by the presence, lacks the wide variety of entertainment that Jenny Wiley affords. No horseback riding, no golf course, no amphitheatre or chair-lift. But it has a lot that makes up for these: an isolated mountain setting, a beautiful lake, a lodge with veranda or balcony from which the guest can feast his eyes on blue water, scurrying boats and the quiet that speaks from the encircling hills. And there is a compactness about the arrangements there that makes it a community and adds to the comfort and convenience of guests.

Jenny Wiley, we are told, has one of the largest, if not indeed the largest, boat docking facilities in the entire state chain of parks. But Buckhorn has the dock which has the stronger appeal to the fisherman. In the center of the dock is a large and well-equipped restaurant, plus business office, bait shop, etcetera, and around all this is built the dock facilities—boat slips, lockers, rest rooms, ice machine and other conveniences.

All this gives the impression that this dock was built with the fisherman in mind, as well as the boaters and skiers.

One characteristic every Kentucky state park shares, and that is Kentucky hospitality, than which they make no better.

Another characteristic each that has water around it shares—and that is a roaring, foaming multiplicity of high-speed boats and a nautical Barney Oldfield at the helm of each.

In Memory of Harold Richard Ousley

Oh, I miss you, darling son, since you passed away, I hope to see you again, dear one, on Judgement Day. I often dream of you, darling, as a little boy. But since you went away this world has lost its joy. I remember you came to visit me, this time last year; I was always so happy when your family was near. But little did I think, my dear son, as I kissed you goodbye, Before the year was over you would go to your home on high. The days are sad and lonely since we laid you beneath the sod; Oh, I pray you're resting at home in peace with God. By his Mother,

WIN BY FORD IS CONCEDED

Atty. Gen. Robert Matthews last week conceded the Democratic primary for lieutenant governor to State Senator Wendell Ford, of Owensboro, after two weeks of rechecking totals and recanvassing voting machines.

In a telegram to Ford, Matthews said: "Apparently you have won the Democratic nomination for the office of lieutenant governor. I congratulate you and will support the entire Democratic ticket this fall."

Although the official recanvass requested by both Matthews and Ford has not yet been completed, Matthews said his organization's recanvass indicates that he lost the race by 513 votes.

This, he said, is about one-sixth of one percent of the votes cast in the May 23 primary.

The Ford-Matthews contest was the closest of all the races last month.

The final tabulation reported by the Associated Press gave Ford 104,566 votes to 103,619 for Matthews, or an unofficial majority of 947 votes. Two other candidates in the primary were Campbell County Judge A. J. Jolly, Newport, and former House Speaker Harry King Lowman, of Ashland.

Matthews said he plans to practice law when his term as attorney general ends this year. He said he is "not interested" in accepting a political appointment should he be offered one.

Fitch Receives Degree From Berea College

Berea, Ky.—Tom M. Fitch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Fitch, of Garrett, was one of 220 Berea College seniors to be awarded a degree at the end of the second semester. His degree was a bachelor of arts in elementary education. Fitch did his practice teaching at Berea city school, Knapp Hall, and Pine Mountain. A 1962 graduate of Annville Institute at Annville, Ky., he was a member of the Country Dancers, Young Democrats Club, and the National Education Association at Berea. To fulfill his labor assignment, Fitch has worked at the library, Dana Dorm, and Knapp Hall.

The 1967 commencement exercises celebrated the 112th anniversary of Berea College. The Berea College chapel choir sang "Praise to God" by the Norwegian composer, Knut Nystedt. This was the world premiere of the composition, which was dedicated to the Berea choir and its director, Rolf Hovey.

Dr. Irvin E. Lunger, president of Transylvania College, delivered the commencement address, entitled, "In the Service of Humanity."

Upon completion of requirements for the associate in nursing degree in a University of Kentucky community college, the graduate may write the state licensing examination to become a registered nurse.

HEALTH TIPS FROM AMA
 Fishing is good therapy—both physical and emotional—says the American Medical Association.

Of course, the millions of Americans who head for the lakes and streams across the nation each fishing season don't need a doctor to tell them that fishing is good sport. They probably have seen their doctor sitting in the next boat with a line in the water.

Fishing can be elaborate, complete with a trip to the seashore and renting deepsea boats and equipment. Or it can be the cane pole and worms affair on the banks of a neighborhood creek. Either way it gets us out in the fresh air and sunshine, gets our minds off the cares of the day.

Unless you are the vigorous type who wades through racing rapids or rows hard for miles, fishing is mild exercise. Fishing is good for the body and spirit. But it has some built-in hazards. Most of them can be avoided.

The most common fishing accident is catching a barbed hook in the flesh, usually a finger or hand, but sometimes a leg or other part of the body. Lures and hooks left unprotected on a dock or on the bottom of a boat cause many of these accidents.

The wise fisherman guards against accidents by shielding the hook. One simple way to do this is to stick a small cork over the barb. Lures should be stored in the tackle box until needed, and returned promptly to the box when removed from the leader. The band of your favorite fishing hat is, of course, a reasonably safe place to keep lures you intend to use later in the day.

If, despite precautions, a hook becomes imbedded in your hand or finger, don't try to pull it out. Your physician will snip off the shank and push it through, thus causing less further damage to torn flesh. The doctor will also, if necessary, administer antibiotics and tetanus toxoid. Hook wounds often lead to infection unless treated properly.

Fishing is fun. A fish hook through the hand can spoil the day. With care it can be avoided.

does your water system stop and start stop and start stop and start stop and start stop and start?

get a Southern States Sta-Rite pump with new "CONSTANT PRESSURE" tank

If you've ever been annoyed by a water pump that continues to stop and start without building up enough pressure to provide more than a trickle of water—you know the problems of a water-logged pressure tank.

STA-RITE's new "Constant Pressure" tank virtually eliminates water-logging, eliminates troublesome air volume controls, motor and switch wear. Reason? A special float separates tank air from water, and by unique "pre-charging" of tank with air... tank capacity between pump starts is doubled. A STA-RITE shallow well or convertible jet pump mounted on one of these new "Constant Pressure" tanks means more water between pump starts, more water per dollar of Jet Pump.

TIDBITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE
By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

HOW VAST THE UNATTAINED

Whittier, when he was a very old man, wrote a poem that has always appealed to me, in which he uses the words in the title: "How little I have gained, How vast the unattained." No honest man has ever felt that he had done all that he was capable of; no life is long enough to make a "Finis" written at its end seem other than pathetic. All of us have seen brief views of what we would have liked to know more about, little thumbnail sketches that we would have liked to expand into wall-size paintings.

In thinking about the mass of materials that I have collected from one smallish area, some 200 square miles, I have begun to realize that I have merely started investigating the many-sided folkways of my chosen area. I have more than 18,000 items, I know, covering dozens of phases of community life as it was lived in the general area of Mammoth Cave from early days until the coming of modern roads and electricity and cars and radio and TV and public high schools. But I can think of areas that I have slighted, not because I wanted to but because I just am only one old man and not a dozen. Here are some things that I have slighted or have touched upon only lightly: the music of the old fashioned home and church and singing-school; the yarns told at the loafers' joint; the localized legends that are so often staunchly believed in as actual history; the varying alignments of people in great moments of history, like the rise of our political parties, the Civil War, the Westward Movement; the entertainments in great detail. I do have a few items that fit into this vast scheme of the unattained, but only a few. Whittier says, in that same poem: "Others will sing the song, Others will sing the wrong."

"Others will sing the song, Others will sing the wrong." It is with a great deal of joy that I am seeing a great interest in folkways developing. When I first started studying birds, I was suspect, for, without fishing line or boat paddle or gun, I looked queer and maybe dangerous. By living in one place for over a half century and going over the same ground hundreds of times, I have gradually been accepted as not dangerous—simple, maybe and queer, but not likely to steal anything or leave some gates open so the livestock would get out or in. Similarly, I was looked at with some strange glances when I first began to talk and write about folkways. One of my best friends said that if he had had as primitive a background as I claimed to have had, he would keep it a secret. Most people used to think that folklore dealt only with the oddities, the queer ones, the ragtag and bobtail of humanity. And, all the while, even the most aloof and stylish and well-fixed person was living folklore and guiding his every move in a complicated society by its maxims. Master or slave, old or young, poor or rich, illiterate or educated, we all depend every day of our lives on traditional learning and traditional points of view. Even the most bookish of us all, who have lived our lives with books all around us and have taught, we thought, knowledge untouched by folklore, are walking encyclopedias of folkways. Even if we wanted to, we could not escape being folkish. And a good many people who formerly felt that folklore was only about sub-normal people have come to feel that "Mrs. O'Grady and the Colonel's lady are sisters under the skin." It is with great pleasure, then, that I can say to the younger generation who have shown interest in my studies: "I have merely opened the gate; go in and possess the land."

UK Extension Areas To Provide Service To Region's Needs

An expansion of University of Kentucky extension programs was approved Friday by the UK Board of Trustees Executive Committee.

Under the plan, the cooperative extension service—with its historical emphasis on agriculture—will be supplemented by specialists in many fields and professions. The new University-wide service would be keyed to the needs of a particular area, with the goal of improving, aiding, and encouraging development of human and natural resources.

The reorganization program is not unique. State universities in Missouri, Wisconsin, Michigan and Utah, among others, have reorganized their extension programs, aiming the total resources of those schools toward meeting the varied needs of each state.

Plans for the more comprehensive program of service, extension, and continuing education have been under development at UK for several months.

During that time, the Cooperative Extension Service of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics designed a plan which set up multi-county areas of the state to attain better marshaling, development, and utilization of resources.

Because of the success of the agricultural area program, the UK board went a step further and called upon other University colleges and units to provide additional extension service. Several different kinds of specialists will be working in concert in a given area, or even several areas.

Under eventual plans, for example, in a mining area of the state, a mining specialist could be made available to assist in solving mining problems. In an area of the state where industry was of primary importance, a community planner or an industrial engineer could be made available to guide a community-sponsored program of industrial improvement.

The new extension service plan was included in a six-point program to be followed in the reorganization.

The board first authorized the president to establish the University-wide extension service and continuing education programs, and authorized a central office to formulate policy, overall planning, and coordination. Next, the board established an extension office in the several UK colleges to "develop such programs for those colleges" which relate to their particular field of study.

The board then designated geographic service areas in line with present UK agricultural extension areas and also defined by the state government for governmental services.

The president was authorized to designate the community colleges as geographic centers, utilizing their facilities to expedite and implement the new program.

It was noted that the cooperative extension service agent will continue to serve his area in his agricultural specialty, but he will lend assistance and guidance to the new program.

Closed circuit television with video tape is employed in conjunction with the teaching of dentistry at the University of Kentucky College of Dentistry.

The purpose of the University-wide Honors Program at the University of Kentucky is to help attract more students of unusual ability to UK, and to help provide opportunity and encouragement for them to develop intellectually to their fullest capacity.

Volkswagen's unique construction keeps dampness out.

For years there have been rumors about floating Volkswagens. (The photographer claims this one stayed up for 42 minutes.) Why not?

The bottom of the VW isn't like ordinary car bottoms. A sheet of flat steel runs under the car, sealing the bottom fore and aft.

That's not done to make a bad boat out of it, just a better car. The sealed bottom protects a VW from water, dirt and salt. All the nasty things on the road that eventually eat up a car. The top part of a Volkswagen is also very seaworthy. It's practically airtight. So airtight that it's hard to close the door without rolling down the window a bit.

But there's still one thing to keep in mind if you own a Volkswagen. Even if it could definitely float, it couldn't float indefinitely. So drive around all the big puddles. Especially if they're big enough to have a name.

HEALTH TIPS FROM AMA

Had your first sunburn of the season yet?

If so, read on and find out how it happened. If not, read on, and possibly pick up some pointers on how to avoid or minimize sunburn.

Actually, a sunburn has no real health value. But there may be a psychological therapeutic result in the sense of relaxation and well being gained from basking in the warm sunshine, if it isn't overdone. Over-exposure to the hot sun can cause burns, as almost everyone has found out. Less known is the fact that continued over-exposure over a period of years can cause the skin to look weatherbeaten, wrinkled, leathery and coarse in texture.

The time of day of exposure is important. The burning ultraviolet rays are most intense from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. No sunburn is likely before 8 a.m. and after 4 p.m. High noon is the hottest time of day for sunburn. Rays reflected from sand or water can burn, even though you may not be directly exposed.

Individual sensitivities differ. You must to some extent learn for yourself how much sun you can tolerate. A general guide for most persons, assuming that previously untanned white skin is exposed about noon, is:

First day, expose skin to sun for 15 to 20 minutes. This means 15 to 20 minutes each on face and back.

Second day, increase exposure by one-third, to a little less than half an hour on each side.

Third day, again increase exposure by one-third—40 to 30 or 40 minutes. And so on.

By the fourth day, a new pigment should begin to darken your skin. In a week you should have enough skin thickening and pigmentation to give considerable protection against burning sunshine.

Most of the suntan lotions contain chemicals called sunscreens, which absorb various wave lengths of burning ultraviolet rays to various degrees. The better lotions allow you to stay in the sun longer with less risk of burning. They do not shut out all radiation, or else you would never tan at all. There's no really good way to tell which of the suntan lotions is most effective for you until you try them.
