

Road Firings Reach Into This County

Axe Falls On 100-125 Over State

Some GOP Legislators Say Chandlerites Get Too Many State Jobs

The flurry of Highway Department firings last week reached into this highway district, and some of the cutoffs reportedly affected technical and administrative employees.

One veteran of the right-of-way division numbered among those losing their jobs was Clyde Allen, of Pyramid, an appraiser, James Melvin, of Paintsville, administrative assistant to Highway Commissioner Hazelrigg, said 75 workers in the central office at Frankfort who are covered by the Merit System were ousted and that an additional 35 to 50 workers who are not covered were also fired.

The four main reasons given for the firings were: hauling voters to and from the polls, soliciting votes for the Democratic candidate, improper discharge of duties, and distributing Democratic campaign literature.

Harold Finley, highway information director, was quoted as estimating that in the first five months of the Nunn administration 5,700 workers have left the highway department, which represents a turnover far in excess of 50 percent. He said the latest firings was a part of a continuing program aimed at slicing the department's payroll by 15 percent from last year's high mark of more than 9,000 employees. Last month, the number of workers stood at 8,262. Of the 5,700 (See Story No. 4, Page 6)

This Town ... That World

The most far-sighted man I know of is the character who, on one of the hottest days recently, picked up a piece of poplar plank and, toting it away, explained it would come in handy for kindling a fire, next winter.

BIG FISH

Delbert Mullins, of Arkansas Creek, showed up at this office, last Friday morning, with a 20-pound mudcat that measured 33 1/2 inches. The fish was caught in the river, near Banner, on a trotline. Wonder what became of the boys who used to come by, grinning like Cheshire cats, with those big bass. Perhaps I should wonder what became of the bass.

THE LAST STRAW—YEAH!

The paper had no more than got around last week when Chief Justice Warren's decision to fold his robe and silently steal away was announced. I'm sure my "Contempt of Court" item in this column did the trick.

QUESTION

Middle Creek, a stream which once had a good supply of fish, has not a living thing in it now, not even a crawdad, all the way from David to where the stream runs into the Big Sandy at West Prestonsburg. What would the Water Pollution Commission suggest? (See Story No. 7, Page 6)

Troopers Cite 56 In Doty-Cr. Raid

Kentucky State Police troopers headed by Capt. Bill Lykins have cited 56 persons who were caught in a raid they staged on the cock-fighting operation on Doty Creek, near McDowell, the night of June 15.

Hylton Stone was charged with operating the place, four with gambling and the others, including two women, with unlawful assembly.

Four troopers in plain clothes had gained admittance to the building and were there when Capt. Lykins and six other troopers arrived.

Although he had had reports of drinking and bootlegging at the place, Lykins said nobody

Natural Causes Seen In Death of Woman; Body Found by Son

Mrs. Hazel Wright Simmons, 61, was found dead Monday night at her home in Seng Factory Hollow, near here, by her son, Herman Edward Simmons. Her body was discovered at 8 a.m., perhaps four hours after death. County Coroner James J. Carter held that no foul play was involved, giving the cause of death as a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mrs. Simmons was born at Cow Creek, a daughter of the late Ell and Angie Campbell Wright. She was the widow of Joe Simmons.

PRECINCT 43 IS ARKANSAS

Stumbo Order Creates One Precinct, Changes Boundaries of Others

Creation of one new voting precinct to bring the county's total to 43 and changes in the boundaries of two existing precincts were made Monday by order of County Judge Henry Stumbo.

The new precinct, Arkansas No. 43, was created, the order points out, because of the undue hardship imposed on voters there by the fact that they were required to vote at New Martin precinct. It was ordered that the voting-place for the precinct shall be at or near the center of the precinct which will extend from KY 80 at the mouth of Arkansas Creek and include residents of the creek and all its tributaries.

The precinct changes removed from Halbert precinct and transferred to New Martin voters on Left Beaver Creek, including the Boyd Dingus property and running to the top of the ridge between Left and Right Beaver Creeks and including voters on the Wes Flannery Branch and all in Dinwood and the Martin housing project.

Changes in the voter registration books will be made by County Clerk C. "Ollie" Robinson in time for those affected by the order to vote at the November election in the precincts to which the order moves them.

Floyd County Teachers In New Science Project

Forty-one elementary teachers and principals from Floyd county are taking part in the second eight-week institute in a two-year special project in Pre-College Science Education at Morehead State University.

The project, the first of its kind ever conducted in the United States, involves teacher preparation in a brand-new, highly advanced method of teaching science to the elementary child.

Most of the Floyd county group are attending the institute for the first time to learn not only to teach the new process in the classroom but also to do in-service training in the new technique in Eastern Kentucky counties.

Last summer, a group of 43 Eastern Kentucky principals, science teachers and consultants, all but five of whom were from Floyd county, attended the initial institute at Morehead and implemented the program in their schools upon their return home.

As a result, according to Frank P. Stewart, science con-

Nunn-Requested Study Of AV's Is Begun Here

A nine-member team representing the Office of Economic Opportunity began here Tuesday the study of Appalachian Volunteers' work that Governor Lottie B. Nunn requested last April.

The study began here, because the AV's area office is located in Prestonsburg. The OEO study, joined in by representatives from Washington and Frankfort, is designed to be objective, it was said. It will cover AV work in Floyd, Pike, Perry, Wolfe, Breathitt, Letcher, Madison, Rockcastle, Whitley, Bell and Harlan counties.

THE FANTASTICKS, which opens tonight at the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre, to run June 27-29 and July 4-6, is a rare sort of musical. It holds the distinction of having had the longest run in New York musical theatre history. Besides, it is an original musical written especially for the off-Broadway stage.

The play concerns two youngsters who have been separated by a wall between their two houses. Their fathers have built the wall and pretended to feud to make sure their children fall in love. As the fathers explain in song, just say, "No," and children will do the opposite. In order to conclude the plot, the fathers hire a dashing bandit named El Gallo to stage an elaborate abduction. The lovers meet in the forest and in a frenzied ballet the boy rescues the girl from pirates, Indians, swordsmen, and other would-be abductors.

The musical numbers of THE FANTASTICKS range from the comic song-and-dance routines of the fathers, "Never Say No," and "Plant a Radish" to the romantic "They Were You" and "Soon It's Gonna Rain." El Gallo's song, "Round and Round," takes the audience on a world-wide tour of parties and exotic and frightening adventures.

Property Values Set At $99 Million-Plus

The final recapitulation of Floyd county's tax assessment, scheduled to reach the State Revenue Department at Frankfort Wednesday, shows a total evaluation of $99,800,485 as compared with $96,364,224 for the preceding year.

The final figures, subject to Revenue Department directive, were reached after the board of supervisors completed its work. The board, composed of Homer Salisbury, Jack Branham and James Duff, heard only one appeal during its session. It made $48,827 in increases and voted $42,073 decreases in assessment.

Biggest assessment gains were made on tangible personal property. The 1968 total in that category stands at $25,042,549.

Real Estate

Rural non-farm land and improvements, $3,217,770 ($5,784,450); lots and improvements, $22,704,501 ($22,292,700); farm land and improvements, $19,159,768; ($18,347,884); commercial and industrial, $9,584,259 ($11,247,225); oil rights, $121,433 ($93,126); other mineral and timber rights, $5,509,425 ($5,807,834) — total, $60,297,156 ($63,573,219).

Tangible Personal Property

Motor vehicles, $16,345,529 ($9,450,862); aircraft, $72,400 ($73,650); watercraft, $175,426 ($62,800); merchants' inventories and manufacturers' finished goods, $4,872,020 ($4,201,126); professional and trade tools and business furniture, $1,370,450 ($1,209,881); drilling, mining and construction equipment, $5,462,225 (See Story No. 6, Page 6)

Proval and encouragement to the diabolical devastation and destruction of a large part of the surface of this fair state without compensation to the owners," he said.

Judge Earl Osborne dissented for another reason. He said the high court should not even bother to hear the appeal of Leroy Martin, of Knott county, against Kentucky Oak Mining Co., "because the parties have failed to show that there exists between them an actual controversy."

Osborne said Martin has not shown that the company tried or plans to excavate any part of the 10-acre tract in question. Hill said strip mining never was heard or dreamed of when the deed in the case was drawn up in 1905.

But, he added, if the rule is so distorted as to authorize striping methods, the mineral owner should be answerable to the surface owner for damages to the land.

The majority ruled the opposite. It affirmed Knott circuit court's decision that the broad form deed takes a precedence over the landowner's rights. It reversed the lower court's decision that damages must be paid for destruction of the surface.

Lawyers for the landowners concede that limiting the impact of the deeds will not stop strip or auger mining.

FEST DRAWS BIG CROWDS

'Old Christmas' Opens Third Annual Festival At Park Amphitheatre

The third annual Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival at Jenny Wiley State Park's amphitheatre last week-end attracted the largest crowds of its brief history and engaged the talents of around 300 participants.

Introduction of the traditional Old Christmas party as it has been observed on Jan. 6 in this part of the United States marked the initial performance Friday evening and the event found itself on television with cameramen from WSZA-TV present. Folk songs and dances with an Old World background were presented by students of the elementary and high schools here, and Appalachian folk tunes were played on the fiddle, banjo, guitar and French harp.

The dulcimer joined other well-known musical instruments of the region in the Saturday evening performance which featured Appalachian ballads, folk-songs to autoharp accompaniment, contemporary "folk music with a new beat," blue, railroad songs and minstrel tunes. The Hindman Settlement School and Decoy Community Dancers for the third year appeared in traditional dances.

Spurlock Tells Sale Of Interest in Firm

Burl Spurlock, of Prestonsburg, said this week that he sold his interest in the Mountain Investment Co., which owns the town of Wheelwright, last April 27 to John Allen, Sr., of Prestonsburg, and J. MARTIN JOB FUNDS OK'd

Red River Reservoir Funding Recommended By House Committee

The Red River Dam, which is bitterly opposed by many, has been approved by the House Appropriations Committee which asked $760,000 for its construction.

At the same time, the same committee approved only $90,000 to continue planning work on improvement of the Beaver Creek channel at Martin—a project without known opposition.

Both projects are included in the new appropriations bill which, if passed by Congress, will earmark funds in the 1968-'69 budget to be spent on waterways and reservoirs.

Congressman Carl D. Perkins said that, in spite of pressure to reduce expenditures, the sum allocated the Martin project is only $5,000 below the figure asked by the President in his budget.

Conservationists, opposed to the Red River site on grounds the reservoir behind the dam will spoil much of the Red River gorge area's scenic beauty, now must look to the Senate for any contrary action. The full House is expected to approve the committee's action.

All projects included in the bill also were trimmed five percent, cutting to $4.5 billion the amount proposed for public works projects. The figure is $408 million less than the President's budget request and $190 million less than was appropriated last year.

No "new starts" were included in the bill. This means the measure omits cash for the long-debated Falmouth Dam on the Licking River and the Smithland Dam on the Ohio River in Western Kentucky.

Planning funds for a proposed floodwall extension in Jefferson county may be included in a separate omnibus public works bill later this year.

No Increase Talk Heard, Says Allen

Floyd Assessment Up From '67; 10 Counties Get Increase Notices

The Kentucky Revenue Department has ordered "blanket" assessment increases for at least 10 counties, as many as 15 more may be asked to raise their assessments, and Floyd county is among those which will not be free of anxiety about an increase till the department makes a review of its assessment figures.

Tax Commissioner Harry Gordon Allen said Tuesday he has heard no talk of an increase and pointed out that the assessment total for this year is more than $8 million above that of last year.

A 20 percent raise on all classes of property in Letcher ordered by the Revenue Department, which also ordered a 25 percent increase on farmlands in Simpson county. Other counties where raises have been directed are Shelby, Metcalfe, Gallatin, Carroll, Spencer, Rockcastle and Powell. Hearings were being held in Frankfort this week.

If Floyd county encounters trouble, it will be on its farmlands assessment, which is down more than $3 million from the 1967 assessment.

Ed Ballard, director of the Property Tax Division, said most of the difficulty arises in farm property valuations. A farm is much more difficult to assess than houses, Ballard said, and assessors tend to err on the conservative side.

Each year, an assessor is supposed to submit to the Revenue Department his tentative assessment of all county property for the current year. This tentative "recap" is subject to appeals at the local level.

Ultimately, the assessor comes up with his final assessment. It is at this point the Revenue Department decides whether to accept the figures or throw them back for revision.

Ballard said his agency's equalization orders are based on annual assessment studies.

COURT SPLIT IS REPORTED

On Supervisor Issue; Judge Stumbo Replies To Hazelrigg Letter

The Floyd county road-aid program was discussed at a meeting of the fiscal court here Wednesday, but three of the four magistrates were not in accord with County Judge Henry Stumbo in his proposal to retain Blaine Hopkins as county road supervisor.

No official record of the inconclusive meeting was entered on the court's order book. The meeting stemmed from the recent letter received by Judge Stumbo from Highway Commissioner Hazelrigg who pointed out that a supervisor for the road-aid program would be required to pass an examination and be approved by him before the 1968-'69 contract is executed.

Judge Stumbo this week replied to the commissioner's letter, expressing his pleasure upon learning that the Floyd road-aid program appears to be satisfactory and assuring him that "Floyd county is very hopeful to continue to operate the county road program with the cooperation of the Department of Highways so that we may continue to make steady progress in building and maintaining vital rural roads."

But, wrote Judge Stumbo: "I am afraid you have been ill-advised about Floyd county not having an approved county road supervisor. Mr. Blaine Hopkins, our present supervisor was given the necessary examination prescribed by law and was issued a certificate as a qualified county road supervisor on May 8, 1963, and continues in that capacity today."

Judge Stumbo expressed the hope that this "clears up the county road-aid contract and the misunderstanding and that the rental equipment contract can be executed promptly."

'Broad Form' Deed Again Held Valid

The Kentucky Court of Appeals last Friday handed down a 4-3 decision in a Knott county landowner's case which held that the "Broad Form" deed permits coal companies to strip-mine for coal without paying the landowner damages.

The so-called "Broad Form" deed transferred mineral rights of hundreds of Eastern Kentuckians in the early 1900's and also gave the new owners of coal the right to use the surface for any purpose he might deem necessary to remove the coal. Their merits, injustices and consequences have been bitterly debated over the years.

The opinion of Appellate Judge Edward P. Hill was concurred in by Judge Milliken. (Excerpts from Judge Hill's opinion appear elsewhere in this edition of The Times.)

The ruling does not shake any legal foundations. Basically it reinforces other Kentucky court opinions in past decades.

And Appellate Commissioner Robert Cullen, who wrote the majority opinion, said "conservation is not in issue" although save-the-land advocates became embroiled in the case.

But Judge Hill, one of the dissenters, thought differently. "I am shocked and appalled that the court of last resort in the beautiful state of Kentucky would ignore the logic and reasoning of the great majority of other states and lend its ap-

THE 'BROAD FORM' DEED HOLDS ITS GRIP

It serves little purpose now to criticize the majority opinion of the Court of Appeals, holding the all-inclusive "Broad Form" deed to be legally binding. Blindness to human rights is nothing new in Kentucky.

One source of small consolation and much pride to Eastern Kentuckians, those hardest hit by the opinion, is the fact that one of their own, Judge Edward P. Hill, of Prestonsburg, wrote a strong dissenting opinion. Two points in that opinion, in which Judge Hill was supported by Judge Milliken, cite previous rulings of the high court which, to us, emphasize the inconsistencies of judicial opinions.

In one Judge Hill points out:
"By every rule of contract construction, including construction of deeds, the intention of the parties is the ultimate quest of the interpreter."

Then he quotes from an Appellate Court opinion of the past:
"... the intention of the parties governs."

Nobody can honestly contend that the landowners of this section of Kentucky had heard of, or even imagined, strip-mining as a means of recovering coal from the earth when they signed those all-inclusive deeds to their mineral rights.

Again, Judge Hill pointed out that in a suit involving an oil-producing company's desire to water-flood a well or wells on land under lease, the Court of Appeals had held that it was the intention of the parties that oil should be produced by drilling in the customary manner that prevailed when the lease was executed.

It is true that the oil company did not hold a deed to everything under and upon the earth of mineral nature, as the "Broad Form" deed provides, but the same principle is involved.

But whatever your reaction or ours to the majority opinion, and regardless of high court opinion to the contrary in West Virginia and Pennsylvania, the Kentucky Court of Appeals has held that coal companies are not liable to damages done to the surface of the land which it does not own. The landowner may, indeed, have "hit the end of the line."

Whatever is done on behalf of the public now will be in the hands of coal operators themselves, as a voluntary matter, or through enforcement of those laws which gave authority to the Strip-Mine Commission and the Water Pollution Commission. It is more important now than ever before that these two state agencies become more than paper puppets.

Our Yesterdays

(Items taken from files of The Floyd County Times of 30 and 20 years ago.)

Thirty Years Ago (June 16, 1938)

A verdict of murder and suicide was written by a coroner's jury in a Cow Creek home at midnight Monday where Mrs. Stella Blevins, 47, was shot to death by her husband, "Sonny" Blevins, 50, who then fired a bullet into his own brain. Two Floyd county men were jailed at Inez Saturday and Mark Maynard, a 65-year-old Martin county farmer, was near death as a result of one of the two accused men firing his pistol from a speeding automobile "just for fun". Meeting here last Thursday, the Floyd fiscal court ordered the rental of road construction machinery, with options to buy, for use on the proposed Johns Creek road. Governor A. B. Chandler is scheduled for a speech, June 18, before an expected 5,000 persons as one of the highlights of the American Legion's 10th district convention here Saturday and Sunday. John Warwick, salesman for the Howard Motor Company, local Ford dealer, won first prize for June Ford sales in the Cincinnati area. Superstitions, firmly believed by many Floyd county farmers, are among the greatest hindrances to progressive agriculture found in seven years of work in this section, County Agent S. L. Isbell said this week. Born: To Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Stephens, Lyda Morgan, at a Paintsville hospital. Married: Mrs. Maxine Fraley Walters to Mr. Belford Reitz, both of Drift, at Paintsville, Saturday. Twenty Years Ago (June 17, 1948)

The store of Raymond Turner at Drift was looted, early last Friday morning, of merchandise the value of which may run as high as $5,000. The Dewey reservoir project was allotted $2,071,000 in the $22,621,000 total appropriation for Kentucky flood control and navigation work given final Congressional approval Monday. Top priority among Floyd roads has been given the Prestonsburg-Salysville highway and the route from a point near David via Brush Creek to Northern on Route 80. The machinery of trial courts in judicial districts over this section ground to a full stop Wednesday as uncertainty prevailed over the legality of old and new statutes as to boundary lines and court terms. Negotiations toward a new coal contract broke down Tuesday with the walk-out of coal mine operators who complained that the parley was accomplishing nothing. Milray Damron, 24-year-old Harold war veteran, died last Saturday, 30 minutes after he was struck by an automobile when the bicycle he was riding suddenly swerved onto the highway. The Black Cats of Prestonsburg high school last Thursday night won at Parkway Field, Louisville, the high school baseball championship of Kentucky. Born: To Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Webb, a son, Richard Spurr Webb, IV, June 12 at the Prestonsburg General hospital. Married: Requa Kincer, of Floyd county, to Mr. Charles C. I Say What I Think

By S. C. VAN CURON

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Louie B. Nunn, like others ahead of him, is finding jobs and patronage his biggest political headache.

The Merit System, established by the Legislature under Gov. Bert T. Combs, is now in a state of suspended inaction because of a suit in Franklin circuit Court over Nunn's effort to dismiss Chairman Dr. Frank M. Gaines and replace him with former Frankfort Mayor Robert Young.

Franklin Circuit Judge Henry Meigs has ruled that the Personnel Board cannot hold any hearings until the suit is settled. Attorneys are not to submit final briefs in the case until July.

Meanwhile about 350 dismissed workers have appeals before the Merit Board. Personnel records at the Capitol show more than 2500 persons have been dismissed by the Nunn administration and about 750 of these were covered by the Merit System.

The Highway Department, the largest division in state government, is where the great majority of dismissals have occurred. This is always the case because this is where more jobs are to be found, and it reaches into every county in the state.

However, an Irvine attorney may have found the solution to solving the problem of dismissed employees with appeals before the Merit System. He has given Highway Commissioner W. B. Hazelrigg notice that he will take his client's case to Franklin circuit court unless he is reinstated to his position. The employee was fired for "political activity."

This would seem to pose a dilemma for Commissioner Hazelrigg. If he reinstates the employee, with back pay, others are sure to pursue the same route. If he doesn't, the case will go to court, and he is found in about the same position.

If Attorney Eugene Watson wins his case, this will be just the first of a long string that are sure to be filed. This may be the first real test of the Merit System.

In one case noised about Frankfort, a woman employee with 27 years of service was fired for "hauling voters to the polls." She doesn't own a car and doesn't have a driver's license.

Lloyd Murphy, Nunn's patronage man here, has almost a constant stream of applicants parading through his office, and of course the political heat is upon him to satisfy this demand as much as possible. The pressure on him comes from people who were active in helping to elect Nunn to office.

Gov. Combs struggled with this problem almost a year and a half before politicians learned that there are just a certain number of jobs available in state government. Shocking to many applicants is the fact that they must work, and that state pay isn't what they have erroneously believed.

Minimum state pay is $219 a month, and there are hundreds of jobs in this category. It does not take an applicant long to learn that he can't move to Frankfort and live on that kind of money.

While the state is dismissing employees from the Breathitt regime, offices are seeking secretaries, filing clerks and other lower echelon pay employees.

Many skilled and professional employees have left state government, and these are not so easy to replace. Most understand that these jobs (not under the Merit System) are temporary, until Nunn's term ends, and they do not want to quit jobs they are now secure in for a temporary one.

The threatened suit by Attorney Watson could be a landmark case in establishing the position of the Merit System.

'Whatever Things'

By DONALD E. WILDMON

A story in the newspaper the other day caught my eye. It was the story of a young man, in his thirties, who committed suicide. It stood out on the page over all the other stories because it was the third suicide story that I had seen in the last few days. I guess it should be common-place by now and not too shocking. But it isn't common-place and it is shocking. A person finds nothing to make his life worth living and comes to the point where he would rather be dead than alive. It is a sad story, but it is a true one.

Our world that we live in today fosters suicide. Suicide is the third major killer, below cancer and heart trouble, for people in their fruitful years between 30 and 50. And if the trend doesn't change it will eventually become the number one killer. You see, our world fosters suicide because our world lies to people. We make the impression that fame and fortune are the things that should be sought at all cost. We picture money as having the answer to all our problems. We keep saying the thing that is wrong with most people is that they don't make enough money. They have good enough jobs, or live in decent enough houses. This may or may not shock you, but the majority of people who commit suicide have plenty of those things.

What our world has forgotten, and what our world needs to remember, is that we have got to give people something to live for. And that something that we have to give has got to be higher, and bigger, and better than man himself can ever be. The Creator alone fits that description. Paul knew that this was the secret key to a meaningful life when he wrote to the Followers at Rome: "For those who live according to the flesh set their minds on the things of the flesh, but those who live according to the Spirit set their minds on the things of the Spirit. To set the mind on the flesh is death, but to set the mind on the Spirit is life and peace."

We make a great show with our material wealth, we Americans. We are proud of our industry. We are proud of our success. We show ourselves and our world what living the "good" life is like. But we very seldom show ourselves and never show the rest of the world the result of our "good" life. Divorce is on the increase. Every area of crime is on the increase. Mental institutions are bulging at their seams. The moral fiber of politics is breaking down. Sexual morality is a thing of the past with many. The name of the Creator is used on the public screens in vain and is seldom used in our schools in reverence.

This is what we have made for ourselves, Americans. This is what the new materialism has got for us. But those of us who follow the Galilean have not given up. He will not let us. We are trying to say—desperately—to a world that does not seemingly want to hear, that we must give ourselves to Someone greater than ourselves in order to find ourselves.

Until we do that we will read of more and more senseless suicides.—FIVE STAR FEATURES

Hill on the 'Broad Form' Deed

Excerpts from the dissenting opinion of Judge Edward P. Hill, formerly of Prestonsburg, from the majority opinion of the Kentucky Court of Appeals on strip-mining rights under the "Broad Form" deed follow:

The question here is whether the grantee may use mining methods (stripping) not known or contemplated by the parties at the time the deed was made to such an extent as to destroy the surface rights of the grantor.

By every rule of contract construction, including construction of deeds, the intention of the parties is the ultimate quest of the interpreter. 17A C.J.S., Contract, §295. The authorities supporting this proposition are so legion I consider it unnecessary to cite further authority except to say that this jurisdiction has followed the universal rule announced in Parrish v. Newbury, Ky., 279 S.W. 2d 229, 233, where in this court said: "Notwithstanding these general rules, always, as a fundamental and supreme rule of construction of contracts, the intention of the parties governs."

What was the intention of the parties in 1905? This question provokes another question. What were the usual, known, and accepted mining methods at that time? Certainly strip mining was then unknown and unaccepted. I find a note in Kentucky Law Journal, volume 50, page 525, note 5, which states: "Strip mining was of no importance until 1914 but 'knob' or 'channel' coal was mined near Cumberland Lake, Ky., about 1827. These early operations used picks, shovels, and slip-scrapers drawn by mules to remove the thin overburden." (Emphasis added.)

Strip mining was neither heard of nor dreamed of in 1905 in Knott county, the locality of the coal land in question. There was no railroad in Knott county until long thereafter. Neither was there a navigable stream in that county. About the only coal mined in those days was from the outcroppings in creek beds, where a small quantity was obtained by the use of a new-found tool—the coal pick.

I contend first that inasmuch as the parties to the "broad form" deeds never contemplated the use of the then unknown method of strip mining and never dreamed of the cataclysmic destruction of the surface, the grantee and his successor in title have no right to remove the coal by stripping methods. Secondly, I contend that rules of construction are so modified and distorted as to authorize the grantee to use stripping methods, he should be answerable in damages to the surface owners for just compensation.

I shall first show that the majority opinion is erroneous and without precedent, either at home or abroad.

I concede that prior to the decision in Buchanan v. Watson, Ky., 290 S.W.2d 40 (1956), there was a long line of cases by this court holding that the grantees under similar "broad form" deeds had a right to use the surface for any purpose "deemed necessary or convenient" by the grantee. However, all those cases prior to Buchanan involved deep-mining methods, which was the method of mining contemplated by the parties in 1905. But Buchanan really got into left field when it ignored and disregarded all the rights of the surface owner. This court on many occasions recognized that the surface owner had at least some semblance of right when it held that the owner of the coal must leave pillars of coal to support the surface. 58 C.J.S., Mines and Minerals, §159 c; Jenkins v. Depoyser, 229 Ky. 500 186 S.W.2d 14; Wells v. North East Coal Company, 274 Ky. 268; 118 S.W.2d 555; H. B. Jones Coal Company v. Mays, 225 Ky. 355, 8 S.W.2d 626; and North-East Coal Company v. Hayes, 244 Ky. 369, 51 S.W.2d 960.

Not only is the majority opinion contrary to the laws of sister coal states, such as West Virginia and Pennsylvania, as I shall point out later, but the majority opinion is inconsistent with other opinions of this court in similar situations. This court decided in Wiser Oil Company v. Conley, Ky., 346 S.W.2d 718 (1960), that the owner of oil and gas rights had no right to use the water-flooding method of recovering oil without the consent of the owner of the surface. This court said in Wiser at page 721:

"Even though appellants assert that the water-flooding process was known prior to March 10, 1917, the date of execution of the lease, and was employed to some extent in other states before that time, we conclude it was the intention of the parties that oil should be produced by drilling in the customary manner that prevailed when the lease was executed. Any exemption from liability would therefore be limited to the damages which might be caused by this contemplated means of bringing oil to the top." (Emphasis added.)

Wiser and Buchanan are inconsistent as sin and salvation. I am shocked and appalled that the court of last resort in the beautiful state of Kentucky would ignore the logic and reasoning of the great majority of other states and lend it approval and encouragement to the diabolical devastation and destruction of a large part of the surface of this fair state without compensation to the owners thereof.

I cannot bring myself to the conclusion that it was the intention of the parties at the time the minerals were reserved to permit the owner of the minerals to completely destroy the surface of the farm which is now owned by the defendants.

I confess I think strip mining without proper reclamation procedures is a catastrophe. I consider it against public policy and detrimental to the general welfare of the state, and any contract pertaining thereto is illegal as being against public policy. Of course, where the land is not steep and proper reclamation practices are followed, strip mining may be justified.

I recognize that the regulation of strip mining is not for the courts but for the Legislature. However, I would go further and say as a matter of law that any deed, whether it be "broad form" or otherwise, that attempts to grant strip mining (when the grade is approximately 20 percent or more) is illegal and unenforceable as against public policy and detrimental to the present and succeeding generations.

I freely recognize and respect the rule of stare decisis, and I oppose changing rules of law without compelling reasons, but it is wrong and unjust to take the position that once judicial error has gained the respectability of age it becomes somehow invulnerable to correction by the court which made it.

Although the majority opinion relies upon Buchanan and zealously guards its borders on all sides from every change, modification, or encroachment, I am able to see a ray of hope in Buchanan which is overlooked, ignored, and disregarded by the majority opinion. This ray of hope is contained in the following quotation from Buchanan, supra, at page 43:

"The owner of the mineral has the paramount right to the use of the surface in the prosecution of its business for any purpose of necessity or convenience, unless this power is exercised oppressively, arbitrarily, wantonly, or maliciously, in which event the surface owner may recover for damages so occasioned."

Webster's Third New International Dictionary defines "oppressive" thus: "unreasonably burdensome; unjustly severe, rigorous, or harsh."

I contend that any major destruction of the surface is "unreasonably burdensome; unjustly severe" and "harsh." But no, the opinion of the majority of this court, as now constituted, would not afford the appellants herein the benefit of the plain and simple meaning of its own precedent. In the interest of consistency, the majority opinion should reform the rule in Buchanan so as to delete the word "oppressive" therefrom and should overrule its opinion in Wiser Oil, then the slate would be clean insofar as the legal status of a few greedy exploiters of the land is concerned.

I would point out that in Buchanan, supra, this court shed great crocodile tears for the coal industry when the opinion said: "To disturb this rule now would create great confusion and much hardship in a segment of an industry that can ill-afford such a blow." Obviously the court was grieving for the coal industry. Instead of helping the coal industry, the rule in Buchanan really hurt it by helping a few strip and auger operators. It was said in Kentucky Law Journal, volume 50, number 4, page 529 that: "Contrary to the implication of the court's conclusion, Buchanan helped the holding companies more than the industry."

With this further compliment, I leave Buchanan to the strip and auger operators. They (the operators) have shown in actual practice such little regard for "the justice and fairness of Buchanan that they have not had the heart to take advantage of their legal windfall safeguarded and guaranteed by the rule in Buchanan and have in many cases been compensating the surface owner for "oppressive" damages done the surface owner.

I would affirm the judgment of the trial court and go further and hold that the grantee has no legal right to strip or auger mine coal under the deed in question.

TIDITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

NEVER BEFORE

Age has many advantages, but it gives the oldest man a chance to relive his earlier experiences. "Never before," often says a youngster about some sort of happening that the oldest has experienced almost periodically in his long life. When some outbreak of human cussedness sickens us all, I just have to be honest with history and my own memories and recall how something very similar happened back in the Good Old Days, the hallowed memories that most oldsters somehow cover over the protective gilding. Is it a question of so-called dirty politics? How about the many instances that we oldsters can call up, instances that did not get so wide a publicity as do happenings today, for there were no television, radio, telephone, and only some pretty shabby little weekly newspapers to tell the world what was going on? After all these years, I could set down two dozen cases of pretty dirty deals, many of them from the charmed precincts of Fidelity itself. How about immorality. Were there no snakes in the Edens that you old-timers knew? There were a good many serpents down Fidelity way. Since Father was a doctor, the sick, the diseased, sorts came to our house; I saw the injured, the misfits of all them and, though Father did not discuss their troubles, the whole neighborhood usually knew. Illegitimacy, venereal diseases, suspected infanticide, concubinage, adultery, all these ills appeared in some form or other, several of them many times before I left Fidelity at Christmas, 1906. Many of the people who are loudest in their condemnation of the period in which we are living were not even born then, but, to hear them tell of their own glorious childhood, you might suspect that their early lives were spent on some planet that the rest of us never lived on or visited. How about nutty dress and hairdos and erratic behavior? I saw them all, probably in as great a profusion in proportion to the population that I knew as and appearance are now prevalent. You see, I knew only about a thousand people in my whole early life; but there seems to me no one type of oddity that I did not meet in my first eighteen years.

In saying this I am in no way playing the part of Pollyanna. I am fully aware that the human animal can often be a pretty disgusting creature, that, assuming that he is made in a divine image, he sometimes cracks that image almost irreparably. As a child I agonized over the very things that oldsters seem always to take to heart. Not knowing what else to do, I sometimes threw a spell of hysterics, but I managed to make it appear that I was suffering from some tummy ache or growing pains and never actually told anyone that I was worrying over the human race. When I have said this to some younger friends, they pretended that they never—as children—felt that humanity could sometimes be pretty shabby and ornery; they had a glorious childhood, with all the geese as swans and every lass a queen.

Recently a voluminist, who confessed to having been a radical, so-called, in his own youth, reminded the readers of his column that every outbreak of cussedness and ornerness of today had its outbreak, too, in his early life. There were radicals who made complete fools of themselves and then settled down to being pretty good citizens; others did not merely have their fling and then grow up; they continued to be the wild-eyed, unrestrained youths they had been when they were actually young.

When high-brow people have sometimes hinted that folklore is merely a series of customs and beliefs and words of ignorance, I at once recall how folksish has been every Presidential race since I could remember, and my memories go back to the famous Free Silver days of 1896. For years I, too, felt that people were acting far below the level of the fine and privileged ones we think we are; of course, I still feel that. But when I got to reading, after I was grown up, about the campaigns of the almost-deified Founding Fathers, I found that those older fellows could have held their own in any age of reviling; the glorious accomplishment of name-calling seems almost in decline now as compared with the times of Thomas Jefferson, who was pictured as a devil incarnate by his foes.

Pike County Man Heads New Federal Program

The Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program — a federally financed move to coordinate efforts of the Labor Department, the Manpower Program and the Community Action Program to meet the needs of individuals in economically distressed areas—will get into action by mid-July, it was said here this week.

Virgil Osborne, of Pike county, has been named director of the program, and he announced this week that the positions of assistant director, job developer, area coordinator, reporting officer and supportive services coordinator are yet to be filled.

Applicants should have a college degree or equivalent experience in manpower or related programs. Applications, which may be procured at the Big Sandy Community Action office at the courthouse in Paintsville, will be accepted through June 28.

The program will cover Floyd and 16 other Eastern Kentucky counties, and for this reason applicants must be willing to relocate if necessary.

The Concentrated Employment Program, which is designed to tie in cooperating federal agencies with the business community, will afford basic education and vocational training for participants and carry them on through to gainful employment. Health problems of those enrolled in the program also will be met.

The directorship pays a $13,500-a-year salary. Mr. Osborne is a former basketball coach at Jenkins high school and more recently served as assistant director of the Pike County Community Action Program.

STUDY BY CLIMATOLOGIST HINTS AT AREA WEATHER

What will the weather be in Eastern Kentucky during coming months? This study of one county of the area may hint at the answer to that question.

Lee countians can expect 12 inches of rain during July, August and September—if Mother Nature follows her normal summer pattern.

Allen B. Elam, Jr., state climatologist at the University of Kentucky, discussed the climate of the Lee county area in his monthly climatological report this week, noting that the mean average of rainfall in the Heidelberg and Beattyville area is 5.55 inches in July, 3.69 inches in August, and 2.84 inches in September, based on yearly records from 1938 to 1967.

The greatest amount of rain recorded for one day was 4.57 inches on a day in June, 1960, he writes. During February, 1960, Lee county residents witnessed a 9.0 inch snowfall during one day—the greatest daily snowfall in the 30-year period.

The summer months in Lee county should average 72.7 degrees, with a daily maximum of 87.6 in July, 86.7 in August, and 81.5 in September. Elam reports that record highs for the three-month period are 103 degrees, recorded in July, 1952; 99 degrees was recorded in August, 1953, and 101 degrees in September of the same year.

Elam describes the climate of the area—located in the Eastern Mountain and Coal Field Region of Kentucky—as “temperate, with moderately cold winters and warm humid summers.”

He adds that “precipitation is fairly well distributed throughout the year, with no wet season and no dry season. The month of October has the least rainfall.”

Next winter, if nature continues her usual pattern, Lee countians can expect 19.2 inches of snow, including 6.3 inches in January, 5.0 inches in February and 3.3 inches in March.

Elam reports that personnel employed by the U. S. Corps of Engineers at Lock 14, Heidelberg, have kept precipitation records since April, 1915 and temperature records since July, 1933. Records of both temperature and precipitation were kept at Beattyville, about five miles from Heidelberg, from October, 1902, to July, 1933.

The probability of the first frost in the Lee county area is 10 percent that it will fall on or before Oct. 3; 25 percent on Oct. 10; 50 percent on Oct. 18; 75 percent on Oct. 26, and 90 percent on or before November 2.

EDA FUNDS TO ASSIST CONTINUED INDUSTRIAL STUDY IN APPALACHIA

Approval of $30,000 to help continue an industrial development program for a four-state area of Appalachia was announced this week by the Economic Development Administration, U. S. Department of Commerce.

The federal assistance was requested by the Council of Southern Mountains, Inc., Berea, Kentucky.

The program, which seeks to identify industry suitable for the area and to select potential plant locations, was initiated by the Council last July. The funds approved will enable the program to continue until January 1, 1969.

The EDA funds will pay the total cost of the project. In addition to matching potential industries with plant sites, the project includes management and financial counseling for enterprises considering locating in the area.

The applicant says the program may establish guidelines which would assist industrial development in other areas of Appalachia.

I Say What I Think

By S. C. VAN CURON

If Kentuckians were inclined to hope that political campaigning has been reaching toward a higher level in the state, their hope was dashed in the Court of Appeals race in the Frankfort district.

This is a post-election assessment.

In an advertisement for one candidate this statement was used:

"By voting for _____ your vote will speak loud and clear that you want no more increases in taxes on your home, your farm, or any of your real property, by orders of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky."

How is the voter expected to understand this flat statement? It takes more of the advertisement to drive the thought home a little deeper: "_____ principal opponent, the incumbent cast his vote requiring county and city tax commissioners and property owners to increase the tax assessments on their homes, their farms, and other real property three times the amount such property has been assessed. The voters had no voice and no choice."

The ad went on to explain that it took a special session of the legislature to pass the "rollback" tax rate to save the taxpayers.

This is the second Court of Appeals race in which this type of thought has been used. But nowhere in the explanation did the advertisement say that the Kentucky Constitution very flatly says that property shall be assessed at 100 percent of fair cash value.

Is the advertisement trying to say that this particular candidate will not base his decisions as a member of the Court of Appeals upon the Constitution of this state, but base his decisions upon what he thinks will appeal to the public politically? . . . in all cases? Where do you stop? Where do you draw the line?

It is true that this particular section of the Constitution had been ignored since 1896, but when a solid case was brought before the Court, there was no other alternative but to reach a decision, and the judges went by the letter of the Constitution.

But this hasn't cured the inequality of taxation in the state. The tax rate "rollback" bill merely transferred the inequity from assessment to rate, and there are about as many rates in this state as there are branches of government. The question is yet to be settled, and the great dilemma in the case is "uniformity" of rate spelled out in the Constitution. No case attacking this has been filed before the Court. The legislature has the authority to set rates at all sessions, but the Constitution says they must be uniform.

However, the Court gave notice last fall in the Gallatin County Fiscal Court case that the "rollback" bill does not meet the uniformity standard required in the Constitution.

Equalization remains yet to be answered, and it may well come this year. There have been murmurings that some school district will test this very principle this year when filing its budget and tax rate request with the proper local taxing authority. It could be City or County.

Since Kentuckians have eloquently and vociferously refused to call a Constitutional Convention to modernize and update the document, the Court of Appeals has been forced to modernize the document through decisions to keep the state afloat.

The famous "rubber dollar" opinion is one of these — the Court said the intent was based on the purchasing power of the dollar at all times, and not upon the flat figures spelled out in the Constitution.

The answer for revising the Constitution may be for the Court to follow it to the letter and bring state affairs to a screeching halt. Then the people may change the Constitution.

How Many Winters?

Winter, as identified on the calendar, is past, but Kentucky—particularly, our section of the state—has a whole passel of other cool periods which are identified as "winters." How many there are of these may not be definitely known, but two have passed—Redbud and Dogwood winters. Yet to come are the others—Blackberry, Elderberry, and so on, you name 'em.

Such is the infinite variety of Kentucky weather. Build to meet the changing seasons and all their demands for protection from cold and heat, rain and snow.

Slow Pitch Tourney To Be Held in Area

A state district slow pitch softball tournament (double elimination) will be held in this area again this year.

Report Says Site Development Near Here Would Cost $788,000

Frankfort, Ky. — The biggest problem in moving industry to the mountains of Eastern Kentucky is the mountain itself.

The hilly terrain boosts immensely the costs in preparation of industrial sites—not only in the land itself, but also in water and power lines, gas mains, sewer lines, and other services essential to industry. The rivers and creeks which wind their ways through the hill country require bridges. These bridges plus construction of access roads, or improvement of inadequate existing roads, also cost money—much money.

These are among the problems being faced squarely by state government agencies trying to take jobs to Eastern Kentucky, instead of training Eastern Kentuckians for jobs in industrial centers elsewhere.

As Gov. Louie B. Nunn put it today, "If we ever are going to make a real industrial breakthrough in Eastern Kentucky, we must make a realistic approach to the problems as well as the possibilities."

He talked realistically and concisely about Kentucky's biggest area of unemployment and consequently the region from which most Kentuckians emigrate for jobs.

Nunn held in his hand a price tag for development of eight industrial sites in seven Eastern Kentucky communities—a $5.9 million sum required to offset the barriers of nature in these communities in the mountain country.

"We know first," the Governor said, "that we must have good industrial sites in Eastern Kentucky to attract industry there. We also know from our recent two-day, industrial-site inspection of the region that sites are available. But they will not be acceptable to industry until they are developed."

"Capable employees are available," Nunn said, "but there must be a plant for them to work in. I have asked Commissioner Paul W. Gibbs, of the Kentucky Department of Commerce, to find ways and means to finance these improvements, to expend every effort in making Eastern Kentucky industrial sites attractive to industry."

"It should be obvious by now that taking jobs to Eastern Kentucky is one of the biggest goals of this administration. We are tired of training Eastern Kentuckians—in our vocational schools, for example—for jobs outside Kentucky."

"But these Eastern Kentuckians must have gainful employment to keep them in their home areas. We cannot expect industry to locate on an inadequate site any more than we can expect Eastern Kentuckians to stay in Kentucky, if there are no jobs."

"We know from recent studies that Eastern Kentuckians want jobs, instead of hand-outs. And we know that they would rather have self-supporting employment in their home areas than to go elsewhere. That's only natural. Wouldn't you rather work near your home area, too?"

Good opportunity for manufacturing is possible in Eastern Kentucky's "Golden Horse Shoe of Industrial Sites," Nunn pointed out—"if we improve these sites to make them acceptable to industry. And we already have industrial prospects which want to locate in that part of the Commonwealth."

He was talking about the seven-city arc—Jackson, Hazard, Whitesburg, Pikeville, Prestonsburg, Paintsville and Owingsville, in that order in the "horse shoe"—visited on a two-day, industrial-site inspection tour.

"I requested that tour," Nunn said, "because I wanted a realistic, first-hand inspection of those sites and how much it would cost to improve them to acceptability by industry. I wanted the cost specifics—of the land itself, of putting in utilities, of access roads, and of bridges and anything else necessary. I asked for a complete survey and re-evaluation of plant sites, both actual and potential."

The tour, headed by Commerce Commissioner Grubbs, included key members of his staff, representatives of the governor's office, the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, the Associated Industries of Kentucky, Inc., and other state government agencies. These men met with local industrial-foundation representatives all along the tour, and they combined this information with that which they obtained from on-the-site inspections themselves.

At the tour's end, industrial-site specialists of the Kentucky Department of Commerce and Highway Department staffers studied closely their multitude of notes.

Their report to Gov. Nunn, by community totals, follows in brief:

PRESTONSBURG — 35-acre site, all for industry; utilities, road, and power line making total cost of $788,000. (This tract is located near the Cliff railroad stop. Three sites of greater acreage, in the Allen vicinity, were later visited but are not included in this report.)

JACKSON — 300-acre site, 90 for industry; utilities, roads, and bridge making total of $1,365,000 in costs.

PAINTSVILLE — Two sites totaling 120 acres, 80 for industry; utilities, road, and bridge making total cost of $1,165,000.

PIKEVILLE — 380-acre site, 106 for industry; utilities and bridge making total cost of $1 all for industry; utilities, road, OWINGSVILLE—40-acre site, million.

and bridge making total cost of $810,000.

HAZARD—25-acre site, 20 for industry; utilities and road making total cost of $535,000.

WHITESBURG — 18-acre site, all for industry; utilities and road making total cost of $228,200.

PERKINS WINS APPROVAL OF SCHOOL LUNCH BILLS

Washington, June 19—Two bills introduced by Representative Carl D. Perkins to expand and improve the National School Lunch Act were approved today by the House Committee on Education and Labor.

One measure authorizes the Department of Agriculture to spend an additional $100-million a year for three years to provide free or reduced-cost meals to needy children in schools in greatest need.

The other is aimed at channeling more state funds into school lunch programs.

A preliminary estimate of the Kentucky share of these additional school lunch funds is $3,828,340, based on the latest available data.

Both measures had strong bipartisan backing, and Perkins directed that they be taken to the House floor under a suspension of the House rules—a time-saving device calculated to save several weeks of legislative time.

The new federal funds for the school lunch program would come from customs duties and tariffs on imported agricultural products. Present law requires that these funds be turned in to the Treasury after collection by the Department of Agriculture.

The two measures are an outgrowth of three weeks of hearings Perkins conducted, many times sitting alone, into the prevalence of malnutrition and hunger in the United States.

Again and again, witnesses called for broadening the school lunch program as one way to attack the problem of malnutrition in children.

The Hindman (Ky.) Democrat who heads the House Committee on Education and Labor, introduced the bills late last week for himself and 23 of his committee colleagues.

The $100-million dollars annually would be allotted to the states on the same formula used to distribute federal assistance to elementary and secondary education. That is, the proportion of children of low income families in the state of the total number of such children in the nation.

That formula is advantageous to Perkins' Eastern Kentucky district, as well as other districts in the Appalachian region.

The bill to encourage greater state support for the school lunch program has been advocated by several segments of the educational community for some time.

At present, the school lunch program is set up on a matching basis, with the federal government contributing $1 for every $3 derived from local sources. But in most cases, the local share is calculated to be money that children pay for the school lunches. Many states appropriate funds to support only the office of the state school lunch director, a small percentage of the total cost, and some states do not even do that.

Under present law, neither the states nor individual school districts have any responsibility to provide any matching funds from tax sources. On this point, Perkins said: "The objective of this legislation is to assure that state matching requirements are not made up out of the pockets of the children of poor people, as is the present practice."

The new Perkins bill would require matching from state funds on a rising scale beginning with a minimum four percent for the first two years of the program, eight percent for the second two years, and 10 percent thereafter.

STATEMENT of POLICY

In light of the proposed legislation on firearms, we would like to make known public our views on the matter. They are as follows:

1. Registration lists can be stolen or illegally made available resulting in robbery of individually-owned collections.

2. Houses for which no guns are listed would be prime prospects for criminals.

3. The experience of civilian disarmed Great Britain during World War II should be an example for all who advocate "domestic disarmament." (We had to send our civilian guns to England to arm the civilian population against invasion.)

4. The availability of a list of guns has always helped the invading armies on both sides in European wars.

The trend is clear!

More than 3 million American homes are heated electrically. The Federal Power Commission forecasts 19 million families will convert to or build electrically heated homes within just 12 years! Why?

Ben Franklin's stoves sold like hotcakes because they were more efficient than an open fire. The pot bellied stove was replaced by central heating systems. Today's big home-heating trend is another vast improvement... flameless electric... because it offers such a wide choice of systems and so many more advantages that it makes other methods of heating seem clumsy and old-fashioned. More convenient, more comfortable, more versatile, electric heat gives you more for your money. And you can enjoy it now, in your present house. Any home can be converted to clean electric heat, easily and economically. Let us prove it. Call us... or mail this coupon.

Action by State Board Asked in Pike-Co. Case

For the first time since its establishment by the General Assembly in 1962 the Kentucky Professional Practices Commission (PPC) has made use of its statutory power to recommend action by the State Board of Education.

The PPC recommendation came in a case brought against the Pike County Board of Education by the Pike County Education Association (PCEA). The PCEA had charged that the board through actions of board members Ulan Childers, Gifford Varney, and Russell Johnson exceeded its legal authority by preventing the superintendent of Pike county schools from carrying out his administrative duties in the employment, transfer and assignment of certified employees.

With three minor exceptions, the PPC found the charges "fully substantiated by the evidence." The PPC then made these recommendations.

To the State Board of Education: "The Professional Practices Commission respectfully recommends that the specific practices that have been substantiated by the evidence in this case that are attributable to the Pike County Board of Education or to individual members thereof be denounced. The Commission further recommends that the State Board of Education issue a statement to the Pike County Board of Education advising such body of the limitations placed upon the board and individual members thereof by the laws of this Commonwealth and further advising that a line of demarcation must be drawn between policy and the administration of policy."

To the Pike County Board of Education: "The Professional Practices Commission respectfully recommends that the professional, certified personnel in the Pike County school system must be left free to operate within the structure of the Code of Ethics of their profession and the regulations of this Commission."

The PCEA had accused the three board members of making unwarranted public statements about the job status and future employment of individual teachers and administrators, permitting an "unpaid advisor" to the board to offer teaching jobs without the approval of the superintendent, and making charges of improper conduct against certain certified employees in a manner that denied prior notification to those accused and violated procedures set forth by law and regulations.

In its ruling the PPC made "general observations" to the effect that "the superintendent of schools and those who have business with teachers regarding their positions in the school system are required by law and regulations of this Commission to handle such business in a manner that recognizes the legal and professional rights of these teachers."

"In general these legal and regulatory requirements provide for a private conference to discuss transfer and assignment, advance notice where a certified person is required to explain or defend his conduct or activity, specific reasons for action taken that will affect a teacher's status in the system, etc.," the PPC stated.

"...The superintendent or his delegate is normally the person who deals with the teachers in these matters. This is an administrative function. As in this case, difficulty often arises in a school system when lay persons and board members become personally involved in administrative functions."

ENGINEERS SET GUIDELINES FOR NAMING A SUCCESSOR TO DR. OSWALD AT U. OF K.

Members of a selection committee chosen to recommend a new president of the University of Kentucky have received from the Kentucky Society of Professional Engineers a recommendation that the successor to Dr. John W. Oswald have three "desirable requisites:"

1. "That the individual be nationally known as an administrator and secondly as an educator.

2. "That the new president continue the present program of employing outstanding professors to implement the revitalized curricula.

3. "That the replacement have no strong political ties to this or any previous state administration."

Arthur M. Snyder, Lexington, executive director of the engineering society, said most members of the organization are UK alumni and are vitally concerned with professional education at the University.

Unanimously adopted during the society's annual Spring meeting at Ft. Mitchell, the society's resolution stated that, because many of its members are graduates of the UK College of Engineering, "the prestige of their Alma Mater is important to the status of their professional society." It added that, "the image of the University is a reflection of the policies and reputation of the president."

The selection committee, appointed by Gov. Louie B. Nunn, is composed of four members of the UK Board of Trustees and four faculty members, including one representing the community colleges. The latter were chosen by the faculty itself and approved by the governor.

Disclosure of the society's position regarding a new president followed unanimous action by the board of directors of the UK Alumni Association in adopting a statement saying that, "We are most anxious that the recent progress made at our state university and the nationwide recognition it has achieved during the past five years not be lost at this point in time."
