Slayer of Three Gets Life Terms

Guilty Plea Closes Long Floyd Case

Agreement Reached After Prosecutor Expresses Doubts

Roy Salisbury, Floyd county slayer of three, Tuesday won permanent reprieve from the electric chair.

The drift man, who spent two years on "Death Row" of Eddyville prison until he won from the Court of Appeals a reversal of his death sentence, was sentenced Tuesday afternoon in the Morgan circuit court to three life terms after he had entered pleas of guilty to the shotgun slaying of Roy R. Denney, Mrs. Mallie T. Denney and Thomas S. Combs near Drift on April 23, 1964.

The guilty pleas and the three life sentences were the result of agreement between the Commonwealth and the defense. Sentence was passed by Circuit Judge W. Major Gardner.

Salisbury had been scheduled for trial in the Morgan court, on change of venue, for the slaying of Mrs. Denney. The transfer of the case there was made after the Clark circuit court, which had been designated by Circuit Judge Hollie Conley as the new trial site, had refused the case. Removal of the case from this county was made on the grounds that a fair trial could not be had here where two unsuccessful efforts had been made to empanel juries from this and Martin counties and where a jury from Pike county had held Salisbury guilty and set his punishment at death. He was convicted in April. (See Story No. 3, Page 8)

This Town . . . That World

The calendar says it's Spring. The thermometer (as of this present reading) indicates it's later than calendar-readers think.

This is a wonderful season, but its vagaries sometimes are almost tragic. There are those cold snaps to come that will freeze the peepers almost in mid-cherp, nip the early buds and again put me out of business as a gardener. I plant early, you know. Before the weather gets too warm.

WANTED—A GARBAGE CAN DISPOSAL

This is my own problem, but there's an off-chance somebody might want to help. I have a bottomless garbage can which the garbage truck will not accept for disposition at the city dump. It isn't salable at any junkyard. I could dump it into the river or roll it over a hill onto some other person's land, but this is frowned on by the law as well as the other fellow. And if I attempt to bury it on my own property I can't expect to dig far before I strike the shale. So there we are. Any suggestions that will keep me within the law? (See Story No. 2, Page 6)

The second event will be a concert on April 2 by Ralph Volaptek, internationally known pianist. The same week, the fes-

Mrs. Troy Hunt, of Lancer, operator of the cycle, escaped with bruises. The two women are cousins, it was said.

What Lies Ahead For David Mines?

What looms ahead for Princess Coals' mining operations at David?

That is a question that has been often mentioned for months. In recent weeks, rumor has had the big mining operation quitting at the end of this month.

But, said David L. Francis, chairman of the board of Princess Coals, Inc., in a telephone conversation with The Times Wednesday, no official decision has been reached.

Progress of Students In NYC Told by Hall

Neighborhood Youth Corps students are attending school more regularly than others in this county, and more than a third of them have improved grades, NYC director Estill Hall reported to the Floyd County Board of Education at the end of the first semester.

(The Neighborhood Youth Corps is federally financed to provide part-time employment to students of low-income families so that they may continue in school.)

Of the 300 NYC students enrolled in the county's eight high schools, 58 ended the semester on the honor roll, and the number of those on probation had dropped from 80 to 23.

The record of improvement established by these youngsters is also reflected in the fact that the 55 who had improved grades at the end of the first six weeks of school had increased at semester's end to 106.

The average attendance of NYC students at all the schools was 96.2, as compared to 95.1 for all students.

ANTI-RABIES FIGHT MADE

2 Areas of County Have 384 Animals Immunized in Day

The Floyd County Health Department, in cooperation with the Fish & Wildlife Association and the Fox Hunters Association, conducted 19 anti-rabies clinics Saturday in the Right Beaver and Brush Creek sections of the county, resulting in the vaccination of 384 dogs and cats to protect them against rabies.

In June, 1967 the total number of vaccinations against rabies for all Floyd county was only 604 dogs and cats. "This very low figure of vaccinations could possibly be the reason why we had an outbreak of rabies in this county," a health department spokesman said.

The Floyd County Health Department will conduct another anti-rabies clinic for the entire county this summer, soon after schools close.

The health department pointed out that if the people of the Right Beaver and Brush Creek sections can have vaccinated 384 dogs and cats, the county should have at least 900 dogs and cats protected.

Commending residents of the Right Beaver and Brush Creek sections for their efforts toward the vaccination of their dogs and cats, the health department said these two areas in the future should be a splendid example to the other sections of Floyd county as the section best protected against rabies.

Out of the meeting came a decision to seek EDA approval of a change in the overall plan to three phases instead of the original two. These will be presented to EDA within the next two weeks. W. H. Kenney, Versailles engineer, said.

FRAUD COUNT TRIAL BEGINS

Martin County Judge, Four Others Accused Of Funds Diversion

Trial of five men on fraud charges involving 1963 flood-relief funds in Martin county was scheduled to begin Tuesday in U. S. District Court at Pikeville.

One of the defendants is Martin County Judge Willie Kirk, who as county judge was administrator of the Martin county disaster-relief program after the March 1963 flood.

Floyd Rescue Squads Joins River Search Near Elkhorn City

Search of the Big Sandy River by more than 40 members of Kentucky and Virginia rescue squads has failed to recover the body of Richard McCracken, 25, Columbia, Tenn., who was drowned at Elkhorn City Sunday morning. The Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad and the Left Beaver Rescue Squad sent a dozen of their members to join searchers from Pikeville, Haysi and Dickenson county, Virginia.

McCracken was drowned when he was knocked from a "head-ache" ball which he was riding across the river. The ball is a piece of equipment used in bridge construction. When the clutch of the crane slipped, the ball hit a bridge beam, whiplacked and hurled McCracken 90 feet into five feet of water.

The missing man was employed in bridge construction at Elkhorn City by the Kentucky Erecting Company.

The Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad was called out (See Story No. 5, Page 8)

Intra-Party Fight Besets Floyd GOP

Floyd county Republicans will elect precinct chairmen and chairwomen Saturday afternoon, and divergent factions of the party will go about the election in different ways.

One group, headed by the present party chairman, Jack Hyden, of Prestonsburg, has announced its intention of electing precinct leaders at a mass meeting at the courthouse here at 2 p.m. Saturday. Presumably, those elected at this meeting will re-elect Hyden as chairman.

Another group which is advocating the election of Dr. J. D. Adams, also of Prestonsburg, has set the same day and hour for election of chairmen and chairwomen at the several precincts.

Party rules permit either method of electing, it is claimed.

The Adams faction claims 44 of the present precinct committeemen have signed requests that the election be held at the precinct level. On the other hand, the group headed by Hyden says the county's executive committee "has petitioned by a overwhelming majority for a mass meeting."

The party has 84 precinct committee members—two for each of the county's 42 precincts. Supporters of Dr. Adams claim about eight precinct committee members are not eligible to vote. They say they base this conten-

Johnson-Co., Louisa Work Set in July

Safety Requirements Slow Design Job Here, Department Explains

No construction contract on US 23 south of Prestonsburg is expected this year, a Kentucky Department of Highways spokesman at Frankfort said this week.

The statement was made in reply to a query made by The Times after Commissioner of Highways Hazelrigg's office had announced that all of new US 23 between Paintsville and Louisa will be under construction by July 1.

The department spokesman said US 23 from Prestonsburg to Allen and on to Pikeville got involved, last summer and fall, with federal safety requirements and that, as a result, work of design consultants in some cases was stopped. Design work will be done on the Floyd-Pike section of the highway this year.

The entire route is a part of the Appalachian highway program which is now in its third year.

The existing highway between Paintsville and Louisa will be closed April 1 to allow early phases of the rebuilding work to proceed, Hazelrigg said.

During construction, KY 201 from Paintsville to Blaine and KY 32 from Blaine to Louisa will serve as the detour route for through traffic. Those who live in the vicinity of the construction work, however, will be permitted to use the present facility to travel to and from their homes.

The detour, which will remain in use until new US 23 is finished, has been upgraded to take care of the increased traffic it will carry.

The new 26-mile highway, which will be built to modern standards, will have a 24-foot pavement, 12-foot shoulders and passing lanes. Completion of the Executive Committee.

Scholarship Fund Goal Set at $18,000; Johnson To Speak at Lodge Dinner

Robert C. Johnson, vice-president of Student Affairs, University of Kentucky, will be the speaker at the dinner scheduled Thursday evening, March 28, at May Lodge as a Prestonsburg Community College scholarship fund benefit.

Proceeds of the $10-per-plate dinner will go toward the $18,000 goal set by the college Scholarship committee for the year. That amount would provide a $300 scholarship to 60 students. The dinner will also serve to present the scholarship program and explain its value to students of the area.

The program, which will begin at 7 p.m., will include recognition of present scholarship donors and music by the John Hochnick trio.

Shoe Plant Nears Completion

Almost complete and already housing some machinery is the million-dollar U. S. Shoe Company plant, across the Big Sandy from Lancer. Cutting machinery was placed in operation there Monday, and 900 pairs of shoes were cut that day. Other equipment is being moved into the plant, and operation is scheduled to begin, April 1. One hundred workers—mostly women—have completed training. A second class has started at Archer Park here, Gerald Pease, plant manager, said. The plant, built and equipped by a City of Prestonsburg bond issue of $1.1 million, is under long-term lease to the shoe company. It will employ, when full production is reached, between 400 and 500.

No Class, No Teachers— It's a Learning Center

A group of 16 Floyd county teachers last week visited in Western Kentucky, and found interesting, a school that has no periods or bells, no grade levels, no assigned home work and no textbooks, as such.

And nobody goes to see the principal, for there isn't any—he or she is called a learning center coordinator. For that matter, there's no teacher—she's called a learning coordinator.

It isn't even called a school. It's known as an individualized learning center.

The learning center, developed under Title III of the Elementary-Secondary Education Act at McNeill elementary school, Bowling Green, has 630 students (they still call them students), a principal or coordinator, a librarian and 24 "teachers."

The program gives special emphasis to reading, language development, social studies, science, mathematics and elementary counseling. The student advances at his own rate of achievement.

Students in the various subjects are expected to have certain common learnings, develop personal concepts and understandings, explore areas of interest, and pursue avenues of specialization as they proceed individually through the curriculum. Each student's profile in the different academic and skill areas is determined from past performance achievement and aptitude test scores, and placement in appropriate subject matter content is accompanied by designated cognition and communicative skill development activities. Mental ability scores are used as estimates of the student's potential for learning. All test results are correlated with each student's past and present learning performance.

From those evaluations the staff develops an individualized learning program for each student. Pupils utilize the resource areas and personnel according to the times allotted on their Learning Performance Profile Cards.

Upon the completion of a period of scheduled work (academic package) the student is examined or tested either written and or verbally by a learning coordinator. At this meeting a decision is made on the quality and quantity of the performance within the unit. If the work and expected outcomes are not satisfactory, additional skill development and content study is planned with the student. Students who are successful will move into new work which gives even more breadth and depth in the same subject or subjects.

Planning and preparing a program for individual students in science, mathematics, language, arts and social studies include all types of activities for communicative and cognitive development. There are no required number of units for students to advance to the next year's work.

It is expected that some pupils will complete a few units during the year while many will finish work found to be of much greater difficulty than usually considered appropriate for that particular aged child. Students in the school next year will be re-evaluated within a few weeks and placed in appropriate content learning and skill development activities. Some students may have lost ground and be placed with less difficult materials and activities than those engaged in at the end of this current year.

Other students may begin where they were the previous year and those who show increased competency and more maturity will work with much more sophisticated academic content and activities. The amount of time a pupil will spend in the skill areas is designated on the Learning Profile and he proceeds according to his ability to approach the expected level of performance.

Sales Tax Increase to 5% Helps Finance Huge Budget

Frankfort, Ky. — Eight Democrats joined 13 Republicans in giving final, bipartisan Senate approval to Gov. Louie B. Nunn's tax bill to finance his $2.47 billion budget for the next two fiscal years. The vote was 21 to 17.

Then, in action that took place just two days before final March 15 adjournment of the 1968 General Assembly, all 38 senators joined in giving unanimous approval to the budget bill for fiscal 1968-1970.

The tax measure calls for a five percent sales tax on all retail purchases starting April 1 and an increase in vehicle license fees from $5 to $12.50 starting next Jan. 1. Kentucky's sales tax currently is three percent.

Before passing the administration measure, the eight Democrats and 13 Republicans beat back a Democratic-majority substitute bill that included a four percent sales tax and tax exemption on food and medicine.

The two measures—House Bill 399, tax; and House Bill 400, tax—previously had passed the House through a coalition of Democrats and Republicans.

For 1968-1970, the budget provides for a $262.2 million increase over General Fund appropriations for fiscal 1966-1968. Education would be the chief beneficiary with a total appropriation of $665,041,925, or 66.2 percent. Health and Welfare would receive 18 percent, and other state services the remainder.

Administrative Regulations
The Senate, on the same day it approved the Governor's budget and tax plan, voted 29-5 to override his first veto. Nunn had vetoed Senate Bill 126 which would give the Legislature power to review all regulations issued by state administrative agencies.

Nunn said in his veto message that "the power to determine the legality of regulations should remain with the courts of our Commonwealth." The measure was sent from the Senate to the House, which originally passed it 76-0, where the 51 votes needed to complete overriding the veto were not received.

Lack of time for complete processing was responsible for the death of hundreds of bills in the House and the Senate at adjournment March 13. Any bill that had not cleared its house of origin by then and received at least one favorable reading in the other house was dead.

Among these was HB 198. This was a bill to legalize certain kinds of multi-coin pinball machines that were banned by the 1966 Legislature.

Another was Senate Resolution 21, to rescind Kentucky's call at the 1965 special session for a federal constitution convention in support of "the Dirksen Amendment" to amend the constitution to nullify the U. S. Supreme Court's "one man, one vote" ruling.

Two education measures also were pronounced dead. One of these, HB 297, would have authorized merger of the Louisville and Jefferson County School systems under the so-called "umbrella plan." The other, backed by the Kentucky Education Association called for recognition of teachers in salary and other negotiations through their local school professional organizations.

The Senate passed and sent to the Governor House Bill 149 which would eliminate three of the present 12 state holidays for state employees—Jan. 19, Robert E. Lee Day; June 3, Confederate Memorial Day, and Oct. 12, Columbus Day.

The bill also increases annual vacation leave for career employees.

Final legislative approval was given to a proposed constitutional amendment to require annual sessions of the General Assembly and to delay until March the convening of a session the year following the election of a governor. The Legislature now meets biennially for limited 60-day sessions.

The Legislature gave final approval and sent to the Governor on March 12 the first independent Legislative budget within memory. It calls for an appropriation of $3 million to finance the Legislature, its staff and committees for two years.

Deep Oil Find in Boyd Causes Lease Scramble

(From The Licking Valley Courier)

In recent weeks Ashland Oil and Refining Co. has taken leases in eastern Morgan and eastern Elliott counties—in areas which previously have proved of little worth for oil, at least in upper sands.

And there will be more leasing—probably through northern Morgan, and maybe other areas. Why?

News is out on Inland Gas Company's deep test on Ellington's Bear Creek in southern Boyd county. The well was drilled several months ago to a depth of 7,600 feet. Speculators observed it was pumped every day, but could not find out how many barrels the L. C. White well produced.

But news will out. And it is causing a mild scramble for leases. The well, according to the Oil and Gas Journal of March 4, is producing 30 barrels a day from the Middle Cambrian, a deep formation below the Knox.

Thirty barrels a day is too little to be commercially profitable for a 7,600 foot well. But, its location on the south side of a scarp along the Middle Cambrian formation indicates there probably is oil in paying quantities at this depth if the drill hits at the right place—where this indigenous formation is thickest.

And it seems to be thickest on the south side of a formation running from opposite Kenova, W. Va., southeasterly through Boyd, the north edge of Lawrence, and the eastern half of Elliott and eastern and northern part of Morgan—then going on west through Menifee and Montgomery to Clark county, maybe on to Fayette.

Several deep test wells, from Adams county, Ohio, southward to Breathitt county, and from the new Inland well in Boyd county to Menifee, where a deep test was sunk some years ago—and seismograph testing, show the Menifee well also was on the south side of the formation. But though the Menifee well is not a producer, it showed similar oil-bearing strata.

Seismograph testing has been done in eastern Morgan three times in the last five years. Apparently, these tests show the route of the Cambrian strata that is producing oil in Boyd.

The Boyd county well was "fracked" at two levels—7,445 and 7,574 feet—and the latter also was acidized.

Drillers lost a bit and the sleeve at a lower level.

"The Boyd county discovery," says Oil and Gas Journal, "is of utmost importance because it proves the presence of indigenous oil, and productive capacity of the Rome formation in Eastern Kentucky." (Middle Cambrian is a part of the Rome).

"Rapid thinning of the Rome across the Pre-Cambrian hinge line and/or faulting could prove the necessary trap," says the Journal.

"But," says the Journal, "the sparse oil recovery will make it necessary to pin down the location of the basement scarp (steep slope) by geophysical methods."

So, Morgan and Elliott counties will see more seismograph testing to locate the scarp. And Boyd county will see another deep test. For Inland already has made location 5 1/2 miles southwest of the L. C. White well for another deep well. This time, they apparently hope to hit a little higher on the thickening Cambrian formation.

REP. PERKINS ENTERS RACE

Frankfort, Ky., March 20—Representative Carl D. Perkins today filed declaration papers for renomination as Democratic candidate for Congress from the Seventh Congressional District.

Perkins, who is seeking his 11th term in the U. S. House of Representatives, is chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor.

The Kentuckian, whose seniority and committee chairmanship make him one of the most influential members of Congress, has long been identified with efforts to improve the nation's educational programs.

Last year he confounded scores of Washington experts by engineering passage of a new and revised Elementary and Secondary Education Act, and by winning approval of a new act overhauling the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Passage of these measures, both thought to be in trouble at the time, established Perkins' reputation with his congressional colleagues as a skillful and persuasive committee leader.

Administration and Congressional leaders, including the President and officials of the House, praised Perkins' accomplishments during the 1967 session.

During his career in Congress, Perkins has been the author and sponsor of the Vocational Education Act of 1963, which provided more than four times the federal financial support for vocational education enterprises in Kentucky than was previously available.

This year, the Committee on Education and Labor, under Perkins' leadership, is expected to produce a major new Vocational Education Act, designed to unify and expand the programs for the nation's manpower development needs.

Perkins was co-sponsor of the Manpower Development and Training Act, and instrumental in its passage. He was author of the legislation that included work experience and training for unemployed parents in the Economic Opportunity Act.

Perkins' work in education has not prevented his active participation in other fields that are important to Kentucky. He has sponsored measures to develop the water resources and provide flood protection for the major streams. (See Story No. 1, Page 5)

State, Coal Industry Try Spoilbank Seeding

Frankfort—The state and the coal industry are experimenting in a project that could lead to reclamation of Kentucky's 70,000 acres of strip mine spoilbanks.

Paid for by the Natural Resources Department and the National Independent Coal Operators Association, the project involved aerial seeding of 200 acres of abandoned spoilbanks in the Yellow Creek drainage of the Middlesboro basin.

A crop-dusting airplane spread 50-foot-wide swaths of grass, legume and tree seeds and then a layer of fertilizer.

Gov. Louie B. Nunn says he will seek federal funds to reclaim abandoned spoilbanks if the experiment proves successful. Legislation permitting the state to reclaim such areas was passed by the 1966 General Assembly.

Robert Holcomb, president of the association, said it might be interested in helping reclaim orphan spoilbanks if the experiment is a success, and may even incorporate aerial seeding into reclamation plans for current and future operations. "We'll have to wait and see if the results justify the cost," he said.

State Reclamation Division Director Elmore Grim said, "Complete results won't be known until after the growing season—some time in August."

Everage To Preach At Garrett Church

The Rev. Everage, of Hindman, will be the evangelist in a series of meetings which will begin at the Garrett Baptist Church on Wednesday, March 27, and continue through the following Sunday night. The public is invited to attend each service.

HI HAT

The Hi Hat Homemakers Club met at the school lunchroom, March 11. The president, Mrs. Ruth Meade, called the meeting to order.

Mrs. Gertrude Lawson gave the devotional, reading a portion of scripture from the Psalms. Nine members answered the roll call. They were Audrey Yates, Anne Stephens, Zettie Snyder, Gwendolyn Dawson, Veronica O'Bryan, Gertrude Lawson, Hazel Little, Ruth Meade and Sarah Hall.

The lesson was on "Cleaning House the Modern Way" and was given by area extension agent, Mrs. Frances Pitts.

All enjoyed this very informative lesson since our spring cleaning is just around the corner. Club president, Mrs. Ruth Meade, will attend the state meeting on March 26. Also five members plan a tour of the UK Agriculture and Home Economics campus and experimental farms on April 16.

Club adjourned to meet April 11 with Mrs. Veronica O'Bryan and Mrs. Pearl Newsom as hostesses. Refreshments were served by Audrey Yates and Gladys Pack. We urge all members to attend and welcome new members.

Club Speaker Discusses Right To Be in Vietnam

"Our Legal and Moral Right To Be in Vietnam" was the subject discussed at the recent meeting of the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club at the home of Mrs. Otto Martin, Wayland.

Mrs. Martin was program leader, substituting for her absent speaker, Neal J. Crowley, Prestonsburg attorney, who was unable to be present.

Speaking from Mr. Crowley's notes, Mrs. Martin advised her hearers, "The United States does have a legal right to be in Vietnam. This is a war between two countries and not a civil war. In 1946 France officially recognized North Vietnam as a free state and in 1952 and 1957 a majority of the UN accepted South Vietnam for membership as a separate state, but Russia vetoed its admission into the Security Council."

"The 1954 Geneva Accord recognized North Vietnam and South Vietnam as separate countries. Therefore," continued Mrs. Martin, "because of North Vietnam's aid to and control of the Viet Cong, they are engaging in aggression in South Vietnam and under International Law the U. S. is entitled to respond to the request of a country which has been made subject to a war of aggression."

"Even if this were a civil war, International Law allows any country, if asked, to aid an existing government and no country may aid the insurgent."

On the moral side of the war, several questions were posed by the speaker: Do we have a moral right to be in Vietnam? What should be the limits of free speech and dissent in our country as to the Vietnam war? Should we give complete exemption, limited exemption, or no exemption to those claiming to be conscientious objectors? Should draft card burners be punished? Should we get out of Vietnam? These were discussion questions and brief views were expressed by various members.

Miss Phyllis Burnette, of Wayland, an English teacher at the Prestonsburg Community College and a guest of the club, opened the program with devotions.

Mrs. Mervil Dixon presided at a business meeting prior to the program in which an election was held, resulting in the following new officers to be installed at the annual May breakfast of the club: president, Mrs. Mervil Dixon; first vice-president, Mrs. Hansel Bradley; second vice-president, Mrs. Milton Trusty, Jr.; recording secretary, Mrs. James Burge; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Otto Martin.

Contributions were voted for the Arthritis and Polio drives and the Heart Chairman, Mrs. S. M. Martin, gave a preliminary report on the Heart Drive in this area of Floyd county, final figures to be announced later.

A dessert course was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Rex Martin, Mrs. John Reed, and Mrs. Otto Martin, the latter substituting for Mrs. J. T. Spillman, who was recuperating from surgery.

Those present were Mrs. John Reed, Mrs. Felix Coburn, Mrs. Gene Mullins, Mrs. Rex Martin, Mrs. Stanley Bamer, Mrs. Rudolph Spencer, Mrs. S. M. Martin, Mrs. Charles L. Hornsby, Mrs. Shelby Draughn, Mrs. Milton Trusty, Jr., Mrs. Crit Wells, Mrs. James Burge, Mrs. Charles R. Martin, Mrs. Paul Rutledge, Mrs. Mervil Dixon, Mrs. M. M. Collins, and Mrs. Otto Martin, members, and Miss Phyllis Burnette, Mrs. James E. Martin, and Little Miss Jennifer Mullins, guests.

School To Emphasize 4-Year Forestry Plan

A four-year plan for establishing a School of Natural Resources at the University of Kentucky has been outlined by the dean of the UK College of Agriculture.

The school, which will emphasize a four-year program in forestry, also will include programs on recreational management, and fish and water conservation.

Dean William Albert Seay, of the agriculture college, said professors will be employed this summer to begin organizing the school which will eventually include a dean and 18 instructors, with graduate students, technical and clerical help.

A separate building housing laboratories and classrooms for the school also is included in the plan. "We must set aside land for future study," he explained, "provide recreational facilities in the natural outdoors, maintain areas for high quality water sources, and prevent erosion as well as plan for the development of land for the production of food, highways and cities."

Governor Louie B. Nunn also has called for additional forestry camps such as the rehabilitation center at Pineville and for a school of forestry. He expressed the need for "either a state agency or a private foundation" obtaining one of the "few remaining tracts of virgin Appalachian timber" for preservation in its natural state.

Gov. Nunn has requested "more than $1.7 million for each of the next two years" in his proposed budget for the Kentucky Division of Forestry. Sixteen separate projects by 16 researchers at the University of Kentucky are investigating water pollution.

Six are new, seven will terminate this year, and three projects are expected to be completed in 1969-70.

Sponsored by the UK Water Resources Institute and directed by Dr. Robert A. Lauderdale, the studies are being conducted by researchers from a number of University disciplines, financed by the U. S. Department of the Interior Office of Water Resources Research and the University.

Dr. Lauderdale said most of the research is into identification, nature and effects of pollutants, and are expected to contribute to national efforts "to combat pollution, conserve water resources, and assure their maximum availability and usage."

He added that each of the research directors "is qualified by previous studies in his particular field to bring to their projects the best scientific knowledge available at UK."

Grade School Tournaments To Finance Scholarships

The "Little Brothers" of Floyd county's basketball world will meet in four sectional tournaments and a championship finale, late this month, to help their "Big Brothers."

The tournaments involving grade school boys playing for the purpose of raising scholarship funds to enable older boys and girls to attend college is believed to be the only one of its kind in the nation.

Four sectional tournaments involving four teams each will be held March 25-28. Winners of these will meet here for the final elimination, March 29 and 30.

One sectional tournament will be held at Maytown. There, Stumbo will meet McDowell and Betsy Layne will play Lackey in the first round. SPEAKER SAYS STUDENTS AWARE OF REAL ISSUES

Pippa Passes, Ky.—"Appalachian students are as aware of the great issues of the day as any students in this nation," said the featured speaker at Alice Lloyd College's Religious Emphasis Week, which ended March 15.

The Rev. John W. Rustin, a retired Methodist minister and a member of the faculty at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., met with students at Alice Lloyd for intensive consideration of religious, ethical and moral questions.

"There is no communications gap between the students of this mountain region and other sections of the United States," he said at the conclusion of his visit. "Alice Lloyd students know about the hippie movement, the war protests, the unrest on other campuses around the country. The greatest concern of today's student, however, is what they consider hypocrisy on the part of adults. Young people are told one thing by their parents, or their teachers, but often see something quite different. Adults, across the nation, must understand that they are being watched. If they are to have significant influence on today's youth, their statements must coincide with their actions."

State Teachers Pay To Average $6,285; Big Budget Okehed

Frankfort, Ky. — Kentucky's 29,000-plus public school teachers will receive an annual average salary of $6,285 for the 1967-68 fiscal year, an increase of $517 over that paid them last year.

This was included in an estimated budget of $305.5 million which the State Board of Education approved last Wednesday. The record budget is some $76 million more than was appropriated by the Legislature for the fiscal year, but the additional money came from increased local efforts and federal funds, a State Department of Education official said.

The salary increases, however, fall short of the national average for all teachers by some $1,300 and for classroom teachers alone approximately $1,100, the official said.

The average salaries range from $5,231, the lowest at Augusta independent district in Bracken county, to $7,999 at Ft. Thomas independent district.

Six other districts have salaries averaging over $7,000. They are Anchorage, $7,943; Jefferson, $7,405; Elizabethtown, $7,069; Louisville, $7,903; Lynch, $7,073 and Beechwood, $7,666.

$17.7 million improvement is expected, late next year.

Kentucky expects to start construction on 176 more miles of Appalachian highways during the next two and a half years.

This forecast was presented to the Appalachian Regional Commission in Washington recently by A. O. Neiser, Kentucky state highway engineer. The meeting, attended by representatives of both the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads and state highway departments, explored ways to accelerate the three-year-old highway development program.

"Kentucky," Neiser said, "expects to have under design by July 1 of this year all but one of the highway improvements which are to be built with Appalachian funds." This goal was set by the Department in July of 1967.

The exception is the section of US 25-E on which a decision by the Appalachian Regional Commission and the National Park Service is pending on how to finance a tunnel to preserve Cumberland Gap.

Design work in Kentucky has been slowed, Neiser said, by the need to use new safety criteria, despite statements from some quarters that these new standards would not cause any delays in current highway programs.

"However," Neiser said, "the record should indicate there were 301.27 miles under design under Kentucky's Appalachian Highway Program when our geometric design standards had to be revised to include safety criteria, and more than 30 percent were delayed because of safety."

"On the basis of our new cost criteria, our construction costs estimates which include safety are expected to increase by 20 to 24 percent."

These delays in design will move much of the construction into the later years of the Appalachian program, Neiser said. And this will result in additional costs because of the inability to obtain materials in or get materials to the Appalachian area.

SHORTAGE OF ENGINEERS CITED BY DEAN DRAKE

The supply of engineers, physicists, computer programmers and engineering technicians "already is far below the demand. Even greater shortages are forecast for the next decade unless we can attract more young people into engineering," says Dean Robert M. Drake, Jr., of the University of Kentucky College of Engineering.

He says Russian institutes graduate about 138,000 engineers a year, with one-third of them women. Japan turns out more than 200,000 engineers a year.

"In 1967, American universities awarded only 36,000 engineering degrees. Of the one and a half million Americans registering for college last fall, fewer than 50,000 will receive engineering degrees when graduation time rolls around in the early 1970's."

Dean Drake cited a report by a national task force created by the Engineering Manpower Commission of the Engineers' Joint Council. He said the commission is "seriously concerned over the future engineering, technological and science needs of the nation."

He said that at one university, a year ago, 250 industrial recruiters were competing for the 230 engineering college graduates.

"These conditions are due to reach crisis proportions by the early 1970's," Dr. Drake said. "The average technical organization was able to recruit about 75 per cent of the technical people it required in 1967."

Referring to a national condition which he said is somewhat better at the UK College of Engineering, Dr. Drake added that in the past ten

Spartans Add 2 Victories To Bring Record to 11-1

The Prestonsburg Community College Spartans ran their season record to 11-1 last week-end with one-sided victories over Logan (Marshall) and Northern Community College of Covington. Friday's game in Prestonsburg saw the Spartans withstand a 34-point performance by Logan's Ron Kirk to whip the visitors, 99-87. On Saturday afternoon, Prestonsburg lacked its usual polish and scoring ability but easily handed Northern, 87-76.

Beecher Hale topped the 30-point mark Friday for the sixth straight time to lead the Spartan attack. Doug Kretzer added 21, as did playmaking guard Ernie Collins. Roy Conn pitched in 13. Kirk led Logan with 34. Cheek had 17, and Brady 16.

FLOYD POOR TO BENEFIT

From New Program Announced This Week; Details are Not Known

(Continued from Page One) 1965, and the case was reversed last June 30. One factor in the decision to settle for three life terms for the defendant was word from Commonwealth's Attorney Walters, of the Morgan circuit court, to the effect that no more than a life sentence could be expected from a jury from that county and that he doubted a jury could be qualified there to inflict a possible death penalty.

The three life sentences will run concurrently, since the Court of Appeals has ruled out consecutive life terms on the grounds that a defendant has only one life to live and that three life terms cannot be added, end to end.

The burly defendant accepted the life sentences without visible show of emotion. Morgan Commonwealth's Attorney Gardner and Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo, who handled the long court battle for the state here, represented the commonwealth at Tuesday's hearing. Burnis Martin, Prestonsburg attorney who as court-appointed counsel represented Salisbury during the two abortive trial attempts here and in the sensational trial which ended in the defendant's conviction, plus the fight for reversal of his sentence, and John Young Brown, of Lexington, a newcomer to the case, appeared for the defense.

Salisbury's transfer to prison was expected to be made this week.

Mrs. Howard Williams, Lexington, president of the Kentucky Federation, presided over the business session. After the business, workshops were held by heads of the executive committees on parliamentary procedure, protocol, finance and ways and means.

At the luncheon Wednesday, Mrs. Opal Lucas, London, Ky., National Committee chairwoman, gave a talk on the National Federation Republican Women's Club Convention, to be held in Washington, D. C., April 23-25, and placed the name of Mrs. Alice Kawaja on the national committee for favors from the state of Kentucky.

Mrs. C. Lawrence Lilly, Lexington, introduced the keynote speaker, Albert Christen, commissioner of finance. Commissioner Christen told why the five percent sales tax was necessary. The hospitality committee was composed of Alice Kawaja, chairman, Mary Richmond, co-chairman, Katherine Brown, Doris Miller, Alka Whitt, Janie Preston, Ruth Deskins, Mable Lemaster, Nancy Howard and Mary Lou Adkins; the registration committee: Doris Miller, Alka Whitt, Mable Lemaster, and Ruth Deskins; favors: Alice Kawaja, chairman; decorations: Mary Richmond and Alice Kawaja.

The automatic transfer switch which he developed for use in the Jenny Wiley State Park area was exhibited by Hershel Bayes, of Wittensville, at the annual meeting in Dallas, Texas recently of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association. Bayes (shown in photo exhibiting his invention) is a 21-year veteran employee of the Big Sandy RECC.

In operation about seven years, the switch invented by Bayes is designed to sense a power failure in the Middle Creek substation at West Prestonsburg and to transfer, automatically, the area to service from the Thelma substation. Once the power failure is corrected, the switch will transfer RECC customers back to the Middle Creek supply source.

Film on State Birds
Held Nation's Best

"Kentucky's Feathered Rainbow," a color film of Kentucky's birds, has been adjudged the best in the nation in its category. Such designation was given the movie by the Outdoor Writers Association of America at a finalist showing of four films before the North American Wildlife Conference held March 10 at Houston, Texas.

"The Rainbow" had been entered in a sectional showing conducted by the Outdoor Writers and had been adjudged best in this showing. The four finalist films were then shown at the Houston meeting for judging.

"The Rainbow" was made by Karl Maslowski, Cincinnati, for the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources through its Division of Public Relations. It was first released in June, 1967, and has had wide usage throughout the state before civic, sportsmen and garden clubs and has been presented on several TV stations in its entirety.

The filming required more than a year, with most of the shots being made on location in Kentucky. It shows 65 species of the approximately 300 birds that live in or visit Kentucky. These range from the well known robin, house wren, crow and bluebird to the rare and unusual species like red crossbills, snowy owls and even grosbeaks.

THE TOWHEE BIRD AND SASSAFRAS TEA

There is a slender bird about the size of the cardinal, with red eyes, a jet-black head and back, red on the sides like a robin's breast, a white belly and white in its wings, called the red-eyed towhee. Early in March, this bird flies up from the old brown leaves where it is fond of scratching, lights in a tree or a roadside bush and in a loud voice, cries: "Drink your tea-ee-ee."

When I hear the red-eyed towhee's loud-ringing admonition, I am reminded to go to the woods to get some bark from the roots of the sassafras to make my spring tea.

The oldtimers always drank sassafras tea in the spring, "to thin the thick winter blood," and for a general tonic and conditioner; they usually called it "saxafra tea." They claimed the tea could drive the winter miasma out of the body and put one in the proper mood to enjoy spring. I can remember when the oldsters drank sassafras tea in lieu of coffee, and the head of the household made the kids drink it, too, whether they liked it or not. They seemed to derive much benefit from the tea; they were a hardy breed and were seldom plagued with flu and a lot of ailments common to our modern way of living.

I really think we should restore the old custom of drinking plenty of sassafras tea in the spring. As a beverage it has few equals; it is warmly aromatic, and its virtues are many; it is a stimulant, a tonic, and it is good for the kidneys and it can check the persistent winter cough. It is better than Geritol for building rich, red blood fast.

There is a difference in the quality of the bark of sassafras trees or shrubs; those growing in old fields do not have the rich, red, flavorful bark like the older trees in the woods. In looking for sassafras bark for tea, you will find the best flavored and highest quality bark in the red roots of older trees that grow in woods where they have to reach to the sky for sun. The reddish roots of these older trees are rich in vitamins and minerals.

We got from the Indians the name "sassafras," which means "smelling stick." Not only the branches but the bark, leaves, twigs and roots are aromatic. The twigs are greenish and delightful to chew, producing a mucilaginous substance in the mouth. The bark of the older trees is reddish-brown and broken into many ridges with deep furrows.

The sassafras has many notable features to recommend it; it is usually the first tree to spring up in old fields and clearings, where it forms dense thickets with a tough root system that stops soil erosion. Another notable feature is the varied leaf forms found on the same tree; some of the leaves are shaped like a mitten, with the thumb forming one lobe; others have three lobes, while some are entire, not lobed.

The wood of sassafras is light, brittle, reddish-brown, and makes good fence posts. It was formerly used to make ox yokes.

The sassafras also produces large, dark blue berries, which are succulent and make excellent food for birds. The berries, called drupes, are said to be the most handsome of all berries; they are formed on bright scarlet pedicels, and have an orange-red cup at the base of each.

The bark of the roots of sassafras is also used to produce the aromatic oil of sassafras used in flavoring root beer, candies, and goodies like "sassafras candy."

The flowers of sassafras appear in April and are very beautiful, being of a light greenish-yellow and covering the tree.

The sassafras is a member of the Laurel Family, which includes many highly valuable shrubs, such as all-spice, spicebush, and litsea, or pond-spice. While sassafras is mostly a small tree, it sometimes attains a large size in rich, wooded hillsides, and has been known to grow to a height of 90 feet, with a rugged trunk and deeply grooved, reddish-brown bark.

TIDITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D.

SIXTY YEARS AGAIN

Since I have spent all my grown-up years as a teacher, I naturally think of what has taken place in education in the last 60 years. When I arrived at Bowling Green, I was already 19 years old but had never had the opportunity to attend high school or any substitute for it except a private so-called college for a half year. I, like nearly all the other 500 students of the Normal, was doing high school work and paying for it out of my own earnings as a country school teacher.

During my first term at Westminster, however, I learned that the General Assembly of the state had passed a bill requiring every county in the state to have a four-year high school. Though this law had some fine support, it also had many enemies, for public education was regarded by some as only for the ones who could not educate themselves; some people feared that more than the "common-school branches" would make people too aloof from things to work. For years I heard our public high schools placed in almost the same category as our penal institutions. Some counties were very slow about establishing a county high school, and some of the first ones established were in out-of-the-way corners of a county, chiefly because these corners wished to have a good school for their children. Since transportation was out of the question, some of these early county high schools lived and died without ever getting pupils from more than two or three miles away. After some years of drifting and even opposing high schools, many counties got a sort of fever for high schools; every crossroads place wanted one; often it got it. In some counties there were as many as sixteen high schools before consolidation began. With the coming of school buses and the attendant better roads, the small high school began going the way of the one-roomed schools.

The one-room country school, the one so many of my generation remember, was located within easy walking distance of the short-legged youngsters for whom it was built. Thus a county like my native county had approximately a hundred such schools, and even small counties had 60 to 80. Even after consolidation of grade schools started and had had considerable success, I saw one-roomed country schools built, some of them not more than three miles to the next one down the road. For years I felt a very strong attachment to the teacher of the one-roomed school, for it was in such a school, as Fidelity, that I got my educational start, and it was one of this sort that I taught in 1907.

It was not necessary 60 years ago to have a single unit of high school work to be licensed to teach. All you had to do was to pass an examination on the 10 "common-school branches" and some book recommended as a text in theory and practice of teaching. I took an examination and secured a certificate in early 1907; but it was a second-class certificate, showing that my grades were not especially high. Therefore I tried again later in the summer and raised my certificate to a first-class. With it I could have taught any school in the county and, by courtesy, anywhere else in the state. For years after 1908 no further actual grades or credits were required; gradually some high school work was required, but some criticism of this sounded like the old criticisms of public schools. Then we slowly grew to a completion of high school, then one semester in college, and by litters we finally felt that a teacher in our system should be a college graduate, unless he was badly needed and could get a temporary or "emergency" certificate. Meanwhile the smaller schools were gradually disappearing, though (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

I Say What I Think

By S. C. VAN CURON

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Louie B. Nunn's record $2.47 billion budget has money in it for improvements in about all phases of service to the people while education gets the biggest chunk of the general fund with 68.6 percent.

Primary and secondary schools got a $90 million increase for the two-year period while colleges get about $32 million and the teacher retirement fund got a $7 million increase.

Health and Welfare gets a $64 million increase or 17.6 percent of the general fund while Public Safety gets an $8 million increase.

Debt service will take $10.5 million each year while general government consumes only 4.6 percent of the general fund allocation.

Eight Democrats strayed from the fold to join Republicans in voting the governor's tax measure that raises a record $158 million in new revenue, the highest increase in history. It raises the sales tax from three cents to five cents and auto license plates from $5 to $12.50 and becomes effective April 1.

The governor had said earlier that tax collections would have to begin then to tide state government over the last three months in this biennium. The tax increases require no additional expense since the machinery is established that collects these.

Republican senators, in arguing for the bill, said the tax is easy to collect. What tax experts like about the sales tax is that collections are made monthly and it is a steady and sure source of revenue.

Nunn has said that he is going to increase old age assistance payments and other welfare payments by using all federal allocations made for this purpose instead of diverting some of it to operation costs of the Health and Welfare Department.

The road fund in the Highway Department gets an additional $54 million in the budget and he has reduced the amount the department pays into the general fund for administrative costs.

The 16 Democrat Senators voting against the five-cent sales tax were Henry Beach, Mrs.

Democrats voting for the tax and budget were J. D. Buckman, Francis M. Burke, Carl T. Hadden, Sr., Edward A. Murphy, Pearl Strong, Clifford B. Latta, John Raymond Turner and Lawrence W. Weatherby.

Democrats made an effort on an amendment to the budget bill to channel all revenue above $491 million to pay off existing state debt instead of putting it into the capital construction fund as the bill had it. All votes on three amendments and the tax bill were 21-17.

It was apparent early that the Democrats were just wasting their breath in talking against the measures, but they went boldly on establishing a party position for the future.

One Republican House member said the Nunn budget could make or break the Republican Party. He cited the success of former Gov. Bert T. Combs in winning popularity after imposing the three percent sales tax. State services were increased all during the period.

The five-cent sales tax is estimated to bring in an additional $12 million from April 1 to June 1 of this year; $92 million in 1968-69 and $101 million for fiscal year 1969-70.

The $12.50 license for automobiles that goes into effect in 1969 is expected to yield $9.55 million for the first year and $9.35 million the second year.

General Fund revenue is estimated to be $91.5 million the first year and $100.5 the second year.

Workshop Slated Here By High School Press

A series of seven high school yearbook workshops will be sponsored by the Kentucky High School Press Association March 13-26 at the Prestonsburg and other community colleges and at the University of Kentucky.

The workshops will open at the University of Kentucky Student Center Theatre Monday, March 18. Tuesday, the workshop will be held at Ashland Community College; Wednesday, Prestonsburg Community College; Thursday, Somerset Community College; Friday, Northern Community College; Monday, Jefferson Community College, and Tuesday, Paducah Junior College.

Workshop clinicians include Mrs. Jeani Shipman and Steve May of Osborne Photographic Laboratories of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Linda Gassaway, advisor to THE KENTUCKIAN, the University of Kentucky yearbook.

Approximately 500 students and advisors are expected to attend the workshops.

The workshops will focus attention upon elementary principles of yearbooks and will include slides of good and bad yearbook techniques. Students will be given the opportunity to design pages and write copy during two practice sessions.

In each area, a trophy will be awarded to the school having the most improved yearbook on a critique of the last three years' yearbooks submitted for competition.

'WHATSOEVER THINGS'

By DONALD E. WILDMON

Greatness. Everyone, in his own way, seeks it. Few find it. Those who do hardly ever recognize it. And they never misuse it.

We all want to be great. And there's nothing wrong with it. Never has been. Never will be. The mistake comes in the manner in which we seek it. We get it mixed up with fame and fortune and power. Somehow we have come to tie the two together almost unknowingly. We have a lingering thought in the back of our minds that unless we achieve the fame, fortune and power we haven't made it. We aren't great. We are just a nobody. And that's where the Nazarene comes in.

Lots of folks have never realized that one of the basic things that the Galilean does for those whose lives He changes is to put greatness—real greatness—within their reach. They seem to think that all He does is to ruin any chances anyone has of ever achieving greatness. And it all goes to show you how misunderstood the Carpenter is. Far from ruining our chances of achieving greatness, He increases them, many-fold.

You see, real greatness doesn't lie in those things we have always thought it does. Money, fame, power alone cannot make us great. Indeed, we can even achieve greatness without a single one of those ingredients. The real truth about the matter is that those who rank on the horizon of history as great men for the most part lacked those things.

Take Abe Lincoln. Lincoln was a great man. True, Lincoln had some of all three of those ingredients. But he didn't always have them. Early in life, even far into manhood, he lacked all of them. And it wasn't any of those things that made Lincoln great. Not at all. What made Lincoln great was his service. You read it right. His service. Go back and draw a circle around that word and think on it for a minute.

The Carpenter put it this way: "The greatest among you shall be your servant." That's odd, isn't it? Contrary to everything we have ever been taught about greatness. "The greatest among you shall be your servant." It might help some if all our elected officials could catch a glimpse of the wisdom of that statement (and all officials, elected or not, for that matter). What a nation we would have!

You see, it isn't in the method like we have been taught that real greatness comes forth. It is in greatness as the Nazarene taught that true greatness shows forth. And the real always stands head and shoulders above the imitation.

Some of the greatest people who ever lived never made the headlines, never held an office, never owned an acre of land. Some of the greatest people who ever lived were just plain, common, ordinary people whose lives came under the influence of the Fisher of Men. He got His hold on them and He made them great. They became servants—great servants.

That Galilean was a great Man. Great enough to bow low and wash the feet of His fellowmen. You know, I guess we grow tall by bending low.

A five-year program in architecture at the University of Kentucky was established in September, 1960 to meet increasing needs for professionally trained persons in the state.

in some counties the one-roomed schools were numerous until well after World War II. Now there are fewer than 300 in the state, and not one of them in Western Kentucky, from the edges of what is called Appalachia to the Mississippi River. How far a piece we have come in the last 60 years. And yet I hear every day from some one who has been sleeping like Rip Van Winkle that we have lost the good old days and found nothing to take their place. Wake up, Rip!

Floyd county is strange country to many who return after long absences. Things have happened while they have been away. And continue to happen.

These friends who come back home and note the progress made do not have to be told that we're no longer asleep . . . Or that each no longer goes his separate way.

There is a spirit of cooperation that is growing. We need it, and we pledge ourselves to be a part of this community of effort.

The trend is clear!

More than 3 million American homes are heated electrically. The Federal Power Commission forecasts 19 million families will convert to or build electrically heated homes within just 12 years! Why?

Ben Franklin's stoves sold like hotcakes because they were more efficient than an open fire. The pot bellied stove was replaced by central heating systems. Today's big home-heating trend is another vast improvement . . . flameless electric . . . because it offers such a wide choice of systems and so many more advantages that it makes other methods of heating seem clumsy and old-fashioned. More convenient, more comfortable, more versatile, electric heat gives you more for your money. And you can enjoy it now, in your present house. Any home can be converted to clean electric heat, easily and economically. Let us prove it. Call us . . . or mail this coupon.

There's one thing about a cockroach infestation in the house—if you want to beat it, fight them all the time, winter and summer.

But this pest can be defeated. Go after it with proper control measures, and you'll eventually win.

Two species hit homes. One is the German cockroach, tan to brown in color and about three-quarters of an inch long. It likes kitchens, under and around sinks, cupboards, refrigerators, stoves and baseboards, walls, and bathrooms. The brown-banded cockroach is smaller, about a half-inch long, and has dark, reddish-brown bands farther back on its body. It has much of the same habitat as the German, but also likes to put its eggs in higher places such as undersides of tables and chairs, cupboards, cabinets, behind picture frames and clocks. It may show up in any room in the house.

Any one of these insecticides will get either species: Ronnel, Diazinon, DDVP or Malathion. Follow mixing, application and safety directions you'll find on the labels. Check area extension offices in the county for more help.

THE FLOWERING CRABAPPLE

That ornamental, the flowering crabapple, is suitable for almost any type yard. And, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture in its new bulletin, No. 135, "Growing Flowering Crabapples," it is a versatile, useful and popular plant. The bulletin tells how to purchase, plant and care for the plant, as well as how to defend it against diseases and insects.

Flowering crabapples are deciduous (leaf-shedding) trees or shrubs that can be grown in many areas. Some varieties, however, do not grow well where

LONG HUNTERS

Venturesome hunters from Pennsylvania and North Carolina came to Kentucky in bands in the 1700's and found game so plentiful and the skins so valuable that they remained for long periods in the wilderness. Thus they became history's famous Long Hunters.

DIAGNOSTIC CENTER

Kentucky is one of 16 states that use a diagnostic center as part of a program of rehabilitating juvenile delinquents.

winters are mild. The bulletin discusses 19 varieties of flowering crabapples. Gardeners can get the names of varieties suitable for different localities from state agricultural colleges.

Flowering crabapples often do well in poor soil, if the soil is well drained. They should be planted in late winter or early spring and should be mulched with peat moss, bark, or leaves. Mulch should be applied in a layer about three inches deep, and new mulch should be added annually. Crabapples also should be watered weekly during droughts.

Copies of Home and Garden Bulletin No. 135 are available for 20 cents each from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402.
