SLATE TRIAL FOR BARTLEY

Stumbo To Assist In Perry-Co. Trial Set December 2nd

Trial of Curtis Bartley, 50, formerly of Lancer, on a murder charge in connection with the Perry county slaying last Sept. 8 of James Edward Turner, 44, of Wheelwright, has been set for trial in the Perry circuit court at Hazard, December 2. Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo, of this judicial district, will assist the Perry county prosecutor in the trial of the case. The shooting of Turner apparently took place in the vicinity of Vicco while Turner and Bartley occupied the rear seat of an auto driven by a Floyd county woman. The driver told officers she heard a muffled report which she did not at first recognize as a gunshot but that Turner slumped against her and she learned then he had been shot. Policeman Gayther Mullins, of Hazard, said he stopped the car as it was being driven back into Hazard after he had observed its erratic course, and that he was then told a man was being taken to the hospital. At the hospital he found that Turner had been shot and was dead. Perry Commonwealth's Attorney Talbert Combs said Bartley admitted he fired the fatal shot. He has been at liberty under bond, pending trial.

Area EDA Benefits Total $8 Million

The huge investment the Economic Development Administration (EDA) has in the Big Sandy River section of Eastern Kentucky was reviewed at Monday's meeting of the Paintsville County Club of the board of directors and the area council of the Big Sandy Area Development Council, Inc. The speaker for the council dinner session was Allan Pett, chief of the Planning Division, Economic Development Administration, Mid-Eastern Office, Huntington, W. Va. Mr. Pett pointed out that through June, 1968, EDA had made investments in economic improvements totaling approximately $5 million in grants and $3 million in loans in the Big Sandy area. He discussed the importance of area planning and implementation of programs in helping communities to move forward in a desirable fashion. "The greatest assets of the area," Mr. Pett said, "is the civic and political area. Without the appropriate leadership which exist in the leadership no community or area can grow." In the meeting of the board of directors, Dr. George P. Archer, chairman, conducted the election for the coming year. Elected to the board of directors were: Floyd county—Dr. George P. Archer, chairman of the board; County Judge Henry Stumbo, County Attorney Barkley Sturgill, and Paul Gearheart, president of the Harold Telephone Company. Johnson county—O. T. Dorton, treasurer of the board; Paintsville Mayor J. B. Wells, Judge Harry Thomas, and Allan Perry. Pike county—County Judge Bill Pauley, Pikeville Mayor W. C. New Science Curriculum To Be Aired

The innovative science curriculum which has been developed in the schools of Floyd county since June, 1967 has been such a success that it is ready for unfolding to other educators of the area. REPORT NOT ALL BRIGHT

Carter Says Reservoir Increase of Fish Less Than Was Expected. Dewey Lake has about 20 pounds of fish per acre more than ever before, Bernard Carter, director of the Division of Fish, Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, reported a few days ago to William J. Dings, president of the Dewey Lake Fish & Game Club. But, he added, "This is less than we had hoped." The report was made in response to Dings' request for information as to findings made in population surveys following fertilization work done at the lake. Of the fertilization effect, he said the addition of fertilizer helps keep the water clear. "More fish are being caught, the fish are a little bigger on the average, and it takes a little less time to catch a fish than before," the report added. It also was noted that there are a few more bass under 12 inches in the lake, but this, Carter said, is probably because of the 12-inch keeper size limit being imposed and because of better law enforcement. Cable in Ohio Jail, Trial Is Delayed

The murder trial of Ballard Cable, who is accused of the slaying of Howard Tackett, was scheduled for trial in circuit court here Tuesday, but the defendant was unable to be present. He is in jail at Auburn, O., charged with assaulting a peace officer, Sheriff Joe W. Lewis said he was notified. The trial was continued till the January term of court. His failure to appear at that time will result in forfeiture of his $8,000 bond. Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo said. Getting Cable back to Floyd county may present a problem, since Ohio authorities are insisting on his trial there. He was jailed in Ohio last Saturday. The rape charge against Robert Griffith was dismissed Monday when the complaining witness, a 17-year-old Wayland girl, told the court she did not wish to prosecute the case. An earlier trial of the case had resulted in a hung jury. Griffith has a second rape charge to face, and this trial is scheduled for today (Thursday). Billie Joe Harrington won an acquittal at his trial on a charge of shooting and wounding Mack Little. The trial of Frank Hall, accused of shooting at without wounding Estill Goble, ended Wednesday morning when Hall pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless use of a deadly weapon. He was fined $350 and will serve a 30-day jail term, after which he will be placed under probation for a period of one year. Clarence Martin lost his appeal from his quarterly court conviction on a charge of possessing alcoholic beverages for the purpose of sale. A circuit court jury fined him $40 and voted him a 30-day jail term. Indictments of three persons were dismissed Wednesday when those involved in the neighborhood row which precipitated a Left Beaver shoot-out agreed to settle their differences peaceably. Defendants were Ark Isaac, Tommy Isaac and Mazie Hall. Ark Isaac was accused of shooting and wounding Gordon Hall. Tommy Isaacs, in turn, was named in the wounding of Ark Isaacs. Mrs. Hall was indicted on a charge of shooting at without wounding Tommy.

The Floyd County Service Unit of Area 4, Wilderness Road Girl Scout Council, met November 14 at the Regional Library here. Adult leaders from Maytown joined the leaders from Prestonsburg to discuss coming activities for Girl Scouts in this area.

Plans were made to participate in the Christmas Parade sponsored by the Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club. The girls will be entered as a single unit in this year's parade. Again this year, the Girl Scouts from the county will have a "carol sing" around the community Christmas tree in Prestonsburg. Each girl is asked to bring one good, used toy to be given to a needy child in the area. The girls did this last year, and toys collected were given to the Welfare Department to supply toys for foster children placed in this area. This year, the girls are inviting any person who has toys they would like to give to join them around the Christmas tree for this singing. The "carol sing" will be held Saturday, December 7 at noon.

The next meeting of the Service Unit will be held Thursday, December 5. Any adult leader who failed to attend the last meeting is asked to attend to complete plans for the "carol sing."

University and regarded as one of the nation's top teachers, makes periodic visits to the county for an on-the-spot view of the work.

Floyd county teachers were trained on-campus for the new program, which was designed to serve as a model to other school systems. For the first time science materials and equipment are found in all of the county's elementary classrooms. The equipment includes balanced aquariums, equal-arm balances, number lines, two-and-three-dimensional shapes and metric measuring instruments.

Clem Martin, supervisor of curriculum and teacher training, Floyd county schools, assesses the program.

"This is the best elementary science program I have observed. I was convinced that our children could profit from this approach. They are actively involved, learning by handling, seeing, tasting, doing, not merely by reading or by being told."

Mr. Martin explained that teachers have confidence in teaching science, using the new approach, and that their pupils aren't frustrated. They begin studying science in the first grade, and the study continues until they leave the grades.

The first session began at 10 a.m. today, with Superintendent of Schools Charles Clark welcoming the group, Dr. Jackson making announcements and Dr. McCullough, the speaker. At the second general session at the park, from 1 to 3 p.m., Dr. McCullough again will speak. A banquet will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. today at the Plantation Motel. Wayne Ratliff, assistant superintendent of Floyd schools, will be master of ceremonies. Clem Martin will be moderator of a panel discussion to follow the banquet, from 7 to 8 p.m.

Friday morning, classroom observation of the New Science Process Approach will begin at 9:30 at the Clark elementary school, with a discussion period scheduled at the school from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.

The afternoon session, from 1 to 3 p.m. at Archer Park will be featured by Dr. McCullough's summary of the conference.

In Memory of Floyd Robinson, who passed away one year ago, November 18, 1968:

One sad and lonely year Have passed since you went away.

The shock still lingers in our hearts, As we miss you more each day, When evening shadows are falling.

In our heart then comes a longing, If you could only be at home, They say time heals all sorrow and help us forget.

But time has only proved how much we miss you, Yet as we wander to your grave, we ask our Heavenly Father our burdens to help us bear.

The midnight stars are shining upon a lonely grave. Beneath it sleeps our loved one. He no one could save in the stillness of the midnight, our tears will often flow.

To think just how you left us one sad, lonely year ago. Sadly missed by

The Louisa Carpet Mills, the only major industry at Louisa, opened in August, 1966 with a payroll of 40. It now has 135 employees and plans to hire 60 more when the expansion work is finished, bringing the annual payroll to nearly $1.2 million.

Chevrolet's got a big surprise for the guy who'd buy a sports car if only it had more room. It's the Impala SS 427.

Like all Impalas, it comes with a 119-inch wheelbase, Astro Ventilation and full door-glass styling. Like all Chevy Sportsters, it comes with a beefed-up suspension and grabby red-stripe wide oval tires. Under the hood, it's more of the same. We tucked in a 427-cubic-inch 390-horsepower Turbo-Jet V8.

That means it's the kind of car you can take for a workout even if you're just going to work.

There's driving excitement in these other packages too: Corvette

Stingray, Chevelle SS 396, Camaro SS, Camaro Z/28 and Nova SS. Vaaaarrrroooooomm! Listen for it at your Chevy dealer's Sports Shop.

Judges of Region Eye A-Blast Plan

Floyd County Judge Henry Stumbo, as well as judges of other counties in Eastern Kentucky, will need to be convinced the blasting by atomic device of a cavern in the region for gas storage is safe before he will give it his approval.

"If it's necessary and safe, I could go along with it," Judge Stumbo said this week. "I would first want to be sure it wouldn't damage property or hurt our people."

Similar reactions were heard elsewhere after Columbia Gas System officials had said last week that the Kentucky mountain region and others are being considered for creation of a deep underground cavern in which gas piped in from Texas and elsewhere would be stored.

By detonating a low yield atomic device more than a half-mile below the surface, according to the announcement, a chamber large enough to store 465 million cubic feet of gas under pressure would be created.

Judge James Caudill, of Letcher county, said he is concerned that the project would "not be to our best interest."

"I don't like to oppose anything unless I am qualified to speak, and I know next to nothing about this," Judge Caudill said.

"On the other hand, my position is that I couldn't go along with the idea unless I knew a great deal more about it."

"It's the radiation threat that scares me. I remember all those sheep dying out in New Mexico after an underground atomic blast out there. It sounds dangerous to me, and I can't see how it would help our region. The gas would be stored not for our use but to be piped out to the company's customer as it is needed."

Pike County Judge Bill Pauley said he isn't as concerned about radiation as he is about the possibility of disturbing the crusty earth underlying the mountains. "This sort of thing might touch off some tremors that would weaken the subsurface and drop us down a foot or two," he said.

"Actually, though, I know too little about the proposal to assess it. I would have to know a great deal more about the possibility of damage to property before I could comment intelligently."

Johnson County Judge Harry Thomas said he figured that anyone attempting such a project would "know what they are doing."

"If it would help the economy, I would be glad to go along with it," he said. "But right now I know very little about it."

Perry County Judge Harve Hensley said he, too, would have to be convinced that "everything would be all right."

"They (gas company officials) said we would be helped," he said. "but what I want to know is, would we be hurt?"

Berea and Pikeville Colleges Win Grant

Two colleges in Kentucky's Appalachian region, Berea and Pikeville, will share in a $29,360 federal grant to develop programs geared to the needs of their rural, mountain communities.

The U. S. Department of Labor funds, which also go to Marshall University in Huntington, W. Va., will be used to start community development courses at the three colleges. The colleges in turn will organize workshops for neighboring colleges.

Joint committees from the faculty, administration and student body of each college will participate in the project. The grant was developed through the Labor Department's Coalition for Youth Action, a group of recently hired young interns.

Pike Jury Assails Water Pollution Unit

The Pike county grand jury Friday criticized the Kentucky Water Pollution Commission for allegedly failing to take action against those who pollute streams in the county.

The jury, in its final report, said that 75 percent of the wells in Pike county are highly polluted, adding that "it is fully within the power and authority of the commission to penalize those who deliberately and flagrantly violate the law."

The jury said that practically every member of the commission is appointed by the governor and "if they don't do their duty, they should be fired immediately."

TIDITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

FIVE LIFETIMES

In anticipation of my eightieth birthday, October 14, 1968, I did a lot of juggling of historical dates, for, after all, 80 years is a pretty long time. One of the first things I thought of was this: in only five lifetimes like mine America has been settled; no wonder to Europeans, with their hundreds of years of history, our country seems quite youthful. Suppose we look back at these five lifetimes, beginning now.

In 1838, when I arrived, Grover Cleveland was near the end of his first term as President; some three weeks later he was defeated by Benjamin Harrison. Of our present 50 states only 38 had been admitted to the Union, and one of our present states—Hawaii—was not even a part of the United States and would not be for another 10 years. Only 11 years before my birth the last troops were recalled from the South, and there were hundreds of veterans of the Civil War who were still in the 40's, as young as the youngest fellows now living who were a part of World War II. And of the American writers whom I was to spend a half century studying and teaching, these stalwarts were still alive: Whittier, Holmes, Lowell, Whitman and Melville. And Queen Victoria, who had come to the throne in 1837, had 13 more years to reign.

In 1808, the second step back, Thomas Jefferson was President. Also 1808 saw the publication of the first volume of AMERICAN ORNITHOLOGY, by a Scotch weaver named Alexander Wilson, who had come to America to make his way, had turned schoolteacher, and then had decided to bring out a huge study of all the birds of America. His life and works were to be the subject of my doctor's thesis 120 years later. And my oldest grandfather-to-be was two years old, back in North Carolina and would be going with his family caravan, a few years later, to Middle Tennessee, and, when the Jackson Purchase was opened for settlement in 1819, as pioneers in what is now Calloway county.

It is a big jump to 1728. Cotton Mather was the great man of New England then, and a runaway boy named Benjamin Franklin was already on his way at Philadelphia. And Georgia, the last of the thirteen colonies, was still five years in the future. And it would be 22 more years before a certain Zaccheus Wilson would be landing in America with his big family, seven boys of whom would be in a certain war that started in 1775.

It is hard to realize that the next jump backwards would put us in 1648, with Charles I sitting in prison awaiting execution in the very next year. And a host of people from eastern England were settled in the eastern part of America in such colonies as Plymouth, Massachusetts Bay, Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Hampshire.

One more jump, and we are back in England, where Elizabeth I, or THE ELIZABETH until 1592, was on the throne of England. And away down in Florida was a small settlement, made by the Spaniards in 1565, that has come down in history as the oldest permanent settlement in the whole eastern part of America.

There you are—five lifetimes—but they stretch from 1568 to 1968, from before William Shakespeare was ever heard of to a time when a good deal is being heard of Charles De Gaulle and Lyndon Johnson and several other persons. It almost makes a fellow want to page some of the elder prophets and hold a chat with them about how time flies. And Dr. Leakey's Zinjanthropus might be invited to sit in the circle and frown occasionally at the young upstarts who think they know something about time.

Marion Fannin had the last laugh.

"Some of my friends laughed when I told them I was saving money with electric heat... 'til I showed them my bills. The total of my gas and electric bills used to cost me more than I'm now paying for just my electric bill with electric heat. We've found electric heat to be less expensive—and we're getting more comfortable and convenient heat for less money"... Marion Fannin of Ashland, Ky. has lots of company. The switch to flameless electric heat is breaking all records because, in Marion Fannin's words, "it's so much better—and it's costing us less than our old heat." Your home can be switched to electric heat. Let us—or your Reddy Kilowatt Recommended Dealer—show you how little it can cost. Get a free estimate.

Nature Trails By RUFUS M. REED

Nature has many special ways for drying, preserving and keeping all kinds of berries, nuts, seeds and small fruits safe and sound for wildlife to eat during winter. She sends the brisk, fall winds to dry the water out of berries, grapes and other kinds of fruits and then they hang lightly on the branches, awaiting the birds and animals to come for the banquet. She freezes many kinds of food and puts them in cold storage to preserve them. Freezing the acorns sweetens them and removes their bitter taste. Nature covers acorns and seeds with a blanket of leaves to protect them; the animals know how to probe in the leaves and find the acorns and seeds. The white oak acorns are devoured greedily by the Virginia deer, and these animals often get to them ahead of the squirrels and rob them of their winter supply for hoarding.

Nature also puts her berries in vivid colors so the birds and animals can find them. The dogwood berries are bright red and hang on the branches far into the winter, furnishing food for squirrels and over 50 species of birds. Many of us abhor vines like the greenbrier, which forms almost impenetrable and fears the clothing which we try to go through. Yet the greenbrier is one of the best sources of food for winter birds; its bluish-black berries are eaten by many species.

The wild rose bears red, rosy berries called "rose hips," which stay on the plants through the winter and are eaten by grouse, cardinals and many other kinds of birds. The rose hips are rich in Vitamin C.

The pokeberry plants should be protected and left to grow on every farm. Their berries are well dried and preserved by nature as one of the finest winter foods for birds and animals. Foxes dine on pokeberries, so do the bluebirds, cedar waxwings and about 50 other species.

The holly tree should be better protected for its role in helping to feed wildlife over the winter. Its showy clusters of red berries cover the branches and are a prized food of cedar waxwings, cardinals, bluebirds, titmice and over 35 species. Too many people are inclined to almost ruin the holly tree at Christmastime, to get the sprigs of red berries. They cut and break the boughs and leave the tree mutilated and torn. The holly tree deserves better protection. Only the female holly produces the red berries, and when these are destroyed, there will be no more berries for winter birds.

The Russian olive, which is being planted in many parks, produces red berries which are fine food for birds. The berries are eaten by the ring-necked pheasants, the evening grosbeaks, cardinals and other birds.

The red cedars, which are jumpers, produce a large blue berry, which is eagerly sought for eating by over 50 species of birds. The bluebirds and cedar waxwings are specially fond of the blue berries.

The Virginia creeper, which some persons call "sour vine," trails up the sides of cliffs and to the tops of high trees and produces bluish-black berries which are eaten by over 50 species of birds. Some persons call this vine the "woodbine;" its leaves turn to a brilliant rosy-purple in the fall, and each leaf has five leaflets, a big help to know it from poison ivy, which always has three leaflets. Woodpeckers are quite fond of the berries of Virginia creeper, and so are some other birds.

The beautiful black gum tree, which some call the "sour gum," or "tupelo," plays an important double role in feeding wildlife. It produces a bounteous crop of bluish-black berries, which are prized as food by the robins, mourning doves, cardinals and and gray squirrels. This tree also plays host to the parasitic plant which poets call "the pale-green, fairy mistletoe." The mistletoe bears pulpy, white, one-seed berries or drupes, which are eaten by many birds in winter. The berries are sticky and birds often have to wipe-off their bills when eating them, and this is how they help to spread the mistletoe plants.

Nature dries out the pine cones and they hang on the branches sometimes for years. The small seeds are extracted from the cones by many birds as winter food. Chickadees know how to open the cone scales and get the seeds; the beautiful red crossbill bird lives in pine forests and has its bill crossed for the express purpose of opening the scales of cones to get the seeds to eat.

Nature preserves nuts like beechnuts by covering them with spiny hulls; animals and birds know how to open the hulls and get the delicious nuts. One-winged seeds of the tulip poplars stay on the trees until late winter and furnish food to both animals and birds.

FUQUA INDUSTRIES BUY WARD MANUFACTURING CO.

Fuqua Industries, Inc. and Ward Manufacturing, Inc. this week announced the signing of an agreement for the acquisition of Ward by Fuqua.

Ward, which operates a plant at Salyersville, is the country's largest manufacturer of camper trailers under its Nimrod brand name, and also is sole producer for Sears, Roebuck & Co. It also manufactures El Dorado pickup campers, travel trailers, motor-homes, recreational accessories related to its products, and semi-trailer landing gears. Ward's sales for its last fiscal year were approximately $18 million.

The acquisition is for an undisclosed number of shares of Fuqua stock. E. D. Kenna, president of Fuqua, said that Ward will operate as a wholly-owned subsidiary of Fuqua under present management at all present plants. Ward, which was founded by Mr. Ward in 1951, employs approximately 800 at plants located in Ohio, California, Kentucky, Kansas and Brussels, Belgium.

Fuqua Industries, which recently projected its 1968 sales at over $200 million, compared with $60 million in 1967, also has operations in the fields of mobile homes, pre-engineered metal buildings, land clearing and dredging equipment, rain storage equipment, and motor freight. It recently announced that it was acquiring Trojan Seed Company, a producer of seed grain. The acquisition of Paeemaker Corporation, the nation's second largest builder of boats, was consummated by Fuqua last Friday. The Ward acquisition is the 18th announced by Fuqua in 1968.

PROFESSIONAL NEGOTIATION PACT IS DEVELOPED BY KEA

The Kentucky Education Association (KEA) Commission on Professional Negotiation (PN) has developed a "suggested" professional negotiation agreement for the use of local education associations in the state.

The suggested agreement is based on principles set forth in the PN law that KEA will seek in 1970 under mandate of the KEA Delegate Assembly. The PN law is the same act that overwhelmingly passed the House in 1968 but did not reach the Senate floor in time for a vote before adjournment.

Copies of the suggested local agreement are being mailed to local association presidents, chairmen of PN committees, and other officials.

In an accompanying letter PN Commission chairman, Mrs. Helen Hubbard, of Hodgenville, writes:

"Since local needs vary, the PN Commission urges local associations to adapt the enclosed document to their own purposes. But the basic framework of the suggested agreement is strongly recommended by the PN Commission."

The suggested agreement provides for recognition of a local association as exclusive representative of certificated personnel in a school district, negotiation procedures, and two-stage resolution of impasse through the use of (1) an individual mediator and (2) a three-member fact finding panel. Local PN agreements with all three of the provisions are known as Level III agreements.

Subjects open to negotiation and agreement under the document are curriculum, in-service training, grievance procedures, personnel matters, salaries and salary schedules, employee benefits, working conditions, and other matters that affect the quality of the educational program.

Fourteen local education associations currently have Level III PN agreements with their boards of education.

Such agreements are operative in the Louisville, Daviess county, Lincoln county, Wayne county, Monticello, Fort Campbell, Jefferson county, Pike county, Calloway county, Erlanger-Elsmere, Pikeville, McCracken county, Gallatin county, and Trigg county school systems.

Special Children... Special Education

By RICHARD D. HOWARD, Director, Special Education, Pikeville College

Although it is a bit early to mention it, mark your calendars for December 7.

That date, the Department of Special Education is bringing to the Pikeville College campus Bill Braley, an expert in the body-management or sensory-motor area. Any teacher or parent of handicapped children would benefit from this workshop. It is for the one day only (9 a.m. until 2:30 p.m.) and there is no fee. If you want to eat at the college cafeteria, you will need to drop us a line to that effect.

Other people who can benefit from this workshop are: elementary teachers, head-start personnel, administrators, early childhood education and physical education people.

May I tell you about a service that has been available for many years to the blind of the country and is now available to other handicapped. It is the Talking Book Service. This is the record player and recorded books.

These machines and books on record have been used many years by the blind. Congress has recently ruled that any physically handicapped person who is not definitely retarded may use these supplies. They can be obtained by writing to me or to Kentucky Industries for the Blind, Talking Book Department, 2005 Frankfort Avenue, Louisville, Ky. 40206. There are no charges, not even postage. The talking books are mailed, free of charge both ways.

HOW TO DEVELOP A PROBLEM CHILD (A time-tested recipe)

Take any child at any time, and:

1. Ridicule his mistakes, remain indifferent to his small successes, and laugh when he confides his perplexities and ambitions;
2. Attempt to enforce standards that few human beings can attain;
3. Spur him on to realize your THWARTED ambitions by excessive praise or by unfavorable comparison with other children;
4. Teach him by telling him what not to do, give him no assistance when he first faces the problems of social adjustment to other children, and let him discover for himself what is needed for satisfactory vocational, marital, and parental adjustments;
5. Indocinate him with the symptoms of your own inadequacy—your prejudices and obvious embarrassments;

6. Keep him insecure and at constant tension by your uncertain and unpredictable reactions to his behavior;
7. Invite his disrespect and resentment by emotional scenes, absurd threats, and unreasonable punishments;
8. Refuse to recognize his increasing needs for self-expression, responsibility, and independence of thought and action;
9. Dominate him by sheer force, either physical or emotional;
10. Force him into a career for which he has no aptitude, and, consequently, for which he has a strong dislike;

AND HE will resolve that every hand is turned against him, that he can trust in no one, and that he must build for himself a social reserve in self-defense;

OR HE will turn for companionship, confidence, understanding and guidance to street friendships which lead to secretive adventures. THEN your "Problem" child is prepared. SERVE to a distraught community. The left-overs can be mixed with anything at hand to make a common up-to-date offering—"problem parents." This recipe can be used over and over again.

—Julius Yourman, Ph.D.

Pikeville Conference To Study Problems Of Region Children

Problems of black and white children living in the Appalachian region will come under scrutiny at Pikeville, November 29-December 1 at Pikeville College at the Conference on Equal Educational Opportunity for Children of Appalachia.

The Kentucky Education Association (KEA) will be a co-sponsor of the conference, along with the Center for Human Relations, a recently formed unit of the National Education Association (NEA), and state education of Tennessee, Virginia and North Carolina.

Senator Jennings Randolph (D-W. Va.) will deliver the keynote address, discussing the role of the federal government in responding to the Appalachian area's educational needs.

Also addressing the 450 delegates will be Harry Caudill, Whitesburg, attorney, former state legislator, and author of "Night Comes to the Cumberland," an analysis of the region's social and economic problems.

The conference is the sixth in a series of NEA-sponsored meetings aimed at drawing national attention to some aspect of civil and human rights in education.

What Lies Ahead for Magoffin Dam?

Will the dam proposed for the Licking River valley in Magoffin county and the plan for a brand-new town and general development of the area get off the drawing board?

What will be the chances for this giant Appalachian development, now that President Johnson is on his way out and since the Appalachian program may be permitted by the next President, Richard M. Nixon, either to die or to go into a steady decline?

These are questions asked by planners and residents of the area alike, these days.

The Courier-Journal last Sunday reviewed the Magoffin county plan, which is designed to benefit adjoining counties. It pointed out, in part:

The project, in the words of one government review board, represents a "radical departure" from the dam-building economic Congress and the corps usually employ. If it works, it will be a showpiece for the nation. If it doesn't work, well, it will be a very expensive experiment for the taxpayers.

Now, probably a lot of people in Salyersville, the county seat of Magoffin county, think that the dam is being planned to protect them. Salyersville, a community of 1,200, sits on a serpentine curve of the Licking, and nearly every year the river leaves a muddy bathtub ring through the main part of town.

The Corps of Engineers, however, cannot justify building a dam just to solve Salyersville's flood problems. The whole project requires a main dam on the Licking 12 miles upstream and three smaller dams on nearby tributaries, plus some channel straightening and clearing. It would cost $37 million in all.

That's a lot more than the whole town is worth.

Salyersville, land and buildings, is valued for taxes at only $5.4 million. It would be cheaper to build a new Salyersville on high ground somewhere else than it would be to build the necessary flood protection.

Under the old rules, this arithmetic would have killed the proposal before it even got to Congress. But the corps and the Appalachian Commission have pursued the Salyersville project under a broader principle—that the large public investment can be justified in part by the economic growth it will generate. Thus, the vision of a "new town" with factories and new jobs becomes part of the cost-benefit ratio.

In this case, the flood-control structures would free some 1,800 bottomland acres from annual inundation. By mountain standards, that would be abundant space for new industry and homes. In Eastern Kentucky, one of the major obstacles to economic development is the shortage of flat land that is free from flooding.

If the new reservoir provides a good water supply and protects the river valley from floods, then good times should follow.

That is the theory behind the Salyersville project. The next Congress will be asked to authorize it. If the precedent is accepted and tests out, at least 20 other projects in the Appalachian region would be enhanced by this broad-scale perspective. Some of these are feasible anyway; others are marginal and probably couldn't be justified without considering the potential economic growth as part of the public benefit.

The basic concept—justifying public investments by the resulting economic growth—is not at all revolutionary. The same concept launched the great public works of the Tennessee Valley Authority a generation ago. It lies behind everything that the Appalachian program has in mind. The Appalachian agency already is building new highways through the mountains, not to serve existing traffic, but to create new traffic—drawing people and commerce to isolated communities.

But will it work? If Congress authorizes it, the Magoffin county experiment will provide a stern test of the experts' faith in Appalachia's future. The most troublesome problems and the promising theories are all there. They boil down to two considerations:

1. The planners' projections envision remarkable economic growth for the river valley if only the physical obstacles to industrial development are removed. Is that a realistic assumption?

2. The conservatives who oppose federal aid programs such as Appalachian development usually invoke bromides about self-help—the government cannot help someone unless they want to help themselves.

In the case of Salyersville, the warning seems appropriate. The community's past performance in self-improvement with the aid of the federal government has been, according to one official, "a case of poor management."

To be candid, Salyersville is not regarded as one of the most promising "growth centers" in the Appalachian development scheme.

A town of homes and small businesses, ranging from modest to dingy, it has functioned as a county seat and a limited trading center and not much else. A new trailer assembly factory was opened on a site filled to raise it above flood level. Aside from that and some coal mining, farming is the main employment.

Col. John Lee, the Corps of Engineers official who has quarterbacked the project, concedes that some people questioned his choice of Salyersville as a place to demonstrate the new approach.

"The wise guys said, 'Salyersville? Oh, my God, why Salyersville?'" Lee recalled. His answer is: "There are very, very few communities in Appalachia which can react—I don't say will react—can react as dramatically as Salyersville."

In other words, the potential is great if the people of the area will live up to their end of the bargain.

The Appalachian Commission, as its states' director John Whisman puts it, "looks at what Salyersville can be—not what it is now."

And Whisman added this basic article of faith: "Salyersville is one of the few places where we can do something. It almost gets down to a syllogism—we're going to try to do something, so we're going to try to do it where we can."

In that perspective, Magoffin county has several things going for it that are not available to every sleepy mountain town. These are considered the key physical prerequisites for industrial growth.

One is good access to outside markets. The Mountain Parkway, thanks to former Gov. Bert T. Combs from neighboring Floyd county, runs right across the middle of the county. The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad has rail lines to haul out coal.

Another asset is the labor supply. When the trailer factory opened, more than 500 people from Magoffin and surrounding counties applied for the 100 or so jobs. The planners figure that any new industry can draw on a six-county area for hard-working, trainable employees.

There's a vocational-technical school at nearby Paintsville to turn out skilled workers.

The dam on the Licking and the three smaller dams would add two other vital ingredients—an abundant water supply and 1,800 acres of level, flood-free land along the riverbanks. Without the dam, these are grave handicaps.

John Leslie, an official of Spindletop Research, Inc., in Lexington, which made the basic economic projections, said the bright forecast of new plants and businesses assumes that the nation will continue to pursue a full-employment economic policy.

That means continued economic expansion and economic expansion will depend on where the labor is.

"That trainable work force in Eastern Kentucky is going to be your magnet," Leslie said. "You've got the access, you've got the labor supply, then you remove the bottlenecks to development—the flat land and the available water. Then that area can compete with other areas for new plants."

From this logic, Spindletop analysis drew a statistical portrait of how Magoffin county can expect to grow over the next 50 years—the increased jobs, wages, taxes and private investments which will justify the public expenditures on the dam.

Leslie insists that the calculations were on the conservative side, but that is a matter of viewpoint. Surely, they will not seem conservative to those who have seen the frustrations of small mountain towns trying to grow.

In the next 50 years, according to the Spindletop study, the river valley can be developed

Now Volkswagen brings lasting relief to left feet.

Thanks to a new miracle ingredient in our little car called the automatic stick shift, you can finally say goodbye to the clutch pedal. How does this new ingredient work?

Two ways.

First, it provides continuous unemployment for your left foot. Second, it provides near unemployment for your right hand. (The only time you ever shift is when you go over 55 mph.)

Yet, even with its new ways, the bug continues to uphold the old ways.

It takes only small amounts of oil. Absolutely no water. And absolutely no antifreeze.

Best of all, it still delivers about 25 miles to a gallon of gas. Don't you feel relieved already?
