'Recount' of Vote Follows Primary

No Change In Results Is Effected

Two Nominees Gain 100 Votes Each; One Loses 8 in Recheck

A check of the voting machines asked by 13 candidates after last Tuesday's primary election was completed by the election commissioners Tuesday afternoon, with the standing of no candidate altered.

Four errors were found in the tabulation but none affected the election result. Two primary winners gained 100 votes each, another lost eight votes and one loser lost five.

In Ivel precinct T. P. (Tim) Reynolds, nominee for Representative in District 96, gained 100 votes when the machine showed his total to be 167 instead of the 67 reported in the tabulation. Harold Stumbo, nominee for Commonwealth's Attorney, gained 100 votes in Clear Creek precinct, raising his total there from 94 tabulated to the 194 shown on the machine.

2 ARRESTED BY RAIDERS

Traffic Violations Receive Attention Through Week-End

Two ABC agents, with Constable Ted H. Saltsburg and Martin Chief D. Pollock, arrested two Middle Creek men last week in simultaneous raids made at two different points.

Fielden Bolen was booked at the county jail on charges of possession and selling intoxicants. Two cans of beer and less than a half-pint of vodka were found on his premises after he allegedly had sold beer to an ABC agent. Also confiscated by the officers were a .20-gauge shotgun and 12 sticks of dynamite with fuse.

The officers reported confiscating two fifths of wine, 17 half-pints of whiskey and 102 cans of beer found in the auto of Fred Newsome. He was not booked here.

Traffic violations resulted in most arrests made during the holiday week-end. Those arrested and the charges lodged against them:

Hershel Shepherd, reckless driving, arrested by Sheriff Lewis and Deputies Newsome and Martin; Wallace Farley, operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicants, by State Trooper Flora and Capt. Lykins; Bobby Ray Hancock and Adron Newsome, driving while under the influence of intoxicants, booked by State Trooper Brenner; Norman Banner Hamilton, grand larceny (auto) and driving while under the influence, arrested by Lt. Sword and Trooper Bevins; Tommy Cole, no operator's license, by Trooper Bevins; Clyde K. Prater, driving while under the influence of intoxicants, jailed by Prestonsburg Policemen Ray Click and Girvin Waddles; Stephen A. Knowles, driving while under the influence, by Trooper Bevins; Curtis Warrick, hit-run driving, arrested by Trooper Michael D. Angel.

This Town . . . That World

Robert Hicks, of Dickson, Tenn., who was a visitor here last Thursday, says the only thing wrong with Tennessee is — it ain't Floyd county. Prediction: Bob will be back.

WASTED EFFORT

This sex education in the schools is a costly duplication of effort, among other things. With Sexual Education TV staring them in the face and sexual movies and books to lead them along as they grow older, why pay mere mortals such as teachers to introduce the dealings to the subject? Besides, teachers use "big" words that might mystify these youngsters. Leave it to those who make it so simple with those four-letter words you hear and see so frequently from less academic sources.

FACTS OF LIFE IN THE ADS

Confined to a base well inland most of the time, these days, I've unforfeited a habit I forewent several months back. I've taken again to reading those magazines wherein nobody but Ed Zern ever failed to catch his limit of fish or bag a limit of quail, ground-hogs, alligators or whatever was being hunted.

So it is that, just now, I've turned to the advertisements with an idea of, maybe, picking up a choice lot, 40 miles from nowhere in the Canadian bush by merely paying taxes due. And now the old eye falls (oops! how careless of me to drop it!) on an ad which implores the reader to buy 25 seahorses for only $2.25. I read on and am impressed by how frank and elemental even the ads are. For instance:

"Keep these fascinating pets in a jar or bowl. See the father (male) . . . give birth to live, cute ponies. Order two mated pairs (4) and receive one pregnant male free who will give birth to 20 babies. (Total, 25 seahorses for only $2.25)"

"Or another: "See the miracle of birth. All you have to do is order a 'chick-bator' and six quail eggs and sit back and watch, $4.98"

The ad conveniently fails to consider what a miracle you'll miss if the blessed event should take place around, say, 3 a.m. Perhaps the surest way of getting in on the act would be to throw the 'chick-bator' out the window and sit on the eggs yourself.

Then, to add frosting to the cake, there's another ad — and it's about raising rabbits.

Report Says Oversize White Bass at Dewey Are Really Rockfish

A few fish caught in Dewey Lake and in Johns Creek, below the dam, were at first considered oversize white bass but now are known to have been the rockfish which were introduced to the lake almost three years ago.

Dean Murray, damtender, said Monday he knew of five such fish which ranged in length from 18 to 21 inches. Their size caused curiosity and investigation showed, he reported, that these were rockfish which were stocked as fry in the lake in the autumn of 1966. It was said identification had been made with the assistance of personnel of the Division of Fish.

Bernard Carter, head of the Division of Fish, was not available for the development. Earlier, fisheries personnel in population studies had failed to find any trace of the rockfish in the impoundment. The rockfish, or ocean striped, was first found in fresh water in the Ross-Santee reservoir in South Carolina. Later, it was introduced to other lakes. Cumberland Lake was the scene of one such experiment. The rockfish that were planted there have survived, but they have not reproduced. This species was trapped in the Ross-Santee reservoir when they left salt water for the river to spawn and were trapped by the dam across the stream.

The Division of Fish this month will resume for the third consecutive year fertilization of Dewey Lake, with the assistance of the U. S. Corps of Engineers. The tentative schedule calls for fertilizing to be done, the full length of the impoundment, on June 10, June 24, July 9, July 23 and Aug. 12.

'Hearing' Slated On Welfare Needs

In Frankfort last week with the intention of staging a "sit-in" if not granted audience with Governor Nunn, Floyd and other welfare recipients' groups decided, instead, to schedule a public hearing June 20 — possibly on the Capitol steps — to "bring to the attention of the public conditions under which people on welfare are living."

The meeting was announced shortly after 40 welfare recipients met with Gov. Louie B. Nunn and Economic Security Commissioner Merritt S. Deitz Jr. to air their grievances about the welfare program.

Mike Miller, Covington, a member of the group that spent the day in Frankfort, said details of the meeting have not been worked out. About 1,000 people are expected to attend, he said. "But we want to go into the whole program, specifically the coming out in funds," Miller said. The "cut" is an impending federal freeze that could force Kentucky to reduce payments to families with dependent children. The freeze would limit the payment of federal funds for the Aid to Families of Dependent Children (AFDC) program.

Under the freeze, states wouldn't receive matching funds for any increases in the AFDC caseload caused by desertion or absence of the father that exceeded the increase in their general child population.

During a 30-minute meeting with Nunn, Miller, 19, also asked that welfare benefits be raised to 100 per cent of "needs" instead of 86 per cent. AFDC payments are determined under a formula that provides recipients with 86 per cent of their "needs" for food, clothing and shelter.

Nunn reminded the group that the welfare program is supported largely by federal funds, and "all we do is dispense the money the (See Story No. 3, Page 6)

SLATEFALL KILLS HALL

Delmar Hall, Victim In Mud Creek Mine; Was Mine Manager

Delmar Hall, 43, of McDowell, was instantly killed Tuesday afternoon by a slatefall in the Ligon Preparation Plant Mine No. 1 at Teaberry, on Mud Creek.

Mr. Hall, manager of the mine, was changing bits of a continuous mining machine when the fall came, pinning his head and body against the machine. The accident occurred at 1:30 p.m.

The victim was a son of Mrs. Nancy Gibson Hall, of McDowell, and the late Johnny (Long Johnny) Hall. He was a member of Joppa Regular Baptist Church at Melvin and of local Union 8100, United Mine Workers. He was an Army veteran and saw service on Okinawa.

Survivors include his mother, his widow, Mrs. Violet (Chick) Stumbo Hall; three sons, Tommy, Barry and Stevie, all of McDowell; two brothers, Hargus Hall, McDowell, and Elmer Hall, Detroit, Mich., and three sisters, Mrs. S. T. Wright, Thornton, Ky., Mrs. Ray Turner, of Drift, and Mrs. Sam Maggard, Las Cruces, New Mexico.

The funeral will be conducted at 10 a.m. Friday from Joppa Regular Baptist Church, Melvin, ministers of that church officiating. Burial will be made in the Buckingham cemetery under direction of the Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

Floyd Miners Ask U.S. Compensation

Three former Floyd coal miners and a fourth from Johnson county were in Washington Wednesday to urge legislation to provide workmen's compensation under federal law for miners not covered by state compensation law.

Two of the former miners, Clarence Thornberry, of Bypro, and Robert Kendrick, of Melvin, told a house labor subcommittee they received state workmen's compensation but had to pay lawyers about 20 per cent of their total award.

Kermit Clark, of Weeksbury, said he had been unable to get compensation and Earl Dale, of Hager Hill, said he had been turned down but has asked for a hearing on an appeals court.

Tom Roney, of Pikeville, a former United Mine Workers official, said pneumoconiosis, or black lung, is not eligible by name for workmen's compensation in Kentucky but that the state workmen's compensation board, learning more about the disease, has become more liberal and has made some awards.

Roney said federal legislation is needed because in most states victims of black lung are excluded by the statute of limitations or by overly restrictive definitions of the disease. He also said that in many instances state compensation payments are too low.

Thornberry estimated that some 200 men who now have black lung are still working in the mines in his home area because they must make a living.

Congressman Carl Perkins, chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, and Rep. Dominick Daniels, D-N. J., chairman of the subcommittee on labor, expressed their opinion that Congress will enact a law this year to provide workmen's compensation for miners not covered by state compensation.

Wilderness Road Girl Scout Council recently awarded Certificates of Appreciation to several coal industry leaders for outstanding support of the Girl Scout program and, in particular, for contributions toward the development of Camp Chatterawha on Dewey Lake. Gearheart Gun Victim Last Week

Orville Moore Waives Preliminary Hearing, Posts $10,000 Bond

Orville Moore, of Printer, waived examining trial Monday in the slaying Friday afternoon at his home of his son-in-law, Don Gearheart, 36, and was held under $10,000 bond to the next grand jury.

A single blast from a shotgun struck Gearheart in the chest, and he died almost instantly. The shooting, it was said, climaxed a family row which began at the nearby Gearheart trailer-home between Gearheart and his wife.

Mrs. Gearheart told Commonwealth's Attorney Harold Stumbo that when her husband came home a dispute arose when he found nothing ready to eat. When he started to beat her she ran to her father's home. Her husband followed, according to this version of the tragedy, and yanked the screen door open, tearing off (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

Night Quest Finds Drowning Victim

Dewey Lake claimed its first victim of the year late Sunday night when Mrs. Bonnie Belle Hardy Sowers, 25, of the Auxier road, was drowned in the Goble Branch arm of the impoundment.

The tragedy occurred after the lake and its shoreline had been jammed without outward incident for three days by its biggest crowds. Mrs. Sowers drowned at 10:45 p.m., in the shallow water formerly used by Girl Scouts as a swimming area. The body was recovered at 12:45 a.m. Monday by Graham Burchett, captain of the Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad.

Three men — Allen L. Fraim, of Auxier road, with whom the victim apparently had gone to the lake, William Perry and Randy Crum — told substantially the same story about the drowning. Perry and Crum, according to state police, said they stopped at the beach where Mrs. Sowers and Fraim were and were talking when the woman suddenly ran to the water and jumped in. They said their attention was attracted momentarily in the other direction and that when they turned they could not see the swimmer. The men said they at first thought Mrs. Sowers had submerged to frighten them.

The drowning was investigated by State Police Capt. Lykins, Troopers Elmo Allen and Leeman Bevins. A jury empaneled by Coroner James J. Carter held that the woman was a victim of accidental drowning.

Mrs. Sowers lived with a family at the Patton Trailer Court, near Auxier, and came to this county from Ashland. She was a daughter of Estill and Kathleen Hammonds Hardy, of Johns Run, near Grayson. She is survived by her parents, her husband, Brentley B. Sowers, Blue Ridge, Ga., one brother, Roy G. Hardy, a sister, Mrs. Luella Chaffins, Webbville, Ky., and a half-brother, Elva McDaniel, Ashland.

The body was removed Monday to the Malone Funeral Home, Grayson. Funeral arrangements had not been announced here Tuesday.

Dewey Lake Crowd Breaks Old Record

More than 80,000 persons boated, swam, fished and skied Dewey Lake and camped, hiked or toured Jenny Wiley State Park and other parts of the lake shoreline over the three-day Memorial Day week-end. Meanwhile, hundreds of automobiles jammed the county's highways.

Yet there was not a high-way fatality, and the lake's record was not marred till late Sunday night when a girl-swimmer was drowned. Several auto accidents were reported, but most were mere fender-smashers.

Dean Murray, damtender at Dewey Dam, said Monday that the largest number ever to visit the lake on a single day was counted there Saturday when the total reached 32,800. The highest previous number of visitors for a single day was recorded during the same holiday last year when 25,600 visited the impoundment.

On Memorial Day itself the total of those at the lake was placed at 26,000 as the crowd dropped off, beginning around 2 p.m., when many left for home.

Last year a record 1,506,500 persons visited Dewey Lake. Murray said that total may have been an increase every Memorial Day period for the last three years, he said.

Giant Bark Aphids Attack Shade Trees

Giant bark aphids are swarming over many varieties of shade trees now, says Gene Ball, area extension specialist. When they are numerous, these insects can cause severe damage to twigs and small limbs.

Most aphids are so small they are hard to see, but the giant bark aphid can be spotted easily. Mr. Ball notes they are about a quarter-inch long, blackish or greyish in color, and soft-bodied. When crushed, they leave a purple stain as from crushed grapes.

Control measures to use are Londane or Malathion. Follow label directions carefully for rates, mixing and safety precautions. For more information on controlling giant bark aphids, check at the Floyd County Extension Office, Prestonsburg, Tel. 886-2668.

Prestonsburg FFA Wins Bronze Emblem

Mrs. Gray, Teacher Here, Earns Master's Degree, Goal of 22-Year Effort

When Mrs. Susie R. Gray, of East Point, was awarded a master of arts degree in elementary education Monday at Eastern Kentucky University, a long-sought goal was reached by the sixth grade teacher at Prestonsburg elementary school.

Mrs. Gray contends that the number 19 has been an important one in her life. After a period of time between elementary and high school, much of which was spent working in her father's general store and recovering from a serious illness, Mrs. Gray, the former Susie Elizabeth Robinson, entered high school at the age 19. After only three years, she was graduated as an honor student from Prestonsburg high school.

She began college immediately, but when she was a sophomore she was married to Calvin K. Gray, Maysville, presently a teacher at Prestonsburg high school. Mrs. Gray's education was interrupted to operate the family business and to care for her family which includes two daughters, Rosemary, a junior at Eastern, and Julianne, a freshman to be next fall at Prestonsburg high school.

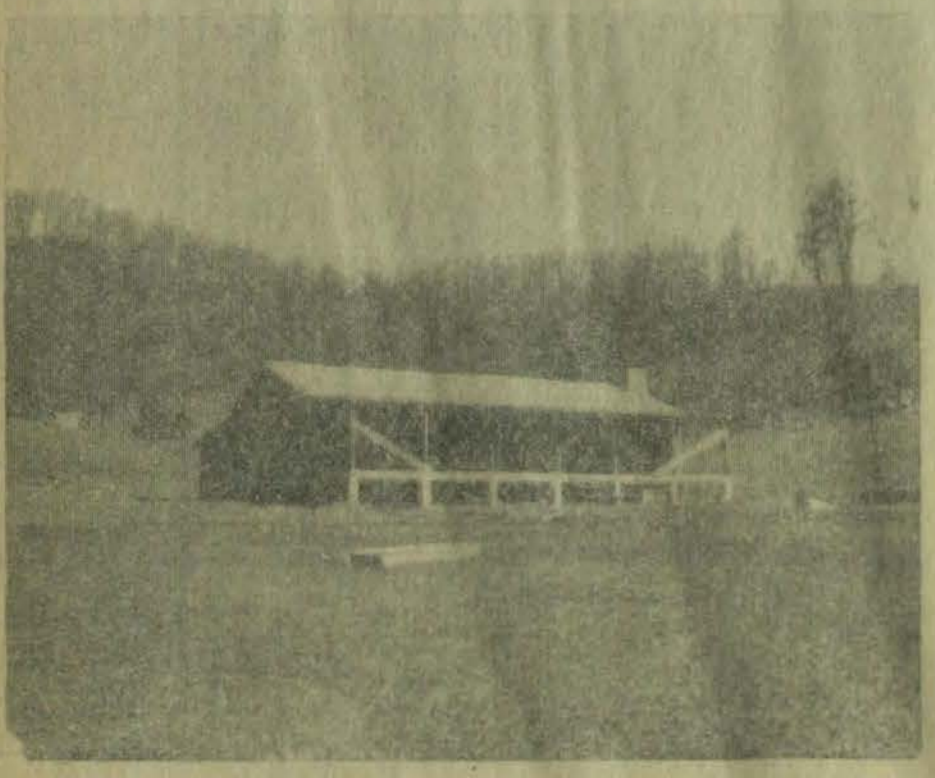

In 1966, after 19 years, Mrs. Gray received a B. S. degree in elementary education from Pikeville College. In 1967, Mrs. Gray entered Eastern to attend an English institute for graduate credit. Nineteen months later, on Jan. 25, 1969, while teaching full time, Mrs. Gray completed requirements for the master's degree.

She plans to continue as a classroom teacher. Since completing requirements for the degree at Eastern, she has completed two post-graduate courses as well as an in-service workshop in the Science Process Approach.

Who knows? She says—after she has rested for 19 days, months, or years, Mrs. Gray may begin to reach for another goal.

Clubhouse, Near Complete

The new home of the Floyd County Fish and Game Club is about to become a reality as its clubhouse nears completion. The new facility is located on a 55-acre tract of land owned by the club on Johns Branch, near Maytown.

With Nelson Program trainees furnishing the bulk of the labor, and the club members volunteering the remainder, labor costs have been held to a bare minimum.

The building features a 30 by 60-foot conference room with a large stone chimney. It also has a kitchen, storage room and two rest rooms. The clubhouse is conveniently located near a skeet range, rifle range and practice casting range. Several picnic tables are being placed about the grounds for use of members.

The clubhouse will be used for club activities as well as a meeting place for civic organizations and other clubs in the county. The club's monthly meetings will be held here, beginning with the May meeting which will be Monday, May 5. But the aim is for completion before the club's annual fish fry, which will be held on August 31.

Dedication ceremonies are being planned for that date, which will be one year from the date of the groundbreaking ceremonies held at the fish fry last year.

Skeet shoots are held each Sunday afternoon through the summer months, beginning at 3 p.m., local time and continuing as long as there are shooters. The opening shoot will be held on Sunday, May 4. Turkey shoots are held each Sunday, beginning in mid-September and continuing through the Sunday before Christmas. These activities as well as a Mother's Day dinner and the annual fish fry, are conducted as the club's money-raising program.

The club plans to clear the remainder of the grounds of undesirable weeds and brush and to plant the cleared plots with seed that will produce feed for wildlife.

Principal officers of the club are Charlie B. Patton, president; John R. Baldridge, vice-president, and Ed Stephens, secretary-treasurer.

DR. ROBERTS, FLOYD NATIVE, PUBLISHES HIS 6th VOLUME OF APPALACHIAN FOLKLORE

Dr. Leonard Roberts, professor of English at Pikeville College, recently published a book of 50 folktales entitled, "Old Greasybeard: Tales From the Cumberland Gap."

This, his sixth volume of folklore of the Appalachian region, was collected largely in the area of the Cumberland Gap while he was a teacher at Union College. It contains a section of animal tales such as "The Traveling Animals," "Tailpoo," and "The Tale of the Big Turtle."

Another section, "Hero and Giant Tales," contains 27 mountain versions of ancient fairy tales that have been carried from the British Isles, Scandinavia, and Western Europe to this country by early colonists. These ancient cultural stories have been kept alive and adapted to life in Appalachia by many tellings round the hearth fires of mountain homes. Some of these tales are "Old Greasybeard," "Jonas and the Giant," "Coo and Rushes," and "The Witch Doctor."

The last section, "Humorous and Tall Tales," likewise represents the culture of the old world carried to our country and mellowed in the hills. Some of these titles are "Quare Jack," "A Whale of a Hunt," and "T'Other Side of Willy Water."

Dr. Roberts, a native of Floyd county, received his interesting oral literature from his birthplace and from bachelor studies at Berea College. Although he earned a master's degree at Iowa State University in creative writing, he returned to Kentucky for his doctorate at the University in English and folklore.

Some of his earlier publications are "I Bought Me A Dog," "South from Hell-Fer-Sartin," "Nippy" and "Up Cuzhin and Down Greasy." The present book has a total of 50 authentic oral and traditional folktales, each with comprehensive notes tracing the story on its long journey from the Old World to the New. The tales were collected by Dr. Robert and his students from the counties of Floyd, Perry, Harlan, Clay, Belle, Knox, Whitley, and other counties in Kentucky and from adjoining counties of Virginia and Tennessee.

FLOYD RESIDENT, BROTHER IN COUNTRY MUSIC PICTURE WITH 2 RECENT RECORDINGS

A Floyd county resident and a country storekeeper in Pike county—the Goins Brothers, Melvin and Ray—are figuring in the country music picture, these days.

Two weeks ago the brothers recorded an LP album of country and bluegrass music at Nashville, Tenn., the country music capital of the world, for Rem Records. To be on sale at music stores this week is their new single record, also a Rem Records product.

The single recording hits a familiar note in the coal fields of Kentucky, West Virginia and other states, with "Black Lung Blues," on which the Goins brothers collaborated with Mike Paxton, WLSI (Pikeville) disc jockey, in the writing. The reserve side has "Old Shanghai," the epic tale of a certain rooster.

The brothers, natives of Bluefield, W. Va., came to Kentucky in 1953. They have worked with such Grand Ole Opry stars as Bill Monroe, the Osborne Brothers, Hyllo Brown and others and also booked work on shows with Platt & Scruggs, Melvin who resides on the Mountain Parkway, near Prestonsburg, has for the past 3½ years been a regular member of the Stanley Brothers and the Ralph Stanley and the Clinch Mountain Boys with whom he has made recordings.

Their first recordings were made 13 years ago and these included such numbers as "Dirty Dishes Blues," "Brown-Eyed Darling," "Windy Mountain" and others.

way they tell us." He suggested the group could better spend its time in Washington.

The legislature appropriates the money in Kentucky, Nunn continued. He suggested the group visit Lt. Gov. Wendell Ford and the Legislative Research Commission.

"I can only recommend laws. I can't vote, but the Lieutenant Governor can. You say you want the law changed. The governor does not write the law. You had a chance yesterday to vote for those who advocate your cause. You will have the opportunity in November to express your pleasure or displeasure."

Nunn said there are "problems of abuse" in the Medicaid program.

"I don't believe it," said Hank Zingg, of Prestonsburg, an Appalachian Volunteer worker.

"The people who work and earn money also have to feed and educate their children, pay medical bills and pay taxes to take care of those who don't," said Nunn.

"We pay the sales tax," retorted a member of the group.

"But you get more out of a Medicaid card than you pay in the sales tax," Nunn replied.

Nunn invited the recipients to send him their grievances in writing, and said they will be worked out if possible under the law. "We will continue to help those people in actual need," Nunn said.

TIDBITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

VOTERS OF FLOYD COUNTY:

I will try in my awkward way to take the time to thank all of you for the great effort and time that was spent on my behalf in this election. I know I was defeated, but it is a great consolation to me just to know that I have so many good friends in Floyd county. Any time a poor man can get hundreds of votes by begging the good citizens for them, he should be thankful.

Democrats this Fall, and let's go over in Frank Leslie's camp and give him the biggest majority any Democratic Sheriff ever got. Let's make Frank Leslie feel good and show him we are all for him. It will be a consolation to him. After all, we all wanted to win.

I know that several people told booger tales; I expected as much. I want to say I have the highest regard for the other eight men who were defeated with me. Please don't say or do anything that will make you look small. Let's all join hands, stand up to our pledges that we will be good

I would like to see and thank all of you personally, but it would take too much time, and I am a poor man with a family — I must find me a job and go to work. You people whom I owe, please be patient with me, and I will pay you, just as fast as I can. I am thanking you in advance for this favor.

Now I will say this to Frank Leslie: I tried my best to be the nominee but failed. But, Frank, I will be asking all my friends to vote for you and support you in November. I know that I will do all I can to elect you with the biggest vote that was ever given any Democrat in Floyd county. I hold no ill feelings toward anyone. Be my friend, I am your friend and a good Democrat.

A QUIANT FOLK TYPE
In all the years since I began writing this column I find that I have rarely mentioned a quaint folk type, a rough-talking, but gold-hearted fellow, one that used to be found in nearly every neighborhood. I have seen a good many of this type and always found them interesting. All have been natural-born mimics and critics of human foibles. One that I knew could change in an instant from being the neighborhood half-wit to look and act like a dignified and highly revered deacon. And all the time he would never even smile at his own antics, which gave his imitations even more appeal. He could laugh like a demented deep bass or sing an admirable bass like our local bass singer.

Most fellows of this type hated insincerity and delighted in holding up to ridicule some fad of the time, in dress, haircuts, in buggies, and nearly everything used as a social status symbol. If you did not know such a person, you missed some of the best comedy and satire I have ever seen. If some dude came visiting in our Fidelity neighborhood, our wag would entertain the rest of us at the country store or at workings for weeks afterward by exaggerating the rather obvious put-on airs of the visitor. The best wags had several levels of mimicry, for they could dry-clean their man language and act out various funny characters without shocking even the most dignified elderly ladies.

Though we had our share of this type of comic characters at Fidelity, I met one even better than our village wag when I went away to school. For a few terms I roomed with one such and grew to like the type. My roommate hated pretense and sham and let no day pass without holding some of it up to ridicule. He was rough-talking to his best friends; I felt that he was angry with me if he said anything kind. In our classes, nearly every day brought something to laugh at, and my friend entertained us in our dormitory, especially in the small break we allowed ourselves just after our evening meal. One of his best acts was to read some poem that one of the teachers had raved about. Pretending that he did not understand figures of speech, he would read some lines and then tear them to pieces because they did not tell the truth. In years of reading the poems of Poe I have seldom found any critic who could so skillfully point out the weak spots of Poe's methods of writing verse. Of course, he did not even know the word CRITICISM in the sense of evaluation; he just loved to have his say about highly emotional language. It has been hard for me, ever afterward, to read into "Annabelle Lee" some of the emotion and heartbreak that I found in it before my roommate's comic reading of the poem. In no sense was he trying to be smart; he was merely trying to show how a literal-minded person might have difficulty in reading romantic poetry. I have always wished that his teacher and mine could have hidden in some convenient dark corner and heard her realize that poetry in the hands of an enthusiast may sometimes backfire and produce dislike for the whole subject rather than OO and AH over sonorous lines.

In evaluating my fifty-five teachers in my old age, I have often said that I learned from several of them how not to teach, just as others, largely unconscious of their teaching ability, taught me more than whole books on pedagogy, merely by their approach to their subject. Some feared to suggest that any author was actually human and had to live in the world just like the rest of us. Some seemed to think that writing poetry was like filling a prescription: take this and mix with that, shake thoroughly, and, when you feel the need of something to give you energy, take a swallow. Meanwhile the student sat and had to choose between these ridiculous extremes. Most of us were human enough to curry favor with the teacher and stay in his good graces. I have often wondered what my roommate would have said and done if he had gone through college and graduate school and whether he would ever have been able to convince any committee that he was worthy of advanced degrees. I suspect that he would have died in his first semester as a graduate student; maybe he would have dropped out earlier.

SOME MORE FOLK WISDOM
In addition to the taboos and similar things discussed in a former article as illustrations of folk wisdom, it is now time to think about sayings and similes, whose purpose was often to "point a moral or adorn a tale." Many similes and sayings are deliberately comic and are not in any sense moral precepts. They spice the daily conversation of the folk and of folksy people generally. But a large group of these try to set down in catchy phrases what the race has found good or wise.

Conduct is a sort of invisible thing and needs to be talked about in concrete ways to make it more understandable. It is hard to define any human action merely by itself; it is easy to compare it with things already known. How stubborn is a person? "Stubborn as a mule" would occur to thousands of people, even today, when not everybody has had experience with a mule. How old is an elderly person? "Old as the hills," "Old as Adam (or Methuselah)." There is need always for some yardstick to measure what cannot be measured by any known method. How many people were there? "They were thick as blackbirds." Just how stingy is he? "Close as the bark on a tree." How far is A from B? "About two whoops and a holler." Whether a moral is needed or wanted, the picturesque comparison rises to the occasion. And, long after the comparison seemed so pat, the simile lives, sometimes creating no semblance of what it was designed to clarify.

As I have said so often in this column, farm-related similes are losing their significance rapidly, because of modern machinery and the closeness of the farm to the whole life of the time. A farmer now does not fit the likenesses formerly associated with him. He is no longer a clothe-hopper; his bank account would startle many people who used to think of him as a greenhorn, and his house, no matter how far away from town it may be, is hardly in the sticks, for it has R. E. A., electric refrigeration, a TV, and all the gadgets that the city house formerly would have liked to have. But similes about farm animals are rapidly losing force. Sheep are rare; hence references to their dumbness would fall pretty lightly on the people to whom the term was applied. Cows are here, in numbers, but they are not the bossy cows or the scrub ones, either, that older people knew. Corn is here, too, lots of it; but nobody now believes that it used to be planted by hand, and lots of people are beginning to doubt our talking about gathering it by hand, especially the down row. A few days ago the wife of a tenant farmer was telling me that she could remember when tobacco was pegged, as she called it, that is, set by hand. Having grown up in long-ago times, I at first had to shake myself to realize that most tobacco now is set by machinery, and that setting tobacco is not the back-breaking work it used to be. And references to mules and horses are often the opposite of what they originally were, that is, clear illustrations of something that needs to be illustrated.

Sayings referring to the old-fashioned farm life are also fading. Try this one on some younger city-bred fellow: "Every tub should sit on its own bottom." What is a tub to many people? Is it somewhat like a modern washer? Why would a tub have to sit on its bottom, anyway? "You can't get blood out of a turnip." "Hoe your own row." "What is sass for the goose is sass for the gander." "He's eating high on the hog." Try these out on some young people and see what they might mean; you will probably be surprised and wonder why young people can be so dumb. This is merely a starter, for there are hordes of these quaint, earthy sayings that are in danger of losing their flavor. Some may degenerate, as has "I wouldn't know him from Adam's off ox," which now appears often as "Adam's old fox." Now isn't that a come-down for a perfectly good illustration, at least as conceived of people a long time ago?

The Kentucky Geological Survey of the University of Kentucky received a total of $885,125 in research grants during the 1967-68 academic year from the Kentucky Department of Commerce. This money was used for programs in areal geological mapping, topographic mapping, water resources investigation, and mineral investigations.

PRATER CREEK AND IVEL WIN OPENING CONTESTS OF HAROLD-IVEL LEAGUE

The Harold-Ivel Little League baseball season got under way at the Ivel baseball field May 24, with an estimated 300 players, parents, grandparents, brothers, sisters, relatives, friends and neighbors witnessing and taking part.

In the first game of the afternoon, a doubleheader, Prater Creek defeated Allen, 8 to 4. The winning pitcher was Ellis Akers, who teamed up with William Kidd to hold Allen to 4 runs and only 5 hits while striking out 9. Only 2 extra hits were allowed. John Boyd had 2 hits for 2 official trips at bat, one of which was a double, and drove 4 runs. Wilburn Sammons got on base 4 times and scored 3 runs. William Kidd was on base twice and scored 2 runs.

Jim Bill Frasure was the losing pitcher, though he turned in a fine performance in striking out 8, getting a single, a double, driving in a run, and stealing home on a delayed steal. Jimmy Wright drove in 2 runs while collecting a two base hit for 3 trips at the plate.

Ivel defeated Harold, 10 to 3, behind the pitching of right hander Danny Hall. Hall struck out 15 while allowing only 4 hits, only one going for extra bases.

Gerald Clark, Duane Daniels, and Deanie Daniels each gave the Ivel team super support by driving in 2 runs each. Deanie Daniels had a "field day." For two official trips at the plate he scored 2 runs, had two hits, one a double, and drove in 2 runs. Mike Sturgill scored 2 runs in two trips at the plate.

Hugh E. Naylor turned in a fine performance for the losers by striking out 8.

Tim Hall drove in 2 runs in 3 trips to the plate; Tommy Cecil, a run for three times at bat; Ronnie Clark, one hit and scored a run for 3 turns at bat; Ricky Robert scored a run in two official trips at bat; Rodney Lovern one for three, and George Kidd had one for two.

REYNOLDS THANKS VOTERS

A mere "Thank You" fails to convey my deep appreciation of the support given me by the Democratic voters of Legislative District 95 at last Thursday's primary. I hope I can express my gratitude to you all better in coming months by rendering you the very best service of which I am capable.

The primary election campaign has left no scars of bitterness with me. I wish my opponents and those who supported them well and hope to be of service to all.

W. J. "BILL" REYNOLDS

Comments on Election

The May Primary he's come and gone—like a cyclone that has swept over the country, leaving political devastation to the so-called Nunn candidates when in truth and fact none of them were Nunn candidates. However a lot of people must have believed it. Many people would rather believe a lie than the truth.

I have been in political battles for a long time and I have never in my life seen or heard of so many untruths told. There never has been, so far as I know, an honest election since the introduction of the voting machines. The Australian voting ballot was far more honest, but a lot of people wanted to speed up the counting of votes, but it has been speeded up in the wrong direction.

This Primary seems to me like the one recently held in Martin county, a few years ago, when certain candidates were nominated by large majorities, but when properly investigated were not nominated at all. In the investigating of these machines it was found that they could be changed thirteen times. A member of the firm manufacturing these machines said that they could not be operated in such a manner as to cause a dishonest election, but another expert who investigated these machines stated that they could. The candidates who received large majorities turned out that they lost. A lot of people do not understand why five or more candidates received large majorities so close to each other. It has been told that the number started with the figure 99 to begin with.

I was well informed as to what was taking place on Saturday before the May Primary so I did not get hurt financially. When Green Kidd was interviewed on Saturday before the election, he was awakened about 10 or 11 o'clock, and given a list of names for whom to vote, and since he would not take the money, some or several went to another man and with him a lot of money was placed. Green Kidd is a good man, a retired miner and an election officer in the Little Mud precinct at the May Primary.

On June 2 1969 the election commissioners of Johnson county impounded all the voting machines and all other voting material used in connection therewith, due to so many irregularities. There is no doubt about the same here in Floyd County. Too many candidates ran too close together to be true. If their majorities had been four, five, six or seven hundred majorities, it would not have looked too bad.

Sample ballots were used in practically all precincts and marked for whom to vote. It is natural for any voter to seek for the highest price. The records of this election will not stand up to the figures as presently shown. The number of voters' names appearing upon the signature book will not agree, I believe, with the total voters in the machines. No doubt many names on the signature book will not agree with the original signature cards on file in the office of the county clerk. The Primary has been the greatest sell-out in the history of Floyd County. And how can law and order prevail under such circumstances? I will go into a more detailed statement later. Steps are being taken with Washington with the proper departments, with reference to political activities of Stamp recipients and the Nelson Program.

'Whatever Things'

By DONALD E. WILDMON

Sometime ago, up in Brentwood, New York, Mrs. Raymond Bates found her two youngest children, Deborah and Andrew, eating tranquilizer pills. Knowing the seriousness of this she immediately asked their older brother, Timothy, if he had eaten any of the pills. He said that he had not.

Mrs. Bates rushed the children to the hospital, and Deborah, 2, and Andrew, 4, both had their stomachs pumped. Timothy, denying that he had eaten any pills, did not have his stomach pumped.

It was a crucial situation for Mrs. Bates, for the pills that the children had eaten could have killed them. It was of utmost importance that she be told the truth by the children. To have lied in a situation like that could have meant death for any of them.

There are many situations like that in life. Several times our physical life depends on whether or not we are willing to tell the truth, face the facts. Failure to do so will often mean death or serious injury.

But deeper than this is the fact that we must be willing to tell the truth about our intangible being also. And here is where most of us are willing to get by on a half-truth, sometimes even a flat lie.

We haven't been honest with ourselves here. We have told ourselves that everything will work out OK. So we have gone on ignoring our inner being, pretending that there will be a time to take care of that. We have even built up a conception that there is a Great Santa Claus in the sky who will bring us all everything we need at the right time. We have lied to ourselves in telling ourselves that we have no obligation any higher than ourselves. We have fooled ourselves into thinking that if there is life after death everybody will enjoy it equally and not just a "pious" few.

When I break a bone it needs setting, I don't dare fool myself into thinking that if it is left alone it will work everything out by itself. I don't go around telling people that there is a Great Maryland Cancer Doctor who will cure me. Should I have a heart attack, I don't ask for a knife so that I can operate on myself. In all these things I tell myself the truth—that I need help from beyond myself, from someone whose business is to help in those situations. To do less in the spiritual realm would be equally foolish.

Don't make the mistake with your spiritual life that Timothy Bates made with his physical life. When Mrs. Bates went to check on the children the next morning Deborah and Andrew were fine. Timothy, 8, was dead.

Impala Custom Coupe

Match that, anybody.

We give you an honest increase in car at an honest decrease in price. Take the '69 Impala above. We improved the ride. Made it quieter inside. Added an anti-theft locking device. Put steel guard rails in the doors. Still, this Impala with a 300-hp V8, Turbo Hydra-matic, advanced-design power disc brakes, head restraints, whitewalls and wheel covers is priced $101* less than in 1968. The 300-hp V8 is priced $40 less than last year's 275-hp. Turbo Hydra-matic costs less. Power disc brakes about half as much. Whitewalls a little less. Wheel covers about the same. And head restraints are now standard. Upping value and dropping price. That's the way Chevrolet operates.

Putting you first, keeps us first.

This is the eighth year such a program has been presented to the public. Various exercises related to the past years' work of the students were performed before an audience of parents and friends.

A display of handcraft materials made by the boys and girls included copper engravings, leather work, wall hangings, pop-lid items, plaques, crushed glass jewelry, bookends, letter holders, seed pictures, etc.

These boys and girls have supported a different Christian work each year. HCJB is a famed missionary work, reaching into many countries with the gospel of Christ. Communist countries included. Curios of Ecuador were in display at the program.

Officers are: President, Velinda Salyers; Vice-president, Hollie Martin Conley; secretary, Beulah Patton; treasurer, Joe Owens. Debbie Patton served as treasurer of the junior group. RED CLOVER AND THE BUMBLEBEES

Red clover is one of our most beautiful and useful legumes and one of the finest of all the plants we got from Europe. It has been named as the state flower of Vermont. On the leaflets of red clover there may be seen the almost exact design of an Indian arrow-head, while on the white clover leaflets there appears the design of a crescent.

These designs add much to the beauty of the leaves; these clovers are called Trifolium, since they have three leaflets. I have heard some persons say they had found four-leaf red clovers but I have not yet seen one. The leaflets are oval and sometimes notched at the end. Seen at a distance, the large, ovoid head of clover bloom looks like a purplish-red globe, being almost the exact color of the redbud's blossom. But on closer inspection the head or cluster of blooms is seen to contain as many as 60 to 75 small, tubular florets, each a perfect flower within itself. These small florets compose the large flower head and are about three-fourths of an inch long.

The bumblebees are the only insects which can pollinate the red clovers and some others. These bees have a long tongue that can reach down to the bottom of the tiny tubes and get the nectar; they cross-pollinate this clover and some other clovers and thus assure a good yield.

If the bumblebees should become exterminated, the red clovers and some others would soon disappear. This shows the vital relationship between insects and plants. Before red clover could be grown in Australia and New Zealand, it was first necessary to import large numbers of bumblebees to these countries, so they could pollinate the clover and get it started to spread.

Luckily, we have plenty of bumblebees in North America, so the red clovers have escaped from cultivation and are now found along roadsides, in waste places and old fields, now well established in the wild state. It has proved a boon to the bumblebees, too, which are so necessary to carry on the work of pollinating our garden crops as well as corn, grass and others. One danger of the indiscriminate use of pesticides is, this kills out the bumblebees, honey bees, butterflies and other insects which are so vitally necessary for crops and plants to flourish.

The white clover, commonly found along roadsides and in fields, is also a fine source of nectar for honey bees, as its florets are much shorter than those of red clover. While it usually has three leaflets, it sometimes produces four, but not the red clover, which always has three.

Bumblebees are our largest and most useful of the bees; without their work of pollination we would have no vegetables on the table and few crops to mature. The name, bumblebees, is from the Latin word, BOMBUS, meaning to make a buzzing sound. In the spring of the year, one may see a large queen bumblebee helicoptering as she seems to watch you while she stands still in the air; perhaps she is wondering where to find a place to begin a new nest and rear her family. She is a fertilized female and ready to lay eggs as soon as a suitable location is found, which is usually in a hole where field mice had their nest during the past winter. Sometimes she builds a nest in a hollow log or a hollow fence post. Her colors are gold and black, sometimes with a touch of orange; she is a beautiful bee, and the largest of all bees. As a rule, bumblebees are docile, gentle and never attack humans unless their nest is molested. The queen bumblebee is an efficient dough-beater and bread-maker. As soon as she finds a cavity for her nest, she gathers pollen and nectar and kneads it into a sort of yellow dough, which is to serve as "bee bread" for her new brood. Then she makes cells and lays eggs in these. When the eggs hatch out the larvae, they dine on the bee bread until large enough to make a cocoon in which to pupate. In a few weeks, the pupa emerges as an adult, ready to help in the work of the colony, which consists of the males (drones), the females, or workers, and the queens. The females gather pollen and nectar and help to feed the larvae; the queens are fertilized before autumn and find some place to spend the winter; they come out in the spring as the large queens. The workers and the drones die out in the fall.

Bumblebees work busily, often in frantic haste, to gather pollen and nectar when there are plenty of blooms. They are nature's fine pollinators and without them there would be few flowers or fruits.

Did you ever try to eat a bite of "bumblebee honey"? I did once and that was enough! It is not as pleasant tasting and sweet as the honey made by honey bees. But animals hunt out the nests and seem to enjoy eating bumblebee honey. Foxes, bears, field mice and polecats hunt the nests and dig out the honey to eat, thus destroying many bees.

We owe a great debt to the bumblebees for their good work of pollination and should never allow them to be killed or their nests destroyed.

EDA Funds OK'd To Help Job Development Program

Approval of a $145,000 grant to help continue a job-development program in economically lagging areas of Kentucky was announced last week by Robert A. Podesta, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Economic Development.

The funds from the Economic Administration, U. S. Department of Commerce, will help the University of Kentucky pay the administrative costs of a program of management and technical assistance aimed at creating new businesses or expanding established firms.

The program is operated by the University's Office of Development Services and Business Research, Lexington. Assistance will be focused on areas qualified for assistance from EDA because of high unemployment and low family incomes.

In carrying out its industrial development program, the University works with business and industry to eliminate problems blocking growth, assists in forming new enterprises that offer job opportunities and helps local communities plan public facilities programs.

University officials report that 45 firms are presently receiving assistance and that more than 80 businesses have been helped in the past. The University of Kentucky will complete the $263,934 total cost of the program for 12 months with $118,934 from other sources.

Yes, the Truth Will Prevail

We Stand on Our Record --- Not Fake --- Not Fiction but Facts

How can the truth be known?--Only if ALL use it.

FRIENDS, FELLOW-CITIZENS:

On May 16, 1969, about the hour of 10 a.m., I caught my young daughter on the street in Martin, Ky., during school hours. Upon her confession that night at our home of being out of school without permission, I punished her, using my belt (not fists, not buckle, as some have told). Then, after, having a long conversation with her in our living room, I thought the matter was settled. But no—

A warrant of arrest was written, some time later in the evening, by the Martin Police Judge on request of my wife, accompanied by Mr. Ted H. Salisbury, Jr., for the offense of assault and battery on my own child.

Then Constable Salisbury, accompanied by Mr. A. J. Reed, Martin city policeman, came to my home to serve the warrant. I was placed under arrest and taken across the street to the Martin city jail, was released some time later by my brother and Mr. D. M. Hutchinson, Martin city police judge, returning to my home across the street.

After consulting an attorney on May 19, 1969 and being advised of my rights by law, the proper court action was taken, and will continue to be. Facts were stated and the proper papers were issued by both county and circuit courts and were served by someone in the Floyd county Sheriff's Department.

Then someone started the paper work. I had no part in this whatsoever. Statements have been made, articles put in different papers, leaflets have been printed and distributed in Magisterial District No. 3 which were untrue and false — all this seeming to be for political gain or loss to someone in the Magistrate race in District No. 3, Floyd county.

I deeply regret this has happened and wish that all would consider the source and cause of this. Make it a point to learn from those who know the truth what I am. Our daily walk will tell the past, the present, the future.

Thanks.

I spent one minute. I saved $662.

Proctor Haller of Ashland, Kentucky made one phone call and discovered, "Electric whole-house air conditioning cost me $662 less than the gas estimate for the same size unit, and my operating cost will be less than it would have been with gas. The electric air conditioning unit was easily installed on my present gas heating system." In home after home, we have proved that flameless electric whole-house air conditioning costs less to install and less to operate than gas. Electric whole-house air conditioning can be added to most warm air furnaces, regardless of the fuel used for heating. If you're thinking of installing gas whole-house air conditioning, make a phone call for an electric cost comparison. It could be the most profitable minute you ever spent.

State Superintendent Views Accreditation

BY WENDELL P. BUTLER
Superintendent of Public Instruction

"Accreditation." This word, bypassed very likely by a reader as being technically uninteresting, is rapidly taking its place in vocabulary as the backbone of any educational system.

For what has a school—elementary or secondary—accomplished if it graduates students to the next educational level who are poorly trained in study habits and future citizenship roles? What position in the occupational world can a student expect if he has received inadequate teaching and worked with out-of-date materials?

To assure Kentucky students the best training possible, the Department of Education and the State board sets up rigid standards for accreditation and each year meets in special session to "take stock" of schools—a meeting designed to evaluate how well state schools are abiding by accreditation requirements.

This overseeing of school systems is proving invaluable to Kentucky's citizens. At last week's accreditation inventory, the state Board of Education reported that Kentucky high schools now not fully accredited number only three—an all-time low.

Exactly how important an accomplishment this is must be determined by figures. Figures show that a decade ago, the non-accredited list numbered 105 high schools. Last year, the number had been reduced to 13 and the elimination of 10 additional schools from the non-accredited list since then can only be regarded as welcome news.

Since the whole idea behind a school system's accreditation is one of improving a school's quality of education, perhaps, it would be more understanding to refer to an accredited school, henceforth, as a quality school.

But is there a simple definition of quality?

While most people would say that many definitions are needed, educationally we believe there is only one:

Quality education refers to accomplishing, through a school, the teaching experience that best meets the needs of a child.

Rating a quality school, or one that is fully accredited, is based on many factors—subjects offered, total number of courses offered in approved subject areas, facilities and equipment, teacher-pupil ratios, preparation of teachers, counseling, supervision and overall planning.

This rating procedure takes the cooperation of not only teachers and school officials, but parents and the citizens of a community. In planning for the future, if a local school system is desirous of looking on with vision to meet upcoming educational needs—such as classroom space, materials and teachers—then progressive ideas from all persons concerned need to be incorporated.

Often, consolidation to meet future needs is the answer. This solution of combining small schools is considered only emergency accreditation. Another, is the increase in state supporting funds for local school districts over the past 10 years.

Still another, is the crack-down by the board on a school which repeatedly fails to achieve quality education. Five schools last year found themselves unapproved after repeated second chances and were ordered closed, their pupils being sent elsewhere.

According to accreditation reports last week from the state Bureau of Instruction, headed by Don C. Bale, high schools now fully accredited number 413, three are operating on an emergency basis, and 12—most of which are relatively new—are classified "special."

Two additional high schools—Ohio County high and Hopkinsville high—were added to the state's list of top quality schools and received Kentucky's highest rating as "comprehensive." Also, two more high schools were given "merit ratings" for effective programs in certain areas. These "merit" schools are Assumption high school, Jefferson County, recognized for its math program, and Madisonville-North Hopkins high school, Hopkins County, honored for a program in business education.

Quality elementary schools now number 30 which have applied for and received "extended" rating, indicative of special services and enrichment; 501 schools have standard accreditation; 341 have provisional ratings; 180 have approved accreditation and approximately 500 schools have, as yet, still fewer than eight teachers and remain unaccredited on the elementary level.

Last week's accreditation of schools must be looked at with pride. For it shows a decade of educational progress in Kentucky that has moved the state according to a well-planned schedule that is keeping pace with other states. A school's worth is judged by the students it produces. And only the best student products come from quality education schools—fully accredited to meet all a student's needs.

In Kentucky, the non-accredited high schools have dwindled to three. It's our goal to see the number at 0 as soon as possible.

The University of Kentucky Southeast Community College received the largest amount of federal support of any UK community college during the 1967-68 academic year. Of the $73,358 received, some $70,000 was awarded by the U. S. Office of Economic Opportunity to support the Upward Bound Program.

To the Voters of Magisterial Dist. 1:

I wish to thank each of you who voted for me in my race for Magistrate, to thank all for the courtesy shown me and those who campaigned in my behalf, and to assure all concerned that I hold no ill-will toward anybody because of the election.

Better luck, next time—and, again, my sincerest thanks.

MY FELLOW FLOYD COUNTIANS

I wish to thank my friends and relatives who have given their time and effort to my campaign. I will always hold a special place in my heart for those persons who supported me.

However, this should not be a victory communication but a message which will do away with all anger and malice. I hold no malice toward any person and I sincerely hope that no person will hate another as a result of this Primary Election.

In the months and years ahead, we must abide by the following scripture, if we are to have progress in this county:

"Let all bitterness and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking be put away from you, with all malice; and be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

THANK YOU VERY MUCH,
HAROLD STUMBO

THANKS VOTERS FOR SUPPORT

I am deeply grateful to every voter who supported me in my race for the Democratic nomination for Circuit Court Clerk. At the same time, I wish to assure those who did not support me that I have no ill-will against them.

I will work to render all the people the same type of service I have given during the past six years and to justify the confidence of the people in me.

Sincerely,

UK Prof Lays Loss of Fish in East Kentucky to Strip Mining

A University of Kentucky professor of zoology says he gathered at least 20 different kinds of fish from Troublesome and Quicksand creeks in Eastern Kentucky 10 years ago. Recent collections have shown that only about 10 kinds are there now.

"The fact that 10 kinds of fish have disappeared from these two Kentucky streams, perhaps forever, would not necessarily disturb very many people," says Dr. Robert A. Kuehne (Keeney). "However, this disappearance should be interpreted as an example of the rate at which natural resources can be depleted if they are not managed properly."

"Strip mining is the principal reason these fish have ceased to live in the two creeks. Farther downstream—in the Kentucky river—you'll find that the river is either muddy or murky the year round, with the possible exception of late autumn. Ten or 15 years ago, it was fairly common to see clear water in the Kentucky river."

Although Dr. Kuehne teaches zoology, his doctoral program study and subsequent research have been primarily in ichthyology (study of fish) and ecology (the mutual relations between organisms and their environment).

Dr. Kuehne believes most people are not concerned about their environment and its relationship with society, but he notes some concern, as shown in the results of a recent Gallup Poll. The poll generally showed that the proximity of the problem had a direct influence on where priorities are placed.

For example, he says, rural people who are more exposed to scenes of water pollution rated this type of pollution as the most serious problem, whereas city people rated it lower on the scale of threats to natural resources. On the other hand, rural people, considered to be away from smog and industrial smoke, did not put heavy emphasis on air pollution.

The poll also showed that three out of four people are in favor of setting aside more public lands for conservation purposes such as national parks, wildlife refuges, and bird sanctuaries.

The more that people are concerned with problems of waste in natural resources, the more they are willing to set aside some of their income in taxes to solve problems, the survey showed.

A special report released by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife states that strip mine operations in eight states, including Kentucky, have caused extensive damage to fish and wildlife habitats and populations. A total of 832,605 acres of land have been disturbed and more than 5,000 miles of Appalachian streams and 13,800 acres of impoundments have been contaminated by acid mine water, according to the report.

A considerable amount of this damage need not occur, the report states. Good management can help prevent it.

Dr. Kuehne believes the general public does not understand the potential danger of pesticides. He said the commercial product called Endrin has been shown to be lethal to various forms of marine and fresh water life. Shrimp have been known to die when exposed to Endrin at a ratio of one drop of the pesticide to 16,000 gallons of water.

DDT has proved its durability through its detection in the bodies of animals and birds that have eaten insects sprayed with it. Although such poisons generally are not considered dangerous until there is considerable build-up of deposits in man or animal, the long range effects have not been determined, Dr. Kuehne stated.

"A build-up of pesticides in fish could have an effect on people who eat them. DDT has been found in predatory birds because they got it from contaminated fish," he added.

He said DDT is "very effective against flies and mosquitoes because it paralyzes their respiratory system and they suffocate. Therefore, it has been used extensively since World War II. Many of us are taking small amounts of DDT into our bodies."

"It is known that DDT settles in fatty tissue. In the case of birds, it settles in the egg yolk and can produce sterile eggs, or eggs that have comparatively thin shells."

Dr. Kuehne says many of Kentucky's resources such as water, soil, fish, wildlife, and timberlands are renewable. "They can last indefinitely with proper management," he said. "We must be more aware of the fact that we are not removed from the condition of our environment. I am very gratified to know that the University is going to get a School of Natural Resources. I see a lot of potential good in the state's natural resources program."

As an example of the importance of forestry, he adds that experimental evidence has shown that strip-mined lands erode 1,000 times more rapidly than lands covered by forest.

"We have a lot of carefully-managed land and forests in the U. S. and we can continue to produce food and fiber. The problem as I see it now is how to educate those people who are polluting the waters and the air and wasting natural resources," Dr. Kuehne said. "A prime challenge of the future is to bring man into productive balance with his environment."
