Dry Leaders Talk Enforcement Need

Leaders Say Local Level Help Needed

Sheriff Candidates Promise Enforcement; Problems Discussed

Answers to at least three questions were sought Tuesday evening when the Floyd County Christian Dry League, fresh from victory at the polls, met at Allen with county officials and candidates for the office of sheriff.

Two of the questions were directed at officials. They were: "What can we do to help enforcement of the law?"

"What are you doing to enforce it?"

And to the two candidates for sheriff was posed the question, "What will you do?"

Both candidates, Mrs. Eva Collins, Republican, and Frank Leslie, Democrat, committed themselves to enforcement that will keep the county situation as good as at present, or to make it better.

Asked specifically by the Rev. Lorie Vannucci their position on Martin clubs which have been closed, both candidates affirmed their opposition to reopening. It was pointed out, however, that reopening of the clubs depends upon the courts, not the sheriff.

The Rev. Dan Heintzleman, of Martin, presided at the discussion period which followed dinner in the Allen school lunchroom. He cited the work of Sheriff Lewis — "many arrested, many convicted" — but added that he felt "some get off pretty light, with a $20 fine and a suspended jail sentence."

County Attorney Barkley J. Sturgill pointed out that the penalty for the first bootlegging offense is set by law, and that he has always regarded the local option laws of the state as weak and "full of holes."

County Judge Henry Stumbo said: "When a man comes into my court for the first time, and he"

VISTA Rule Plea Denied by Board

The board of directors of the Big Sandy Community Action Program heard at their Paintsville Country Club meeting Monday evening a request from VISTA representatives that they change their recent decision setting controls on non-local VISTAS assigned to this county, but the board declined to take such action.

When it was suggested that a Floyd countyman be employed as Floyd County CAP director, succeeding Douglas Morrison who resigned last week, a board member pointed out that this is not consistent with OEO policy.

Harry Eastburn, Big Sandy Area CAP director, suggested that a look should first be taken to determine if some individual already employed by CAP should be promoted to the post.

Clifford Austin, of Auxier, head of the On-the-Job Training program, is acting as CAP director, pending a permanent appointment.

Also denied was a motion made recently by the Floyd County Area Development Council asking the Big Sandy Area CAP to

2 PLAINTIFFS ASK $230,000

Rickman Sues Board, Driver for $180,000; Robinson Asks $50,000

Two suits filed in circuit court here Wednesday ask a total of $230,000 damages for injuries suffered from motor vehicles.

In one of the actions George Rickman seeks to recover from the Floyd County Board of Education and the driver of one of its school buses, Kenneth Hall, a total of $180,000 damages, claiming negligence and carelessness of the driver caused the bus to strike him last February. He asks $25,000 for pain and suffering, $5,000 for medical and hospital bills and $150,000 for permanent and total disability.

In the second suit Claude Robinson sues Elmer Johnson and Norman Ray Bryant for $50,000 for auto collision injuries suffered on KY 114 last January. The plaintiff was a passenger in Johnson's car when it was allegedly hit by the auto driven by Bryant. Negligence is laid to both drivers. Robinson claims damages for reduced earning capacity, time lost from work and for pain and suffering.

'GAS' BLAZE LOSS HEAVY

Tanker-Truck Leaks Gasoline; Fire Damage Estimated at $35,000

Damage estimated at $35,000 resulted early Monday morning when a tanker-truck laden with thousands of gallons of gasoline burst into flames after it had wrecked on U. S. 23, near Allen. The truck, travelling from Ashland to Virginia, struck a culvert in the vicinity of the Alpik Motel, about two miles south of Allen. Gasoline poured from the resulting leak, and it ignited.

The truck and its trailer were destroyed, a dwelling occupied by Carl Stanley and family was damaged, and regulators in a gas house owned by the motel owner. (See Story No. 5, Page 4)

Ky. Mine Contests Set Here, Sept. 27

Lloyd McGarey, of Martin, secretary of the Big Sandy-Elkhorn Mining Institute, announced this week that the Safety Day sponsored annually by the institute will be held Saturday at Pikeville City Park, and that the state mine rescue and first-aid contest will be held the following Saturday at Archer Park here.

It is the first time the statewide contest has been scheduled for Floyd county.

At the Pikeville event mine rescue teams from Floyd, Pike and

Floyd Still Short On Disaster Fund

Floyd county's quota of $913 for the relief of Hurricane victims still has not been reached, Ella Noel White, executive secretary of Floyd Red Cross Chapter, said Wednesday. Those who would have a part in helping victims of the disaster are urged to make their contributions immediately.

MOST TRIALS TO BE RESET

Prosecutor Unable To Assume Schedule; Murder Trial Delayed

Most of the September criminal docket of the Floyd circuit court will be continued till November for trial because of Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo's physical inability to undertake the gruelling succession of trials, it was said this week.

Stumbo's condition is improved but he was unable to begin, as scheduled, the trial Monday of Charles Jackson, who is charged with the slaying of Tommy Brown, Jr.

Circuit Judge Hollie Conley said Tuesday, however, that the petit jury empanelled for the current term will not be dismissed, pending developments. He indicated he is hopeful some cases will be heard during the month.

One case which will be brought to trial is that of Henry Posten, who is in jail without bond, charged with grand larceny. County Attorney Barkley J. Sturgill will pinch-hit for Stumbo if the latter is unable to represent the Commonwealth at the trial.

An appeal from Prestonsburg police court is scheduled next Monday, but City Attorney A. A. Burchett will represent the Commonwealth. (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

Hearing Set As Contempt Action Filed

Coal Firm Manager In Arbitration Plea; Gund Mine Affected

Approximately 900 employees of the Elkhorn Division, Island Creek Coal Company, remained away from work this week at its Spurlock, Price and Wheelwright mining operations, and the work-stoppage spread Wednesday to Island Creek's big, new Gund mine in Pike county.

The strike began at the Spurlock mine on Left Beaver Creek, Sept. 3, and goes into its 11th day today (Thursday). Raymond Bradbury, Elkhorn Division manager, estimated that the payroll loss during that time has been $365,000.

Officers and members of Local Union 1373 were enjoined last week from picketing or otherwise interfering with operations of the three mines, and a contempt motion against Charles Webb, local president, and three members was filed here, Wednesday. Violation of the court order was alleged.

An immediate ruling on the contempt proceeding was sought by the company, but Circuit Judge Hollie Conley held defendants are entitled to three days' time for preparation of their case. The hearing was set at 9 a.m. Saturday.

During the court session here Wednesday, an attorney described the company's situation as "desperate" because of commitments made to electric power firms which have an urgent need of coal for their generating plants.

The original contention arose when men were transferred from the first to the third shift at Spurlock without utilizing job bidding procedures. The union took the position that the company does not have the right to shift men without posting the jobs and giving all employees a right to bid.

The company claims no new jobs were created, that no vacancy existed and so job-bidding was not required by the union contract.

But a union spokesman was quoted as saying the discharge of Charles Webb, local union president, and three members of the mine committee at Spurlock has complicated the situation and is now a more divisive issue than the original point of dispute.

From one source came speculation that the situation may cloud the future of the Spurlock operation where, the company claims, 10 work-stoppages occurred last year and eight this year.

The Wheelwright local voted, 15 to 14, last Saturday to return to work, but an estimated 200 members present at the meeting did not vote. Work was not resumed. (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

Couple's Need for a Home Met in Old-Fashioned Way

JENNY WILEY TO REMAIN OPEN; RATE DROP ANNOUNCED

Seven of Kentucky's state resort parks, including Jenny Wiley, are staying open all year, and they are offering a bargain package of $44, plus tax, for a vacation of five days and four nights, including all meals.

This is a per-person price for double occupancy in the most luxurious of America's state parks. There are two double beds in every room at these parks and the appointments are the ultimate in modern comfort — year-round fingertip climate control, concealed lighting, private balcony or patio, wall-to-wall carpeting, and tiled bathroom with glass-enclosed tub and shower, and modern Danish furniture designed for comfort.

The bargain vacation deal goes into effect Sunday, October 12. It includes Sunday night dinner and all other meals through luncheon the following Thursday. The same package deal is in effect for each succeeding Sunday through Thursday, March 26, 1970.

The seven Kentucky state resort parks that offer this off-season rate are Kentucky Dam Village at Gilbertsville; Lake Cumberland at Jamestown; Cumberland Falls, Corbin; Natural Bridge, Slades; General Butler, Carrollton; Carter Caves, Olive Hill, and Jenny Wiley, Prestonsburg.

Former Dock Supt. Jenny Wiley Mgr.

Mark Lovely, the Floyd county native who began his state parks service as manager of the Jenny Wiley Boat Dock a few years ago, is the new manager of Jenny Wiley State Park, it was announced this week by Parks Commissioner Robert E. Gable.

Mr. Lovely is expected to assume his duties at Jenny Wiley next Tuesday, succeeding Henry Allen, who next Friday will assume his duties as manager of Lake Barkley State Park, newest in the Kentucky parks system.

Allen, who is a native of West Liberty, came to the park here 14 months ago. He said Wednesday he had sought the transfer to Lake Barkley. The lodge at Lake Barkley is now about 90 per cent complete, and the park will not officially open till next spring. Before coming here, Allen was manager of Natural Bridge State Park.

Lovely, a native of Hueysville, has been manager of Carter Caves State Park since September when he was transferred from Levi Jackson Wilderness Road State Park at London. His popularity at the London park was such that residents of the area protested his transfer. He will be succeeded at Carter Caves by Arthur F. Lamping, who has been assistant manager at Kentucky Dam Village.

The post at Jenny Wiley represents Lovely's second advancement in a year. He expressed his pleasure at the advancement and the opportunity of managing the larger Jenny Wiley facility and to be back home in Floyd county.

Mrs. Hensley Succumbs At Nursing Home Here

Mrs. Frances Hensley, 69, of Nolan, W. Va., died Saturday at Mountain Manor Convalescent Home, here.

She is survived by her husband, six daughters and four sons. Funeral services were held at the Nolan Free Will Baptist church, and burial was made in the Mountain View Memory Gardens at Maher, W. Va.

'Fired' Co-Op Mgr. Sues for Damages

D. J. Gambill, who was discharged this month by the Big Sandy Rural Electric Cooperative as manager and succeeded by Magistrate Bill Wells, of West Prestonsburg, has filed a $129,677, 71 damage suit in Johnson circuit court against the co-op and its board of directors.

Gambill alleges breach of contract, claiming he had been employed for the four-year term, Dec. 1, 1967 to Dec. 1, 1971. Wells, who had served as assistant manager, was named acting manager.

Time was when a house-raising wasn't news, but times have changed. It's news, these days, when the discovery of need doesn't send the discoverer dashing to the nearest welfare agency.

The plight of 63-year-old Amos Puckett and his wife, Ocie, who live near the very head of the left fork of Abbott Creek, resulted in community action.

Back in June, word came to John Thomas Hill, who lives a few miles away on the Abbott road, that the couple whom he had known all his life were not only in want of food and cash but also in danger of having the ancient house they were living in collapse over their heads. Hill took the couple a load of groceries, saw for himself the situation, and next day came to Prestonsburg.

Francis Stokes gave him a pair of shoes for Mrs. Puckett — her second pair of new shoes, incidentally, since she was married 25 or more years ago. Kroger's gave a basket of foodstuffs.

The couple at one time had an income of $120 a month — this from keeping a blind woman. But the woman died, and even this source of income was lost. Mr. Puckett had never paid social security. Neither he nor his wife have even the most rudimentary education. Neither is able to, or capable of, earning a living. The house which they rented for $5 a month was on its last pins, and on at least one occasion they had only milk and bread on the table. But while they had the $120 monthly income they contrived to pay $400 for 16 acres of hillside land.

And on a tiny part of that tract is where the men on Abbott Creek went to work, building the couple a 20x24-foot three-room dwelling — living room, bedroom and kitchen. The house-raising has been going on over a period of weeks, now. On one occasion men of the Bonanza Free Will Baptist Church joined in the effort. Men worked Saturdays on their days off regular jobs. Some worked in the late afternoons.

The women cooked and furnished the hungry workers food, as in the old days when a family in need found help in their neighbors.

Last Saturday, the roof went on. The small home is being sided with masonite. "We're trying to make it as maintenance-free as possible," Hill said. It will be heated by a pot-bellied stove, using coal or wood, or both.

The men will be working — and the women cooking — again, next Saturday. "This isn't a closed shop — we'll accept any help we can get," one said. And those who cannot help may, if they wish, (See Story No. 2, Page 6)

CONN FAMILY REUNION MEET HELD AT IVEL, AUGUST 31

The annual Conn family reunion festival was held August 31 at the Dan Knausz Memorial Park, at Ivel. The meeting was held in an air of friendliness and pageantry with a huge congregation in attendance. There was a 25% increase in attendance over the 1968 reunion.

The opening ceremonies included an official raising of the U. S. flag and the Conn family flag, which was made from white silk with a huge red C in the center. The flags were raised by Randy Conn, Chris Conn and Dwayne Conn, of Pack 15, Betsy Layne Cub Scouts. The opening prayer was offered by Darvene Conn. Harold Layne sang the hymn "How Great Thou Art," after which Rev. George Conn was introduced to begin the sermons. After Rev. Conn spoke, a break in the day's activities was made for lunch, picture-taking and handshaking. Good music filled the afternoon air in the background.

The afternoon session began with the Dean Conn family singing two songs, after which Mrs. Jewel Conn and daughter, Sherry, sang two songs. They were followed by Harold Layne, of Pikeville, singing two solos. Rev. Cohen Campbell was then introduced for a 15-minute sermon.

After the second break for visiting, Luther Conn was officially awarded the Outstanding Citizenship Award, which is awarded annually by the Conn Foundation to a Floyd county resident for meritorious service. This award was given to Rev. Conn for outstanding service to his community and to mankind.

The Okie Conn group sang some spirituals, after which Rev. Luther Conn delivered a 15-minute sermon.

Dennis Slone, of Allen, added to the color and folklore with two banjo tunes which included the oldtimer, "Wildwood Flower." The offering for the victims of Hurricane Camille was noteworthy, with almost everyone making a contribution. The Conn Foundation Fund was increased by offerings and pledges. Many plans and ideas were exchanged for ways in which the Conn Foundation may serve humankind.

The day ended in a salute to family forefathers, and a good beginning toward a genealogy was made. Darvene Conn, Ed Conn and Elmer Rice have done a great deal of research, and gave reports of their findings.

The Okie Conn group led the final songs during an old-fashioned "handshaking," after which "Till We Meet" was sung. The final day's prayer was offered by Thelma Conn.

Knott Natives, Brothers, Meet for the First Time

A family link broken in Eastern Kentucky 56 years ago was reformed recently in Grand Junction, Colo., when two half-brothers met for the first time.

The elder of the two is Bill Taylor, 77, of 348 White Ave., Grand Junction, a retired oil driller. The younger is Tom Taylor, San Diego, Calif. painter, who had not been born when his half-brother left home in 1913.

The elder brother learned, a few weeks ago, of Tom's existence. Tom had long-known there was an elder brother, somewhere, but did not know if he was yet alive. Their meeting was arranged through Bill Taylor's friend, Robert Phillips, of Paliades, Colo., who thought relatives should know of Bill's illness. The latter wasn't sure he had any relatives, but thought there might be one in town of his birth, Hindman, Knott county, Ky.

By telephone Phillips checked on the possibility and located a half-sister, Mrs. Hazel Robinson, at Martin, this county. Mrs. Robinson, in turn, passed the word along to Tom Taylor when he made one of his periodic calls, "just to keep in touch . . ."

Followed Tom Taylor's decision to go to Grand Junction. The half-brother whom he had never seen was waiting, and the two of them covered a lot of ground during the 48-hour visit.

The elder Taylor had lost all contact with his family after he left home at the age of 19. The years since then he has spent drilling for oil in California, Canada, Wyoming and Texas. His mother, a Knott county Cook, died when he was small. He knew his father had remarried and that a son had been born to his second marriage, but that was all. His father, Ambrose Taylor, was a veteran of the Civil War and at one time was sheriff and also a policeman in Virginia. He also was widely known as a horse-trader.

Tom told him of the whereabouts of three other surviving children — Mrs. Robinson and Allie Anderson, at Martin, and a brother, Troy Taylor, a retired Army officer now living in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Another brother, Link, has not been heard from in 26 years.

Considering a suggestion that members of the family get together soon, Bill vetoed Hindman as a meeting-place. Why? — because his memories of the Knott county-seat dated back to the old days when Hindman was "rough and wild" and torn by generations of feuding.

BILL AND HIS BEDFELLOW

Myrtle Davis brought to this office, a few weeks back, three old copies of this newspaper, and I intend to put one of them to work for me, right now. I am reprinting from that Sept. 1, 1939 edition the following yarn which was told by the late "Black" Bill Marshall and used in this very column. Said Bill:

"Years ago, I went over into West Virginia, a job-huntin'. And the first day I ran into a funny experience. Toward night, I started looking for a place to stay till mornin' and finally wound up at a house where they took me in, gave me supper, and after a while, told me that I could sleep in the back room.

"We were eatin' in the kitchen, and I figured the back room was the next one back of that; so I went in and piled into bed. About that time I noticed that somebody else already had gone to bed.

"He was layin' quiet-like with the sheet pulled up over him, but I figured I had made so much noise gettin' in that I had disturbed him, so I began gettin' friendly. 'A feller gets tired and sleepy after a hard day's work, don't he?' I says. 'What kind of work are you doin'?' But he didn't say anything and I figure he's too wore out to talk. So I settle down to go to sleep.

"But in, pretty soon, comes a boy and a girl, who sit down in front of the fire and start love-makin', talkin' quiet-like. Both of us fellers in the bed lay quiet, of course.

"Finally, when it's gettin' pretty late the young man leans over toward the gal and says, 'Honey ain't you gonna kiss me before I go?'"

"And she says, 'Ain't you ashamed of yourself now, and that poor man back there in the bed—dead?'"

"It's a shame those folks didn't tell me, right at the start, that my bedfellow had been killed that day at a loggin' job and a tree had mashed him up. They could have saved that window I went out of, all wrapped up in the sheet, and could have kept that young couple from bein' scared to death when they thought I was the corpse flyin' out the window."

THIS RINGS TRUE

Joe Creason in his excellent Courier-Journal column tells the following anecdote relating to Appellate Chief Justice Edward P. Hill, and it is a story any of us who know Judge Hill well can readily recognize as true:

ONE OF THE TRULY outstanding and colorful jurists in this state is Edward P. Hill of Prestonsburg, a member now of the seven-man Kentucky Court of Appeals.

Before being elected to the high court, he was judge of Floyd circuit court, a position he filled with great distinction. Being a man of the soil, Judge Hill is as natural as freckles on a country boy's nose; in fact, he was known on occasion to come to a short hearing in his circuit court straight from an early morning session of corn hoeing while still wearing his farm clothes.

All of which is background for proving that Judge Hill hasn't changed as he has moved up the judicial ladder.

When the Hills moved to Frankfort after his election, he was faced with the necessity of outfitting himself with a tuxedo to wear to the three or four formal functions held each year for the appellate judges. He debated at considerable length whether to purchase a dress suit or merely rent one, since he'd use it so few times.

"Go on and buy one," his wife urged. "After all, I can save the tax and bury you in it."

"Oh, no," Judge Hill rebelled. "I certainly wouldn't want to go to meet my maker in a tuxedo—He never would recognize me!"

Mr. Bradbury appealed by newspaper advertisement and radio broadcast this week for a return to work. He said:

"We remain willing to review all issues that may exist, once the mines go back to work."

If company and union representatives fail to agree at a joint meeting, he added, the company will abide by the decision of any third party selected by union and company.

Of the total number of idle workers, 260 are employed at Spurlock and about 640 at Wheelwright and Price, where the company contends there is no dispute.

promises to get out of the business, I think it is my duty to give that man a chance."

Later, Circuit Judge Hollie Conley defended probation for first offenders, reminding ministers in the gathering of the principle of forgiveness. He said he was aware the courts are criticized for probations. But, he added, "When a man comes and says he has quit, and begs for a chance, I have probated them. Probation can always be revoked, you know, if the defendant fails to live up to it."

The Rev. Harve Johnson, of Melvin, drew the biggest laugh of the evening when he told of probation in his own case. He said that in 1934 he was brought before Circuit Judge Edward P. Hill for stealing his precinct for the Wets in a local option election. "Judge Hill sent me home and told me to behave."

The minister was a leader of the Dry fight in his section, and he announced he is ready to do whatever is necessary, at whatever risk, to help make the dry law a reality.

The Rev. James Harmon commented that "perhaps we are too anxious to punish and should do more to reach these people and try to persuade them to quit bootlegging."

Personal and group involvement was urged by every official present, and to this league members agreed.

Judge Conley suggested that wherever bootlegging is reported a delegation of, say, six, should go, approach the suspect in friendly fashion, tell him they hope the report they have heard is not true, but ask him to quit if it is true. Then, he said, the suspect should be firmly told that if he does not quit, the group would do all it could to see that he is arrested and prosecuted.

Dallas Sammons, of Prestonsburg, told of the work of a delegation from the fellowship group of his church which acted along the lines suggested by Judge Conley. It worked, at least temporarily, Sammons said. He mentioned one or more bootleggers who are on public assistance, and suggested that perhaps the government would be interested in knowing about their illegal activities.

Troy Hall, of Allen, told the story of a truck being confiscated on its arrival in Ashland from Ironton, O., with a load of intoxicants and of its subsequent sale. He suggested such action on properties involved in bootlegging in this county.

Gorman Collins, of Prestonsburg, asked why jurors not used in circuit court not be used in quarterly court trials, since the circuit jurors are of superior quality. Judge Stumbo told him he has used these jurors when possible.

Pete Grigsby, Jr., McDowell high school basketball coach, spoke of the flagrant dry law violations in his vicinity, as did the Rev. Williams, Deacon Terry and others.

State Representative W. J. Reynolds commented on the Legislative Research Committee report that most users of narcotics are high school students and college freshmen. He expressed concern at the threat posed to youth by both alcohol and narcotics such as marijuana.

Others joining in the informal session of comment, questions and answers were Rev. W. D. Jagers, Prestonsburg, Carmel Akers, Grethel. The Rev. Jagers pointed out that responsibility belongs to citizens and officials alike. Mr. Akers suggested that weak liquor laws might well be corrected by the Legislature.

Summing up, the Rev. Heintzleman said, "We want to help. We are going to stand together . . . and work to keep this county as it is, or better."

The invocation was said by the Rev. Jagers; the benediction, by Rev. Vannucci.

BOW-AND-ARROW SEASON FOR DEER TO OPEN OCT. 1

Frankfort, Ky. — The bow-and-arrow season for whitetail, fallow and European red deer will open Oct. 1 and continue through Oct. 31; then will reopen Dec. 1 and extend through Dec. 31, and every county in the Commonwealth will be open to hunting.

The limit is one deer per season, per hunter, except on the Ft. Campbell area in Christian and Trigg counties where a special two-deer concession has been arranged. Deer of either sex may be taken by bowhunters during daylight hours only.

Each year more archery hunters take advantage of Kentucky's long season — 62 days of hunting. Last year, for instance, more than 6,000 participated in the statewide hunt and many were successful in their quest for a deer. This year an even greater number is expected in the fields and woods and indications are that they will find a greater herd than ever before.

Archery deer hunters may not carry firearms of any kind during the archery season. Deer may not be taken with boats, or any type of vehicles, or any domestic animals, including dogs.

Each hunter who kills a deer must immediately attach to the deer the locking tag provided with the deer permit. The tag must be attached by piercing the skin and membrane between the bones of the hind leg just above the hocks and locking the metal tag around one bone so that it cannot be removed without destroying the tag.

The tag must remain attached to the deer until the carcass is processed and packaged by locker plant, butcher or hunter. The postal card must be separated from the metal tag when tagging the deer and retained as proof of ownership should the tag be lost.

After taking a deer, bow and arrow hunters must leave the hunting area. They cannot assist others in taking deer.

Cats Hang On To Win Squeaker; Matewan Next

The Prestonsburg high school Black Cats won their second game of the season Friday night to keep their 1969 season record clean but were forced to make a last-ditch stand in closing minutes of the game to hold off a strong Elkhorn City eleven.

The Cats won, 20-14. The last-minute defense would have been less trying, had not Wayne Brown's 80-yard touchdown return of the kickoff in the second half been nullified by a clipping penalty. Films of the game show clearly that there was no clipping.

Brown scored the first Prestonsburg marker on a five-year plunge. The second Cat touchdown came on a 60-yard run from scrimmage by Mark Miller, senior quarterback, and the final score was made on Brown's 20-yard run.

Three penalties helped Elkhorn City surge back in the second half to go 60 yards for a touchdown after trailing 20-8. Potter, a stand-out for the visitors, scored the marker on a pass from Radloff. The last three minutes were played inside the Prestonsburg 20, and the Cougars were knocking on the door from the two when time ran out for them.

Wheelwright, Floyd county's only other high grid team, lost to Pikeville, 6-0. The Black Cats hit the road for the first time this season Friday night when they play a strong Matewan, W. Va. eleven.

Coach McClellan said his charges are in good physical condition for the game, with Mike George mending from a shoulder injury and Robert Bryant's leg responding to treatment.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

CRITICAL OF COURTS

Editor, The Times: I read your report, "Grand Jury Begins Dope Investigation," in your September 4, 1969 issue with considerable disgust. If your quotation of Judge Conley is correct, he evidently assumes that the people of Floyd County are "dopes," when he stated, "Now if those who worked so for the Dry cause will work only half as hard toward getting the law enforced, bootlegging will be stopped."

If anyone should review the record of the circuit and fiscal courts in our county, it is perfectly obvious that it is the fault of those courts that we have no law enforcement in the county. The record shows that the penalty imposed by the courts for bootlegging, chiefly, was so meager, in most cases, that it had no deterrent effect on the bootlegger. The penalty was paid and business continued as usual, and no bootlegger has been put out of business.

Drinks are available all over the county and the "bootleggers" are operating at the pleasure of the courts, who are well aware of every one that is in business.

Dope peddlers have seen, from the bootlegging situation, that they, too, could operate in Floyd county with impunity, so that they are encouraged in this manner to open up for business.

The grand jury, if it is interested in doing a good service for Floyd county, should review all the bootlegging cases that have been in the courts, noting the courts' treatment of these cases and criticize its members for such poor enforcement.

Young people purchase their drinks easily — the seller paying no attention to age, only the color of his money.

There is serious lack of law-enforcement in other areas. There is little co-operation with the State Police in promoting highway safety. Our highway accident ratio is among the highest in the state, which is reflected in high auto insurance rates as well as in our injured, killed and maimed people, many of them very young.

Litter along our highways is of alarming proportion, with most prominent alongside our highways the beer can. Previous grand jury has recommended that action should be taken along this line. Little action has been taken and the "litterbug" still carries on with impunity.

Our county has been "dubbed" a poverty-stricken area. The only cases in which we are poor is in our law-enforcement and the publicity we have attracted.

I have raised my children in the county, only to have them have to go elsewhere for attractive employment. Other young people have similar experience — such that few of them stay. Such exodus is reflected in the gradual decrease in the number of children attending our schools. I would like to see the picture changed so that Floyd county would be an attractive place for industry to locate. We have the resources for such industry, if we could display an attractive character.

The people of Floyd county, as a whole, are among the best. The beauty of our hills is incomparable. I would like to see their best interest served.

Auxier Plant Ups Hourly Pay Rate

The 150 employees of the Princess Manufacturing Company at Auxier will receive a 50-cent-per-hour package increase in wages over the next three years under terms of the contract signed with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, union representative of its workers.

The contract, which became effective Sept. 2, is for three years and it provides various other benefits to workers. Stefan Magura, plant manager, said. Among the contract provisions are seven paid holidays, three weeks vacation (two in July and one at Christmas time), added insurance and retirement benefits.

The minimum hourly wage of $1.75 is increased immediately by 20 cents, with a 15-cent raise scheduled next year and another for 15-cents an hour in 1971. Retirement benefits are increased under the new contract, Mr. Magura said, include hospital room (semi-private) and board for employees and their dependents, up to 60 days; an increase of allowance for hospital incidentals from $300 to $500; maternity allowance, doubled. Weekly disability pay is 50% of weekly earnings (maximum of $60) for a maximum period of 18 weeks.

Retirement benefits are increased under the new contract from $70 to $75 a month, and retirement because of permanent and total disability was raised from $30 to $75.

Princess Manufacturing executed its first labor contract with Amalgamated Clothing Workers 18 months ago when the Auxier plant began the manufacture of a nationally advertised line of wearing apparel.

The Auxier factory, an Eastern Kentucky pioneer in its field, began production in June, 1965. In February last year it moved into a new building there.

Nature Trails

By RUFUS M. REED

THE CALL OF THE GREAT OUTDOORS

Many people these days are feeling the call of the great outdoors and are waking up to the need of preserving our wildlife, our beautiful scenery, our forests and wild flowers. Many now realize that some of our best and most rugged scenery is being wiped out by industrial expansion, and much of our mountain grandeur has been ruined by such atrocious practices as strip-mining. Also the advance of settlement, the reclaiming of swamplands for subdivisions have wiped out some of the best habitats for wildlife. So people are now more determined than ever to try to save the beauty of rural America from further destruction, and to try to save the wildlife which has become alarmingly scarce in many areas.

I get many letters from persons seeking advice on how to establish different kinds of preserves and nature sanctuaries. Especially those who are looking forward to retirement want some hobby that will take them in the outdoors, where they can have trees, birds and animals. A prominent doctor recently said, "Bird study is one of the most healthful outdoor pursuits you can take up." And the study of trees, wild flowers and animals is conducive to promoting health and peace of mind. There is healing power in a close association with the beautiful things of the outdoors.

When children are taken on nature study walks in fields or woods and their eyes are opened to the wonders of the outdoors, this is one of the best kinds of education for them. Many authorities say it is a good preventive of juvenile delinquency; a child who is taught to love animals, birds and the beauties of nature will not want to kill or destroy anything, nor will he be inclined to go out on wild escapades. That is why many of our fine groups like the 4-H Clubs, Scouts and others have Nature Study Programs.

In planning for a hobby for the retirement years, many persons have in mind to establish a preserve for game birds, to try to raise them; some plan to try raising the ring-necked pheasant and quail; others say they are going to try raising wild turkeys and to establish them in the hills again as in pioneer times. One local conservation club, to my knowledge, hatched out a dozen wild turkey eggs this past summer and turned the birds out in the hills. Now these wild turkeys are often seen flying from hill to hill, lending a touch of pioneer times to the scene. So far, not a single hunter has tried to harm these wild turkeys, as most all would like to see them become abundant again.

Go camping for a day or so this summer and take the kids along; let them gain direct contact with the world of living things and learn how various creatures live and survive.

If possible, join some nature study group or conservation club. These clubs are now being organized in many towns of the Tri-State region; we also have bird clubs, garden clubs, flower clubs, all of which are devoted to preserving our scenic beauty, our wild flowers, birds and wildlife.

Resolve to identify all forms of life around you — in your own backyard, or in the fields of places nearby. Learn the plants, trees, insects, birds and animals. Many pleasant surprises will come to you as you become more acquainted with nature in her various forms. In a single acre of land in any old field or clearing, there are more living things than there are people in a large city. It has been estimated that over a million spiders live in a small area of an acre or so; and where there are spiders, there are also insects. Many different kinds of creatures live underfoot, underground, in every old stump, decaying log, or hollow tree; all these hundreds of different kinds of creatures make their home in these.

To learn the wild flowers and trees of your own neighborhood is a worthy aim; it is fine to go on a nature study hike with someone who knows the names of these and can help in identifying them.

When you take the children on a nature trip, let them hunt the specimens for study and let them do most of the talking; listen to them give their impressions of the world of living things; you will find that most children are inclined to be kind to all creatures and have an inborn desire to protect them from harm. Children are cruel only when they see adults being cruel to anything.

Lastly, get a good set of nature books, such as the Golden Nature Guides, and study them and urge the children to do the same. In my next article I will write on how to establish a nature sanctuary.

help by contributing to the Amos and Ocie Fund set up at the First National Bank here, or to John T. Hill.

David Sloan, of Flatwoods, Ky., one of those who worked on the building, has collected some furniture for the couple. The Big Sandy REA has supplied wiring and light receptacles. Two REA officials made the required cash deposit.

Amos and Ocie Puckett likely will not live as long as they have already lived, but they'll live better. Now comes word that he will benefit from a small monthly check for disability social security.

Mrs. Puckett says she would like a refrigerator of some sort. And a washing machine. She has never done the family wash at anything except a scrub-board.

It is estimated the entire project will cost $1,200. And that will not come from the county, state or federal treasury. The only help from a public agency came when the county improved the road to the site.

Mr. and Mrs. Puckett themselves had a small part in the construction job. Although they looked out on a discouraging future, somehow they clung to a dream of, one day, building themselves a little house on that hillside land of theirs. So, every time they had a little change coming to them at the store, they spent it on nails.

So it was that the gallon or so of nails they have accumulated over many months have gone into the home they had hoped, somehow, to build for themselves.

Ratliff Explains Children's Benefits

Daryl E. Ratliff, manager of the Pikeville Social Security office, announced recently that some confusion may exist concerning benefits payable to children.

A child may qualify on his father's or mother's record even though he may be 18 years old or older, he said. In fact, there is no age limitation. This type of benefit is known as disabled children's benefit.

In order to qualify as a disabled child of a person who is receiving monthly social security benefits or who died insured under social security, it is necessary to establish that the disability existed before the age of 18. If the child was injured or became ill after age 18, they do not qualify as a disabled adult child. This is why it is extremely difficult at times to find medical evidence that will establish that the child became disabled before age 18. The doctor who treated the child may have retired or died and we cannot secure conclusive evidence concerning when the child's disability was first discovered. Also the degree of the disability is taken into consideration when a decision is made as to whether or not the child qualifies as a disabled adult child. Many children are disabled at birth or during childhood and are able to lead useful, productive lives.

If you have a child in your home that you believe may meet the requirements for disabled children's benefits, Ratliff continued, you should contact your nearest social security office, regardless of the present age of the child. The Pikeville social security office is located at 2nd and Division Streets in Pikeville.

C&O Plans To Lay Off 1,000 at Raceland Plant

Raceland, Ky. — Northeastern Kentucky's second largest employer announced yesterday that more than 1,000 employees at the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway's Raceland shops complex here will be furloughed this fall, beginning next Monday.

The company said some 690 men will be laid off beginning Monday and that another 400 will be furloughed on completion of a gondola car building program.

The first furloughs will come as the Oct. 20 completion date approaches for construction of 2,500 coal hopper cars. By Dec. 22, the gondola building program will be completed.

The C&O said the furloughs are expected normally toward the end of each calendar year. The 1970 program will begin here shortly after the first of next year.

The C&O, which employs some 2,000 persons in the Ashland and Russell area of Boyd and Greenup counties, is second on employment in Northeast Kentucky behind the Ashland works of Armco Steel Corp., which has up to 5,000 on its payroll during the year. Ashland Oil and Refining Co. employs some 1,700 persons in the tri-state area.

This is the way it's going to be. Pontiac's 70's

Surprised that Pontiac's setting the style for the umpteenth straight year? Of course not.

But you may be a bit dazzled to find out that Pontiac finally outdid Pontiac.

Take Bonneville. From the strong, new bumper grille to the standard 455 under the hood, it's a rouser.

Inside: instant limousine. So luxurious some of the traditional big boys are already screaming.

One of the nicest things we could have done for Grand Prix's luxury was to leave it alone. We did. But we popped in a 455 V-8 for you to order. (It's an old Pontiac proverb that luxury should have power.)

Enter LeMans Sport. A brand-new series in the Pontiac stable. Wait'll competition sees it pull the new 400-cubes-under-the-hood trick. We'll show you that one if you check the right box on the order form.

By now, you've spotted our '70 GTO. But maybe you haven't heard it. A sound so tough we've thrown modesty to the wind and dubbed GTO "The Humber."

This is Pontiac '70. And we figure this is the way driving's going to be. So why wait?

It's at your Pontiac dealer's now.

District Governor Is Club Speaker

"Every clubmember has at least one talent and can make some worthwhile contribution to life," Anne Hoffman, Seventh district governor, Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs, emphasized speaking on "The Federation" last Monday evening to the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club. The occasion was the first program meeting of the year, held at the vacation trailer-home of Mrs. Mervil Dixon, Jenny Wiley State Park, club president.

"Club women have always been interested in justice, welfare, social reform and women's rights. To these challenges have now been added racial problems, population explosion, education reform, air pollution, water shortages, conservation of our natural resources, world problems — nations getting along with nations — world peace, changes in government, and, of course, family life," Mrs. Hoffman said.

Mrs. Otto Martin, program leader, introduced the speaker. Mrs. Hoffman was accompanied by Mrs. Isabel Reed. Both are from Drift.

A cook-out supper was served prior to the program by hostesses, Mrs. Cui Wells, Mrs. Milton Trusty, Jr., Mrs. S. M. Martin, Mrs. M. M. Collins, and Mrs. Mervil Dixon.

Martin, Mrs. James Bunge, Mrs. Hansel Bradley, Mrs. Lula Coburn, Mrs. Charles Martin, Mrs. Otto Martin, and the above mentioned guests and hostesses.

Pippa Passes, Ky. — Two Alice Lloyd College students began working in Boston, Mass., September 8 as part of the college's experiential education program.

Glenn Davis, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Davis, Wheelwright, and Astor Hatton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hatton, Whitesburg, left the campus September 6 to begin work in the Boston Metropolitan State Hospital as ward assistants.

Experiential education, a new part of Alice Lloyd's educational program, actually began ahead of schedule. Most of the students who will be involved this fall will leave for their jobs after the first term, which ends September 24. The positions in the Boston Metropolitan State Mental Hospital had to be filled by September 8.

Crime Councils Find Problems Are Similar

Regional crime councils organized in the state earlier this year have been doing fact-finding work, and now their reports on the problems they have found and their recommendations on ways to meet the situations discovered are beginning to reach the Kentucky Crime Commission.

The Big Sandy Regional Council, headed by Harris S. Howard, Prestonsburg attorney, has found situations similar to those plaguing other parts of the state.

Although the Big Sandy Council is non-urban (it comprises Floyd, Johnson, Pike, Martin and Magoffin counties), its problems of mounting juvenile crime and low salaries for officers are akin to those of other areas of Kentucky. (In this area the average salary of a policeman is $325 a month.)

Howard feels that rural crime differs from urban crime only in that there is less of it. "We have the same types of people doing the same things, but with less frequency," he reported.

Out of the several meetings held by the Big Sandy council since its organization in July has come to Howard a conviction that some positive progress toward achieving law and order can be made.

"We need to find some way to help the state's courts and law-enforcement agencies, and we have begun to take the first steps toward that goal," he reported.

Each regional council views its job as that of assessing the present law-enforcement system in its locale and of making recommendations for improvement.

Larry Hopkins, chairman of the Lexington Regional Council takes one step beyond simply making recommendations. "It's time," he asserted, "we made crime illegal, and the only way we can accomplish that is to involve Joe Public in the effort."

His police committee found the starting salaries of patrolmen there — $500 to $525 — inadequate. Hopkins said his committee expects to look into organized crime in Fayette county before it finishes its work.

Health Program Talked At Joint Club Meet

A combined meeting of the Wheelwright Woman's Club and the Left Beaver Kiwanis Club was held Sept. 8 at the home of Mrs. Sue Hutchinson, of Price.

A pot-luck dinner was served and a very informative program on the new Kentucky Comprehensive Health Program was presented by Roy Penix, of Inez, five-county supervisor for this program.

Attending were Fred Salisbury, president, Kiwanis Club, Mrs. Sue Hutchinson, president, Woman's Club, Mrs. Delbert Davis, Mrs. Alma Souleyrette, Ralph Blankenship, Mayor and Mrs. Oscar Smith, Judge and Mrs. Paul Watson, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Jessee, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Stumbo, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Hagans, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Bradbury, Dr. J. L. Patterson.

Cooper Argues Distinction In Mines Be Retained

Washington, Sept. 9 — Senator John Sherman Cooper today urged the House Committee on Education and Labor to retain the distinction between gassy mines and non-gassy mines in mine safety legislation it is considering.

The measure proposed by the Nixon administration would abolish the present distinction between gassy and non-gassy mines. The result would be, Senator Cooper said, that non-gassy mines in Kentucky and West Virginia would be required to spend millions of dollars unnecessarily in purchasing the same safety equipment as required of large, gassy mines. He quoted one estimate that in Harlan county, Kentucky, alone, the cost of the required new equipment would amount to approximately ten million dollars.

Senator Cooper told the committee that the record of gas explosions in American mines in recent years indicates strongly that non-gassy mines do not need the same safety equipment that conditions in gassy mines require and that the cause of safety would gain little by the installation of such equipment.

He said that between 1952 and 1969 there were only 52 explosions in more than 3,000 non-gassy mines, resulting in 27 fatalities and 54 injuries. By contrast, he said, there were, in the same period, 381 explosions in less than 400 gassy mines, with 374 fatalities and 427 injuries.

"In order to require non-gassy mines to install the same costly equipment as gassy mines," Senator Cooper said, "one must fly against the facts, against the differing characteristics of gassy and non-gassy mines and against the record of the Federal Bureau of Mines."

"I have said many times that if the proposal to abolish the classification between gassy and non-gassy mines would promote safety, I would support it even though it meant economic loss. It will mean economic loss not only to the coal operators but also to the miners thrown out of work and to the related industries and to the communities and areas in which these non-gassy mines are operated.

"In Eastern Kentucky, the overwhelming proportion of coal mines are non-gassy, small mines. Millions of dollars in the form of Federal Aid has been spent in the Eastern part of Kentucky and in similar areas of West Virginia. Coal mining is the principal occupation in these areas and if the mines are closed, anyone can see the effect upon the well-publicized areas of Eastern Kentucky and West Virginia."

TIDBITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

INFLUENCES

Along with the study by historians of the migration of people from the Atlantic coastal area into the other regions of America have gone two other related studies. Students of regional speech can trace these migrations almost as accurately as can the historians; and the students of folklore, especially of folk customs and arts, can do well in establishing just where the pioneers came from.

In the winter of 1968-69 and on far into 1969 I reviewed all available studies of words that can be traced to Atlantic coastal areas. As would be expected, most of the words of the Mammoth Cave region came by way of Virginia and the Carolinas. However, hosts of them tie in with western Pennsylvania and the migration of Scotch-Irish and Pennsylvania Germans into the Valley of Virginia and from there to Kentucky, southern Ohio and Indiana, Tennessee, and on across the Mississippi River.

The Department of Highways would like to contact anyone having knowledge of the next of kin of the deceased buried in the above mentioned cemetery. Address all correspondence, giving name, address, and phone number to: Kentucky Department of Highways, Division of Right of Way, P.O. Box 2468, Pikeville, Kentucky 41501.

The Great Dream

We used to be a nation of dreamers. Some of that is missing now, but we have it as part of our heritage. Our forefathers, those who founded our country, were dreamers. They dreamed of a country where man would be free, where he could live in dignity and hope and the promise of a better tomorrow.

They lived that dream, believed in it so much they were willing to give their lives for it. Nothing could stop them from reaching out for that dream — not even all the combined power of the king of England. They took that dream and with it they beat the unbeatable foe, they conquered the unconquerable land, they traveled the untravelable roads. What great dreamers they were!
But they were not the greatest dreamers this world has had. There was a small group of men who had even greater dreams than did the founders of our country. Back nearly two thousand years ago, there was a group of eleven men who had a dream. They dreamed that they could conquer the world without ever lifting a sword or firing a gun. They dreamed that, one day, every man, woman and child could and would share with them the new faith they had found. They dreamed that, one day, this world would be ruled by love.
It was a great dream they had —so great, in fact, that the world thought they were crazy. The world laughed at them, ridiculed them, even persecuted and killed them. But the dream could not be destroyed. It lived on. They planted that dream of a world ruled by love in the hearts and minds of other men. The dream lived and grew. Soon that dream had conquered men of all climates, all classes, all races.

There are those who are still dreaming that dream today. They are inspired by a Carpenter Who touched the hearts of common men as no other man. He planted that dream in their hearts, nourished it, watched it grow. It is the dream of a world where men are brothers, where we help instead of hurt, share instead of steal, give instead of grab. It is a dream of a world ruled by brotherly love.
A foolish dream? An unrealistic dream? An illogical dream? Yes, it has been called all those things. But that doesn't stop men from dreaming it and from trying to make that dream come true. It is, in a way, an unfulfilled dream. But men still search after it.

The call goes out from this Galilean Carpenter today for more dreamers. Few there are who dare to give themselves to that dream. It seems unreachable to most people. It is certainly a big dream, and requires the best there is in a man. For this reason, very few dare dream that dream. For it is a challenge, the world's greatest challenge. It isn't a dream for sissies, or weaklings, or lazy men. No, it is a dream for men, great men.

If you are a dreamer looking for a dream to give yourself to, there is none greater in all the world. And one day, with His help, the dream will come true.

'Sweetheart' Contracts Still Exist in County

By KYLE VANCE and WARD SINCLAIR
(In The Courier-Journal)

Drift, Ky. — The "sweetheart contract" — letting some small unionized coal operators pay less than union wages — remains a recognized instrument in Eastern Kentucky coal production.

Joseph A. Yablonski, seeking to unseat W. A. (Tony) Boyle as president of United Mine Workers (UMW), has invoked the issue anew in his election campaign.

Challenged to name names and places, he singled out the Beaver Creek area of Floyd county in Eastern Kentucky and other areas in Virginia and West Virginia.

The candidate said that "from 10 to 20 truck miners" in the Drift area, on Left Beaver Creek, pay union-members employees $15 to $20 a day, compared to union scales of $28 to $33 a day (eight hour shift).

The Courier-Journal, taking a second look at the "sweetheart" contracts, has found the number of such operators to more closely approach "60 to 70" truck mines paying as little as $20 a day in the Left Beaver area. None could be found paying less.

The "sweetheart" arrangement was traced by the newspaper in 1962 to an origin in Frankfort, when the state, the industry, the union and rebel "roving pickets" had stakes in improving miner wages.

To pacify the roving pickets, who had used terror tactics — bombings, the dynamiting of railroad bridges and coal tipples, shootings and the beating of some coal workers — it was agreed that the union would not police operators who signed UMW contracts, not so long as they paid the UMW welfare and pension royalty of 40 cents per ton of coal produced.

The amount they paid the miners would come into dispute only if the miners themselves complained. In that case, a grievance procedure was set up.

These findings by the newspaper remain unquestioned today, either by the union or the operators, and the so-called sweetheart contract remains in force.

On the other hand, the union emphasizes one point. It will correct any contract violation brought to its attention through prescribed channels — the grievance procedure. On the record, it knows of no wage payments below contract minimums.

Small operators have sought without success to win contract agreements less demanding than those of larger companies. All operators sign the same contract.

Wage Scale Defended
Yablonski's charge in Washington last week that underpaid miners will not enter grievances for fear of their jobs was answered by Carson Hibbetts, president of UMW District 30 in Kentucky and District 28 in Virginia.

"No member has to be scared if he reports a grievance," Hibbetts said. "He is protected by the contract. They (operators) cannot run him off for protesting his wages or anything else, and we will see that they don't."

"Any operator we find paying less than contract, we will see that they do pay. He (the operator) will be checked immediately if we hear he is violating the wage agreement."

B. F. Reed, president of Turner-Elkhorn Coal Co., which buys and re-sells much of the coal produced by small operators in the Left Beaver Creek area, defends the lower wages paid by some small operators.

The small operator, he said, is at a competitive disadvantage; his operation, for the most part, is at seams where the "easy" coal has been mined. He cannot afford modern, more-efficient mining machinery used by large operators; and he must sell his coal in competition with the large operations.

Reed was instrumental in winning some concessions from the UMW during the 1962 roving-picket disorders. He attended the negotiations in the office of Carl Caba, then state commissioner of labor.

"What I think they (UMW) told us was that if a man was satisfied with his job and didn't come to them with a grievance, they would do nothing," Reed recalled.

Soon after negotiations ended, the roving pickets stopped their forays and large numbers of small operators in Floyd, Pike, Letcher and Harlan counties signed UMW contracts. The "Kentucky agreement" apparently later was carried into Virginia and West Virginia.

Reed agreed that "sweetheart" wages are paid by most of the 60 to 70 small operators mining on Left Beaver Creek. At the same time, he said, some are paying even higher than union wages on "piece work" terms.

Labor Scarcity Noted
He singled out Ligon Preparation Co. on Hall's Branch, whose 28 workers during one period averaged $42 a shift, compared to the UMW top pay of $33.

When the Sun 'Hitches a Ride On Haze,' Visit the Mountains

By HELEN PRICE STACEY

For those who travel in the incredibly beautiful days of early autumn, a trip to the mountains where two commonwealths meet is an exciting one laced together with legend and lore of a fantastic region.

Where Kentucky meets Virginia atop the forested crags and peaks that old ones speak of as the "Narries of the Mountains" the traveler not only thinks of a future when a vast populace must have such places for retreats, but he also takes a mental trip backward in time. He envisions the Long Hunters seeking game with their accurate flintlock rifles, backwoodsman clearing land for cabin and corn crop, the settler alert for Indian signs that meant danger to loved ones.

Standing on one of the scenic overlooks in the Breaks Interstate Park of Kentucky and Virginia, 1969'ers are awed at the heights and depths, the massive timber, needled peaks, the dense thickets of laurel and rhododendron, boulder-strewn Russell Fork of the Big Sandy River, more than a mile below, and alongside the mountain stream the railroad tracks leading from a tunnel and a train that moves like a zipper through the canyon.

There are thoughts like: How did man and Indian scale the mile-high cliffs or descend to the gorge below? How did they follow dim trails and Indian traces through the dark fastnesses of the forests? How did they penetrate such a wilderness . . . and endure?

Nature's survival of the fittest weeded out the weak, leaving the sturdy and brave-hearted — the strongest and the shrewdest of the Indians and the hardest and most ingenious of the settlers.

Within a 2,500 acre parkland under private lease but administered by a board of Virginians and Kentuckians are acres of picnic tables in shaded, wooded sites, marked and protected scenic overlooks, camping area, lake, Rhododendron Lodge, motel and restaurant. (The restaurant is not air-conditioned, a feature most tourists look for on a hot day, even atop a breeze swept mountain.)

But for those who seek beauty — spectacular scenery — the Breaks Interstate Park which is sometimes referred to as the Grand Canyon of the South, Breaks of the Mountain, Breaks of the Sandy, and in the vernacular of the mountaineer the Narrows (Narries) of the Mountains — there is much to see.

Before the white man the Indian made traces and war trails through the dark forests; the Shawnee, Cherokee, Delaware, Wyandot, Mingo and Choctaw were familiar with paths up the peaks to the great overlooks that surveyed a magnificent territory. Here is a part of the region that tells the story of one of Kentucky's greatest heroines, Jenny Wiley.

During those days of Indian Summer, when the sun hitches a ride on haze to spatter gold dust on trees clad in rusty frocks of crimson, gold, russet and green, a haunting sadness recalls the dark-haired Jean Sellards Wiley. In the Highlands of Virginia in 1787-89 the woman to go down in history as Jenny (Jennie) Wiley was captured by Indians after seeing them kill and scalp three of her four children and her half-brother Andrew. She was forced to march with them through the rough, dense wilderness, carrying her baby and expecting another

SUNDAY GUESTS

Mr. and Mrs. Oak Mullins, of David, had as their Sunday guests Mrs. C. C. Hertel and Mrs. Ruth C. Brooke, of Hinton, W. Va., Mrs. Sarah C. McCord, of Montgomery, Alabama, Mrs. Rachael C. Ratliff, of Pikeville, Miss Charlotte Mullins, of Frankfort, Miss Kitty White, of Lexington, Mrs. Emily R. White, of Pikeville, and Mrs. Joe R. Mullins and daughter, Susan, of Pikeville.

child. By the time the group reached the Ohio, nine days later, the young woman saw her baby killed and scalped and later after the birth of her son he too was killed.

Near the Breaks Interstate Park of Pike county, Kentucky and Buchanan county, Virginia is a new Kentucky playground. Fishtap Reservoir, near Pikeville, was dedicated in 1968 and now covers 2,631 acres to make a lake extending more than 25 miles. Holding backwaters of Levisa Fork of Big Sandy, it, too, is a link in the Jenny Wiley story and her travel on Levisa Fork during her capture by Indians and later escape. After making her escape to Harman's Station where a blockhouse had been built by Matthias Harmon and others of her friends, she told many times the tortuous route she traveled with her captors and the almost unbearable agony she suffered when her children and half brother were killed.

Jenny Wiley State Park, near Prestonsburg, immortalizes the brave pioneer who also traveled John's Creek in her grueling adventure — the creek is now a popular waterway for sportsmen created by Dewey Dam in the early 1950's.

From Prestonsburg, the traveler can follow more of the Jenny Wiley story by stopping at a marker on U. S. 23, visiting the many creeks the woman used as guidelines for her escape and still farther on he can stop at famous Blockhouse Bottom where a highway marker attests to the impact of Matthias Harmon in the settlement of the region.

Throughout this vast segment of Appalachia is wondrous scenery, exciting history and a feeling of progress. Alongside the highways are homes of descendants of the hardy pioneer men and women. Some of the homes are as magnificent in their way as the scenery, set amid landscaped grounds that lead directly to dark forests and hills. Many of the homes are ordinary, and some are small cottages set on minute plots of land that slant against the towering mountains. But almost without exception each home is neat with a clipped lawn and flowers adding color to the greenness.

If this part of Appalachia falls within the poverty pocket, it is not apparent, for in these homes live people who care and who know that in their very surroundings they possess riches beyond counting. They are proud of their mountain heritage . . . these offspring of the intrepid Long Hunters and the dauntless pioneer women who found the mountains crossable and the region to their liking.

In the Fall, the Highlands of Kentucky and Virginia peaks fall in fold on fold of brilliant color to merge with shadowy mountains in a blue-haze distance. Some say from these Kentucky-Virginia Highlands one can see Ohio to the north, Tennessee and North Carolina to the south. Perhaps . . . on a clear day!

TIDBITS of KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph. D.

LOCAL CUSTOMS AS GUIDES

One of the best teachers I ever had, a Shakespearean scholar widely known used to tell his classes how he came to write his two books on the customs of the people in the days of Elizabeth the First and on the places and events in London. He had attended a meeting of high school teachers at Indianapolis and had praised very highly the effectiveness of ROMEO AND JULIET when it is taught properly and understandingly. On the elevator as he was leaving the meeting of English teachers an elderly and quite proper lady teacher challenged the statements he had made. She regarded the play as downright immoral and improper; why Romeo kissed Juliet when he first met her! That gave the professor his cue, and he went to work on his book on customs of Shakespeare's time, partly to save the reputation of sweet little Juliet and partly to help English teachers get the feel of local customs. You see, kissing was a form of greeting no more immoral than our present-day handshaking. I do not know whether the author ever convinced the lady that Juliet was a modest, perfectly well-reared young lady.

On a number of occasions I have witnessed local customs that I was so used to that they seemed just natural and good, while some person from outside my little world thought them crude or unmanly. Once I made a speech in a small town and was received warmly by the people there. My friend who went with me that night felt that I had been treated shabbily, for nobody cheered when I sat down. He didn't realize that the program, an educational program, was held in a church as the only good-sized auditorium available. And who ordinarily claps his hands in church to show approval?

On another occasion I was giving a commencement address in a good-sized county-seat town. One of the people in the audience was a retired preacher, who had grown up in the days when a hearty "Amen" was always in place. When I made the chief point of my speech, the old fellow said "Amen" rather frequently. The graduating class and many other very young people got tickled and could hardly settle down to hear the rest of my speech and the other numbers on the program. But I had been raised at Fidelity and knew exactly how the old brother felt and actually appreciated his fervent approval. I wonder whether that county-seat has had any recent occurrences of that sort of approval. I am sure that a visiting speaker gets fine support there, but I doubt whether any brother, young or old, says, "Amen."

A good many years ago I was asked to be a pallbearer at the funeral of one of my ex-students, who lived in a rather remote neighborhood. Some of the other pallbearers, who had also been the teachers of the young woman, had come from various places outside the area where I have lived so long. It was a raw day in mid-winter, with the frozen ground thawing slightly and a biting wind blowing. After the services in the little church, very impressive services, the whole congregation went to the graveside; someone brought some chairs for the somewhat elderly parents of the dead girl, and the two sat down in the mud and stayed right there until the last shovelful of dirt had been placed in or on the grave. Some of the pallbearers had never seen that sort of custom before and wondered and felt properly awed by the occasion.

One of the most soul-stirring occasions came only a few years ago, in a commencement in a good-sized town, where one of my boys was the principal, a middle-aged man of prominence in education. After the program, when I went to the principal's office to get my hat and coat, every graduating student came in and greeted that principal warmly and, often, tearfully. Every boy gave the frail man a big hug; every girl kissed his cheek. All the way home that night I felt thankful that I had been present at this show of affection, genuine and heart-felt. This principal had been a favorite teacher, a big brother in spirit. I am glad that I understood.

Consumer Comments
By ATTY. GEN. JOHN B. BRECKINRIDGE

A young lady reported to our Consumer Protection Division that she had received several telephone calls from a salesman who offered a "free" vacation in Florida. She was assured that the vacation was absolutely free and that her only obligation was to take a look at some land the company was selling. She was forwarded some "reservation" forms to be filled out and returned.

The "reservation" forms turned out to be a contract to purchase land in Florida at a price of $4,322.00. The purchaser was permitted to rescind the contract if it was done in writing within two days after seeing the land. Until she contacted our office this woman did not realize the "reservation" form was really a contract to purchase land. Fortunately the woman didn't sign the papers and therefore incurred no liability. Representatives of this land sales company were invited to a conference with a representative of the Consumer Protection Division and agreed to discontinue this type of sales practice in Kentucky. However, this is just one of the many such land sales companies that make calls and solicit business in our state. If you are tempted to take one of these "free" vacations, make sure you understand all the terms and conditions before you sign anything. (Citizens having a complaint involving a consumer matter are invited to contact my assistant, Robert V. Bullock, Director, Consumer Protection Division, Office of the Attorney General, Frankfort, 40601, or phone 564-3235, Area Code 502.)

September and October days bring out the black bass fishermen. The reason is simple — the black bass "come to life" during these cooler days, are more active and more susceptible to a flashing lure, an artificial night-crawler, a popping bug or worms and minnows. It's a time when the fish begin to take on winter fat which will sustain them in the cold days of December and January, if they are fortunate enough to escape the fisherman's lure.

These days are pleasant days for the fishermen, too. The sun is not too hot nor the wind too cold. It may be right chilly at night but the next morning is glory-time again as the warm beams of the sun permeate the air.

The water temperature has cooled considerably, yet not enough to "freeze" the fisherman as he braves the spray thrown up by his motor. The long shadows of the morning and afternoon make for ideal casting along deep banks, off rocky points and indeed in the inlets and bays.

It is a time to be enjoyed by the fishermen whether or not he catches fish and apparently it is a time also of much pleasure for the fish as they enjoy water temperatures that are not too high nor too cold. And if live bait is used, that too seems to be energized in a way it has not been for many weeks — the worms are more wiggly, the minnows more frisky as they are placed beside a fallen treetop to lure out a hungry bass.

These days are made for fishing and aside from the aesthetic values there's food for the table to be had, also.

Rocky banks, slate slides along a deep bank, fallen treetops, logs all but submerged alongside the bank, bushes and shrubs emergent from the water, submerged stumps — all of these places are ideal for the black bass in fall months. There he'll hide as he hungrily awaits a tempting morsel tossed his way. The good bass fishermen will not pass over such spots lightly — he'll cast and cast right into the same spot, for he knows that a bass is more than apt to be present in these locations. He found that unless the lure is presented correctly at the right time, in the right position and retrieved correctly — Mr. Bass will only pay it passing attention. But once the lure or bait hits responsive chord, the bass will burst from his lounge and hit the lure with the fury of jet propulsion which actually may have had its beginning with the swerve of the black bass.

A more patient fisherman — and patience is the greatest attribute of a pro fisherman — will cast the rocky points over and over and over. One of these rocky points will have a concentration of black bass, feeding. Once it is found, the good fisherman will repeatedly cast this area; move to another point (if he has not caught his limit) and try to find another cafeteria, and then return to the original site of his catch.

By all means a fisherman should fish again and again a spot where he has caught black bass, for the simple reason that whatever it was that attracted the school from which he made his catch will be present at another time to attract another group. This is why most usually a good fisherman is the fellow who fishes often. He knows better the areas in which to fish, simply because he has previously caught fish from these spots, and he'll visit those same areas again and will in all likelihood catch another string of fish.

The black bass will offer day-long fishing during September and October. They'll be available close to the shore, in shallow water early and late and may be taken with surface lures and popping bugs etc. and during midday they'll be found in the deeper water, but still in an area where there is a hiding place.

So, for a fall day well spent, try black bass fishing in one of Kentucky's fine black bass lakes. And as a safeguard, take along a shotgun. You may get yourself a mess of squirrels, too.

ALC COMMUNITY OUTREACH RESERVES DRAW PRAISE

Pippa Passes, Ky. — Alice Lloyd Community Outreach Reserves — "ALCOR," for short — have shown themselves to be "a separate breed" of community worker this summer. Unlike so many of the visitors from cities and universities, these students from Alice Lloyd College are born and reared in the very mountains in which they serve.

To help their own people to gain access to better health, education and some economic stability, they walk miles beyond the road ends to get to the far hollows and the higher hills where their own people not only welcome their fresh influence but work with them toward a better life for young and old.

PICKED FOR CAREER STATUS

Panama City, Fla. — Staff Sgt. Sonny Thornsberry, nephew of Earnie Thornsberry of Price, Ky., has re-enlisted in the U. S. Air Force after being selected for career status.

Sgt. Thornsberry, an aircraft mechanic at Tyndall AFB, Fla., was approved for re-enlistment by a board which considered his character and job performance. He is assigned to a unit of the Air Training Command.

met misunderstanding from people who have been exploited and even misled by "uplifters" from beyond the mountains. Charles Clark, Floyd county superintendent of schools who has had more than a little contact with a variety of community workers, tries to dispel this notion. "Ben Bailey and Jim Rose are doing a grand job with ALCOR students," he said here recently. "Folks should not mix them up with outsiders who come in here to foist their own ideas on our people."

ALCOR workers virtually follow the rule given their famous founder, Alice Lloyd, when she announced that she would start a school on Caney Creek. The mountaineers welcomed her on three conditions — that she would not interfere in their politics, their religion or their moonshining. ALCOR kids do not interfere. Knowing their people, they find where help is needed and how they can give it. This gives them plenty to do without starting political or social rumbles.

They have not made the headlines very much.

They have not needed to.

DISTRICT OFFICE TO HOLD OPEN HOUSE, SEPTEMBER 21, AS HIGHWAY WEEK OPENER

Frankfort, Ky. — The week of September 21-27 has been designated National Highway Week and Governor Louie B. Nunn has proclaimed the same dates as Kentucky Highway Week.

The theme of the week is, "Highways Bring Better Living." The Kentucky Department of Highways will observe the week with an open house in each of the 12 highway district office buildings Sunday afternoon, September 21.

The purposes of the open house are to give the people in each district an opportunity to visit the headquarters building, to learn something about the functions and operations of the Department of Highways in their area and to ask questions regarding the road programs in their district.

The people of District 12 are invited to the open house at the district headquarters located on US 23 and US 460 in Pikeville from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Maj. M. C. Hartley, executive director of the Office of Personnel, will represent the Commissioner's office and participate with District Engineer Wendell Bayes in the afternoon's activities.

Counties in District 12 are Floyd, Lawrence, Johnson, Martin, Pike, Knott and Letcher.

Nature Trails By RUFUS M. REED

This small tree is common in the Tri-State region but is by no means abundant anywhere. It is one of the most desirable of ornamentals and deserves a wider acquaintance and more planting. The tree seldom grows more than 25 feet high and its habitat is bluffs, spurs of ridges and dry bottoms along streams. The books call it, "Old Man's Beard," as its clusters of white flowers hang down like white beard. Another name for this tree is, "Snow Tree," as the blooms swirling in the wind suggest snow showers of late spring.

The Fringe Tree is a member of the useful olive family, which includes some of our finest shrubs and trees. In this family are found the ashes, highly useful for making ballbats and handles of all kinds; also the lovely lilacs with their sweet-scented blooms, the widely useful privet hedge and the wild olive trees, which grow in Florida and Louisiana and up the coast to Cape Henry, Virginia.

The Fringe Tree is known to botanists as Chionanthus, which comes from the Greek word, "chion" meaning snow, and "anthos" — flower — literally, the snow-flower tree.

When the Fringe Trees burst out in a mass of white in late May or June, the blooms give out a sweet perfume that fills the air. They look like white fringe decorating the branches — hence the name, Fringe Tree. Each bloom has four or five long, slender petals, shaped like those of the Witch Hazel tree, but they always hang down in clusters. It is a gorgeous sight to see a large-size fringe tree in full bloom.

The tree is handsome in foliage as well as flower. The leaves grow to a large size and are formed in pairs on the branches, a feature of the ashes. They are ovate in form, with entire margins and whitish veins on top. The leaves resemble those of the magnolias.

The best way to locate Fringe Trees to set out is to look for them when in bloom. In full bloom, they are snowy and conspicuous in the spring woods. Once I found a small colony of them in bloom on a steep bluff overlooking the Wolf Creek highway. The tree can be transplanted with success and makes a fine lawn ornamental. I have never had any success in growing these trees from their seeds, which are formed in oblong fleshy drupes almost as large as wild plums. When ripe the drupes are purplish in color and are covered with a bloom.

The bark of the roots of the Fringe Tree is regarded as medicinal and was once widely used to make tonics. It was also used for poultices for wounds and bruises. The bark is said to have valuable diuretic properties.

RATTLEWEED, A VALUABLE MEDICAL PLANT. "Rattleweed," the old-time name for this plant, was given to it because the dry seed pods rattle in the wind in autumn. It has many other common names: Fairy Candles, Black Snakeroot, Black Cohosh and Squaw Root. The plants grow tall and stately in rich, moist woods. The snowy white flowers have conspicuous stamens and are formed in racemes on tall, wand-like stalks from six to eight feet high. The blooms appear from July to late August. The leaves are large and compound, with several deeply cut leaflets having sharp teeth.

Black Cohosh, or Fairy Candle, is common throughout the Tri-state, being fond of growing in deep, rich coves of mountain land. When it blooms, it stands tall and queenly, and the white blooms seem like candelabra lighting up the woods — hence the name, Fairy Candles.

Black Cohosh, a member of the large Buttercup family, is regarded as a highly valuable medicinal plant; its roots are often sold on the herb markets. It is a native to the U. S. forests. The root is narcotic and sedative and is valuable as an anti-spasmodic and is said to be effective in curing fits or spasms. The roots also contain gum, starch and tannic acid. They make a drink that is bitter to the taste but valuable as a spring tonic and sedative, inducing sleep when taken freely.

The leaves and blooms have what many consider an unpleasant fetid odor, but I like the odor myself. They are supposed to attract flies for the work of pollination. But the name the botanists have bestowed upon this plant indicates it drives insects away. They call it, "Cimicifuga," which is from the Latin, CIMEX, a bug, and fugere, to drive away (bugs).
