

Highlands Folk Fest Begins Here, Friday

Annual Event To Draw Area's Musical Talent

Folk-music enthusiasts from as far away as Florida to the south and Maryland to the north have already arrived in anticipation of the Kentucky Highland Folk Festival to be held this week-end at the amphitheatre at Jenny Wiley State park. California and the Outer Hebrides have not yet been heard from.

"While more performers will participate presenting a wider variety of traditional music and accompaniment this year than ever before, the program is truly representative of the Kentucky Highlands in that nearly all who will take part are from a radius of 150 miles," Mrs. Edith F. James, festival director, said this week.

Audiences Friday and Saturday evenings will hear master story-teller Dr. Leonard Roberts, director of the Appalachian Study Center and head of the English department at Pikeville College; folk-singers Diana Donahue, Edith Yates, and Diana Campbell; recording artists, Dan and Louise Brock, of Lexington; handsaw and harpinoia players, Asa Martin and Jim Gaskin, members of the Cumberland Rangers string band, of Irvine; guitar player Steve May, of Louisville; and guitar and banjo duo Nesber and Ronny Cooke, Beaver area residents now attending Morehead State University; dulcimer player and singer, Barbara Edwards, of Ashland; bayou songs by Marie Fitzpatrick, of Middle Creek; dulcimer players, Mrs. Charles R. Vickers and Mrs. Elmer C. Moore, of Frankfort; the Foothill (See Story No. 7, Page 12)

Water District Hearing by PSC Slated Sept. 11

The Public Service Commission has set a hearing at 1:30 p.m. Sept. 11 on the petition of Left Fork of Middle Creek residents for a water district, the first step toward construction of a water distribution system which would serve the entire Left Fork watershed, beginning at the junction of KY 404 (the David road) and the Mountain Parkway.

Carlos Miller, senior PSC engineer, has studied the proposed development and has recommended that the district be established. If the commission agrees with his recommendation, the petition will come back to the Floyd county court for its approval.

County and State Groups Join In Plea for High Court Action

Floyd county and state education agencies joined Tuesday in calling on the Court of Appeals to take action to clarify the Eastern school situation and make valid the $650,000 bond issue sold to finance construction of the school.

The action was taken in a complaint filed by Floyd County Supt. Charles Clark, members of the Floyd County Board of Education, State Supt. Wendell P. Butler, and members of the State Board of Education against Everett Akers, J. R. Key and Frank Salisbury, of Martin, and their attorneys, Joe Hobson, Francis Dale Burke and Charles P. Hobson.

Plaintiffs allege that the suit now pending in Franklin circuit court against the Floyd board and state educational agencies, as well as previous actions, were filed "illegally and maliciously and without probable cause and for the sole and only purpose of hampering, harassing, delaying, preventing and prohibiting" plaintiffs from the proper performance of their duties in maintaining the public school system in Floyd county and to circumvent and prevent plaintiffs from doing "what the Court of Appeals has adjudged they had a legal right to do."

The Appellate Court is asked to:

1. Take jurisdiction of the action pending in Franklin circuit court.
2. Order defendants forthwith to dismiss this action, and upon their failure to do so to hold them in contempt of the Court of Appeals.
3. Enjoin and restrain defendants and others similarly situated and acting in concert with them from filing any other litigation which might affect the validity of the bonds or in any way hinder or prevent the Floyd County Board of Education from proceeding with construction of the Eastern school.

Plaintiffs admit the bond sale is in trouble, as matters stand. They claim that the defendants are well aware of the fact that bonding attorneys will not approve the sale of the bond issue for the school construction if there is litigation pending which might remotely affect validity of the bonds. And, they say,

Order Provides Terry-Elkhorn To Repair Roads

The state's suit against the Terry-Elkhorn Mining Company was settled Monday when an agreed order was entered in the Magoffin circuit court, with the coal company agreeing to repair damaged roads over which its coal is hauled.

The court order provided that the company will add two inches of blacktop immediately on 2.1 miles of KY 7 in Magoffin county. Terry-Elkhorn also is to repair that section of road if the Department of Highways decides it has been damaged again by trucks hauling its coal.

Terry-Elkhorn will keep 3.6 miles of Kentucky 1471 "in suitable repair" and will pay two-thirds of the cost of black-topping the road after the mining operation there is finished.

The Highway Department will supervise the road repairing.

The order from Magoffin Circuit Judge Ben Mann resulted from a suit seeking $205,000 in damages which was filed by the Departments of Highways and Motor Transportation. Mann issued a restraining (See Story No. 4, Page 12)

$3 Million Damages Asked of Companies

Three companies, two of which are Prestonsburg-based, and an individual were named in a $3 million damage suit filed last week by a Johnson county citizens' group headed by Brady Rose, of Van Lear.

Named as defendants are the Terry-Elkhorn Coal Co., of Prestonsburg, the Consolidation Coal Co., the Ranier Construction Co., Prestonsburg, as operator of mining and transportation work for Consolidation, and James Witten, of Johnson county, operator of a tippie.

The suit seeks, in addition to damages, an injunction against surface mining in the county. Prepared by a Columbus, O. law firm, the complaint alleges that private property has been damaged as a result of coal being hauled from Johnson county strip mines and that state weight limits have been violated by truckers.

The Johnson county suit was but one in a series of developments affecting the red-hot issue of stripmining and overloaded coal trucks.

Attorney General John B. Breckinridge last week held in an opinion affecting the Knott fiscal court's ban of stripmining that the fiscal court has no authority to outlaw the industry outright but could through planning and zoning powers regulate it.

Almost at the same time, the Kentucky Coal Association was proposing to allow a state-imposed fee system on trucked coal to help pay for road damage resulting from overweight trucks.

But Breckinridge indicated that any regulating of stripmining under zoning powers should have some specific basis rather than be a blanket ban.

Recreational use alone would be one ground on which a zoning regulation on stripmining could be based, he suggested. "For example," he said, "the areas surrounding Buckhorn, Fishtrap and Carrs Fork reservoirs and Dewey Lake and the major tributaries thereto, might well be zoned recreational to the exclusion of such strip mining and other uses as might prove prejudicial."

Also, he noted, "There appears to be a definite trend in support of the proposition that aesthetic considerations alone may justify the exercise of zoning power, unless the particular application unreasonably restricts uses of property."

New Highway Commissioner B. E. King said he is not certain if the coal industry proposition to pay fees on overweight trucks should be accepted.

"Where we really stand now is that I'm not going to make an immediate decision. I'm not discounting the fee proposal," he said.

Meantime, King disclosed his agency will consider returning certain Eastern Kentucky roads to the counties for maintenance if the local officials fail to cooperate in enforcing weight limits on coal trucks.

Such a move would come "only as a final step" if all other persuasion has been exhausted, he indicated.

One early state news release said King had shelved the plan to allow coal truck operators to buy a special permit for use of overweight trucks, with revenue from the permits to be allotted for repair of the damaged roads.

King was quoted as saying such permits would be illegal.

"We now issue overweight and over-dimensional permits on an individual basis," he said in the release. "But these are for non-divisible loads, such as machinery, which cannot be broken down."

"A load of coal is another matter. Some of the coal can be removed in order to bring the truck into compliance with weight limits."

LETTER TO A LITTLE BOY

DEAR JOHN CHRISTOPHER HOWARD:

Last week, I fumbled a news-item about your birthday party. I said it was your fifth birthday when it was only your first. Now, if you were a dozen years older, you would be praising me, for you would be at the age when boys think they'll never reach 21 and be able to strut and say, "Today, I am a man." And if you were, say, 30 years older than you are, I would hasten to apologize to you, for you would be at the age when time gets to slipping by and nobody wants to be reported even one day older than he really is. . . As matters stand, it's just an old fuddyduddy's mistake, and no harm done. May all your birthdays be as innocent and happy as that first one.

NOT VOLUNTEERING

We have for years now had a character around these premises who is known rather widely as "Stinky." Sometime when the old mill runs a bit lower on grist than usual, and when I feel up to it, I may set down in type some of the guy's history.

The other day, we had a visitor who was exploring the depths of the dumps, and he expressed the opinion that he would be better off up North, panhandling.

"But you can't do any good at that, if you don't have long hair and a long beard," Stinky reminded him. "I'll get me a monkey," the visitor said. "Don't look at me," yelled Stinky. "I ain't volunteerin'."

Carpet Company Truck, Materials Missing, I Sought

Donald L. Horn, owner of the Kentucky Carpet Company, swore out a warrant Monday morning for the arrest of a former employee, John Hall, whom he charged with the theft of a company truck loaded with an estimated $1500 worth of carpeting and tools.

Horn said Hall and another man, Jerry Hobin, had been working for him a month. They were given use of the truck for the week-end but when they failed to show up Monday morning for work with the truck, the warrant was issued. Hobin was not named in the warrant, however.

The carpet company owner said the two had worked long enough for each to buy a guitar. "I figure they've headed for Nashville," he said.

Later, a phone call purporting to be from one of the two said they were in a St. Louis, Mo. jail, but the jail named doesn't exist, Mr. Horn later learned. Middlesboro, which is said to be the hometown of Hobin, was being checked Monday afternoon.

Seven liquor raids during the week-end by Deputy Sheriffs Buddy Ward and Dester Hamilton resulted in the arrest of three men. The officers said they confiscated eight cans of beer in a raid on the premises of Frank Little, and a case of beer from Wade Little, both on Abner Fork, near Melvin, and 42 cans of beer from Willie Hall, of Mud Creek.

Murder Case, Clubs Probe Facing Jury

It's likely that more than the usual three days will be required for the grand jury, which will convene next Tuesday, to finish its work, it was indicated this week as Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo announced that already more than 100 witnesses have been summoned to appear before the jury.

Almost half of those summoned are being called in a continuance of the investigation into the mystery-slaying in May, 1969, of James Chaffins on Arkansas Creek. A large number of witnesses have also been summoned, Stumbo said, in what is intended to be full-scale probe of the situation that has developed from the operation of several private clubs in the county.

Other witnesses will be asked to produce testimony in three other slayings. If indictments result, it is possible that all three cases will be brought to trial during the court term. The slayings to be investigated are those of Claude Conley, who died in a Floyd hospital after having been shot in Knott county; Guy Bates, on Jack's Creek, and Lemuel Foley, Jr., on Brandy Keg, near here.

The only murder case already docketed for hearing is that of Bob Hall, charged with the slaying of his father, Edgar H. Hall, at Allen.

The Chaffins slaying slated for investigation has baffled authorities for months. Commonwealth's Attorney Stumbo and State Detective Chester D. Potter have quizzed a large number of persons since the discovery of Chaffins' body at the roadside on Arkansas Creek, but to date have failed to procure information sufficient for an indictment. A suitcase taken from the Chaffins car was found on Middle Creek, a day after his body was found, but it has never been established who took it there. The victim was shot to death while apparently en route from his home in Louisville to visit relatives in the Garrett vicinity.

Seventy-three cases are on the trial docket. Among these are 18—fewer than usual—who are charged with child desertion; seven on charges of possession of narcotics; four for possession of alcoholic beverages, and 14 involving theft, breaking and entering, knowingly receiving stolen property and obtaining money under false pretense.

Judge Holds '39 Judgement Is Yet Valid

Findings of fact in the suit involving residents of Martin as plaintiffs and the Floyd County Board of Education was reported Monday as being prepared by Special Judge James D. Stephenson, of Pikeville.

Although the judge's findings had not been filed as of Monday afternoon, he was reported as saying he will hold that the 1939 judgment of the late Judge John W. Caudill, of the Floyd circuit court, providing that a school must be maintained perpetually in Martin and enjoining the board of education from transporting pupils of the Martin school district to another remains in full force and effect.

From the same source The Times learned that Judge Stephenson has indicated he will not enter an order till when, and if, an attempt to transport students from Martin is made.

State Appeals Prices on Land For New US 23

Five new appeals filed Monday in circuit court raised by $339,400 total right-of-way claims on new US 23 which are being contested by the state.

Principal defendants in each of the appeal cases and amount allowed each by county appraisers follow:

Otis Blackburn, $126,000; Davidson Memorial Gardens, Inc., $195,500; L. H. Shivel and 17 others, $15,000; Tommy May, $2,000; Ralph C. Nelson, $400.

These bring the total appeals in court to 72, and they involve almost $1.5 million.

Eight other right-of-way disputes on the new four-lane route from Allen toward Pikeville were in county court for condemnation this week and may also wind up in circuit court on appeal. They involve a county-appraisal total of more than $1 million. Defendants and the values set on their property by county appraisers are:

H. D. and Martha Jane Fitzpatrick and Sally Gatewood Clark, Parcel 9, $176,500; H. D. and Martha Jane Fitzpatrick and Sally Gatewood Clark, Parcel 40, $176,500; Troy and Stella Hall, Riley and Florence Hall, $362,500; Belve and Joan Burchett, (See Story No. 5, Page 12)

Ban on Standees On School Buses Poses a Problem

Kentucky school districts would have to buy several thousand more school buses, costing in the millions of dollars, if the U. S. Highway Safety bureau adopts and enforces a rule forbidding the transportation of standees, state officials point out.

The bureau is reported considering such a rule. If it is put into effect, non-compliance could cost Kentucky a ten per cent cut in the $80.8 million a year now received in federal road-building aid and loss of all the $1 million a year now received for highway safety aid.

A State Education Department official said he knows of only one Kentucky county where there are enough school buses to seat all pupils.

After the new bride changes her name on her wedding day, she should remember to have her name changed on her social security records too. In this way she will have her social security earnings credited under her proper account for her future protection.

Sanctions Investigation Slated To Begin in Kentucky Within Month

Sometime during the last half of September, or the first part of October, hearings will be held on the KEA Delegate Assembly's request that national sanctions be imposed on the Governor and General Assembly of Kentucky for the manner in which they have ignored the critical needs of education during the past year.

That, in a nutshell, is the situation in the Kentucky sanctions investigation, according to Paul Haubner, a senior staff associate of the NEA's Commission on Professional Rights and Responsibilities, who will serve as staff coordinator of the NEA Special Investigating Committee to consider the evidence supporting or refuting the KEA's charges in this area.

The committee, with Haubner serving as the hearing examiner (that means he will ask most of the questions), will hear testimony from individuals who are knowledgeable about Kentucky's educational needs, potential, and willingness to provide financial support. Some of these individuals will be presented by KEA, while others will represent the views of the State Department of Education, the Governor, the General Assembly, or other interested groups.

The committee which holds the hearings, and which will eventually make an in-depth analysis of the situation in Kentucky and report their findings to the NEA-PR and R Commission, will be broadly representative of various aspects of education across the country. (None will be from Kentucky.) Five different national groups have been asked to submit a list of five nominees each for representation on the investigating committee from which the president of the National Education Association, Mrs. Helen Bain, Nashville, Tennessee, will appoint the membership.

Following the general hearings, the investigating committee probably will be broken up into sub-groups to visit various types of educational installations in the state. Later, they may well decide further general hearings will be needed, according to Haubner.

These hearings will be one of the intermediate steps in an on-going program of evaluation of Kentucky's school system to see if it is meeting the needs of the children and youth of the state as well as is possible within the limits of the financial and human resources available. It started with a request from the KEA Delegate Assembly last March, and possibly could be concluded with a vote by the NEA Executive Committee to impose national sanctions on the state of Kentucky.

However, that will not be the automatic conclusion of the investigation. Rather, Haubner says, such a conclusion could come only if there is overwhelming evidence that the people of Kentucky—

General Assembly—are refusing to do as much as they are capable of doing for the education of boys and girls in the state.

The Special Investigating Committee analysis, report, and recommendations regarding the Kentucky situation will be submitted to the NEA-PR and R Commission. This group, in turn, will analyze and evaluate the report, and make whatever recommendations they feel necessary to the NEA Executive Committee. This latter group is the only one that has power to take any action.

Mrs. Ruth Reeves, Ashland, KEA's 1970-'71 president, said in a recent speech, "KEA is not attempting to ruin our school program by requesting such an investigation. No, we are trying to secure an impartial evaluation of the situation here in Kentucky—of our unmet educational needs and our ability to meet those needs."

Later on, Mrs. Reeves identified the basic reason why the KEA Delegate Assembly asked for the sanctions investigation: "We believe any state that ranks close to the top (13th) in expenditures for highways, just above the middle (27th) in support for higher education, and 47th in the nation for the support of public elementary and secondary education must be out of balance in its value system."

She went on to say, "In over-all governmental expenditures per person, we rank slightly above the average for the nation, which proves we can if we want to!"

Then Mrs. Reeves reiterated KEA's position on NEA's sanctions investigation: "That is just what it is—an investigation. Only after a thorough, unbiased evaluation of everything having to do with public education in Kentucky, will any kind of a report be made. This report may or may not call for national sanctions. Whatever action is taken, I can assure you, will be completely justified by the facts."

15 Knott Permits For Strip Mining Let Since Ruling

The state director of strip mining and reclamation, Elmore C. Grim, said last Thursday he has issued 15 permits for strip mining in Knott county since Atty. Gen. John B. Breckinridge's opinion was handed down, earlier in the week.

The opinion in effect allows fiscal courts to regulate strip mining through zoning ordinances but forbids the passage of outright bans such as Knott fiscal court recently approved.

Grim said the new Federal Mine Safety Act has forced a number of operators of small underground mines to move to the surface. He said he has issued 67 permits since April 1 to operators who had never engaged in strip mining.

"This is contrary to what we would like to see," Grim said. "We would rather see them go from the surface underground, but the federal law is too stringent and seems to have the opposite effect."

June Food Stamp Totals Show 6967 In Floyd Program

The U. S. Department of Agriculture's food stamp program aided 208,770 needy persons in Kentucky in June, including 6,967 in Floyd county.

This is a 64 per cent increase over the 127,204 people receiving food stamp coupons in June, 1969. At that time Floyd county had 4545 recipients. Close to $3.5 million worth of bonus food coupons were distributed, as compared with $929,601 worth in June of last year, USDA's Food and Nutrition Service reports.

FNS officials explained that the bonus coupons, given to supplement low-income family food spending, can be exchanged for food at local grocery stores.

In addition, 59,157 Kentuckians received USDA-donated foods through the food donation program during June.

In all, 267,927 Kentuckians took part in these two USDA programs in June, an increase of 80,221 over June 1969.

The food stamp program is administered in Kentucky by the Kentucky Department of Economic Security and the family food distribution program is administered by the Kentucky Department of agriculture, both in cooperation with the Food and Nutrition Service.

Everybody Knows This Killer— Why Isn't the Killing Stopped?

(AN EDITORIAL)
By RUFUS M. REED

During the past ten years, well over 103 million fish were killed in the streams of America by various kinds of pollution. In 1968, nearly fifteen and one-quarter million fish were reported killed which was an increase of nearly four million over the previous year.

One of the worst killers of life in the streams is acid drainage from both the abandoned deep mines and the strip mines. Where large areas have been stripped and huge spoil banks left fully exposed to the air and water, there is a constant drainage of poisonous acids into streams. The pollution is worse where the coal seams are left exposed to weathering.

Perhaps the worst pollution of this kind comes from the abandoned coal mines scattered throughout the mining region of the Appalachians. Year after year, these abandoned mines keep sending multiplied millions of gallons of poisonous chemicals into the streams, killing the fish, frogs, tadpoles, crawdads and the water creatures that help to devour the organic matter and purify the streams.

Distributed throughout the mining regions there are said to be 20,000 abandoned coal mines! The burning question is, Why haven't these abandoned mines been sealed off so as to prevent pollution of the streams? One problem is there are many of these mined-out places that are hidden, unknown. Their former owners or operators cannot be located, neither can these mines be spotted by an aerial survey. Many of them are now in remote regions and are hidden by rank vegetation. However, before we can hope to have clean water abounding with fish and other aquatic life, it is highly necessary that all these abandoned mines be found and completely sealed off against creating further pollution.

When coal is uncovered and left exposed to air and water, the pyrites in it become oxidized, producing corrosive acids with an orange-yellow stain. In some sections of Appalachia this is called "Yellow Boy," from its bright orange-yellow stain left on plants, rocks and other objects along streams. It is an iron sulfide compound formed from iron pyrites, sometimes called "fool's gold." This pollution goes into a creek or a river and soon kills all the aquatic life. In one area, drainage from an old strip-mine operation was checked; it had killed over 1,000 fish in a stream nearby.

There are now some 6,000 miles of acid mine waters in the streams of Appalachia. The pollution is worse in the great coal-producing states: West Virginia, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Maryland. The worst polluted streams from mine drainage are the Allegheny, Monongahela, Susquehanna and Potomac Rivers. In the Kanawha-New River system of West Virginia, it has been estimated that 77 million gallons of acid mine water enter the river system each day. A large coal mine may spew out 10 million gallons of water a day.

The menace of mine-water pollution is a most serious one. How can we have clean water in Appalachia unless we attack the problem at its source? Before we can hope to purify our streams, it is absolutely necessary to ferret out all the abandoned mines—both the stripmine and the deep mine systems—and stop the pollution at its source. The only life that can thrive in a stream polluted with the orange-yellow acids from sulphur dioxide is the acid-loving algae. The fish, frogs, the water creatures are all soon killed. This is a corrosive acid that eats away iron pipes, bridges, boat hulls and other navigation equipment. Such pollution makes it most difficult to treat the water and make it fit for use in homes and other places.

In view of the great Anti-Pollution Program of our federal government, one might well ask—Why aren't the abandoned mines and stripped areas made safe against acid drainage?

There should be no delay in stopping this form of pollution. Much valuable time is being lost by government anti-pollution agencies in figuring out the best ways to stop this pollution. But prompt action is what is needed now. Let all the abandoned mines be hunted out to the last one and sealed off. When that won't work, the water can be impounded or perhaps diverted into some other channel. The huge piles of gob, slate, bone and inferior coal that collect around mines should be kept covered with earth to prevent exposure to air and rainfall. And where the face of a coal seam is exposed to the weather, it should be covered with earth to prevent the oxidation of the iron pyrites, or sulphide compound. It takes the action of air and water to start the formation of the bright orange "Yellow Boy," which is one of the great killers of life in streams.

Blames Health Department

Editor, The Times:

The Floyd County Health Department and the other agencies of government charged with enforcement of the sanitation laws of the state are becoming so lackadaisical in their work that the health of our citizens is imperilled. One field in which the Health Department is not doing its job is in enforcement of the plumbing code of the state. If we had an outbreak of hepatitis at Harold now, the cause could be laid directly on the negligence of the Floyd County Health Department.

Mobile homes are multiplying like flies everywhere and the owners are dumping raw sewage and other effluent into the Big Sandy River and in the myriad little tributary streams. One particularly bad spot is in Fox Bottom at Harold. Sewage from mobile homes, newly installed, stinks at times to homeowners to such an extent that it is impossible to have cook-outs or sit on the front porch.

This situation at Fox Bottom has been brought to the attention of the Health Department three times in the last few weeks. The first time the matter was brought to the attention of the Health Department it was discussed with Dr. Russell Hall over the telephone. He said he was turning the matter over to Mr. Goble. The latter made copious notes, promised much, did nothing. Another telephone call, this one to Goble, brought the same action—the taking of more notes, a promise of action and no action taken. Still seeking action, I contacted the Floyd county plumbing inspector. He, too, promised action, did nothing.

One newly built brick home at Betsy Layne has its discharge line directly pointed at the ditchline of U. S. 23 but the effluent comes off the hill so fast and with such force that it dumps onto the highway. Recently, when I was driving down the highway I passed this discharge terminal when the effluent emerged. Aerated detergent sprayed my windshield and I had to turn the windshield wiper on.

How long are the people of this county going to tolerate the nonenforcement of the sanitation laws? Do you have to have an outbreak of hepatitis or typhoid to get action?

By HENRY A. BUCHANAN

LOOKING BACKWARD TO A NATIONAL HOLIDAY

America has celebrated her birthday. In style. With fireworks and oratory. With flags and prayers and singing and slogans. In 90 degree heat and protesters cooling in the water. It was a great Fourth of July marking 194 years of national independence and marked as much by the revolution that threatens the nation's life as by the one that gave it birth.

It was, as the President said, a time for looking back and a time for looking ahead. A time for remembering the greatness of mind and spirit that inspired the Declaration of Independence. The Constitution and the Bill of Rights. A time for looking with clear-eyed vision and hope into an era that challenges the ingenuity and the decency of man to insure the survival of the human race.

A time to remember that men of courage and conviction jeopardized their property, their honor and their lives to obtain the liberties we have inherited. A time to realize that no less is required of men today if we are to command the expanding areas of human freedom in a revolutionary new age.

We've come a long way since 1776 and we've made our share of national blunders. But if the present generation of revolutionaries is to do as well as the men who laid the country's foundations it will have to display more creativity than is self-evident in the acts of stripping nude, smoking pot and uttering four-letter obscenities. The patriots of 1776 ennobled both the nation and the language of man when they expressed their love of freedom in words that have become immortal. The revolutionaries of 1970 debase themselves and disgust all decent men by mouthing terms for functions better performed by other members of the body.

The issues that face America today and the threats that hang over our heads are too grave for childish displays of frustrations and anger. The times call for super-patriots who can match their idealism with creativity and strength.

Fluttering is a little used, but deadly effective technique. Many days, when nothing else produced a single fish, fluttering has unlocked jaws clamped tighter than a lock box.

Fluttering is not to be confused with jigging. Jigging is bouncing a lure, up and down—usually a lead-head jig, or heavy metal spoon—directly below the fisherman and just over the bottom.

Fluttering can be done directly below you, too, or during the retrieve after a long cast. However, it is best done with certain types of lures called "flutterers." Let's first learn how to recognize these.

Haul out your tackle box and get it between your feet. Shake loose the following types of lures: a floating lure that wiggles; a sinking lure that wiggles; a small surface lure with a tail spinner; a weighted bucktail, or rubberskirted, lure with a spinner; a sinking lure with tail spinner; and a weedless spoon. All these are potential flutterers, once you know the technique.

To two of the aforementioned lures, you will have to make an addition. Add just enough sinker (clinch type) to sink the two floating lures. Clinch the sinker over your line about six inches ahead of the lure.

Now, you're ready. First, try the sinking wiggler. Let this settle to the bottom. Notice how the lure flutters into life, then settles back to the bottom.

To the horse-zealot, the term "fun riding" just means the difference between belting a bangtail down the stretch (that's hard riding) and clip-clopping leisurely along a bridle path. Zealot or not, if you like to ride horseback you'll find bridle paths and rental horses all over Kentucky.

There are lively stables at 13 Kentucky state parks: Jenny Wiley, Barren River, Buckhorn, General Butler, Carter Caves, Cumberland Falls, Kenlake, Kentucky Dam, Lake Cumberland, Natural Bridge, Pennyrile and Rough River. You can also ride horseback at Beech Bend Park in Bowling Green.

Do it repeatedly until you know precisely how little you can lift your rod tip and still get a flutter out of the lure. What you must learn is what it takes to get a teasing flutter out of a lure and not an unnatural gyration which comes when you jerk a lure too hard. No two lures react precisely alike when it comes to fluttering. You must study each one and remember what it takes to get the best fluttering action. Some require only the slightest twitch, while others take a pretty fair belt to get them to flutter.

Go through this same "feel-see" procedure with the floating lures you sink. You'll notice these have a different type of flutter because they are in a suspended state, and their buoyancy makes them more responsive.

The weighted lure with a spinner and bucktail, or skirt, has an added element of attraction when it is fluttered. Not only does the spinner blade flash and fuss, but the skirt or bucktail does a bit of pulsating which adds dessert to the meat of the flutter.

Fluttering a spoon is easy. Most spoons just naturally flutter because of their normal action, a flirting half-roll. Now that you've picked out your best flutter-prone lures, and have the idea of what fluttering feels and looks like, you're wondering why a fish, should hit this silly-looking thing.

Homer Circle, Angling Editor for SPORTS AFIELD Magazine, has this theory: when you flutter a lure smackdab in front of his mouth, a number of unusual things take place.

To begin with, you're getting his attention with a lure action he probably never has seen before. And, there's a good chance it will pass right in front of his nose, so close that all he has to do is inhale, and he's got it.

Something about a fluttering lure can trigger a reflexive response from a big fish, even though he's not really hungry. I've caught them with a bellyful of minnows, and one still in the throat waiting for room to move on down. So, it couldn't be hunger pangs that made the fish grab the flutterer.

The Tragedy of the Abandoned Animal

I feel constrained to tell the following tragic story about an abandoned dog. It is absolutely true, for I saw it happen — or most of it. Yet I have hesitated to write the story, for fear it will shock many readers. The story is almost too heartbreaking to tell and yet I feel it should be told; some persons need to be shocked out of their complacency in regard to the abandonment of animals along rural roads.

A great many people having an old dog, or one that is diseased, will put the animal in a car and drive far out on some country road and there set the helpless animal down, often with the vain hope that some kind-hearted person will find the abandoned animal and give it food and shelter. This is pure wishful thinking. I would say that not more than one percent of all animals abandoned in a strange land ever find a home or shelter. Most of them are doomed to die a lingering, tragic death, as in the case of the dog of my story. While we have laws against abandoning dogs and cats to their fate, they are not being fully enforced; neither are they strict enough. It should be made a felony to deliberately set a dog or a litter of pups or kittens from a car, to leave them to the mercies of a harsh, cruel world.

It was once said: "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn." It is equally true that "man's inhumane treatment of animals makes countless thousands of them suffer pain, tragedy and a cruel death." Those who abandon animals go on their way without giving a thought to the fate of the abandoned ones, which go on trying to live and often meet a fate that is far worse than a merciful death.

The dog I write about in this story looked to be about ten years old when he was set down beside the paved road on the hill above the 4-H camp where I was serving the camp members as their nature instructor. The camp is located in a deep gorge of Big Paint Creek; on either side of it there are canyon walls which lend the camp a touch of rugged grandeur. Stone steps numbering about 100, placed there years ago by the CCC boys, lead from the highway down the steep hillside to the camp. I had my sleeping quarters in the large stone building at the lower end of the camp. The front part of this building is used as a handicrafts room, where the members learn art and many different crafts.

While I was home on a week-end, the dog of this story was abandoned on the highway above the camp. He was a fine-looking dog and seemed kindly disposed toward people; he seemed to be a mongrel mixed with collie and shepherd and while he looked pretty old, he could still run about and play and was friendly. While the abandoned dog was scrounging for food at some of the homes along the road, he was shot with a pistol. Perhaps because he was a "stray," the man who shot him aimed to deliver a lethal shot, as he aimed at the dog's heart. But the bullet struck the dog behind the right shoulder and failed to bring him down. It seems the wound was mostly superficial, as the dog ran in wild terror, crying in pain; he left the road and headed down the hillside through the woods above the camp. The man who shot him failed to follow the dog and give him a final merciful shot that would have ended his tragic life. Instead he let the dog run off and hide in the woods. Some of the camp's personnel heard the shot and the dog's frantic cries of pain, but they thought no more about it, as they figured the animal probably died from the wound.

The stone house where I had my quarters sits at the edge of the woods and between it and the woods there is a large bed of dry leaves. The dog was shot on Saturday evening and when I returned to the camp on Tuesday and was inside the stone house, I began to hear a loud roaring of wings, like a swarm of bees. The sound was coming from just outside the house, so I went out to investigate. There the dog was lying on a bed of leaves. He was completely covered with the greedy blow-flies, and my first thought was, Here is an old, sick dog that has come to die in this soft bed of leaves, but the cruel blow-flies won't let him die in peace. At that time I didn't know that he had been shot. I turned to go inside and get the insect spray to kill the green flies, so the old fellow might die in peace. But when I went up close to spray him, I caught the awful stink from the festering wound which had attracted these flies by the hundreds. The wounded dog suddenly leaped up and fled in wild panic. No doubt he figured I was going to shoot him as the cruel man had done. So he ran into the deep woods nearby, with the green flies after him like a swarm of bees.

When I reported to the camp manager

about finding the dog, he told me all about hearing the shot on the Saturday before and of the dog's cries of pain as he had run down into the woods. Had I known the dog was shot, I would have tried to do something to save him. I couldn't get the poor creature's misery off my mind. Late that evening, I walked down the road below camp to look for him. He was now trying desperately to escape the swarms of flies and that's how I found him; the loud buzzing of the flies came down from a cliff in the woods, a short distance from the road. I found him lying under the cliff and he had crawled back as far as he could in order to get away from the flies. He now seemed more dead than alive but he was still breathing. I had no way to get the flies away from him and I thought, he'll soon be dead, anyway, and out of his agony.

But far into the night, as I was sleeping in the stone house, I was awakened by the sound of a dog's moaning just outside my bedroom window. I listened for a moment to that heart-rending cry; it was full of pain and despair and yet it was a pleading voice; it was asking me to come out and try to help. I knew then that the dog in his last agony of despair had come back to the stone house to try to beg me for help. Never in my life have I been so sorrow-struck by the cries of an animal. But what could I do? I lay in my bed, wracking my brain for some way to help the dog. By now he was completely covered with maggots. They were eating him alive!

Many wild schemes for helping the dog ran through my mind; I thought of dragging him down to the creek nearby, so I could drown the flies and maggots but the odor from him was almost unbearable. I wished I had a gun so I could put the dog out of his misery. Next morning, I was out early after a sleepless night. The camp manager had a pistol, which I hadn't known about before. I reported to him about the dog, which had again crawled off somewhere. The camp manager and his assistant and I went to find the dog. He was lying by the road and was still alive. What a pitiful sight that was! He was covered with maggots and wads of blow flies. A merciful bullet ended his misery, and I thought: I wish the man who abandoned this dog and the one who shot him could have seen this tragic end. Surely they would never again treat a dog with such cruelty.

And if riding is really your special bag, you can spend an entire vacation at a brand-new, beautiful dude ranch called Hidden Valley Ranch Resort. It covers 1000 acres and has excellent food and all manner of recreation. You take the Clay City exit off the Mountain Parkway and follow the signs.

A forthright old Kentucky squire used to say that if God had intended man to walk much, He would have given him four feet. We think that is a narrow viewpoint. It overlooks wheels and propellers and cables and such.

And whether you have two feet or four, you can sail up, up and away, at several places in Kentucky. There's a skylift at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park that takes you across a mountain valley to a neighboring peak. Atop Sugar Camp Mountain there's a picnic ground and what the owner modestly refers to as "the highest ferris wheel in the world." At any rate, from the top of the ferris wheel you can see for a couple of hundred miles on a clear day and if you don't believe it, sail up there and see for yourself.

Just west of the Cave City interchange on I-65 there are two skylifts. One wheels up to the top of Guntown Mountain, where the sky rider alights in a Western town of a century ago, with a general store, a U. S. Marshal's office, a saloon and all the rest. There are gunfights on the street and there's a Jesse James Museum of Gun-fighting.

The other lifts you out over a beautifully forested gorge to another mountaintop. Here are delightful nature walks that may be enjoyed day or night. Tiny lights show the way along the scenic paths. A cave is being developed in this area and will be in operation in 1971. There's a snack bar and refreshment stand there and you can have your picture made in color,—you and the stunning scenery.

For those whose spirits soar like eagles but whose flesh tends to labor along the ground, there's a skylift at Natural Bridge State Resort Park. Its cable climbs up over the lovely mountain terrain and deposits the uplifted ones within an easy stroll of that magnificent freak of nature, Natural Bridge.

Beech Bend Park, they say, has everything in the world. That, of course, would have to include a skylift and it does. There's a feeling of immense superiority in drifting over this vast campground.

Beech Bend's "everything in the world" catalogue also includes a miniature train, and that's a fun ride with a variety of kith and kin. Riding the rails has a universal attraction, particularly for the very young. Probably this is because few youngsters today have ever been on a real train.

A pretty little train chugs happily around the Louisville Zoo and there's one about the same size at General Butler State Resort Park. A real diesel locomotive, built to 1-7 the scale of the big standard jobs, takes visitors clickety-clacking around the landscape at Park Mammoth Resort, near Park City. It travels about 3-1-3 miles and makes three ten-minute stops.

But the best chance many youngsters will ever have to ride behind a sure enough coal burning, smoke belching, steam-snorting "iron horse" is at Tombstone Junction near Cumberland Falls. The whistle bellows mightily and the engine strains and shudders, barely making the final grade.

This engine is Old No. 14, the last steam locomotive used by the Morehead and North Fork R. R. in Rowan County. (That little four-mile railway now uses diesels.)

The Tombstone Junction deal involves a train robbery in which the bad guys stop the train, rampage through the coaches and drag a hostage off, blasting away with their shooting-irons meanwhile.

Kentucky's lakes and rivers offer several different fun rides. The smallest of them are called "dreamboats." And since you have to pedal them to move, maybe they shouldn't be classified as "rides." Anyway, they are a great favorite with romantic couples who pedal them slowly along, murmuring "mush no mortal man can bear," a million miles from crass reality. They have them at five state parks: General Butler, Carter Caves, Natural Bridge, Pennyrile Forest and John James Audubon.

Slightly bigger are the two ex-army "ducks" that ride you on the Barren River at Beech Bend Park, just like the amphibious invasions of WW-II. Beech Bend also has a small excursion steamer plying its little lake.

Miss Green River is an excursion boat that operates from the ferry landing at Mammoth Cave. It carries 80 passengers on a beautiful scenic cruise on the Green River where deer and smaller game are frequently seen in the boarding forest.

The biggest fun ride splash of all, however, is one that everybody should enjoy while it's still possible. The Belle of Louisville makes excursions twice a day on the Ohio River. An afternoon trip goes down-river through the McAlpine locks and a night cruise goes up-river to the strains of dance music. It's one of the last genuine old river packets in existence and it looks the part. —It's all bright paint and gingerbread curlicues and gay as a wedding cake. It now has three big oil-burning boilers instead of the several wood and coal burners of the old days. But its big stern paddlewheel is still steam driven.

The resonant bellows of its mighty steam whistle still echoes across the wide river. And no child will ever forget the tremble of the deck underfoot, the great thumping rhythm of the paddle wheel and the wild bedlam of the steam calliope, wailing with nostalgic melancholy.

Signs Grant-in-Aid

University of Toledo baseball coach Stan Sanders recently announced the signing of Memorial high school (Toledo) baseball ace Steve Hall to a grant-in-aid to the Mid-America Conference school for this fall.

Hall, a 6-1, 185-pound shortstop, basketball guard, and football quarterback, earned seven varsity letters during his high school sports career with two in football, two in basketball and three in baseball. Batting leader of his team for three years, he was voted most valuable infielder in the state's Acme League.

He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Hall, former Martin residents, and is a grandson of Mrs. Gypsie Collins, of Martin, and George W. Hall, of Weeksbury, and the late Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Frazier, Sr.

Blight May Cause Severe Loss In Kentucky's 1970 Corn Crop

Kentucky farmers are facing a major problem with the Southern corn leaf blight that has hit crops in most counties, Commissioner of Agriculture J. Robert Miller said last week.

Unofficial estimates indicate that some 50 percent of the fields throughout the state have been struck by the blight, a fungus known as "helminthosporium maydis." James Koepper, federal statistician in charge of the Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, says the blight appears worse in the Western Kentucky counties, although almost every county seems to have the problem.

U. S. Department of Agriculture officials in Washington have not yet given an official estimate of just what the blight damage might be in terms of yields or dollars. A report is expected to be released early next month after surveys have been completed in the major corn producing areas.

The Southern corn leaf blight was first observed in the United States in the early 1920's. It thrives in a warm, humid climate, which has made it a problem in the Southern states for a number of years.

A major means of control has been the use of resistant hybrids. However, a USDA official said that from 70 to 90 percent of the present varieties of field corn are being effected by the blight this year.

Corn is an important crop in Kentucky, with last year's production adding about $100 million to our agricultural income. Added to the dollar value of the corn crop itself is its importance to the state's livestock industry. As a consequence, any loss suffered by corn growers will be compounded to a large degree by livestock producers.

Just how much loss the blight will deal to Kentucky agriculture cannot be estimated at this time. It appears, however, that the loss to commercial corn producers will be sizeable. If the blight is as widespread as it appears at this time, livestock feeders may well be in for a much tighter price squeeze in their feeding costs.

At this time the corn blight attack is of great concern not only to farmers but also to all who are involved in agriculture, and, of course, to those who are the ultimate consumers of grain products. Too, with corn being a major livestock feed, consumers of red meat products also have reason for concern.

Controls for the Southern corn blight is a major problem facing research institutions.

"Our hope for the present is that this year's loss will be much less than is being calculated at this time," Commissioner Miller said.

The disease attacks most corn varieties, and first appears as small yellow spots scattered on the plant leaf. The blight being reported this summer also attacks the corn stalk and ear, causing severe infections of stalk and ear rot in some cases.

UK specialists cautioned Kentucky's corn farmers against over-reacting to the reported epidemic. As long as the plant has green leaves, they maintain, the farmer would be better off letting the plant mature as long as possible.

"There's not much you can do about the disease," one UK spokesman said, "but you've got to keep a level head when dealing with it. Chances are it's not going to be as bad as you might think."

BEAVER RESCUE SQUAD HOLDS BARBECUE ROAST

Some farmers in the state fear they may harm their livestock by feeding them blight-infested corn. But a recent study indicated there was no toxic effect to animals which were fed severely blighted corn over a 40-day period. Since many stalks of corn in severely blighted fields may not last until final harvest, UK's experts recommend allowing the corn to develop as far as possible before harvesting.

Extension Service News

By JACK M. FRIAR
County Extension Agent

It's time to think about fall lawn care in Floyd county. August 15 to September 30 is the best time of year for lawn renovation, reseeding, liming and fertilization.

If the lawn contains less than 50 percent desirable grasses or has hard-to-kill weeds such as quackgrass, bermuda and other grasses, the University of Kentucky Extension Service recommends completely working up the soil and starting from seed.

"This is a rather drastic measure," he said, "but it makes certain the lawn will have desirable grass species".

If the lawn is over 50 percent desirable grasses and contains no hard-to-kill perennial grasses, then it can be improved by proper liming, fertilizing, reseeding and mowing.

According to the UK Extension Service, Kentucky bluegrass alone or with creeping red fescue is the most desirable lawn grass for the state. The bluegrass tends to dominate the sunny areas of the lawns and the fescue the shady areas. The color, leaf texture and growth habit of these two grasses are similar, permitting them to be grown together.

Tall fescue seed alone at heavy rates makes a desirable lawn grass for most of Kentucky especially central and western parts of the state. Orchardgrass, timothy and red top are not desirable lawn grasses and should not be included in grass mixtures, Watkins says. Tall fescue should not be included with Kentucky bluegrass and creeping red fescue—and white clover is considered objectional in lawn grasses, too.

Zoysia and bermudagrass, two warm-season grasses, are receiving more attention from homeowners because of their excellent turf during the summer months. Both turn brown at frost and remain brown until late spring. The bentgrass, while making excellent lawns, are not recommended for Kentucky because of their demand for tedious maintenance.

Howeowners are reminded that before beginning fall lawn renovation, a soil test should be made. This test will serve as a guide on the amounts of phosphorus and potash levels needed by the soil. The test also indicates the degree of acidity or lime requirements. Floyd county extension agents will be glad to furnish information on how to take soil samples and get them tested. Liming and fertilizing is best done between Sept. 1 and 15. Fescue and bluegrass will grow rapidly as soon as cool nights and fall rains arrive—therefore they need ample fertility. The amount of fertilizers applied is usually keyed to one pound of nitrogen per 1000 square feet per application. Cool-season turf requires high amounts of nitrogen, low amounts of phosphorus and medium amounts of potash.

After fertilizing in late August or early September, another application in October or November will keep the grass green late in the fall and cause it to green up early in the spring.

September is a good time to reseed bare areas of the lawn. When reseeding, the same grass mixture prevalent in the rest of the lawn should be used. Very thin lawns should be reseeded all over, while lawns with thick turf in some areas and bare spots in others should be seeded only in the bare spots. All dead grass should be raked and removed from the lawn, and seed, lime and fertilizer may be applied before or after this operation.

Occupations of working mothers are generally similar to those of all women workers. Among every 100 working mothers with husband present, 32 are clerical workers, 21 service workers, 18 factory operatives, 14 professional workers, 7 sales workers, and 8 in other occupations.

The candelabra were covered with ivy. On either side of the arch candelabra was a spiral and a pyramid candelabra decorated with white taper candles and ivy. In the center of the altar was a profile kneeling bench. The decoration of candles and ivy was carried out through the church in the window arrangements and pew markers.

The table was arranged with a maderia linen cloth, silver punch bowl and cups, silver candelabra with white candles and a tall centerpiece in a silver bowl of white and bronze. ### New Ward Agency Structure Planned To Start Here Soon

Ronald Frazier, owner-manager of the Montgomery Ward Sales Agency here, announced this week plans to construct a building to house the business at a new location.

Work is scheduled to begin immediately on a building which will supply the business a floor area of 600 square feet. The new store will be located at the corner of Patton Street and North Lake Drive where he purchased the service station property of Mason Moore and an adjoining building from Dewey May. The service station will be torn away for new construction, and the work will add to the May building.

"Response to our sales agency has been great, and we recognize the need for expanded service," Mr. Frazier said.

The new building will have an auto service department, and the new location will afford ample customer-parking.

Library To Help TV High School

If you don't have a high school diploma and still want to get one, you can tune in and turn on this September to a special Kentucky Educational Television series that will prepare adults for the state high school equivalency tests. The Floyd County Library has the materials you need to participate in the series.

The "TV High School" will begin its half-hour lessons on September 21. Two different lessons will be broadcast per week, with two repeats of each lesson. A total of 60 30-minute programs shown over a 34-week period have been produced to help persons pass the tests.

Lessons and the tests cover areas of educational development in natural sciences, English language and literature, social studies, and mathematics. Completion of "TV High School" helps prepare students to take the GED (General Educational Development) test for high school equivalency.

The Floyd County Library has the materials needed to participate in the series. The home study kit, which is required for participation in the "TV High School" series, is available for loan free of charge. The kit contains ten paperback books, plus various study guides and answer keys.

The materials have been provided to all county libraries in the regional library system by the Department of Libraries, Frankfort.

The program is free to all viewers. Anyone may take the high school courses at home by tuning to their local KETV station.

For those persons who wish to buy their own study kit rather than borrowing it from the library, the kit is available for $15 (send check or money order) from the Kentucky Educational Television Network, 600 Cooper Drive, Lexington, Kentucky 40502.

Responsibility for successful completion of the courses is placed in the student-viewer who must follow the lessons, study on his own and progress toward his goal with a strong purpose.

The most recent figures compiled show over 750,000 Kentuckians over the age of 26 do not have a high school diploma.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

Young people have a hard time of it. Just think of all the "Don'ts" that they have to hear and all the unlucky acts they have to avoid. Humanity has been around a long time. And in that time it, or they, or whatever you want to call the people of the past, built up a lot of prohibitions that the younger ones of us, the late-comers, just have to know. No one's youth is ever long enough to learn all of these sacred rules; before they can all be learned, youth is gone and the young person who found it so hard to keep all the rules is dictating them to still younger protesters. A humorist of a half century ago said that by the time we get used to being descendants, we wake up some fine morning to find ourselves ancestors.

Some of the "Don'ts" undoubtedly were designed to make us more careful in how we acted. The punishments for even these acts do not always seem adapted to the acts themselves. Just why eating the crusts of bread causes your hair to be curly would strain the science that I know, no matter how desirable it would be to keep from wasting bread and how equally desirable it would be to have curly hair. Don't turn over a chair; but how does that show that you have told or will tell a lie? Carelessness, yes, but hardly a moral thing, if a mere mortal were asked to pronounce judgment on sacred traditional sayings. I can see that being able to turn a hoecake is an accomplishment; for one time the rule promises a reward: you are old enough to get married. Probably stirring a cake both ways or quitting your part of the stirring and letting someone else finish your job ought to be punished by having the cake fall; and that is what is prophesied. Considering that unwanted callers have always been a problem, clutch your dishcloth tightly, for if you drop it, you'll have an unwanted caller. To break a mirror, usually thought of as a very careless act, carries its own punishment and for a whole seven years; watch that mirror when you just must take it down or move it.

Just why singing or whistling at the table deserves some sort of punishment is hard to see; maybe a mild scolding would be sufficient. And whistling or singing after you have gone to bed shows that you ought to quiet down and go to sleep. Why not forego the singing or whistling then and, the next morning, "roll out of bed with a song," in the words of a fairly recent popular number on the Hit Parade. Opening an umbrella inside a house or carrying something like a hoe or rake or briar-hook inside certainly might dislodge some of the less stable pieces of furniture or break a lamp chimney, let us say; therefore that act is fraught with bad luck.

Now there are certain things that nice young ladies or bouncy girls whose parents would like to mould into proper young ladies just must not do. One of them is to whistle; you thereby place yourself in the rather doubtful category with crowing hens, and that does not sound nice. Also, if you want to jump out a window, restrain yourself. It is a very unlady-like act, and to undo it would require a very dangerous antidote to the bad act: jump back in again, backwards! Away back in the past, and

Floyd Boys Win 2 Championships In Fair Contests

Floyd county teams came within a few points of making an unprecedented clean sweep of all the trophies awarded in 4-H poultry-judging events at the Kentucky State Fair in Louisville last week.

The championships in both the senior and junior divisions were won by Floyd 4-H'ers who also won second and third place trophies in the two divisions.

In the senior division the Floyd boys missed the fourth-place trophy by only two points. The same trophy was lost in the junior category by a mere five points. "We came that near to winning all four in trophies in both divisions—something I've always wanted to see," commented their coach, Jack Friar, extension agent.

It was the third year in a row that a Floyd county senior 4-H boy has won the poultry judging championship.

Last week's results:

Senior division—Charles Conn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herschell Conn, of Dana, a junior at Betsy Layne high school, champion; Bill Arnold Hackworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Troy Hackworth, West Prestonsburg, a freshman this fall at the University of Kentucky, second; Mike Tackett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Tackett, Ivel, a junior at Betsy Layne high, third; Bruce Brown, of Johnson county, fourth; Russell Ferrell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ferrell, Harold, junior at Betsy Layne, fifth; Darrell Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Clark, Harold, a Betsy Layne junior, seventh; Billy Stumbo, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Stumbo, Harold, Betsy Layne high school sophomore, eighth.

Later, after a meeting with coal representatives, King said, "This is too complicated a deal for a quick decision. It took 20 years for the situation to get this way and we can spend a little more time working on a solution."

The commissioner indicated a third meeting with coal representatives is possible this week.

King said the department will continue to file suit to recover damages for roads torn up by coal trucks.

"Once these roads are upgraded and new weight limits are set, the Motor Transportation Department will check to make sure the new weight limits are being observed," King said.

If the abuses continue, he said, citations will be issued—leaving it to county courts to levy fines on violators.

"If the county courts fail to impose fines we will have to assume the county is willing to accept the responsibility for allowing the trucks to continue to operate," the commissioner said.

order Aug. 18 to halt the hauling of coal over the roads involved pending settlement of the case.

Mann directed Terry-Elkhorn to post a $205,000 bond until the provisions of the order are carried out.

Another provision of the order requires Terry-Elkhorn to remove the side boards from the trucks hauling coal from its mine and to have all such trucks covered within 30 days. Sideboards actually were added to coal trucks merely to keep the coal from falling off, but they resulted in more coal being piled on.

P'burg May Get Training Unit

Joseph L. McCauley, director of the Big Sandy Area Development Council, Inc., Prestonsburg, said this week that Mayor George P. Archer has filed through the council a request that the Kentucky Law Enforcement Council make available to the area, its mobile training unit and personnel to conduct a training course here for law enforcement officers.

The request, he said, will be granted as soon as possible. The mobile unit, designed to accommodate 30 enforcement officers, is expected to be ready for use around Sept. 1, after which date it will be put into operation to meet with requests for its services in various parts of the state.

"If present plans are successful," Robert Clark Stone, executive director of the Kentucky Law Enforcement Council, wrote Mr. McCauley, "we will have our first one-week course on the tremendous problem of narcotics and drugs. We... assure you of early consideration for the Big Sandy area..."

The training classes, if held here, would serve the Big Sandy development area composed of Floyd, Pike, Johnson, Magoffin and Martin counties.

John T. Hill, of the Hill Engineering Co., Prestonsburg, said his firm has made a "head count" of potential customers in the proposed district, and that it shows there are 402 homes and businesses there. He estimates that the water district would have a minimum of 200 customers, and the Public Service Commission study has shown that even with only 140 consumers initially the project would be feasible on the basis of a 60 per cent grant.

EDA participation on the basis of 80 per cent will be sought, it was said.

The development, which would include the laying of 12 to 15 miles of water mains, construction of pump stations and storage tanks, would involve an estimated $400,000.

It is proposed, Hill said, to buy water from the Prestonsburg municipal water system, if a satisfactory rate can be arranged. This would eliminate use of the reservoir now in use in the town of David.

Judge Conley Among 127 Who Graduate

Judges from all parts of the United States last Friday completed an intensive four-week course at the National College of Trial Judges in Reno, Nevada in the rapidly changing area of criminal and civil law that will better enable them to administer justice.

Circuit Judge Hollie Conley, of this county, was one of 127 graduates who were selected from a total population of 5,000 trial judges nationwide to participate. The National College, held at the University of Nevada, signifies a national effort on the part of judges themselves to give justice more reason, integrity, and fairness when an alternative to violent dissent and armed revolution is sorely needed. Circuit Judge Conley preside over criminal cases from murder to lesser crimes and civil cases from automobile liability claims to child custody actions. The curriculum includes court administration, civil proceedings before trial, judicial discretion, family law, evidence, and many other areas of vital concern.

Long-range funding for the NCSTJ is primarily assured under a ten-year grant from the Fleischmann Foundation with additional funding from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Michigan.

Many of the judges gave up their own vacation time to attend. They spent about six hours a day in actual class time and were required to spend four hours per day on outside reading in addition to evening seminars.

Foresters Picked To Attend School

Forrest Burchett, of Prestonsburg, assistant fire control supervisor, Tilton Johnson, of Weeksbury, guard, and R. M. Pitcock, of Allen, all of the Kentucky Division of Forestry, have been selected to attend a special fire prevention training school September 9-10 at DuPont Lodge, Cumberland Falls State Park.

Approximately 50 division employees from 20 counties have been chosen to participate in the training school. The instructors will be division staff members, U. S. Forest Service personnel and specialists from several other state forestry agencies.

The primary purpose of the school is to explore ways of reducing the number of man-caused forest fires in Kentucky, and to develop a plan of action for each of the 20 selected counties. Last spring, Kentucky had some 1,900 forest fires that burned

No-Pollution Motor Soon in Production

SARASOTA, Fla.—A Sarasota research scientist yesterday announced the signing of a multimillion dollar contract for mass production of a pollution-free engine in Datsun automobiles starting with 1973 models.

Wallace L. Minto said the engine, powered by gas now used as a cooling agent in refrigerators and air conditioners, would drive the Datsun 100 miles an hour, operate economically, have a long life and produce "a breathable exhaust."

The contract, signed in Tokyo, gives only Asian rights to the Nissan Motor Co., manufacturer of Datsun, Minto said. He said this leaves him free to negotiate contracts in the United States, where internal combustion engines produce an estimated 60 per cent of air pollution, and in Europe.

A demonstrator being installed in a Datsun station wagon is to be delivered to Tokyo within six months. A production model to be assembled by the Swedish Rotary Machine Co. in Stockholm is scheduled for completion in 18 months.

The first cars powered by the new engine will come off the production line in 1972 and production will step up rapidly after that.

Perfected after three years of work in his Kinetics Corp. plant, the engine is powered by freon, a liquid chemical.

The chemical flows into two boilers controlled by a solid-state computer the size of a pack of cigarettes. It is then converted to gas at a temperature of 300 degrees and drives the engine.

The gas then enters a condenser built into the roof of the car, returns to liquid form and is used again.

Kerosene used to fire the boilers is mixed with excess air, is completely consumed as it burns at a low temperature and leaves no harmful exhaust.

Kerosene was chosen for the demonstrator model but gas, propane, oil, "anything that burns," can be used, Minto said.

The car will travel 25 to 30 miles on a gallon of kerosene and the original load of 75 pounds of refrigerant gas will last two to three years, the scientist said.

"In the internal combustion engine, the fuel burns explosively at extremely high temperatures," Minto said. "In this engine it burns smoothly and steadily with no explosion."

The only controls are forward and reverse. Because there are so few moving parts, the engine is virtually maintenance-free and would last for many years, he said.

Minto, who worked on development of the atom bomb and has many inventions to his credit, has been using the new engine for about a year in a Volkswagen bus. The Datsun demonstrator, he said, is nearing completion.

When finished, the demonstrator will go to Sweden for use in turning out the production model and Datsun plans mass production in 1972.

Because of the low heat generated by the engine, Minto said it eventually may be built of aluminum and plastic to reduce weight.

Kentucky Leads United States In Construction of Libraries

By LOIS CAMPBELL

FRANKFORT, KY.—A problem besetting any agency is how to make the most out of what they have. In almost every instance, there are not enough funds to do what has to be done. In the case of the Department of Libraries, it was how to build new facilities across the state on a very limited budget.

In July, 1968, the Department of Libraries announced the construction of 20 new libraries around the state. This is the story of how it was done.

For many years, Miss Margaret Willis, head of the Department of Libraries, was concerned over the lack of adequate library facilities around the state. She took her problem to the then newly elected Gov. Louie B. Nunn, and together they came up with a plan to appropriate state funds over a 20-year period to build or renovate libraries across the state.

The program, known as the Library Amortization Program, pledges more than $200,000 a year in state funds to be used to retire part of local county bonds used to construct libraries in local communities.

Because of state participation, $6 million in library construction is now under way in the state. Four libraries have been completed and the remaining 18 are in one stage of development or another, from planning to final project audit.

Counties participating in the program are Floyd, Bourbon, Butler, Calloway, Edmonson, Hancock, Hart, Johnson, Kenton, LaRue, Leslie, Lincoln, Lyon, Marion, Meade, Metcalfe, Nelson, Perry, Pulaski, Rowan and Breckinridge.

According to John I. Faulkenberry, Jr., Title II construction administrator at the Department of Libraries, the program makes Kentucky almost unique in state-financed library construction. In fact, the two or three other states which are using state money for this purpose are not doing so on as large a scale.

The program supplements and almost replaces the L. S. C. A. (federal) construction program, now funded at such a low level that only one project a year is possible.

There are many counties in Kentucky which now have or are in the process of obtaining new library facilities where there were none of any consequence before. Many of the communities only had one or two small rooms in the county courthouse, if that much.

With the current construction program under way, Kentucky is building more public libraries than any other state in the nation.

In addition, the Bookmobile fleet of nearly 110 vehicles serving over 90 Kentucky counties gives Kentucky the largest state-owned traveling library in the country.

The long-range goal for library construction in Kentucky is for all citizens in each of Kentucky's 120 counties to have available for their use an adequate public library facility.

Student Fund Release Asked

Many Kentucky college students will be unable to enroll for the fall semester unless student assistance funds appropriated by Congress in the passage of the Education appropriation bill are released immediately by the Bureau of the Budget, it was said here this week.

A number of Prestonsburg Community College students will be among those affected, Tom King, public relations director, said.

Congressman Carl D. Perkins this week urged the Budget Bureau to release the funds, pointing out that $7,455,347 made available to Kentucky for grants and loans to students are "absolutely essential at this time to enable thousands of students in Kentucky to pursue their higher education work, beginning in September."

Perkins added that, although these funds represent a $669,036 increase over the budget request, they fall short of meeting the needs. The bill carries $858,320 for Economic Opportunity grants, $3,191,908 for college work-study programs and $3,405,119 for NDEA student loans.

"I don't want an imported car. I want a Volkswagen."

But a Volkswagen is an imported car. Isn't it?
Sure it is. Just like coffee is an imported drink. So it's no surprise to find 3½ million Volkswagens buzzing around the States.
Isn't that odd for a funny-looking car with a funny-sounding name?
No. Not when you know how we take care of them and sell them.
To begin with, service always came before sales with us. It still does.
We've always worked every bit as hard to improve VW service as we have to improve the VW itself.
So when you bring your VW in for service, drive up to the front door, please.
You can sit in our spic-and-span waiting rooms, have a cup of imported coffee and not walk out broken in mind, spirit and checkbook.
One big reason for this is that while we always make VWs better and better, we don't always make them different and different.
So those 3½ million VWs have a lot in common: most VW parts still fit most VWs.
It is actually easier (and cheaper) to get parts for a Volkswagen than for many domestic cars on the road today.
It is also easier to get a whole VW: $1839* does it. Lots of cars just come and go. VWs just go and go.

Red Cross Asks Funds To Help Celia-Stricken

Floyd Chapter, American Red Cross, has been assigned a quota of $514 to help meet the $10 million the American Red Cross will spend in helping the 30,000 families stricken by hurricane Celia.

Floyd countians are asked to send their contributions to Floyd Chapter, American Red Cross, Prestonsburg.

The storm, which devastated the Coastal Bend area of Texas, destroyed 1000 homes, caused major damage to 5000 others and damaged in lesser degree 25,000 others.

"We've hardly scratched the surface," Robert F. Shea, American Red Cross vice-president, said after the Red Cross had already spent $2.5 million toward helping the victims.

"Floyd county has had its share of disasters, and it should not forget the troubles of others," Miss Ella Noel White, Red cross chapter executive secretary, said in appealing to citizens to subscribe "at least" the assigned quota.

Native Floyd Countian, Mrs. Archer, 80, Dies

A Morning Prayer

To you, Lord, I owe the light of this day, and it reminds me of every blessing I have received and that each came from Thee. Give to me strength and courage, and a renewal of faith that I may perform kindly and unselfishly each hour of this day. May I pass to others the many blessings that You have given to me, Lord. Keep me mindful.

Cleanse me in mind and heart, and give to me the clear vision. Teach me tenderness toward the weak or ill, and make it easy for me to be kind and considerate toward all with whom I come in contact. Each new day, may I dedicate my life anew to Thee, and to those who most need me.

Give to me patience, humility, a devotion to the highest ideals, and help me to live the triumphant life from day to day, meeting all emergencies with courage and no complaints. Dear Lord, walk with me, and talk with me, no matter where I may be.

Forgive me all my transgressions, all my errors, mistakes and unintended injury in any manner toward others. May I emulate the teachings of Jesus Christ while here upon this earth. I pray for simplicity in my personal life, and tolerance toward all, misjudging no one.

Whether there be sunshine or not, may this be a good and useful day to me and all others, Lord. Help me to bear in mind that "the sunrise has never failed us yet," and that all who call upon Thee, the Father of us all, are sure to be heard and blessed. Amen.

TO SING IN FOLK FESTIVAL—Edith Yates and Diana Campbell who will sing in the Kentucky Highland Folk Festival at Jenny Wiley State Park amphitheatre this week-end.

Entertainment in the Highlands, Then and Now, On Tap This Week

By HELEN PRICE STACY

When approximately 8000 people call on you, where do you put them? Why, in the back yard, of course. And when the yard won't hold them, you take down a few fences, mow the tall grass in a five-acre field, move out a giant truck bed for a stage, tell everyone to join in the fun and get the show underway.

That's the way Col. T. C. Sizemore and his pretty Pat at Booneville get things moving for their annual Southeastern Kentucky Homecoming to take place Sunday, Sept. 6 in the big field behind their house at Booneville.

They expect a crowd, because it will be Earle Combs Day, Miss V. F. W. of Kentucky day, and a day to pay homage to great Kentuckians Redford S. Blazer, chairman of the board of Ashland Oil; Robert E. Gable, president of Sterns Coal and Lumber Co.; Chester Wolfe, mayor of Middlesboro; Dr. Walter Lee Caywood, president of the Kentucky Medical Assn.; Col. Barney Tucker, president of the Kentucky Burley Belt Corp.; Dr. Mahlon Miller, president of Union College at Barbourville; Arch G. Mainous, chairman of the board of Citizens National Bank and Trust, Lexington.

The year before last, entertainment was furnished by Hank Williams Jr. and his Cheatin' Hearts. This year Hank's mother, Mrs. Audrey Williams, and the Cold, Cold Hearts of Nashville will furnish the musical entertainment for the one-day family get-together.

The celebration at Booneville is on Sept. 6 which means you also can take in one day of the Fifth Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival in the amphitheater at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park near Prestonsburg—a three-day event beginning Sept. 4.

Edith James is program director of the festival and Elmer N. Beckett, Jr. is producer.

"Our aim is to preserve the Appalachian heritage in music and dances," says Mrs. James, who also is well known for her Christmas programs in which she directs the Jenny Wiley Chantresses in songs of Old Christmas.

Mrs. James, Lady of the Highlands, has studied music at Averett College, Danville, Va.; the Conservatory of Music, Cincinnati; Peabody Conservatory and from private teachers in New York.

She is well-known; for after organizing The Kentucky Mountain Plain Song Chanters (all men and old-time hymn singers), she presented them by invitation at the New York World's Fair, at Columbia University and in national folk festivals. Her collection of ballads, hymns and songs typical of the Kentucky Highlands is in the Library of Congress. She is the recipient of the Burl Ives Award and four Awards of Merit from the National Federation of Music Clubs.

The event at beautiful Jenny Wiley resort will depict the Eastern Kentucky highlands of generations ago, how its people dressed, danced and sang. The songs, many of them peculiar to the hills, reveal much about the customs of that era. Hearts were broken for love; some died; others healed quickly when a bonnie lad rode his steed over the hill and up the creek to come a-courtin'.

Appearing for the fifth time at the festival will be Raymond McLain and the Hindman Settlement School dancers.

Sunday afternoon will be devoted to religious music and its evolution in the highlands. Mrs. Chalmer Frazier will direct a rhythmic choir, unique in Kentucky, through the earliest forms of worship. Old-time chants will be sung—a type of song almost gone from the hills.

In addition to songs of the highlands and music on banjo, fiddle, dulcimer and guitar, local artist Russell May will display paintings of local scenes. Color slides of mountain utensils and furniture also will be shown.

Though both these events are in the same week, they are so arranged that you can visit beautiful Jenny Wiley State Resort Park and see and hear how entertainment was carried out in earlier days in the highlands... then travel Mountain Parkway south to Booneville to see and hear how it is done today.

Isn't it about time someone did something about giving you an improved color TV guarantee? MOTOROLA HAS!

ONE YEAR SERVICE AND TWO YEAR REGISTERED GUARANTEE ON PICTURE TUBE AND ALL COMPONENT PARTS

Motorola's original owner's guarantee is twofold.

(1) Components and Picture Tube—For a period two years from purchase date, Motorola guarantees free exchange or repair of any component part and picture tube, including their replacements, proved defective in normal use. New or remanufactured replacement parts used at Motorola's option.

(2) Labor—Dealer will provide a Labor Guarantee Registration Form which entitles purchaser to free in-home service labor one year from purchase date. Labor extra thereafter. Labor covers repair and replacement of guaranteed components, picture tube and workmanship defects. Guarantee excludes charges for initial set-up, installation, delivery, instruction, misuse, customer misadjustments, and antenna service. Product and servicer's transportation and premium time not within normal work day are extra. Arranged through selling dealer and valid only if performed by Motorola authorized participating servicer and on submission of guarantee book, bill of sale and labor guarantee form.

Both the Guarantee Registration Card and Labor Guarantee Registration Form must be returned, as specified therein, within 10 days of delivery. Otherwise both guarantees are void. Owner must notify Motorola of any address change.

This improved guarantee comes with all 25" <sup>(diag.)</sup> Quasar II "works in a drawer" Color TVs.

All 25" (diag.) Quasar II Color TVs also have:

- Solid-state* plug-in mini-circuits to help keep the set at home working . . . not in the repair shop. If a mini-circuit should ever fail, the drawer slides out and a new mini-circuit can be plugged in, usually right at home, in minutes. That's why it's called the easy-to-service "works in a drawer" Color TV.
- Improved color picture tube that's "squared off" to provide a big 315-square inch viewing area.
- Automatic fine tuning that brings in the best possible color picture, and an electronic lock that keeps it that way, even when the channels are changed.
- All have luxurious cabinetry like the WU917 shown above. This is a to-the-floor contemporary style cabinet finished in rich Trendwood veneer and select hardwood solids.

* Solid state, except 4 tubes and picture tube.

Mrs. Patrick Dies At Pikeville, Aug. 28

Mrs. Elsie Boughton Patrick, of Langley, died August 28 at the Methodist Hospital, Pikeville, after a brief illness.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday at the Maytown Methodist Church, the Rev. John Huffman officiating. Burial was in the May cemetery at Maytown.

Fudge, Oak Ridge, Tenn.; two grandsons, Gene and John Dillman, Middlesboro; a sister, Mrs. Pearl Brown, Fort Valley, Georgia; two brothers, Robert T. Jones, Atlanta, Ga., and Sam Jones, Grundy, Va.

The family had requested that contributions be made to the Maytown Methodist Church in lieu of flowers.

Mrs. Patrick was born Elsie Louise Jones on Dec. 22, 1900 in Fort Valley, Georgia, the daughter of James Major and Annie Tyler Jones. Her childhood and adolescent years were spent in Fort Valley.

She was graduated from Asbury College with a major in voice and piano. She was first married to Prof. Newell C. Boughton, who preceded her in death in 1936. A son born to this union also preceded her in death in 1928.

She also taught at Prestonsburg and Northern, though most of her years were spent at Maytown, where she retained her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick had lived in Hazard for four years prior to his retirement from the Ky.-W. Va. Gas Company. Then they returned to their home in Maytown.

MISS HALL, MR. HILL WED

Miss Pamalea Hall, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Palmer L. Hall, of Morehead, and a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clabe Bingham of Prestonsburg, became the bride of Mr. George Carlos Hill, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Hill, also of Morehead, Saturday, August 8 at the Morehead United Methodist Church. Performing the 1:30 p.m. ceremony was the Rev. Larry Buskirk, pastor of the church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a floor-length gown of candlelight satin, with a French lace bodice embroidered with pearls. The high neckline was ruffled as was the cuff of the long sleeves. French lace bordered the scalloped hem of the A-line skirt. The gown, featuring a detachable cathedral train, had lace and pearl appliques throughout; the matching full length French illusion veil was enhanced with Alencon lace appliques studded with pearls. She carried a cascade of phalenopsis orchids and variegated ivy.

Carol Wentz, Charlotte McNeely and Rhonda Hill, of Morehead served Miss Hall as maids of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Brenda Higginbotham, of Pikeville, Ky., Miss Ann Wheeler, Ashland, Ky., Miss Emmy Krebs, Springfield, Md., and Sherry Hill, of Morehead. The attendants wore long gowns of lavender crepe with deep purple venise lattice work vests. The purple venise lace trimmed the cuffs of the long crepe sleeves.

The attendants carried long-stemmed purple asters with trailing streamers.

The little flower girl, Judy Collins, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Collins, wore a long, lavender lace-trimmed dress and carried purple asters.

Bill Collier, of Pikeville, was best man and serving as ushers were Mike Hill, Charles Hocker, Stephen Butcher, Steven Calvert, Mark Holbrook, all of Morehead and Hill Smith of Jackson, Kentucky.

Little Mathew Hill, brother of the groom, was ringbearer.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Hill chose an aqua street-length dress of peau de soie and lace. Her corsage was a white cymbidium orchid. The mother of the groom was in a dress of pink linen and lace, and her corsage was a white cymbidium orchid.

A program of wedding music preceding the ceremony was presented by Mrs. Douglas Engelhardt, organist, and vocalist Jenny Oliver of Flemingsburg, a sorority sister of the bride.

The reception following the ceremony was held at the home of the bride on Wilson Avenue.

After spending their honeymoon at Myrtle Beach, S. C., Mr. and Mrs. Hill are residing in Morehead while continuing their education at the University.

Library Addition Costing $51,000 Near Completion

The new Art and Music room of the Floyd County Library is nearing completion after several delays during the winter.

Once the addition is completed, the library will be one of the most modern in Kentucky, Homer Lee Hall, regional librarian, said.

The addition and its equipment will cost approximately $51,000.

The new addition will provide a modern sound system for stereo listening of cartridge, cassette and reel-to-reel tapes, in addition to stereo recordings. A collection of 1400 phono-recordings will be available for loan in addition to numerous cartridges, cassettes and reel-to-reel tapes. Provisions have been made for art exhibits, general and educational television, film presentations and conference areas.

The construction project includes installation of carpet for the entire library and an inter-communication system throughout the facility.

Construction was made possible by an amortization grant by the Kentucky Department of Libraries.

The library will be closed the week of September 7-12 for final work on the addition and renovation. It will resume library services September 14 at 8:30 a.m.

Boone Had His Troubles, Too, With High Rate of Interest

If you think interest rates are higher today, consider then the case of that well-known Kentuckian, Daniel Boone.

Former Kenton County State Senator James C. Ware, vice-president of the First National Bank and Trust Co., Covington, has presented copies of papers to the University of Kentucky library showing that ol' Dan'l agreed to pay 100 per cent interest for a two-year loan.

The Covington banker uncovered the documents in the Campbell county courthouse, Alexandria, in doing research on early Kentucky banking history.

Boone and a fellow pioneer, John Grant, of Woodford county, agreed to pay one Hugh French, Goochland county, Va., 100 per cent interest for a loan of 150 pounds, Virginia money. The note was dated November 12, 1791.

But Daniel, not known as a good businessman, along with friend Grant, apparently fell on evil times, for the records show that the Campbell county clerk, James Taylor, a cousin of Zachary

Taylor, issued a warrant to the sheriff in 1796 to bring in the two men for the October session of the "quarter court."

By that time, Gooch had sold the note to John Ware (no relative of Senator Ware), and suit had been filed for repayment, plus 50 pounds damages.

Daniel and Grant lost the suit but court records fail to show the re-payment.

Boone was back in the office of the court two years later, however, when he filed an "instrument," indicating the Kentucky pioneer was active in the real estate business.

The Compulsory Immunization Law in Kentucky requires parents to have children immunized against diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus, measles, polio, and smallpox by age 2. It also requires school boards to deny enrollment to a child entering first grade who does not submit a certificate showing immunization against these diseases, with the exception of whooping cough (pertussis).
