

Downtown Mall Hope Fades Here

Lack of Interest Seen As Meeting Attendance Slim

Prospects for an open-air mall in the Court street business district here may have appreciably dimmed with the appearance last Thursday night of representatives of only five business houses at the City Council meeting scheduled for consideration of the project.

Four of the five who attended the meeting favor the mall. One preferred only the added parking area feature that has been discussed as a part of the overall venture. Those who attended the meeting agreed to contact other businesses for their reaction to the plan.

Business representatives were told at the meeting that the City Council isn't certain it can get the federal cooperation needed, that the project may not be possible. They also were told that Council doesn't want it if the business people who presumably would be most directly affected by it aren't interested.

The mall was conceived, it is explained, to protect the business district against inroads from the possible development of a suburban shopping center. It would close Court street from the Lake Drive traffic light to Front Street to all except pedestrian traffic, and would include a riverfront parking area on the west side of Front street.

The design plan has been outlined as this: Existing sidewalks would be torn out and new sidewalks installed and the existing street pavement inlaid with brick. The brick paving would terminate at certain places to form circular tree grates and

Flood, Drowning Met by Efforts Of Rescue Squad

The Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad last Wednesday night helped in the evacuation of approximately 60 flood-threatened homes at Salyersville, then later in the week joined in a search of Blaine Creek, Lawrence county, for the body of a seven-year-old boy.

Within a period of one and a half hours last Wednesday 4.85 inches of rain fell in the Salyersville vicinity, turning Road Fork and Cole Branch, Licking River tributaries, into torrents. The rush of water from the two smaller streams backed up the river. In some parts of Salyersville the water rose almost four feet in homes and business houses. Cole Branch dumped its wall of water into the center of the town.

Property damage caused by the cloudburst has been estimated at more than $1 million.

Tim Bostic, editor of The Salyersville Independent, paid tribute to the work of the Floyd squad, pointing out that without its services the situation would have been much more critical than it was. "We appreciate their work so much that we're passing the hat here to help this fine group continue to help in such situations," Bostic said.

In Lawrence county the search was for the body of Eric Mayo, 7, of Champaign, Ill., who slipped from a rock into Blaine Creek last Thursday while playing with two cousins whom he was visiting. His body was found Saturday, almost three miles downstream from the point where he disappeared.

Native of Floyd Gunshot Victim; Sons Arrested

Raymond Connors, 60, former Floyd county man, was found dead of a gunshot wound in his stomach at his home on Lick Branch, Martin county, last Wednesday, and his sons, James Lee, 32, and Hugh, 20, were arrested Saturday as suspects in the case.

Rice Bond Set At $10,000 After Woman Killed

John Rice, 51-year-old Stephens Branch man, waived examining trial here Saturday when arraigned on a murder charge in connection with the gunshot death at his home, Tuesday night of last week, of Verline Robinson, 30, and was released under $10,000 bond to answer to the September grand jury.

A blast from a shotgun struck Miss Robinson in the left side of her head, and she died almost instantly. Her fiancé, Willie Goodman, also was arrested and booked at the county jail on a murder count, but he was released on motion of Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo following an investigation of the shooting.

Rice claimed the shooting was accidental. Goodman, in a signed statement, said he and Miss Robinson were at the Rice home, that he and Rice had been drinking beer during the day and had started on whiskey when a fist fight developed—why, he could not explain. His face bore the marks of battle. He said that after the fight was over Rice procured a shotgun and that as he and Miss Robinson were leaving via the kitchen a shot was fired and he saw his fiancée fall. He added that he did not recall hearing Rice say anything, nor did he see the gun.

Goodman also told Commonwealth's Attorney Stumbo and State Detective Chester D. Potter that after going to nearby homes for help he returned to the Rice residence and talked with Rice. He said Rice admitted firing the shot but claimed it was an accident, that he did not intend to shoot the girl. "And I don't believe he did," Goodman added.

Goodman said he and Miss Robinson were close together as he walked slightly in front of her, leaving the Rice home, when the one shot was fired.

Both men were booked at the jail here by Sheriff Frank Leslie and Deputy Sheriff Virgil Conn at 1:20 a.m., Aug. 4. The victim was a daughter of Joe Robinson, of Arkansas Creek, and the late Vicie Conn Robinson. Besides her father, she is survived by a daughter, Lorene; two brothers, Jeff Robinson, of Langley, and Roy Robinson, of Arkansas Creek; five sisters, Miss Creeda Robinson, Miss Barbara Robinson, Mrs. Daisy Bryant, Mrs. Babe Patrick and Mrs. Mossie Robinson, all of Arkansas.

Elementary Students To Enroll, Aug. 12-13

Students who have not registered and new students entering Prestonsburg elementary school should enroll for the school year, Aug. 12 and 13, between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., Thomas Tackett, principal, announces.

'Jenny Wiley!' Scores in Premiere

The new musical "Jenny Wiley!" has scored a triumph in its opening week at the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre here. An opening night audience composed of press, radio and television representatives and special guests including composer-folk singer, John Jacob Niles, and Earl Hobson Smith, author of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," gave the production a standing ovation.

The musical, with music by Benjamin Keaton and book and lyrics by Mitch Douglas, is based on the life of the legendary pioneer mother who was captured by Indians in 1789.

The musical opens in Walkers Creek, Virginia, where Tom Wiley, a young Irish immigrant, is trying to get Jenny Sellards to marry him. Jenny agrees and they start a family.

Deserted several years ago by its lone industry, coal mining, the town of Weeksbury, "at the end of the line" on Left Beaver Creek, might have sunk into decay, except for a group of citizens who have maintained community pride, worked and succeeded in making Weeksbury even more attractive than it was in its heyday.

In photo Frank Smith, one of Weeksbury's civic leaders, is shown receiving from Don Edwards, treasurer of the development Association, a certificate in recognition of the community effort. Thelma, Johnson county, placed first. Weeksbury was represented at the development group's annual banquet in Ashland by Mr. Smith, Peggy Bradford, Woodrow DeMurray and Mildred Johnson. Other Floyd countians attending the honors banquet were Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Clark, Elbert Gibson, Mrs. Virginia Hopkins and County Agent Charles Wesson.

Akers' $220,000 Bid Low on New School

Contract for construction of a two-story, six-classroom grade-school building as an addition to the Martin school campus was tentatively awarded at Saturday's meeting of the Floyd County Board of Education to Akers & Akers, Dana contractors, on the firm's low bid of $220,000.

Wells as assistant principal. Mr. Hager succeeds David Hensley, who resigned the principalship.

Four bids were opened. The highest asked $275,000 for the construction job. The building, which will be of brick construction, will have three classrooms and restrooms on each floor, plus a storage room for lunchroom supplies.

The board moved to interest in both sports all its coaches in the two schools of the county, Prestonsburg and Wheelwright, where both basketball and football are played. Here, it employed Charles Collins, physical education instructor at Prestonsburg elementary, and Robert Slone, head basketball coach, as assistant football coaches, and also named Edward Radjunas, head grid coach, as assistant basketball coach. At Wheelwright, Frankie Francis, basketball coach, was named assistant football mentor, and the football coach, Don Daniels, as Francis' assistant in basketball.

Issuance of a work order will await approval of the Department of Education.

Others employed: Frank McGuire, teacher at Prestonsburg high, to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Donnie Nunery, who has accepted an assistantship at Eastern State University, Richmond; Adrian Hall as NYC counselor for a three-week period; Ora Mae Allen as Headstart teacher at Melvin, succeeding Julia Akers, who resigned; Oscar Bush, social worker for Title I.

Ronald Hager was employed as principal of Prestonsburg high school, with Bobby

Two other resignations included those of Jack F. Wells as social worker, Title I, and Pollyanna Wiley as teacher at Prestonsburg elementary.

Non-certified personnel employed are Mabel McIntosh, Minnie Justice and Mary Bayes as cooks at Prestonsburg elementary, and Hazel Shepherd as cook at Clark elementary.

The lone bid on fleet insurance, that of Hall & Clark Insurance Agency for $16,484, was accepted. This premium is $4,000 less than that of last year because of the improved accident record.

The board rescinded a part of an order voted last November. This order provided that the board would pay a part of the salary of a teacher while he or she was rendering jury service. The voiding of the order was made necessary by a ruling of the attorney general to the effect that such payment is illegal.

In other business the board agreed to renew the lease of classrooms from the Catholic Church at Martin; authorized Supt. Clark to advertise old school buses for sale; renewed the lease of the Lower Right Toler Creek school and grounds to Eleanor Acker, missionary, and accepted the 1971-'72 school calendar.

children, and carry her and her baby into the forest.

Jenny's life is spared by an old Cherokee, Black Wolf, who wishes to adopt her as a daughter. An exciting chase by settlers takes place through the forest until they call off their search thinking that Jenny is dead. When Capjohn fights and wins Jenny from Black Wolf, she makes a dramatic escape to the new settlement of Harman's station in the Big Sandy Valley.

The sixteen song musical score includes "I Won't Quit Now," "Big Sandy Valley," "Indian Lullaby," and "My World."

Jenny is played by Penny Dennis, of Mobile, Alabama. Tom Wiley is played by Stephen Hale. Alan Cordial plays Capjohn and Jack Wicker plays Black Wolf. The production is directed by Randolph Umberger.

"Jenny Wiley!" will be presented Thursdays-Sundays through August 22 at the amphitheatre in Jenny Wiley State Park. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

The course is being conducted by the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals. Julius Ferrell, mine safety instructor of the Pikeville-Martin district will be the instructor.

Mine Course Set For Garth School

A mining school will be held at the Garth Vocational School, beginning Tuesday, August 17. The class will begin at 7 p.m. and will be held for two hours, two nights a week.

Area Plant May Double Output Within Months

The work force at American Standard's new plant, near Paintsville, is expected to double within a matter of months as the result of a company decision to close its Cincinnati plant and move its operations to its Paintsville and Louisville installations.

Closing of the Cincinnati plant is scheduled for next spring. The move, said Edward M. Thoben, Cincinnati plant manager, will enable the company to "double the capacity" of the Paintsville and Louisville plants, both of which "will be adding significantly to their payrolls."

American Standard now employs about 275 at the Johnson county plant. The plant to be closed in Cincinnati employs about 800.

Company officials held it was logical to continue expanding the Paintsville plant, which has been in operation little more than a year, because new production technology involving the ceramic disc valve was pioneered there and this involved a significant investment.

A MATTER FOR WONDER
The report that one of the Apollo 15 crewmen suffered on his way to the moon fingernail bruises that are similar to what happens when you miss the nail you're driving and hit your own causes some of us to wonder a bit. We wonder if, on your way into the heavens, you make remarks similar to those you do on earth when such untoward incidents occur.

NO RECIPROCIITY
The sheet was headed, "News Release," but it wasn't, which is often the case. It was an ill-concealed ploy for free advertising, and it came near joining the spot to which I consign other such "releases." But the pictures caught the old orb, and I almost got hooked.

It's the new Rock-It Automatic Fish Scaler, ladies and gentlemen. Made like a fish basket. You simply put your fish in it and trail it behind your boat a couple of hundred yards, and—presto! out they come, completely scaled and otherwise undamaged.

If they had told me how to catch the fish, in the first place, I wouldn't mind even listing the price and the name of the manufacturer. But they didn't, or couldn't, and so . . .

THE LONG DRAG

"Buck" Scalf was in the office today to relate the sad story of the two fellows who were deer-hunting in Arkansas. Both were a little less than bright, it seems, but one of them managed to down a big buck, and the two of them fell to, each with a hold on the deer's tail, and began dragging the buck down an old creek bed toward their car, some distance away.

It was pretty slow going, and both had worked up a sweat when the game warden bobbed up. They would have made a dash for liberty, and no questions asked, but the warden reassured them. "There's nothing wrong with shooting yourself a deer, it's the deer season," he told them, "but you could

Board Proposal Of Interim Body Wins OEO Okeh

Retiring Board Hits At 'Arbitrary' Stand Of Federal Agencies

The Floyd County Comprehensive Health Services Program may have been snatched from its deathbed by action of its board of directors here last Friday night.

The board by a 9-1 vote agreed for an interim committee to be formed along the lines suggested by the Health Affairs Office of OEO, and it was indicated in Washington that reorganization and reactivation of the program will be started almost immediately.

Approval of the action by the Big Sandy Community Action Program at its meeting next Monday is necessary, but no delay is expected from that source.

The interim committee, serving in the stead of the original board of directors, is assigned the task of developing the health program for the county and, it was suggested in the proposal made by the old board, should have the responsibility of creating a permanent board.

The action taken Friday obviated the necessity of a hearing on OEO's decision to terminate the program. At first, OEO refused Prestonsburg as the hearing site. Then, after County Judge Henry Stumbo, chairman of the health board, had announced the board's decision not to appear in Washington for the hearing, OEO and Health Affairs agreed to hold the hearing at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, Tuesday of this week. No hearing is now necessary.

The proposal made to OEO specified that the 10-member interim committee shall be composed of one representative from the state OEO, three consumers elected at

It's Happening Here and Now

Kentucky Has the Brains— But Something Else Is Lacking

In neighboring Knott county $20 million is being spent on the Carr's Fork Reservoir which could become a miniature Dead Sea because of acid pollution from a multiplicity of strip and auger mines in its watershed. Some knowledgeable observers doubt that it will ever support aquatic life. Others are more hopeful. Few are optimistic.
But one Corps of Engineers spokesman sights the bluebird. If this deadly water acidity does exist there, says he, "I feel that there are enough brains in this state to do something about it."
Some Kentuckians, however, between bows acknowledging such high regard of their mental resources, are pessimistic enough to ask:
"Do something about it—when?"
Almost a year ago, this newspaper published a story pointing to the danger of mercury contamination of Kentucky Lake. This danger became apparent, even at this considerable distance, when we learned that Pickwick Reservoir was then so heavily polluted by mercury that its fish were unsafe for human consumption. Because Kentucky Lake is an impoundment of the Tennessee River, as Pickwick is, because it is downstream from Pickwick, and because traces of mercury already had been found in the Tennessee, below Kentucky Dam, we were naive enough that long ago to wonder how Kentucky Lake itself could escape the same pollution.
We even wasted a telephone call on Frankfort. No information pointing to such pollution of the lake, we were told.
Last Sunday, the story hit the newspapers—not through any agency of state government but from a federal source which thought the public is entitled to know when a threat to the public health and safety exists. Kentucky Lake is so heavily polluted by mercury that its fish may not be eaten with safety. The danger line was reached last December—nine months ago.
These facts about a spot distant from Eastern Kentucky are recited to show that "enough brains" do not provide the full answer to these problems.
It is true, of course, that Kentucky can't be blamed for the mercury in the lake—it came from Alabama (which, believe it or not, is upstream on the oxbow-loop-bending Tennessee as it flows back north in a sweep from the South)—but Kentucky, "with enough brains to do something," should have been aware of the danger and should have cared enough about its own citizens, if not others, to alert them to the threat.
In this case, the state of Alabama, loyal above all else to its industrial interests, did nothing until it had lost an investment of millions of dollars in Pickwick Reservoir and incalculable millions more in future years as fishermen, tourists and others leave Pickwick and its docks and shores deserted.
Kentucky, as blindly loyal to coal interests, is matching Alabama's folly, and the federal government is a partner in the foolishness. Streams and lakes are fair game, wherever there is a bit of coal to be recovered. Across the state line, a few miles in Virginia, Pound Reservoir already is dead, a victim of mine-acid waters. Dewey Lake in this county, Fishtrap in Pike and Buckhorn in Breathitt are known to be threatened with the same fate.
It is true that Kentucky has the brains. But will those who have both the brains and the authority use either, or both—and when?
Does anybody in Frankfort—in the state Health Department, the Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources, the Water Pollution Commission, or any of several other agencies whose names would indicate they might be interested—know, for instance, the degree of acidity of the water in Dewey Lake?
"We're keeping an eye on it," was the last bit of reassurance this newspaper received when it pointed to the danger at Dewey.
How many are watching? One department or division of state government has to do with furdigidity of the water, another with coal dust, another with stripped-land reclamation, another with this, another with that. (Try telephoning or writing any of these about a given situation and see how quickly you learn you should have contacted somebody else!)
Nobody wants to kill off payrolls and the industries which produce them. Sure, a full meal for children is more important than a day's fishing or boating. But we maintain all these are important. Clean air and pure water are basic needs for life itself.
We have an idea that if we use the brains which we allegedly have and if they are used in consideration of the public welfare as a whole, Kentucky can solve its problems.

Nature Trails

By Rufus M. Reed

The Indians loved the wild animals of the forest and studied their ways closely. They had many beautiful stories and legends based upon the ways of the wild things. Each tribe usually had an aged story-teller who entertained the others by his thrilling stories about animals.
One of the most interesting stories is the one the Indians told about the moonlight dance of the red foxes. This dance took place usually in late September and always under a full harvest moon. At this time, when the trees are beginning to put on their gorgeous colors of red and gold and the moonlight is bright as a new silver dollar and falls across the fields like a wash of liquid silver, the harvest is bountiful and there is an abundance of fruits and other foods for the red foxes. So in appreciation of the bounties nature has provided for them, the foxes meet in the moonlight in some open field and there, according to the Indians, they hold their ceremonial dance. The Indians believed the one who was privileged to see this dance would inherit all the cunning ways of the red fox.
Once there was an old Indian story-teller who had a white man as his friend. This man loved to listen to the stories the aged Indian told, but when he told the white man about how the red foxes gathered under a harvest moon in an open field and held a dance to celebrate the many good things provided by nature for them to eat, the white man pooh-poohed the story, saying, "I can't believe it!"
The old Indian invited him to come along with him to the edge of a clearing, where they were to hide in the brush and watch for the foxes to come. The Indian set a certain night for this rendezvous—a night when all the earth would be silvered over with moonlight and the soft wind could be heard whispering mournful music in the old pines.
On the appointed night, the white man met his Indian friend at the edge of the clearing and there they hunkered down in the brush to watch. It was a rare autumn night. The shadows of the trees fell across the clearing and looked dark and spooky in the bright moonlight. From a distant hilltop the white man could hear a hoot owl broadcasting across the land; a million insects chirped and fiddled and sang in the grass of the old clearing. The whole earth was bathed in silvery light and the harvest moon stood over them, as round and big as a large, silver globe.
"Be still!" the Indian ordered, as the white man seemed to get restless. "Heap big fox comin' soon!"
Sure enough, out of the shadows a gigantic red fox emerged. He was a magnificent animal, as large as a dog; his handsome, red coat gleamed in the moonlight, and the tip of his bushy tail was like a silver emblem. His slim, black legs gleamed as he stole softly across the clearing, his muzzle turned up, sniffing the air. The white man watched the big fox, spellbound. Soon another fox slipped out of the woods, then another and another until there were five in all. They marched single file across the clearing, sniffing. Suddenly as the man watched, one of the foxes jumped about six feet high, placed his four feet together and came down on them; then he moved his feet up and down a moment as if dancing. The white man was amazed; the other foxes joined in and soon all of them began leaping high in the air, and as they leaped, they brought all four feet together and landed on them. Then they seemed to jump up and down a few times. After that, each fox lay down flat on the ground and was still for just a moment. Then they got up and repeated the performance. The white man could hardly believe it, even after seeing it with his own eyes. He wanted to go out in the field for a closer view but the Indian shook his head, saying, "Keep still, white man, don't bother heap big foxes! From this time on, you'll be sly like them."

"Are you sly?" the white man demanded.
"Me heap sly red fox."
Then they slipped quietly away, leaving the foxes dancing in the clearing.
The white man was plenty mystified by what he had seen. He waited for another clear, silvery night, with the harvest moon overhead and the wind whispering soft solos in the old pines. This time he went alone. He hid in the brush and waited. Sure enough, in a short time, here came the five handsome foxes and began stealing across the field. Near the middle of it, they began leaping high in the air, then coming down with all four feet held together. The white man broke away and ran out to see what was what. The foxes turned and fled. The man stooped over and began searching in the weeds and grass. And there he saw literally dozens of small gray shapes moving about under the weeds. He grabbed one and looked at it. It was a field mouse! And then he knew! The foxes were catching the field mice to eat! When they located one, they jumped high in the air, put their feet together and came down on it full force to stun it. Then they tramped it to death and proceeded to eat it.

"What a dance!" the white man cried sarcastically. "I'll go and tell that stupid Indian what I found out."
When he ran across the Indian, he said, "Why, Indian, those blamed foxes weren't dancing? They were hunting field mice to eat."
The Indian scratched his head for a time and said nothing.
"Come now, Indian, and admit this is true."
The Indian turned a poker face on the white man. "If white man was a red fox and loved to eat mice, wouldn't he dance, too, when he found a field full of fat mice?"
"I guess so," the white man said laconically.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore . . .

"Tradition or Fact?"

By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D.

For many years I have enjoyed listening in on the conversation of people who are not supposed to be ignorant but who have rarely taken an opportunity to check on such obvious things as plants and animals and history and geography. Somehow I can tolerate traditional things in people who have had no chance at what used to be called a liberal education; it would be very unbecoming in me, or in you, to waste too much effort in trying to break up beliefs that have lasted a long time, unless those beliefs were doing humanity some harm.
Elderly ladies who have imagined themselves great history buffs have sometimes said, casually, that thirteen states seceded. Once, before I learned better, I asked which ones they were; I got eleven in fair order and was told that Kentucky and Missouri also seceded. You should have seen the lofty look on the dear old lady's face when I questioned her inclusion of Kentucky in the C. S. A. She reminded me of the fact that my own town was the Confederate capital of Kentucky; I tried to show that this was purely a local, provisional government. We never got to Missouri; she knew, I didn't, and, her looks implied, I was a Yankee.
Some twenty years ago, after my TIDBITS had already been running for nearly fifteen years, I attended a meeting of several folklore societies in my original county. A widely-known folklorist from New York asked me what had ever happened to Fidelity. Before I could say a word, a wealthy woman who had spent her entire life within a dozen miles of the place told the gentleman that the village had entirely disappeared, years ago. I felt like a bad-mannered brat when I had to say that it was still there the day before, as I had visited some of my family near there. Did the lady change her statement and say she had confused Fidelity with another village of our native county that had disappeared? Not she; genuine ladies of knowledge and social standing do not admit defeat; let history and geography go hang.

As an outdoor hobbyist I often get put into my place by even well-educated people. One rather good observer questioned my statement that an apple core had five seed chambers; he said it might have as many as six or as few as five. In a long life of devouring apples I have yet to find one with other than five chambers. Maybe I eat the wrong sort. Or maybe observation, backed by books on botany, just doesn't count.
Many times in this column I have laughed at the persistence in the belief that the Bluebird and the Robin are signs of spring. I must have received a hundred telephone calls from people who are interested in birds and usually keep a feeder for them: "The Robin (or Bluebird) is back." "Where has it been?" has become my standard reply, but I am sure that I rarely convince even the most intelligent. Anyway, the people are becoming conscious of birds and they learn for themselves some facts that they now ignore.
It has not been many years since a middle-aged, well-educated woman spoke of how artificial ice is made: you put the water into big cans, add ammonia to it, directly, and the ammonia does its work of freezing the solid block of ice and evaporating, all at the same time. What brought up the subject was a queer taste in some ice that the lady had bought from the ice man; she said that some of the ammonia had failed to evaporate. A half-mile down the street was, and is, a place that has made ice for many years, run by some courteous men who would show, between calls for the finished product, just how it is all done. We expect superstitions to grow up around things long known; somehow it seems funny when they appear in explanation of common modern inventions.
And then there is the weather, which belongs to everybody but which is often shaped more by Grandpap's pronouncements than by any sensible observations. Aren't we primitive, sometimes?

Whatsoever Things

In a church where I used to be the minister I had a man who was willing to do anything he could in the way of carpenter work for the church. The fellow was a pretty good carpenter and any time the church needed something done we could depend on him to do it.
In that same church there was another fellow who was also, supposedly, a very good carpenter. Quite often the church asked him to do something in the way of carpenter work. However, it always seemed that this fellow had something else more important to do. He never found time to get around to doing any work for the church.
Once we needed some work done in the church kitchen. We asked the man who was "always busy" to do it for us. As usual, he was busy and couldn't manage to work it into his schedule. So we asked the other fellow if he could do the work for the church. As usual, he said he would do the best he could, just as soon as he could.
It wasn't many days till he was working hard in the church kitchen. The job took him several days, and when he got through he had done a pretty good job. When time came to pay him for his work, he wouldn't take a penny. No matter how hard we tried to get him to accept something for his work, he refused to accept any pay.
Within a matter of a couple of weeks after the work had been finished, the man who was too busy to help showed up to inspect the work. He always managed to get around after the work was completed. And, as usual, he began to find defects in the workmanship of the fellow who did the work. Pointing them out, he assured everyone that if he had done the work himself he would have done a better job.
Well, I guess all of us know people like that. When you need them to help, they just can't manage to be present. They always have some very good and valid reason to excuse themselves. But, the moment the job is completed, they show up criticizing the one who did the work and explaining to everyone how the work should have been done.
The world we live in is a small world, and there just isn't enough room for that type of person. If a man wants to work beside me, sweat with me on the job, cry with me in the heartbreak, and help me keep plugging away when things go wrong—I will listen to his criticism and accept it as valid. But for the man who is unwilling to join in, for the man who is unwilling to sweat and cry and plug away with me—his criticism only shows his smallness.
As I look back, I realize that I really don't know what type carpenter the critical fellow was. I can't remember ever seeing anything he built. And while the man who did the work made some slight mistakes, at least he did do something—the best he could!
If I read the Good Book right, we won't be judged on how good we could have done some task. Our ability will not be taken into consideration. But we will be judged on what we did with what we had to do with. And that, my friend, is faithfulness.

Francis A. Johnson, of Darwin, Minnesota, is winding up the old year with a big ball of baling twine. The ball of twine weighs 4½ tons, and Johnson has been 20 years collecting it. His mother taught him not to waste anything and the lesson stuck. Now he has the biggest ball of baling twine in the country, and he's probably beginning to wonder what to do with it.
The rest of the country has something big, too. President Nixon announced recently that the Gross National Product has reached the trillion mark for the first time in history. A GNP of one trillion is a pretty big ball of twine itself and certainly sounds as if prosperity is just around the corner—in 1971—if it hasn't already arrived when the clock struck one trillion.
Anyway, the President seemed happy about the GNP, but the rest of us who just gather bits of string to stuff in our pockets couldn't tell much difference in things when the clock struck one trillion. Except for the fact that taxes are up another notch here and there, groceries cost more than they did last month, and the 1971 model autos will be more expensive.
In addition to a big ball of baling twine and a record GNP we will also wind up the year 1970 with the war still dragging on in Vietnam. But we've wound up several old years with that albatross hanging 'round our national neck, and my guess is that even with the President's gradual pull-out program, we will wind up 1971 with one foot securely mired in Vietnam and the other equally entangled in Cambodia.
The Communist bloc has its troubles, too. The Poles have rebelled at rising prices and toppled the Gomulka regime. Egypt's Nasser is dead and the Arab coalition is falling apart. There'll be fireworks over the Suez in '71, but unless the Arab states can come up with a charismatic leader, the Star of David will shine over Israel for another year. The Middle East caldron will simmer and hiss and spurt jets of scalding steam, but the world will survive the caldron's hissing.
So ring out the old year and ring in the new. Goodbye, Nineteen Seventy. You gave us some jolts—and a few laughs. You rattled our teeth a time or two, but you've had it and we're still around. Now we'll add a digit at midnight and start all over again. With hope and confidence. And some fear and trembling, too.

Take Part in Medical Program

Floyd county participants in the "Summer in Medical Sciences" project sponsored by the Student American Medical Association at the University of Kentucky Medical Center are Danny Hamilton and Joyce Wicker.

Two Floyd county students are spending eight weeks of their summer at the University of Kentucky's Albert B. Chandler Medical Center learning about, and working in, health career jobs. They are:

Joyce Wicker, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wicker, of Route 1, Harold, Kentucky, Betsy Layne high school student, and Danny Hamilton, 19, graduate of Betsy Layne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Hamilton, of Teaberry.

Commenting on her work in Nursing Services, Miss Wicker said she "enjoyed helping in nursing and learning about obstetrics in the (UK) Hospital," she added that the "program helps young people decide for sure about a worthwhile career for themselves."

According to Hamilton, who worked in the pharmacy of the UK Hospital, he feels that more youth should investigate the opportunities of a health care career.

They are taking part in the "Summer in Medical Sciences" seminar conducted by University of Kentucky medical students and developed by the Lexington-based chapter of the Student American Medical Association (SAMA). In the past two years 52 disadvantaged Kentucky young people have received orientation and on-the-job training in health careers at the University of Kentucky Medical Center.

Dr. Pratt Criticizes Foes Of Floyd Health Program

(In The Courier-Journal)

A spokesman for the Floyd county medical community says he once had some faith in the motives and goals of dissidents seeking better health care for the poor in the mountains.

But now Dr. William D. Pratt, president of the Floyd County Medical Society, says he and other physicians have been alienated by such groups as the Eastern Kentucky Welfare Rights Organization.

Over the past year, the Eastern Kentucky Welfare Rights Organization has protested the Floyd County Comprehensive Health Program, calling it nothing more than a taxi service for local doctors. And the Eastern Kentucky welfare group has termed medical care given by local doctors to the poor of Floyd county as inadequate.

Pratt said the history of the program has been misunderstood. He noted that the comprehensive health effort "was not initially written as a program to care for the medically indigent exclusively."

He said it was a "pilot program to see if a referral system, whereby the patient was referred from a health outpost to the private physician, could work."

It is not the doctors who have failed the program, but rather the program which has failed the doctors, according to Pratt.

Pratt said only in the past year has the federal Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) decided that it will fund just programs that involve federally paid physicians, pharmacists and laboratories in the outlying areas, where the poor are located.

"The Floyd county program was written for five years, and I think it should run five years before the issue is decided," Pratt said. The program was in its fourth year when it was recently suspended by the OEO.

Pratt, a thin, bespectacled young doctor whose intense feelings about the current controversy are expressed in sudden emphatic turns of conversation, made the following assertions about the local medical community.

There is no medical establishment in Floyd county, but rather three centers of medical care. "Each center works within itself, and there is a minimal amount of cross-referral between the centers," he said.

Floyd county physicians number 22, and 15 of them are less than 40 years of age. "This is a phenomenal percentage for a rural county," Pratt insisted.

Families of most Floyd county physicians are from the area, and the doctors themselves have lived in the mountains "for several years."

Pratt, whose family is from nearby Knott county, made some charges of his own:

Protest over medical care is the work of a disaffected few. "Of course, you will always have a few people who are dissatisfied with any aspect of life," Pratt said. "This is the case here. Unfortunately, the people who are dissatisfied are very vocal, and this makes dramatic reading."

The dissidents propose fully staffed, fully equipped medical outposts, which prompted Pratt to say, "In this era of consolidation in all areas, including education, medicine, etc., I cannot understand why a governmental program wishes to go back to the horse and buggy days of a physician who is remote from any acute care facilities, and put him in an outpost by himself, with only a nurse, a small lab, and a dispensing pharmacy."

Pratt claims the proposal for comprehensive outlying clinics would be so expensive as to be prohibitive. "It would cost not $4 million dollars in four years (as the current program has), but rather $4 million in one year."

While arguing that outpost doctors would be remote from acute care facilities, Pratt also claimed the dissidents exaggerate the remoteness of patients from acute care.

"As it stands, no patient has to travel more than nine miles to see a physician," Pratt said, noting that Floyd county's three hospitals are located in the northern (Prestonsburg), central (Martin), and southern (McDowell) parts of the county.

Responding to the dissidents' complaints that local facilities are inadequate, Pratt said: "Nearly any procedure which can be performed at any but the largest medical centers can be done at any of the locations (Prestonsburg, McDowell or Martin). At McDowell, there is also a new coronary care unit with the latest in electronic monitoring equipment."

He said some University of Kentucky physicians call the McDowell unit "more modern than the one they have at the university hospital."

The Eastern Kentucky Welfare Rights Organization's hearings, and a subsequent lawsuit concerning health care for the poor, brought this reply from Pratt: "Of all the charges made by patients about the care they receive where they deemed it to be poor, upon further investigation, all were shown to be completely false, and the charges bordered upon slander. However, to answer them specifically would be violating a patient-physician relationship."

The doctors already have proposed a compromise outpost system, manned by nurse-practitioners.

He advocated improved medical education for the medically indigent. "We don't have time to do as much work with patients as we would like," Pratt told how one diabetic patient lost a foot from "whittling around on it at home."

"Maybe if the physician who originally saw the man had more time for complete instructions to the patient about cutting on himself, it might have been different. We'll never know."

Finally, Pratt said many of the complaints made by dissidents have been "informally" investigated by the local medical society. He said other complaints were not investigated because the medical society received no written complaints about them.

In Loving Memory of Our Sister, Lizzie Walters:

In the cemetery softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly
But whom we could not save.
A heart of gold stopped beating,
Her smiling face is at rest;
God broke our hearts to prove
He only takes the best.
God knows you had to leave us, dear,
But you did not go alone,
For part of us went with you, dear,
The day he took you home.
God knows how much we miss you;
He counts the heartaches we have.
To others you are forgotten,
To us you just part of the past.
But to us who loved and lost you
Your memory will always last.
Thou art gone but not forgotten,
Fresh our love will ever be
As long as there is memory
We will always think of thee.

Those left behind—brothers and sisters, Bradley, Burl, Sadie and Effie. (Written by her sister, Effie Strunk) 1t.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of Mary Elizabeth Bailey would like to express their thanks to their many friends who were so kind during the loss of our loved one. To all those who prepared food, visited in the home, sent flowers, gave hymnals to the church in her memory and in any way helped to make our loss more bearable we are truly grateful.

Floyd Scouts at Philmont Ranch

James Spurlock, a member of Troop 27 sponsored by the Community Methodist Church here, Richard Harmon, of Troop 143, sponsored by Clark school's Parent-Teacher Association, and Arthur Begley, of Troop 29, sponsored by the Hazard Vocational School, are representing the Lonesome Pine Council, Boy Scouts of America, at Philmont Scout Ranch in Cimarron, New Mexico this week.

Lying along the Santa Fe Trail, and nurturing the vigorous traditions of that long-abandoned track, Philmont is the largest camp of its kind in the world.

In 1922-23 Mr. Waite Phillips, developer of oil properties in the west, bought a third of a million acres in the vicinity of Cimarron, New Mexico for a cattle ranch. Through the mountainous back country he strung a chain of fishing and hunting camps for himself and his guests.

Later, recognizing Scouting as an outstanding boon to the youth of America, Mr. Phillips in two gifts in 1938 and 1941 gave more than a third of his domain to the Boy Scouts.

The Scouts from the Lonesome Pine Council joined a group of 45 Scouts from Louisville for the trip. They traveled by chartered bus, stopping on the way to visit the Air Force Academy, Garden of the Gods, and other points of interest in Colorado.

With 81 miles of main trails, 23 trail camps, and hundreds of miles of side trails, the hiking trips that consume most of the time of the Scouts at Philmont offer varied experiences afoot and on horseback.

get along a lot easier if you would pull it by the antlers instead of the tail."

They thanked him, rested a spell, and then the goofs marched around the deer, took it by the antlers and started dragging away.

This went on for some time, the creek bed kept getting narrower, and finally one of the two, a fuzzi brighter than the other puffed:

"It shore is a lot easier draggin' this here deer by the horns, but that game warden has done us a dirty trick. We're draggin' this deer further and further from the car."

ONE ITEM MISSING
Fellow was telling about this fine all-electric house and all its conveniences. "There was a switch for everything but Junior, and that boy needed one so badly," he declared.

NATURALLY
This reminds us of the fellow who was getting introduced to the art of pruning fruit-trees. He stopped the demonstration by telling all and sundry that Pap never pruned his trees, and he always had the finest apples and peaches for miles around. Then he explained:

"There was 14 of us young'uns, and the old man used so many switches off them trees that they just naturally kept in pretty good shape."

Extension Agents Need Owners' Help With Horse Count

This isn't horse country, but the Floyd county extension office has been asked by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to do a count of all horses that are in the county.

A national horse census is being taken in connection with the recent outbreak in Texas of VEE (Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis, a "sleeping sickness" of horses) as USDA's effort to protect horses throughout the country.

Every Floyd county owner of a horse, mule or pony is being asked to write the Floyd County Extension office, Prestonsburg, and report it for this important national survey.

"VEE doesn't appear to be a threat in Kentucky at this time, and we want to keep it that way," Dr. Gary Potter, horse specialist with the UK College of Agriculture's Cooperative Extension Service. "The quarantine and vaccination of horses in Texas and surrounding states seem to have stopped the spread of this horse disease.

"However, USDA wants to know how many horses would have to be vaccinated if VEE should later spread to other states. For this reason, the Cooperative Extension Service—represented in each county by county agents—has been commissioned to make this count of horses in all counties of the United States.

"An exact count is important—and the county totals are needed as soon as possible," Potter emphasizes. "So we're asking the cooperation of anyone who has information about the horses in his county."

Floyd county's Extension office Telephone number is 886-2668.

Teacher Surplus Here To Stay?

A state Department of Education official predicts that Kentucky's teacher surplus may continue indefinitely.

For the past 10 years, said Dr. Sidney Simandle, the number of teachers being graduated has exceeded the number of jobs available but the surplus was absorbed by other states.

Simandle, director of the Teacher Education and Certification Division, said the state now is producing about 6000 teachers a year for a Kentucky market of about 2500 jobs.

He said he expects teacher unemployment to be higher this year than last, with perhaps 1000 teachers being listed on the state placement list.

"I don't see much opportunity for it to let up in the next year or two," he added.

Simandle said several developments might ease the state teacher surplus. He pointed out that a change in Kentucky's teacher retirement system soon will allow teachers with 30 years experience to retire regardless of age, and he expects many will, thus opening jobs.

large, from this county, two consumers chosen by consumer-members of the present board, and that the remaining four members shall be the State Commissioner of Health, the dean of the Kentucky Medical School, the president of Alice Lloyd College and County Judge Henry Stumbo, or his designee.

The proposal submitted to the Washington agencies was tinged by the bitterness felt by members of the old board. It read, in part:

"This action taken by the Floyd County Comprehensive Health Services Board is in no way to be interpreted as an admission that this Board, collectively, or its members individually, are or have ever been guilty of any of the charges leveled at it by the Office of Health Affairs or the Office of Economic Opportunity, or any other governmental agency. This action is taken only because we realize that the Washington officials have the authority to defund the program unless we agree to their demands and indeed have already decided to do so.

"We would urge the Office of Health Affairs to be less dictatorial and arbitrary with the Interim Board and to be more helpful to our successors than they were to us and above all please remember that the same noisy groups and individuals who prompted the confounded charges against this Board are still in Floyd county and are still capable of destroying any agency they cannot control."

The proposal set the resignation of present members of the board of directors to take effect upon approval of the proposal by OEO and Health Affairs and the seating of new board members under the terms of the agreement. The resolution detailing the proposal was introduced by Charles Clark, superintendent of Floyd schools, and was seconded by Glenn S. Anderson.

flower beds. Forty trees and 20 park benches have been proposed to give the mall a shady park effect. A garden fountain and two drinking fountains have been included to increase the functional and aesthetic pleasure afforded the pedestrian shopper.

Existing canopies and projecting signs would be taken down and relocated if possible. A row of 10x25-foot canopies would be installed over the sidewalks on each side of the street, the canopies to overlap each other and to be flashed to each store front, forming a water-free sidewalk on each side of the street. Globe lights would line each side of the street and lights on store tops would shine down on the translucent panels of the canopies to provide ample lighting for night-time shopping and illuminate store fronts.

Council heard complaints from West Prestonsburg residents of dust and noise from heavy coal trucks being routed along Main street to a railroad tipple. The route was changed to follow old KY 114 there, and now complaints are reaching Council members from residents of that area.

In Memoriam

The Lord is my Shepherd: I shall not want...
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters...
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake...
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me: Thy rod and Thy staff, they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: Thou anointest my head with oil: my cup runneth over...
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever.—23rd Psalm.

In loving memory of my father, sisters and nephew:
James Manuel, who passed away, Aug. 14, 1970; Carma Sturgill, who passed away, Aug. 4, 1965; Virginia Stith, whose death was on Aug. 6, 1968; and Mike Shephard, who died on July 10, 1970.

Proposed Homestead Amendment On Way To Fall Ballot

Secretary of State Kenneth F. Harper certified the proposed homestead constitutional amendment last week, authorizing all county court clerks to place it on the Nov. 2 general election ballot.

The proposed amendment deals with a property tax exemption for senior citizens and was prepared during the 1970 session of the legislature.

Specifically, the amendment would provide a $6500 exemption for the residential property of a person 65 years of age or older.

In keeping with constitutional requirements, the amendment had been published four times in two newspapers prior to its certification, Harper explained. It will be published again between Oct. 12 and Oct. 26.

Harper urged Kentuckians to study the proposal carefully, then vote their choice. "This is an important opportunity for all citizens of the commonwealth to make their wishes known in a vital policy area," he said.

Wanted: Big, Old Kentucky Trees

By DEE GIANNINI

The Big Tree program, launched by the state Division of Forestry last July, is a continuing, fluctuating project, according to division director Ron Schureman.

The program's aim is to find the largest tree of each species in Kentucky. To date, 50 species are listed as state champions, eight of which have been acknowledged as national champions by the American Forestry Assn.

"The list is continuously changing as new trees are added, elbowing out those previously cited," said Townley Bergman, who heads the Big Tree program.

The eight national champions to Kentucky's credit are:

Sassafras—17 feet in circumference, located on Frederika Street in Owensboro; a national champion since 1954.

American sycamore—33 feet in circumference, located on Grassy Lick Creek in Montgomery county.

Scarlet oak—16 feet 4 inches, located on Ficklin Road in Montgomery county. This tree recently replaced the reigning champ which died on the campus of Swarthmore College, in Pennsylvania.

Swamp white oak—20 feet 5 inches, found on the farm of Clifton Landrum in Tompkinsville. Mountain maple—7 feet 8 inches, in Muhlenberg county. Slippery elm—21 feet 2 inches, in Anderson county. Blue ash—14 feet 4 inches, located at the west end of Danville. Pawpaw—3 feet, located in Henderson county. The usual breadth of this tree is only several inches.

Kentucky's climate, mineral-rich soil and natural irrigation combine to facilitate the growth of trees.

In America's central hardwood belt, Kentucky forests cover 114 million acres—about 45 per cent of the total land area.

Forested areas occur throughout the state but are concentrated in the eastern third and southcentral portions of the commonwealth.

The Division of Forestry administers four state forests covering 49,000 acres.

In addition, the division distributes some 10 million tree seedlings from their Kentucky Dam nursery in Gilbertsville and Morgan county nursery at Woodsend.

The division works with private landowners in management planning and timber stand improvement through modern forest-management practices.

Upon request, the department's professional foresters will mark timber according to board feet by species and provide the landowner with a list of contacts for bids.

More than 100 species of trees are native to the state, 60 of which are commercially valuable.

Persons interested in obtaining more information on the Big Tree program or services to landowners provided by the Division of Forestry may write Ron Schureman, Director, Division of Forestry, Frankfort, Ky., 40601.

Deep Pike Well Fails To Yield Gas Pay, Report

Eastern Kentucky's hope for a boom in the natural gas business as a result of deep drilling suffered at least a temporary setback recently when a well drilled in Pike county to a depth of almost 13,000 feet showed up dry.

The deep exploration was made as a joint venture of the Weaver Oil and Gas Co., Houston, Texas, and the Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company, leaseholder of a vast acreage lying in 14 counties of eastern and southeastern Kentucky.

The Pike county failure, however, is not expected to end the exploration effort. It was said here last week that more drilling will be done—where, it apparently has not been decided.

Drilling to such depths is done with rotary drills. One such well costs an estimated quarter of a million dollars.

The drilling effort followed seismic testing and geological studies. The new drilling seeks gas deposits below the Clinton formation. Two or three wells have been drilled in this section beyond this depth but the results are not generally known. The goal of the Pike county drilling effort was the Knox formation, which, it is hoped, will produce a new supply of Eastern Kentucky gas.

Specific guidelines to assist in Federal reviews of the equal employment posture of Government construction contractors across the country have been issued by the Department of Labor. The guidelines provide a new government-wide standard and will cover all construction projects of federally-involved contractors.

Air-Dirtiers Must Be Reported To Be Stopped, Group Told Here

By MARVA GAY

Complaints of inaction on the part of the Kentucky Air Pollution Control Commission (KAPCC) often result from the reluctance of local officials and citizens to report known violations of KAPCC regulations.

Speaking at a recent gathering of county health department sanitarians here, Miles Smith, a field inspector for the KAPCC, urged them to report complaints of air pollution violations quickly to the state agency.

"If the complaint stays in someone's office a few weeks before reaching us the taxpayer will think we're doing nothing except wasting his money," Smith said.

According to Smith, missing documentation of a violation may mean missing enforcement of KAPCC regulations. Each complaint must include the name of the complainant and the alleged offender, the time of the alleged offenses, how often they occur, what type of pollutant was involved and what effect the pollutant had on people or property.

Smith warned that the information must be correct. "If a case goes to court and any part of the information is wrong, the judge may throw us out. That means six to eight months of wasted preparation."

Smith said the commission tries to investigate all complaints but anonymous tips don't carry much weight.

When a violation is observed, the agency sends a letter to the offender. "The first letter informs them that the operation is in violation of a KAPCC regulation," Smith said. That letter is 60 per cent effective in stopping violations.

Smith said if the first letter is ignored, the commission sends a follow-up letter which ups the effectiveness to 85 per cent.

The KAPCC has held hearings and issued cease-and-desist orders. Crediting the commission with closing 55 burning dumps, Smith said the agency's methods are sometimes time consuming but effective.

AMVETS Slate State Meeting At May Lodge

The American Veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam will hold its state executive committee meeting Sept. 18-19 at Jenny Wiley State Park. The location here of the meeting was announced by Harold J. Newsome, of Louisville, state public relations officer, but formerly a basketball player and graduate of McDowell high school.

The bid for the meeting at May Lodge was successfully made by J. D. "Demp" Allen, commander of Amvets Post 27 at Martin and Robert S. Copeland, Jenny Wiley Park manager, while attending the organization's state convention at Louisville last month. The Martin Post will host the several busloads of state officers and their families from various parts of the state.

Newsome said the executive committee will plan membership drives and develop project programs for Kentucky during this, the 25th national anniversary of the AMVETS under the direction of State Commander Ray Smith, of Louisville, who is serving his second term.

The Ladies' Auxiliary will hold executive committee meetings at the same time. The president of the distaff side of the organization is Patricia Eberle, Louisville.

Pike Youths Enjoy Floyd Camping

REACHING YOUTH—Arley Stanley strolls through the woods at Camp Shawnee in Floyd County with four youths enjoying the camp activities. Stanley was one of many local citizens who joined members of state agencies in treating 11-13-year-old youths from economically-limited families to a week of fun and forestry. The camp was part of Youth Outreach, a pilot project in juvenile delinquency prevention, sponsored by the Department of Child Welfare. (Richard Upchurch Photo)

Camping, canoeing, hiking — activities associated with a boy's growing up — provided a unique experience for 100 Pike county youths recently at Camp Shawnee, Boy Scout camp in the upper Dewey Lake area.

The boys, ages 11-13, came from economically limited, "less-chance" families and homes in Pike county. Many have had little opportunity for organized recreation.

Their week at Camp Shawnee was provided by Pike county citizens and local and state agencies participating in Youth Outreach, a child welfare pilot project in juvenile delinquency prevention.

The camp was designed to reach youngsters in an age group often overlooked by existing social welfare programs.

"In addition to offering the boys a good time, one of the goals of the camp was to help youths realize there are adults in the community willing to offer them needed assistance," said Charles Bonta, north-eastern Kentucky area administrator for the Department of Child Welfare.

By participating in recreation with the boys—joining in their tugs-of-war, nature hikes, softball games — Pike county citizens hoped to acquaint youths with personnel and programs available to them.

"Another goal of the camp," Bonta explained, "was to move social welfare agencies into greater involvement with youngsters in the 11-13-year-old age group. The project's focus on this early-teenage group stems from research revealing that delinquency in Pike county develops primarily between 14 and 15 — the next age bracket."

He said officials hope that by introducing youths to organized activities and to concerned persons in the community, the youngsters may never become delinquent.

The program also provided a unique experience for state child welfare activities, as it was the first time private citizens joined agency personnel to accomplish a community project.

According to Arley Stanley, a retired farmer and grandfather 31 times, the camp-out was a "wonderful experience."

"Professionals, kids, and average people like me — all of us ate, played and did everything together," he said.

"There are so many young boys roaming the streets — lost for worthwhile things to do. The camp struck me as a way to introduce these youngsters to fun and good citizenship."

Economic Security Commissioner Merritt Deitz said 4300 persons were removed from Kentucky welfare rolls from April, 1970 to March, 1971, and gave much of the credit for the decrease to a "Community Resources for Employment and Effort" (CREATE) program begun by the 1970 legislature. The program seeks to mobilize private citizens to help find work for qualified welfare recipients.

Loser Won More Than Race

Betty Moseley didn't win the Power Puff Derby last month, but she achieved much more through an act of heroic unselfishness.
Mrs. Moseley, wife of Lexington Dr. Kent Moseley, helped save the day for a fellow derby participant. The race was flown over a 2442-mile course from Calgary, Alberta in Canada, to Baton Rouge, La., and is the longest in the world for lady pilots.
Mrs. Moseley, was about 50 miles north of Little Rock, Ark., when she heard a woman's voice on the radio say, "Mayday, Mayday, someone please help me. I'm out of fuel, lost and ready to crash."
The voice was that of Fran Salles, entry number 55, from Baton Rouge, La. She was flying about the same heading as Betty but was unable to reach any control towers in the area for help.
Mrs. Moseley, who had flown in only one race before the derby, remembered instructions her husband repeated to her.
"He always told me not to panic, keep thinking and try to stay cool," she said. Dr. Moseley was a pilot during World War II. The Little Rock crew relayed directions through Mrs. Moseley's "Smitten Kitten"

The idea behind the Volkswagen Squareback Sedan.
Twenty-three years ago, we had an idea for a small economy car.
And it came out looking like a bug.
Twenty years ago, we had an idea for a giant station wagon.
And it came out looking like a box.
Then we had an idea for a sedan that combined all the economy of our bug with a lot of the capacity of our box.
So you'd expect it to come out looking half bug, half box. Right?
Wrong.
Our Squareback Sedan looks like a small station wagon.
But by squaring off its back and adding a trunk in front, our little sedan can give you over twice as much carrying space as the biggest domestic sedan.
Years ago, we learned the important thing isn't the way a car looks on the outside, but how it works on the inside.
And so it's just as true today as it was then. You can't judge a Volkswagen by its cover.

One of Every Five in County
Now Receiving Food Stamp Aid

During June 7,665 low-income persons in Floyd county received food stamps valued at $189,074.00, Commissioner of the Department of Economic Security Merritt S. Deitz, Jr. announced last week.

Roughly, 21 per cent of Floyd county's population is receiving this form of assistance.

This record compares to 6,967 persons in county who received food stamps at a cost of $170,814.00 during June of 1970.

Commissioner Deitz pointed out that Kentucky's Food Stamp Program, administered by the Kentucky Department of Economic Security and the Department of Agriculture, safeguards the health of the nation's low-income families through better nutrition. Families in the program exchange an amount of their own money, usually spent for food, to purchase food coupons. In addition, families receive bonus coupons to boost their buying power.

Kentucky's 72-county Food Stamp Program has experienced tremendous growth during the past year. During June 282,628 low-income Kentuckians received food stamps valued at $6,991,812. In June 1970, 208,770 persons received stamps worth $5,166,681.

Substantially less than half the workers in the nation's private sector are covered by private retirement plans, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports.

Coming in person—Jesus Christ, King, of Kings, and Lord of Lords. He isn't coming to hold an evangelistic meeting; He is coming after one.

He won't be waiting around to see if you want to go; you had better be ready to go when He comes. The way is already made, accept or reject the Son of God. He won't need any microphones or P. A. system, for His cry will be heard the world over.

Rain, sleet, snow, storms, nothing else will hinder the second coming of Jesus Christ. You won't need any transportation, we will be lifted out of corruption into the grandeur of God. We cannot comprehend in our smallness what God really owns, for we only have a bird's eye view of God's vast domain.

Yes, if I owned a newspaper, Jesus Christ and His cross would get front page billing on every paper that came out, for He owned the first press, (Genesis 1-1 and Isaiah 66:1-2 and Psalms 24). He also owns the wood the paper is made from—for who but God can make a tree?

If I owned a newspaper, I would make Him, editor-in-chief. I would herald His coming, live and in living color (2 Thess. 1:4-12). Can you imagine, An Angel Escort, and that's just what it will be, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God.

Talk about a prayer meeting—that's one time that no one will have to be begged to pray, for every knee shall bow and every tongue confess. Why not do it now? He is wonderful to love and live for. As a matter of fact, He is life itself. (St. John 14:1-6 and St. John 1-4). Why not accept Him today, turn your life over to Him, forget what the world has to say about you, or offer you, for it is only for a fleeting moment, but a life in Jesus Christ is for all eternity.

Won't you please give Him front page billing in your life today, for tomorrow the newspapers may be carrying your obituary, and then where will your soul be? Have you ever really considered whom you are rejecting, and what you are rejecting? God doesn't really need us, for He made the world without us, and He can end it without us, but He loves us, and wants us to share the joy of salvation, the peace in the Prince of Peace, and fill our place in His great eternal plan, and He is our greatest need.

(Its your soul—think seriously!)

If I owned a paper, do you know what I would write?—
Jesus Christ the Way, the Truth, the Life. I would have a picture of His cross and a picture of the crown right on top of the front page with blooddrops, dripping down. I would lift Christ and His cross to a sin-sick world today. Yes, if I owned a newspaper, that's what I would have to say.

Wouldn't it be wonderful to know just what the reaction would be if every front page in all the world, pictured the scene on Calvary? It could start a worldwide revival if each Christian would do his or her part and bow before the mighty God, with a humble, thankful heart. And just think, too, how Satan, would feel to see that headline news, proclaimed by the children of God to exalt Christ. Today we choose.

Choose you this day, whom ye will serve. Let's make it Christ and His cross, let's show God we love and worship His son that He gave for a world that was lost.

How it must grieve the heart of God to see Christ openly crucified anew. I'm going to exalt Him, as a Christian American.

Friends, what about you? Do we believe the Bible record that God gave of His Son? Are we willing to face the challenge and with patience (Luke 21-19) this great race run?

Do we really believe that Jesus is coming, and so very soon we will hear the call? Christian Americans, it's time to believe, for with Christ we stand, without Him we fall. Yes, I'm very much fanatic about Jesus, and I'm a Christian American, too. Why shouldn't I be? Jesus died for me. What has He done for you?

Thought Conditioner:
Do you know anyone, anywhere, that would die for you? Don't take Christ and His Cross lightly, that is the power of God unto salvation. What are you doing with Jesus? The life we live is the daily news (good or bad). Give Jesus front page billing on your newspaper of life daily, for many are reading you. God gave His very best. How can we do less? Give your answer today, you may not be here tomorrow.
