The Rev. Thomas M. Johnston read the wedding vows at 10:30 a.m. and a program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Kinnaird, organist, and Gary Craig, cousin of the bride, sang "The Lord's Prayer."

Kentucky Power Sets $10,388,000 Budget

Kentucky Power Company's construction budget for 1971 totals $10,888,000, according to the announcement made this week by Waldo S. La Fon, executive vice president of the utility.

Regarding construction activities, he noted, "We must proceed with the work during this inflationary period because we do not have the privilege of waiting. Power must be available the instant customers want it. Therefore, these large expenditures are necessary to meet our service commitment to our 104,000 customers in eastern Kentucky."

The biggest item in this year's budget is the $6,200,000 slated for distribution lines, he said. Major projects include: upgrading distribution to 34,500 volts in Leslie and Knott counties of the Hazard Division; continue converting of the Ashland business and urban area distribution system from 4,000 to 12,000 volts for greater reliability; and strengthening and modernizing the Pikeville area distribution system.

About $800,000 will be spent on distribution substations. La Fon noted that much of this construction is necessary to serve the rapidly expanding coal industry in the Pikeville and Hazard divisions.

Station work in the Pikeville Division will include construction of the new Pevler station in Martin county and the new Keyser station in Pike, with increased capacity at Topmost station in Knott county and installation of capacitor banks at Elkhorn City.

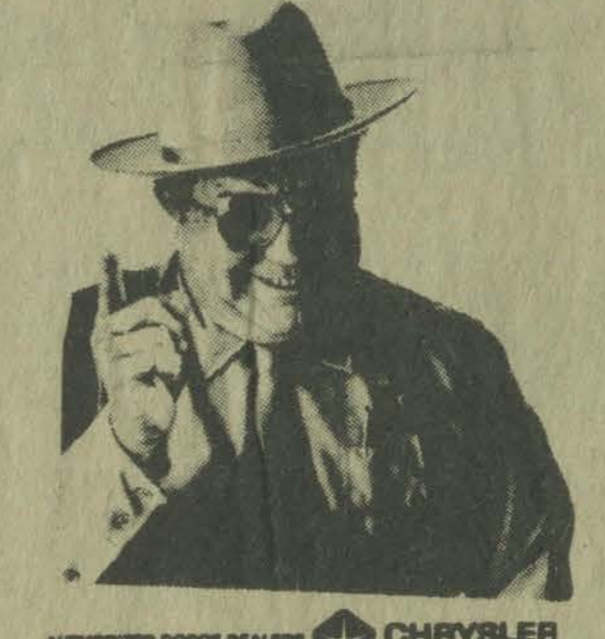

Hazard Division's station work includes the construction of the new Beckham station to provide a new source of power for the Hindman area and improvements on eight stations connected to the transmission system between Fleming and Hazard.

In the Ashland Division, the new Russell station, started last year, is scheduled for completion by this summer, and construction will start on the new Wurtland station, with completion expected by early 1972. Capacity will be increased at the distribution substations at Tenth Street, Hoods Creek, Hitchins and Louisa.

Another $800,000 is slated for transmission lines, including construction of a 69,000-volt line to new coal operations in Martin county, the rebuilding of the Beaver Creek-Elwood 69,000-volt line, and building a 69,000-volt line from Long Fork to Borderland, providing a new source of power for the Williamson area.

About $900,000 is budgeted for transmission substations. Included in this work will be the addition at Bellefonte station in

Sassafras Gathered in January Is Best for Springtime Tonic

NEVYLE SHACKELFORD UK College of Agriculture

LEXINGTON, KY.—If we are to believe as did our pioneer forefathers, then the month of January, "while the sap is down," is the best time to dig sassafras roots for making tea. Dig the roots, wash off in branch water, hang them up and let dry. But don't make and drink the tea just yet. Else it will "thin" as well as "purify" the blood, thus making the chill winds of March much harder to withstand.

At least, this is the advice found in an old 17th-century "Doctor Book."

As old folk tale and medical record reveal, pioneer Americans did indeed set great store by sassafras tea as a springtime tonic. Laboring under such conviction, they drank this brew by the gallons at winter's end, and in many old, abandoned homesteads yet standing the rooms used as kitchens still bear faint odors of boiled sassafras roots.

It wasn't only as a table beverage and a spring tonic that rural folk once utilized this tree. They distilled the wood to procure an oil favored for easing the pains of rheumatism and banishing disfiguring "wens" from the body. They used crushed sassafras leaves to rid the house of fleas and bedbugs, and taking a tip from the Indians who called it "pauame," scraped the pith from small sassafras twigs, steeped it in water, and then used the water to treat "sore eyes."

From this wondrous tree, pioneers also made ladders for stirring the ingredients of homemade soap, and used sassafras chips to keep moths out of quilt chests and wardrobes where linsey-woolsey clothing was kept.

In an account of his North American travels around 1750, the Swedish botanist, Peter Kalm, wrote that the Pennsylvania Swedes mixed sassafras bark with their beer and brandy ingredients just before brewing or distilling. He also noted that the Swedes cured dropsy with a "decoction of sassafras roots in water drank every morning."

Kalm told of seeing women using the bark to dye worsted a "fine lasting orange color, which does not fade in the sun." He quoted John Bartram, whom he visited in Philadelphia, as saying that three soakings in a broth brewed from sassafras berries cured a Virginia woman of a severe pain in the heel from which she had suffered for three years.

Pioneers found many other uses for sassafras, but there was one use to which it was not put: fuel for heating and cooking.

There is a superstition, still extant in some parts of Appalachia, which hold that to burn sassafras is to invite certain disaster. The belief probably stems from the fact that sassafras wood burns with considerable cracking and popping, often exploding burning embers several feet out into space. In the day of fireplaces and highly inflammable straw tick and corn shuck mattresses, these flying embers often landed in the beds, setting them on fire, and sometimes burning the house to the ground.

Because of its many valuable uses, sassafras has been called the "universal plant," but with respect to its time-hallowed use as a beverage and springtime tonic, the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare is reported to look upon it dubiously.

According to an HEW report, sassafras bark and roots contain, as a natural ingredient, a small amount of safrole—a weak carcinogen.

The HEW report continued that while this did not mean the risk involved sufficient to preclude the drinking of sassafras tea, there were some serious doubts as to its therapeutic value.

In any case, the sassafras tree, "Sassafras albidum," which covers many a hillside throughout eastern North America is a valuable tree and natural resource. It has contributed much to the lore and the wealth of the Nation.

Special Committee Asks LRC for Plan On New Districts

A special sub-committee last week asked the Legislative Research Commission to prepare a plan remapping the state's 138 legislative districts to conform with a recent federal court ruling that counties may be split to achieve equal representation.

The subcommittee meeting was the first since U. S. District Judge Bernard T. Moynahan ruled that part of Kentucky's Constitution that forbids splitting counties to form new legislative districts is not binding because it violates the U. S. Constitution, as interpreted by the Supreme Court.

State Senator Clifford B. Latta, of Prestonsburg, is a member of the special sub-committee.

At issue is Kentucky's need to redistrict its 100 House and 38 Senate seats before the May primary election, based on 1970 census figures. Gov. Louie B. Nunn has said he will call a special session of the legislature this winter to reapportion the legislative districts.

LRC Director James Fleming told the subcommittee that documents necessary to remap the state should be on hand by Monday. He estimated that he should have a "general outline" of a reapportionment plan by the first week in February.

Rep. Billy R. Paxton, D-Central City, questioned why the reapportionment matter needs to be done at a special session, instead of waiting until the 1972 regular session. Others answered that the legislature needs to show "good faith, or the courts will force us."

"We'd better be prepared to have something," said Rep. Norbert Blume, D-Louisville.

IN APPRECIATION

We wish to thank our friends, the members of the Old Regular Baptist Church, the ministers and all those who by their presence, flowers, cards or other acts of kindness have shown so much thoughtfulness and sympathy to us upon the loss of our dear, beloved daddy. Thanks to all those who labored so hard in preparing the grave, and our many thanks to the Hall Brothers Funeral Home for its kind and efficient service.

Probations at PCC
Last Semester Set
New Low, Is Report

Prestonsburg Community College set a record last semester for the lowest number of students on academic probation. According to PCC admissions officer, Mrs. Catherine Shrewsbury, only 37 students, or 11.8 per cent of the 315 fulltime students, were placed on probation. Only 2.7 per cent, or 10 students were dropped. A student is placed on probation if he or she is 6-14 quality points down from a C or 2.0 average. A student is dropped if he has been on probation for three semesters or if more than 14 quality points down from a C average during any given semester. "These figures are representative of a record the community can be proud of," Mrs. Shrewsbury said. "Our students are better prepared, study more, and, consequently, receive better marks."

Memorial Garden To Honor War Dead

The Archer Park Commission plans to build a Memorial Garden dedicated to Floyd county's War Dead. A knoll of land in the center of the park is to be landscaped with walkways and flower gardens. A large fountain is to be in front of a long, brick wall on which a bronze plaque bearing the names of all Floyd countians killed in World War I, World War II, Korea and Vietnam. Flags of all fifty states will surround the Memorial Garden.

Below are listed names we obtained from the War Department. We would appreciate your notifying us of any names we have failed to list or any that are misspelled. The cost of the bronze plaque will be approximately $15.00 per name. Anyone who wishes to help defray the expenses of this memorial should make their check payable to the Archer Park War Memorial.

We, the members of the park commission, hope that this small plot of land will serve to remind our people of the sacrifice made by the young men for our country. It is our prayer that, as Abraham Lincoln said, "... those dead shall not have died in vain and that this nation under God shall not perish from the earth".

Maytown Girl Traps Muskrats For Sport and Small Profit

By EARL RUBY
(In The Courier-Journal)

There was a time when a large number of farm boys depended on their skill as trappers of wild game to earn school money. That was when a good muskrat would bring as much as $2 and a rabbit 25 cents or more.

But times and laws have changed. Rabbits can't be sold. Ranches and imports have knocked muskrat skins down to $1. Most of the farm boys long since have given up their daily trap runs.

But Kentucky still has one successful trapper of school age and this trapper is something special—a girl!

She is Miss Nancy Northrup of Langley. Nancy is 15 years old and a sophomore at Maytown high. She loves all forms of sports activities and is a tremendous competitor. Her Methodist Youth Fellowship group recently put on a drive to sell mitts for holding pots and pans. Nancy sold almost as many as all of the other members combined.

I asked her if she had any competition in trapping muskrats and she said, "No. There's no competition, and there's very little profit. I do it just for the sport."

Nancy learned to trap from her father, W. L. Northrup, when her mother permitted her to go out in the boat with her dad on his trapping runs last year.

Her father decided he'd had enough of it this year, but Nancy hadn't. When the season opened Nov. 19, Nancy took 16 of her dad's traps and set up a run of her own along the bank of the right fork of Beaver Creek, which runs within 300 feet of her home.

She sets her small smooth-jaw traps on mud slides where she can see muskrats have been traveling. She places them about two inches under water in such a manner that when a muskrat is caught it can jump for deep water (a natural reaction) where it quickly drowns.

"I've had only two that didn't drown immediately," she said. "They put up a fierce fight, but I used a paddle to push them under and that was that."

Nancy's luck has been just fair since the season opened. High water on occasion has hampered her activity. Her best haul has been six in one day.

"I usually run my traps right after school," she said, "but twice I had to go before school, almost before daylight. I didn't like that much."

Nancy's fancy for the sport ends with the kill. "I wouldn't try to skin one," she said. Her father does that part of the job and dries the skins for sale to a Louisville fur company. Nancy received $21.20 for the first 20 skins they shipped.

Nancy says she plans to continue her daily trap runs until the season closes. After that she will begin to think about fishing. "I love to fish," she said. "And I think I would like hunting."

"I would have gone hunting this fall for squirrels and rabbits if I'd had a gun." "Nobody in the family owns a gun," she said. "Maybe I'll get myself one later on."
