

Termination Of Program Is Initiated Deadline for Call For Another Hearing Is Set for July 15

The first step toward termination of the grant which finances the Floyd County Comprehensive Health Services Program was officially taken last week by the Office of Health Affairs when it served notice of intent to terminate.

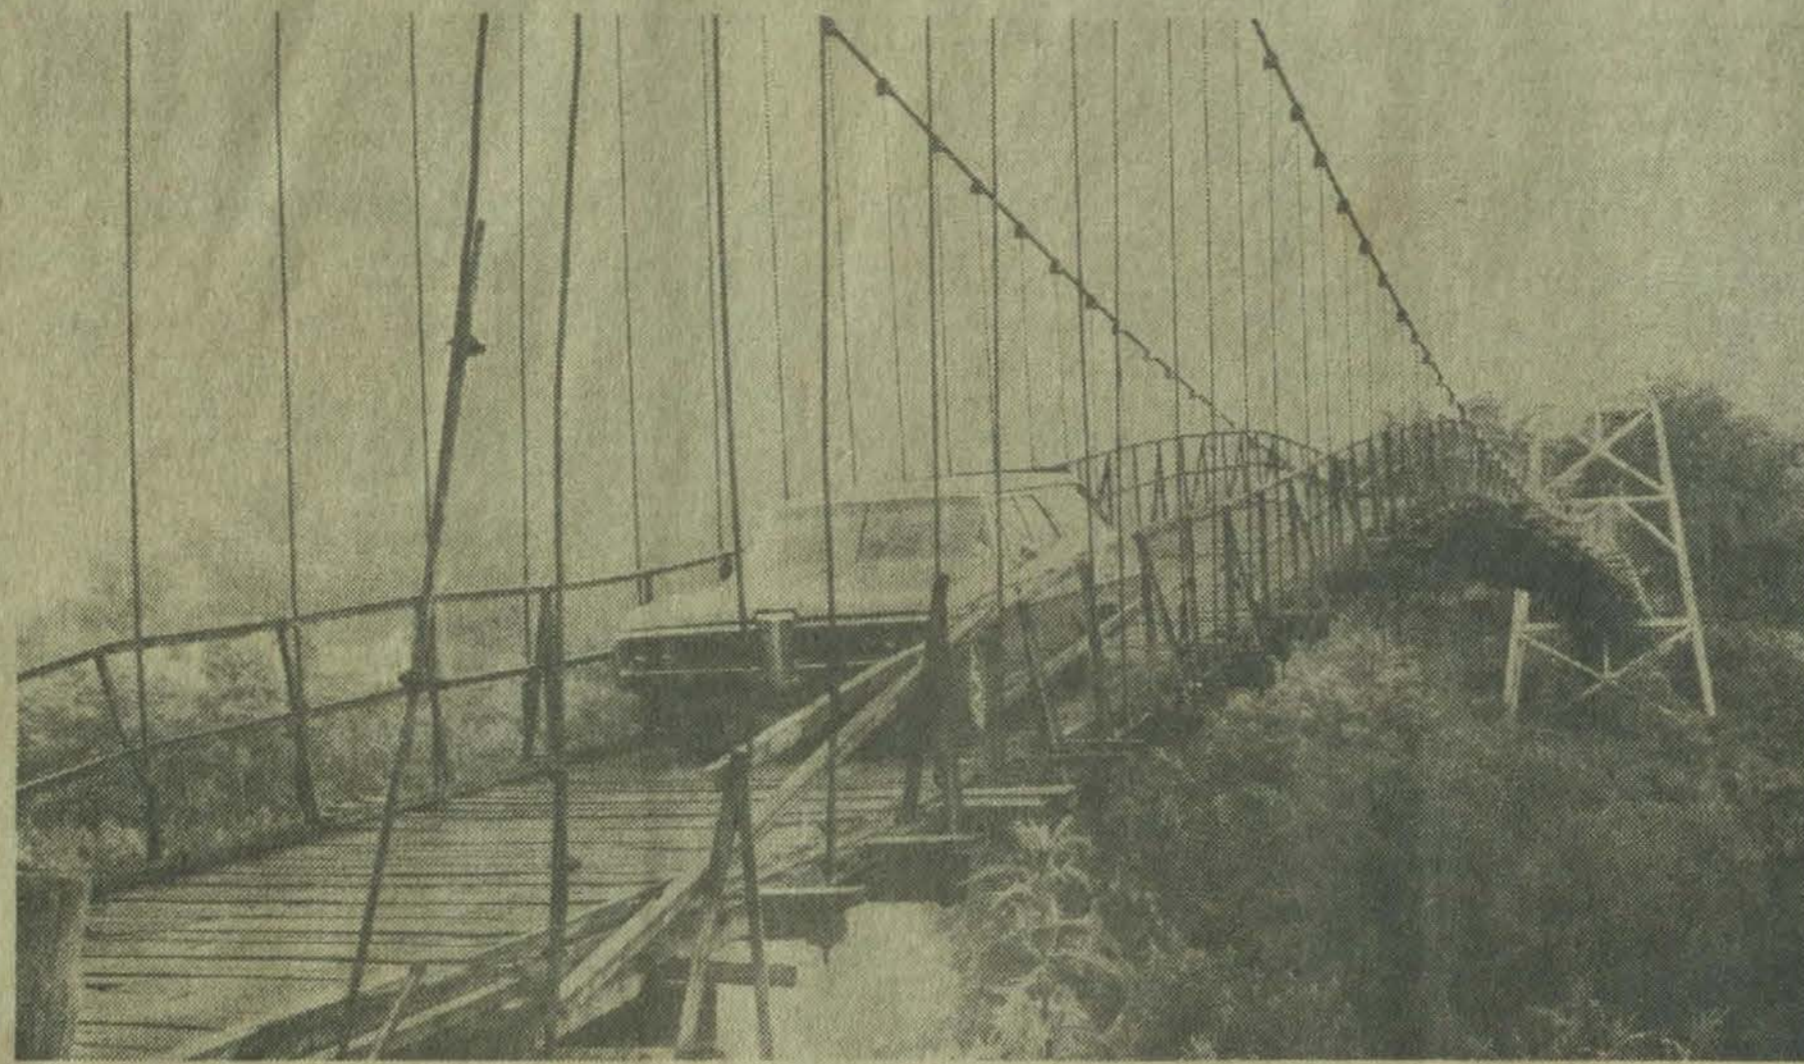

The notice was contained in a letter sent County Judge Henry Stumbo, Big Sandy Area CAP board of directors chairman, and Mrs. Eleanor Robinson, chairman of the comprehensive health board, by Carl A. Smith, acting director of the Office of Health Affairs.

The termination action is proposed, Smith wrote, "for violation of the terms and conditions of the grant and for improper and ineffective use of grant funds."

Health Affairs notified the two board chairmen that they may schedule a hearing regarding the proposed grant termination if the request is received in Washington not later than July 15. If no such request is filed, the Office of Health Affairs will deem inaction a waiver of rights and consent to OEO's deciding whether to terminate the grant.

Judge Stumbo said Tuesday he did not know if a request for another hearing will be filed but that a decision will be made soon. The feeling has been expressed locally that further hearings are useless.

The actual termination of the grant may not be effected for some time as OEO regulations provide for a series of steps to be taken, but while this is being done the pilot health program is, to all intents and purposes, dead. All funds are now frozen, pending a final decision.

FAMILY HISTORY

It doesn't look as if it had been touched but this desk got a clearing job done on it last Friday. Found no money on it, instead ran into various items which should have been printed but it's too late now. (While I'm about this, I should express my gratitude to a lot of people for their patience and forbearance with me in such matters.)

One of those items which I found, somewhere around Layer 4, was from Mrs. Audrey Stumbo Dailey, of Ironton, O., announcing the Stambaugh-Stumbo family reunion to be held June 20, near Oakhill, Ohio. All of her letter isn't lost, because some of her statements were so interesting I print them here, late or no:

"Our great-grandfather homesteaded Marion, O., gave it its name and owned all to Limville, Ohio. He and his brother John were among the first settlers when nobody but Indians were at Marion. Our great-grandfather's name was Billy Joe. He was known as Billy Boy. His brother John sold out to him and moved to Kentucky. . . They were among eight brothers who came over from Germany at one time."

Mrs. Dailey says the Stambaughs and the Stumbos are the same people. She explains the variance:

"Grandfather John Stumbo . . . always said Stambaugh was the correct name, but when the brothers came over here nobody could pronounce the name, so they changed it to Stumbo, for short, so it would be easier to pronounce."

And, we add, easier to spell.

To Hear Emma Bridge Needs Told

A determined drive for a modern, concrete span at Emma to take the place of the 50-year-old "swinging bridge" across the Big Sandy river there has resulted in a decision by Commissioner of Highways W. E. King to hold a hearing on the issue at the Emma Methodist Church, July 21.

The drive for a new bridge is being headed by Miss Flo Weddington, who also has contacted Kentucky's Congressional delegation in Washington for help.

The rickety span that now connects the village of Emma with US 23 on the other side of the river collapsed, more than 40 years ago, beneath the weight of a wagon and team, resulting in the death of a boy. It has never since been considered safe, particularly for heavy traffic, but is being used, though condemned. Stock for Emma's grocery store has on occasion been carted across the rickety span in a wheelbarrow as grocery company truck drivers wisely refused to risk a crossing.

There are, it is claimed, approximately 400 acres of land suitable to industrial development on the Emma side of the river. But the site is isolated, it also is argued, without a modern bridge. Emma has its church and postoffice, and the bridge is the only access to these. The same situation holds for school children who reside in Emma but must cross the river to reach a school.

Four hundred persons signed a petition requesting action on a new bridge. Miss Weddington hopes that at least that many will be on hand when Commissioner King hears the Emma Bridge Story, July 21.

Jenny Wiley State Park Camping To Be Discussed at Conference

A meeting of interested agencies and individuals with state park officials, and perhaps with Governor Nunn, to discuss measures to improve and develop camping and other facilities and services in Jenny Wiley State Park has been scheduled for 1 p.m. today (Thursday) in the Park Conference Room, Frankfort.

Lakeshore camping has been eliminated at Dewey Lake, with the exception of possibly three designated sites in the lower section of the impoundment. Camping on Stratton Branch also has been stopped, and the only central camp area is Goble Branch, where primitive conditions exist.

Persons interested in Dewey Lake and Jenny Wiley State Park say the drop in the number of visitors this year is alarming. From this source it was learned that the visitor total for the first five months of 1971 is down by more than 100,000 from the total for the same period last year.

A cold spring and heavy rainfall later in the year may be responsible for part of this loss, they concede, but the feeling also is expressed that poor and limited camping facilities and other factors must bear their part of the blame.

School Board Hires Radjunas

The Floyd County Board of Education in a special meeting last Wednesday employed Stanley Edward Radjunas, former assistant coach at Ironton (O.) high school, as head football coach here to succeed George McClellan, who resigned.

The board meeting ended the 1970-'71 fiscal year and prepared for the new fiscal year beginning July 1.

In another action the board employed Brenda O'Quinn as teacher of home economics at Prestonsburg high school.

OFFICE TO CLOSE

The Floyd County Health Department will be closed Monday, July 5, in observance of July 4. Regular business hours will resume Tuesday, July 6.

Small-Mine Operators Quitting As Safety Act Multiplies Costs

"Permissible mine equipment would cost $100,000, and that's why small operators are quitting when they mine out the little block of coal they are already mining."

So said Floyd county small-mine operator here recently in a discussion of the insurmountable problems posed by the Federal Mine Health and Safety Act.

"We fellows who work these small seams that the big boys don't want just haven't got that kind of money, and we don't make that kind of money," he added.

These are underground mines that are on their way out. Strip and auger mines have few of the problems these small operators face.

Everett C. Brown, district supervisor for the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals at Pikeville, is quoted as predicting that the small-mine segment of Eastern Kentucky's coal industry is on the way to collapse.

In Pike county, for instance, the number of state-licensed mines of this type has dropped from a high of 750 two years ago to 292. Brown's views were expressed in a Courier-Journal story written by Kyle Vance. Excerpts from that story follow:

Mental Health Group Gets $522,611 Grant

Fireworks Display To Feature 'Fourth'

The Fourth of July—which, for celebration purposes, will be July 5—will not be marked by any special observance here, but the real Fourth, Sunday, will feature the annual fireworks display at Archer Park.

City Manager Curtis Clark said the fireworks display will start at 9:45 p.m., Sunday, and he invited residents of other parts of the county, as well as those of Prestonsburg, to witness it.

The Independence Day concentration of people will, naturally, be at Archer Park here and at Jenny Wiley State Park for swimming, boating, golf and other attractions.

Staff, Facilities To Be Expanded With New Funds

Announcement made in Washington Monday by Congressman Carl D. Perkins that a one-year grant of $522,611 has been made to the 20th Region's Mental Health-Retardation Board here clears the way for improvements and expanded services which have been in the planning for months, Richard Stai, director of Mountain Mental Health Services, said.

Congressman Perkins said the grant comes from the Health Services and Mental Health Administration of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The grant will make possible an increase in the supportive staff, especially in the area of children's services, Mr. Stai said. It also will mean a fulltime clinic and day-care service in the northern (lower) section of the county, plus a more effective transportation system.

A multi-purpose building will be erected in this county to house regional business offices, a center for the retarded and a day-care program.

Staff expansion would include addition of workers in the field of retardation, another psychologist and an additional psychiatrist.

Mental Health Services also will soon benefit from a 22-bed psychiatric unit in the new Methodist Hospital at Pikeville.

Plans which will now begin to be developed are expected in the next two years to double the staff serving this county and to effect a greatly increased service capacity for the program.

Girl's Admission Fails To Satisfy In Death Probe

Although a 12-year-old girl testified at the examining trial here last Wednesday of Lynn Glen Collins that she, not Collins, fired the shots which killed Virgil Lee Tackett the preceding Saturday at Justell, Collins was held under $10,000 bond for his appearance at the next grand jury session.

The case became a tangle of conflicting testimony as the girl, Mary Lou Muncey, step-daughter of the victim, admitted what Collins and her sister, Helen, had at first claimed—that she killed Tackett. Later, Helen Muncey told authorities that Collins, who was her fiance, fired the shots, but at the examining trial she again testified that her sister did the shooting.

Another sister, Glenna Kendrick, said, however, that her young sister ran down the road prior to the shooting, which took place inside the Tackett home. The widow of Tackett said she saw Collins shoot her husband as the latter advanced on Collins with a knife. An open knife was found by officers on the floor, beside Tackett's body.

Explaining her part in the case, the 12-year-old girl said Collins and her step-father were on the floor, struggling for possession of the revolver, and that when she saw her step-father was about to gain possession of the weapon she reached down, snatched the gun and it was accidentally discharged. She said that as she held it another shot was accidentally fired.

Commonwealth's Attorney Harold Stumbo said juvenile proceedings will be instituted against the girl. He added that he expects to prosecute the case against Collins.

Traffic Charges Most Frequent

Except for one arrest made for grand larceny, the county jail register of major cases this week was composed entirely of traffic cases.

The grand larceny charge was lodged against Elmer Keathley, who was arrested by State Trooper Bevins. He was booked to Prestonsburg Police Court. A juvenile also was arrested in the same case.

Those booked, offenses with which they are charged and names of arresting officers follow:

Bud Bolen, drunk driving and no operator's license, by Deputy Sheriffs Conley and Jones; Eugene Lewis, Sr., reckless use of a deadly weapon, by Wheelwright Policeman Harold Johnson; Rushie Gibson, contributing to juvenile delinquency, by Deputy Sheriff Holland Hurley; Adrian Newsome, drunk driving, by State Troopers Bevins and Williamson; Otis Hall, drunk driving and no operator's license, by Bevins and Williamson; A. J. McCoy, drunk driving and no operator's license, by State Trooper P. R. Maynard; Jimmy Tackett, reckless driving, by Troopers Bevins and Williamson; Grady Thomas Goble, hit-run driving, by Prestonsburg Policemen Thornsberry and Herald; Tramble Tackett, drunk driving, by State Trooper Williamson; Marlie Marcum Mitchell, drunk driving, by State Trooper Williamson; and in Prestonsburg

Curly and Laurey prepare to leave on their honeymoon in the "Surrey With the Fringe on Top" in scene from "OKLAHOMA!"

"Oklahoma!" Acclaimed by Viewers

"Oklahoma!" is the best outdoor production I have ever seen," was the comment heard here after last Thursday's initial presentation of the famed musical at Jenny Wiley State Park's amphitheatre.

The production, one of a series scheduled this summer, will continue its run at the amphitheatre, four evenings a week, Thursday through Sunday, ending on July 11.

One critic who acclaimed the performance, the acting and music was Bill Belanger, of the Huntington (W. Va.) Herald-Dispatch. Mr. Belanger singled out several members of the cast for superlative performances and was critical only of the inadequacy of the sound system.

"Oklahoma!" features Mary Ann Warrick, Randolph Unberger, Steve Hale, Carolyn Kohli, Mitch Douglas, Lisa Galloway and Gary Butfrey. Curtain time for each performance is 8:30 p.m. Tickets may be procured by calling 886-6647.

Can you find the Volkswagen hidden in this picture?

If you can, you'll make us very sad. Because we've troubled ourselves no end to hide it from you.

Our quest for the invisible Volkswagen took us all the way to Turin, Italy.

Where we asked the famous Ghia Studios to design us a sporty Italian body.

They did.

Then we secretly prowled about Europe for the best coach builder we could find.

Success. To the Karmann Coachworks of Osnabrück we handed over Ghia's sketches with the injunction:

"Make it beautiful." (Or else.)

They did.

They welded. And burnished. And sculpted. And sanded. And painted.

Until they had shaped in steel what Ghia had shaped in pencil.

Smug in the knowledge that nobody could ever mistake this beautiful car for a Volkswagen, we concealed our air-cooled engine in back. (For better traction.)

And made it go about 26 miles on just one gallon.

Then we gave this Volkswagen its final disguise:

We named it the Karmann Ghia.

MAYTOWN NEWS

REMINDED OF HOMECOMING

All Maytownites in Floyd county and elsewhere are again invited to the community's second big homecoming, July 23-25. Come and bring your family. "Maytownites" are those who have lived, worked or attended some school here, or their descendants. While the homecoming is a community project sponsored by the Maytown Homecoming Association, a non-profit organization whose workers serve gratis, residents of the entire Maytown school community of Hueysville, Eastern, Pyramid and Hippo are included—everyone, of all ages.

Registration starts early Friday morning. Those inside this county are urged to register as early as possible. Registration is free, as are all programs, but everyone must register, and must wear his registration and identification tag all the time. Elizabeth Fudge, of Powell, Tenn., is chairman of registration. Booths will be in the school cafeteria.

Unfortunately in 1968, some assumed that only alumni of Maytown high school were invited, specially for class reunions. This is wrong. Many did not graduate here for various reasons but are equally welcome, and wanted for reunion brunches Saturday morning, July 24. Persons who never attended any school here, but once resided in Maytown or its school communities, and older ones, will enjoy brunch and fellowship at the United Methodist Church, same time. Some will attend more than one brunch, just to see old friends. If you reside in the county now, call your hostess and tell her you will be there.

Homecoming President Violet Allen completed committee appointments before the 1971 booklet went to press. Committee chairmen are reminded to contact Mrs. Allen soon for final instructions, and to keep in touch with their respective committee members. The big day is close. People are coming in droves. Many families are holding reunions then.

The huge newsheet, packed with data on hundreds of Maytownites everywhere, is off the press, thanks to Miss Lexie Allen and her co-workers, and to its editor, Melanie Conley Warfield, of Ft. Wayne, Ind. It will be on sale with the booklet in the cafeteria, and also at the Floyd County Fish and Game Club lodge, an organization which is working closely with the Homecoming Association, to make the event memorable in every way.

All Homecomers are to wear casual clothes entire time—no dress-up affairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Martin and children, of Franklin, Ohio, who are spending the summer here while Mr. Martin conducts classes during the summer term at Alice Lloyd College, were supper guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Martin, Saturday evening. Other guests of Mr. and Mrs. Martin, Saturday, were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bailey, of Eastern.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Hicks have returned from a two-week visit with Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Hicks and children in Morrel, Ohio.

Sympathy is extended to the family of Mrs. Mattie Sword who passed away Wednesday at the home of her son, Jack Sword.

Some of those attending the Kentucky-Indiana all-star basketball game in Indianapolis, Ind. last week were Mr. and Mrs. Ed Stewart, Tom, Jeff and Beckie, Bob and Mike Tallent and Rudy Thacker. Pat Tallent was one of the participants.

Mrs. Rhomer Osborne, of Eastern, visited Mrs. Polly Martin last Tuesday. Miss Beckie Stewart is spending a week in Stockdale, Ohio visiting Mrs. Dial Salisbury and Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Stewart.

Earl Edward Webb spent last week in Newark, N. J. on business.

Mrs. Howard Ramey and Mrs. Theodore Martin were shopping in Hazard, Tuesday. A large number of Kentucky Hydrocarbon and Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company employees and their families and guests attended a picnic at Camden Park, Saturday.

Library Board, Opening Annex, Honors Chairman

When the new $65,000 addition to the Floyd County Library was officially opened last Sunday afternoon, it was named the Emma May Cultural Center in honor of the veteran chairman of the Floyd County Library Board.

Announcing the naming of the addition in her honor, Homer Lee Hall, regional librarian, said other members of the board sought in this way to recognize Mrs. May for the time expended and expenses she had personally borne over a period of years—first, to get construction of the library itself done, and more recently on the library addition and its furnishing. The honor was accorded Mrs. May by other members of the board, without her knowledge.

The board chairman in a brief talk recognized the work of others and pointed out that State Senator Clifford B. Latta was instrumental in the physical development of the library.

The $65,000 addition, which will be devoted to art exhibits and music, has been equipped with television, an organ and piano and the most modern audio-visual facilities.

Leland King, of the State Department of Libraries, and Mrs. King were among the guests at the opening.

Steel, Coal Companies Join In $20 Million Pellet Project

Plans for an experimental project costing approximately $20 million to test a new coke pellet manufacturing process designed to eliminate gas and dust emissions were announced last week by a spokesman for a five-company group undertaking the demonstration-scale research project.

The group, made up of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, Consolidation Coal Company, Granite City Steel Corporation, already has spent $7 million since 1960 in experimental work in developing the new coke pellet manufacturing process. The $20 million is an additional expenditure and does not include the $7 million already spent to conduct research on the project through bench laboratory and initial pilot plant phases to its present stage of development.

The $20 million, it was explained, will include construction of a 500-ton-per-day demonstration plant, and operation of the plant and full-scale blast furnace tests.

The coke pellet manufacturing process is a closed system in that emissions are not given off into the air as with the slot-type ovens currently in use.

In essence, the coal is heated and pelletized, in some cases using pitch recovered from the gas stream to help bind together the coke particles which make up the pellet. All surplus gas from the process is cleaned for use in steel plants, power generation, or elsewhere.

To date, the experimental coke pellet manufacturing process has been tested on a 15-to 30-ton-per-day pelletizing pilot plant, and indications are that the process will prove technologically successful, competitive in cost, and capable of eliminating the emissions now associated with slot-type ovens.

The new demonstration plant to be built will be capable of producing 500 tons of coke per day in order to manufacture in a reasonable period of time 100,000 tons of the product—enough to evaluate a full-scale production research operation conducted in a modern blast furnace.

If the new coke pellet process is successfully developed, it is expected that it will not only eventually solve the air pollution problem, but that it will also stretch the rapidly dwindling supplies of scarce low-volatile coal. Unlike slot-type coke ovens, the new process is expected to use a single high-volatile coal.

Reclamation — a Study In Patience

Patience is not always an unmitigated virtue. This is a fact which is emphasized, if not proved, by the long-suffering of Kentucky's Division of Reclamation in its relations with Vols Coal, Inc., the Eastern Kentucky coal company which proposes to strip-mine, with permission of the Division of Reclamation, a tract of land upstream on Hurricane Creek from the University of Kentucky's Robinson Forest in Breathitt county.

The latest entry into the record of the dillydallying between this company and the state agency was made last Friday when the Division suspended all surface-mining permits issued to Vols. Which, past events lead us to believe, means only that there will be a break in operations.

For this is how patient the Division of Reclamation has been prior to the date of this last suspension:

On Jan. 21, 1970 a notice of non-compliance was issued against Vols for failure to carry out drainage plans.

On Feb. 10, 1970, a notice was issued for dumping too much spoil over outcrops and for excessive bench widths. Thirteen days later, a notice was issued for failure to impound water adequately, too much spoil over outcrops, inadequate silt basins and for excessive bench widths. And the next day, Feb. 24, the Division suspended all operations for a variety of alleged offenses.

Later, operations were permitted to be resumed, and again Vols was in violation. On June 10 notice of non-compliance was issued. On July 1 Vols again was cited. On July 15 another citation was issued, and this was followed on Aug. 12 with another.

And again Reclamation suspended all operations under permit. But Vols was back in business soon, and on Oct. 6 the company was cited for failure to backgrade on schedule. On Oct. 20 the company was cited for failure to construct silt dams in a drainway, and on Nov. 25 another citation alleged blasting of spoil and rocks and debris off the permitted area.

The list is too long. Other citations are dated 1971—Jan. 5, Jan. 18, Feb. 10, March 1, April 30, and May 12.

Within a period of 18 months Vols has received 18 non-compliance notices and has had two suspension orders served on it.

Will Vols ever learn how to avoid citations and suspensions? Can it operate in such terrain without violating regulations? How long will the Division wait to determine what can, or cannot, be done?

The forbearance of the Division bobs up from another quarter. When it was argued by conservationists that surface mining of the tract upstream from the Robinson Forest would turn acid waters and sedimentation into Hurricane Creek, perhaps the last pure water in Kentucky, the coal company proposed to route the water into one or more other streams. And the Division calmly heard such a proposal—as if routing acid water into another stream is protection for the public!

Perhaps it is such placid concern with the troubles of the mining industry that has prompted the state to seek the development of a portable device to neutralize acid waters at their source, which is where the mining is done. This portable unit is envisioned as one which could be moved from mine to mine for the treatment of the water.

This, presumably, would be a free service to the operator—for the public protection, of course, but at public expense.

Come to think of it, the most patient of all is not the Division of Reclamation. It's the public.

Poke Sallet Festival Time

WEST LIBERTY, KY.—A four-year-old lad of the Eastern Kentucky hills surprised his mother by bringing her an armload of leafy plants with the request that she cook them. The mother, a bit puzzled, was enlightened considerably when her son revealed that "Mam-maw cooks'em and I wikes'em."

Poke greens is to Harlan county, what the Indy 500 is to Indianapolis or the Buffalo Bill Roundup is to Cody—reason enough for lots of folks to gather at a given place to enjoy their thing. In the case of Harlan, it's eating heaping platters of poke sallet at the annual Poke Sallet Festival June 25—July 1.

There's no doubt that Harlan countians stand No. 1 in the nation when it comes to preparing these delectable Kentucky greens that Webster calls "pokeweed." And there's no doubt that mountaineers could manage to survive in spring if left to the elements; in fact, they could eat "high on the hog" if they could find some poke for a sallet.

Most times, they take the sallet straight, but this, they agree, might be a bit strong to the uninitiated. So the good cooks mix in a bit of dandelion, some sow thistle, sour dock, mustard tops and, if it's late in the season, turnip greens.

Green pickers have always presented a beautiful picture. Seeing a group of women with split oak baskets or flour sacks under their arms—sometimes an old metal dishpan—and leading a little one or two by the hand as they walk to the fields to pick greens is not at all unpleasant.

In olden days the scene was a common one in spring when families sometimes raced to see which could be first to have a "mess of creasies." Creasies, it is said, grow only on new ground, but later in spring when tender green shoots of poke begin to punch through earth, poke can be seen growing in abundance.

A few mountain women were asked how they cooked a mess of poke. One said after the greens were carefully washed she boiled them in a kettle of water about 10 minutes. Then she lifted the greens with a fork from the kettle to a black iron skillet in which was a tablespoon or two of bacon drippings.

"Even better than bacon drippings," she offered, "is saving leftover scraps of fried ham fat to put in the skillet with the poke." A few minutes simmering in the skillet and they're ready for the table.

Another said she cooked them direct in the skillet and when tender, she heaped the poke onto a deep platter or into a bowl and laced the greens liberally with vinegar. Another said she was sorry to say that since living in a city for 45 years she had acquired the habit of slicing boiled eggs to "fancy" up a dish of greens.

The word "fancy" is unknown in connection with a plate of true mountain poke sallet. Maybe the word would be used to describe a woman's dress, but other than ham fat or bacon, and sometimes vinegar, poke sallet comes to the table unadorned and unadulterated. To round out the true hill cuisine would be a pone of cornbread, green onions and buttermilk.

Some people shy away from gathering poke because if the plant is old and tough and the leaves big, they're not "good for you." Hill children grow up knowing not to eat pokeberries—they can use the purple juice as body paint and even as ink, but not as something edible. But lots of nature has its taboos... and most hill people know them, even to what mushrooms to gather from the woodland.

Some of the greens that along with poke have kept mountain people healthy and well fed are speckled John, lamb's-quarters, field sorrel, wild lettuce, sour dock, dandelion, sow thistle, violet, plantain and white top. "I always mix field daisy in my greens," said a Morgan county woman, adding "before the flowers come on."

Healthful, nutritious and delicious poke sallet is not all the Harlan festival has to offer. There's lots of mountain string music, high school band music and entertainment.

Organic food supreme! Gourmet greens! Mountain cuisine!

On June 25 when the aroma of poke cooking in the pot wafts through the Kentucky mountains, Harlan is the place to be. In the mountain counties folks picked poke greens early this spring and have them preserved for the Poke Sallet Festival when the tender, transparent shoots of wild greens become ambrosia of the hills.

SKUKUZA, South Africa (AP)—The black rhinoceros has been re-introduced into Kruger National Park game reserve, park officials said. The last one was seen there 35 years ago.

CARD OF THANKS
We would like to express our appreciation to all of our friends, neighbors, and relatives who in any way expressed their sympathy upon the passing of our beloved mother, Mary Elizabeth Lee. We would thank the ministers for their consoling words, and a special thanks to the Hall Brothers Funeral Home for its kind and efficient service.

Only First National offers a choice of 3 GOLDEN PASSBOOKS

Just to create interest

GOLDEN PASSBOOK SAVINGS

Wouldn't you know that the House of Savings would be first to offer two more plans to make savings create more interest than ever? Now, in addition to our 5 percent, 90-day Golden Passbook Plan, we invite you to try our 5 1/2 percent, 1-year Golden Passbook Plan and our 5 3/4 percent, 2-year Golden Passbook Plan. We think you'll find them all very "interest"-ing.

All three plans offer guaranteed interest rates, and interest is compounded daily and paid or credited quarterly with each. Any of the three may be opened with a $100 minimum deposit, and additional deposits of $100 or more may be made at any time.

Here's the interesting difference

With our new 5 3/4 percent, 2-year Golden Passbook Plan, your funds remain on deposit for a minimum of two years, with an effective yield of 5.92 percent per annum.

Our new 5 1/2 percent, 1-year Golden Passbook Plan has an effective yield of 5.65 percent per annum, and your funds must remain on deposit only one year.

"You're Among Friends at First National"

And our famous 5 percent Golden Passbook Plan makes your funds available four times a year—during the first ten days of January, April, July, and October—or anytime 90 days after a written notice is received by the bank. 5 percent Golden Passbook has an effective yield on 5.13 percent per annum.

How Interest Figured And Payment Dates

Interest compounded quarterly. Interest payment dates: April 1, July 1, Oct. 1 and Jan. 1. Deposits made during first 10 days of month bear interest from first day of that month.

Finley, Coal Company Indicted by U.S. Jury

A federal grand jury at Pikeville returned a 24-count indictment last week against Charles Finley and the Finley Coal Co., whose coal mine exploded Dec. 30, killing 38 men.

Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell said the indictment was based on the results of a post-disaster investigation by the U. S. Department of Interior's much-criticized Bureau of Mines.

"Willful" violations of the law by the company and Charles Finley, the government charged, took place from June 19, 1970, to Dec. 30, the day of the disaster near Hyden in Leslie county.

Charles Finley was named as chief operating official of the mining firm. His brother, Stanley, although a partner in the operation, was not mentioned in the indictment.

Most of the indictment dealt with conditions on Dec. 30 and Dec. 22, when the company was engaged in blasting operations.

Key counts appeared to be those related to alleged illegal explosives and alleged illegal blasting practices that were said by the Bureau of Mines to have occurred Dec. 30.

The bureau's post-disaster investigation and report said the massive underground explosion spread through the mine when highly volatile coal dust ignited. The bureau suggested that proper dust-removal practices might have localized the blast.

After the investigation, the bureau announced its plans to assess the Finley Coal Co. $53,600 in civil penalties for a series of violations found by federal inspectors before and after the disaster. At the same time, the bureau announced that it was making certain undisclosed recommendations to the Justice Department regarding possible prosecution under the criminal provisions of the mine-safety law.

The indictments were the culmination of the department's review, which had been going on since February.

Our Lady of Way Observes Hospital Week, May 9-17th

Martin, Ky.—Hospital Week activities at Our Lady of the Way Hospital at Martin, May 9-17, were led by Sister Mary Duddy. During the week the hospital hopes to reveal to patients and employees how much they really care, not just for one week, but every day of the year.

The Hospital began by saluting all hospitalized mothers on Mother's Day. Each mother had a special decorative breakfast tray with a carnation and a special Mother's Day card. Gift certificates were given to two mothers that day. Carnations were sent to the nurses' station with a poem for a salute to all the working mothers taking care of the sick. The day was closed with a prayer by Mrs. Waneta P. Newsome.

Monday, May 10, was out-patient day. All of the hospital's attention was focused on out-patients. A table was set up and refreshments served to each by Sister Theodore and her department. The day was closed by an evening prayer by Rev. Garland Bland.

Tuesday, May 11, the attention was focused on the in-patients and the nursing department. The patients were given a special tray. A gift certificate from a local merchant was presented to a patient. Each nurse was presented with a corsage. A buffet meal was served to the hospital personnel, prepared by Hazel Kirk and Steve Knowles. Mrs. Waneta P. Newsome, R.N. was presented with the Employee of the Year Award. She was also presented a kerosene lamp from Sister Marie Susanne in honor of Florence Nightingale's birthday. A candlelight supper was served to the night shift by Steve Knowles, Harold MacAlindon and Cheryl McAlindon. The night prayer was by Rev. William Poole.

Thursday, May 13, was open house, the purpose of which was to give the people of the community an opportunity to learn what goes on in the hospital. Refreshments were served and everyone got a free blood type. The evening prayer was said by Rev. Daniel Heintzleman.

Friday, May 14 was set aside in order to give special recognition to the Sisters of Divine Providence for their 24 years of service to the community in the care of the sick and injured. The hospital recognized several community people who had helped in time of need, such as during floods, local events, and aid in times of illness.

The hospital recognized a number of employees who had remained with them over a period of 15 years. Mrs. Waneta P. Newsome, R. N., Mrs. Pauline Wallace and Sister Mary Angelo, CDP, have been with the hospital since its beginning under the direction of the Sisters. Mrs. Maureen Martin, LPN, has served 17 years, Mrs. Helen Bradley, 16 years, William Wilkerson, 16 years, and Annette Vannucci, 15 years. The hospital had a special dinner at the Church of the Latter Day Saints for these Sisters and people of the Community. Mrs. Annette Vannucci and Mrs. Hazel Kirk, with their assistants, prepared and served meal. The evening prayer was by Rev. James E. Clark.

Those persons who fish for catfish are just as devout in their pursuit as is the full-fledged bass fisherman; or the fellow who catches white bass at night; or that fisherman who lives from year to year for the croppie runs. They all have their place and the catfish fisherman is just as skilled in his favorite endeavor as is the fellow who makes a specialty of catching black bass. The month of June is a prime time for catching catfish—all species. The cats are a bit later in spawning than other species and late May and early June, in the average year, is designated as the spawning season. They are also voracious eaters while spawning and during this season they are caught in great numbers from the major lakes especially.

All one needs to do to catch catfish from the major impoundments is to discover where they are spawning and drop to the fish below a luscious chunk of bait such as crushed shad, large minnows, night-crawlers or cut shrimp. Pretty soon he'll get unmistakable action, especially with the channel and blue varieties, which often give as spirited a tussle as does an enraged black bass.

The spawning areas usually are found on a hard surface, such as an old roadbed or washed-down gravelly bottom area. Perhaps the favorite spawning area, however, is man-made. That would be the rip rap bottoms laid in many lakes to prevent erosion. This rip rap will usually be found around bridges or near dams or on points where the engineers do not want the water to erode the soil. Find such a place and you'll usually find catfish, especially at spawning time when they are spoiling for a fight.

Usually a person thinks of catfish as a favorite in the fresh flowing water below a dam. That is correct. In a river or stream of any size or below the dams impounding the large lakes good catches of catfish can be harvested in the swift waters by fishing on or near the bottom.

Small streams give up good catches of catfish too, and there they'll be caught all year long except in the dead of winter. And, of course, few are the youngsters who have not caught a long string of tiny mud cats from a neighboring pond.

But even pond fishing for catfish has taken a different course now. Commercial pond operators purchase channels and place them in their ponds to be fished out by paying the public. This offers real good exciting fishing as the fisherman always knows when he has a strike.

The skill comes, not in getting the fish to hit, but in properly handling it after it takes the bait. Probably a catfish is allowed to "run" further than any other of the fishes after he takes up the lure. Like a bass it apparently fondles the bait before actually taking it and if a run starts and the fisherman attempts to set the hook right then, he's pretty apt to miss the fish. When it has run several yards, however, if the hook is set with a vigorous jerk on the pole, then the fisherman will in all probability land his fish.

The story of catfish fishing could fill a book, and has. Everyone has his choice method of harvesting them. The trotline is a big weapon used against the catfish but that is another story.

Meanwhile, if you seek the catfish with a pole and line, be cautious of the fish's "horns." These pin-pointed fins contain a bit of poison and the wound therefrom can be most painful for several days.

Son-in-Law of Former Floyd Man Named in Yablonski Murders

A dramatic courtroom confession at Washington, Pa. last week named Paul E. Gilly, 36, son-in-law of Silous Huddleston, LaFollette, Tenn., formerly of Wheelwright, as one of the three men who invaded the home of Joseph A. (Jock) Yablonski on New Year's Eve, 1969 and shot to death Yablonski, his wife and daughter.

The confession was made by Claude E. Vealey, whose statement included himself, Gilly and Oubran (Buddy) Martin as the killers.

Huddleston and his daughter, Annette, who is the wife of Gilly, are fighting extradition from Ohio to Pennsylvania.

Vealey, who will be sentenced after a future hearing, will be a prosecution witness at the trial, perhaps in July, of Martin. His attorney said his confession was made in an attempt to escape the death penalty.

He said he and the other two were paid $5,200 for the murders.

In his statement, Vealey said the murder plot began sometime before July 4, 1969, when Gilly told him a "guy" was willing to pay $4,200 to have a person killed. The figure was later increased $1,000, he said.

Vealey said that in October 1969, he took an advance of $750 to pay for bond to free him from a Youngstown, Ohio, jail, where he was awaiting trial on a housebreaking charge made after the plot was initiated. After posting bond, he said, the three men drove to Yablonski's farmhouse in Clarksville, and broke in to "case" the house, while no one was home.

For several weeks afterward, he said, the three attempted to locate Yablonski in Washington, D.C., Scranton, Pa., Clarksville and Beckley, W. Va. A face-to-face confrontation between the three men and the intended victim occurred at Yablonski's house about Dec. 8, 1969, three weeks before the murder, Vealey said.

He said the men knocked on Yablonski's door and talked with the UMW official about employment. Although armed at the time, they "chickened out" and left Clarksville.

On Dec. 29, two days before the murder, Vealey said, he was informed that Martin would be the "third," replacing a man listed as Charles J. Phillips.

On the night of the murder, Vealey said, the three men parked on a hill overlooking the Yablonski home and drank beer and whisky for about three hours while it was agreed "that it would be best to go ahead and kill Yablonski and anyone else in the house and get it over with."

Floyd Post Offices Join in Observance

Floyd county post offices will be joining those across the nation, celebrating "Postal Service Day" on July 1.

A special souvenir envelope will be available at the post offices on this day; the envelopes are free, but the stamps for them will be eight cents. Cancellation of stamps on these envelopes on July 1 is a way of observing the abolition of the old Post Office Department and the beginning of a new corporation, the United States Postal Service.

The envelopes are expected to become collector's items. Those wishing them may ask at the post office windows.

Revival Scheduled At Salt Lick Church

A revival will be held at the Salt Lick Community Church on KY 7, near Hueysville, beginning Sunday, July 4, and continuing through July 10, with the Revs. L. P. Tussey, of Hueysville, United Baptist minister, and the Rev. Clay Noble, of Shiloh, Ohio. The pastor, the Rev. James Reed, and the congregation invite the public to attend each service at 7 p.m. daily.

Regular services are held at the church Saturdays at 7 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m.

Weight Control Class To Meet at Maytown

The first meeting of the Langley weight control class will be held Thursday, July 8, at 7 p.m. at the Maytown gym.

All persons interested in losing or gaining weight are invited to attend. A donation is required of each person who enrolls in the class for the purchase of supplies.

The class is sponsored by the Floyd County Health Department, and involves individual diets based on an exchange list, supplemented by exercises for muscle tone.

Depot Street, Lackey Slated for Blacktop

Highway Commissioner B. E. King last week announced a road improvement project for Floyd county.

Bituminous initial surfacing is planned for Depot Street in Lackey, from the junction with KY 7 and extending south and west 0.3 mile. The expected completion date of the road improvement project is this summer, King said.

About one-third of all skilled job openings which will occur during the 1970's will be for construction craftsmen. Some 132,000 openings are expected to occur each year as a result of employment growth and replacement needs due to retirements and death.

Notice of Public Hearing

Notice is hereby given that on Thursday, July 8, 1971, the Prestonsburg Planning Commission will conduct a public hearing at the Ford Building, in the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, at 7:30 p.m., for the purpose of discussion with any interested citizen the provisions and intent of a new, revised ZONING ORDINANCE FOR THE CITY OF PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY, and new, revised ZONING MAP, PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY.

Re-discover KENTUCKY
By HELEN PRICE STACY

There was a copperhead arched lazily along a row of fieldstone in the massive chimney of The Old House, near Salyersville in Magoffin county, so we kept our distance. The den of snakes keeps guard over the weathered wood that is the Prater house, built early in 1800 by Archibald Prater.

In bright summer sun the old wood gleams like silver, and bubbles in old glass panes turn molten as they reflect light. Surprisingly, the lawn is neatly kept with shrubs clipped to boxwood roundness. Fruit trees near the yard fence continue to bloom in spring as they have for decades and in June and July apples hang heavy from gnarled branches.

Misses Fanny and Alma Prater, great-granddaughters of the builder, see that the grounds are taken care of—and from their white cottage a short distance away they keep a close watch on the ancestral home of the Praters.

It is true that much of the interior remains as it was when the doors were locked and the last Prater moved out. But a den of snakes now resides in the historic house, parts of which are so old the date is lost in history.

"I'm on the sunny side of a hundred," laughed Miss Alma as she stepped lightly through the yard, pointing out features of the house, the back of which is visible from Mountain Parkway. She pointed to a wash basin in the side yard near a log smokehouse that had also served as the wash house.

The basin had been designed and made by Prater at about the time he built the house. "You might like it as a souvenir to take home," said Miss Alma with a smile touching her face.

The foundation for the upper basin had been made from a large rock, squared perfectly by hand. Atop this was another rock that had been hewed and hollowed to form a bowl in the center. Prater put his mountain ingenuity to good use by boring a small hole out the side so the water could drain.

Prater was a soldier with the Virginia Militia in the Revolutionary War. Miss Alma indicated that her ancestor had come to America from England, and historian Henry Scalf, of Stanville, writes in his book, "Kentucky's Last Frontier," that Prater and his brother Jonathan were natives of Pittsylvania county, Va. Archibald married Sarah Fugate, daughter of Josiah and Elizabeth Fugate, in Montgomery county in about 1783.

It was in 1781 that the Prater brothers together with Clayton Cook, Ebenezer Hanna and a small party braved the Indians and dense woodland to explore the upper reaches of the Licking River. History says they were turned back by Indians on their first attempt to settle but a short time later were successful.

Not in the Old House but a part of family heirlooms are candle molds, china and a sewing cabinet that date to colonial days and had been a part of the belongings of Archibald and his bride Sarah.

A small spinning wheel was made in 1845. An antique china cabinet holds small pieces that are highly prized by the two sisters. A lazy susan, not as old as some of the furniture, was made by their father Thomas Prater in 1909.

In 1810 Archibald and his wife became members of the new Burning Spring Church, which had just been organized by the Rev. Daniel Williams, pioneer settler in Morgan county in about 1800.

The Old house still stands and, though weathered and gray, its size and historical stature make it one of Eastern Kentucky's most valuable buildings.

Perhaps some day soon steps will be taken to properly preserve the ancient boards and logs—even the smokehouse—and it can be a showplace for this and future generations. It is a monument to Archibald Prater, his son John and others of the family who chose Eastern Kentucky as their place of refuge. And it is the old homestead to Misses Alma and Fanny who have ignored the slithering, crawly residents near the chimney and have kept within sight of The Old House.

had just spent $20,000 to get in compliance, but the federals (inspectors) came back last Monday with an imminent danger and withdrawal order."

Mines deemed to be dangerous in any respect are classified as being in "imminent danger." Immediate withdrawal of men from the mine is then required.

"Mars just told its men to go out and sign up for unemployment," Brown said.

He said he recently surveyed some of the county's larger small mines to get a picture of how the safety law has affected production. He explained that compliance work takes men away from production, or slows down production in other ways.

One company lost 60,396 tons of production in three months, even though 71 employees were added and 20 more shifts were worked.

Another, he said, lost 56,940 tons, though 583 men worked 20 more shifts than a comparable three months before the safety law. A third one was down 74,984 tons, though it, too, had added to its work force, Brown said.

"Each one of them said the safety law was directly to blame," Brown said. "Too many men have to spend too much time with piddling things in order to comply."

Robert Holcomb, president of the newly formed Coal Operators and Associates, an organization seeking relief from the law for small miners, said some mine inspections are "plain laughable."

"They (inspectors) don't just nitpick," he said, "but a lot of times they just don't know what the dickens they are doing."

"They are turning in inspection reports on abandoned mines and non-existent mines, with names that nobody ever heard about. They closed one mine that hadn't been in production for weeks, without going inside and without citing a violation."

Brown charged that the law which is closing the mines "in the name of safety" actually is making some of them more dangerous.

If present trends continue, unemployment insurance benefit payments will reach $4.9 billion in fiscal 1971, compared to $2.8 billion last year, the Labor Department reports.

Loving county lost a quarter of its population between 1960 and 1970—down from a super-grand-total of 226 10 years ago to 164.

The county judge disagreed with the census figures and made a head-count of his own. Yep, he was right—the Census Bureau was off. The judge counted 165.

Isn't this the county we had an item about, a few years back, telling its refusal to be afflicted with a passel of government programs?

HE FOLLOWED, BUT NOT MEEKLY

We are not conducting a Crime School but can't resist recounting the story Quentin Terry tells of the theft of a turkey in the Caney Creek section of Knott county, some years back. With designs on a particularly fine gobbler in the neighborhood, this certain individual tied a fish-hook onto a stout line, impaled on it a grain of corn, then leisurely ambled past the noble fowl. When the turkey gobbled down the grain of corn and its attachments and couldn't spit them out, he set his feet wide, spread his wings wider and stuck his neck out a yard long toward the man who was leading him away.

The owner of the bird saw the gobbler threatening what appeared to be assault and battery on the man and yelled across the creek, "He won't hurt you."

"But I jest can't help bein' afeard of these things," the thief called back, as he disappeared around a bend in the road, the turkey in apparent pursuit.

And, if anybody says to me, "It ain't the heat, it's the humidity"—so help me, I'll...

Two Girls from County Are at Camp Cardinal

Two girls from Floyd county—Kim DeRossett, of Allen, and Sherry Layne, of Banner—are registered for early camping sessions being conducted by the Wilderness Road Girl Scout Council at Camp Cardinal, near Carter Caves State Park.

Four other camps for troop and day camping are operated by the Wilderness Road Council, which has headquarters in Lexington and serves girls in 55 Central and Eastern Kentucky counties, plus one each in Ohio and Tennessee.

These camps are Chatterawha, on Dewey Lake; Camp Judy Layne, near Frenchburg; Richard Clark, at Indian Old Fields in Clark county, and Shawano, near the Kentucky River, in Jessamine county.

During the 1960's, employment in the health occupations grew from 2 million to an estimated 3.2 million or by 60 percent—more than 3 times the rate of growth in civilian employment as a whole.

Ambulances Quit Medicare Cases Service in Floyd

What is said to have been the last Floyd county ambulance service transporting elderly patients for future payments by Medicare ended this phase of service last week.

The W. H. McCormick Ambulance Service announced that in the future it will transport patients under Medicare only if families of the patients, or the patients themselves, pay the ambulance charge, then collect from Medicare, themselves. Bills submitted after the rendering of service have been so reduced that the ambulances cannot afford to continue transporting patients unless they or their relatives make payment in advance. Mr. McCormick pointed out, "It's a matter of operating on a cash basis or being forced to quit altogether," he said.

Instances cited pointed to sharp cuts made on bills submitted to Medicare and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., its agent. In one a bill of $10 for ambulance and $10 for oxygen was submitted. The total was reduced to $15 on the ground that $5 is the maximum allowed for oxygen. (The ambulance service points out that a tank of oxygen costs $5.60 and that the tank itself costs $22).

Another statement for $126 for ambulance service from Prestonsburg to the UK Medical Center, Lexington, was disallowed completely because Social Security Administration regulations permit payment for ambulance service only to the nearest hospital with "appropriate facilities," and such a hospital exists here. Three ambulance services—Duff's, in the Right Beaver Creek area, and Appalachian and McCormick here—were organized after funeral homes of the county ended their operation of ambulances.

Now, the same action is proposed by the end of the year in a 10-county area around Bowling Green. Reasons given there for the proposed suspension of service are:

Wage and hour law in maintaining qualified personnel for ambulance service 24 hours a day.

Changes in federal law pertaining to ambulance service.

Increased demands for ambulance service.

The emergency transportation act, which makes it mandatory by 1975 for ambulances to comply with the act.

Training of personnel to operate ambulances and to move emergency patients.

Financial loss caused by only about one-third of the ambulance runs being paid by customers and the remaining being written off as bad debts.

To Teach Here

Bertha Sue Holbrooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Holbart Holbrooks, of the Abbott road, has returned to Morehead State Teachers College for eight weeks, working toward her M. A. degree. She graduated there in May and was on the Dean's List the past four years. She will be teaching in the grade school here this fall as a special education teacher.

IN APPRECIATION

The family of Mrs. Tot Allen Mann Cope wishes to express deepest appreciation to all who so generously showed their loss and friendship to us in our hour of sorrow. The contributions of flowers, food, cars, etc. were greatly appreciated. Especially do we thank the Rev. Wm. Pope for his comforting words, Mrs. Chalmer Frazier for the beautiful music, the pallbearers, the Methodist Church for the use of the sanctuary, and the Carter Funeral Home for its efficient service.

David Street Lights To Go Off Tonight

Streets of David are expected to be dark tonight (Wednesday) as the Kentucky Power Company planned cutting off the lights during the day after Woodrow Branham, owner of the town, had cancelled his contract with the company for street lighting.

Chester Smith, administrative assistant to the power company's division manager, said Tuesday that individuals who are interested in street lighting should contact the company to negotiate for service on an individual basis. The service suspension does not affect service to individual homes.

David's streets are illuminated by 26 lights. The power company charges $4 per light per month for the service.

BLOCKS TO YOUR SATISFACTION
ROBINSON CREEK, KY.

The Colley Block Company, serving Eastern Kentucky coal fields, is deeply interested in a healthy business climate for our people. This climate comes about by the strong support of the coal industry. Our plants have expanded to manufacture special blocks for coal producing people in this region. Good coal sales generate jobs for our folks in Eastern Kentucky.

Our feeling and devoted interest for those who work in coal is not new. We, at Colley Block, have supported the coal industry and shared its problems for over twenty years. Good faith may be the sound gesture that is now needed for those who are associated with coal.

T. T. COLLEY, PRESIDENT
COLLEY BLOCK COMPANY

We are Number One. Thanks to the coal industry.

Strip-Mining Makes 'Orphan Land,' But the Concentration of People Is Big Problem, Says Consultant

By DEE GIANNINI

FRANKFORT, KY.—"It will take personal sacrifice, time, money and possibly a statewide zoning program to reverse pollution processes," according to Dr. Brad Block, environmental and occupational health consultant for the state Department of Health.

"Just as 'Rome wasn't built in a day,' our pollution problems haven't built up in a day either," Dr. Block said.

A native Louisvillian, Dr. Block—a physician with a master's degree in environmental health—is probably the first such qualified person to be employed by any state as medical consultant for environmental health.

His work consists largely of studying the effects of water, air and food pollutants on the human body.

"Kentucky already has engineering and technical expertise in the pollution field," he said. "My job is to help determine how much pollution control must be exercised to maintain a safe environment.

"That means studying what effects pollution has on people from an epidemiological standpoint, studying what diseases may be the result of what man is doing to his environment."

Dr. Block said that Kentucky has the same or similar environmental problems as most states, but added that Kentucky has several characteristics which facilitate water and land pollution.

Kentucky, he noted, is blessed with a great amount of water—approximately 13,000 miles of streams and rivers and some 650 square miles of lake area, excluding small lakes scattered throughout the state.

"Those bodies of water, several of which border other states, provide transportation and recreation for thousands of Kentuckians and out-of-state tourists," Block said.

"In order to keep our waters from being open sewers, we must continue to work against pollution with the states bordering Kentucky's major waterways."

The state's topography, in relation to population distribution, also causes pollution problems peculiar to Kentucky. Six counties, or five per cent of the total counties in the state, account for 38.6 per cent of the total population.

"Such density of population generates waste—domestic, commercial and industrial. Also, industries tend to locate around established areas, boomeranging pollution problems," Dr. Block said.

Strip mining represents another pollution problem to Kentucky, shared only by other mining states. "Kentucky's Eastern and Western hill country already bears the scars of strip mining and certainly justifies the term orphan land," he added.

But the biggest problem in the fight against pollution, according to Dr. Block, is maintaining people's enthusiasm for a clean environment.

"When people have to choose between clean air and a paycheck, the decision is not always in favor of clean air," he noted.

"Industries unwilling to meet anti-pollution standards should not be able to locate in our communities. The short-term economic gain is overshadowed by the long-range pollution effect.

"People must not only acknowledge that pollution has become a problem," he stated, "but also must be willing to make the personal sacrifices necessary to overcome the problem.

"Most people think about industry cleaning up pollution and don't realize their individual pollution adds up," he said. "The use of car pools is an example of a personal sacrifice which cuts down the amount of air pollution."

Projecting into the future, Dr. Block said he foresees the day when a statewide zoning program would be established. Under such a program, land throughout the state would be put to its best uses, based upon economic and ecological factors. Fertile farmlands would not be sold out for housing subdivisions, apartment complexes, shopping centers or industrial sites; industry would be located near accessible facilities but not close to residential areas. "Farmlands should not be used to grow houses," Block stressed.

Such a plan would necessitate elaborate planning of all the state's natural resources, topographical features, watershed facilities and air flow patterns, he said. The program would help solve pollution problems by dispersing the population statewide, he noted. That would be accomplished by relocating industry, and thus people, who would follow the jobs.

An added feature of block's plan would be the redistribution of wealth, as industrial taxes are pumped back into local economies.

"People wouldn't have to be uprooted from their rural homes since industry would go to the people."

At the moment, Dr. Block envisions a grouping of small community-cities springing up around a central industrial hub. No auto traffic would be operating within the hub but a system of rail transportation would radiate like spokes of a wagon wheel to the hub. Between the industrial hub and the outlying cities, there would be a buffer zone of parkland or small farms.

"The Indians fought over Kentucky because of its gracious plenty," Dr. Block said. "We cannot, as the Indians did, migrate when the land has been laid waste—we must fight to preserve Kentucky's gracious plenty."

LONDON (AP)—Boys at coeducational schools tend to gain from the girls' "more earnest approach," but the girls tend to avoid mathematics and science courses, said Miss E. J. Banbury, headmistress of a coeducational school.

LONDON (AP)—"The reason the young have a high divorce rate is that they have a high proportion of bad housing," said a report by Prof. O. R. McGregor of the Sociology Department at London's Bedford College.

* C78-13 (650 700x13) whitewall, plus $1.92 Fed. tax

An old reliable name is back on a brand new Unico passenger tire, the Mark IV-78. It's a step up in mileage . . . comfort . . . safety. These extra-durable 4-ply tires have equalized tread rib pressure, which eliminates stress spots, slows wear, boosts longevity. Advanced reverse molding means cooler running. New traction slots make traction tops. Tough polybutadiene rubber has built-to-take-it resistance to road hazards. We have all popular sizes, many in blackwall at lower prices.

BIG. . .BOLD. . .BELTED Unico Mark V Glas-Belt Tires

Polyester cord body . . . Fiberglass cord belts. BIG—as much as 20 per cent wider than conventional tires, real road huggers. Bold—with massive wrap-around contoured tread. BELTED—with Fiberglass for more stability, less squirm. You get a smooth, thump-free ride. Mileage? Exceptional Price? Far lower than you might imagine for a top performance tire. All popular sizes available.

NEA Report Says Ky. Education 'Legacy of Unkept Promise'

Terminating Kentucky education "a legacy of unkept promise," a National Education Association committee has declared that "significant remedial legislation is imperative for 1972."

Hudson L. Barksdale, chairman of NEA's Commission on Professional Rights and Responsibilities (PR&R), says in the foreword of the 142-page report released May 27.

"While conducting this investigation... members of the NEA Special Committee received the impression that many Kentucky citizens, including some legislators and leading civic officials, did not have a full enough awareness of the conditions and specific needs of the schools to ensure that knowledgeable and wise decisions could be made in the best educational interests of Kentucky's youth."

Barksdale said the committee hoped the report would enlighten public opinion, stimulate public debate, and contribute a reliable body of fact on which to base public school decision making.

The seven-member committee concluded that public school programs in the Commonwealth were both inadequate and unequal. "Despite massive gains in state school support during the 1960's" the report says, "Kentucky continues to lag behind most other states in public school financing and achievement levels, ranking thirty-nine in the nation in per-pupil expenditure, forty-second in instructional salaries, forty-first in total current expenditure as a percent of personal income, forty-seven in student retention rate of high schools, and fortieth in the percent of Selective Service registrants passing preinduction mental tests."

(The new edition of "How Kentucky Ranks, 1971" shows Kentucky currently ranks 44th in per-pupil expenditure, 44th in average salary of classroom teachers, and 31st in total current expenditure as percent of personal income. The higher ranking for Kentucky in the latter category resulted not from any absolute increase of effort but from a decline in the effort level of other states.)

Committee observations in a sampling of the poor, and low-expenditure, school districts indicated that Kentucky citizens "are getting just about what they are paying for: the bare rudiments of educational programming, crowded into dingy, incredibly dreary school buildings, many of which are structurally unsound, educationally obsolete, and which could most aptly be described as custodial institutions for the very young."

The report notes that although the most severe educational deficiencies were found in the impoverished rural school systems, particularly the Appalachian area in Eastern Kentucky, grave financial problems also confront schools in relatively affluent areas.

Underfinancing is at the heart of Kentucky's school problems, the PR&R committee noted. A total additional public school investment of $143 million would be necessary to bring the state's per-pupil expenditure up to the national average. "But Kentucky has so many long-neglected educational needs, and the inequalities among Kentucky school districts are so blatant, that an even greater initial expenditure would be required to ensure adequacy of educational programs and facilities in all regions of the Commonwealth."

Concerning inequalities, the report shows that median per-pupil expenditures are $95 less in the low-ability districts than in the wealthier ones. And the poorest districts had a median student-retention rate in high schools of only 51.94 percent, contrasted to 75.37 percent in the wealthier districts and a 78.8 percent average in the nation.

Figures on underfinancing fail to tell the complete story, the committee emphasized, for "the full measure of this problem—as it involves the aspirations and life chances of Kentucky's youth and the professional lives of Kentucky's teachers—is not susceptible to statistical analysis."

The report is based mainly upon public hearings conducted by the committee last No. 11-13 in Louisville. William P. Haubner, PR&R senior staff associate, was examiner for the hearing, which featured an open forum procedure. Dr. Howard C. Seymour, superintendent of the Phoenix, Ariz., Union High School District, was chairman of the special investigating committee. The committee heard 57 individuals and groups, including state and local school and governing officials, officers of the Kentucky Education Association (KEA), classroom teachers, representatives of citizens organizations, representatives of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, newspaper editors, students, school superintendents and local school board members, and other citizens. The hearing was preceded by two days of one-site visits to this and other counties by four teams of committee members and PR&R staff to schools in different parts of the state.

The charges, made by KEA, were that Gov. Louie B. Nunn and the 1970 Kentucky General Assembly had "failed in their responsibility" to the schools—and the committee report points out that the findings "fully support the allegations of KEA concerning the inadequacy and inequality" of the public school programs.

NEA undertook the investigation on the invitation of KEA in June 1970, following a six-day strike of more than 25,000 of the state's 32,000 teachers and administrators the previous February.

The governor and general assembly declined to participate officially in the hearing, although the governor did submit a written statement, which is included in the committee report, and two key legislators unexpectedly testified near the end of the hearing. In the conclusion of his statement Governor Nunn asserts that "Kentuckians have demonstrated their recognition of the importance of education by continuing to dedicate to it a large share of available state funds, often at a sacrifice to other worthy programs." He adds that "we have sought and achieved measured progress... progress tempered by the realization that our system can grow only at a rate which the people of this state can afford and will support."

Seeing the matter quite differently, the special committee declared: "In their failure to consider tax measures that would more effectively tap this wealth for the benefit of public education and other public services needs in Kentucky, the Governor and 1970 General Assembly abrogated their responsibility—not only to public education—but also to the social and economic welfare of the Commonwealth."
