ALC Students Ponder Area Environment

Pippa Passes, Ky.—Air, water and soil pollution are disturbing concerned citizens all over the nation, and the students at Alice Lloyd College are searching for solutions to these problems.

In a one-month environmental biology course being taught at the college by John Buckhouse, students are familiarizing themselves with the details of the pollution crises which particularly affect their home areas. They are learning to see the relationships between the predominant natural resources in eastern Kentucky—water, timber and coal—and the life styles of men and animals here.

As an important part of the course, students are choosing a particular environmental problem facing Appalachia today. They are relying heavily on personal experience such as working in a coal mine or a wild life conservation program, along with library and textbook materials. Among topics chosen for research are strip mining, stream pollution, the effect of high-water conditions on pollution control, and how poverty may be related to wildlife destruction.

Health Chief Sees New TB Cases Drop

State Health Commissioner William McElwain has predicted a dramatic reduction in new cases of tuberculosis in Kentucky although the state currently has one of the nation's highest TB rates.

U. S. Public Health Service figures show Kentucky's 870 new cases of active TB in 1970 rank fourth in the nation behind Hawaii, Alaska and Alabama.

But McElwain said Kentucky so far this year has about 25 per cent fewer cases than last and predicted the commonwealth will have no more than 700 cases this year, passing six states in TB control.

He credited the decrease with concerted drives in tuberculosis treatment and control over the past two years.

Chief judge at Nuernberg dies at 90

MALMESBURY, England (AP) — Lord Oaksey, presiding judge of the 1946 Nuernberg war crimes trial that sentenced leading Nazis to death, died Saturday, his family announced yesterday. He was 90.

As chairman of the allied panel of judges, Oaksey pronounced death sentences on Marshal Hermann Goering, Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and nine others convicted of war crimes in World War II.

Oaksey died at his country home in Malmesbury, 75 miles west of London, where he had retired as a Lord Justice of Appeal to raise prize-winning cattle.

The son of a lord chief justice, Oaksey often spoke out in the House of Lords against leniency to criminals. "The prime and immediate object of punishment is the protection of the public," he said. "It is possible to think too much of the reform of the criminal."

In his first speech in the House of Lords, he cited the death penalty, hard labor and whipping as the greatest deterrents to crime.

Oaksey was appointed Lord Justice of Appeal, a high judicial post, in 1944 during World War II.

Have two doors kept you out of a Volkswagen?

Don't answer yet. The car in the picture is a Volkswagen. And, as you can see, it has four doors. It's our new 411 4-Door sedan.

Like most 4-door sedans, our 411 gives the people in the back almost as much room as the people in the front.

Unlike most 4-door sedans, though, there's also room for luggage in the front as well as in back.

Like most 4-door sedans, our 411 has an engine.

Unlike most 4-door sedans, our engine gets about 22 miles to the gallon.

Like most 4-door sedans, our 411 offers a lot of options. Automatic transmission, radial tires, rear-window defogger, to name a few. Unlike most 4-door sedans, those options are included in the price of the car.

Now you can answer if you like:

() Yes. () No.

Dr. Martin Named Charter Diplomat

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Dr. Lowell Dean Martin, of Martin, Ky., has been named a charter diplomate of the American Board of Family Practice as a result of passing a certification examination administered under the aegis of the ABFP.

To achieve diplomate status Dr. Martin through an intensive two-day written examination proved his ability in the areas of internal medicine, surgery, obstetrics-gynecology, pediatrics, psychiatry, preventive medicine and other traditional specialties and now is certified in medicine's newest specialty—Family Practice. The 3,285 doctors, nationally, who earned their diplomate distinction, are the vanguard of a new type of highly competent "people doctor" who accepts responsibility for the patient's total health care and serves as the natural point of entry into the complex medical system.

These specialists must continue to show proof of competency in the field of comprehensive, continuing care of the family by taking another exam and being re-certified every six years.

Official Would Prevent Reducing Drunk Driving Charge

Arther E. Beard, executive director of the Kentucky Traffic Safety Coordinating Committee, has recommended changes in state traffic laws to prevent judges from reducing drunken driving charges.

He made the recommendations while preparing for a regional alcohol reeducation workshop at Jenny Wiley State Park.

Beard recommended the revocation of license period for first-time drunken driving offenders be reduced from six months to 90 days while the current fine ($100-$500) be retained.

He said the current six months revocation is reportedly considered too severe in the courts, leading some judges to reduce charges.

Count Basie, Player for Royalty, To Appear Here, September 21st

Count Basie, highest ranking royalty ever to come from Red Bank, N. J., and one of the few of this or any era to play two command performances before Queen Elizabeth as well as playing by personal invitation at the inaugural ball of President Kennedy, will be in Prestonsburg, Tuesday, September 21, to open the East Kentucky Concert Series. At 8 o'clock that evening at the high school gymnasium, concert series subscribers will hear the man to whom nearly every honor in modern music has been accorded.

Along with Duke Ellington, the Count is perhaps the only other big band great to keep his band intact while remaining at the peak of the modern music scene for more than 30 years. Since first coming to national prominence in 1938 with a then-new kind of "jump rhythm," Basie and his band have consistently been hailed by both critics and jazz purists, as well as by a wide and loyal following on both sides of the Atlantic.

Besides winning Downbeat's critics' poll for four consecutive years in the 50's, the Count was named one of the "Top Five" in 1968 by Downbeat and Playboy magazines, and was named to Playboy's Hall of Fame in 1969. Among his firsts is that he and his group were the first Negro band ever to play at the Hotel Lincoln and the Roxy Theatre in New York. Back in 1942 Basie and his band made their movie debut along with newcomer, Frank Sinatra. Twenty-three years later, the Count, who has headlined every major jazz festival, and Sinatra played the Newport Jazz Festival where the demand for them was so great, the concert was held over, and just last year they appeared in a special concert in London. After touring England in April, he headlined a tour in Germany with Ella Fitzgerald.

the many times the trooper is more kind than stern, and so on.

I agree with him. Familiarity in this case would not breed contempt, and it might make better citizens.

Anyway, says Dootney, that's one idea of his that wouldn't cost anybody anything.

LEGALLY DEAD

Wonder if this law is enforced? It's 171 years old and is still stands, unrepealed, in the statute books of the state of New York. Known as Civil Death, it provides that when a man is sentenced to life imprisonment, his marriage is dissolved, his children are no longer recognized as his, and there is no court to which he may take his cause.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

FOLK PSYCHOLOGY

Incidents otherwise puzzling often seem clear when viewed in the light of folklore. A case in point is the Floyd Collins disaster. Many another man has lost his life in a cave or a mine, but somehow no one else has appealed so strongly to the folk imagination as did this otherwise unknown Kentucky cave explorer. The tragedy appealed to all sorts of people, was soon interpreted in several ballads, and within a few years has acquired all the necessary elements to ally it with deeds of Bonnie Barbara Allen or Robin Hood and his merry men.

In spite of education, people are still of the folk when they fear. For a whole afternoon I rowed around in a boat searching for the body of one of my students who had lost his life while trying to save a young woman from drowning. On the seat in front of me lay the clothes of the young man, which had previously been cast into the turbulent river by some well-meaning person in the hope or belief that they would go down where the body was to be found. I need hardly say that the body was not found in this way, but I suspect that the person who tried the experiment will not remember this if fear again comes in this guise.

Scientists have always had trouble in getting a proper hearing for certain quadrupeds, birds, and plants. The pioneer seems to have regarded all nature as for him or against him. If a thing did not yield immediate assistance, it should be destroyed. The snake, for example, was and is only partially bad; most species that live in America are neutral or even beneficial. The terror inspired by the copperhead or the rattlesnake made all snakes venomous; anyway, did not Satan disguise himself in this form, and did not the Lord condemn him to be spurned by the heel of man? The hawks in our own day are a race paying the penalty of a very few species that are predatory. Sometimes one almost despairs of uprooting a prejudice against certain things of nature, so long have men unreasonably condemned whole species unheard.

Why do certain customs persist? For example, why do people continue to practice charms against disease, or death, or the evil eye, or wild animals? In spite of education and science we are still more guided by primitive feelings than by thought. Since all of us are likely to suffer certain ills, there has grown up a body of quackeries and nostrums that staggers belief. The charms of other days, like the assafoetida bag, may not be so plentiful as they were; but patent medicines are enriching their makers because of recurrent ills in humanity and a consequent breakdown of acquired knowledge. Night air is still feared, even though some of the people who pull down their window at night have gone to the trouble to have screens. And though most people take the medicine left by the physician or sent from the drugstore, other remedies, hallowed by memory and usage, are as common as ever. Catnip tea has never lost its popularity; those who have given it to their children probably have not reasoned that some warm water might have done as well. Civilization is, after all, pretty largely a matter of actions and thoughts that are constant and persistent; when we become passive, we unconsciously fall back on folk thinking and folk reasoning.

Columbia Deep Well To Start This Month

A major effort to discover new reserves of natural gas in rock formations deep in the Appalachian area will get under way this month when Columbia Gas Transmission Corporation will start drilling a test well in Harvey district of Mingo county. The well location is 14 miles west of Logan.

W. B. Osbourn, director of exploration and development at the company's Charleston, W. Va. headquarters, said the well will penetrate to the "basement"—the granite layer which is found at depths ranking from 5,000 to 25,000 feet. "Total depth of this well is expected to be 17,000 feet, but it could be as much as 20,000 feet," he said.

The well is projected to be the deepest ever drilled by a Columbia Gas System member in the Appalachian area. United Fuel Gas Company, whose operations were taken over on July 1 by Columbia Gas Transmission, drilled its deepest well to 13,172 feet in Martin county, Ky., in 1959.

Statistics of the new exploratory well are impressive. Its cost is expected to be $1.5 million. Although the drillers will work 'round the clock, it is expected the well's completion will require nine months. The drilling rig, owned by Loffland Brothers Company of Tulsa, Okla., towers 142 feet. The massive rig can support 1.3 million pounds. It is equipped with three diesel engines which produce up to 3,000 horsepower.

The objective is for the well to probe to the Rome-Tomstown-Basal sandstone formation. The drilling bit on the way down into the earth will uncover possibility of producing gas from these formations also: Corniferous, Big Six, Clinton, Trenton, St. Peter, Beekmantown, Rose Run and Copper Ridge.

Mr. Osbourn said that only about 11 per cent of the potential gas-bearing formations in the Appalachian Basin have been explored since the first well was drilled in the Basin over 100 years ago. He added that the Basin extends from upper New York to northern Alabama and from eastern Ohio to western Virginia. It covers some 100 million acres.

He added that the data produced by well drilling and seismographic studies justifies deep drilling for gas reserves. The effort by his company is part of an overall program by Columbia Gas System to find large reserves in the Appalachian area.

Mr. Osbourn said the cost of drilling a well to an average depth of 3,200 feet in the Appalachian area may cost about $50,000 and be accomplished in from eight to 10 days. Pressures on most shallow wells register below 1,000 pounds per square inch. A deep well could easily encounter between 5,000 and 10,000 pounds of formation pressures.

Osbourn said the regular drilling program of Columbia Gas Transmission's Charleston Group, exclusive of the deep well, will cost more than $3.8 million this year. The company plans to drill approximately 53 wells. In addition, to encourage drilling by independents, Columbia will assign some acreage to others, participate in joint ventures and provide other incentives.

Columbia Gas Transmission-Charleston Group will drill 28 wells in West Virginia, nine in Kentucky and 16 in Virginia. West Virginia's share of the program will be $2,193,000, Kentucky's $481,000 and Virginia's $1,207,000.

Drilling will be done in the following counties: West Virginia—Jackson, Kanawha, Mingo, McDowell, Wyoming, Raleigh and Wood; Kentucky—Lawrence and Pike; Virginia—Buchanan, Dickenson and Tazewell.

Some of the wells have already been drilled or drilling is under way. In addition to the drilling program, the company's

FAMILY REUNION HELD

The reunion of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Howard was held August 28-29 at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Alberta Bolding, at Warren, Indiana. Among those attending were Mrs. Bolding, husband, Bud, and sons, Danny and Jeff, and daughters, Bonnie, Brenda, Rita, Glenna and Lisa; Garry and Margie HMoward and sons, Tim, Kelly, Robin, and daughters, Sandra and Trena, of Swanton, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Lee Whitt, of Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Howard are on vacation, visiting their daughters in Warren, Indiana and Marion, Ohio and their son in Swanton, Ohio. They recently spent two weeks with their other son at Flemingsburg, Kentucky.

The Federal Wage Garnishment Law (Title III of the Consumer Credit Protection Act) protects employees from discharge because of a garnishment against their wages for a single debt and guarantees them at least $48 of disposable earnings in a week before any deduction for garnishment may be made. If an employee's disposable earnings are more than $64 in a week, no more than 25 percent of those earnings may be garnished.

Charleston Group plans to install 22.1 miles of field lines to gather gas produced by the wells. They will cost $402,500.

"Columbia Gas Transmission-Charleston Group has 3,939 producing gas wells," Mr. Osbourn said. "These wells and the gas purchased from local producers' wells provide the company and its affiliates with about 14 per cent of the gas they need. The other 86 per cent is purchased from South-west suppliers."

Two-County Waste Disposal Program Gains ARC Approval

Hopes for an effective solid waste disposal program for Floyd and Pike counties brightened recently with the approval by the Appalachian Regional Commission of preliminary plans for the two-county project.

Next on the long road to a workable disposal program for the two counties will be a study which will involve engineering, selection of central landfill sites, determining equipment needed and, generally, converting plans into actual monetary costs. This may require another year, it was said, but officials are hopeful some parts of the program can be activated earlier than that. The basic plan, which subsequently was changed, was prepared by Spindletop Research, Lexington. Kentucky Program Development personnel and the Big Sandy Area Development office have figured prominently in the work, along with county and health department officials.

It is expected that a waste disposal district will be organized for the two counties. There are five counties in the Area Development District, and it is possible other counties may later be included in the waste disposal program.

Kentucky Offers Traveler Multitude of Attractions

From the rugged crags of the Daniel Boone National Forest in the east to the prodigious lake country of the west, Kentucky stretches 396 miles. From the riverfront of Covington-Newport in the north to the historic origins of Cumberland Gap on the southern border, the Commonwealth extends 170 miles.

These boundaries enclose mid-America's favorite playground, within a day's drive for 110 million Americans in 22 states. In 1970, more than 34 million persons came to Kentucky.

State Park facilities and private enterprise have developed attractive resorts, recreation areas, and tourist facilities second to none in America. Two bright, new state resort parks opened this summer. Greenbo Lake State Resort Park's lodge, with its substantial Norman arches spanning a facade of native stone, is in the rolling hills of Greenup county, 14 miles west of Ashland on Ky-1. In sharp contrast are the stark, angular lines of the second new lodge at Barren River Lake State Resort Park, overlooking the lake, 13 miles south of Glasgow on US-31E. These two new resorts join 13 other such parks throughout the Commonwealth in providing the traveler with tastefully appointed rooms, menus featuring authentic Kentucky dishes, planned recreation programs, fishing and aquatic sports. The 15 state park lodges and cottages provide 1,041 rooms to the vacationing public.

Diversity is a byword in Kentucky's parks. Compare the broad lake vista Lake Barkley lodge with underground wonders of Bat Cave in Carter Caves State Resort Park, of the ghostly moonbow at Cumberland Falls, the only one visible in the western hemisphere. At Breaks Interstate Park, perch on the rim of the largest canyon east of the Mississippi; follow Daniel Boone's footsteps through Fort Boonesborough State Park; trace the last battle of the Revolutionary War at Blue Licks; camp in General Burnside State Park on Chandler Island in 110-mile-long Lake Cumberland; or examine the first issue of "The Birds of America," painted by Kentucky's first naturalist-artist, at John James Audubon State Park in Henderson.

Kentucky offers enough recreation facilities for just about anybody, depending on how much energy he or she wants to expend. Thirteen parks have golf courses, and many private courses across the state are open to visitors. Other park facilities include swimming, boating, tennis, horseback riding, and hiking.

One or two Western-style resorts like Tombstone Junction, not far from Cumberland Falls, feature "shoot-outs" acted out on a regular schedule, and take visitors for a train ride complete with hold-up men. Hidden Valley, a "dude ranch" near Clay City, offers the traveler a choice of attractions ranging from a 9-hole golf course to rodeos.

There's plenty of summer theater. Kenlake, Kentucky Dam Village and Jenny Wiley State Resort Parks offer a variety of outdoor dramas and musicals. Long-running dramas such as "The Book of Job" at Pine Mountain State Resort Park, Pineville, and "The Stephen Foster Story" at My Old Kentucky Home State Park, Bardonia, and "The Legend of Daniel Boone" at Old Fort Harrod State Park, Harrodsburg, draw nightly crowds all summer. Pioneer Playhouse, Danville, presents Broadway plays at a dinner theater and offers other attractions such as camping and motorcycle trails.

For the vacationer who happens to be concerned with ecology and conservation, or who simply enjoys a natural wooded area with no commercialization, there is the huge Land Between the Lakes in the Western Waterland. This 170,000-acre wooded isthmus, separating Lake Barkley and Kentucky Lake, is being developed by the Tennessee Valley Authority—at a cost of $35 million—into a demonstration of how to use a region's resources to the best advantage for recreation and conservation.

With this multitude of attractions it is no surprise that State and privately-owned tourist facilities brought nearly $542,000,000 in travel receipts into Kentucky in 1970—a figure that promised to grow even higher in 1971 as Kentuckians and their traveling guests continue to Re-discover Kentucky.

Landmark Designation May Protect Woods

Lilley Cornett Woods, in Letcher county, has been added to the National Registry of Natural Landmarks.

The announcement was made in Washington by Interior Secretary Rogers C. Morton.

Now owned by the state, Lilley's Woods is thought to be the only surviving virgin timber forest of significant size in the Cumberland Mountains.

Botanists estimate some 100 species of trees grow in the woods, many up to 400 years of age.

Landmark status will not guarantee the forest any special protection, a federal spokesman said, but may be of help if the tract is ever threatened.

Officers Keep Eye on Drivers During Holiday

With an assist from the weather, Labor Day week-end traffic kept Floyd county roads literally hot, with hundreds of out-state cars joining in the vehicle parade. Yet not a major highway accident was recorded.
 Officers kept a watchful eye on the roads and their users, and 13 had been jailed as of Labor Day morning on traffic counts, most of which were drunk driving. At that time more than 40 persons had been booked at the county jail on a variety of charges, with whiskey or beer involved in most of them.
 Those booked, charges against them and names of arresting officers follow:
 Magdalene Phipps, shoplifting, arrested here by Chief of Police Bill Potter and Policeman Lonnie Herald; Robbie Johnson, drunk driving and no operator's license, by State Trooper Williamson; Homer Hall, reckless use of a deadly weapon, by Trooper A. Cantrell; Larry Tackett, false information, by Conservation Officer Dalton R. Conley; Ronald T. Hall, drunk driving; Calvin Tussey, Jr., drunk driving and no operator's license, by State Trooper Stansbury; Rondell L. Steele, drunk driving, by Deputy Sheriff Sollie Holbrook and Trooper Stansbury, also held for Knott county on a hit-run charge; Ronnie Boyd, drunk driving and no operator's license, by State Trooper Williamson; Joe Johnson, and Scott D. Stamper, each charged with drunk driving, arrested by Deputy Sheriff Orville Nelson; Harley Gene Coleman, possessing alcoholic beverages, by Deputy Sheriff James Puckett; Arie Hamilton, drunk driving, by State Trooper Williamson; Ronald Ousley, drunk driving, by State Trooper Stansbury; Danny Osborne, drunk driving, by State Trooper Williamson; Chester Burke, Gene Johnson and Boyce Fraley, each for fishing without license, by Conservation Officers Cantrell and Prater; James E. Vance, drunk driving, by State Police Lt. VanHoose; Edgar Williams, no operator's license, by Constable Gillis Conn; Gordon Porter, drunk driving and carrying a concealed deadly weapon, by State Trooper Stansbury; Kennie Hall, drunk driving, by Wheelwright Policeman Harold Johnson.

FRANKFORT, KY.—Laws and regulations governing the fish and wildlife field were designed to protect and perpetuate fish and wildlife resources of the state while at the same time allowing the hunter and the fisherman, the photographer and the viewer the pleasures of their favorite pursuits.
 Not one law, so far as we can determine, was made for the persecution of an individual or groups of individuals. Rather they all were enacted so that animals and birds might be protected and along with them their counterpart, the species homo sapiens, many of which like to hunt and fish, and enjoy the great out-of-doors in its entirety.
 Most hunters and fishermen, we believe, feel pretty much the same way about those trusted with making the rules and regulations governing wildlife. That's why it is so difficult to understand why such a great number of persons are arrested each year for hunting or fishing without a license or with an improper license.
 For instance a surprising statistic was revealed in the July monthly report of the Law Enforcement Division of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. During that 31-day period a total of 592 persons were arrested. Of that number 404 were arrested on license charges—without licenses or with improper ones.
 To us it is almost inconceivable that so many persons would risk being arrested. To prevent such a charge being filed against them a mere $5 would guarantee that they could fish or hunt for a full year without the embarrassment of an arrest or citation.
 The July report prompted a check of the types of violations for the six-month period beginning December 1970. This report also was most surprising.
 It showed that about 67 per cent of the persons arrested in that period were cited on license charges. The exact figures revealed that 3752 had been arrested on all counts, and that 2500 of that number had been arrested for license irregularities.
 During April the greatest number of arrests were made, with 1339 being cited into the courts. Of that number, 978 were

Nat'l Folk Festival Founder Presented Burl Ives Award

Pikeville, Ky.—The Burl Ives Award, presented yearly for leadership or performance in the folklore field, has gone to Sarah Gertrude Knott, Princeton, Ky., founder of the National Folk Festival in 1933 and festival program director from 1934 until early this year.

She is now program consultant for the festival, which held its 33rd session at Wirt Trap Farm Park, Vienna, Va., recently. (Aug. 26-29)

Dr. Leonard Roberts, Floyd county native who is director of Pikeville College's Appalachian Studies Center and president of the National Folk Festival Association, as festival host, presented the award. Dr. Roberts, author of several collections of mountain folklore of the Appalachian area, also presided at the festival board meeting.

John Whisman, Paintsville, Ky., Kentucky's representative on the Appalachian Regional Commission and vice-president of the National Folk Festival Association, attended the festival and board meeting.

Dr. Roberts said the morning workshops and afternoon matinees attracted 20,000 performers and visitors from the United States and Canada.

Dr. Roberts performed at one of the evening concerts by telling a mountain "tall tale."

About 2,230 jobless or underemployed persons have been trained in four years by the International Union of Operating Engineers, AFL-CIO, under two Labor Department contracts in four years. The Manpower Administration has granted the union another contract, for nearly $1.7 million, to train 810 more persons.

WILDLIFE CHIEF--Arnold L. Mitchell, a career fish and wildlife management man, and a native of Carlisle County, Ky., has been named commissioner of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. Mitchell has been associated with the department since the late 1940's and has been director of the Division of Game Management for 14 years. He resides in Frankfort.

Bailey One of 15 Asked To Take Part In 200th Centennial

Benny Ray Bailey, of Orkney, has been invited to participate in a national conference on youth involvement in the American Bicentennial Revolution celebration. Mr. Bailey was one of 15 young men from across the nation to be invited.

The conference is being sponsored by the American Bicentennial Revolution Commission, which is studying how America can best commemorate its 200th birthday in 1976. The youth conference is being hosted by John D. Rockefeller, III, and will take place in Baltimore, September 7-14.

Mr. Bailey was chosen because of his work with ALCOR, a student work program involving college students from six Eastern Kentucky colleges in work experiences with their own people. He is vice-president of ALCOR, Inc., which is composed of Alice Lloyd, Cumberland, Lees, Hazard Community, Southeast Community and Union Colleges.

The state Department of Education has initiated a long-range study of the Minimum Foundation Program, the 15-year-old program through which the state finances its public schools.

Kentucky's economic outlook is "very favorable" for the coming decade, according to Charles Haywood, chairman of the Governor's Council on Economic Advisers.

Federal Grant To Supply Pay For Bridge Jobs and Troopers

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Louie B. Nunn announced Kentucky's initial share of funds from a $7 million federal program to boost employment will be used for hiring bridge repairmen and extra state troopers.

He said the state already has applied for some $1.4 million under the grant and is awaiting Washington's approval of the application.

The first phase calls for $846,720 in federal funds for 387 new jobs in the state Highway Department to repair bridges and construct low-water fords across the state.

Other funds will go for a new 50-man state police cadet class and the hiring of 63 civilians to replace troopers in giving driver's license exams. Also to be hired are five new technicians for the state police crime laboratory.

The cost of the new positions will be $385,677.

Other funds will be used to hire additional personnel for the School for the Deaf in Danville and the School for the Blind in Louisville.

Governor Nunn said the programs outlined are designed to bring into the work force "those who are the temporary victims of technological change and others who by lack of training or opportunity find themselves out of work."

Legislative Plan May Ease Court Case Overload

The Legislative Research Commission has developed a temporary plan that would ease Kentucky's overloaded circuit court system if adopted by the General Assembly next year.

The plan would reduce circuit court districts from 51 to 19 while increasing the number of judges from 76 to 102.

This would lower the annual caseload from the current 687 per judge to about 500.

According to the commission this would require interpreting the state constitution to permit multi-judge and multi-county court districts.

More Autonomy Asked For Small Ky. Colleges

The people most directly involved with Kentucky's community college system—students, teachers, administrators and advisory board members—have some definite thoughts about how the 14 colleges should be operated.

They see the separate colleges as needing somewhat more autonomy and flexibility of operation than they have had in the past, but recommend that all of the existing colleges—and any others that might be established—remain as units in a single system administered by the University of Kentucky.

That is the substance of a report presented recently to UK President Otis A. Singletary by an advisory committee he named last year to make recommendations on the organization and operation of the statewide system of two-year colleges which by law has been operated by UK since its inception in 1964.

The committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. Roscoe D. Kelley, director of Somerset Community College, came up with more than 20 recommendations ranging from academic rank of faculty members to the titles of college heads, from intercollegiate athletics to the colleges' relationship with other Kentucky institutions of higher education, public and private.

President Singletary said he welcomes the committee report and believes that, with three exceptions, all of the recommendations can be effected—in substance, if not wholly.

Two of the proposals are to be acted upon by the UK Board of Trustees at its next meeting, on September 21. These call for establishing new academic ranks for faculty in the community colleges, and authorization for an advisory committee on faculty privilege and tenure for the college system.

The proposed new faculty ranks are those of instructor, assistant professor, associate professor, and professor in the community colleges. The phrase, "in the community colleges," would be a part of each title. These proposed new ranks would replace the two currently existing ones—instructor and senior instructor.

Also to go before the trustees at their September meeting is a revised "Policy Statement on Community Colleges" drafted by the advisory committee. If approved, it will replace the University's original statement of policy on community colleges, adopted by the trustees almost eight years ago.

In its proposed revision of this policy document, the advisory panel adopts the position that "community colleges now in existence and future community colleges administered by the University of Kentucky continue to be grouped and administered as a community college system. Both the community college system and the University system," the report continues, "should remain under the President of the University of Kentucky and the Board of Trustees."

Another of the committee recommendations is that new community colleges be established only when there are adequate resources to provide minimum staffing requirements.

The advisory group further recommends that UK's community colleges develop "strong relationships" with the state's regional universities, private institutions, and other educational organizations. The committee proposes that community college students be counseled "as completely as possible" regarding the academic requirements of other senior institutions in which they express interest, and stipulates that "community colleges be fully and freely open for the encouragement and recruiting of students by the regional universities and private institutions" as well as by UK at Lexington. "Our primary concern is for the development of students, not institutions," the report declares.

Nature Trails By Rufus M. Reed

Man has always been a re-shaper, a changer and a polluter of his environment. The Scriptures say, "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," but man says, "The earth is mine and I'll use her resources in any way I choose; I'll make my fortune while the good things last."

We of today might as well face the stern reality: Man's policy of using the earth's resources selfishly, greedily and unwisely has brought the human race to the very brink of environmental disaster. The old-line conservationists have been wholly unable to stop the gradual deterioration of our environment, but the young people of today are justly demanding a stop to some of the ghastly practices that have brought us all so close to disaster. We should never blame our young folks for some of their outspoken and rebellious attitudes; they have inherited the awful mess their forefathers have made of the environment and they are now rising up to demand a stop to the destruction and pollution of our good planet earth.

I truly believe the future hope of our earth's survival is with the young people and I think they are going to rise up and demand changes of wrong and destructive practices. I was heartened recently by the many letters of protest from the youth of West Virginia against the cutting of the trees in the national forests. This shows that our young people are wide awake and aware of some of the ghastly things that have been going on in our land. So I say, More power to them! If we leave it up to the old-line politicians to stop waste and pollution, the job won't get done and it'll soon be too late.

While I have a high regard for the hardy pioneers who carved out their destiny in the wilderness of America, I deplore some of the wasteful things they did. Evidently they lacked the vision to see ahead to the future when our timber and other resources would become too scarce and highly valuable. In their day there was an over-abundance of everything—timber, wild game, good soil, plenty of pure water, pure air undefiled by poisonous gases, such as carbon monoxide. So they felt little need to conserve the supply. Perhaps they were moved by the necessity to do things they did; to them crops of corn, potatoes, beans, pumpkins were worth more than timber. I myself can

A Mexican-Spanish edition is in preparation to be used with Mexican Americans who are unable to read Spanish or English.

The Emergency Employment Act of 1971, designed to place 150,000 unemployed people in jobs during the next two years, does not prohibit the re-employment of those who have been laid off regular public service jobs because of fiscal problems at the local level. It is in fact expected that many localities will rehire such employees by virtue of this act.

Study Asks New Aligning Of Workmen's Comp Laws

The results of a recent study by the Legislative Research Commission indicate Kentucky's Workmen's Compensation Laws are in need of a wholesale revision.

Commission Director James T. Fleming reported the need in a memorandum to a special Senate Compensation Study Committee.

He noted the "Special Fund," which finances second injuries and dormant diseases, as being disproportionate in "pay-ins" and "pay-outs."

The memorandum said the coal mining industry pays only about 10 per cent into the fund, while receiving about 90 per cent of the benefits.

It recommended new laws by developed to correct the situation.
