

Court Meet May Decide Waste Plan Collection, Disposal Of Solid Waste Set For Official Study

The Floyd fiscal court will meet Tuesday afternoon to consider a program, the lasting effects of which are designed to reach every corner of the county.

The court will meet with one or more representatives of Spindletop Research, Lexington, and Joseph L. McCauley, executive director of the Big Sandy Area Development District, to review Spindletop's solid waste disposal program as devised for Floyd county, and agreement on the plan could result almost immediately in action to set the waste collection and disposal project into action.

Spindletop reportedly has planned two disposal centers where wastes collected will be buried in the landfill method, but County Judge Henry Stumbo said last week he fears the distance collections would have to be hauled may be too great. It was said Spindletop has planned one landfill on Left Beaver Creek and a second on Middle Creek. Judge Stumbo said he has not conferred at any length with members of the fiscal court but expressed the thought that perhaps a landfill for each magisterial district would be more practicable.

Details of the collection system were not disclosed, but it is possible the court will advertise for bids from individuals who would perform this service. The court also may consider operation of the landfills, using its own machinery to cover waste dumped there.

Pike county recently advertised for bids on waste collection and is expected to have its program in effect soon. Johnson county plans a similar program within a year. The waste disposal program is planned for all counties of the area, which in addition to these three, includes Magoffin and Martin.

Board Approves Plan To Purchase 6 School Buses

The Floyd County Board of Education will add to its fleet of trucks for pupil transportation next year six new buses. The board at Saturday's meeting approved an agreement with the Division of Transportation, State Department of Education, for the purchase.

Two construction order changes also were made Saturday. One provides for central air-conditioning of the new Martin school addition; the other effects a change from carpeting to tile covering for floors of the new McDowell building.

Following the regular board session, a hearing was held in the case of Edwin P. Stewart who had been suspended as principal of the Maytown elementary school. After more than 20 witnesses had been heard, the board in a split vote held that he was officially relieved of his duties as of Oct. 23.

Final payment for the Prater Creek elementary school and for blacktopping at Stumbo elementary and Allen Central high school was authorized, subject to approval of the work by the architect and the State Department of Education.

Other regular session items of business include authorization of advertising the grounds of the old classroom-lunchroom at Betsy Layne for sale and the leasing of the old, abandoned gas well on the Maytown school campus to Roland Burchett for $10 a year.

Non-certified personnel employed included Janice Damron, head bookkeeper for Title I; Vonda Stone, clerk for Title I; (See Story 4, Back Page, Sec. 1)

Up-Hollow Med Care Dream of Floyd Men

Two Floyd county men—an M. D. and a Ph. D.—have pooled their talents, resources and nerve to establish at Malle, on Troublesome Creek, Knott county, a medical clinic to take doctors, nurses and medicine up the hollows to the people they know to be most in need.

The two, Dr. Grady Stumbo and Benny Bailey, both 27, natives of the Left Beaver Creek section of this county and both alumni of Alice Lloyd College at Pippa Passes, are completing at Malle a clinic building which with its appointments will cost upwards of $225,000 dollars. The work is being done without federal aid. Bailey has raised about $140,000 from foundations and believes he can get another $75,000 to finish paying for the construction project.

They expect to receive their first patient at the clinic on New Year's Day. The clinic will be their base of operations as they work to take comprehensive medical care out to those who get least of it.

Bailey will be administrator of the clinic and chairman of the board of the Eastern Kentucky Health Services Center, Inc. Dr. Stumbo will be president of the corporation and medical director.

The two men first got into helping the folks up the hollows in 1969 when they initiated an Appalachian student health project, with the help of others bringing future doctors and nurses into the area. The project so appealed to these future professional men and women that in one year there were 6,000 applications for 170 positions. Sixteen thousand persons received health screening.

And it was found that approximately half of the children entering school had intestinal parasites and that one of every seven had a visual defect.

Eventually, the clinic will have a nursing staff of six. Two registered nurses already are on the job. A dentist and some paramedics will arrive after the first of the year. Another M. D. is scheduled next summer. Others will be hired locally to go up the creeks, teach the people basic health and nutrition and get them into the clinic when necessary.

Those to be served by the clinic will be outpatients—they will not remain overnight. But there they will receive the benefit of sophisticated equipment and the skill of doctors and nurses looking for ways to help. Those needing hospitalization will be sent to the cooperating Our Lady of the Way Hospital at Martin or to other hospitals if the patients choose.

Bailey and Stumbo have gone into debt in their purchase of land for the clinic site and for the building itself, but they aren't going for federal funds. They want to make their dream come true without bureaucratic control. Besides, they figure, they would have to invest $20,000 in surveys and studies to get $100,000 in government money.

Prestonsburg Group Raises Toy Funds

Thanks to a group of Prestonsburg citizens, many of the underprivileged children of this county may enjoy a brighter-than-usual Christmas this holiday season.

A drive to raise funds, called "Operation Santa Claus," seeks to buy new toys for many of the county's poor. A spokesman for the campaign said that there are approximately 1,200 families in Floyd which cannot afford to buy toys for their children.

Involving the Chamber of Commerce and local welfare agencies, the group will distribute the gifts directly to the needy homes. The project has already met with success and between $1,500 and $1,800 was received on the first day after the project started.

All donations should be sent to: Operation Santa Claus, Box 511, Prestonsburg.

Attorneys Here May Take Turns In Defender Role

Kentucky's new Public Defender law may be implemented in Floyd county through use of a pool of attorneys who are willing to participate in the $14,000-a-year program, it was said here following a meeting of members of the local bar last Thursday evening with state Public Defender Anthony M. Wilhoit.

Mr. Wilhoit told attorneys they have a choice of one of two alternatives:

1. Designate and employ one attorney as county Public Defender at a salary of $14,000; or

2. Form a non-profit corporation composed of all attorneys who are willing to participate in the Public Defender program, with all participating lawyers taking turns at serving in the public defender role.

County Attorney James R. Allen said a meeting of the Floyd Bar Association was held Friday and that it appears members favor the second plan.

The new law, designed to provide legal representation for those who are unable to employ an attorney, will supersede the present law which provides no remuneration for court-appointed legal counsel in such cases.

The Public Defender Act provides that $14,000 in state funds is to go to each judicial district. In the case of Floyd county, which comprises a district, the entire $14,000 is available for the handling of Floyd county cases, but in a district of two or three counties the fund would be split among them. Pike county, which comprises two judicial districts, will receive $28,000.

Floyd county's Public Defender plan must be submitted to the state Public Defender by Dec. 29. If he approves it, it will be returned to the fiscal court for its approval. That done, Mr. Wilhoit said, state funds for the program should be received within 10 days. Jan. 17 is the deadline for the program to go into effect.

County Attorney Allen said some members of the bar expressed the feeling that the fiscal court should augment the $14,000 available from the state for this county's program, but it was held doubtful such action will be taken.

When the new program becomes effective, those involved in it will be required to represent pauper cases in all courts of the county, ranging through magistrate and police courts on to quarterly and circuit court.

The law states that any indigent defendant facing at least a six-month jail term or a $500 fine or more is entitled to free counsel. Under a Supreme Court ruling, however, anyone facing a jail term of any length must be represented by counsel and it has not been decided whether these defendants will fall under the Commonwealth's public defender system. Wilhoit said that public defenders will handle juvenile cases.

Although the new program is admittedly better for attorneys than the old, which provided no compensation for their services, there are reservations about it. Few, if any, were satisfied with the naming of one attorney as a public defender at the stipulated salary, because the attorney general has held that one individual so designated may not have any other practice of law.

Serious Charges Few, 32 Booked

Although 32 persons were jailed here within the week, few were booked on serious charges.

One of those booked was Carlos Hall, who was arrested by State Trooper Danny Stumbo on a breaking and entering charge. Others booked included Wallace Tackett, charged with reckless driving and no operator's license, by State Trooper E. B. Allen; Delmas Ross, drunk driving, by Policeman Darrell J. Conley; Bill Stumbo, drunk driving, by State Trooper Stumbo.

Two federal prisoners were brought to the county jail last Friday after their conviction in U. S. district court at Pikeville as violators of the Federal Firearms Act. They are James A. Charles, who was given a two-year pen term, and Harry T. Sloan, whose pen term was set at 18 months.

Slaying of Akers Held 'Justifiable'

This Town . . . That World

It's weather such as this that makes Santa wonder if he should take a coat or a swimsuit. But I confidently predict that by the time this gets into print there'll be a turn for the worse, weatherwise. And I am not going fishing.

YOU NEVER KNOW

The 74 degrees registered here Tuesday recalls the almost daily concerns the farmer has with the weather. He views with alarm the prospect of drought. And if it rains too much there's flood to worry about. Cool weather and the cutworms get busy; too much heat and the leaves shrivel. One tiller of the soil ran into weather such as this of current date and gave himself up to sad repining. "If I'd dreamed it was gonna be this warm," he moaned, "I'd 'a' let them pore little taters growed some more before I dug 'em."

WRONG NUMBER?

On bills received recently from the telephone company was the notation informing customers to call 886-2793 if there was any question about the bill. But the business office number is 886-2783. Could the phone company given a wrong number, or did the blame lie with some dumb printer?

HE WONDERED

After my reference in this column last week to a couple of windbags I knew, I had a visit. The caller wasn't in a huff, but he was curious to know why I stopped at two; insisted, he did, that there were at least three. And, "by Haman," he wanted to know, "why is that everybody I've seen this morning has told me you had written something about me?"

WHY NOT

Senators Mansfield and Aiken may have hit a gusher with their intriguing idea that would put people of a par with petroleum. Since depletion allowances are payments presently given to the oil industry for the reduction of capital value that results from the winding of an asset as it is consumed, the Senators have introduced a bill which would allow an individual to deduct up to $1,000 of their earned income every year in consideration of the "physical, mental and emotional stress" they suffered while growing older. And you wouldn't have to be an oily individual to benefit from it, either.

ASCS County Meet Scheduled Dec. 15

The Floyd County ASC Committee this week invited the public to attend the Floyd County ASCS (Agricultural Stabilization & Conservation Service) county convention to be held at the ASCS office here at 6:30 p.m., Dec. 15.

An individual to serve for a three-year term on the county ASC Committee will be named at the convention by community committeemen elected in mail balloting which ended last Friday. The community committee vote was tabulated yesterday (Tuesday).

Clerk, Sportsmen Say Demand On Licenses To Hurt, Not Help

If the Kentucky Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources insists on fishing and hunting license receipts being remitted to it each month by county clerks, both of Floyd county's fish and game clubs will lose a substantial part of their annual income and sportsmen will suffer inconvenience.

This was the view taken last week by leaders of the fish and game clubs and by County Clerk C. "Ollie" Robinson.

The Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources early last month wrote County Clerk Robinson and other county clerks, warning them to remit fishing and hunting license receipts each month or face the possibility of being fined. The action apparently stemmed from an audit of the department by the Legislative Research Commission.

County Clerk Robinson said that, in accordance with a mutual agreement which has existed over a period of years between the county's fish and game clubs, the Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources and the county clerk, he places the handling of hunting and fishing licenses in the hands of the two clubs and the clubs get the issuance fees—25 cents out of a license up to $5 in cost, 50 cents for a license costing more.

Now, he says, if a monthly remittance must be made to Frankfort, it will be necessary for him to handle license sales himself, costing the two clubs all the fees they collect, since it would be impossible for club officials to go to the 20 points at which these licenses are sold, get them all together, bring them to his office and have the lot sent to Frankfort.

Ky. Police Capt. Says Shots Fired To Save Trooper

A Prater Creek service station operator who defied attempts of state troopers to arrest him on a warrant sworn out by his son was shot and killed early Sunday morning by State Police Capt. Billy Lykins.

The victim, 45-year-old Otis L. Akers, operator of a service station near Banner, died almost instantly of rifle bullet shots in his neck and chest.

An investigation was made by Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo and County Attorney James R. Allen, immediately after the shooting, and the two officials concurred in holding that the slaying was justifiable homicide and that the shots were fired by Capt. Lykins to save the life of a trooper under his command.

The situation which ended in the shooting apparently began developing on the preceding day. Mrs. Emma Lou Boyd Kidd, widow of the victim, told Stumbo and Allen that her husband had been drinking heavily and that he had a shotgun in his possession and had threatened to kill himself. The gun was discharged, and Mrs. Akers was shot in her foot. Her son, Benjamin J. Akers, then procured from Magistrate Denzil Ray Hall a warrant for his father's arrest.

State Troopers Danny Stumbo and Phillip Tucker went to the Akers service station around 2 a.m. Sunday to arrest Akers, taking with them a key to the station which was provided by young Akers. When they

Today's Session Last for Court Till Next Year

The last regular session of the Floyd circuit court for the year ended today (Wednesday) after several major cases had been continued to the January, 1973 term.

Among the cases continued to the January term are those of Mont Robinette and Adrian Burchett, charged with murder, and Eddie Jones and Johnny Martin, both of whom are accused of armed robbery.

Jones' trial was continued last week because he had not been returned here from Indiana. Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo said extradition of Jones to this county was being arranged Monday. The Martin trial was postponed because a material witness was missing.

Four defendants in liquor law violation cases pleaded guilty last week and each drew 30-day jail terms and $20 fines. They are: Percy Dean Johnson, transporting; Lonnie Neeley, Cora Slone and James "Red" Slone, each charged with selling.

After he had pleaded guilty to a shooting and wounding charge, Eugene Akers was sentenced to two years in the state reformatory. Andy Hamilton, who stood trial on the same charge, won an acquittal. Fines of $25 each were assessed of Levi Johnson, Jr., Donny Dale Little, Robert Dean Hall, Joe Stewart and Charles Ray Johnson after they had entered pleas of guilty to the charge of failure to disperse.

WHAT TO DO IN DECEMBER

Lexington, Ky.—"Under the snows of each December lie buds of next year's May, remember. Under the snows lie next year's flowers, and always ahead lie happy hours."

Thus wrote the late nature poet, Douglas Malloch, who, no doubt, was also a gardener at heart and who, when winter closed in as it generally does this month, exchanged the hoe for a pen and kept up his spirits by writing about gardening.

Actually there's not much one can do this month in the way of gardening, but there are some things that can be done to enhance the chance of a better garden in the "happy hours" ahead.

One thing is to remove any thick, tangled weed or grass patch still remaining from last fall. Such a patch makes a snug winter harbor for field mice and hibernating insects. If local ordinances permit, these thickets can be destroyed by burning. If this method is used, however, be sure to choose a windless day and take precautions against the fire getting out of hand. Also before burning, check and remove any preying mantis egg cases that may be present on tall weeds. One certainly wouldn't want to destroy future colonies of these extremely beneficial insects.

Also fruit trees and ornamental shrubs can be checked for cocoons and eggs of insects which may emerge as pests come spring—particularly eggs of tent caterpillars. Close examination of apple or wild cherry tree twigs may reveal small, dark, amber-colored collars of eggs that will hatch into colonies of these leaf-eating pests. The eggs can be removed with a stiff brush or the twigs can be cut away and burned.

Another humane and useful thing a gardener can do is set up feeding stations to attract and sustain birds that will help in searching out and destroying insect eggs and hibernating bugs.

A platform erected in some sheltered spot and kept stocked with table scraps, cracked corn, or commercial wild bird seed, and a piece of suet in a basket made from chicken wire and swung from a tree limb, will do the trick. Don't start this bird feeding, however, if you can't keep it up. Birds soon learn to depend upon this source of food and may starve if it stops. Certainly they will leave and you may have less help with insect problems come spring.

During December, and for that matter, the rest of the winter, more attention should be given to house plants. The failure of indoor plants is most often due to over-watering and poor drainage. Horticulturists wise in the ways of house plants say that while they must have food and drink, wet soggy soil is not to their liking. They recommend a good soaking once a week rather than a small drink every day. The general rule is to apply enough water so that it drips through the drainage hole in the bottom of the pot. The foliage, too, must be kept free of insects such as white scale, spider mites, and mealy bugs. This can be done by applying a commercial insecticide labeled for use against these pests.

And don't forget Christmas which comes in December. Hang a bit of holly in the heart as well as in the house, stand under a piece of mistletoe just in case, burn the worry log in the grate, and as the poet said, remember that sunnier and happier times are ahead.

Christmas As It Was In The Hills

By HELEN PRICE STACY

"Always the night before Christmas we made molasses pull candy and popcorn balls."

Mrs. Sarah Rose Greene, postmaster at Bruin in Elliott county, sat in her home and talked about Christmas during her childhood in a section of Eastern Kentucky noted for its rugged beauty.

"To make popcorn balls, we popped lots of corn in the open fire and boiled molasses in a big iron skillet on the hearth," she said. "It was sticky work, but we loved it. When molasses was cooked to make pull candy we would go outside with a handful of molasses and start pulling it, sometimes using both hands and sometimes pulling the candy with another person until it began to harden in the cold night air."

Molasses taffy could be cut while it still was malleable and be ready to serve visitors during the holidays. Sometimes the taffy got so hard it had to be cracked with a hammer into bite size sections.

Another Christmas Eve tradition in the home of Jeff Rose and his wife, the former Laura Flannery, was the making of ice cream.

"We were always happy with cold weather as Christmas grew near, for if ice hung from the cliffs, the boys would carry great chunks to the house to use in making homemade ice cream in a hand cranked freezer," Mrs. Rose said. "I was raised near a top of the cliff that froze ice for our Christmas dessert."

Any childhood Christmas in the country holds memories of cold mornings on the big day and that rush to inspect stockings hanging from backs of chairs.

Sarah Greene remembers that in her parents' home at Bruin the children pinned two stockings together, then draped them over a high-back chair.

"We always had big peppermint sticks in our stockings, an orange and apples. If we were lucky the boys got pocket knives and the girls rag dolls. I got a china doll once and as I recall it didn't last long."

Mrs. Greene has been postmaster since the death of her husband John Greene in 1954. He had served as postmaster since 1934. The office, she explained, was established in 1850 when Bruin was part of Carter county.

"After Elliott was made a county in 1869, the office was in Elliott," she said. "The post office has been in the Greene family about half the time since it first began."

Mrs. Greene compared the sparseness of holly today with the abundance of Christmas greenery when she was a child. "Back then we could pick holly branches with bright red berries near our house. We used pine to make wreaths and tied clusters of big holly berries in the pine."

Mrs. Greene was asked if her family hung a pine wreath on the door and her reply was, "Yes, but on the inside of the door rather than outside. Visitors were not so common then and with the wreath inside the family could enjoy it. We always hung wreaths at all the windows, too."

The children, she remembered, were up first on Christmas morning when the big fire in the fireplace had not been started and the house cold.

"After we examined our stockings, we went back to bed on thick featherbeds. When we got up later, our parents had a big fire going and the house was warm. Relatives would be coming in for dinner and we children would start running and playing."

"My mother raised and sold turkeys, so we usually had a turkey and chicken for dinner. There would be sweet potatoes and pumpkin pie. Mother always made a gingerbread dried apple stack cake for Christmas and a blackberry cake. She beat egg whites to make a white icing for the berry cake and decorated the top with cinnamon drops. How I loved those red cinnamon drops."

Mrs. Greene said her Christmas memories are happy ones. She is busy six hours a day in the post office and her spare time is spent writing her autobiography. She has 13 grandchildren and is never happier than when her grandchildren and children are home for the holidays.

On the Birth of Christ

The 25th day of December is the oldest holiday known to western civilization. And it is no longer recognized as a day to sacredly remember the birth of Jesus Christ, but to increase business of selling a lot of foolish things that people do not need as well as dangerous toys that might injure children.

In a far-off time and many centuries before the birth of our Savior the ancient people of Persia climbed the "Holy Mount" Orontes, there to salute the rising sun on every twenty-fifth day of December by sacrificing a white horse in its honor as it rose above the purple sage country to the east.

These ancient people had a good reason for this worship. The 25th of December was the earliest they could determine that their prayers were answered. The sun had halted in its journey toward the south and soon would return to warm up the valley of the Euphrates, spreading its loving, warm beams upon them. It was, indeed, a great blessing to people who had not yet learned to make shoes.

Some say it doesn't make any difference whether our Lord was born on December 25th, since we are changing holidays and that no date of Christ's birth is given in the Bible. The latter statement is in error. The birthdate of our Savior can be determined through a study of the prophet Daniel's 70 weeks and the three and a half years of Christ's ministry.

Space here will not permit me to go into full explanation of this important Scripture. Besides, there are people in Floyd county who can explain it to anyone who is interested, and we should all be interested.

He Was Built That Way

Pa was a man so gentle and kind,
He raised us 12 children, working in a coal mine;
Life wasn't to easy with so many to feed,
We had clothes to wear and most of what we need.
He worked day or night for such little pay,
We all loved our good dad, he was built that way.

Every one knew him as a good neighbor and friend,
He lived his life that way until the very end.
If there's trophies given for serving the Lord
I am sure our father would have won the award.
When God called on him he was ready to pray,
It was no strain-he was built that way

He traveled for miles to shake people's hands,
His sermons came from God when he stood in the stand;
For a better man no one could ask for,
He did all he could and wanted to do more.
He had love in his heart, so I've heard people say-
We all knew that he was built that way

He told me one day he didn't dread to die,
It was all I could do to hold back the cry
I couldn't bear the thought of letting him go
And held back my feelings and didn't let them show.
He didn't mean to upset me, I can truthfully say-
We all knew he was built that way.

He crossed mountains to work in a dark coal mine,
To support his family with a willing mind;
He worked on his knees, sometimes in pain,
He was a sick man but he never complained.
He didn't want sympathy, he just wanted his pay
To support his family he was built that way.

We all loved our dad like every good family should,
We couldn't feel otherwise because he was so good,
He loved the church he helped build with his heart and soul;
Before he left us he achieved that goal.
God took him from us, he's in heaven today,
He's resting in peace-he was built that way.

How To Make Difficult Decisions

At some point in his or her life every person has to make some difficult decisions. It is human nature to try to avoid difficult decisions. But we can avoid them only so long. Then we have to decide.

One help in making difficult decisions that I have found is to discuss the situation with God. His wisdom is far greater than mine. So I ask His advice when faced with difficult decisions.

Another thing that I have found to be helpful in making difficult decisions is to study all the different alternatives and possibilities. Sometimes I have found possibilities I had not thought of prior to making a serious study.

Then, in making difficult decisions, I try to make sure that the decision is motivated by love. In the Old Testament there is a story about Hosea and Gomer. Hosea married Gomer, but Gomer was unfaithful to him. Faced with the difficult decision of divorcing Gomer or taking her back, Hosea took her back. He broke the established tradition of his day. He made his decision because of his love for Gomer.

Many times, before making a difficult decision, I get the opinion and advice of some very close and trusted friends. It has been said: "Two heads are better than one." A lot of the time that is true. Often a friend, looking at the choices we are faced with, can have a clearer view of the choices.

But after one has done all these things, there comes the time when he is forced to decide. So, when faced with difficult decisions, I decide. I try not to unnecessarily prolong my decision. I'm reminded of the man, when asked for a decision, replied: "Yes, an' no, an' mebbe, an' mebbe not." Well, he had a lot of possibilities but no decision.

After I have made my decision, I try to go at it with the best I have. A decision is of little use unless it is followed with action. And it isn't much of a decision if you keep worrying whether or not you have made the right decision.

I don't always expect everyone to agree with me on my decision. If fifty people are faced with a difficult decision, you might have fifty different responses. I try to make the best possible decision I can. If someone doesn't agree, then that is their opinion.

And, finally, I don't expect every decision I make to be the correct one. If I make a mistake, I try to be big enough to admit it and change it. If I fail to do that, then I'm the one who will suffer.

Maybe this will help a little, the next time you are faced with a difficult decision.

Working At Med Center Still Goes On

Some 2500 visitors from Floyd and surrounding counties and even other states viewed the new Highlands Medical Center at its recent dedication as a blessing... "the most fruitful harvest of Auxier Bottom." It gleamed in its newness. Clean, shiny, sparkling in contrast to its bleak winter hillside setting. That contrast was the product of efforts of the staff, some pictured here as they worked. It was a beehive of activity before the dedication, and it still is as opening date nears.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE
By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D

"Ignorance or Regionalism?"

If some enterprising business group would take a long look at such distinctive regional magazines as YANKEE, they might make themselves a good many honest dollars and also do a lot toward chronicling the things that are distinctly Kentucky in flavor. This magazine, now a good many years old, features articles on every sort of New England business, present and past. The appealing phases of the business are presented, old legends pertaining to it are searched out, appropriate pictures, new and old, are used as illustrations. And, probably best of all, there is no effort to make New England, now or formerly, anything but New England. It is a land of many backgrounds, like our own Kentucky; and the writers who have made the magazine are trying to present a true picture of their subject. It is not all rosy, either, for some of the most gruesome tragedies of all time are of New England origin; the magazine presents the typical New Englander, too, for there is and has been such a character since early days, a person not to be confused with any one from elsewhere.

Kentucky has long had a lot of notice from outsiders, but I have resented much of it, for the outsiders came to find queer things, and often, if they did not find them, they manufactured a few. As a result, Kentucky really has two images: one is of the aristocrats of long standing, with palatial homes and a regular array of servants and fine horses; the other is of poverty-stricken people who live up a hollow and make a bit of moonshine on the side unless that seems too much work and the family is living on the dole. Certainly there are persons like both of these types, but the whole number does not represent a very large portion of the population. So far only these two types seem to sell well; hence even insiders trot them out pretty regularly for the delight of the outsiders who want Kentuckians to be good show pieces. Fortunately, some of our insiders deal honestly with our types, even the most ornery ones. In fiction, in feature articles, in folkish columns, these few honest-to-goodness interpreters present Kentucky, not a caricature of it and not a glorified picture either. I can't name all of them and would not attempt to do so, but here are a few real interpreters who have done their best to give a truthful picture of us: in magazine articles, Fetterman and Caudill; in fiction, Stuart, James Still, Mrs. Giles. They are samples of writers who could and do lend a flavor to anything written about Kentucky. Joe Creason, in his inimitable column, knows Kentucky at first hand as probably no other person has ever known it. Every county in the state is his province, and he fairly bristles with genuine anecdotes and stories that have come from everywhere. This is his chatty side, his column philosophy. And then, like the others that have been named, he has done an enormous amount of research into Kentucky affairs, so that a newspaper article of his represents a perfect mine of information and that information presented in a very attractive style.

A feature of YANKEE as a regional magazine is its advertisements. They, too, are flavorful and as New England as baked beans and codfish balls. All over America are people who have as a hobby the collecting of some formerly used gadgets of our civilization; in a single issue of the magazine you can find literally hundreds of suggestions for starting a hobby if you do not already have one. Antiques, folk art, dodads and thingamajigs—name it and find it in YANKEE. Not all these hobbyists are confined to New England, either; for some of the farthest, places like to call attention to their specialty in hobby-life. Besides these, there are New England places advertised, so that a single issue will tell you of dozens of places where you might want to spend a vacation of stay for a day or two: mountain places, seaside places, historical places, scenes of famous folk events. The whole magazine is a cross-section of New England life past and present, with no apology for its being New England and no effort to Hollywoodize the whole region.

Ky. Death Toll
12 Over Holiday;
Down 6 From '71

The post-weekend death of a Hart county man previously listed as injured in a single car accident on Thanksgiving Day has raised the holiday week-end traffic toll in Kentucky to 12 persons.

State police spokesman, earlier press reports putting the holiday fatality toll at 15 persons were incorrect, apparently because that count included the deaths of four persons who died in a head-on collision in Trimble county several hours before the holiday week-end officially began.

The official count began at 6 p.m., Wed., Nov. 22 and ended at midnight, Sun., Nov. 26.

As compared with the Thanksgiving Day week-end in 1971, the official count this year now stands at six fewer deaths.

State police said that single car accidents accounted for seven of the deaths reported, while two others died in multi-car crashes. The remaining three victims were pedestrians.

All but one of the victims were killed within their home counties. The sole exception was a 20-year-old male from Fairborn, Ohio who was found dead at the scene after his car ran off the road in Morgan county and struck a telephone pole.

Only two of the holiday deaths occurred on Kentucky's interstate system. One involved a pedestrian who was struck by a passing car on the Bluegrass Parkway near Lawrenceburg and died enroute to the University of Kentucky Medical Center at Lexington.

The other victim, identified as Angela Hall Craig, 26, of Shelbyville, was killed on I-64 in Shelby county when her car ran into the rear end of a truck. State police said she was the oldest person to die on Kentucky highways that week-end. The youngest was James Larry Goodwin, 16, of Philpot, who was listed as a pedestrian fatality.

State police also reported investigating a total of 478 other traffic accidents during the long week-end. Motorists charged with drunken driving totaled 114. In addition, the troopers cited another 1583 drivers for other moving violations such as speeding and reckless driving.

The holiday week-end death toll brought the fatality count in Kentucky to 997 persons, as compared with 907 on the same date on year ago.

Senate Group Lauds Child Welfare Work

Frankfort, Ky.—The state Department of Child Welfare's "coordinated approach" to attacking juvenile delinquency has drawn praise from the U. S. Senate Subcommittee to Investigate Juvenile Delinquency.

For the past year the subcommittee has been reviewing programs for youthful offenders throughout the country in its efforts to draft a national juvenile justice bill.

The Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1972, which was drafted by the subcommittee and introduced during the last session of Congress, contained many components similar to Child Welfare's community-based treatment program and Kentucky juvenile justice legislation adopted by the 1972 General Assembly.

But the bill was not voted on and the subcommittee is currently redrafting the measure for introduction in the next session of Congress. Child Welfare Commissioner Evans Tracy, however, said he understands any changes in the bill will only involve technical matters like funding procedures and the subcommittee will continue to use Kentucky's programs as a model in redrafting the legislation.

In a letter to Tracy requesting more information on the department's delinquency programs, Mathea Falco, staff director and chief counsel for the subcommittee, said after reviewing programs throughout the country, the subcommittee was "impressed with the coordinated approach of the Kentucky Department of Child Welfare to the problems facing juvenile delinquents."

"Particularly noteworthy," Mrs. Falco added, "is the flexibility in your administrative structure which allows children, whether abused, neglected or delinquent, to receive the full benefits of Child Welfare programs."

Tracy said Kentucky is the only state in the nation which has all its child planning and caring activities assembled under one cabinet level agency. He said this structure is "greatly responsible" for enabling Child Welfare to offer a coordinated approach and avoid fragmentation of programs.

Besides citing the administrative structure of the department, Mrs. Falco said the subcommittee found "commendable" Child Welfare's emphasis on community-based prevention programs which allow children to remain in their own homes or in a family-like setting such as in a group home or foster home.

Commenting on the department's development of day-treatment programs at some of the residential treatment facilities throughout the state, she said this "makes maximal use of resources while also providing effective services to young people."

Child Welfare currently has a day-treatment program in operation at the Kentucky's Children Home in Jefferson county and Tracy said the department has plans to change at least two other residential treatment facilities into day treatment centers.

Our Most Colorful Birds

My purpose in writing this series on our most glamorous birds is to stimulate a greater interest in studying birds and giving them more adequate protection. If all the birds were destroyed, human and animal life could not exist more than a few years at the most, since insects would multiply at such a fast rate they would destroy everything on this earth. We still need more knowledge in general as to the value of the bird predators, the owls and hawks. A lot of men will grab a gun to shoot an owl or a hawk on first sight, but this is a great mistake. These predators help to control the rodent populations and keep them in proper balance. The barn owl, for instance, is the greatest eater of mice known. Rodents, such as mice and lemmings, are inclined to have population explosions at intervals; so we need the hawks and owls to help keep them in check.

BIRDS OF HIGH COLOR

The cardinal is a brilliant red all over—the only all-red bird that sports a crest. To view the cardinal against a background of winter snow brings out the sharp contrast of color. This bird's call is familiar to most ruralists; it is a quick, sharp "chip," but the bird is usually too cold to sing in winter. The earliest date I heard a cardinal begin to sing a few bars of his whistled tune was on February 8. From then on, he begins to gather steam for his fine lyrics, which are varied from time to time, as some seem to say: what-cheer, cheer-cheer, or whoit, whoit, whoit. Farmers say he predicts rain by his whistles of wet-year—wet-year.

The cardinal's bill is red and sports a black border around its base and he wears a black bowtie. This is one of our few nonmigratory birds and should be fed in winter when snows cover up the grain and seeds. Two of his choicest foods are sunflower seeds and cracked corn. Nubbins of corn with small grains can be hung up on wires to help in the bird's diet. The cardinal, state bird of more states than any other, got its name from the cardinal (scarlet) robes the church dignitaries wore. The cardinal is a bird of elegance and dignity and deserves better protection. These birds often nest in low shrubbery and their young are frequently destroyed by cats. Please protect the cardinal.

The Baltimore Oriole, a bird with fiery orange and black, is dressed in the family colors of the famous family of Lord Baltimore, from whom it derives its name. The male is resplendent in his glowing orange breast, in sharp contrast to the shiny black head and neck. The tail is black, adorned with orange spots at the corners. The black wing is crossed by a single white bar.

Baltimore orioles are noted for their expert craftsmanship in nest-building. Their nest is a "Christmas stocking" suspended from an overhanging limb; it is expertly stitched and sewn to the limb, and no storm wind can dislodge it. The abandoned nest may hang on the tree limb for years after its use.

The Baltimore oriole is not abundant in our region, but may often be seen on spring migration. It is a thrilling sight to see the handsome male all dressed up in courtship colors. The bird is mainly an insect eater and renders a valuable service to the gardener.

The American Redstart, tiny extrovert of the bird world, is perhaps the most popular and sought after of all the small warblers. Its name should be literally "redstart," which means "fire-tail," as the bird's orange tail glows like a livid flame. It has the same color pattern as the Baltimore oriole—orange and black. It has large orange patches on its tail and orange spots on the wings. The belly is white. It is sometimes called "the butterfly of the bird world;" it seems aware of its flashy colors and takes advantage of every opportunity to display them to any interested observer. It spreads its wings and flutters and opens its tail like a fan, to give a good view of the orange markings. Its antics are amusing to watch and seem to say: "Look at me! I'm all dressed up as pretty as can be." Like most of the flashily dressed birds, the redstart is rated as a poor songster; its little ditty seems to say: teetsie, teetsie, teetsie, teet, and that you will agree is not much of a song. The bird seems too busy displaying its brilliant colors to attend to its chore of singing.

New books received from the Kentucky Department of Libraries:

"Champion Cats of the World," by Catherine Ing. For comprehensiveness and sheer elegance no other book approaches this collection of the finest examples of the world of cats.

"Destination Mars," by Martin Caidin. This fact-filled and fascinating book demonstrates how much we already know and are still learning about Mars.

"A Health Unto His Majesty," by Jean Plaidy. A romantic novel of the lusty, yet elegant days when England called Charles Stuart back to his kingdom.

"Let's Get Well," by Adelle Davis. In simple, nontechnical terms, backed by medical references, Miss Davis reviews the scientific literature indicating that recuperation can be hastened by the proper selection of natural foods and the use of dietary supplements.

"Vida," by Bill Libby and Vida Blue. Here is an inside look at the baseball rookie who became an overnight sensation and a legend in his time.

Johnson Countian Sentenced 2 Years On Gun Control Act

U. S. Attorney Eugene E. Siler said last week that a federal jury at Pikeville returned a guilty verdict Nov. 28 on each of two counts of an indictment charging James Arthur Charles, Boons Camp, Johnson county, with violations of the Gun Control Act of 1968.

Charles, 47, was charged with possession of an unregistered explosive device which did not have a serial number as required by the Gun Control Act.

The charges were the result of the planting of an explosive device outside the door of the residence of Sam Conley, Jr. at the Paintsville Housing Project last February 2. Mr. Conley was able to snuff out the fuse on the device before it detonated. Found alongside the device was a printed note saying, "You will be sorry you live here." Mr. Conley testified he had found three different-caliber cartridges around his home on earlier occasions. On one occasion Mr. Conley testified that he found another note wrapped around a .357 caliber cartridge which contained the hand printed words, "In case you're wondering I have more of the same and you are on my list."

The last witness called by prosecutor John M. Compton, assistant U. S. attorney, was a handwriting expert from the crime laboratory of the Treasury Department. The expert witness compared the hand-printing on the two notes with hand-printing samples of the defendant, James Arthur Charles, given on order of the court following a prosecution motion for the defendant to furnish such samples. The handwriting expert testified that after the comparison he had reached a positive conclusion that Charles had written the threatening note attached to the cartridge and the note found alongside the explosive device.

The jury of eight women and four men deliberated 30 minutes before returning the guilty verdict.

U. S. District Judge H. David Hermansdorfer imposed a sentence of two years on each count, with the sentences to run concurrently.

S. and its allies in Southeast Asia and the Far East. He previously served at Luke AFB, Ariz., and has completed a 10-month tour in Vietnam.

The sergeant was graduated in 1955 from Prestonsburg high school. His wife is the former Brenda B. Welch, of England.

Hardin Receives Clean-Up Award

Elizabethtown, Ky.—If there seems to be less litter and fewer junked cars along roadsides in Hardin county, it's for one reason—Hardin counties have worked at it. And the work has paid off.

The combined efforts of civic organizations, local industry and state government to clean-up and beautify Hardin county has won them Keep America Beautiful, Inc.'s 1972 County Award—the only one given in the nation.

"Hardin county has won the award as the result of the work of its many great citizens," said Mrs. Mary Sprauge, chairman of the Hardin County Environmental Council.

A group of Hardin county citizens brought together by the Elizabethtown and Hardin County League of Women Voters, the Chamber of Commerce, and the County Judge's office, the council serves as a coordinating and promoting agency through which industry, government, public and private organizations work to solve common environmental problems.

Using the theme "Caring How We Live and Breathe," the Council this year sought to promote countywide environmental interest through a 44-item series of activities.

Among the items achieved by the Hardin County Environmental Council were:

1. A county cost survey of illegal dumps, junkyards, abandoned cars and unsightly premises; manhours and cost of clean-up were detailed.
2. A solid waste survey, conducted with the state Department of Health, to determine the percentage of residents having no sanitation pick-up.
3. A spring clean-up conducted by individuals, civic clubs and various youth groups around the county.
4. Some 125 abandoned automobiles and 60 loads of trash removed from a five-block area by 175 voluntary workers.

The list of achievements was sent to William Jacobs, director of Clean-up and Beautification in the state Department of Natural Resources, and with his support and interest, appeared before Gov. Wendell Ford.

The result was Hardin county's nomination, along with two other areas in Kentucky, for the national award, and ultimately, the winning of that award on the county level.

EXPLANATION

The Times has been asked to explain that the Bill Stumbo who was listed last week as having been booked at the county jail on a charge of auto theft is not the man of the same name who lives on Middle Creek.

COMPLETES BASIC

Ft. Knox, Ky.—Pvt. Kenneth W. Little, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Little, Melvin, Ky., recently completed eight weeks of basic training at the U. S. Army Training Center, Armor, here. Pvt. Little received training with Company C, 13th Battalion, 4th Brigade.

CHILDHOOD, CRITICAL TIME

The new doctrine for early childhood education, which became popular in the 1960's and paved the way for Head Start, is based on the theory that intelligence is not fixed at birth, but grows in interaction with the objects and circumstances in the young child's environment.

Pike Coal Firm Makes Defense

Ousley-Ackerman

PIKEVILLE, Ky.—The attorney for Kentland-Elkhorn Coal Corp. filed a brief Monday in federal court in the government's case against the company for pollution of Fishtrap Reservoir.

In the brief, attorney John Stephens contended the government must show the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River at the reservoir is a navigable waterway and that they have the burden of proof.

Stephens said "We contend it is not."

In the second part of the brief concerning black water and other sediment, the coal company contends it is not of an appreciable degree to cause degradation of the water quality. Kentland says the government must prove the increased sediment is more than what the reservoir was designed to accept.

The attorney indicated that under the River and Harbors Act of 1889, there is an exception for run off from sewers and streets. "We contend, since the government proof in the case heard two weeks ago did not show any more than that, consequently we come under the exception because any black water comes from run off on the roads," Stephens said.

The government in its case said coal was washing into the water between the tipple and the head house and along the railroad tracks and roadways.

Teater Elementary Dedication Slated

Fifteen years of progress and educational achievement in the Paintsville independent schools will be culminated at 2 p.m. Sunday, December 10, when the district officially dedicates its newest school, the Oran C. Teater Elementary.

The dedication, planned and organized by the members of the Paintsville Education Association (PEA), will specifically honor Superintendent Oran C. Teater for his years of dedicated work and progress in the district.

Highlighting the ceremonies, to be staged at the $710,000 building will be the presentation of a plaque to Superintendent Teater.

The L-shaped, two-story building, the newest and most modern of all Paintsville schools, houses 470 students in grades one through six and a faculty of 15.

It was built through two separate bond issues, one in 1964 and one in 1969, and is in memory of the late Board member, Clarence C. Cooper, who took an active role in the building of the school but was unable to see it completed due to his sudden death.

The first bond issue, for $285,000 saw the building of eight classrooms, while the second construction vote of $425,000 witnessed the completion of the school through four additional classrooms and a lunchroom.

The school also offers such features as a modern teacher's lounge; air conditioning; a full-time band director; a bathroom in each class; art and physical education classes and non-graded team-teaching.

New Ky. Compensation Rates Ruinous to Mines, Is View

When Kentucky's new workman's compensation rates go into effect Jan. 1, the increase will amount to an additional 40 cents for every ton of coal mined, and unless some relief is given the coal industry in Floyd county will be literally wrecked, was the gloomy prediction heard here this week.

Jack I. Branham, head of the Big Sandy Insurance Agency, Martin, who is involved in coal-mine insurance and also with coal-mine problems, said insurance companies aren't sure they can actuarially project the total cost of the new compensation law to the industry. The rate, beginning Jan. 1, he added, will be, roughly, 2.4 times the current rate.

A public hearing will be held Dec. 19 by Insurance Commissioner Harold B. McGuffey, but coal-men see little hope in that. Help will have to come from higher up, from Governor Ford, industry representatives say.

Fred W. Luigart, Jr., president of the Kentucky Coal Association, said the doubleblow—the 30-cents-a-ton coal severance tax and the coming compensation rise—will be too much for many operators to absorb and will force many of them out of business.

Premium increases for both large and small mines will amount to $11.7 million, increasing the total paid insurers from $8.5 million a year to $20.2 million.

The proposed coal schedule calls for base rates of $67.57 for each $100 of payroll for small mines, up from $29.57 per $100, and $48.48 per $100 for large mines, up from $20.08. Some mines might pay more and others less, depending on their safety record.

An alternate schedule calling for a flat $52.52 per $100 for all underground mines will not be considered because it was thought the Federal Price Commission would find it unacceptable.

The new rates are almost always approved automatically after they are filed by the National Council on Compensation Insurance, which represents all companies writing compensation insurance.

Higher rates on industry in general in Kentucky are a result of the state's new Workmen's Compensation Law, which vastly broadens benefits for victims of industrial injuries and diseases.

The National Council's schedule for in-

Said County Attorney James R. Deskins: "We may run into some problems under this system, such as some lawyers not having the training or background to serve in a criminal case."

He also said the county bar association had discussed hiring a clerk to handle the administrative end of the plan. The clerk's salary will "hopefully" be derived from state funds, he said.

Gene Wilson, Lawrence county attorney, said he had "mixed emotions" concerning some aspects of the law.

"It goes against my grain that the Commonwealth would try to prosecute and defend at the same time, and that the law abiding tax-paying public has to pay to have indigents defended," he said.

"Everyone is entitled to representation," he added, "no question about it. But the attorneys' fees around here are not outrageous, and I have not yet met a person who doesn't have a friend or relative who, thinking the defendant has a just cause, can't scrape up a pile of money. And with the society we have today, the indigents are getting large welfare checks, anyway."

Wilson stressed that throughout his law career, justice has come first and the money has been secondary. The Public Defender law, he said, implies that a lawyer is not working to the full benefit of his client unless he has monetary compensation.

The lawyer, a self-admitted conservative, also said he felt local politicians would not agree to take money from other county funds to allow for indigent representation. "If they can't show us where we can get money without taking from another fund, I don't think they will go along with it," he said.

LOST MONEY
Heard the story of the $100 bill that went a hundred miles to market?
Well, it never got back home.

It helped keep a store clerk working, helped keep the doors of a business open, contributed to the tax collections, some of it may even have found its way into a church offering plate.

Some of it may have gone to a distant manufacturer or wholesaler for new merchandise.

But none of it ever came home.
It travelled a hundred miles and got lost in the big city.

"With Help From My Friends"

By BARRI DUNCAN

Frankfort, Ky.—Three people, two men and a woman, sat around the end of a long dining table, finishing bowls of chili and talking about the days that were—days when alcohol was their only source of life, their only companion.

"Can you drive me into town?" one man asked the woman.

"No, I don't have my license," she replied. "Would you believe I never stayed sober long enough to take the test?"

Through the aid of the Kentucky Volunteers of America Half-Way House, operated in cooperation with the regional comprehensive care centers of the state Mental Health Department, these three recovering alcoholics have been able to face their problems and fight them.

The rapidly-expanding program began in 1969 when Volunteer Post Commander Kent Radcliffe decided to take only alcoholics into a Lexington boarding house opened for workers in the Volunteer Thrift Store.

"My primary goal was to create a homelike atmosphere as an alternative to hospitals, jails and dark alleys," said Radcliffe, himself a recovering alcoholic.

The program worked so well that a second Lexington house was opened in November, 1970. Then, when the Thrift Store's income wasn't sufficient to maintain the expansion, the Department of Mental Health joined the effort.

The houses, now six in number, are operated under an affiliation agreement between the regional mental health-mental retardation boards. Volunteers of America manages the houses, each region provides part of the needed funds and the centers handle the clinical responsibility.

"Fortunately for us, Mental Health watched our development and decided to support our program," said Staff Captain William Dunlap, Jr. "Mental Health Commissioner Dr. Dale Farabee made possible our affiliation with the comprehensive care centers because the department saw the need for residential-type programs to supplement existing services offered by the centers."

Operating funds for the houses come from several sources. As of last April, 38 per cent was paid by the clients themselves, with the remainder coming from various grants—29 per cent from the state, 27 per cent from the federal government and 6 per cent from Vocational Rehabilitation.

"The comprehensive care center," said Jim Whitt, director of the Office of Alcoholism in the Mental Health Department, "is the coordinating force for cooperation among many community agents. The centers provide group and individual therapy, psychiatric and other help, such as referral to the Volunteers of America and other organizations."

With adequate financial backing and clinical aid, the volunteers now are concentrating on housing and treatment. Currently they have three houses in Lexington; one each in Frankfort, Ashland and Paducah.

The beauty of the system is its simple rules and philosophy.
"Our one rule is 'Thou Shalt Not Drink,'" said Dunlap. "A person can come and stay as long as he thinks he needs to, as long as he doesn't take even one drink."

The program's philosophy is designed to help the recovering alcoholic meet that rule.

"You have to remember that the alcoholic is a con artist," said Dunlap. "I am a recovering alcoholic myself. An alcoholic can fool me for a while, but I've been there and I know their tricks."

"Besides," he added, "recovering alcoholics have an acute sense of smell. I can detect a vodka martini at 20 feet."

With the benefit of "having been there," house managers approach the alcoholic in a gentle, but firm confrontation. By sharing past experiences, the house manager not only prevents the newcomer from "conning him," but also helps him open up and face his problem.

"Most of these guys are ready to give up booze when they come to us," said Radcliffe. "But they need help. We help them stay sober through association, a method used by Alcoholics Anonymous."

Once the recovering alcoholic is on his feet, he usually finds a job and pays his own room and board, which is about $25 a week.

"Finding a job usually is the individual's decision," said Dunlap. "If a guy is just bumming around the house, the rest of the men will get on him until he tries to find work. And we have contacts to help him."

About 95 per cent of the men in the houses now have jobs.

After finding work, many of the men stay only a few weeks, returning to homes and families. Those who don't have families can stay as long as they want—as long as they don't drink.

"This is another facet that has attracted national attention to our program," said Radcliffe. "Most states have a six-month maximum stay, and the men spend most of that time counting their days."

"Our clientele is a cross-section of American society," Radcliffe pointed out. "We have mountain drunks, one doctor, several lawyers, all kinds. Many have come with only the clothes on their backs. One came in a chauffeured car."

Currently, Frankfort has the only coed house. This basically is because male alcoholics outnumber women four to one, and because women drinkers often are hidden by culture and society.

An estimated nine million alcoholics live in the U. S. and 313 have received help from the Kentucky Volunteers of America so far this year.

"We often are asked about what kind of success we have," said Dunlap. "If success is measured in complete abstinence for the remainder of the alcoholic's life, our rate probably is 10 per cent or less..."

"If it is measured in lengthened periods of sobriety and decreased periods of drunkenness, we have benefited a majority. If success is measured in relief of human suffering, then we have succeeded in every case."

3 Firms To Join In Deep Drilling In Johnson Area

A 9,608-foot exploratory deep test well is to be drilled in northwest Johnson county by three participating companies to develop additional gas reserves, it was said here last week.

The companies and their ownership of the planned well are: Columbia Gas Transmission Corporation-Charleston Group, 31.25 per cent; Whitney Oil and Gas, 18.75 per cent, and Texaco, Inc., 50 per cent. Columbia Gas Transmission will be the well operator.

The well location is on the Jewell Evans farm. Total cost of the well is expected to be $379,000. Columbia Gas Transmission and Columbia Gas of Kentucky, Inc. are affiliates of the Columbia Gas System.

The possible production horizons are the St. Peter Sand, Beekmantown Dolomite, Rose Run Sand, Copper Ridge Dolomite and Upper Rome Sands. Columbia Gas Transmission has leases on approximately 6,000 acres in the prospect area and approximately 10,000 additional acres adjoining this prospect which this well will help evaluate.

Columbia Gas Transmission currently is drilling a deep test well, its first, in Mingo County, West Virginia. It is expected the well will penetrate to the "basement," a granite layer found at depths up to 20,000 feet or more. The drilling of the Mingo county well is part of an overall program by the Columbia Gas System to locate large gas reserves in the Appalachian area.

Mrs. Stevens Named To Head Committee

Mrs. Judy Stevens, of Betsy Layne, has been elected chairman of the Big Sandy Region Development Disabilities Services Planning Committee, according to an announcement from Roger Marshall, director of developmental disabilities for Mountain Mental Health, Region 11.

The Regional DDS Planning Committee has been designated as the official planning body for developmental disabilities by the Regional Human Resource Council and by Mountain Mental Health: DDS, within the health planning responsibilities of the region, includes those persons with cerebral palsy, epilepsy, mental retardation, and other neurological disorders.

Joining Mrs. Stevens as an officer of the new committee is Glenda Larson, supervisor of adult activities for Mountain Mental Health in Pike county. The secretary will be chosen later, it was announced. Seven committees were formed at the November 22 meeting. Through the committees, the DDS Planning Committee will concern itself with such areas as evaluation, treatment, education, sheltered employment, special living arrangements and data collection as they affect persons with some form of developmental disability.

The committee will meet each month on the second Thursday at 3 p.m. in the Floyd County Library here.

used the key to open the door, Stumbo said, they saw Akers with a shotgun pointed at Tucker. The troopers jumped aside, he said, and Tucker ordered Akers to drop the gun and come out of the building. According to Trooper Stumbo, the other replied, "You'll never get me out of this place."

Their continued efforts to persuade Akers to surrender failing, they called State Police barracks at Pikeville for assistance. After the arrival of Capt. Lykins, Detective Ray and other State Police personnel, tear gas grenades were fired into the building in an attempt to dislodge the wanted man, Stumbo said, but these failed. He added that they sought again to persuade Akers to come out and that when this failed he walked to the door and kicked it open.

"I started to go in after him, and then I heard shots," Trooper Stumbo said. He added that he found Akers on the floor with a shotgun in his hand. Other weapons were inside the building, he said.

Capt. Lykins told the investigating officials that after he and others arrived from the post around 3 a.m., they identified themselves and attempted to persuade Akers to surrender. That failing, a tear gas projectile which failed to explode was fired into the station. A second fired into the upstairs section of the building exploded, as did one fired into the basement. But they failed to dislodge Akers and further attempts to persuade him to come outside also were unsuccessful, Lykins said.

"You'll have to kill me," he quoted Akers as saying in reply.

Capt. Lykins said he had moved to a location where he could see the man inside the building through the corner of a plate glass window and that when Trooper Stumbo kicked the door open he saw Akers come with a shotgun, pointing it at Stumbo.

"I then shot Otis Akers...to save the life of a young trooper under my command," Capt. Lykins concluded.

The victim was a son of Ermin and Cynthia Jarrell Akers, of Dana. In addition to his parents, he is survived by his widow, Mrs. Emma Lou Conn Akers; two sons and two daughters, Benjamin J., Christopher and Patricia Akers, all at home, and Mrs. Kathy Wallen, of Banner; six brothers and one sister, Elijah Akers, of Banner, Truman Akers, of Illinois, Orbia Akers, Vermillion, O., Claude Akers, Wayland, Clevert Akers, Dana, P. D. Akers, of Martin, and Mrs. Lettie Mae Cordial, of Dana. He also leaves three grandchildren.

Funeral rites for the victim were held at 10 a.m. today (Wednesday) at Little Salem Regular Baptist Church at Dana, ministers of that church officiating. Burial in the E. P. Akers cemetery at Dana was directed by the Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

State To Clear 3,700 Miles Of Highways of Advertising

Frankfort, Ky., November 28—The Highway Department has filed regulations with the Legislative Research Commission that extend control of roadside advertising to an additional 3,700 miles of Kentucky highways.

Roads affected by the new regulations are those included in the Federal Aid Primary system. Advertising devices on Interstate highways and Parkways have been regulated by the Department since 1962.

Investigation and inventory of signs and billboards on the Primary system by departmental employees is nearly complete. Current estimates indicate 80,000 may be affected. This includes all signs on the Commonwealth's right-of-way and within 660 feet of its limits.

Approximately 10,000 signs were legal when placed. Compensation for their removal will be provided. About 20,000 - mostly on the Commonwealth's right-of-way - were illegal when placed. There will be no compensation for these.

The remainder, most of which are "on-premise" signs and those in commercial and industrial-zoned areas, are expected to conform to the regulations being published.

The program to control signing on primary highways was initiated by Congress in the Federal Highway Beautification Act of 1965. Earlier federal legislation had provided bonuses for states controlling signing on Interstate highways. To date, Kentucky has received or is eligible for bonuses totaling more than $1.5 million. Seventy-five percent of the cost of removing signs from the primary system will be federally funded.

The 1965 Act includes a penalty for non-compliance. It can be 10 percent of the state's apportionment of federal aid. Federal authorities announced earlier this year that penalty provisions will be imposed on states not in compliance.

The new regulations become effective December 20. They are based on a 1966 statute. The five-year grace period provided by the statute has now expired.

The Department announced last week the start of a campaign to remove illegal signs from the state's right-of-way. The immediate objective is to take out 2,000 signs during the month of December.

Department officials emphasized that the program is intended to control advertising signs, not to eliminate them. Commissioner Charles Pryor, Jr. has stated, "The scope of this program insures it cannot be completely implemented in a few weeks. It may take five or six years."

"The program," he added, "will result in safer and more attractive roadways on our primary highway system. We recognize that it will create problems for some businesses and institutions. We intend to deal with these problems sensibly and with the full regard for the various interests involved."

Consumer Comments

By ED W. HANCOCK
Attorney General of Kentucky

You pick up the evening paper and glance through it. There it is, a repossessed, brand name refrigerator at a ridiculously low price.

You rush down to the store and the salesman shows you a delapidated refrigerator covered with grime and dirt. Then, the salesman explains the obvious—this refrigerator is just not suited for your home. However, he just happens to have a more suitable one "right over here." It turns out to be a brand you never heard of and at a price many times what you had intended to pay.

If you buy, you become the victim of one of the oldest and most profitable schemes in the marketplace—"Bait-and-Switch."

This tactic is used to sell many different types of products from sewing machines to swimming pools. The idea is to bait the consumer with the offer to sell a product that is never meant to be sold and then switch him to a more expensive and profitable model.

I advise all Kentucky consumers to beware of such sales tactics and to immediately notify the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office if you observe it being perpetrated.

If you have a consumer complaint of problem, you are invited to call the Consumer Hotline, toll-free, at 1-800-372-2960.

225 Area Students Attend Choral Clinic

The Fine Arts Department of Prestonsburg Community College held its annual choral clinic, November 16, with 225 students participating from eight high schools in the surrounding area. Following the clinic, a performance was given by the Clinic Chorus for the general public. Miss Phyllis Jenness was the conductor.

TO BE WED SOON

Mrs. June Turner Likens, of Martin, Ky., announces the engagement and forthcoming marriage of her daughter, Carolyn Leigh, to Lance Cpl. Thomas Howard Bartrum, son of Mrs. Geraldine Bartrum, of Martin, and the late Mr. Emory Bartrum.

Miss Likens attended Martin high school where she graduated in May. Cpl. Bartrum also attended Martin high school, and is serving in the U. S. Marine Corps. He is now stationed at Mount Fuji, Japan.

The wedding will take place at 7 p.m. January 27 at the Martin United Methodist Church. The gracious custom of open church will be observed.

"New ways of citizen involvement in public education must be created because many traditional methods and efforts have lost their credibility in the current turbulent era."

Allen-Central Wins Second Tournament of Young Season

By MARK LAFFERTY

The Floyd County Pre-Season basketball tournament took on a new look as newly formed Allen Central High created two byes in the tournament with only one game being played on the varsity level each evening instead of the usual two.

The Rebels of Allen Central also pulled down their second consecutive tournament crown of the year under the direction of head coach, Gene Frazier.

The tournament opened with McDowell defeating Wheelwright. The Daredevils had previously been without the services of Eddie Campbell and Wendell Page, but both returned against Wheelwright last Wednesday night to boost the Daredevils past the Trojans 87-71. McDowell's success against Wheelwright could best be measured by the five defensive effort that stopped Wheelwright's top gun, Tippy Moscrop.

On the second evening of the tournament Betsy Layne battled the Blackcats of Prestonsburg for a 68-58 win. The Blackcats showed great poise and a lot of promise in their loss to the taller Bobcat squad. The game was played evenly for three quarters, but Prestonsburg's downfall hinged on cold shooting and inability to apply steady pressure defensively in the second quarter.

After waiting and watching two nights of the tournament the champion-to-be Rebels finally got into action with an 89-74 win over McDowell, Friday night. The Rebels grabbed an early lead and never looked back with Kent Gibson and John Conley leading the charge. The Daredevils fought back hard in the second half, but it was not enough as Allen Central snuffed out their scoring under the basket.

Saturday night was a rematch of an earlier battle this year between Betsy Layne and Allen Central. Betsy Layne won the previous meeting, 57-54. Even though this game held true to form by being a close struggle, this one had a better ending for the Rebels as they escaped in overtime with a 60-51 championship victory. The lead changed hands throughout the game until the final seconds when Allen Central seemed sure to hang on for a two-point victory when Emmitt Hamilton drove through a clutch 15-foot jumper that sent the game into overtime. From the beginning of the overtime till the final horn, Allen Central commanded with deadly shooting that scaled their bid for a second tournament title.

This year's Floyd County Pre-Season tournament was accompanied by a B-team Toruney. Each of the county's schools participated in the tournament.

Undeclared Wheelwright defeated McDowell, 42-39, for its first victory en route to the championship. In the second game Prestonsburg's undeclared team downed Betsy Layne, 35-31. Wheelwright then went on to down Allen Central, 58-42. In the battle of the undeclared teams, Wheelwright took the laurels, 29-26.

George Washington U. Loaded With Floyd County Tal(Ent)

When George Washington University's varsity basketball team opened its season last Tuesday night with a 10-point victory over Loyola of Baltimore, Maytown's Pat Tallent, the Colonials' sophomore star, was at one of the guard positions.

Tallent is the former high school All-American who led the George Washington freshmen in scoring last year with a 26.2-point average.

His brother, Bob, former GW star, is freshman coach at George Washington and is an assistant to Head Coach Carl Slone. Randy Click, also a former Maytown high school player, is a senior guard at GW, and another Floyd county high school standout, 6-4 Clyde Tackett, of Betsy Layne, is a member of the freshman team this year.

A third Tallent, Mike, whose basketball career was cut short by an injury, is a graduate assistant to Coach Slone. Bob Tallent was the Colonials' leading scorer in 1968-'69 with a 28.9 average. The following year, it was his younger brother, Mike, who led the team with a 21.2 average.

In a word, this George Washington team is loaded with Floyd county talent. Most people spell it with a capital T.

Golden Eagle Cagers Of Tennessee Tech Elect Lewis Captain

Cookeville, Tenn.—Senior Al Lewis, of Wheelwright, Ky., has been elected by teammates to captain Tennessee Tech's 1972-'73 basketball team.

Lewis is a returning All-Ohio Valley Conference guard. Last season he averaged 15.8 points per game for the Golden Eagles, who finished in fourth place in league standings behind three tri-champions.

Considered one of the top long-range shooters in the conference, Lewis set an OVC and school record as a sophomore when he sank 31 consecutive free throws. For the past two seasons, he's hit 51.2 and 49.5 per cent of his field goals, and 83.8 and 83.7 per cent of his free throws.

Junior Howard Miller, of Rickman, was elected alternate captain. Miller, a 6-7 center, is vying for a starting berth at the pivot.

Tech opened its season on the road Friday night at UT Chattanooga. The Eagles' first home game was Monday, Dec. 4, when they were host to Stetson.

Alice Lloyd Eagles Win Two, Lose One

Pippa Passes, Ky.—In their first game of the season, the Alice Lloyd College Eagles pulled out a narrow 108-105 victory over Kentucky Business College November 24 at the Wayland high school gym. At halftime Kentucky Business College led the favored Eagles, 55-50. With about seven minutes left in the game the ALC Eagles, through team rebounding and good shooting pulled ahead of their opponents and moved on to win the game by a score of 108-105. The Eagles were led by the sharpshooting Marvin Bowman, who scored the game high of 36 points and 17 rebounds, and by the outside shooting of Gary Ferguson who scored 29 points.

In their next game November 28 the Eagles were defeated by Pikeville College Junior Varsity at Pikeville, 87-71. ALC's scoring was led by Greg Bedford who netted 15 points for the Eagles.

The Eagles rolled to their second victory of the season by defeating the Sue Bennett Dragons with a score of 105-92. The game remained close for most of the first half with the score being tied 11 times. The second half was all ALC. Top scorers for ALC were Greg Bedford with 28 points, Ronnie Slone with 15, and Tom Forman with 14. The leading rebounder was Greg Bedford.

Kentucky Afield

By Hope Carleton
Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

Conservation officers are a special breed of men. Instead of sitting behind a desk, they brave rain and snow, sun and heat as they go about their patrols, spending almost endless hours protecting Kentucky's wildlife. Conservation officers are servants of the sportsmen and of the people in the communities where they live.

This select group of about 120 men is the backbone of the state Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. They are not only a staunch law enforcement group, they are "pros" in fish and wildlife management, educators, and public relation specialists. These men serve you in a wide and varied program of services.

Farm pond stocking, as well as advice on weed control or other problems about your farm pond, is one service they may perform.

If you desire to have a wildlife habitat development program started on your farm, you may contact your local officer who will, along with a game biologist, visit your home and set up such a program for you.

Conservation officers are active in the department's conservation education program, attending meetings in schools and working with Kentucky youths. Every summer they escort conservation education members from their respective areas to one of three camps operated by the department.

Those who have some type of wildlife as pets or raise wildlife for some reason or other, must have a pet or propagation permit and the conservation officer is the man who will take the necessary steps to obtain such a permit.

Another phase of the officer's work is pollution detection. If and when a pollution problem develops in your area, contact your officer immediately. He will go to the problem area, take water samples for analyzing and see that court action is initiated, if necessary.

Conservation officers are helping to make hunting and fishing better for all Kentucky. However, you can help, too, by confiding in these hard-working men, if you have knowledge of game violations.

The person who poaches game is a thief and is stealing from every license holder as well as from future generations.

Your conservation officer is on hand to answer your questions, keep you posted on game and fish laws and to help you avail yourself of the services of the department.

Get to know him better so that he may serve you better.

CARD OF THANKS
The children of Frona Slone wish to express our thanks to the Mountain Manor Nursing Home, the doctor and staff who helped take such good care of our beloved mother, and many thanks to those who visited, sent flowers and food during her illness and at her death. And special thanks to Rondal Hayes, Hall Brothers Funeral Home, and the ministers of the Old Regular Baptist Church. May God bless everyone.

Mr. and Mrs. Thurmal Click were in Pikeville on business Wednesday.

A surprise birthday dinner for Mrs. Eva Horner was given at the home of Mrs. Loren Brewer at Wellston, Ohio, Nov. 18. Sain, of New Lexington, Ohio; Mrs. Gene Hill, Bob, Burton, Ken, Sherrill, Regina and Rose, Wellston, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Spencer were hosts at a family Thanksgiving dinner Friday evening at their home. Those attending were Mrs. Melvin Allen, Kimberly Kathryn and Amanda Marie, Freeport, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph O. Spencer, Ronnie Lee and Kathy, of Prestonsburg, and Mrs. Nancy Bailey, of Langley.

Thomas Patrick spent Thanksgiving visiting Mr. and Mrs. Gene Dillman and sons at Middlesboro and Mrs. Elizabeth Fudge at Powell, Tenn.

The community Christmas tree, sponsored by the Maytown Woman's Club and the Boy Scouts, will be lighted on the evening of Dec. 11.

Willie Bentley is recuperating at home after undergoing surgery at the Methodist Hospital, Pikeville.

Victor Dean Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boyd was a patient at the Appalachian Regional Hospital at McDowell for five days last week after receiving a concussion in a fall from a horse.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Boyd, Barry and Doug, West Alexandria, Ohio and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Boyd and Tammy, of Prestonsburg, spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boyd.

Extra Driving Care Urged In Winter

Frankfort, Ky.—The Kentucky Traffic Safety Coordinating Committee (KTSCC) is urging all motorists to remember that winter weather can seriously reduce driving visibility.

"Longer hours of darkness, combined with fog, frost, snow and ice constitute a major driving hazard during winter months," said KTSCC Executive Director Charles Horton.

While conceding that there is an occasional mishap under circumstances where poor visibility might be a valid excuse, Horton said that state police accident reports show that in most every case the driver usually is the one at fault.

"How many times have you heard someone say, 'I couldn't see,'" he said.

When visibility is bad, the sensible driver slows down or gets off the road entirely, he said. But if it is absolutely necessary to keep going, the driver should make certain that his windows are kept clean and unobstructed. Don't be a "peep-hole" driver, Horton said.

"Clear the snow and ice off the entire windshield, and the side and rear windows as well," he said. "And don't forget the snow and road-muck which collects around the headlights, taillights and directional signals."

Horton also urged drivers to keep a constant check on their car's other foul weather equipment as well.

Streaking windshield wiper blades should be replaced, the heater-defroster system should be working properly and the windshield washer solution should contain adequate anti-freeze for the most extreme weather conditions that a driver might encounter.

"Good equipment, proper maintenance and common-sense driving will help you to stay alive on the highway through the winter despite the weather," he said.

Mortality on the highways is among the greatest limiting factors in the North American deer population. In Pennsylvania, the annual highway kill has run into five figures. In Ohio it exceeds the legal kill during the open hunting season.—SPORTS AFIELD

87-Year-Old Coal Miner Still Believes In Helping

Providence, Ky.—“When I was growin’ up, people loved one another, prayed for one another and helped one another...but now it seems like ‘most everybody is out for himself,” mused 87-year-old R. L. “Bob” Erwin.

But the retired Providence coal miner is a striking contrast to his own observation.

For more than two years, Erwin and his wife, Evie, have been faithfully sending $20 each month to provide pocket money for four residents at Outwood State Hospital and School near Dawson Springs, a mental retardation facility operated by the Kentucky Department of Mental Health.

Dorothy Scott, volunteer director at Outwood, explained she tries to have a “sponsor” for each Outwood resident, providing him with a small amount of money to be used at the canteen for candy, soft drinks, books, novelties and other “extras.” She also encourages sponsors to visit or write the residents, and sends each sponsor a picture and description of the resident selected for him.

Erwin said he and his wife have little trouble finding the cash to make their monthly donation to the Outwood program. “You just have to be a little savin’ is all,” he explained.

The elderly couple manages to be saving enough to send an additional $10 each month to the Kosair Children’s Hospital in Louisville.

“One of our granddaughters spent two years up there. They saved her leg and she walked out of the place on her own, so we just feel we owe them a little something too,” said Erwin.

Asked how he became interested in Outwood, Erwin explained, “Somebody wrote me a letter asking me to sponsor somebody over there. Well, I started sending them $20 a month and Mrs. Scott wrote back telling me I was sponsoring four! Now, that ain’t bad, is it?”

“The Erwins are among our most faithful sponsors,” said Mrs. Scott. “About a year ago, Mr. Erwin fell and broke his hip. He sent a note in his next letter explaining he was laid up in the hospital and apologized for being three days late with his sponsorship money! He promised not to let it happen again.”

While personal tragedy is no stranger to the Erwins, it has not caused them to lose their love and concern for others.

“We had two boys and two girls, but they’ve all passed on,” said Mrs. Erwin. “We’ve had a lot of sickness too, but the Lord’s been good to us and always seen us through.”

The Erwins’ oldest son, James, was confined to bed for 25 years with Parkinson’s Disease. For 20 of those years, Mrs. Erwin fed her son every meal with a spoon. “His mind and memory were good, but he just couldn’t help himself,” she said.

The Erwins’ concern extends beyond the pocketbook. “We pray for those residents and the staff at Outwood every day,” said Erwin. “And you know, the Lord will answer you if you just believe.”

The couple also supports the Second Baptist Church in Providence where they have been members since 1923.

“The Lord made it possible for us to do this, and I’m just mighty thankful that I can help a few other people in my old age,” said Bob Erwin. “I hope others will do more than I can.”

Similar sponsorship programs are in operation at two other Mental Health facilities for the mentally retarded, including Oakwood at Somerset and Hazelwood Hospital in Louisville. Those interested in sponsoring a resident at any of these facilities can contact the local volunteer director for complete details.

PCC Nursing Dept. Sponsors Institute

The Prestonsburg Community College Nursing Department held a one-day institute, titled, “Patient and Family Health Education,” November 29. The program was designed for registered nurses who wished to improve their knowledge and skill in teaching the patient and the family.

Ruth F. Richards, director of the Education and Training Office, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Rockville, Md., was the guest-speaker. Irma Bolte and Ethel Caraway, of the University of Kentucky’s Continuing Education Department, were responsible for assisting Prestonsburg Community College in planning the workshop for the nurses in the Prestonsburg area.

The program was held at May Lodge. Fifty-four participated.

Gov. Wendell Ford has announced the first step in his reorganization of state government, creating a new state Department of Finance and Administration and a new post of Secretary of the Cabinet.

Compressors ‘Pull’ Weak Wells

Portable gas compressors which can be moved from one place to another by truck, are in gas field use. Workmen are shown making a typical installation of one of the units.

“Operation Mop Up” is on for Columbia Gas Transmission Corporation-Charleston Group.

Its purpose is to recover gas that will not flow naturally from a well into a higher pressure line because the well pressure is too low. Faced with a shortage of natural gas, the company is making every effort to produce every cubic foot of gas possible for the company’s customers.

At the heart of Columbia Gas Transmission’s operation are 16 portable compressors which draw the low-pressure gas from the wells, compress it and discharge it at a pressure slightly higher than the prevailing line pressure. They can deplete wells to a minimum pressure.

Results of the compressors’ work so far are impressive. They aided in the recovery of some 2.9 billion cubic feet in 1971.

The compressors are a real bargain compared to the value of the gas they recover. They often pay for themselves in one to one and a half years.

Company personnel install the machines in three to four days. Six are located in each of the Clendenin and Lockwood Divisions and four in the Hamlin Division. The Lockwood Division includes part of Kentucky. Four more costing $121,000 are being installed this year.

Portable compressors are not new to Columbia Gas Transmission. They’ve been used on production since the 1950’s, however, only since late 1970 have they been used in the company’s large scale program to deplete reservoirs.

The use of portable compressors have been so favorable the company plans now to install 13 additional units in 1973.

One family’s extravagance is another’s necessity

Because electric power has always been plentiful and cheap, it is quite human to be careless with its use. TV and radio sets that play to empty rooms; lights that burn in unoccupied areas; partially loaded washers, dryers and dishwashers that are operated (when a full load uses no more power). These are often cited as examples of unnecessary uses of electricity.

But one family’s extravagance is another family’s necessity. It is not within our province—or anyone else’s—to tell you how much power you need, or how you should or shouldn’t use it to meet your standards of comfort, safety and convenience. If the widow, living alone, feels safer sleeping with her three rooms fully lighted, it is her right to use that power. It fills her real need. It’s her right to expect us to have that power available. If you elect to leave a radio playing when you leave your house, to make a prowler think someone’s home, it’s a purposeful use of electricity.

Our job is to supply you with that power . . . all you need, whenever you need it. But included in this job is our obligation to do our part to conserve our nation’s natural resources and to cause as little disturbance as we can to the environment. We have been doing this in every way we know and we are striving to do more. For example, our new power generating units today consume only 70% of the coal required to produce the same amount of electricity 30 years ago; and one of our new 765,000-volt transmission lines carries 30 times more power than one of our older 138,000-volt lines, but uses only two times as much right-of-way—in other words, a 15-to-1 saving in land for the same amount of electricity delivered.

Waste of electricity costs us all more than money. Electric power is produced by utilizing fuel—oil, gas, coal or uranium—to produce heat or by harnessing the energy in falling water. Like all natural resources, these gifts of nature aren’t limitless. When electric power is used unnecessarily these valuable resources are wasted. Also the job of preserving some parts of the environment is made a little bigger. Despite the use of today’s finest technology in pollution control and enormous investments of money in its application, producing electricity has some effect on our environment.

A thinking awareness of electric service as a service to be used only when warranted can help conserve our natural resources, minimize the effect of electric power production on the environment . . . and save you dollars in the bargain.

We can make all the electric power you need . . . both for now and the foreseeable future. We have no power shortage here. And it is our intention that there never be one, even if it means taking positions that are temporarily unpopular with isolated special interest groups. We fully realize that a plentiful supply of electric power is vital to operating your homes and offices, preserving your job, and protecting your standard of living.

We’re working hard to have the environmental effect of electric power production as small as possible, and we are constantly searching for new ways to do this. As they are found, we are adopting them.

For the sake of conserving natural resources, preserving the environment, saving dollars in electric bills and passing on to future generations a world that is still rich in natural energy resources, the obligation we all have to each other is to avoid unnecessary use of electricity. In doing this, there’s no need to “skimp” on use of electric power.

Use what you need . . . but be sure you need what you use.

The First Lady

She didn't come from the White House,
 She came from a barn
 With the priceless gift of God
 Cradled in her arms.
 She is not only the First Lady,
 She is the Lady of the way,
 The truth and the life
 Unto God and Eternal Day.
 She is truly the First Lady,
 And to me she will always be;
 She is the mother of my Saviour
 Who died to set me free.
 There are so very few that remember
 Mary's prayers and tears,
 But I'm sure all praying mothers
 Will remember her at this time of year.
 She is never to be forgotten
 As this pilgrim land we've trod,
 For she is the sacred mother
 That found favor with God.
 There are many Christian mothers to day
 Who believe that Virgin birth,
 And those are the Godly, praying mothers
 Still living on this earth.
 In all of the celebrations,
 And many of them so untrue,
 Don't forget it's the birthday of Jesus,
 And He had a mother, too.

It is written in Jesus' name by:

MRS. LOUCILLE MONTGOMERY

 for the poor and needy and Christian Home, Evangelist for the homes back to God.

Don't forget Jesus on His birthday, He didn't forget you at Calvary.

Outside Lighting... An American Tradition at Christmas

One of the greatest joys at Christmas time is to ride about and look at the beautiful outside lighting displays that so many people create. They give you the feeling that everyone is sharing the spirit of Christmas, rather than keeping it inside to themselves. And this would be a good year for you to decorate your home with colorful, electric lighting.

Electric outdoor bulbs come in many shapes, sizes, and colors. They can be strung around trees, porches, chimneys, roofs, or wherever your imagination takes you. Outdoor lighting makes your home brighter for Christmas, and adds to your whole neighborhood's cheery, festive appearance.

Share your Christmas with all who pass by with decorative, colorful outdoor lighting. Just another example of the joys made possible through clean, efficient electric power.

Electricity — the cleanest energy you can use.

Making Time While Doing Time

By BARRI DUNCAN

Frenchburg, Ky.—Hidden in the hills of Menifee county, Frenchburg Correctional Institute is a collection of prefabricated buildings, reminiscent of the Job Corps camp that once operated here.

Frenchburg isn't an ordinary correctional facility. It functions as a minimum-security institution for first offenders and there are no fences, no guards.

What there is, according to state Corrections officials, is a goal for positive instruction, understanding and community involvement. And in the center of the institute's plan for involvement is a Jaycee program—the Red River Jaycees.

Frenchburg Director William A. Bohnert explained the rationale behind the Jaycee program, one of a few of its kind in the nation.

"What is most lacking in a man who runs afoul of the law is a civic or community concern," he said. "It is up to us to somehow generate interest, to show a man that he is part of his community."

Initiated two years ago, the program's pitch was, "We hear so many of you guys say that you wouldn't have gotten into trouble if you hadn't been with the wrong people. Here's your chance to get with some right people."

Frenchburg officials think the challenge is working. The institute's chapter was sponsored by the Powell County Jaycees in October of 1970. Within two months, record time, they were ready to be chartered.

At that time, Frenchburg's inmate population was about 80, below average and slim pickings for membership appeals since a prospective Jaycee had to be between 21 and 35 to be considered.

"The catch was getting guys who not only filled the age requirement, but who could pay the dues," said Chief Caseworker Loren Pyles, who originated the Jaycee chapter.

When the chapter opened, dues were $11.30—$6 state, $4 national and $1.30 international. Recently state Jaycees abolished their part of the fee for correctional residents, but setting aside $5.30 still is a big decision for an inmate.

"A man gets a quarter a day while at the institute," said Pyles. "If he falls within the age bracket, he has to decide if there is enough value in the Jaycee program to set aside money, instead of spending it on something else; like vocational school or some of the other institute programs."

But when the chapter's charter banquet was held, some 30 men had joined—a figure that has now doubled, although there is a constant rise and fall in the number due to the institution's rapid turnover.

"Every two months the parole board comes here and we lose from 20 to 40 men," said Dewey Sowers, the present Jaycee supervisor. "A good many of these are Jaycees. In fact, the maximum term a chapter president can serve is six months, and we haven't kept one for over four. When a guy is elected president, it's usually because of his leadership qualities and there's always a chance of his getting an early parole."

Current President Danny Rupard, doing time for a drug charge, admits that one reason he joined the chapter was "it looks good on a parole record." But, since becoming chapter president four months ago, his attitude has broadened.

"I needed something constructive to do in my spare time," said Rupard, "and the Jaycees offered that something—a chance to get involved. It was something to occupy my time, keep me out of trouble and give me direction."

"For instance, the first project I was involved in here was putting up lights along the sidewalks that lead to each dorm. The men really enjoyed it—they got out and dug trenches and someone here did the wiring. They really were proud of what they had accomplished. Light in the wilderness sort of thing, you know."

As president, Rupard says he now can see how the program affects the other men. "It gives a man an outlet, a way of expressing himself with self-confidence through community achievement," he said.

The Red River Jaycees meet every Wednesday night to discuss money-making and community projects. Usually there is a speaker at each meeting, either a caseworker or a representative from the Corrections Department.

Each man is encouraged to participate. Some do, some don't. Some members sit passively through the meetings, but get involved in the projects.

"There was one guy from Detroit who would never say a word at the meetings," Rupard recalled. "But when we had our fair last August, he really stole the show. He got the mike and did a fantastic job of getting people to the dunk booth."

The 'fair' was the Menifee County Fair, the chapter's biggest money-making event. It was the first time such an event, open to the public, has been held inside a state correctional facility. The fair lasted five days and netted the chapter $500.

The institute Jaycees also have launched a campaign to clean up Red River Gorge and renovated an old tobacco stripping room into a school that now houses two nuns and almost 30 children.

The inmates also directed projects to clean up roads around the institute and constructed a playground for children in the visiting area.

"We now want to put out a newspaper (The Red River Gazette) here at the institution," Rupard said. "And we plan to distribute baskets of food during the Christmas holidays. But our biggest project now is the Cloth the Child campaign, initiated by the Louisville Defender. We hope to get about $100 in all for that—about 50 cents per guy."

Sounds fine for passing time while doing time, but will the feeling for community involvement last. Has the program really helped?

"Jaycee membership automatically transfers when you're released," said Rupard, who plans to go into social work as a result of his stay at Frenchburg. "And that will put me in contact with young men on the move upward and in a position to help in the community. The program has helped me."
