

Court Asks Temporary Strike End

Island Creek Mines On Left Beaver Cr. Idled Since Friday

A temporary restraining order has been issued by U. S. District Judge Bernard T. Moynihan to require striking workers of the Island Creek Coal Company in this county to follow grievance procedures in the labor contract and to return to work, pending settlement of such grievances.

All operations of the company from Wheelwright to Spurlock were idled by the strike. A one-day work stoppage occurred last Wednesday, then the full-scale strike began with the afternoon work shift last Friday.

Apparently the dispute originated with Spurlock operations. The Wheelwright-Price workers may have ceased work "in sympathy" with the Spurlock employees, a company source said.

John York, Cleveland, O., Island Creek's vice-president of employee relations, declined to discuss with The Times the issues involved in the strike. "Really," he said, "I'm not sure what the grievance is about."

Mines of the Patsy Development Company were idled last Wednesday by a work stoppage, but they resumed operations the following day.

Barnett Freed On $5,000 Bail After Shooting

Randall Frasure, about 30, was in serious condition at a Lexington hospital Monday after he had been twice shot Sunday afternoon on Buck's Branch, near Martin, and his neighbor, Raleigh Barnett, is under $5,000 bond to answer to grand jury action in the case.

Barnett, who was arrested Sunday by Sheriff Frank Leslie, came here Monday to execute bond.

The sheriff's office said various reports of the shooting have been heard but that none of these pinpoint the cause. Bert Frasure, father of the wounded man, said here Monday that his son was unarmed.

Frasure's thigh was broken by one bullet from a .38-calibre revolver. A second shot entered his abdomen.

Four Mud Creek men were arrested Friday and a fifth was being sought in the alleged rape of a woman in that section, earlier in the week. The four—Sterling Hall, Milford Isaac, Randall and Daniel Akers—were released Monday under $5,000 bond each after waiving the charge to the grand jury. They were arrested by State Trooper Williamson. Hiram Johnson, for whom a rape warrant was issued, is a fugitive, court officials said.

Two liquor raids in which a total of 131 cases of beer were confiscated were reported last week. In the first of these Deputy Sheriffs Dester Hamilton and Ralph Howell arrested Cotton Tackett, of (See Story 3, Back Page, Sec. 1)

Area Banking Leaders, Spurlock And Dorton, Succumb Last Week

Two of the area's most prominent bankers died last week within a period of a few hours.

Burl Spurlock, 58, president of the First National Bank, died early Saturday morning at his First street home here after several months of failing health.

David H. Dorton, Sr., 81, former president of the Citizens National Bank of Paintsville, succumbed Friday afternoon in Louisville.

The Prestonsburg banker and civic leader was born at Printer, Dec. 24, 1913, the son of Daniel Wheeler and Jane Salisbury Spurlock. The family moved to West Prestonsburg when he was quite young, and there his father operated a store. After the death of his father, Mr. Spurlock assumed management of the business, which he developed into a thriving enterprise.

In the 1940's he acquired control of the First National Bank, and it was in the field of finance that he excelled. Mr. Spurlock was a member of the executive committee of the Kentucky Bankers' Association, a director of the Highlands Regional Hospital, and treasurer of the Floyd County Board of Education. He also was a former chairman of the Floyd County Fair Board and the Prestonsburg-Paintsville Airport Board, a former Prestonsburg city clerk and member of the City Council. Mr. Spurlock was a member of the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club and Chamber of Commerce, and was a charter member of the Floyd County Hall of Fame. It was while he was chairman of the Prestonsburg Water and Gas Commission that the modern water distribution system was instituted, and he had a leadership role in almost every public development here and often in other sections of the county.

Give $500 for Flood Sufferers

Capt. Graham Burchett, of the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad, receives from Phyllis Elliott, a $500 check, the contribution made by Prestonsburg Shoe Company employees to the West Virginia flood relief fund. Other members of the Squad (in white uniforms) are Manis Gray, Bud Alexander, W. R. Callihan and Roy Roberts. Other members of the committee in photo are Leon Hall, Sadie Cooley, Billie Jewell, Elva Newsome, Anna Bach, Ruby Burns, Tammy Hensley, Millie Henson, Earlene Mathews, Virgil Johnson, Anna Ousley, Dora Allen and Barbara Hackworth. Milford Jett, plant manager, is at right. Prior to the presentation Mr. Burchett told of the visit to the stricken area and of the tragic conditions they found.

Measles Pose Threat Of Epidemic in Floyd

Floyd county is threatened with a measles epidemic, and the entire state faces a situation that is even more grave—the spread of venereal diseases toward epidemic proportions.

The Floyd County Health Department announced last Friday that 96 cases of measles have been reported to it since Feb. 22. How many other cases have developed and gone unreported, the health department could not say.

One unreported case in Prestonsburg is known. In one school, Betsy Layne, 94 pupils were absent March 9 because of measles. One case has been reported from each Water Gap and one from David.

The present outbreak is red, or seven-day, measles, a severe type.

Health Department nurses are being sent into all communities from which the disease has been reported, and the department is seeking a better picture of the countywide situation.

Dr. Russell L. Hall, Floyd county health officer, is urging parents to bring children, ages 1-14, to the health department for measles "shots." He asked that all cases be reported.

The number of reported venereal diseases fails to present a true picture of the seriousness of the situation in Kentucky. It is believed that the increase experienced elsewhere in the state has also hit Floyd county, but since July 1, 1970 only 10 cases of gonorrhoea and 4 of syphilis have been reported to the health department here.

The spread of venereal diseases has reached epidemic proportions. Last year 22,000 new cases of syphilis were reported nationwide and 640,000 new cases of gonorrhoea. Gonorrhoea ranks first among reported communicable diseases, and it is estimated that it strikes a victim every 15 seconds.

This Town . . . That World

Some of the bills introduced at the recent session of the General Assembly would indicate that certain legislators do not dote on newspapers but would prefer their scalps instead. That makes matters pretty well even. We newspapers do not dote on some legislators, either.

VOICE-STRENGTHENER

Thought my voice was getting a bit weak till I read a warning that higher taxes are coming, that federal, state, county and city taxes will soon be far greater than ever before in history. I may have croaked a bit and the howl sent up may have been on the dismal side, but the welkin is still ringing.

That word, "welkin"—I've often wondered what the mischief it could mean, and just now,—years later, I've got around to looking into the matter. It's pure Medieval English, and it means "the dome of heaven."

In view of this definition, I hereby retract my statement (see above) that I yelped so loudly that the it's still ringing. . . though I sometimes wish I could.

A NEW BRAND OF TROUBLE

Young love is perhaps the toughest, most resilient thing in the world. It defies faultfinding and faultfinders. The young bride will burn her fingers, toast her face and develop a severe case of the willies, trying to get a meal onto the table for that great man she has married. And the long-suffering husband, convinced that this woman is the greatest of her kind, will eat what she puts before him and valiantly lie to her, declaring it's just like mother used to cook.

Bless their hearts! I am reminded of the story of the young bride who had sailed into the cooking stin and then was asked by her mother how she was doing.

"It tastes O. K., but I'm having trouble with my dones," she replied.

"Your DONES?"

"Yes, when the potatoes are done, the meat is not done, and when the meat is done the bread isn't done. See what I mean?"

THE ORDER OF WORDS

Words are the trickiest things you can deal with, especially when you set them down in print for some wiseacre to come by later and pick to pieces. The order of words, or their disorder, can mean a lot. Possibly the word most often misplaced in a sentence is "only." For instance:

I only wish I could ride the horse (I merely wish, no more).

Groundbreaking For Emma Span Expected in May

Groundbreaking for the new bridge spanning the Big Sandy at Emma is expected in early May, Miss Flo Weddington, moving spirit in the drive for the facility, said last week after conferring in Frankfort with Rural Highway Commissioner Otto Ingram and other road officials.

"I also know the completion date scheduled for the bridge," Miss Weddington said, but she declined to disclose it.

The 500-foot span, she said, has been classed as an emergency project and given priority because the existing 45-year-old bridge has been declared unsafe. It will probably be located near the site of the present span.

Recognizing the spirited and continuing fight waged by Miss Weddington for the improvement, Judge Ingram was quoted as saying the new facility will be known as the Flo Weddington Bridge and that a plaque in memory of her father, the late William Harry Weddington, will be placed in the superstructure.

The Emma woman began the campaign for a new bridge after returning from Louisville to Emma to be with her father during his last illness. A commitment to do the work followed a public hearing held last July 21 at Emma by former Highway Commissioner B. E. King.

It was emphasized that funds for the construction will come from emergency rural highway secondary funds and that the outlay will not affect other rural road construction.

"They told me at Frankfort last Tuesday I should be one of the happiest people in Floyd county," Miss Weddington said. "I told them I was, but that I would be happier when I see the dirt flying."

Drilling Slated In Six Counties; Oil, Main Target

The location for the first of 10 or more test wells to be drilled in Floyd and five other counties of the area this year in a huge program of exploration for oil and gas has been made by the Weaver Oil & Gas Corporation, of Houston, Texas, it was said here last week.

The first well to test 650,000 acres of land in Floyd, Pike, Johnson, Knott, Perry and Letcher counties will be drilled on the Long Fork of Shelby Creek in Pike county.

E. O. Ray, vice-president in charge of operations, Kentucky West Virginia Gas Co., said his firm entered into an agreement last November with Weaver Oil & Gas, conveying drilling rights to the Houston firm and associates on certain leases held by Kentucky West Virginia in these counties.

"This drilling, he said, will be "shallow"—that is, exploration may not go deeper than the top of the Silurian system, which would be to the Corniferous and Clinton formations. Kentucky West Virginia, largest producer of natural gas in Eastern Kentucky, would buy any gas production from this drilling. It was said, however, that Weaver and associates are primarily searching for oil.

Associated with the Houston firm are Signal Oil & Gas Co., L. A. Land & Development and Amerada Hess, which with Weaver comprise the code name, SLAW.

The exploration combine also has certain deep drilling rights. Weaver Oil and Gas last year teamed with Kentucky West Virginia in drilling to a depth of 12,000 feet on Racoon Creek, Pike county, but no productive yield was found. A second well is said to be scheduled this year but its location has not been announced.

Mr. Ray said all his company's shallow acreage has not been committed to the Texas company and its associates and that Kentucky West Virginia will continue its own drilling program.

J. B. Jamar, Weaver's vice-president for exploration, said last week that his company will become "extremely active in the Appalachian Basin." He added that Weaver Oil now holds oil and gas leases, or has exploration rights, on more than 4 million acres of land in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York.

A dozen gas or electric power companies and pipeline firms have joined Weaver in exploration programs in these states.

"These agreements," Jamar said, "are indicative of the renewed interest by Southwest oil and gas companies in developing reserves and storage areas nearer their Eastern markets."

Perkins Slates Local Meeting On Black Lung

Congressman Carl D. Perkins announced this week that the first of a series of meetings which he has scheduled to acquaint miners, widows of miners and their dependents with their rights under the Black Lung benefit provisions of the law will be held at the courthouse here at 3 p.m., April 6. Other meetings of the series: Perry county courthouse, Hazard, 3 p.m., April 7; Union Hall, McRoberts, 8:30 a.m., April 8; Pike county courthouse, Pikeville, 1:30 p.m., April 8; new high school at Belfry, 5:30 p.m., April 8.

Congressman Perkins commented on the law as it works:

"Since the enactment of the Black Lung provisions of the Coal Mine Health and Safety Act late in 1969, we have had the benefit of two years' experience in the Social Security Administration's operation of this program. It has been a great disappointment to me to see miners denied benefits or to have benefits reduced under circumstances which we did not intend when the legislation was enacted. Chief among the inequities which we have noted in the benefit program, I believe, is the fact (See Story 4, Back Page, Sec. 1)

It's the Governor's Responsibility

The Kentucky Legislature did next to nothing toward curbing strip-mining, but it is too late for epining or criticising. The people had their chance to be heard, but, except for a pitiful few, they said nothing.

The broad-form deed remains to oppress the lives of Eastern Kentucky landowners.

The law governing strip-mining stands at about where it has been the last four years.

One sop thrown to the people was the legislation providing that the landowner must be notified 60 days in advance of the time the strip-miner plans to move in, giving, it is presumed, the owner of the surface land an opportunity to protests. But no protest can mean anything under the law unless there is somebody in state government who has the authority to do something and who will listen.

The Times has an idea that what the General Assembly did, or didn't do, was in accordance with the wishes of Governor Ford. We say that, because of the success he had with other legislation in which he was interested.

To us, this means that the responsibility for the situation rests squarely upon the Governor's shoulders. If the land and the people are to have any protection, it must come from him as he acts within the law as it stands. What happens in future months will be of supreme interest to Kentuckians, especially Eastern Kentuckians.

It is Governor Ford's duty to enforce the law, and if he dares to do that he will be venturing into territory heretofore unexplored.

If he does that, it may be that we indeed do have enough laws to cover strip-mining.

If he doesn't, the situation could get real sticky before the Legislature convenes, two years hence.

Lost—a Force for Progress

In the death of Burl Spurlock Prestonsburg and Floyd county lost, perhaps, their greatest driving force toward progress.

He believed in Floyd county and in its people, and he was willing to take a chance on them. Scores of businesses, public buildings and other improvements that are the county's stand today as witnesses to that fact.

This is not to say that any man is indispensable. Life goes on, despite the loss of leaders. But in the death of Mr. Spurlock the county lost some of its energy, some of the strong will to attempt and to achieve that he so superbly exemplified.

Two Clubs Join In Reward Offer

The Dewey Lake and Floyd County Fish and Game Clubs have joined in posting a reward of $50 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person using illegal nets in Floyd county waters.

Although the action of the two clubs was spurred heavy seining of white bass during the spring run on Johns Creek, upstream from Dewey Lake, the past two years, the reward covers any stream in the county.

Most of the seining violations on Johns Creek have been in Pike county where sportsmen have learned that out-of-state residents have made particularly heavy hauls of white bass. As a consequence, fishermen say, the species has been given little chance to reproduce and the white bass population in the lake has been alarmingly reduced.

District Conservation Supervisor John Redwine, of Sandy Hook, has assured sportsmen that officers will maintain a close watch in the area, this spring.

Frye Appointed Martin Postmaster

The appointment of Hubert G. Frye as postmaster of the second-class postoffice at Martin was announced Friday by C. B. Gels, regional postmaster general, through the office of Bremer Ehrler, whose district includes the Martin office. Mr. Frye has been officer in charge of the postoffice there since April 23, 1971, following the death of the Postmaster Denzil Stumbo.

A resident of Martin for a number of years, Mr. Frye is a U. S. Army veteran, married, and the father of one child.

The number of minority group members employed on the staffs of the Nation's 2,400 employment service offices nearly doubled between 1967 and 1971, rising from 6,835 to 11,956. Nationally, minorities now make up about 17 percent of all employment service personnel.

LETTERS To the Editor

Disappointed by Failure To Curb Stripmining

I have been somewhat disappointed at the close of the recent legislative assembly here in Kentucky. With this session's closing, I feel that the fate of Eastern Kentucky has been sealed. As many of you know, our lawmakers have failed to pass two bills that would have put a dent in stripmining in Eastern Kentucky. Another failure has been in failing to pass an amendment for the abolishing of the broad form deed.

Actions like these lead me to wonder if these elected officials really act in the best interest of the people who elect them. Surely, by blocking these bills our legislators have done more harm than good to the people of Eastern Kentucky.

Also I wonder if these men have seen the effects of stripmining in the hills of Eastern Kentucky. If not, I would suggest that these men tour stripmining sites and see, first-hand, the terrible effects of stripmining. They should see these mines through the eyes of the public, not through the eyes of the owners. The owners tend to glamorize a view that in no way is glamorous. Surely, be able to see how bad stripmining is for Eastern Kentucky; see how stripmining has torn and scanned the beauty of the hills of Eastern Kentucky. It is hoped that by seeing these effects that the legislators would vote to abolish stripmining, not only in Eastern Kentucky but in all of Kentucky.

The citizens of Kentucky can help in this effect, if they will write to their Senators and Representatives and voice their opinions against stripmining. If enough people do so, maybe something can be done to abolish stripmining.

Atty. Gen. Ed Hancock says a House-passed bill to help county sheriffs is unconstitutional and actually a "disservice" to the officers. It would exempt sheriffs from liability for the actions of their deputies. Hancock, however, says the General Assembly has no power to pass such a measure.

Contractor, union and minority representatives in 41 areas across the country have developed voluntary agreement—known as "hometown" plans—to widen minority opportunities in construction crafts. These agreements have been approved by the Labor Department.

How long since you were in school?

For those of us who are old enough to have children in school, it's a little difficult to realize how demanding and complex a teacher's job has become.

Things have changed since we were under the teacher's eye. Subjects are tougher, wider ranging. Today's student is getting into the ideas behind the facts at an age when we merely were learning facts.

Now the classroom is a place for education through thought instead of education by rote. And the teachers who meet the challenge day after difficult day are rather special people.

Dedicated? The word probably embarrasses them. Even so, it is dedication to duty that's most common to all the men and women who become — and remain — modern teachers.

How else can you describe whatever it is that makes a good teacher keep working, keep studying ahead, after the last bell of the day, the last bell of the semester, has rung?

This they do. And it's enough to know, with or without fancy words that pinpoint their motives. Enough to earn our respect, our appreciation and all the help we can give them.

The Bank Josephine is assisting Floyd County area youngsters obtain a college or trade school education. We're the only financial institution in Floyd County participating in the Federal Insured Student Loan Program. We are actively lending to students right now. But we'd like to do more. You see, we're out to make more loans to more students, but we need your help to do it. We'll earmark your money for our "Educations Unlimited" loan fund. The "Educations Unlimited" Savings Certificates we'll issue you in return will pay off magnificently — in excellent bank interest for you, and in better educations for our own boys and girls.

Floyd County has always been blessed with more than its fair share of citizens who willingly give more than they have to give — of their time, their energy, their cooperation — to keep our county out front in all the things that matter. While outstanding teachers are seeing to it that our youngsters get the best education possible, countless other people are working every day to meet the county's growing cultural and social needs.

 The number of reported cases of infectious syphilis and gonorrhea outranks the combined number of cases reported for infectious hepatitis, malaria, whooping cough, polio, rubella, streptococcal sore throat, scarlet fever and tuberculosis.
 Kentucky is following the national pattern. In the fiscal year 1971, which ended June 30, 6,113 cases of infectious venereal diseases were reported.
 "This is the worst in Kentucky that it has been since 1950," said Pete Campassi Jr., acting director of the Kentucky Department of Health's venereal disease control program. "In the fiscal year 1971, the increase noted over the previous year was the greatest between any two fiscal years since 1950."
 Actually, the VD situation in Kentucky is even more alarming than the figures indicate.
 In 1968, the last National Survey of VD Incidence, which is a cooperative effort by the U. S. Public Health Service, the American Medical Association and the American Social Health Association, showed that an estimated 30,000 infectious VD cases went unreported.
 Private physicians, who treat patients for VD but do not report the cases to a health department, account for the discrepancy. Although private physicians in Kentucky are required by state law to report VD cases they treat, the same survey estimated that only 3.7 per cent of the state's private physicians reported cases of gonorrhea, and 8.1 per cent reported treating infectious syphilis.
 In Kentucky last year, 74 per cent of the VD cases involved persons under 25 years of age. Almost 40 per cent were reported in the 20 to 24 age bracket.

The outlook for 1972 is not any brighter. Some of the reasons for the increase, cited by public health officials, are:
 Society is more permissive and there is greater sexual freedom.
 The pill has reduced the use of the condom, which served as both a birth control device and a protection against venereal disease.
 Society is more mobile, thus increasing the problem of tracing the number of sexual contacts an infected person has had.
 Perhaps the biggest problem faced by public health officials today is educating the public about venereal diseases. The facts concerning VD are clouded by myths and misconceptions. One of the most erroneous is that "nice" people do not contract it, that VD is found only in slum areas.
 As one national advertisement for an insurance company notes, "Teen-age syphilis and gonorrhea are the biggest things to hit the suburbs since crabgrass."
 Other misconceptions concern the transmission of VD. Syphilis and gonorrhea are almost always contracted through sexual relations with an infected person.
 Syphilis is caused by a bacterium called a spirochete. Signs of the first stage of infection, called primary syphilis, occur generally at about 21 days after exposure, although the disease may be incubated for as long as three months. The infection appears usually in the form of a sore (chancere) in the genital or rectal regions.
 If untreated, the disease proceeds to the secondary stage, in which the spirochetes spread through the bloodstream. The original chancre may disappear, but other signs may show up—a body rash, bald spots, fever, sore throat, splitting headaches.
 If still untreated, the disease enters the latest stages. While syphilis cannot be transmitted through sexual relations at this stage, it now becomes particularly lethal. The spirochetes may stay hidden for years. In fact, a person may not realize the disease is present. Then, suddenly, it emerges, and may cause insanity, blindness, crippling, heart disease, and even death. It is estimated that the direct cost of maintaining patients with syphilitic psychoses in mental hospitals is $41 million annually.
 Another danger of syphilis involves pregnant women. A child, born with congenital syphilis, may be dead at birth or deformed. State law in Kentucky requires a blood test for syphilis in pregnancy. A premarital test for syphilis also is required.
 Perhaps one of the saddest things about VD is that the tragic results of untreated cases could be avoided so easily. Treatment is simple, usually penicillin injections.
 But public health officials are more optimistic about the future effectiveness of their efforts. Congress recently appropriated $16 million for VD control, and the state health department has requested about $300,000 in federal funds. Gov. Wendell Ford's budget for the next biennium calls for $200,000 for the control and prevention of venereal diseases. The department is currently in the process of developing a new program in VD control.

 "This is the first time that the state government and legislature have addressed themselves to the question," according to Dr. C. Hernandez, epidemiology division. "The state is recognizing it has a responsibility for a venereal disease control program."

Lack of funds has plagued public health officials in their fight against VD. For the last two years, the state VD division has operated on about $35,000 from federal funds, and approximately $48,000 from state funds. This budget covered the cost of buying drugs, providing educational material, salaries and traveling expenses. There is no charge for treatment in public health clinics.

UK Scientists Say Farmers Overblamed for Pesticides

Two University of Kentucky scientists say too much pesticide is being used in agriculture but farmers get too much of the blame for environmental damage caused by the chemicals. Entomologist Dr. Wesley G. Gregory and Dr. H. Wyman Dorough, an insect toxicologist, said in a recent newspaper interview that urban and suburban homeowners, highway departments and other non-farm users also contribute heavily to the pesticide problem.

production but added they currently are being overused. He said new short-term insecticides, developed to replace agents such as DDT which remain in the environment for long periods, require more frequent application. Gregory and Dorough said insecticide thus is often overused, "but farmers don't want to run the risk of being without it." They noted recent studies which indicate the amount of pesticides used on cotton in the U. S. could safely be reduced by 50 per cent. About 40 per cent of all pesticides used in the U. S. go on cotton, they said.

Kentucky Libraries To Promote ETV's Forsyte Saga Rerun

By LOIS CAMPBELL

Frankfort, Ky.—The Kentucky Department of Libraries is cooperating with Kentucky Educational Television in promoting the rerun of John Galsworthy's Forsyte Saga series.

State Librarian Margaret Willis says that to promote reading of the six Forsyte novels prior to and during the telecasts, paperback editions of each have been ordered for all libraries in the state's regional system. Most libraries have additional bound volumes of the Galsworthy novels. The series, to be shown on the ETV network beginning April 5 continuing each Wednesday at 10 p.m., spans 50 years in the lives of an upper middle-class family and is among the most lasting works of 20th century literature.

From the wealth and security of the mid-Victorian era through the Edwardian highnoon to a post-war world of change, strikes and social malaise, Galsworthy shows the strengths and weaknesses, triumphs and failings of the extraordinary Forsyte clan against a detailed background of English life.

The 26-week series is being re-telecast by popular demand.

By 1975, the percentage of young adults—age 25-34—in the civilian labor force with 4 years of high school or more will have risen to 70 percent—10 percent more than 1965.

Central Environmental Agency Gains State Senate Approval

Frankfort, Ky.—The state Senate took a major step in governmental reorganization with the passage of a bill creating a centralized Department of Environmental Protection.

Such an umbrella agency for controlling environmental affairs was one of Gov. Wendell H. Ford's major campaign promises.

The bill, which already has passed the House, now goes back to that body for concurrence in some amendments adopted by the Senate. If the House concurs, as expected, the bill then goes to Governor Ford for his signature.

The new department, to begin life Jan. 1, 1973, absorbs the duties of the air and water pollution control commissions and the Division of Reclamation, as well as certain environmental responsibilities now handled by the Health Department.

It also permits any citizen to sue for enforcement of any environmental law or regulation.

Ten new regulations adopted by the Kentucky Air Pollution Control Commission have been filed with the Legislative Research Commission and are scheduled to become law April 9.

They Won After a Tussle

Roger Dean and Kimble Lee Collins, nine-year-old red-head twins, had themselves a time last Wednesday when they went fishing in the Big Sandy River with their mother, Mrs. Kim Collins, of Auxier.

They hooked a big'un, and when they finally got it onto dry land the line broke. So the two boys simply sat on the fish—a 23-inch channel cat—till their mother ran to their assistance.

Then, a bit shaken by the experience, Roger Dean tried to cast his bait into the stream again and hooked his brother in the eyelid. That necessitated a trip to the doctor. No serious damage done.

I wish only I could... (which narrows the rider down to one).

I wish I could ride only the horse (which would make that the only thing I could ride).

Oh, well! All that is merely to preface another classic example of a misplaced word. It was contained in a realtor's letter to a new home purchaser, and he wrote: "I have enclosed contracts on the sale of the property you are purchasing. Please execute all four copies together with your wife."

PCC To Be Link In TV Network

Teachers and other professional educators, as well as parents, will take part in a statewide television network discussion of open education Saturday (March 25).

The closed-circuit facilities of Kentucky Educational Television will link 17 separate workshops. One of these workshops will be at Prestonsburg Community College; others at each community college, except Madisonville, and at Eastern, Western, Morehead and Murray universities and Northern Kentucky State College.

Dr. John Bremer, founder of the Philadelphia Parkway School, an innovator of the open education concept, will serve the Kentucky Open Education Workshop as keynoter.

The seminar is sponsored by the Kentucky Education Association committee on instruction, the Kentucky Department of Education, and KETV, as well as UK through its Community College System.

Open education generally is defined as non-graded, with each child encouraged to proceed at his own pace. A high priority goal is to help each child become a self-directed, willing and, ultimately, an independent learner. Cooperation, rather than emphasis on competitive grading, is encouraged.

The plan is based on the theory that active exploration in a rich environment, offering a wide array of manipulative materials, will facilitate learning in children, and that children have both the competence and the right to make significant decisions concerning their own learning.

There will be separate discussions at each workshop, led by local coordinators. The 17 workshops will be linked for audio return, enabling participants to discuss applications of the open classroom concept with a group of respondents on the UK Lexington campus as well as with other participants in the separate workshops.

The respondents on the UK campus will include Dr. Bremer, Dr. Lyman Ginger, state superintendent of public instruction, and Mrs. Ellison.

The seminar will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until 1 p.m. (EST). Educators are attempting to encourage attendance by the general public and no pre-registration is required.

"Sarvis," Wild Early Bloomer

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD
(UK College of Agriculture)

Lexington, Ky.—One of the earliest flowering fruit trees of the wild is Amelanchier canadensis, the "sarvis."

Long before the gentle magic wand of returning spring begins to transform bare winter woods into a splendid mosaic of green and pink and lavender, the bloom of this shrub splashes the hillsides, crevices of perpendicular cliffs along the river, and other waste places of the land with great masses of misty white.

In the lexicon of the more sophisticated, this shrub is listed as Juneberry, serviceberry, and sometimes as "shadbush." But, to Kentucky mountain people, the common name has always been "sarvis."

Not only is the "sarvis" one of the earliest blooming shrubs of the wild, but its bittersweet, maroon-purple fruit also ripens earliest. This fruit, about the size of buckshot, ripens in early June and, according to wildlife biologists, provides food for more than 35 species of birds and 21 species of wild animals.

The sarvis belongs to the same family as the apple, cherry and plum. It grows well in moist soils and, in one or more species, is found in many areas across the United States. Its ripe fruit, while slightly bitter, is delicious and was once widely used by Indians in the manufacture of pemmican, an extremely nourishing food which later sustained many an explorer searching out the far reaches of North America.

Historians say the name, "shadbush," was given the shrub by early settlers along the eastern seaboard. In those days shad was a most important fish. Salted down in barrels, they formed a large part of the pioneers' food supply. The settlers called this shrub the "shadbush" because it always bloomed at the time shad were swarming upstream to spawn.

In Kentucky, its blooming has long signaled the spawning of white suckers, which country folk used to take from the shoals of streams at night with pine torches and long-handled gigs.

Although a wild shrub, the "sarvis" is rather easily transplanted or can be propagated from ripe seed. Although some trees may attain heights of up to 35 or 40 feet, it is usually low-growing. In either case, it makes a delightful and valuable addition to the orchard or homestead. The dense white flowers make an attractive show in early spring, and in the fall its leaves take on a beautiful shade of red. In between times, its fruit, resembling a tiny apple, attracts songbirds and provides ingredients for jellies and jams of unforgettable taste and flavor.

Some nurseries now offer sarvis trees for sale and it seems rather odd that in landscaping, this shrub, one of the loveliest Mother Nature has to offer, has been so long neglected for that purpose.

Ford Orders Dams Emptied

(In The Courier-Journal)

Frankfort, Ky.—Two dams made by coal companies in the hollows of Eastern Kentucky have been labeled "hazardous" by the state and they have been ordered removed to protect persons living below them.

Two other coal company dams have been classified as "potentially dangerous" and have been marked for further study by embankment and foundation experts.

Gov. Wendell H. Ford said he has issued instructions to destroy the two most dangerous dams and to "see what must be done" about the other two.

Ford's press secretary, Thomas L. Preston, said the governor is "genuinely concerned" about preventing an experience in Kentucky "like the one in West Virginia."

A search for such dams—used to collect and settle silt, slurry and sludge from coal operations—resulted from the Buffalo Creek disaster in West Virginia Feb. 26, when at least 115 persons were killed under an avalanche of water and coal waste turned loose after a dam's collapse.

Between 30 and 40 homes could be washed away by the waters held by one of the two condemned dams in Kentucky according to Jewell Graham, director of water in the Department of Natural Resources.

It is on Hale Branch, about two miles south of Carr Creek, in Knott county and was constructed, Graham said, without the required state approval of specifications.

Only three homes—but, said Graham, "maybe 15 or 20 lives"—are below the second dam, about a mile west of Jenkins on Fishpond Branch, a tributary of the North Fork of the Kentucky River in Letcher county.

It was constructed for coal washing purposes by Beth-Elkhorn Coal Corp., but was given to the state for recreational development about five years ago. The dam is about 100 feet high and holds a mixture of water and settled coal dust.

The two dams listed for more intense study are on Potter Fork at Haymond, (also near Jenkins) in Letcher county, and on Pond Creek near Elkhorn City in Pike county.

Fishtrap Reservoir Threatened By Heavy Sedimentation Load

(In The Courier-Journal)

The chairman of a House subcommittee has charged that the Army Corps of Engineers failed to protect an East Kentucky reservoir from the adverse effects of nearby coal mining on federally owned land, despite official policy requiring such action.

Rep. Henry Reuss, chairman of the House conservation and natural resources subcommittee, said that the problems caused by coal mining around Fishtrap Reservoir may mean that the project's recreation and fish-and-wildlife potential will never be achieved.

Reuss said the situation makes it "quite clear now that mineral production and the project purposes are not compatible."

The reservoir is in Pike county, just southeast of Pikeville, on the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River. The floodcontrol dam cost $53.9 million and was completed late in 1968.

A heavy load of silt is being deposited in parts of the lake by runoff from auger mines and from access roads serving both surface and underground mines. Coal dust dropped from trucks and auger loading facilities is also being washed into the reservoir.

The mines and access roads are on government-owned land that is a part of the reservoir project.

In a letter to Lt. Gen. F. J. Clarke, chief of engineers, Reuss pointed out that federal policy requires that mining on federal lands around reservoirs be done "in a manner that will not interfere with the primary purposes of the project, including public access."

Yet, said Reuss, a review of deeds executed by the corps in acquiring land for the projects shows that no regulatory safeguards on mining practices were written into the deeds.

He asked for an explanation of that omission.

Reuss also asked the corps to study its policies regarding extraction of minerals at other projects and to report to him whether the purchase of all mineral rights on corps projects would be advisable.

After a Courier-Journal story in December revealed the silting problem at Fishtrap, Reuss asked the corps to investigate.

The engineers responded with a detailed study which Reuss received late last month. His letter of response, charging that the Army failed to take proper steps to protect the reservoir, and the engineers' report were released by him Tuesday.

The report's central conclusion is that "the entire aesthetic and recreation quality of Fishtrap Lake is degraded by the sediment content which results in decreased aquatic productivity, limited fish population and a general reduction in the aesthetic qualities of the water itself."

The report also says:

"The construction of access and haul roads and auger mine benches has changed the Fishtrap Lake from a primitive appearing lake with steep, wooded undeveloped sides to one with a series of hillside scars running both horizontally and diagonally."

The engineers' study made these revelations about details of the silting problem:

A 6-foot layer of silt, deposited in a year, forced the corps to cancel plans to build a public access area on the lake at Lick Creek.

Small-boat access up Lick Creek was reduced by a distance of 1,000 feet in the past year because of silting.

Another layer of silt at the Grapevine Creek access site means that a temporary boat-launching facility there won't be usable this summer without dredging.

Access roads for coal mines "almost never are adequately designed but are constructed on the basis of experience and existing ground conditions." Few culverts are used and ditches become clogged with debris, with the result that the roads wash out badly.

Acid drainage is not now a problem in the area, but "as additional surface areas are disturbed, the potential for acid drainage problems will greatly increase."

The report said that the extent of the silting problem was fully realized last fall, when the water level was lowered for the winter—an annual practice at flood-control reservoirs so that they can absorb runoff from winter and spring rains.

Since late last year, the report said, the Fishtrap problem has been under close study, and owners of the mineral rights and mine operators soon will be called into conference to discuss the situation.

The mineral-rights owner was identified as the Berwind Corp., a holding company. Four operators said to do most of the mining were identified as Eugene Bane, Donald T. Johnson, Cecil Chaney and James Potter.

Representatives of the corps, the U. S. attorney's office in Lexington, and the Kentucky Reclamation Division, Water Pollution Control Commission and Department of Mines and Minerals spent several days in the reservoir area late in January.

Col. Kenneth McIntyre, head of the corp's Huntington (W. Va.) district, which has jurisdiction over the reservoir, said in a telephone interview that the corps would first seek voluntary action by the mine operators to correct the problems.

He said no decision had been made on what to do if the operators refuse. McIntyre also said he couldn't comment on whether the corps believes it has the power to order the owners to halt practices that are causing siltation.

The engineers' report outlines, in addition to voluntary action, four possible courses:

Taking criminal action against the operators, based on the 1899 Refuse Act which forbids discharges into navigable waters and their tributaries without a federal permit. But the report said it doubted that Fishtrap's waters would be considered navigable because there is no commercial use of them.

Filing civil suit, based on the same law, but this was also deemed unpromising.

Purchasing the mineral rights, so as to preclude further mining.

Dr. Hayes Heads Jr. College Group

Pippa Passes, Ky.—William S. Hayes, president of Alice Lloyd College, Pippa Passes, Ky., was elected president of the National Council of Independent Junior Colleges last week at the group's national convention in Dallas, Tex.

Dr. Hayes served as vice-president of the organization last year and served as chairman of the Committee on Legislation of the American Association of Junior Colleges, parent organization of the NCIJC. In this capacity he helped to keep the importance and position of two year colleges, including private schools, before national legislators.

Dr. Hayes is a past president of the Kentucky Junior College Association and a past committee chairman of the Council of Independent Kentucky Colleges and Universities.

The state Department of Economic Security says recent changes in federal stamp regulations will make an additional 105,000 Kentuckians eligible for stamps this year. The new rules allow persons with higher incomes to receive stamps.

Heavy Rains Assure Jigging Season

Frankfort, Ky.—The next two weeks may see more kingsize bass taken from Kentucky's major lakes than any other like period.

Everything points to a fine jig-fishing season and if the weatherman cooperates, water conditions should be just about right for that type fishing for most of March.

The unusually warm winter has caused the waters to remain warmer than in most years and with the abundant rains adding warmer water to the lakes, the temperature should be just about right. And those same rains have muddied the waters as they reached new highs and the settling of these conditions should put big black bass on the prowl.

Jig fishing is an art and a science devised by Kentucky fishermen on Herrington Lake many years ago. It is a science of catching the fish where they are, and with muddy, warmer water they are close to the banks. They may be feeding on juicy tidbits washed into the water during the rainy period, or they may be seeking the clearer water which first appears near the bank.

They can be caught also alongside sunken logs or over submerged stumps, in tree laps or in bushes near the banks which have been flooded and washed by the higher waters.

But, to jig fish, a special rig is required. It's simple to prepare, but requires the use of strong lines, hooks and poles. The jigging pole is from 10 to 12 feet in length, fairly rigid but not too heavy to handle. Onto this pole is tied a heavy-duty line of not less than 50-pound test, at a length of about six feet.

A large, rigid hook is attached to the end of this line and immediately above is placed a fairly heavy sinker. About 18 inches higher up the line is the cork, or floater. With a wad of three or four nightcrawlers draped onto the hook, the rig is completed.

The fisherman must scull his boat very quietly and slowly eight to ten feet from the bank. As the boat moves along, the nightcrawlers are jigged from the end of the line into the water at a depth almost up to the floater. The pole is handled in a sharp up-and-down (jigging) motion, and the lure is taken from the water periodically and placed down in likely-looking spots as the boat progresses along the bank.

Black bass are lethargic in the cooler waters and a bit bashful about taking the offered lure. Therefore, when the fisherman feels a slight tug or nibble at his bait, he should gently lower the line into the water until the cork comes to rest on the surface.

After fondling the worms for a few seconds the typical bass will then decide he likes what he tastes and will gobble up the bait as he makes a wild dash to the deeper waters. It is then that the fisherman "puts the steel" to the fish and hauls it into the boat with one gigantic effort.

Some fishermen garnish the hook with a couple of artificial nightcrawlers and have excellent luck. Others use a combination of live and artificial worms and they too catch a lot of fish. Either way jigging is an excellent method of harvesting good-size black bass but it does require much skill and a great deal of endurance.

This is but one type of jigging and occurs usually when the water is murky to muddy. There's another method practiced in clearer water at a greater depth whereby large minnows or nightcrawlers produce good catches.

But, right now is the time to get going on jig fishing. Every lake in the state should have suitable water for the next couple of weeks and possibly longer.

State Child Welfare Commissioner Evans Tracy says he will appoint a citizen's committee to investigate practices at his department's institutions for delinquent youth.

"Good Old Collard Greens"

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD
(UK COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE)

For years before newer knowledge brought about by scientific research became available, nutrition experts bemoaned the poor diet of Southern farmers, especially the tenant or sharecropper whose winter diet consisted mostly of grits, fatback, molasses, and collard greens.

Upon closer check, however, these researchers discovered to their amazement that many of these people were in far better physical shape than they thought or had been led to believe. Most were apparently well-nourished and eventually the truth came out that this state of health was largely due to the ubiquitous collard patch found on every farm. Unusually rich in natural vitamins and minerals, collard greens were providing the nourishment necessary to keep these people strong and healthy.

This story is oft told in the South and at least the part about the vitamin and mineral content of the plant is true. According to C. R. Roberts, extension horticulturist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, collard greens—and other greens, as well—are indeed replete with these valuable life-sustaining properties, especially vitamin C and vitamin A.

A corruption of "colewort," and old Anglo-Saxon term for "cabbage plants," the collard is a native of the eastern Mediterranean region or of Asia Minor. It has been in cultivation for so long and has been shifted about so much by migrating tribes and pre historic traders that it is not certain which of these two regions is the point of its origin. Anyway, it has a long history as a table viand.

Ancient Greeks cultivated and relished the collard. So did the Romans of the pre-Christian area. First mention of it being grown in America was in 1669, but because of its popularity in European gardens, was probably introduced somewhat earlier.

Essentially a cool weather plant, horticulturists say the collard will withstand a greater range of temperature, both heat and cold, than any other vegetable crop grown in the South. It does not thrive too well in hot weather, which gives it a strong, unattractive flavor. But let autumn and a few hard frosts come and it becomes high in sugar content and develops a wonderful taste—that is, for those who love potherbs. Like wild greens, it tastes best when cooked country style with a piece of hog jowl and eaten with cornbread and onions.

The collard is among the easiest of all vegetables to grow. One method of producing it is to sow the seed in rows from three to three and one-half feet apart and then, when the plants come up, thin to about 24 inches. Planting for a fall and early winter crop is usually done in late spring. Any type of soil that will grow cabbage will be satisfactory for collards.

Keep collard greens in the refrigerator at near 32 degrees until you are ready to cook them, Roberts suggested. Collards lose much of their valuable vitamin content if stored several days at temperature higher than this. He also noted that the thin part of the collard leaves contains much more vitamins and iron than the midribs. This poses no problem, since the thinner part of the leaves makes better eating than the thicker ribs anyway.

Despite the fact that Cato and other writers of ancient vintage were extolling the virtues and recommending the growing of collards as long as 200 years B. C., modern garden writers usually make short shrift of this plant. This is a pity because it is a good vegetable that no home garden should be without.

Kentucky's Court of Appeals judges are urging the General Assembly to adopt a constitutional amendment to reduce the high court's rapidly growing caseload.

In Volunteer Training Program

Five students from Martin high school recently completed a six-week volunteer training program (The Volunteens) under the direction of Sister Jane Frances Kaelin, LPN, at Our Lady of the Way hospital. The Volunteens will be active in promoting better patient care at the hospital. Some of their duties will include admitting and discharging patients, serving meals, feeding helpless patients, etc. The Volunteens are Maria Bradley, Connie Branham, Barbara Adkins, Cheryl Spencer, and Brenda Spurlock.

We improve with age.

We like to think of ourselves as the Chateau Lafite-Rothschild of the automotive world.

We keep getting better every year.

Since 1949, we've improved our little car over 2,200 times.

Last year we gave it a more powerful engine and nearly twice the luggage space it had before.

This year we added 29 more improvements.

We found a way to keep engine noise down.

We found a way to make it run better in cold weather.

And we found a way to make it run even smoother in cold, hot or whatever weather you have in mind.

So it goes on.

Since '49, we've made over a thousand body and chassis improvements.

Since '49, we've made over a thousand engine and transmission improvements.

And the reason for all this progress?

Since '49, we've spent absolutely no time making silly styling changes.

What you see, once again, is what you get.

Two Girls from Elliott and How They Became Morehead Students

West Liberty, Ky.—Morehead State University will mark its Golden Anniversary celebration this year. Established by an act of the General Assembly in 1922, the school has been the core of learning for young people from a wide area. They have come from hill counties, from the valleys of the Big Sandy, the Licking and the Ohio.

Since its founding the school has undergone at least five name changes—Morehead Normal School, Morehead State Normal School and Teachers College, Morehead State Teachers College, Morehead State College and Morehead State University. Each name change has symbolized growth and progress and each has been a part of the school's service through education.

Of course, some distance away in the same region, there has been Eastern Kentucky University at Richmond, a school that like Morehead prides itself on educational benefits to students over the state. Bob Martin, ECU head, is pleased when a student chooses Eastern as is Adron Doran, president of MSU, when a student enrolls in his school.

Though students at Morehead most frequently choose the school because their parents and grandparents enrolled there or the school offered exactly what they want, circumstance sometimes is a factor.

Circumstance has something to do with two young girls from Elliott county who after one semester at Eastern State Normal School did not quite make it back for the second. Circumstance, but little pomp, for in this year 1923 luxuries, conveniences and frills were not crowding the minds of young people. They were intent on getting an education.

"At the beginning of the fall semester," writes Mrs. Irene Brown Resko in her book "It Took Courage," "Eileen Gullett and Effie Rice (cousins) started to Eastern State Normal School at Richmond to enter their second semester of school there. They traveled by muledrawn wagon to Redwine. That was a distance of 20 miles or more from their home near Sandy Hook. They traveled over dirt roads, and a good portion of these followed streams and branches."

At Redwine the two girls boarded a train of the Morehead and North Fork Railroad—or The Morehead and No Further, as some students chose to call it—and rode to the C&O depot at Morehead. There they would change trains and make the trip on to Richmond.

"It was Friday and a beautiful day," says Mrs. Resko, a native of Elliott county and now a resident of South Amherst, Ohio. "On the train she (Effie Rice) and Eileen sat across the aisle from Roscoe Atkins, native of Elliott county who then resided at Morehead. He knew their parents and many of the folk around them."

The girls and Atkins arrived in Morehead at 12:30, had their boxes and bags transferred to the depot and found there would be a four-hour wait for the train to Richmond. Atkins and his wife America then invited the girls to their home till train time.

To while away the hours, the two girls and their hosts walked to the ground of the Normal School.

The campus then was made up of 365 acres, Hargis Hall, Withers Hall, Burgess Hall, Allie Young Hall and Hodson Hall. As the girls neared Burgess Hall they met Dean Charles D. Lewis, in bib overalls, clearing horse weeds from the grounds in preparation for the opening of the second semester on Monday.

Hodson Hall was an impressive building then, three stories with front porches. There they were introduced to Miss Royalty, Miss Humphrey, and the matron, Miss Watson, and all were joined by Dean Lewis, still in overalls.

During the conversation, the two girls were invited to remain at Morehead and give up the idea of going on to Richmond. There was no way of talking the matter over with their parents, back in Sandy Hook, so the decision was one for the girls to make. They asked the administrators about scholarships and were told something would be worked out so they could attend the school.

The girls decided to spend the night with Mr. and Mrs. Atkins and make their final decision next day, which would give them time to go on to Richmond. Having remained awake most of the night trying to reason through their problem, they overslept next morning, missed the train to Richmond and their decision was made for them. That morning they registered for classes in Morehead.

School life then was as different from that today as was home life. Girls' rooms in Hodson Hall were heated by coal-burning fireplaces. Boys enrolled in the school had the job of carrying coal and kindling wood. There were bathrooms on the second and third floors.

"There was a well outside Allie Young Hall with a hand pump," the author notes. "Water was carried from the well to the buildings. There were furnishing of a washstand with pitcher to carry water into the room. Since there was no running water in each room, they (the girls) carried their used and excess water out in slop jars and emptied it into the bathroom."

After three years at Morehead and with their credits transferred from Richmond, the girls were graduated.

"She (Effie Rice) further continued that her start at Morehead was most enjoyable and that the essence of the teaching may be seen in the lives of the students through the years."

Today Morehead State University is seeking stories, photos, documents and history connected with its 50 years of service in education. There are thousands of stories—a story in each student.

There are students who walked from Morgan and other counties even farther away to go to school at Morehead. When they got there they stayed till school was out before making the long walk back to the mountains. Others rode a horse or mule and some traveled in a jolt wagon.

To them the goal was education and any sacrifice was worth that coveted teacher's certificate.

There has been many celebrations and gatherings at Morehead State University but when Dr. and Mrs. Doan and Dr. Ray Hornback, assistant to the president, host MSU's Golden Anniversary, it will be the biggest "family reunion" ever held in the area. Grandparents, parents and children will return to renew acquaintances with former schoolmates they have loved through the years.

State Will Pay Relocation Costs

The Senate unanimously passed a bill requiring the State Highway Department to pay for moving poles, pipes and other facilities of publicly owned utilities when required in federal-aid highway construction.

Already passed by the House, the measure now goes to Governor Ford for signing.

Payment for relocation of such facilities has long been a problem and some 52 publicly owned water, sewer and gas utilities now owe the state $437,168 for relocations made only after Jan. 1, 1972.

However, legislators say its passage probably will enforce the Highway Department's current policy of not pressing for payment of past debts.

House Vote Kills Off-Track Betting

A bill to allow off-track betting in Kentucky died quietly at the starting gate as it was tabled in the House on a 61-20 vote.

The measure was opposed primarily on moral grounds although its sponsors, Rep. Jerry Kleier, D-Louisville, and Rep. Bruce Blythe, R-Louisville, said it would provide a "gold mine" of needed revenue as well as license and control a flourishing illegal business.

To make the bill more palatable, a committee substitute was added that would return half the revenue from the licensing of bookies to schools in districts where they operate.

It also provided for legalization of off-track wagering on a local-option basis.

Opponents still attacked the bill as having bad effects on public morals and on the racing business.

Rep. Bart Peak, D-Lexington, said the bill might tempt persons who normally do not bet to begin wagering, while Rep. Dexter Wright, R-Louisville, said it might cause many persons in the racing business to lose their jobs.

Dr. Samsell Aims At Pollution-Free Area Development

Dr. Gene L. Samsell, Jr., grandson of Mrs. F. D. Wellman, of Morehead, formerly of Prestonsburg, is putting his knowledge of water pollution to good use by developing an ecologically controlled lake in Lawrence county on the site of the boyhood home of his grandfather, the late Mr. Wellman.

Dr. Samsell, who received his Ph. D. in aquatic ecology from Virginia Polytechnic Institute after earning his A. B. in biology from Morehead State University and the M. A. from the University of Kentucky, has for two years worked on water pollution problems in Antarctica.

On the Lawrence county site he is developing a 65-acre ecologically controlled lake and a recreation area of some 400 acres of wooded wilderness which will be available to hunting, hiking and other forms of outdoor recreation.

The complete watershed of the lake is part of the development. To stimulate a community experiencing water pollution problems similar to those of a metropolitan area, Dr. Samsell is offering a select number of waterfront lots for development as residential sites. With a pollution-free environment as his goal, he has placed certain restrictions on prospective buyers of the one-acre sites.

Samsell is a member of the faculty of Virginia Commonwealth University at Richmond.

School Busing

By WILMAY

With no racial problem here, interest in the school busing issue is more limited. Most persons agree that improved education and other opportunities for all minorities (including the poorest whites,) are long past due, and that all of us are more or less to blame, from our pioneers who robbed the Red Man, down the line.

But mass evils cannot be corrected in decades, and a modern school will not more educate the migrant child than a palace will turn a reprobate into a prince, for the man makes the house, not the opposite. Put a tramp into a mansion and it becomes a pigsty. Put an energetic, good, thrifty citizen into a shanty and see him improve it. Such is fundamental to the ways of life. No child determines the quality of his education, but his heredity and environment are more decisive factors than the school he attends. Increased funds, better equipment and teachers, per se, will not produce good students. Time is essential. In most instances, generations are necessary for permanent progress. Primarily, it takes students with a desire to achieve. No race has a monopoly on that. Ambition is one parent of "advancement." Poverty is often the most powerful incentive. Booker T. Washington, Willie Mays, George Washington Carver, Pearl Bailey and others prove that America gladly gives individuals of any race abounding success if they work for it. But ambition, pride, and independence are being undermined in our land. The prolonged dole, without accompanying work programs, is responsible for this.

Schools desperately need funds for buildings and higher salaries for teachers. Why squander millions on buses, repairs, gas, drivers' wages, endanger the health and lives of pupils daily when traffic is already jammed, deny them time for study, play, and home chores, make PTA's impossible because of distance, remove children from their neighborhoods? Imagine the feelings of little folks and mothers, 12-20 miles apart, when Suzie breaks her leg or is taken violently ill in school!

Before integration began segregation was almost the rule, nearly everywhere, in suburbia and countless cities, because of restricted housing. Southerners preferred it so their children would not have to associate closely with many whose morals and mores are rated lower in published data, and because they did not want the quality of their education diminished by the admission of many with inferior I. Q.'s. The big news media attacked southerners viciously. Today, numerous legislators who sponsored intergration and forced school busing readily admit that the reason they send their own children to private schools that remain segregated is for quality education, identical to that of southerners. But they are never the target of the biased news media that held the South up to bitter scorn and ridicule. Consistency, what a jewel thou art! National lawmakers often vote themselves huge increases in salaries and fringe benefits that enable them to afford private schools and quality education for theirs—at your expense and mine. There are many things badly wrong in the U. S. and a blind man can see what is behind them.

Had equal opportunities been provided minorities earlier, few colored people would want school intergration. Among whites, their children often feel like ours would in private schools with the Kennedys and Rockefellerers. In published reports many of the best Negro leaders say intergration is a failure. Integration is a step in the right direction but grave danger lies in putting the cart before the horse. Negroes oppose busing. The black political convention went on record against it. It is the most absurd absurdity yet palmed off on John Q. Public, and that says something!

One good thing may come from it. It may unify Mr. and Mrs. Middle America to oppose other issues that are undermining the rights of citizens.

There is strength in union. If those who still believe in freedom do not unite and make themselves heard and felt soon, the day may come when we must get permission from Washington to eat breakfast! Why don't some of those promoting busing, etc. stop exempting the foundations by Fords, Rockefellerers, Kennedys, et cetera, from taxation, to unburden Mr. Average Citizen? Do those who started intergration, to give some quality education, want to provide your child and mine with the quality education the wealthy afford in private schools? It is the same principle. Motives behind many things being shoved off on us by men in both parties are not what they always appear on the surface to be. We should remember this.

Court Accepts Role of Agent For Bond Sale

The Floyd fiscal court Friday entered into a contract to act as fiscal agent for the Floyd County Board of Education in financing the construction of Phase 2 of the Allen Central high school complex at Eastern.

The court will sell a bond issue of $850,000 for the second phase of building at Eastern which will include a gymnasium, music department and auditorium. The role of fiscal agent was assumed by the court at the request of the board of education.

Superintendent of Schools Charles Clark said it is hoped the bonds will be sold and the building advertised in time for construction to begin in late May or early June.

Completion of the first phase of construction at Eastern—the school structure proper—is expected to be completed by that date, and school officials are hopeful that the second building project can be completed before the opening of schools next September.

Tackett-Kendrick

Miss Tackett is a graduate of McDowell high school and is presently attending Eastern Kentucky University, majoring in nursing.

Mr. Kendrick is also a graduate of McDowell high school and attended Alice Lloyd College. He is presently employed at the Ford Motor Company in Detroit, Michigan.

Visit with Retired Educator Moore Inspires Composer-Singer's New Recording

George L. Moore, former McDowell high school principal who has retired to the quiet of a Carter county farm, has found his name where he never expected it to be—on a music album that is on sale, coast to coast.

Mr. Moore, whose articles about old landmarks, places and people have earned a generous response, was visited in February, 1971 by Tom T. Hall, nationally known folksinger-composer. Later, Mr. Hall wrote a song which he calls "Kentucky February 27 '71". It is about his visit to the Moore home, gives some of the veteran educator's views about what is wrong with Appalachia. "Kentucky February 27" is one of the recordings in the album entitled, "In Search of a Song." Mr. Moore's picture, along with others, appears on the back of the album.

THE NATIONAL OBSERVER recently devoted a full page to Tom T. Hall and his music, and The Observer pointed out that "Kentucky February 27" is in the group of songs that marks the beginning of a new trend in folk music recording. This new Hall album is being used in some of the large universities in the study of music appreciation.

MIGRANT FARMERS

JERUSALEM (AP)—Arab farmers on the Jordan River's occupied west bank complained to the Israeli government of a labor shortage because too many workers from their area had jobs in Israel.

Since 1969, approximately 20,000 U. S. workers have been eligible for assistance under the Trade Expansion Act of 1962, the Labor Department reports. The Act provides cash readjustment allowances, employment service counseling, job placement, retraining and relocation for people who have lost their jobs due to increased imports.

Knows Grouse

The man who probably knows more about grouse than any other in the world is a fellow named Gordon Gullion. For the last 13 years 7700 acres of Minnesota woods have been his personal outdoor grouse laboratory. He has found that while grouse will eat almost anything (including snakes and salamanders) what really sustains them are the buds of such trees as aspen, ironwood, birch, alder, willow and many others.—SPORTS AFIELD

State's Clean-Air Regulations Become Law on April 9th

Frankfort, Ky.—After a series of setbacks including a temporary restraining order, the Kentucky Air Pollution Control Commission (KAPCC) recently took the last step toward making its new set of regulations law.

The commission filed the 10 regulations with the Legislative Research Commission March 10, and they are scheduled to become law April 9, 30 days after filing.

The regulations were originally due for filing by the end of January, the federal deadline for submission of an air pollution control plan to the federal Environmental Protection Agency, but the threat of legal actions pushed that date back.

At the Jan. 20 meeting of the KAPCC, James Neel, then an assistant attorney general, said proposed revisions to the regulations made after a Jan. 11 public hearing required that another public hearing be held before the regulations could be adopted.

At its Feb. 1 meeting the commission approved part of the plan, retaining most of the regulations and sending EPA the rest. At the Feb. 15 meeting, the commission adopted the present 10 regulations after several revisions.

On Feb. 28, the Citizen's League to Protect Surface Rights obtained a temporary restraining order from the Franklin Circuit Court. The league said the KAPCC had not provided adequate notice of the first public hearing.

On March 6, Judge Henry Meigs dissolved the restraining order but granted the league until March 10 to appeal his decision. They did not appeal.

Three Men Die In Pike, Knott From Gunfire

Three men in neighboring Pike and Knott counties were shot to death last week-end.

One of the victims was Bill Brewer, Jr., 20, Lackey lumber mill employee, who was instantly killed by a shotgun blast allegedly fired Saturday night by Archie Sturgill, 21, of the Lackey vicinity.

Two young Pike county coal miners, Tolbert Smith, 21, and Bobby Ray Casey, 23, were found Saturday in a car parked in a field off KY 194, near Freeburn. Both had been shot. Casey was dead, and Smith died en route to a doctor's office at Phelps.

The Knott county sheriff's office said it was reported that Brewer was shot at Branham's Drive-In, near Mousie, possibly as a result of an argument. Sturgill was arrested and remained a prisoner Tuesday in the Knott county jail, pending arraignment.

The Pike county men were found in Casey's late-model car. Pike county coroner Haskell Mullins said there is a possibility the men were shot elsewhere and driven to the spot where found. Investigating officers learned that the two men had been at a club at Matewan, W. Va., Friday night.

The 11th Commandment

St. John 15:9-14-17.

(St. John 15:9-14-17)
The eleventh Commandment, Jesus laid it on the line;
Read it yourself, so you will find,
That it's His word, and not mine.

Then Live it.
Love one another as I have loved you,
That's what Jesus said, and He is the truth.
And it's commanded from old age to youth.

So, Live it.
The whole world was made by love,
For God made it, And He is love,
And rules and reigns on His thrown above.

Let's Live it.
There's a world of difference in love and lust,
And to know God's way is certainly a must;
Live it before the sinner, so God they will trust.

Let's show the Gospel.
