

Dedication Crowd Hails Med Center Achievement

On what Congressman Carl D. Perkins termed "a great day for Eastern Kentucky," the Highlands Regional Medical Center near here was dedicated Sunday.

Addressing a crowd which overflowed the hospital's lobby, Perkins referred to the new center as "economic development at its best," explaining that to attract industry a region must first develop those facilities which make an area a better place in which to live. He added that the hospital "puts this community on a par with any in the country in terms of medical facilities."

The Congressman pointed to "the essential wisdom of some of the great legislative acts now in effect," as being instrumental in making the medical center possible. He especially cited the Hill-Burton Act of 1946 which provides federal funds to states for hospital building and modernization programs, and the Economic Development Act, a measure to stimulate the economic growth of communities. He also praised local leadership and the persistence and effort shown by the people of the Big Sandy region whom he called "rugged and dedicated."

Presiding over the ceremony was Prestonsburg mayor and physician, Dr. George P. Archer. Following the invocation, given by the Rev. W. D. Jagers, pastor of Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church, welcome and introductions were made, after which special singing was provided by Miss Rebecca Hayward.

Also speaking were Dr. William P. McElwain, Kentucky Commissioner of Health; the Rev. Milton Skiff, of New York, former minister of the First Presbyterian Church who led local fund-raising efforts for the hospital, and William W. Blunt, Jr., Washington, D. C., deputy assistant secretary for Economic Development.

Mr. Blunt lauded Perkins for his continuing support of EDA and said, "It is men (See Story 1, Back Page, Sec. 1)

Coal Truck Load 150 Cases Beer, Driver Arrested

A coal truck that at least temporarily is not hauling coal yielded 150 cases of beer last Thursday morning when it was searched by State Trooper Gary Rose on Mud Creek. Its driver, J. C. Reynolds, was arrested and booked in Magistrate Denzil Ray Hall's court on a transporting charge.

Timothy Wayne Ray was jailed here last Thursday by Troopers Rose and Music on a charge of cutting and wounding Mack Stewart with intent to kill. The warrant for Gray's arrest was sworn out by Delmar Castle, who said he was an eyewitness to the cutting. The incident occurred on Right Beaver Creek, it was said. Stewart was hospitalized, and his alleged assailant is under bond to appear in quarterly court.

Donie Tackett was jailed Monday by County Detective Sam Hale as a witness for whom a bench warrant had been issued after he had failed to report here for a trial. Others booked at the county jail within the week, charges against each and names of arresting officers follow:

Hassell Tackett, reckless use of a deadly weapon, by Deputy Sheriff Otto Fannin; Bill Stumbo, auto theft, by State Trooper Phillip Tucker; James Crisp, no operator's license, by State Trooper Dennie Williamson; Gordon Carroll, drunk driving, by State Trooper Estep; Freddy Conn, drunk driving and no operator's license, by State Trooper Williamson; Lenville Ousley, two counts of forgery, arrested by Deputy Sheriff Fannin; Ronald Damron, drunk driving and speeding, and Delmas Ross, drunk driving, both arrested by Prestonsburg Policeman Darrel J. Conley.

Lake Drawdown Crowds Spillway

John's Creek resumes its course as the waters of Dewey Lake roar through the Dewey Dam spillway. The flow is especially heavy at present as the Corps of Engineers has opened the gates for the reservoir's annual drawdown.

Saturday Vote To Name Party Pct. Committees

Floyd county Democrats, along with those of all other Kentucky counties, will meet at 10 a.m. Saturday at their respective voting precincts to elect three committeemen for each of the county's precincts.

Then, on the following Saturday at the same hour, precinct committee members will meet at the courthouse here to elect the Democratic county chairman.

W. W. Burchett, Prestonsburg attorney, is the present county chairman. As of this week, there was no apparent contention within the party for the chairmanship.

Saturday's voting at the precincts will be to elect a committeeman, a committeewoman and a committee member under 30 years of age. State Democratic Chairman J. R. Miller said the county chairman is directed to name a presiding officer for each precinct meeting.

Miller also said a new rule on proportional power will be adhered to strictly. This rule gives a precinct a weighted vote, depending on how many Democrats voted in it at the November election.

County Chairman Burchett said he is not acquainted with the new rule and so was unable to explain how it will work.

Health Department Offers Free Services

Six free health services are being offered by the Floyd County Health Department Monday through Friday each month and another is offered every day but Thursday.

The weight control class offered by the department is held Mondays, 7 p.m. at the Allen School Gym and Tuesday, at 7 at the Floyd County Health Department.

The schedule for outpost clinics to be held monthly are as follows: (first Monday, 10 (See Story 3, Back Page, Sec. 1)

Robinette Wins Move To Exhume Body of Spouse

Mont Robinette, 72, accused slayer of his wife, won a continuance of his murder trial from Monday till the January circuit court term when Circuit Judge Hollie Conley granted his motion for the body of his wife to be exhumed in order to determine the calibre of the bullet that killed her.

Had the case gone to trial as scheduled, the defense, it was held, would have hinged on the possibility that it was not Robinette's shot which caused the 58-year-old housewife's death.

Mrs. Robinette was buried at Staffordsville, Johnson county. Date for the exhumation was not set Monday, but the court will direct that it be done ahead of the Jan. 15 date set for the trial.

Officials claimed at the time of the shooting, which took place at the Robinette home in West Prestonsburg last June 10, that Mrs. Robinette was hit by a .22-calibre revolver bullet. Policeman Darrel J. Conley, who arrested Robinette, said he did not fire until Mrs. Robinette had been wounded and after he had taken her to the Prestonsburg General Hospital. He said he returned to the home from the hospital, there was fired on by Robinette and that he himself replied with a single shot.

The defendant's motion for the exhuming of his wife's body followed his return here from Lexington where he underwent psychiatric examination and was pronounced sane.

Jury Fails To Agree In Trial of Branham

The trial of Roy Branham, of Wheelwright, on a charge of attempting to bribe a public official ended here last Tuesday afternoon in the dismissal of the trial jury after it had reported as hopelessly disagreed. The jury deliberated about two hours before it was dismissed.

Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo announced soon thereafter that a second trial of the case will be held. "Ten members of the jury were for conviction, I understand, and there's no reason we shouldn't have a second trial," he said.

The trial was comparatively brief as only four witnesses testified. Betty Lykins, wife of Joe Lykins, of Mud Creek, told the jury that Sheriff Frank Leslie had told her at her home that Roy would take care of her. She said Branham was at her home numerous times and dropped off whiskey and beer at her place. She quoted Branham as saying he had to pay the Sheriff $500 a week and that he had to have a higher price for the intoxicants he delivered. She added that state troopers continued to raid her and that she grew tired of paying off and still being raided.

Her husband was not present for the trial. He was reported ill and in a Lexington hospital.

Walker Newsome, also of Mud Creek, claimed Branham brought whiskey and beer to his home and asked him to sell it for him. Newsome claimed he paid $8 a case for beer—approximately twice the regular price. He testified Branham told them that unless they bought from him they could not operate in this county.

Mrs. Newsome's testimony paralleled that of her husband.

Sheriff Leslie, the only defense witness, denied any connection with Branham and said his acquaintance with the defendant came only through legal business such as collection of taxes or service of legal papers. He emphasized that Branham had never approached him in an attempt to offer a bribe. Sheriff Leslie said he was at the Lykins home on one occasion and that that was while raiding it. He said he found one half-pint of whiskey during the search of the premises. Mrs. Lykins claimed she gave him the liquor.

Defense Attorney Thomas M. Place contended that the prosecution witnesses

Complaint by Wiley On Highway Damage Gets Action Promise

A complaint voiced by Avery Wiley, of Cliff, on coal-truck damage to KY 122, the Spurlock-Buck's Branch road, may get action at the state level.

Mr. Wiley first wrote Governor Ford about the route which links Middle Creek with Right Beaver Creek. Later, E. M. Hogge, commissioner of the Department of Motor Transportation, wrote that he had, as of Nov. 17, requested Col. Joe Glenn, chief of the department's Law Enforcement Division, to have an investigation made and to take any corrective action that may be necessary.

The section of the road on Buck's Branch has been most severely damaged, Mr. Wiley said.

Chorus To Offer 'Messiah' Sunday

Handel's "Messiah" will be presented at 3 p.m. Sunday at Pike Auditorium, Prestonsburg Community College, by the college's Community Chorus in the first of two pre-Christmas performances in the area.

A second performance of the world-famous oratorio will be given at 8 p.m. Dec. 4 at Mayo Memorial Methodist Church, Paintsville.

The Community Chorus, which has been an active group of top area musical talent for the last eight years, is conducted by Gus Kalos, head of the PCC music department.

The public is invited to the performances, which are given without charge.

This Town... That World

To a friend in Michigan:
I hasten to squelch any and all rumors that I am 81 years old... by-cracky!

FOR THE DEFENSE...

Because Santa has shown up early in different places this year, even before Thanksgiving, there are those who have written at some length in an attempt to put the old gent in his place. They accuse him of trying to horn in on Thanksgiving and hint that he may have designs on July 4.

Christmas did start arriving with, or before, Thanksgiving, in the news media, the person of Mr. Claus, in decorations and so on. But maybe it's not such a bad idea, after all. We say that, because Christmas really is a time of thanksgiving—and you don't have to have a turkey to say it.

They say now that those airbags aren't so effective as shock absorbers in the event of an automobile wreck. Before they give up on them, I'd like to suggest they try a couple of windbags I know.

SIGN OF THE TIMES

After calling a meeting of fellow-savants, I have figured out the meaning of the sign (see photo above) which appears at the side of US 23, outside the Wise Restaurant here. It's doubtful that any motorist will take time to slow down, study the sign and mull over its drift, but if any do I suggest they take along their Latin grammar.

And I have a suggestion for any pedestrian who consults the sign, decides the "Ped" refers to him and that the "Xing" hints that he may take off and cross the highway:

My friend, if you start Xing that highway, don't let the period of grace on your insurance policy run too long and be prepared to do some Y-ing and Z-ing on your way across.

So help me, the Department of Highways has outdone itself, this time. I hope there isn't a next time.

Perkins Challenges Projection Of Area Population Decrease

Seventh District Congressman Carl D. Perkins is one of those who puts no stock in these predictions that Floyd and other counties of the area are due for a population decrease.

He spelled out the grounds for his disagreement with population projections made recently by the Kentucky Program Development Office while he was addressing a gathering of hundreds at the dedication last Sunday afternoon of the Highlands Regional Medical Center, near here.

"It seems to me these projections were made in a vacuum," the Congressman said. He added that these gloomy predictions fail to take into account the long-term trends in Eastern Kentucky population.

Pointing to the record in the 1960's when, he said, the national administration was

Bell Views Plant Cost At $860,000 Doubled Capacity Of Water System Subject of Study

Bell Engineers, Lexington, told the Prestonsburg Water & Gas Commission recently that the proposed doubling of the capacity of its water plant will cost approximately $860,000.

And, although financing is uncertain and no date for the work is yet in sight, the work will have to be done, William O. Goebel, chairman of the commission, said last week.

The proposed enlargement of the plant would increase its capacity from 1 to 2 million gallons of water per day.

Bell Engineers told the commission that doubling the capacity of the plant will provide an adequate water supply for the next 10 years and that an extra million gallons in capacity can be added later at relatively small cost. The lower cost of adding to the plant later, it was explained, will be possible because filters and other equipment will be installed when the plant capacity is doubled, leaving the purchase and installation of extra pumps the main cost when the plant is increased to 3-million-gallon capacity.

Mr. Goebel said the necessity for an additional million gallons of water arises from the fact that the present 1-million-per-day plant is being operated at 70 percent of its capacity and that a water plant should never be used beyond 60 percent because of the critical situation a breakdown could create. Addition of heavy consumers also could create a problem. As a practical matter, pumps should not be operated more than 8 hours of the 24 in a day, it was said.

Middle Creek and Bull Creek residents have been seeking development of water distribution systems, and if these become a reality the Prestonsburg system would in all probability be called on for water.

Bell Engineers also have told the water and gas system that construction of a secondary treatment sewage plant such as the Kentucky Water Pollution Control Commission demands of Prestonsburg, with a 1975 deadline, will cost an estimated $550,000.

Sewer plant construction and additions, however, suffered a setback recently when it was announced that federal funds for such work will not be available.

Prestonsburg, however, holds a top position when and if funds are available. Its preliminary work has already been done, and its application for assistance is ready.

"Without federal funds, we just can't do this sewage treatment work," Mr. Goebel said.

But few, if any, other cities can, either.

Sports Afield

By Ted Kesting

"Training a hunting dog is a big thing in a man's life, but it should not be taken so all-fired seriously that the fun of the business is lost. It's surprising how often a man who can successfully hold down a good job, raise a family and figure out how to meet harmoniously with his wife, gets all in a clutch when it comes to training a dog."

Those are the words of Gun Dogs Editor Jerome B. Robinson, of Sports Afield.

If he is worth his salt, a well-bred bird dog is going to point his birds, the retriever will naturally want to bring you whatever falls from the sky, the spaniel will naturally flush and retrieve, and the hound will follow a track and give voice, without any help from you. These are inherited traits and generations of careful breeding have instilled these traits so deeply that they have become instinctive in modern hunting breeds. With calm, thoughtful encouragement from his owner the modern well-bred dog will learn to do his field work in a manner that makes him a good companion and a good hunter.

It takes a lot of refined training to develop a dog that will win in competition where standards are tough, but training an ordinary, decent gun dog is easy if you don't sweat it.

Men who succeed in daily life do so because they know how to gain the respect of those around them and they go out of their way to make people like them. Dog training demands the same accomplishment. Make the dog respect and like you. From then on training is a simple matter of logical instruction. And it should be fun.

A well-bred pup from one of the pointing breeds is going to point his birds naturally unless you confuse him to the extent that his natural instincts are addled. He's going to break and chase, too. But instincts will stop him on point once he learns to discriminate among scents and realizes that unseen birds are ahead.

It's the same with retrievers. Any eight-week-old retriever pup will drag a rolled up sock back to you if you first tease him with it and then toss it a short distance away. Generations of breeding have built into him an overwhelming desire to bring things to you.

You don't have to teach him to pick things up and bring them back to you. Your job is to show him how to retrieve with style—delivering to hand, marking accurately, taking hand signals to unmarked falls and so on.

Before you can train effectively, you need to learn to look at problems from the dog's point of view. Train yourself to ask, "Does the dog understand what I mean?" If not, why not? Most dog owners who fail in training crash because they have never learned to show the dog what they want him to do before they begin harassing him for not doing it.

How Education Pays Off Told In New Studies

Special to The Times

New York, Nov. 25—The current and prospective earning capacity of Floyd county residents has reached new heights.

It is linked to the fact that they are getting more schooling, before entering the labor force, than ever before.

And this, according to studies made at the University of Michigan, the Department of Commerce and elsewhere, is a crucial factor in determining how much salary a person can command, now and during the rest of his working career.

They show, in general, that a man who has had four years of college is currently making 45 percent more than a high school graduate, that a high school graduate receives 27 percent more than a person who has had eight years of elementary schooling and that those who have not completed the eight years average 26 percent less than those who have.

Residents of Floyd county are presently getting a median of 8.4 years of education, the figures show. It is more than they would have received in former years. In 1960 the median number of years completed was 8.0.

Locally, 23.8 percent of the male population and 25.1 percent of the female are high school graduates. Many of them have continued on to college.

The situation is quite different from that in some parts of the country. On the basis of figures from Washington, there are some 18,500,000 adults in the United States who cannot read and write well enough to fill out applications for social security, for a job or for a drivers license. Many others are completely illiterate.

As for the younger generation, they appear to have shifted their stance in the past few years. They are staying in school longer than they did in the recent past.

The added amount of schooling they have been acquiring, compared with ten years ago, places them in an advantageous position with respect to their counterparts in many sections of the country.

For hundreds of local governments, this trend toward more schooling has added to their operating costs and has created financial problems.

Tony Boyle Betrayed The UMWA Pensioner

"Just before his death Mr. Lewis confided to me that his deepest concern was that W. A. "Tony" Boyle would destroy the Welfare Fund just as he was destroying the Union."

That's what Josephine Roche said in the UMWA Journal (Nov. 15, 1972). She should know. She was one of Lewis' closest friends and neutral Trustee and Director of the UMWA Welfare and Retirement Fund for over 20 years.

Boyle Destroys— Arnold Miller Builds

END FRAUD: Arnold Miller will manage the Welfare Fund responsibly to raise your pension to $200-a-month.

The courts found that Tony Boyle defrauded pensioners. Boyle kept $86 million in Welfare Fund money in secret checking accounts that didn't pay one penny interest. Boyle's banker friend got rich, but your Fund lost $50 million.

END SWEETHEART DEALS: Arnold Miller will end sweetheart deals to provide pensions for totally disabled miners.

Boyle signed sweetheart contracts with 17 giant coal companies in 1968 that let them pay only 20¢ a ton royalty into the Fund. Pensioners lost at least $15 million.

COLLECT ALL ROYALTIES. Arnold Miller will collect delinquent royalties because he believes disabled miners and widows deserve to keep their medical cards.

As much as $9 million was owed to the Fund by operators during Boyle's term of office.

ORGANIZE SCAB COAL: Arnold Miller will push to organize non-union mines to raise the money for pensions and benefits for every UMWA member eligible to receive them.

The amount of scab coal INCREASED while Boyle was president. Today, more than 135 million tons of non-UMWA coal are mined every year, which could bring $94 million into the Welfare Fund if they were organized.

Pension Fund Founder Josephine Roche Says:

"As one who has been associated with the Fund since it began, I believe the candidacy of Arnold Miller is our immediate and best hope for protecting the pension and benefits that are currently in jeopardy. I have great confidence in Mr. Miller to do the job." UMWA Journal Nov. 15, 1972

How KAI Could Help

A few years ago, a group of Prestonsburg men who were interested in promoting small industry in the hope of defeating the county's chronic unemployment situation, built a large building at West Prestonsburg to house a manufacturing plant.

That became the location of Kentucky Appalachian Industries (KAI). Later, the building was enlarged to provide 30,000 square feet of floor space.

The only reason for that investment and for the building to be standing there was to provide work for Floyd county people and to add a much-needed payroll to the economy.

The building for a time achieved that, but for many months now its doors have been closed. Although it is no longer operating, KAI has gained control of the building, and it may stand there unoccupied till it falls.

Floyd county still needs new industry. If that building had been available, another plant would have occupied it, months ago. But it isn't available and it will not be, unless KAI still has a warm spot for us and lets new occupants come in.

LETTERS To the Editor Speaking for Children

Editor, The Times:

We hear the word "please" a great deal in our lives. This letter is to say a simple "thank you." It is signed only by two, but actually comes from five million children who suffer from lung-damaging diseases. These children are grateful to the many people in Prestonsburg who gave so generously to the Breath of Life Campaign; our special thanks to Mrs. Montie Rice and the volunteers who donated their valuable time and untiring efforts in all the campaign activities; to the newspapers, radio and television stations; for their assistance and interest in telling the public about these children and their fight for breath.

All of these people have shown they really care about our children by helping to raise funds in the Prestonsburg area which will help meet needs on many levels of treatment, research and education.

The research to find a control for C-F is accelerating, bolstered by a growing interest in genetic diseases for which C-F is considered a model, due to its complex nature. The medical care now provided in 110 C-F centers is lengthening the lives of our C-F children and in many cases, relieving and curing the conditions of children suffering severe asthma, chronic bronchitis, bronchiectasis and a condition sometimes called childhood emphysema.

Encouraged by the progress we can report, we thank those responsible—and renew our dedication to the continuation of this fight against lung-damaging diseases in our children.

Campaign Chairman

Consumer Comments

By ED W. HANCOCK
(Attorney General of Kentucky)

A very angry young man called on our Consumer Hotline recently and told us that his wife had signed a contract for $100 worth of baby pictures. He said a salesman had called while he was at work and sold his wife the pictures.

In the past, such a contract would have to be honored at the expense of the consumer. Now, however, under the new "three-day cooling-off period" law, the consumer may rescind, in writing, within three days, any contract amount to $25.00 or more made by a salesman who contacted him at his home without being invited to do so.

This relieves the consumer from most, but not all, responsibilities under the contract. The law also provides that, upon cancellation of a contract on which there has been a down payment, the seller is entitled to keep, as a cancellation fee, 5 percent of the cash price but not exceeding the amount of the cash down payment.

As a result of this new law, the young man whose wife signed the contract for baby pictures may be able to avoid the results which might otherwise have occurred.

If you have a consumer complaint or problem, you are invited to call the Consumer Hotline, toll-free, at 1-800-372-2960.

Nursing Home Here Gains Accreditation From Joint Council

Mountain Manor Nursing Home of Prestonsburg has been accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals, according to word recently received by Mrs. Eleanor Robinson, administrator. This recognition is the result of a field survey made by a representative of the Joint Commission's Accreditation Council for Long-Term Care Facilities.

The Council has set standards based on the principle that the patient shall be under a continuing planned program of care which focuses on his total needs. As a part of the Joint Commission, the Council conducts a voluntary program for accreditation. The Council seeks to recognize, and to identify for the public, facilities providing a high quality of long term care. The program covers extended care, nursing care and resident care facilities.

Accreditation of Mountain Manor of Prestonsburg means that the facility has voluntarily chosen to operate according to standards set by a professional, knowledgeable and nationally recognized group of health professionals.

Reading Council Has Last Meet of Year

Floyd County Title I Director Ray Brackett and Betsy Mynhier, state reading consultant, were guest-speakers at the last Jenny Wiley Council meeting of the year, held recently at the Allen school.

Miss Virginia Skeans, Martin reading teacher, introduced the first speaker, who discussed "Perspectives, Progress, and Forecast in Education." Mr. Brackett told council members that more citizens are achieving higher levels of education than ever before and that more than half of all students in the country, ages 18-21, are enrolled in colleges and universities.

"National statistics show," pointed out Mr. Brackett, "that teachers are better qualified with 97 percent of all teachers having earned a bachelor's degree and 27 percent having earned a masters."

The Title I director told Council members that educational expenditures have more than doubled since 1963, and the Federal education dollar has increased four-fold in the last decade.

Concerning the role of the federal government in the future Mr. Brackett said there will probably be a greater emphasis on monitoring, auditing, and evaluation. Additional money may be spent but greater restrictions can be expected.

He included in his discussion a brief progress report on the Title I reading program in Floyd county.

Miss Pauline Hicks, coordinator for the Right to Read program recently begun at Clark elementary school, introduced the second speaker, State Reading Consultant Betsy Mynhier.

Speaking on the topic, "Resources and Materials," Miss Mynhier told council members that children cannot be successful in other subject matter areas unless they have skills in unlocking words and understanding the language.

"Teachers are less accountable to supervisors and principals than to the individual child," said Miss Mynhier. "We are accountable to the student. We must teach him to function first of all as an individual, and we must give him the fundamental skills needed in reading."

Miss Mynhier suggested ways of better informing parents of their children's progress and activities such as newsletters and demonstrations of techniques and materials.

New materials were displayed and suggestions were offered in the form of printed handouts. Refreshments were provided by the Allen school reading personnel.

The Jenny Wiley Council is an affiliate of the International Reading Association.

Three Floyd Boys Win Seventh Place In Nat'l Contests

Three of the four boys who represented Kentucky at the National Poultry-Judging Contest in Chicago last Saturday were from this county.

These three—Jeffrey Martin, Kent Flanery and Stephen Herald, all of Langley—and Jim Seelhorst, of South Shore, Ky., went to Chicago as Kentucky's championship poultry-judging team. There they placed seventh in both the Market Bird and Egg sections of the competition and 15th in the Producing Hens section.

Kent Flanery was awarded an individual medal for his fifth-place ranking in the Egg section.

The team was accompanied to the national event by its coach, Jack Friar, extension agent.

The Religious Instinct In Higher Animals.

Do many species of higher animals show that they have some kind of a religious instinct? Do they know the difference between right and wrong? Do they have a knowledge of what death means? Do they often make preparations for dying?

Most people would answer no to these questions. But the time has come for man to make a new appraisal of nature and her creatures. Some foreseeing men are now studying animals closely from a psychological standpoint; they are learning many new things about them. Man has always treated the lower animals as "dumb brutes," and has always used them to suit his will and to kill them "just for fun."

The time will come when man will realize he is a brother to the animals. Many of them show they have a knowledge of right and wrong. Take a dog, for example. He knows when he has done wrong and he shows it by his "hang-dog look" and by tucking his tail between his legs.

A writer who spent a year studying the elephants of Africa came up with some surprising and little-known facts about them. They are beyond doubt the most intelligent of all the animals. They show a sense of right and wrong; they know what death means, and when a member of the herd dies the others mourn over it and then build a monument to its memory. They also show remorse. The writer told how a big bull elephant had to kill a man who was trying to capture a young member of the herd. After this murder, the bull elephant showed his remorse by going along to the spot where he had killed the man and there he would stand for an hour or more as if trying to appease his guilty conscience.

Dogs can tell about death. They know when death is about to strike in the family and often howl and carry on something awful. A dog has been known to go to the grave of a beloved master and there remain, refusing to leave, or to take food.

Take a big buck deer which has long been the leader of his herd, the master of his domain. In time, the years catch up with him; his hair begins to slip off in spots; his teeth wear out and he can't eat like he once could. Then along comes a young buck to challenge his rule over the herd. The old one fights desperately but is no longer a match for the stalwart young buck. He is badly beaten in battle, dethroned, and now knows his life is no longer worth living. He knows that death is welcome now, and he makes ready for it in his own special way. Not one of the herd will be permitted to see him die! He slips away from the herd he has ruled for so long and slowly, deliberately, he goes through the woods, seeking a soft, mossy bed under the trees. There he lies down to die. Before he dies, he takes one last fond look about the forest he has loved and ruled so long; he sees the sun shining brightly on the green leaves; he hears the song of the wind and it seems like a sad requiem for him. He closes his eyes and dies slowly, peacefully.

Many other animals seek death in much the same way. Dogs and cats often steal away to find some secret place to die. Even a lowly animal like the skunk has been known to fix it a bed in which to lie down and die; many other animals prepare a soft bed of leaves and moss to die in; they seem to want to die alone. One might well ask, Why? Is it because they wish to be alone in the last hours of life so as to make peace with their Divine Creator? There are many strange mysteries in nature we do not yet fully understand. The Scriptures say, "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." This is the last verse of the Book of Psalms. Most everything on earth has a song of some kind. Birds sing continually through the spring and summer days; the insects also sing incessantly day and night; rabbits sing soft love songs on moonlit nights; mice often sing; toads sing; chipmunks sing a pretty tune in the spring of the year. Most all the animals can sing except the snakes; they have no voice. Perhaps the Creator of Life didn't want snakes singing His praise. I truly believe that most all of nature's creatures make music to praise the glory of life and the creation of God. Scientists ruin this picture for us when they say: "Birds sing to defend their territory against other birds." This is far from giving the true picture of why birds sing. They sing mainly because they are happy and because they love life. I believe they have a dim knowledge of Divine Creator and sing the glories of His creation. Many birds sing all through the winter, when there is no need to defend any territory; many of them also keep right on singing long after their young ones are fully grown. Again say, Birds sing because they are happy and love to praise the wonderful works of God.

Dec. 1, Deadline For School Essays

The deadline for principals in Kentucky to submit their schools' winning entries in the 1972 Conservation Essay Contest is Friday, December 1.

The contest, open to all students in Kentucky schools, is a public service program of The Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times. The subject of this year's contest is "Trees—Their Effect on Me and My Local Environment."

Each principal should send his school's top essay to the office of his local school system superintendent where it will be processed and forwarded for district judging. Soil and Water Conservation offices in each county will coordinate the district judging.

District winners will each receive a $25 U. S. Savings Bond and a plaque from the contest sponsors. District runners-up and school winners will receive certificates.

The best essay in each of Kentucky's 121 Soil and Water Conservation districts will be judged for state awards. First place will earn a $500 U. S. Savings Bond, second place a $200 bond, and third place a $100 bond.

The three state winners, their parents and teachers will be honored guests at the annual Farm Awards Luncheon in Louisville in February where the top prizes will be awarded.

State TB Division Sets Up New Unit for Fungus Disease

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Commissioner of Health William P. McElwain, M. D., announced today that H. Mac Vandiviere, M. D., director of the Division of Tuberculosis Control, and his division are establishing Kentucky's first specialized hospital facility for treating fungus diseases of the lung. The new unit will operate at the Paris Tuberculosis Hospital and will also provide laboratory facilities to serve patients throughout the state, including those being treated by private physicians.

"Kentucky has the highest rate in the nation for histoplasmosis and blastomycosis, yet a survey made by the TB division indicates that only one-fourth of the cases are properly diagnosed," says Dr. Vandiviere. Both diseases start with the symptoms of common respiratory illness, but on occasion can be fatal if not treated, the molds are found in soil; histoplasmosis spores are especially common around chicken houses or near colonies of bats and bird roosting areas. Blastomycosis is less common, but can be a more serious disease than histo.

Fortunately, the University of Kentucky College of Medicine has an exceptionally fine group of specialists in mycology (the study of fungus-caused diseases). The Veterans Administration National Reference Laboratory for mycotic disease is located at the University and the Lexington Veterans Administration National Reference Laboratory for mycotic disease is located at the University and the Lexington Veterans Administration Hospital.

"The new mycology unit at Paris will be able to use the unique resource of this outstanding group of physicians to provide the best possible care for patients, through this cooperative program," Dr. Vandiviere adds. In addition, the centralization of hospital and laboratory facilities is expected to save the state money in the long run, by providing more accurate diagnosis and more effective treatment for patients. Fungus disease victims have sometimes been improperly diagnosed as having tuberculosis, or have been repeatedly admitted to hospitals for undiagnosed illnesses, causing undue expense to the patient or the taxpayer.

P. A. Pichardo, M. D., currently director of TB District Six and based in Glasgow, will be the director of the clinical unit at Paris and medical director of the Paris chest hospital. Dr. Pichardo has had extensive experience in treating fungus diseases and is considered extremely well qualified to head this unit. The laboratory director will be Richard Kruse, currently microbiologist at Fort Detrick, Maryland; he has wide experience in mycology laboratory techniques and will be employed through the Mycology Program of the Department of Community Medicine, University of Kentucky College of Medicine.

proof of the cause of your hair loss. Many conditions can cause hair loss. No matter which one is causing your hair loss, if you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead you are beyond help. If you still have hair on the top of your head, don't put it off until it's all off. It doesn't make sense for a man to let himself go bald, certainly not without seeing a National Hair and Scalp Consultant to see if we can help you.

Whatever Things

By DONALD E. WILDMON

Some years ago a preacher was sitting alone in his study late at night. He was desperately worried about a very difficult problem. The problem was of great concern to the preacher. As he sat worrying about the problem, he said something happened to him that is worth passing on.

"Along about midnight God came to me and said, 'Quayle, you go to bed. I'll sit up the rest of the night.'" So Bishop Quayle took God at His word and went to bed. And God sat up the rest of that night.

Worry has never helped a single man. It has hurt many. One man remarked once that he had worried about a lot of things in his life, and that most of them never came to pass. All his worrying was wasted.

Now there is a difference between worry and concern. We are to be concerned, to care. But worry is undue and unnecessary mental torture, and it taxes our mental health. Maybe God is trying to say something to us by leaving the word completely out of His book.

Somewhere along life's way it is of great advantage to us to learn to turn some of life's problems over to the Creator. For it is too difficult a road to try to travel all alone. Life hands out some big burdens, and too many of them can weigh us down.

The Galilean gave an invitation once which some of us should take advantage of. "Come to me, all who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn from me; for I am gentle and lowly in heart, and you will find rest for your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden light."

There are some things in life which we need to learn to turn over to the Maker of life. For all our worrying will not help matters one iota, but worry will sap our strength and deform our personality. Worry—negative thinking—has nothing of help to give to us.

Most of us are weighted down pretty often by some burden. Life has its own special way of handing out to each of us some pretty tough loads. Life is not easy, it was not intended to be. But neither was it intended that we worry.

Our God has promised to us that He will give us rest. It seems not only foolish but also blasphemy to refuse His promise. Yet we worry over things which have already happened, or things over which we have absolutely no control, or things that could happen in the future! Not only that, but some of us worry over things that will never happen!

There comes a time in our concern—often in the midnight of our concern—when we need to turn things over to God. They are too big for us. Then we can go to bed, and let God sit up the rest of the night.

You can be certain of one thing—He will.

East. Ky. CEP Gets $2,368,328

The Concentrated Employment Program (CEP), sponsored by the Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program, Inc., Hazard, has been funded to operate through October 31, 1973.

The U. S. Department of Labor's Regional Manpower Administrator William U. Norwood, Atlanta, said federal funds in the amount of $2,368,328 have been allocated to serve 2,128 individuals having long histories of unemployment in Floyd, Bell, Breathitt, Carter, Clay, Elliott, Harlan, Jackson, Johnson, Knott, Knox, Lawrence, Leslie, Letcher, Magoffin, Martin, Menifee, Morgan, Owsley, Perry, Pike and Wolfe counties.

CEP seeks to bring together in one unified effort the various manpower programs administered by the U. S. Department of Labor to help the hard-core disadvantaged in the heaviest areas of unemployment prepare for, find, and hold permanent jobs.

Operating through a single local sponsor, CEP seeks out the hard-core unemployed in areas of concentrated unemployment. The program makes available to such persons manpower and related supportive services, including orientation, basic education, counseling, physical examinations, medical treatment, work experience, job training, job development, and job placement.

The Kentucky Employment Service determines the need for workers in the occupations in which training is to be provided and offers other supportive services. The State Department of Education's Vocational Division will provide academic services during the period of vocational training.

During last program year Eastern Kentucky CEP placed 1309 in jobs with an average starting wage of $2.01 per hour.

The programs central office is located in Hazard, and has branch offices in Prestonsburg, Jackson, Olive Hill, Manchester, Hazard, Pineville and Pikeville.

Bible Society Opens Atlanta Regional Office
The American Bible Society has opened an office in Atlanta, Ga., to serve the Scripture needs of the newly created 13-state Southern region in its National Distribution Department. The new office is located at 220 Parkdale Drive, N. E. Atlanta, Ga. 30345.
The Rev. J. Edward Cunningham, executive secretary of the Southern region, explained the Atlanta base was selected to meet the increasing demands for Scriptures in the area from Virginia to Texas, which has a population of 56 million people. The 13 states formerly constituted part of the Eastern and Central Regions, which have offices in New York and Chicago, respectively. The Society also maintains a Western and Pacific Regional office in Los Angeles.

State Deputy Health Commissioner for Environment Ralph Pickard says that, in 1972, Kentucky will receive less than one-half the federal money it got last year for construction of sewage treatment plants.

County's Share Of VA Spending Over $1 Million

The Veterans Administration expended $193,767,161 in federal funds for Kentucky veterans during the past fiscal year. A tabulation released today by the VA says this is an increase of $22 million over fiscal year 1971.

Floyd county received $1,116,570 during the year.

J. G. Ratliff, director of the VA Regional Office in Louisville, said more than $150 million had been paid directly to Kentucky's 401,000 veterans.

Veterans with disabilities resulting from service are awarded compensation regardless of any other income they may have. Those totally disabled from causes other than active duty and who have limited incomes are awarded pensions. State-wide compensation and pension costs amounts to $114,896,321, of which $847,935 went to Floyd veterans.

Educational costs of the VA in the state amounted to $21,242,258. These readjustment and vocational rehabilitation expenditures amounted to $156,768 in this county.

Insurance and indemnities were paid to Kentucky veterans in the amount of $12,448,102 with this county's veterans receiving $91,867.

The VA made direct loans of $3,369,743 to Kentucky veterans for purchasing homes. Loans totalling $20,000 were made to Floyd veterans.

Not under his jurisdiction are the state's two VA hospitals at Louisville and Lexington. The remainder of the expenditures was for their operating and construction costs as well as the salaries of the employees in the regional office.

Construction at the state's two hospitals amounted to $7,592,109 with Louisville receiving $1,901,811 and Lexington receiving $5,690,298 for new additions and expansions.

Hospital and operating costs at the Lexington hospital was $18,462,467 and at Louisville the cost of operating the hospital and the regional office was $15,756,181.

Labor Department Approves $2,368,328 For CEP in E. Ky.

A Concentrated Employment Program (CEP), sponsored by the Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program, Inc., Hazard, has been funded to operate in Floyd and other Eastern Kentucky counties through October 31, next year.

The U. S. Department of Labor's Regional Manpower administrator, William U. Norwood, Atlanta, said federal funds in the amount of $2,368,328 have been allocated to serve 2,128 individuals having long histories of unemployment in the following 22 counties in Kentucky: Bell, Breathitt, Carter, Clay, Elliott, Floyd, Harlan, Jackson, Johnson, Knott, Knox, Lawrence, Leslie, Letcher, Magoffin, Martin, Menifee, Morgan, Owsley, Perry, Pike, and Wolfe.

CEP seeks to bring together in one unified effort the various manpower programs administered by the U. S. Department of Labor to help the hard-core disadvantaged in the heaviest areas of unemployment prepare for, find, and hold permanent jobs.

Operating through a single local sponsor, CEP seeks out the hard-core unemployed in areas of concentrated unemployment. The program makes available to such persons manpower and related supportive services, including orientation, basic education, counseling, physical examinations, medical treatment, work experience, job training, job development, and job placement.

Stream Grouping Due December 12

The Kentucky Water Pollution Control Commission, which recently held a hearing here on the classification of streams in this section of the state, is expected to announce the classifications of all Kentucky waters, Dec. 12.

This decision is expected to be reached at that time, despite protests by many that the agricultural classification to which most streams of this section appear headed relegates them to the status of little better than open sewers. The commission contends, however, that so-called agricultural waters will not be offensive to sight or smell.

Although the Water Pollution Control Commission will take the responsibility of classifying all streams, it will cease to exist after Jan. 1 when the new Department of Environmental Protection will take over. Again, the commission action may be premature, because a new federal water pollution law extends federal jurisdiction to all the rivers of Kentucky and other states. In the past, federal control was restricted only to those streams which cross state lines, but the new law passed by Congress over President Nixon's veto lifts that restriction.

Under the federal law, the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency is in the process of setting effluent-limitation standards, raising the possibility of a conflict with Kentucky's proposed water-quality rules. The EPA will scrutinize those rules for acceptability.

There are signs that the EPA may require the state's standards to be more stringent than those now under consideration. At a recent commission meeting officials disclosed that they had written to the EPA, inquiring about the federal agency's intention, but they said no reply had been received.

The most productive quail lands in the United States are the managed plantations between Thomasville, Georgia, and Tallahassee, Florida.

FRANKFORT, Ky.—The Kentucky Historical Events Celebration Commission has adopted an official emblem for the state's 1974 bicentennial celebration, according to Charles J. Hellman, the commission's executive director.

The emblem is in the shape of a shield, approximately six inches in size, with a statue of Daniel Boone in the foreground, flanked by a figure of a Minuteman.

"The statue of Boone was featured because his name is so synonymous with Kentucky pioneers and the opening of the West," Hellman explained. "The Minuteman represents the type of people who responded to the call in the nation's fight for independence."

The emblem emphasizes the combined "Spirit of 74-76" theme the commission is using, relating the state celebration to the national bicentennial in 1976. Also on the emblem are the official seals of the state and national celebrations. The emblem has a mixed background of blue at the top with vertical stripes of red and white, representing the American flag.

"We felt a celebration of this scope had to have an official emblem," Hellman said. "It will serve a variety of purposes as a commemorative memento."

Kentucky's celebration will focus on the 200th anniversary of the founding of Fort Harrod and the 100th running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs.

VA Officials Cite Available Benefits

Thousands of wives and children of veterans and servicemen fail to take advantage of benefits and programs provided by Congress despite Veterans Administration efforts to inform each potential beneficiary.

Educational benefits for wives, widows, and children of veterans whose permanent, total disabilities or deaths were service-connected was cited by VA officials as one example of the many benefits available. Also eligible for educational benefits are wives and children of servicemen missing in action (MIA) or prisoners of war (POW) for more than 90 days. VA guaranteed home loans are available to wives of POWs and MIAs also and to unmarried widows of veterans and servicemen whose deaths were service-connected.

Widows and minor children may receive two types of monthly payments also VA pointed out. Dependency and indemnity (DIC) is paid if the veteran's death was service-connected. Pension is paid if death was non-service-connected. In certain cases parents may be eligible for DIC checks.

Still another benefit, monthly aid and attendance payments of $55, is paid to eligible wives, widows and parents who are patients in nursing homes, helpless or blind, or so nearly helpless or blind as to require regular assistance of another person.

Wives and children, or whoever is designated as beneficiary, are entitled to the veteran's or serviceman's life insurance proceeds upon his death.

Most VA benefits for dependents and survivors of veterans and servicemen are based on at least 90 days of military service. For Post Korean and Vietnam Era veterans and servicemen the service requirement for GI home loans and educational benefits is at least 181 days.

Full details on these and other benefits for dependents and survivors of veterans and servicemen are available from any VA office or local veterans service organization representative.

Students Re-Focus Attitudes In Upward Bound Program

'What are we getting for our money?' That familiar refrain voiced by so many consumers today gets precise answers from Paul Luxmore, director of the Alice Lloyd College Upward Bound program.

'If you're concerned with grades,' he says, 'our Upward Bound students do at least one full point better in college than they did in high school. As a group, wherever our students attend college they have slightly less than a B average.'

'Of the 68 students still in high school this year, none is failing any subjects, although 20 percent of them were failing one or more subjects before coming here last summer,' Mr. Luxmore pointed out.

Upward Bound is a program for high school students who have academic potential for leadership but whose economic handicaps and inadequate classroom achievement make them potential drop outs.

In cooperation with the public schools, a need inventory was compiled for each student and matched with an academic interest inventory which the student made for himself.

Although Mr. Luxmore is proud of their measurable academic improvement, he believes that the most important benefit students derive is a change in attitude.

'Often they come with a belligerency toward the educational establishment and an indifference toward their studies. After their experience here they can look at things a little more positively. In effect, they say 'I've been short-changing myself. However imperfect the educational system is, I want to take better advantage of what's available.'

To help this happen, Mr. Luxmore and his staff are emphasizing the skills and processes of learning rather than the quantity of information learned. As the body of the world's knowledge quadruples every few years, particularly in the sciences, one can see the wisdom of this approach.

'They also made great strides in developing socially,' Luxmore says. 'They organized some of the governance procedures for themselves and administered them with fairness and understanding. Here, as well as in the classroom, I believe our approaches at Alice Lloyd are paying off.'

with the farsightedness of Perkins who have made EDA workable and flexible.' In reference to this area he said: 'This community and the Big Sandy district rank at the top of the list in the eyes of EDA for initiative and a progressive attitude.'

An unexpected grant of $10,000 was given Dr. Ballard Wright, director of the hospital's cardio-pulmonary laboratory, by representatives of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Howard Gray, son of James M. Gray, contractor on construction of the hospital, presented Dr. Archer, chairman of the hospital board of trustees, and Chalmers H. Frazier, administrator of the hospital, pen desk sets which had been used in the signing of the contract for the hospital's construction.

The Rev. Howard Coop led the act of dedication, and then Robert Nolan, the medical center's architect, presented the keys of the building to Mr. Frazier.

The ribbon-cutting followed this ceremony, with members of the board doing the honors.

Open house was observed, with hundreds of visitors touring the structure's four floors and inspecting the sophisticated hospital equipment. Only then did they fully realize what the months of work had achieved.

The hospital, hailed as one of the finest and most modern facilities of its kind in Kentucky, is expected to open in mid-December.

Kentucky Chamber Employs Pike Native

Lowell D. Reese, a native of Pike county, has joined the executive staff of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce as director of research, Philip A. Thompson, executive vice-president of the Chamber, announced last week.

Immediately prior to his appointment, Reese was executive director of 'Our Common Heritage,' a non-profit organization based at Lexington. He established the organization for service as a catalyst in the social and economic development of eastern Kentucky.

After serving as an Army airborne infantry officer in Vietnam and being awarded the Purple Heart, the Bronze Star and the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry, Reese joined the marketing department of Mobil Oil Corporation.

The Railway Labor Act, passed on May 20, 1926, required employers to bargain collectively and not discriminate against their employees for joining a union.

OOPS! Conservation News gives us this recipe for Elephant Stew:

NOT SO SMART, AFTER ALL

My fellow-sufferer, 'Bud' Perry, went out on a limb last week in his 'Coffee-Break' column in The Paintsville Herald and credited me with a sagacity few, if any, had ever suspected.

The Mule that Supervised a Farm

By GEO. L. MOORE

Psychologists tell us that animals cannot think, but I am sure they never considered the case history of Old Dan Finney. Old Dan was a mule and a good one at that. He was unusual in every respect. To begin with, he was larger when he was born than a mule ought to be. His head was too big and his ears were too long. By the time he was two years old, he was a good foot taller than any mule should have been.

My older brother was working in the steel mill at the time the mule colt was born. There was a bookkeeper in the department where he worked who had exceptionally large ears. His name was Dan Finney. Just as soon as my brother saw the mule, he said, "Why, he has ears just like Dan Finney."

By the time Old Dan reached full maturity, my father had reached the age where he no longer farmed on a large scale as he had previously done. He no longer kept a team or a number of saddle horses as he onetime did. Old Dan was the only beast of burden left on the farm. He performed his chores well. He hauled in the wood for fuel; he carried the groceries from the store; he pulled the plough through the field and garden and he provided the main source of transportation.

After my father passed away and my mother moved from the old home place, Old Dan had all the two hundred acres to himself. He was the sole proprietor of the place. Although all the gaps were down and the gates were open, Old Dan never deserted the old home place. He knew all the fields and watering places.

On our farm all the fields were named. On the north was the field down by the Old Clabe Jones Meathouse; to the east was the Old Bullfrog Field; to the south was the Old Wheat Field; and to the west was the field that joined the Old Jim Brown Fields.

In his younger days Old Dan had his favorite fields and watering places. He also had his secret hiding places. In the fall he preferred the pasture that joined the cornfield. When the pickins became slim in the pasture, he would wait patiently until all were asleep. He would then silently approach the fence, leap over the top rail, eat all the corn he wanted, and then jump back into the pasture without disturbing a rail.

When someone other than my father tried to catch him, he would run and hide in a thick clump of bushes. Despite the punishing biting of the stinging flies, he would stand perfectly still and never move a hair. When my father called to him, he would emerge from his hiding place immediately.

During his solitary stay at the old home place, I managed to make an annual visit to the old farm. Old Dan would come to meet me in the lower pasture field as soon as I came into view. He would walk behind me up the hill. When I stopped to rest, he would put his long head over my shoulder and I was sure he was asking: "Where have all my people gone?" He would follow me up the hill to the old house. I would draw him a tub of clear, sparkling water from the old well and he would drink to his heart's content.

When I took my leave the following day, Old Dan would follow me to the fence at the bottom of the hill. Before I took my final departure, he would rub his nose gently against my face as the one-sided conversation took place. As I moved out of his view down the hill, I would glance back over my shoulder and Old Dan would be making his way slowly back to the old home place on the top of the hill. He stayed here several years by himself. As a soldier walks his beat, in like manner Old Dan moved from field to field to see that all was well. There were several fields of grass that provided him nourishment in winter and summer. The barn door to the west was closed to keep out the snow.

After some forty years, the inexorable forces of nature caught up with Old Dan. As it must to all of God's creatures, death came to him as he lowered his head to drink from his favorite spring.

Not long ago, I chanced to pass through the pines above the spring. Here were the snow-white bones bleaching in the summer sun. It gave me a feeling of sadness to think of the passing of such a loyal and faithful servant.

Dinner To Help Tot In Fight for Life

Garrett, Ky.—Friends and relatives of a little girl who is in a grim battle for her life will give a benefit dinner at the Garrett school lunchroom Sunday, Dec. 10, to help her parents with the heavy expenses involved in her treatment.

Ruth Ann, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bennie Moore, of Pippa Passes, formerly of Garrett, has leukemia, and her parents are required to take her every week to St. Jude's Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., for four hours of treatment. They have been doing this for months now. The hospital's services are free, but the costs of travel and medication are heavy. The same routine of medication must be continued for an indefinite period.

The dinner will begin at noon and continue through the afternoon.

The child is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beverage Moore, of Garrett, and Mrs. Nora Martin, of Langley.

Gets Silver Wings

SACRAMENTO, Calif.—Second Lieut. Jimmie W. Crider, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Crider, of Endicott, Ky., has been awarded silver wings upon graduation from U. S. Air Force navigator training at Mather AFB, Calif.

Lieut. Crider is being assigned to Pope AFB, N. C., where he will fly the C-130 Hercules. He will serve with a unit of the Tactical Air Command which provides combat units for air support of U. S. ground forces.

A 1966 graduate of Prestonsburg high school, the lieutenant received his B. A. degree in mathematics in 1970 from Berea College and his M. A. degree in 1971 from Eastern Kentucky University. He was commissioned in 1971 upon completion of Officers Training School at Lackland AFB, Tex.

His wife is the former Frances J. Anderson.

Wildlife Federation Considers Record of Congress 'Spotty'

"Even though significant groundwork was laid, the environmental record of the 92nd Congress could, at best, only be considered spotty."

That assessment by a top official of the world's largest conservation organization, Executive Vice President Thomas L. Kimball of the National Wildlife Federation, concerned the performance of the past two years by "the first full Congress of the so-called 'environmental decade'."

Despite the last-minute flurry of environmental legislation that cleared Congress just before adjournment, conservationists generally feel that legislative action was disappointing, resulting in few solid legislative victories.

One big exception was the passage of the Water Pollution Control Bill—the most comprehensive and, at the same time, the most expensive environmental bill ever passed by Congress. The $24.6 billion bill significantly revises the nation's approach to cleaning up polluted rivers and lakes by setting strict standards for both industries and municipalities. It also commits the Federal government to an ambitious program of helping communities build sewage treatment plants.

Two other major bills passed by the 92nd Congress, the noise and pesticide bills, also mark new directions in environmental legislation. For the first time, the federal government will have authority to set noise standards on a variety of sources ranging from jet planes to air conditioners. Also, though conservationists consider the pesticide bill weak, the government will be able to control the use of a variety of pesticides.

The attention given to environmental bills in the 92nd Congress was mixed. However, conservationists feel that a lack of legislative attention wasn't always unsatisfactory. "For instance" explained Joel Pickelner, NWF conservation counsel, "the regressive Land Use Bill (sponsored by defeated Congressman Wayne Aspinall (Colo.) fortunately received little attention, whereas inadequate attention paid to a strong House-passed strip mining bill has to be considered a minus."

Despite heavy lobbying opposition from the coal industry, legislation setting strong federal controls over strip mining passed the House by an overwhelming vote and was pending in the Senate at adjournment. Some authorities feel that surface mining will be a major conservation issue in the 93rd Congress.

The future effectiveness of these bills and others passed in the past two years still depends on the funding emphasis given to them by the Administration. Although Congress didn't waste any time in overriding President Nixon's surprising rejection of the Water Pollution Control Bill, the program still requires funding support by the Administration. "If we are going to clean up our rivers and streams, it's going to take a Presidential commitment," Kimball declared. "The passage of the important water bill doesn't mean much unless the money is there."

Kimball feels that much of the criticism that has been directed at the Administration is justified. "On paper, the President proposed an ambitious environmental program of more than 25 environmental bills," Kimball said, adding that "some of them were quite good." "In most instances though," Kimball charged, "the important follow-up support by the Administration was missing or it allowed weakening amendments to water them down."

The Federation does feel that a "commendable" record was compiled by the lawmakers in some areas. Significant fish and wildlife legislation, including a controversial Ocean Mammal Protection Bill for whales, dolphins, porpoises, sea otters, and polar bears, passed and specific species of other wildlife came in for special protection—wild horses and burros, Atlantic salmon, and eagles. Other creditable legislation enacted includes an Ocean Dumping Bill, strictly regulating the dumping of materials into the ocean, and a Coastal Zone Management Bill providing federal funds to help the coastal states to develop land-use plans balancing the needs for preservation against the pressure for industrial sites, power plants, port facilities, and recreation.

The prospect for upcoming environmental legislation depends greatly upon the tack the Administration takes in the next four years according to Kimball. "We'll be watching the President's three big speeches after the first of the year (i. e. State of the Union, State of the Budget, and State of the Environment) to see what priority, if any, he is going to give to the environment." Kimball also cited Federal highway legislation and bills dealing with land use, strip mining, and toxic substances as being of immediate priority in the 93rd Congress.

"Also, besides looking forward to several new park and wilderness proposals during the next two years," Kimball stated, "the 93rd Congress is going to have to deal with several promising proposals, including those made in the recent energy study undertaken by the Senate, those given by the President's Advisory Committee on Timber and the Environment, and the attempts to streamline the Administration's environmental machinery, possible including the establishment of a Department of Natural Resources."

Finally, the 93rd Congress promises to have a different personality, with an unusual number of congressmen either having retired or been defeated. A total of 82 senators and representatives will not be back, including at least 8 significant committee chairmen.

"Given the few victories that we did win the 92nd Congress," Kimball said, "perhaps the most important thing that emerged was a legislative awakening to the serious environmental problems we face."

For the first time though, he emphasized, the environmental vote "unquestionably" played a key role in the congressional elections. "It's too early to tell what direction the 93rd Congress will take, but Congress will have to do better if this country is going to continue to enjoy its high quality of life."

From Artist to Garbage Collector

PRAGUE (AP)—Restoring an old church bell would seem an artistic line of work. But those engaged to restore the bell of Prague's St. Vitus Cathedral had to haul 250 sacks of bird feathers, bones and droppings down 500 bell-tower steps before they could get on with it.

The 1973 Volkswagen is still $1999.*

A bargain is a bargain.

While you can see the new 1973 Beetle is still at a nice low price, you really can't begin to see the value until you know what you're getting for your money.

A warranty, for instance, that's twice what you get with any other small car: 24 months or 24,000 miles.**

But then, we wouldn't be offering it if it weren't for our incredibly finicky factory inspection: over 1100 inspectors poring over more than 5,000 parts. (It sounds compulsive, but it's the best way to reach perfection.)

And now, there's our new VW Computer Diagnosis system. Meaning literally what it says: a brand new computer that's been installed, or soon will be, in our service area ready to be hooked up to your car. The most advanced service system in the world, it checks vital service parts, via sensors and probes built into critical areas, and spells the results out in plain English. People should have it so good.

Consider also our legendary resale value. When you compare it with other cars after three years, it makes our $1999* sound absolutely amazing.†

Everything adding up to one important point: there's a big difference between being cheap, and being a bargain.

Few things in life work as well as a Volkswagen.

*1973 Volkswagen Sedan III suggested retail price, P.O.E. Local taxes and other dealer charges, if any, additional.
**If an owner maintains and services his vehicle in accordance with the Volkswagen maintenance schedule any factory part found to be defective in material or workmanship within 24 months or 24,000 miles, whichever comes first (except normal wear and tear and service items) will be repaired or replaced by any U.S. or Canadian Volkswagen Dealer. And this will be done free of charge. See your dealer for details.

Ison Says Revenue Sharing Could Reduce Local Taxes

Lexington, Ky.—The recent trend of returning power and resources to local units of government is an important one for Kentucky farm families, according to Kentucky Farm Bureau President Louis F. Ison.

Ison made the observation in his annual address to the Kentucky Farm Bureau convention in recent session at Lexington's Phoenix Hotel.

The Mercer county farmer mentioned Kentucky's new home-rule bill and the federal revenue-sharing program as examples of increased power and revenue for city and county ruling bodies.

He said revenue sharing promises to pour "millions of additional dollars" into state, county and city treasuries, but noted that the original purpose of the program was to permit state and local governments to give tax relief, especially on property.

"It will be interesting to see how many officials will propose tax reductions as opposed to those who will use their newfound source of revenue to increase their budgets," Ison noted. "I would like to remind them all that these federal funds are not manna from heaven, but money out of the taxpayers' pockets—namely yours and mine."

Besides the outright grants from revenue sharing, localities also now have been given broad discretionary powers as a result of the home-rule bill passed by the 1972 General Assembly, Ison said.

Local farm and civic leaders must be informed, he said, "as to proposals and ordinances suggested by our local officials, not only from the standpoint of taxes, but as to how these proposals will affect the citizenry of that community."

According to Ison, there is one exception to the boost in local power. Court cases in California, Texas and other states have questioned the taxing system for supportive funds for education, the rates for which have generally been set on the local level.

If the courts rule that the old system is unfair, Ison said, the decision could lead to statewide uniform property tax rates, with monies returned to the local school districts on the basis of need.

In his address, Ison touched on a number of issues facing the next Congress which should be of concern to all Kentuckians.

Consumer protection legislation, he noted, is sure to be a hot rerun item when Congress convenes, and he warned that some versions of the legislation would give "almost dictatorial powers to a super consumer protection agency," to the detriment of farm interests.

He recalled this year's controversy surrounding the price of meat and other food items, and said that under provisions of the proposed act, import quotas could be greatly increased in such instances to drive down domestic meat prices.

"Thereby, this agency could reduce income for farmers under the guise of consumer protection."

No-fault insurance, another prospective Congressional issue, and governmental reorganization demand careful surveillance to ensure that Kentuckians' best interests are served, he said.

Noting a recent survey which rates Kentucky's liability insurance rates as low compared to other states, Ison urged the retention of insurance supervision at the state level, rather than federal. He also recommended that any no-fault program enacted should be greatly modified from original proposals, and that it be on an experimental basis.

Miss Conley Receives Awards

Recipient of Our Lady of the Way Hospital's 1972 Sister Angelo Award, Miss Leeda Conley (center), is presented a $50.00 Savings Bond by Sister Mary Catherine Hunt (right), president of the hospital's governing board, and with a dozen red roses by Sister Mary Angelo (shown at left) in whose honor the award is given and who worked at Our Lady of the Way since its beginning in 1947. The award includes also an engraved silver dish and the recording of the recipient's name on a plaque in the hospital's main lobby.

In 1866, a national association of unions called the National Labor Union was organized. A federation of trades' assemblies rather than of national craft organizations, it included radical and reform groups. Drifting into social rather than trade union endeavors, it lost craftsmen's support and went out of existence in 1872.

The National School Boards Association is conducting "Budget Dilemma" workshops to help board members learn how to give a careful new examination to their district's budget, and to help them discover, formulate and apply systematic methods of budget analysis and planning. The workshops are being held in New Orleans, Chicago and Denver.

We've been Environmentalists more than 30 years.

How can the American Electric Power System burn 30,000,000 tons of coal a year and be an environmentalist? The dictionary defines an environmentalist as one concerned with "the total of ecological, social and cultural conditions that influence the life of a community."

On the ecological side, we recognized the absolute necessity for concern about the environment when we started installing smoke and dust collecting systems on our stacks more than 30 years ago.

On the social side, which takes in jobs, wages, and an increasing standard of living, we also knew that it would be an absolute necessity to provide 16 times more power to meet 1972's power requirements. The conflict between the need for protection of the environment on one hand and the need for more power production (and its attendant pollution potential) on the other was an enormous problem—and still is.

But, we've come a long way in finding and applying solutions. We've already spent one-quarter-billion dollars on environmental improvements. Our concern, however, is best shown by describing just a few of the things we have been doing to protect our air, land and water.

Air Pollution Control. All 36 coal-fired generating units built on the AEP System since 1950 have included air pollution control equipment, the latest of which is designed to remove at least 99.5% of all particulate matter from the stacks. A program of "upgrading" pollution control equipment at older plants was also started in the early 1950's and has been continuing ever since. We've proposed to regulatory bodies the expenditure of some $52 million for pollution control equipment in 1973 alone.

The cost to upgrade some old generating units cannot be justified from our customers' viewpoint. These units are being shut down. The AEP System has retired 106 old generating units at 36 plants since 1947. The electricity once produced by all these units is now supplied by just one of our large new generators at a plant equipped with the latest dust collection systems available.

Research. We are determined to find answers to the unsolved problems associated with removal of sulfur oxides from plant stacks. This is the major objective of our air quality research program. At this time, no known sulfur oxide removal system is reliable, or commercially feasible. When a solution is found we will adopt it promptly. In fact, even now the engineering and design work for the installation of a major new sulfur removal system is nearing completion, and we hope to start its construction within the next few months. Until a commercial process is developed, tall stacks are the best means available to prevent ground-level buildup of sulfur oxides. We pioneered the use of tall stacks, starting also in the early 1950's. Tall stacks have for years been recognized and accepted in Great Britain as the best available answer to the sulfur oxide problem.

Cooling Towers. Power plants use large amounts of water to cool steam, raising the water's temperature as it is returned to its source. If the river or lake is too small, the return of the water might, under some circumstances, be harmful. Cooling towers cool the water in a "closed circuit" system which eliminates warm water discharge. The AEP System pioneered the use of natural draft, hyperbolic cooling towers in this country. We've built ten of these towers at plants located on rivers where the quantity of water was insufficient to prevent thermal buildup. Three more are under construction. We are constantly studying the effects of warm water discharge and our present program of ecological research on Lake Michigan, started in 1966, is the most comprehensive such study ever conducted under utility sponsorship.

Land Conservation. With the ever-increasing need for electric power, the problem of delivering that power to customers could have, without the development of high voltage transmission systems, created a forest of utility towers across our countryside. Our 765,000-volt lines today can carry 30 times more power than earlier 138,000-volt lines. In terms of land conservation, one 200 foot right-of-way for a 765,000-volt line can do the same job that 30 rights-of-way did 20 years ago.

Our goal is to do an even better job in safe-guarding all the aspects of our total environment—air, water, and land as well as jobs, wages and a high standard of living.

Retarded Can Have Useful Lives

By Sue Weller

Lexington, Ky.—Alan awakens at 6:30 and gets ready for work. He gets on the city bus near his Lexington home, deposits 35 cents in the fare box and rides to the corner of Limestone and Vine in downtown Lexington. There he transfers to another bus that will take him to his final destination.

The one factor that singles Alan out of the millions of Americans falling into this daily routine is that he is mentally retarded.

Alan is one of 50 participants at the Adult Training Center (ATC) operated by the Bluegrass Association for Mental Retardation.

The training center originated in 1967 to demonstrate that, through constructive training programs, retardation does not rule out a rewarding life.

The program is open to retarded adults 18 years and older who need special training in adult living. To enter the program, the individual may apply directly to the center, through the Bureau of Rehabilitation Services or may be referred to the center from other agencies.

After initial contact with the center, the trainee is under evaluation for a six-week period.

After the evaluation period, Mrs. Walker then makes one of three recommendations: Admittance to the ATC program pending openings at the facility; referral to another agency better suited to care for the individual's specific needs; or a search for actual job placement.

After an applicant has been admitted to the program, his only other qualifications are that he provide his own transportation to and from the center and meet the $20-per-month tuition fee. If the fee causes undue hardship to a particular family, adjustments can be made.

The center operates under Ray Neunam's philosophy of de-emphasizing the uniqueness of an individual's handicap and emphasizing his normalities, which must include getting up in the morning and going to work "like everyone else."

The participants, with I. Q.'s ranging from 15 to 70, stay at the center from 8:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. and take part in a variety of activities.

Incorporated into the program at the ATC is adult education through the Fayette county school system. An instructor comes to the center to hold classes in remedial math and reading, home management and safety and survival. Trainees are placed in these classes according to each individual's need and his ability to take advantage of the classes.

Some participants work on various arts and crafts projects such as decoupage and ceramics. The finished products are placed in the center's display room and may be purchased by the general public.

An integral part of the ATC program is the workshop, where trainees work for local industry and actually receive pay.

"There are many reasons employers look to ATC when they have work we can do," says Roger Weller, production manager for the workshop. "When industry has a sudden influx of temporary work, they can't afford to hire new people, use time and money training them and three weeks later lay them off."

Weller is in charge of promoting the workshop program, describing to local industries what the trainees can do and managing work contracts from start to finish.

"Local industry doesn't have to worry about sick days, unemployment compensation, union problems or excessive supervisory requirements when our people take over the job," said Weller.

The trainees are paid on a piece-rate basis for all work performed, receiving the same rate paid to local industry for the same amount of work performed. Since the workshop program officially started last July, the payroll has reached almost $600, divided among the retardates according to individual endeavor.

"I think it's a mutual thing," said Lenny Cox of Graves Cox, a Lexington clothing store. "We have work that would be too time consuming for us to do. By letting the trainees at the center do the work, they can make some money at a job satisfying to them while we don't have to worry about it."

What do the participants do with the money they earn?

"I like to go to the restaurant and buy a cheeseburger," said Larry, who looks forward to coming to the center each day. Others have savings accounts, buy their own clothes and some are proud to be able to help out with family financial responsibilities.

W'wright Club Plans Activities

Thirty-six Wheelwright residents attended the Wheelwright Development Club's Nov. 21 meeting and joined in plans for the community cleanup campaign which will begin Saturday. A fund-raising dance scheduled this week-end and a full-scale recreation program were also discussed. Denver Osborne, president of the club (left), presided at the meeting. At right is Deacon Terry, chairman of the club's Christmas program committee.

Change In Compensation Law Studied By Interim Committee

Frankfort, Ky.—An interim legislative committee has agreed to reconsider an impending change in the Workmen's Compensation Law which will substantially raise assessments for the coal industry.

The interim committee on labor and industry decided to undertake the reconsideration Friday after State Sen. Kelsey Friend, D-Pikeville, said that was needed to take some of the pressure off the coal industry.

Friend said the coal industry already was being hurt by the severance tax put on coal this year. He said the coal industry alone had to pay that even though it also had to pay the same taxes and costs as other industries.

The 972 change in the Workmen's Compensation Law provides that, beginning Jan. 1, 1973, the coal industry will have to pay 25 per cent of all disability claims resulting from black lung cases.

The other 75 per cent of such claims will be paid by the so called special fund, which comes from assessments of all business firms in the state, including coal mines, based on the size of the payroll of each. Not all black lung claims are paid entirely out of the special fund.

Under the present system, all other businesses in the state are subsidizing the coal industry because each pays into the special fund at the same rate but 90 per cent of payments made out of that fund are for black lung disabilities. With the change beginning Jan. 1, other businesses will be assessed to help pay 75 per cent of black lung claims, instead of all of them.

The labor and industry committee also decided Friday to take up again a bill on raising the minimum wage in Kentucky, a measure which Gov. Wendell Ford vetoed this year. The panel agreed to have a subcommittee study the matter and try to remove the objections which led to Ford's veto.

Ford's veto message said the bill as passed by the 1972 General Assembly was "ambiguous and confusing and would result in conflict with federal law in some instances." Ford also said the bill would have exempted "most, if not all, of those whom it seeks to help."

As initially introduced in the 1972 session, the bill would have raised the minimum wage in Kentucky from 65 cents to $1.60 an hour, with no group of employees to be exempted from it.

By the time the bill passed the house and senate, however, numerous amendments

Keep Delinquents Out Of Institutions, Official Says

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Describing the state Department of Child Welfare's philosophy toward the prevention and handling of delinquency, a Child Welfare official said "almost nobody belongs in jail or in an institution, especially children."

Tom Massie, director of the department's Division of Community Services, made the statement while addressing juvenile corrections workers from 22 states attending a national conference in Arkansas Nov. 15-18.

While Massie said some people's behavior must be controlled because they are genuinely dangerous to others and to themselves, he indicated their numbers are few and claimed many people are institutionalized because society does not wish to tolerate differing life-styles.

"For too long we Americans have tended to want to cover up what we perceive as unpleasant," said Massie. "Or worse yet, ship it off to the state for that recycling process so euphemistically called reformation, or more recently, rehabilitation."

"Where a meaningful or, at least, acceptable social role is not available to the naturally rebellious and skeptical youth, he ends up in trouble. Once that happens," Massie said, "and we get our hands on him and deprive him of his freedom to explore and experience this life, we may twist him so badly that he indeed does become dangerous."

NOTICE

Aileen Collins, has filed application with the Floyd County Court for license to operate a place of entertainment, Collins' Restaurant, at McDowell, Ky.

C. "OLLIE" ROBINSON, Clerk
Floyd County Court 11-22-3t.

"And so we continue to lock people up; not just children, but many others as well. Less and less difference is tolerated. And institutional living is allowed to virtually destroy the capacity for independent living of thousands of people."

"People cannot learn to lie in un-natural institutional settings," he said.

Massie went on to describe how Child Welfare uses a system of probation, foster care and case work designed to keep families together as alternatives to institutionalization for youths who run afoul of the law.

He said a "specific step-by-step procedure has been outlined for our staff which is based on a system of priorities, and its message clearly is: keep children in their own homes, work with them there; or barring that, find alternatives to institutions because its going to become more and more difficult to get children into residential (institutional) care. And residential care will more and more be reserved for those in real need of such treatment."

Massie said Child Welfare officials have "felt for years that residential treatment is not the answer for most kids" because "we have seen too many children actually damaged by institutional experiences that were too long, inappropriate or unnecessary." He said many children who are institutionalized only learn "how to be a more 'successful' juvenile delinquent."

Although he described progress made in reducing the population at Child Welfare residential facilities from 500 children a year ago to just under 300 youths today, Massie said problems remain. For instance, departmental officials believe their residential care program is only necessary for 100-200 youths at any given time.

Besides, Massie said, "When you're talking about turning whole communities around" in their attitudes toward delinquency, "talking about asking people to raise their tolerance thresholds several notches, then you've got to expect problems."

In Memoriam

In loving memory of James B. Hamilton, who passed away five years ago, Dec. 2, 1967:

If the world was ours to give,
We'd give, yes, and more,
To hear his voice, to see his smile,
And to see him and talk awhile.

To be together in the same old way
Would be our dearest wish.
It broke our hearts to lose you, Jim,
But you did not go alone;
For part of us went with you
When God called you home.

Sadly missed by Mother and Daddy,
CELIA and BUTLER HAMILTON and his sisters and children.

MEMBERS OF THE UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA:

The very future of the United Mine Workers of America is at stake at the present time. Before this year is over the membership of the UMWA will decide who will lead your Union for the next five years. There's only one issue in this election and you will decide that issue when you cast your vote in the December election. The question is: Who will control our Union of coal miners? Will the coal miners of the United States control the UMWA? Or, are we going to elect Union officers who will let outsiders manipulate them? Are you going to let the outsiders take over and waste your Union assets and destroy your Union and your welfare fund? The answer rests with you.

We feel the coal miners of this nation are entitled to know the facts in this campaign, the facts about the two candidates for International President.

On the MFD slate you have a candidate by the name of Arnold Miller running for International President who is being supported and sponsored by the big money interests of this country and he has as his advisor and spokesman an attorney by the name of Joe Rauh who is associated with a law firm in Washington, D. C. which handles cases against the UMWA for the scab coal operators in Virginia and Eastern Kentucky.

The MFD slate by the assistance of their attorney and advisor, Joe Rauh, has gone to court to try to take away the pensioners' right to vote. President Boyle had to fight long and hard to uphold and secure the right of our pensioners (the backbone of our Union) to vote in elections in this Union. Now this same MFD group are out seeking the support of the very pensioners whose rights they sought to take away.

On November 1, 1972, the rules and regulations regarding eligibility for miners pension were liberalized by the UMWA Welfare & Retirement Fund which would have enabled several thousand coal miners to qualify for their pension. What did the MFD's do? They went into court and upon their request the Federal Judge in Washington, D. C. enjoined the Welfare Fund from putting into effect this new eligibility rule. Yet this same MFD group say that their hearts bleed for the disabled miner. Does this action bear them out?

Under the same Court Order by which this new election was ordered the Federal Court granted the MFD faction to have observers in each district, sub-district and international office of your Union at your expense. We say 'your expense' because it's your dues' monies that are being used to pay $50.00 a day to these observers. And who are these so-called observers? Some of these MFD observers are not even members of your Union and never have been. In one district the MFD observer is an ex-scab coal operator who operated scab coal mines in Virginia and Harlan County, Kentucky. Do you think it's right to have your money spent in this fashion? We think it's unforgivable. If the MFD's are so concerned about the disabled miner and the widows, why did they not give them an opportunity to be observers in these many offices and collect the $50.00 a day? Why? MFD — not miners for democracy, but MINERS FOR DECEIT. Do you want this kind of leadership in our International Office?

Time nor space will not permit us to tell you all the slanderous, deceitful and union-busting tactics the MFD's are using to try to gain control of your Union. They are violating the UMWA Constitution, the very Constitution they promised to uphold.

W. A. (Tony) Boyle is seeking re-election to the office of International President of this great Union. He is not seeking this office for personal gain or at the request of backers who want to get their sticky fingers into the vast treasury of your Union and Welfare Fund; he has the very future of your Union at heart and has the support of the rank and file members.

President Boyle has made numerous gains for the miners, pensioners and widows in the years he has served as your International President. He has been in contract negotiations since 1941, first aiding the late beloved John L. Lewis and since 1964 as your President. The following are some of the things President Boyle has been able to obtain for you through negotiations:

- (1) Daily wages have increased from $26.68 in 1964 to a top rate of $50.00 per day to be effective November 12, 1973.
- (2) Pensions doubled from $75.00 to $150.00 per month.
- (3) Vacation pay has increased and a miner with 20-yrs. service is entitled to an additional ten days per year.
- (4) Nine paid holidays, including employees birthday;—When President Boyle took over in 1964 there were no holidays being paid—.
- (5) Christmas bonus of $120.00 per year.
- (6) Reporting pay raised from 2-hours to 4-hours.
- (7) Mine Safety Committees under this new contract are to be paid at their regular rate anytime they are investigating disasters or fatalities in the mine.
- (8) Bereavement pay up to three days full pay while attending funeral of any member of miner's immediate family.
- (9) He has also obtained the best seniority clause in this country today, including job bidding.
- (10) Death benefits for dependents of miners and pensioners increased.
- (11) Clothing allowance.
- (12) Free bathhouses and many others.

You should stop and think and compare these facts with the promises that are now being made by the MFD candidates also known as the "3-Stooges".

Coal miners of this nation must not be deceived by a few who would have this Union destroyed for their own personal gain.

We urge all members of the UMWA you are eligible to vote to weigh the issues, take a long look at the candidates and after you have done this we feel you will cast your vote not against your Union and your future, but that you will cast your vote for President Boyle in the December election. By so doing you will be helping to make your Union a better and stronger union—united we stand—divided we fall, so let's all stand UNITED and vote the UNITED WAY vote for W. A. (Tony) Boyle for the office of President of your great Union.

EKU Program Seeks To Get Veterans To Attend School

Richmond, Ky.—To get Vietnam war veterans to attend school under the GI Bill of Rights is the aim of a special program at Eastern Kentucky University.

Eastern is using a federal HEW grant of $75,000 to conduct the statewide Veterans Upward Bound and Talent Search program.

"We're attempting to get as many unemployed veterans as possible to go to school," said Tom Sexton, director of the program.

"This means high school, vocational school, and two-year community and junior colleges, as well as four-year colleges and universities," Sexton said.

The program is designed to assist the veteran to enter the institution of his choice.

Besides Sexton, the staff of the program consists of Mike Cunningham, academic vocational advisor, two full-time recruiters, and a number of student part-time recruiters, all veterans.

The staff members will go to all of Kentucky's counties and talk with veterans and with local government, civic, and business officials and leaders.

These people are also invited to call the program's office at Room 415, Jones Building on the EKV campus, telephone 622-3742, Sexton said.

Veterans preparing to take the GED test to get a high school diploma may attend an Upward Bound general education course at the Learning Laboratory at Eastern. Four instructors will assist them here, and if they attend the equivalent of 12 semester hours they will be eligible for GI benefits, Sexton said. This will not deduct from their entitlement to benefits for higher education, he added.

Sexton, an EKV graduate student, is a native of Lee County and was raised in Jackson County. Cunningham, also a graduate student, came to Richmond from Ashland.

Meet Woodsy Owl. He represents a major step forward in our fight against pollution.

A major step forward in getting our smoggy skies blue again. A major step forward in saving our forests, lakes and wildlife. And a major step forward in improving the quality of our environment. You'll be seeing and hearing a lot about Woodsy. He knows how you can fight pollution...and he needs your help.

Woodsy has a hooter. When he blows it, it goes Hoot! A Hoot is a pollution stopper. Some of Woodsy's Hoots are: Trees make many things possible, plant a tree. Recycle all cans, bottles and papers. Man paints houses only nature should paint forests. Sh sh sh sh sh sh...noise pollutes too. Trees and flowers can't hold their breath...smog's a killer. Tuned engines mean less smog. Keep your engines tuned.

In months to come you'll be hearing many more Hoots...over one hundred. If you have good Hoots...practical ways people can fight pollution, send them to Woodsy Owl, U.S. Forest Service, Washington, D.C. 20250.
