

$4 Million Suit Again Gets Moving

Contractors Attack Rejection of Bidding On US 23 in Floyd

The long-dormant case which involved charges of conspiracy and bribe offers in the handling of bids on three sectors of new US 23 being built through Floyd county awakened recently with the taking of depositions.

The $4 million damage suit was filed in 1970 by the Mattingly Bridge Company and the J. D. Barter Construction Company, which had jointly filed the apparent low bids on the Floyd work. After Highway Commissioner Eugene Goss had held that the bids should be rejected as too high, the projects were readvertised. Mattingly and Barter filed the damage suit then in Franklin circuit court, naming as defendants Former Commissioners Goss and B. E. King, the Kentucky Association of Highway Contractors, Jack Ruth, individually and as president of KAHC, and Victor E. Conley, individually and as executive director of KAHC. Since the case has been stirred into activity the Barter firm has been dismissed as a plaintiff and has been named a defendant.

New testimony heard in a deposition by Jewell C. Hawkins, director of procurement in the Department of Highways, deals in part with the timing of events between the bid opening date, June 26, 1970 and the rejection of the bids 12 days later. These events include a cocktail party and dinner at Spindletop Research Center, Lexington, the evening of July 1, 1970, which was attended by Goss, Comley, Public Service Commission Chairman Harold E. Kelley and others, and a meeting attended by Comley and Ruth in Goss' office, July 6, two days before the bids were rejected.

Hawkins, who acts as secretary for the department's contract awards committee, testified that the group met on June 30 to review the bids from the June 26 letting and recommended that the three Floyd projects be awarded to Barter and Mattingly.

This was the day prior to the Spindletop party at which Goss, according to his 1970

Preston Fields Dies In Florida Wreck

Leaves Retirement For Pastorate Here

The Rev. S. B. Rucker has been appointed pastor of the Community United Methodist Church here.

Mr. Rucker, who retired from the Staffords Methodist Church in the Covington district as of June, 1967, has made his home in Ashland since that time. After his retirement he served as associate pastor at Christ United Methodist Church in Ashland, also supplier for many pastors in the district. Mr. Rucker has served pastorates in the Danville, Ashland, Covington and Maysville districts. He was pastor of the Allen, Martin, Maytown, Garrett and Salisbury Methodist Church from 1946 to 1949 and organized the Johnson County Parish. "This is like home to me," the minister says. "My greatest ministry has been in Floyd and Johnson counties."

Mr. and Mrs. Rucker have moved into the parsonage at the rear of the Church and will welcome visits from their friends, or they may be called by phone at 886-6595.

Telephone Lines Going Underground

South Central Bell employees using backhoe to go underground with telephone conduit on Graham street here. This is a work which will be repeated here and at various other places in the county during the year as the telephone company engages in a $2 million line improvement and expansion program.

Scott Says Company 'Not Backing a Loser'

At the conclusion of an interview in which Phill G. Scott, South Central Bell manager, had outlined plans for the spending by his company of almost $2 million to improve telephone service and meet the demands of future expansion in this county, his interviewer commented:

"Apparently, your company has greater faith in the future growth of Floyd county than the Social Sciences Advisory Committee expressed in its report."

He referred to the projected loss of population for most counties of the area, including a loss for this county from its present 35,889 population to 16,400 by the year 2020.

Said Mr. Scott: "I think the telephone company regards Eastern Kentucky for real... It doesn't make sense to put this kind of money into this section if our company had any reservations about future growth. I'm certain they don't have any."

Scott spoke of the potential of the section. "I would be absolutely astonished," he said, "if these predictions of population loss prove true. The future of this and other counties depends upon their leadership, and they have it. I have met most of these people—I know their ability and determination, and that's why I personally am convinced we're not backing a loser."

Several persons have attacked the projected figures on the ground that those making the study apparently expect these losing counties to be ravaged by strip-mining, much of the countryside reduced to a moonscape appearance and made untenable. Without leadership, they admit, nothing might be left to hold the people. But they, too, are confident that competent, energetic leaders will continue to work toward diversification of industry and improvement of facilities in the area.

County Judge Henry Stumbo recently commented on the predicted population loss:

"I don't agree... It's a big mistake. People are coming back home because the environment is better."

Spindletop Research in a study completed prior to the Kentucky Social Sciences Advisory Committee report predicted strong population gains for Floyd, Pike and other counties.

And that we'll buy—just as the telephone company does.

Three juveniles accused in the same case were committed Saturday to the Child Welfare Department.

SCHEDULES OUTPOST CLINIC
The Floyd County Health Department will conduct a nursing outpost clinic at Wayland, Monday at the Methodist Church from 10 a.m. till noon and from 1 to 2 p.m. A public health nurse will be doing T. B. skin tests, immunizations, blood pressures and diabetes screening.

Looting String Broken As Trio Are Jailed Here

What began as the arrest of three Stanville men on simple drunk charges wound up in a matter of hours with all three facing breaking and entering and other counts involving breaks into two business places and as many homes.

After the three had been jailed here County Detective Sam Hale and State Trooper Gary Rose began questioning them. They quickly hit pay-dirt. At least two of the three admitted having had a part in the breaks.

Named on one or more breaking and entering counts were Marion Hurd, Jr., Scottie Garrett and Carl Ed Smith. They are accused of:

1. Breaking into the home of Herbert Ray Reynolds at Stanville. A television set taken from the home has been recovered. A .22-calibre automatic pistol is still missing.
2. Stealing 12 truck tires valued at $750 from Carolina Tire Co., Stanville.
3. Breaking into the trailer-home of William Kidd in Pike-Floyd Hollow, Betsy Layne. A stereo-TV set allegedly taken from the home was found 50 feet back in a coal bank in the Pike county section of Mare Creek.

Floyd Program Cost Estimated Near $2 Million

Work already under way or to be initiated this year by South Central Bell in a program designed to afford better telephone service and provide for future expansion will involve the expenditure of almost $2 million, Phill G. Scott, Paintsville, telephone company manager, told The Times last week.

This cost figure does not include the day-to-day work involving less than $10,000. All undertakings costing less than that figure are classed as "routine jobs," and do not enter into the program outlined by the South Central Bell manager.

The costliest single venture, which will require from two to five years for completion, will involve alternate routing to the present micro-wave facilities for long-distance service out of Beaver Creek and to the world. The cables will mostly go underground and will provide primary trunking facilities between towns. This will serve not only as an alternate route but also may supplement the micro-wave facility—in effect, could bear the long-distance load if micro-wave should go out temporarily, or could be put to work in a supplemental role while micro-wave is working.

The Prestonsburg-Paintsville leg of the alternate route will cost an estimated

Board Studies Bus Area Here; Asks Garth Bids

Offstreet loading and unloading of school children at the Prestonsburg elementary school may result from an action taken by the Floyd County Board of Education at its meeting here last Saturday.

The board directed George Lee Shannon Associates to prepare a plan for use of the lot acquired last year by the board from the Sturgill heirs and possibly to include in the planning a part of the school playground nearest US 23. A bus turnaround may be provided in the specified area.

The architect also has been asked to prepare plans for a change in lighting at the school here. The change will shift from incandescent to fluorescent lights, but the change must be acceptable to safety inspectors. The board of education several months ago agreed to supply materials for the project, the Parent-Teacher Association to do the installation.

It was said that Phase II (construction of a gymnasium-auditorium) at Allen Central high school is expected to be ready for advertising for bids in June. The architect was authorized to advertise for bids on construction of the three-room Garth Vocational School addition.

The board declared an emergency exists at Stumbo elementary and directed that the septic tank and lateral drainfield there be replaced at once with a modern sewage treatment plant. The plant will cost an estimated $20,000.

Interim funds were advanced to the Right-To-Read program at Clark elementary, pending receipt of federal funds. The board authorized Supt. Clark to advertise for chairs and tables to equip the new 10-room school addition at McDowell.

Out-of-state travel for Supt. Clark and Ray Brackett, Title I director, to attend the American Association of School Administrators in San Francisco March 17 was approved.

Mud Cr. Health Project Slates Opening Feb. 13

The Mud Creek Health Project, a "bookstrap" operation undertaken by residents of that section of the county without federal funding, will open next Tuesday, it was announced this week.

Preceding official opening of the project will be open house, which will be held Sunday, Feb. 11, from 1 to 5 p.m. at headquarters of the project on Tinker Fork, one mile off KY 979. The public is invited to inspect facilities of the non-profit organization, the Mud Creek Health Project, Inc.

Two doctors will lead the health work planned for the entire Mud Creek valley. Dr. James Squire will serve as medical director, and he will be assisted by Dr. Elinor Graham.

The doctors will hold clinics from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., every Tuesday and Friday. The Mountain Comprehensive Care clinics will be every second and fourth Wednesday, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Staff and services of the project will be expanded, it was said, as the group is financially able. At the outset general health services, including preventive screening, will be emphasized.

Benefits Gained Help Ease Effects If Cutback Comes

Although federal funding of several local programs may be doomed as a result of the Nixon Administration's proposed economic cutbacks, Prestonsburg and Floyd county's prospects for future development do not appear to be seriously affected.

Prestonsburg Mayor George P. Archer said Monday that the promptness with which city and county officials had taken advantage of available federal money had allowed vital projects to be completed prior to the threat of a funds freeze. It was, as he said, "taking what we could get when we could get it."

As an example, Dr. Archer cited a 75 per cent federal grant which will allow the city to go ahead with construction of a secondary sewage treatment plant, and stressed the fact that application for the grant was accepted and approved on December 22, just 13 days before the Environmental Protection Agency halted all such funds.

A similar instance of "good timing" is the fact that Highlands Regional Medical Center opened its doors just a few brief months before the possibility arose that Hill-Burton and Economic Development Act funds would be withheld. If the phasing out of these programs becomes a reality, it appears that future construction of medical facilities will have to come about primarily through local funding.

Other projects accomplished through federal funding locally include the construction of the courthouse, the creation over the past few years of four housing developments in the Prestonsburg vicinity, including Green Acres, Indian Hills, Dixie and Highland Heights, and another low-rent housing complex in Martin, Pageant Hills, the construction of a municipal parking lot in Martin as well as two such areas in Prestonsburg, and the development of Archer Park, near Prestonsburg.

Mayor Archer said that the possibility of federal funding for the construction of 60 new low-rent houses for which the city had applied now appears unlikely since Housing and Urban Development (HUD) money would most likely no longer be available if the President's economic proposals are implemented. Also affected by a HUD cutback would be further development of Archer Park.

Of greatest concern to the city itself, said Mayor Archer, would be the problem of enlarging the community's water plant without federal support. Convinced of Prestonsburg's continued growth, he pointed to the necessity of increasing the plant's capacity to accommodate such growth.

Hardest hit by a federal money freeze would be CAP; the OEO-supported Community Action Program which provides services to a six-county area, including Floyd. Without continued funds, CAP would no longer exist, and its cancellation would also see the demise of such subordinate programs as Operation Mainstream, Neighborhood Youth Corps out-of-school and in-school projects, Senior Community Services, Jobs Optional Program (on-the-job training), and the Head Start full year and summer programs. John Burton, associate director of Big Sandy CAP, said that 1,628 employees would be affected by the proposed cutback. He said CAP, thus far, has utilized $4,397,569 in OEO funds.

Floyd County School Superintendent Charles Clark said Monday that proposed economic moves may cut out most federal education funds except those included under Title I, and some Title I money would be withheld. Clark expressed the opinion, however, that the county school system would not be drastically affected. Title I funds provide for special education and remedial reading programs as well as supporting guidance counselors, teachers and librarians connected with such programs.

Clark said that at present he and others involved in the county school system were largely "in the dark" as to the ultimate consequences of federal money cuts.

Agricultural Soil Conservation (ASC) funds have already been cut to the distress of farmers throughout the nation as well as

STAMPS RECIPIENTS FORM LINE

Food stamp recipients form a long line in last Friday morning's fog as issuance of stamps was made for the first time at the rear of the U. S. post office here. A smaller group stood Tuesday morning in a light drizzle to receive stamps. ## Needed: A Night Patrol

In allocating a portion of its revenue-sharing funds to the creation of a new county police force the Letcher county fiscal court a few days ago provided a service which the Floyd fiscal court should seriously consider.

Floyd county's current revenue-sharing funds are already earmarked, and for good causes, but other installments will be coming from the federal government, and the first available money arriving from this source should be used in an effort to give ordinary citizens the sort of protection in their homes and businesses that they deserve and have a right to expect.

In Letcher county two experienced men have been employed at a salary of $500 a month to augment the protection to person and property that the normal complement of peace officers has failed to afford. Letcher county will keep these officers at work six months, then evaluate the effect, if any.

Floyd county could use four such officers, if Letcher needs only two. Here, as in Letcher, the need for additional officers is at night when the criminal element roves towns and countrysides. The present force of officers can do a reasonably good job in daytime patrolling of highways. But there aren't enough state troopers for the badly needed night patrol, and deputy sheriffs who are only fee-paid find work at night a dead financial loss as well as physically demanding.

Whatever the number of special officers this county might put to work, they should be hired for night duty only. For that's when the thieves, the looters, all who fear the exposure of "broad daylight," scurry about, disturbing the peace of those who as normal human beings use the daylight hours for work and the night for rest.

Floyd county surely can find three or four good, honest men who will be willing to work for $6,000 a year from dusk to dawn in such a cause.

The situation has reached the desperate stage at which something must be done. The law must mean, "law," and nothing more. Courts and officers must join in the common cause of protecting the innocent and punishing the guilty. But, first of all, the guilty must be caught.

The continued failure of the law is an open invitation to law abiding citizens to become violators themselves by taking the law into their own hands. Floyd county, with all its other crime troubles, needs no vigilantes. But that is what it may get, unless legally constituted individuals can do the job.

Floyd County Basketball

By MARK LAFFERTY

The McDowell Daredevils extended their win streak last week to seven by defeating Knott County and their nearby rival, Wheelwright.

The Daredevils traveled to Knott County last Tuesday and found a cold hoop in a 64-62 comeback victory. The McDowell shooting game was off somewhat throughout most of the game, but improved enough in the final period to win.

The Daredevil's seventh victory in a row came at the expense of Wheelwright. McDowell jumped to an early bulge and swept by the Trojans for a 92-73 victory.

The Betsy Layne Bobcats added a couple of wins to their record during the week as they crushed Mullins, 79-43, at Betsy Layne Friday night, and downed highly touted Virgie, 82-75. The Bobcats turned a slow first quarter into a rout as Dan Hall began to collect some of his 33 points. Larry Woods also applied a cruncher to Mullins by tallying 24 points. Emmitt Hamilton also scored in double figures with 15 points.

Betsy Layne downed a tough Virgie 82-75 in a fine performance by the Bobcats. The first half was a close struggle, but the Bobcats blew the game open in the third quarter as they shot to a 13-point third quarter lead. Betsy Layne had four players in double figures with Dan Hall leading the way with 22 points, and Emmitt Hamilton, Larry Woods, and Ricky Roberts gathering 14 points, 15 and 16 points, respectively.

The Allen Central Rebels scored a pair of 76's last week, one of which proved to be a winner against Wheelwright and one a loser to Johns Creek, 78-76. The Rebels grabbed an early lead as they coasted to victory over Wheelwright, 76-57. The Rebels' fine defense was the key to victory over the Trojans.

The Rebels dropped their seventh game of the year to Johns Creek. The Rebels led through most of the first half and at times had a 10-point spread. But Johns Creek rallied with good defense and good shooting to earn the victory. Kent Gibson was in double figures for the second time in a week with 30 points. Darrell Prater also scored in 15 points against Johns Creek and 23 points against Wheelwright. John Conley added 10 points in the Johns Creek contest and 15 points in the Wheelwright game. Keith Gearheart and Bob Caudill tallied 10 points each to round out Allen Central's five men in double digits against Johns Creek.

Relaxation is something a basketball team cannot enjoy on the floor as the Prestonsburg Blackcats will surely admit. The Cats opened the game atop the Belfry Pirates with a four-point lead, but gave way to relaxation and a full court press in the final three minutes of play as Belfry slipped away with a 76-73 win. Even though the last-minute laspe cost the Cats the game, Coach Fred Setser feels the team is on the way back and over the slump. Leading the Cats in double figures were Kippy McNally who collected 22 points. He was followed by Jim Blackburn with 19, Bill Risner with 13 and Dennis Walker with 10.

Next week's games pair up like this: Prestonsburg at Martin county on Tuesday and at Wheelwright on Wednesday. McDowell hosts No. 2-ranked Louisville Shawnee Tuesday and Phelps on Thursday; Wheelwright travels to Elkhorn City on Tuesday and hosts Prestonsburg Friday; Betsy Layne entertains Elkhorn City, Saturday. Allen Central is idle this week.

All POW's will be channeled through Travis Air Force Base, just outside San Francisco, and the first are expected to arrive there this week-end. Clark told his father via phone Sunday night that he is looking forward to his new duty, with the hope that he could add assistance to the returning prisoners. He has been in the Armed Forces for almost three years and is a graduate of the U. S. Army Public Information Center at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana. Prior to entering Army service, he was employed by the communications network of the University of Kentucky.

'Fundamentalist' Mennonites Operate Morgan Printing Plant

By GEORGE WOLFORD (In The Ashland Independent)

CROCKETT—High on the ridge separating the Paint Creek and Elk Fork watersheds stands a religious community unique in Eastern Kentucky. Here a group of some 50 Mennonite adults operate a fairsize printing establishment which is both their sustenance and their reason for being. As Mennonites, they are easily recognizable as different from their neighbors because of dress, association, and activity. Acceptance at Crockett has been about what it would anywhere in America, some good, a little bad.

The community isn't communal, though separate dormitories for single young men and women are located on the church property at Crockett. Families live in the neighborhood around, and because of the central location, spread into Johnson, Elliott, Lawrence, and Morgan counties. Youths come from widespread hometowns, with many of the males spending a hitch here rather than in military service.

Rod and Staff, the printing corporation, came into being because this group of conservative, old-line Mennonites felt the main body of their church was moving toward a new liberality. "We're not 'the' publishing house," stresses Elmer Showalter, business manager. "We formed because we were concerned the regular house was no longer representing historic Mennonite teaching."

Though none were printers, the group followed a leader, Paul Landis, back to the rugged Morgan hills where he had been a missionary in the Forties. "He felt the Lord wanted him back in this community and if we wanted him in this work, we'd have to follow him here," Showalter recalled. The move came in 1960, to lands owned by Landis.

None were printers, "but we were more concerned about the message. We believe the Lord blesses by enabling us to perform tasks we weren't qualified for." With that blessing, and some help from dedication and concentration, the printers "now learn a job in six months that industry takes six years to teach," Showalter grins. "Or at least that's what the salesmen tell us who come in here."

Commercial contact is one of the few natural communications of the Mennonites. They have switched from traditional horse-drawn vehicles to use cars, and travel through all four counties. But they have no radio, television, and few newspapers here and only limited social intercourse with folks around them. "We don't want to bring in media which is beyond our control," Showalter explains, noting its content often goes against Mennonite teaching.

With such limited outside contact, how can the group write, edit, and publish printed material, one immediately wonders. A look at the work they produce reveals that Mennonite religious topics are the substance around which reading, grammar, and science texts are built. These books are not only used by Mennonites at Crockett and all around America, but by other religions which find them useful and in line with their feeling.

At Crockett, the congregation worships in its church and uses the same building's basement for school for the five children of the community. (Thirteen more are coming on.) A new structure for that same use is under construction. Books produced here provide the basic learning tool, and teachers are drawn from within the church. "We don't look for someone who has had a background in education," Elmer Showalter explains, noting that novices find the Mennonite materials easier to use in teaching.

Such schools have been a source of conflict between the soft-spoken churchmen and authority for years, but that appears erased now, by virtue of Supreme Court decision on Amish schools. (The Amish are offshoots of Mennonite church, according to World Book encyclopedia.) But Showalter says his students have not been bothered by enforcement by Kentucky public educators.

Rod and Staff began "with the primary purpose of developing and printing sound literature, not making a profit," he explains, noting his group does not accept or want commercial printing work and gets a third of its revenue from donations. "But that percentage is going down as we grow, and we're growing faster than we can handle. We've had to farm out some work in the past year."

"Our books are printed according to our understanding of scripture. We will sell them to anyone. We didn't anticipate other religious bodies wanting them, but they have. There have been Baptists, Lutherans, old-line Presbyterians, Holiness, Assembly of God, lots of others, including Seventh-Day Adventists, and we certainly don't agree with them in teaching."

(One group in Texas, Accelerated Christian Education, Inc.—I don't know what church they represent—is a big user. They opened 70 schools last year and plan 300 by next year. They ordered 5,000 workbooks right off the bat, and that sent us hunting for help.

"There are few other Christian textbooks on the market. Our books differ from public books in that they do not teach evolution, do not glorify war or heroes."

A look inside the final pages of a first-grade reader may give some idea of why Mennonites consider their education program tough and feel eight years of it is a basic for the life they plan. One paragraph for the six-year-old reads:

God was not pleased with what Job's friends said. He told them to bring Him an offering. He told them Job would pray for them. They would have been punished if Job would not have prayed for them. But Job prayed for them even though they were not nice to him.

All the readings, all the sentences for parsing in "Building Christian English," have to do with Biblical occurrences. The science book, which opens with the story of a six-day creation, is a best-seller. Artwork in the books depicts not Ben and Alice, Tom and Jerry, or Dr. Seuss, but Mennonite children hard at work.

Once youngsters have completed the eight grades, they take correspondence courses. "We're not against the idea of high school, but are against the content taught there."

The printing plant, main among the buildings on the hill, houses photo-offsetting equipment and three presses. Also in this work structure are editorial offices (upstairs), a bindery, and heavy warehousing. A business building next door contains a bookstore with both locally-produced material and selected books from other denominations. The Bibles are the King James version.

CEP Gets Funding Through This Year

The Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program (CEP), sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Economic Security, Frankfort, has been funded to operate through 1973. The U. S. Department of Labor's Regional Manpower Administrator William U. Norwood, Atlanta, said federal funds in the amount of $614,417 have been allocated to serve 136 individuals who have long histories of unemployment in the rural areas of the state.

CEP seeks to bring together in one unified effort the various manpower programs administered by the U. S. Department of Labor to help the hard-core disadvantaged in the heaviest areas of unemployment prepare for, find, and hold permanent jobs.

Operating through a single local sponsor, CEP seeks out the hard-core unemployed in the areas of concentrated unemployment. The program makes available to such persons manpower and related supportive services, including orientation, basic education, counseling, physical examinations, medical treatment, day care for their children, work experience, job training, job development, and job placement.

The Kentucky State Employment Service determines the need for workers in the occupations in which training is to be provided; and offers other supportive services. The State Department of Education's Vocational Division will provide academic services during the period of vocational training.

Young Troopers

Visitors to Trooper Island never know what they'll find next on the 30-acre summer camp at Dale Hollow Lake. It might be a Kentucky Air National Guard helicopter, like the youngsters above have discovered, or it could be the retired F-84-F jet fighter plane, which has made its home on the island since January, 1971. Sixty deserving boys attend the camp each week during the summer. The camp is operated by the State Police.

The Old Morehead and No Fu'ther Comes to 'End of the Line,' June 15

By HELEN PRICE STACY

If future hikers in the Clack Mountain area of Rowan county stumble on rusty rails and wonder why, they will be making one of those rediscoveries of history for which the Commonwealth is noted.

Those who lived in the shadow of the mountain or rode the rails of the Morehead and North Fork would be aware of the memories left behind when the four-mile railroad in Northeastern Kentucky said good-bye.

The M & N F had its inception as the Morehead and West Liberty Railroad Company when articles of incorporation were filed June 20, 1900 and a right-of-way was graded four miles from Morehead to the foot of Clack Mountain.

According to a history of railroading in the area, the mountain proved too much. In 1905 the four miles of grade were sold to the Clearfield Lumber Company, of Clearfield, Pa.

The new owners took a 25-mile tour through Rowan and Morgan counties and in view of the virgin timber and vast deposits of coal and clay in the region, decided to extend the line and change the name to the Morehead and North (sometimes colloquially to Morehead and No Fu'ther). A headquarters was built in a Rowan county community, Clearfield, named for the town in Pennsylvania.

The late Murvel Crosley, for many years president of the M & N F, told about a trip he and Engineer Cleff McClellan made in the mid-1950's with a 12-car train loaded with timber, coal and merchandise from Morgan county.

At Adkins Curve, two miles from Redwine, McClellan looked back to see five cars "jump rail" and land on their sides. Because nothing could be done at the time, the remaining cars started toward Clearfield. At Lost Point Cut, in the Winding Stairs section of Morgan county, four more cars left the track.

Crosley, thinking McClellan was a bit nervous and that the train might need a steadier hand the rest of the way, took the controls and headed on, but in a rugged section near Paragon, they felt a jerk and saw still another car jump the track.

By the time the two-car train reached Clearfield, it became one of the longest, most frustrating and embarrassing runs in railroading.

Four tunnels had to be cut for the road's 25-mile length. Hand tools, man and mule power performed the job. One was 1354 feet through Clack Mountain, another, called Popping Rock Tunnel, was 725 feet.

Rains, floods and the depression years pulled the last whistle on all but four miles of the road in 1933.

Hauling clay and products, wood pulp and gravel kept the road alive until Jan. 15, 1973. The old "Blue Goose" (steam engine) had made its last run several years ago, so the farewell ride was by diesel.

According to M & N F superintendent, Roy Cassidy, the tracks will not be pulled. So those future hikers may find them, pull a spike for a souvenir and ponder the 73-year history of the Morehead and North Fork.

Seedling Production, Year 'Round at Forestry Division

Frankfort, Ky.—More than one million acres of idle, eroding and unproductive land in Kentucky are in need of reforestation, according to official estimates of the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, Division of Forestry.

In addition, several hundred thousand sparsely stocked acres of timberland need to be replanted with seedlings.

To provide low cost tree seedlings to be used in reforesting this unproductive land, the Division of Forestry operates three nurseries. They are the Kentucky Dam Tree Nursery, Gilbertsville; Morgan County Tree Nursery, Woodbend; and Pennyryle State Tree Nursery, Dawson Springs.

Although most landowners don't start thinking of planting trees until the weather starts to warm up, the production of tree seedlings is a year round job for state nurseries.

The nurseries will begin "lifting" one- and two-year-old seedlings in mid-February after the ground is not frozen. After lifting the seedlings will be graded, packed and shipped to central points for delivery to landowners who have placed their orders.

Production will be at its peak around the first of March when the nurseries usually receive the bulk of their seedling orders. Forestry Director Harry Nadler advises landowners to get their seedling orders in as soon as possible.

"Naturally," said Nadler, "the sooner the nurseries receive the orders, the sooner they'll be able to get the seedlings on their way to the landowners."

By mid-April the last of the seedling orders will have been filled and it will be time to plant seeds for harvesting during the following fall and spring.

In early spring the cycle will begin anew. Ground will be broken and prepared into seedling beds, then carefully prepared for the precise machinery used in planting the seeds. The amount and type of fertilizer is controlled so that growth will not be depressed or accelerated and soil testing is done in order to counter any change in the condition of the soil since the previous seeding. After the beds have been seeded they are covered with a straw mulch to preserve moisture.

During the growing season, May through September, the seed beds are kept irrigated, weeded and checked for insect or disease damage and for soil deficiencies.

After the growing season is over, there is a small "lifting" of seedlings to fill the orders of landowners who plant in the fall.

CARD OF THANKS

Seed collecting is also a fall activity. Seed is collected from the seed orchards that have been established at all three nurseries, and sent to the Pennyryle Nursery's seed processing plant where machines extract, clean and check the quality of the seed. The highest quality seeds are selected and kept in refrigerated storage until they are distributed to the nurseries at planting time.

This seed improvement program, which began 12 years ago, produces superior seed, and subsequently, superior trees. It also saves the state a lot of money. Prior to the establishment of the seed orchards at the nurseries, $25,000 to $30,000 was paid each year to out-of-state seed dealers.

Seedlings available from the Division of Forestry's nurseries this spring are: Loblolly, shortleaf, white, Virginia and Scotch pine, black locust and black walnut, yellow poplar, cottonwood, sycamore, white and cherrybark oak and Chinese chestnut. Superior cottonwood and hybrid poplar cuttings also are available.

The cost of seedlings is $10 per thousand except for black walnut and Scotch pine which sell for $15 per thousand. The superior cottonwood and hybrid poplar cuttings cost $20 per thousand.

Anyone wishing to purchase tree seedlings can obtain an order blank from any of the division's local offices, or from County Extension offices, Soil Conservation Services, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation offices. Order blanks are also available at the Division of Forestry's main office in Frankfort.

This is incorrect. The contracting firm headed by his son was the H. B. Ranier Construction Company, which had no connection with the original firm.

2 from County Wreck Victims

Two Floyd county natives have been killed within the week in Florida and Indiana motor accidents.

Eighty-three-year-old Lee Salisbury, formerly of Hunter, was killed last Wednesday afternoon at Plant City, Fla., in a wreck in which his daughter, Mrs. Mildred Robinson, was severely hurt.

At Kendallville, Ind., Sunday, Mrs. Annie Collins Belcher, 23, formerly of Garrett, and her sister-in-law were killed at Kendallville, Ind., when their auto reportedly skidded into an oncoming tractor-trailer. Name of the second victim, who was a resident of West Virginia, was unavailable.

Mr. Salisbury was a passenger in the auto driven by his daughter, Mrs. Robinson, who was en route to a Plant City school to pick up her children. Their car was sideswiped by a truck. Mr. Salisbury was dead on arrival at a hospital there.

He was a native of Minnie and was the last of the family of Parmer and Mary Turner Salisbury. His wife, Mrs. Sally Salisbury, died in 1963. Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Mildred Robinson, of Dover, Fla., and Mrs. Mary Friend, Plant City, also 17 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

His body was returned to the Hall Brothers Funeral Home at Martin where funeral rites were conducted at 1 p.m. Monday by the Rev. Lorie Vannucci. Burial was made in the family cemetery at Hunter.

Mrs. Collins was a daughter of Rodolph Collins, of Garrett, and Mrs. Fanny Hicks Collins, of Kendallville. Survivors, in addition to her parents, are her husband, Sonny Belcher, of Kendallville; three daughters, Kathy Lynn, Thelma Louise and Rachel Belcher, all at home; five brothers, Willie, Kern and Robert Collins, all of Kendallville, James and Raymond Collins, both of Lexington.

Workers Strike At Am. Standard

A strike which paralyzed production operations at the American Standard plant, near Paintsville, was called around 6 a.m. Tuesday and apparently was ready to go into a second day or longer, it was indicated Tuesday afternoon.

Approximately 400 hourly workers are involved in the walkout. A minor traffic jam resulted around 7:30 a.m. at the entrance to the plant, off US 23, as picket lines were established and workers arrived without prior notice of the strike.

Ballard Slone, of David, president of the local union of the United Steelworkers which has jurisdiction at the plant, could not be reached for a statement as to the workers' position.

James Hulsman, American Standard's plant manager, said three issues are involved. He listed them thus:

1. Back pay for two separate wage levels above and below $2.75 an hour. Both categories of workers have been granted increases of 5 cents and 10 cents an hour from November, 1971 and February and July, 1972, depending on their pay scale. But the increase has been held up by the Wage Board.
2. Discharge of three employees. Mr. Hulsman said two of the three were discharged for absenteeism.
3. The job classification system which was agreed to at the last negotiation sessions but which were never completed.

Columbia Refund To 114,500 Buyers Effective, Feb. 2

The 114,500 customers of Columbia Gas of Kentucky, Inc., will soon receive a refund and a reduction in rates, according to Michael Barna, Jr., manager. He said the refund and rate reduction are being made under the purchased gas adjustment provision of the company's tariff and have been approved by the Kentucky Public Service Commission.

The reductions to customers, he said, reflect reductions in the amount charged Columbia Gas of Kentucky by its wholesale supplier, retroactive to Marth, 1971. As a result, Columbia Gas of Kentucky will make refunds to its general service customers of approximately $866,700.

The money will be returned to general service customers by crediting customers' bills commencing with meter readings on February 2 and extending through the May 1973 meter readings. The refund amounts to approximately $5.70 for an average residential customer.

The reduction in rates is effective with meter readings of February 2. The annual reduction to general service customers will be approximately $282,000.

State Highway Legal System Is Lauded

Frankfort, Ky.—Kentucky's computerized condemnation program is being recognized as a step forward in the legal facets of highway work.

J. D. Robinson, general counsel for the State Highway Department, has been asked to discuss this program before a meeting of eight state highway departments and the staff of Region 4 of the Federal Highway Administration.

Robinson developed the computerization of all condemnation actions in the state to provide the legal staff with a continuous record of all cases and the current status of each. Prior to adoption of this system the legal staff had no means of ascertaining the status of a case out in the state except by contacting the respective attorney handling the case.

This is just one of Robinson's innovative moves that has made the legal department of the Highway Department more effective.

Contract attorneys, abolished by the general counsel, involved the state's paying a contractual fee to 54 practicing attorneys throughout the state to handle condemnation actions in their particular area. The department's legal work is now in the hands of 32 fulltime attorneys, including two in each of the 12 highway districts and eight in the central office.

A trial period has revealed that more condemnation cases were closed in seven months by 12 salaried attorneys than by nearly 60 under contract for a full year.

Robinson's efforts have also brought about the collection of more than $2 million in condemnation refunds due the department. More than one-third of the amount collected was due for as long as six to eight years.

Also, for the first time in ten years, the legal staff has made inroads into the 2,000 cases on backlog. With the department filing an average of 600 cases per year, this year's record shows a clean slate with an additional 300 cases removed from the backlog list.

Staff attorneys now devote full time to court cases, bringing more favorable judgments for the department.

In 1972, only 38 cases were appealed for a rate of less than one-third the number in former years. The Court of Appeals this year rendered 19 decisions in which the department was a party and was successful in 11 of these.

In addition to the more than $2 million in refunds collected, the cutback in appeals has resulted in a savings of $60,000 and the net saving resulting from cancellation of legal consultant contracts is $860,000.

Secretary of State To Hold Workshops

Secretary of State Thelma Stovall says her office will hold six workshops around Kentucky to explain the state's new voter registration law for the benefit of county clerks. Under that new law, all voters must re-register with their county clerk by Sept. 25 to be eligible to vote in next November's primary election. The workshops will be held at various state resort parks and cities.

West Liberty Group Seeks Higher Pool for Cave Run

Frankfort, Ky.—A Morgan county delegation met with state officials here Thursday seeking a raise in the summer pool level of Cave Run Reservoir. They also discussed constructing access roads and a connector road through West Liberty to the reservoir area.

Meeting with the group were Kentucky

Highway Commissioner Charles Pryor, Environmental Commissioner Thomas Harris and Ron Johnson, aid to Gov. Wendell Ford.

The initial meeting laid groundwork for future meetings with the governor. U. S. Rep. Carl D. Perkins, D-7th District, and the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Electric Cooperatives Offer College Grants

Two new college scholarships with a total value of $4,000 are being offered to students beginning their junior year at Kentucky's colleges or universities by the state's rural electric cooperatives.

Each of the scholarships consist of annual $500 grant; $500 interest-free loans—which will be forgiven under certain conditions—and summer employment with remuneration of at least $1,000 each summer. The summer employment will be with one or more of the 29 rural electric cooperatives in the state.

These two scholarships are being offered in addition to two similar scholarships which were awarded last year to students at Morehead State University and the University of Kentucky. Last year's recipients will continue to receive the scholarships through their senior year.

Students who wish to apply or who desire more information concerning the scholarships should contact Don Wood, Kentucky Rural Electric Cooperative Corporation, 4515 Bishop Lane, Louisville, Kentucky 40218, Phone (502) 451-2430. Applications for scholarships for the 1973-74 school year must be submitted by April 1, 1973.

The group proposed construction of a new highway connecting the Mountain Parkway and Interstate 64 via West Liberty to facilitate access to the Cave Run Reservoir.

Also discussed with the state highway official were projects on Ky. 7 and 32 and new road construction in the Debbie Hill section.

Winfred Howard, of Morgan county, said the Department of Highways will seek to rebuilt low-lying sections of Ky. 7 and 32 "as good or better than old portions of the road."

Following a study to be made on road upgrading and pending review of reports from the Corps and highway department, "in some cases, money is going to be added to raise the standards of the roads," said Howard.

In later meetings, when engineers of the Louisville district U. S. Army Engineers are present, talk is expected to center around raising the pool level of the reservoir, which will be the fifth largest in the state, to create a deeper pool in the reservoir at West Liberty.

Club Hears Harmon On World Affairs

Wayland—A talk on "International Affairs" highlighted the most recent program meeting of the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club at the home of Mrs. Charles Collins, Lackey.

Frank Harmon, vice-president of Floyd Federal Savings and Loan Association, Prestonsburg, guest-speaker for the club, emphasized that "the United States is the last great hope of earth." Mr. Harmon explained that though the United States is outranked in size and population by many nations of the world, it has superior technology. He emphasized that as a nation we should stay strong so that no one will ever attack us. Finally, Mr. Harmon stressed that "we must continue to fight Communism and hope that the peoples of the world that we have helped will get a spark of freedom and strive for themselves."

In response to a letter written by the club, Captain Billy Lykins and Sgt. Eugene R. Hutchinson, of the Kentucky State Police, appeared briefly before the club to explain the reason for the sometimes slow arrival of State Police to the scene of an accident. Captain Lykins informed the club that the department is very shorthanded and at this time does not even have sufficient vehicles to serve all the officers currently employed. The club volunteered to draft a letter to the state representatives and to Governor Ford concerning this situation.

Prior to the program, Mrs. J. T. Spillman gave the devotional. During the business session following the program, the president, Mrs. S. M. Martin, collected Green Stamp books to be sent to the Kentucky Federation headquarters toward the purchase of a kidney machine.

The club voted to purchase one uniform at a cost of $135 for the Allen Central high school band. A check for $15 is to be sent to the Kentucky Federation headquarters toward the September 24, 25 and 26 meeting in Louisville at the Galt House.

Those present were Mrs. Earl Castle, Mrs. M. M. Collins, Mrs. Mervil Dixon, Mrs. Patricia Duff, Mrs. Elizabeth Duff, Mrs. Alice Hornsby, Mrs. Allie Howard, Mrs. LaFaye Hughes, Mrs. Otto Martin, Mrs. S. M. Martin, Mrs. John Reed, Mrs. J. T. Spillman, Mrs. J. C. Wells, Mrs. Floyd Tackett.

Hostesses were Mrs. Charles Collins, Mrs. Leo Howard, and Mrs. Alice Hornsby.

In 1944, the Railway Labor Act, authorizing a labor union chosen by a majority to represent a craft, was held to require union protection to the minority in that class. Discrimination against certain members on the ground of race was held enjoinable.

We've been Environmentalists more than 30 years.

How can the American Electric Power System burn 30,000,000 tons of coal a year and be an environmentalist? The dictionary defines an environmentalist as one concerned with "the total of ecological, social and cultural conditions that influence the life of a community."

On the ecological side, we recognized the absolute necessity for concern about the environment when we started installing smoke and dust collecting systems on our stacks more than 30 years ago.

On the social side, which takes in jobs, wages, and an increasing standard of living, we also knew that it would be an absolute necessity to provide 16 times more power to meet 1973's power requirements. The conflict between the need for protection of the environment on one hand and the need for more power production (and its attendant pollution potential) on the other was an enormous problem—and still is.

But, we've come a long way in finding and applying solutions. We've already spent one-quarter-billion dollars on environmental improvements. Our concern, however, is best shown by describing just a few of the things we have been doing to protect our air, land and water.

Air Pollution Control. All 36 coal-fired generating units built on the AEP System since 1950 have included air pollution control equipment, the latest of which is designed to remove at least 99.5% of all particulate matter from the stacks. A program of "upgrading" pollution control equipment at older plants was also started in the early 1950's and has been continuing ever since. We've proposed to regulatory bodies the expenditure of some $52 million for pollution control equipment in 1973 alone.

The cost to upgrade some old generating units cannot be justified from our customers' viewpoint. These units are being shut down. The AEP System has retired 106 old generating units at 36 plants since 1947. The electricity once produced by all these units is now supplied by just one of our large new generators at a plant equipped with the latest dust collection systems available.

Research. We are determined to find answers to the unsolved problems associated with removal of sulfur oxides from plant stacks. This is the major objective of our air quality research program. At this time, no known sulfur oxide removal system is reliable, or commercially feasible. When a solution is found we will adopt it promptly. In fact, even now the engineering and design work for the installation of a major new sulfur removal system is nearing completion, and we hope to start its construction within the next few months. Until a commercial process is developed, tall stacks are the best means available to prevent ground-level buildup of sulfur oxides. We pioneered the use of tall stacks, starting also in the early 1950's. Tall stacks have for years been recognized and accepted in Great Britain as the best available answer to the sulfur oxide problem.

Cooling Towers. Power plants use large amounts of water to cool steam, raising the water's temperature as it is returned to its source. If the river or lake is too small, the return of the water might, under some circumstances, be harmful. Cooling towers cool the water in a "closed circuit" system which eliminates warm water discharge. The AEP System pioneered the use of natural draft, hyperbolic cooling towers in this country. We've built ten of these towers at plants located on rivers where the quantity of water was insufficient to prevent thermal buildup. Three more are under construction. We are constantly studying the effects of warm water discharge and our present program of ecological research on Lake Michigan, started in 1966, is the most comprehensive such study ever conducted under utility sponsorship.

Land Conservation. With the ever-increasing need for electric power, the problem of delivering that power to customers could have, without the development of high voltage transmission systems, created a forest of utility towers across our countryside. Our 765,000-volt lines today can carry 30 times more power than earlier 138,000-volt lines. In terms of land conservation, one 200 foot right-of-way for a 765,000-volt line can do the same job that 30 rights-of-way did 20 years ago.

Our goal is to do an even better job in safe-guarding all the aspects of our total environment—air, water, and land as well as jobs, wages and a high standard of living.

Whatever Things

By DONALD E. WILDMON

Tradition

Two men who lived in the villages of Djambi and Hasanuddin on tiny Haruku island in eastern Indonesia had a disagreement. It seemed that both of these men were rather stubborn and that each laid claim to a certain sago tree. Well, these two fellows decided to settle the question of ownership, once and for all.

The interesting part of the story was the method these fellows decided to follow to decide who owned the sago tree. Of course, they were rather conservative. So they decided to answer the question in the traditional way—by seeing who could stay under the water the longest! Now it is true that to you and me this method seemed totally unrelated to the point in question—ownership of the sago tree. But for these two men the fact that there was no relationship between the two didn't matter. Tradition said this was the way the question was to be answered, and so they answered it in that manner! Questions had always been answered this way on Haruku. And as far as they were concerned they would always be answered in this manner.

Tradition is, in many respects, a wonderful thing. For tradition usually preserves that which is good. We are greatly in debt to our parents and grandparents for some of the traditions they passed on to us. We think as we think, act as we act, partly because our forefathers passed it along to us.

But let us move on to add that tradition is often very damaging and demeaning, also. Slavery lasted nearly 1900 years beyond the life of the One who came to set men free because of tradition. Tradition which no one questioned. Tradition which, thank God, is broken now. But the results of that tradition still linger.

Tradition has said that when two countries came to an impassable point in their differences, they went to war and the strongest was right. Might made right. Now this tradition is being questioned by civilized man. And rightly so. Each new generation is exactly that—a new generation. And each new generation should seek to build on the good traditions of the past and correct those traditions which we now see to be harmful to mankind.

Now if this is a truth in the dealings of the world, then it is no less a truth in the work of the Church. There are many valid and worthwhile traditions in the Church. And, likewise, there are traditions which need to be broken. Someone has said that the seven last words of one church were these: "We have always done it this way." We don't like to change, many of us. We prefer things to remain as they are. But there is one thing certain in this world—today is different from yesterday and tomorrow will be different from today. And let us remember that the Founder of our Church broke tradition—often!

Let us, therefore, take the good traditions handed down to us and build on them. And let us change those traditions which are no longer valid. If we fail to do this and hang on to tradition for traditions' sake, we will end up like those two villagers on Haruku. You see, they both drowned!

They both followed a tradition that was outdated and stupid. And they both lost. Can we expect anything different when we do the same?

Harold Telephone Denies Rate Boost

The Harold Telephone Company recently lost its application for a rate increase. The Public Service Commission denied the request filed by the Floyd county firm.

Other PSC rulings affecting this area included these:

Granted Columbia Gas of Kentucky permission to reduce rates, effective Feb. 2, and to make refunds to customers for the period Dec. 1, 1972 to Jan. 31, 1973. Reductions were made possible by a reduction in the price charged Columbia for gas by its supplier, Columbia Gas Transmission Corporation.

Granted the application of Radio Telephone Service, Inc. for a certificate of convenience and necessity and authorization to interconnect its facilities at Hazard and Morehead with General Telephone Company of Kentucky and to interconnect its facilities at Middlesboro, Corbin and Danville with South Central Bell Telephone Company.

Consumer Comments

By Atty. Gen. Ed W. Hancock
Furniture and carpeting are "big-ticket" items. Since substantial money is involved in their purchase, they are frequently bought on an installment plan or on time payments.
If you plan to shop for these major items, be a well-informed and cautious buyer. Don't be wise with pennies and foolish with dollars.
Most families buy furniture at least twice. The first purchase is made at the time of marriage, usually, and the second when children reach their early or mid-teens. The first set of furniture may be relatively inexpensive, but it should be sturdy enough to last 12 to 15 years.
We advise all consumers to be wary of such terms as "warehouse," "discount," or "wholesale." Some of these offer legitimate discounts, but, to be on the safe side, compare discount prices with those at other stores.

Be sure the price includes delivery and placement in your home. If guarantees are offered, get them in writing and read the contract carefully.
The first rule in shopping for rugs and carpeting is to buy from a reputable dealer—someone who values having you as a customer and who hopes to keep you satisfied.
Most complaints from dissatisfied customers involve advertising of carpet at a very low price, followed by an attempt to switch the customer to a higher-priced merchandise.
If you purchase well-to-wall carpeting, as many people do at this time of year, you will probably sign a contract. Your contract should include: the manufacturer's name or trademark; style, number, pattern or trade name of carpet; color; fiber content; installation charge; description of padding; size or total number of square yards; and price per square yard. The full cash price, less your deposit, should also be stated and, if bought on installment, the carrying charges must be shown.
If you have a consumer complaint or problem, call the Consumer Hotline, toll-free, at 1-800-372-2960.

This is a direct quote from 34-year-old Dale Anastasi who was recently named extension specialist in horticulture, and who from his headquarters at Robinson Substation at Quicksand will serve Eastern Kentucky.

Academically as well as psychologically, Anastasi comes to the position well prepared. Other than holding an associate of applied science degree in general agriculture from New York State University, he has a bachelor of science degree in animal science and a master's degree in horticulture, from the U. K. College of Agriculture.

Anastasi first came through the state in 1959 as a member of a drama club that was touring the United States. "I immediately fell in love with the state and the people of the state," he said, "and knew that here was where I wanted to spend the rest of my life." A year later he made a move to make that desire come true. That was in 1960 when he returned to Kentucky to enroll at the University and earn his degree in animal science. Later, he served as a research technician in agronomy for the USDA at the University.

In 1965, Anastasi resigned from this position to become a member of the Christian Appalachian Project and, along with the late Eastern Kentucky horticulturist, Robert L. Shepherd, worked for about five years on horticultural and community development projects in Jackson county.

After securing his Masters, he went to Pike County as Agricultural Extension Agent, where he initiated projects in strip mine land reclamation and greenhouses. He took over as area horticulturist and moved to Quicksand in December, 1972.

In speaking of his work, Anastasi said he felt that there was a great potential for horticultural projects in Eastern Kentucky.

"I want to work with the people," he said. "I want to stir their imaginations and, through research, support their efforts in tapping their natural resources. I want to help create new jobs and through the medium of vocational training encourage the education of youth for these jobs."

Anastasi is married to the former Miss Marie Fano, of Canton, Ohio, who is now team director of the Mountain Com-

A Better Way To Dispose Of Mounting Solid Wastes

The city of Lexington is moving toward a power generating system such as the plant now under construction at Nashville, Tenn., where garbage will be the fuel used.

These and a few other cities have figured that the system could serve in more ways than one—as a solution to critical solid-waste disposal problems, as a means of reducing air pollution as a self-supporting means of generating power.

Lexington apparently plans to use solid wastes as a fuel to produce steam for heating or cooling units in large buildings.

Lexington City Commissioner William Hoskins said he and other commission members already have visited the Nashville plant.

"We think it may be the proper permanent solution," Hoskins said.

"We know we've got the solid waste," he said. "We need to find out if we've got a market to sell the steam" and if the market is sufficient to cover distribution costs.

Hoskins, who heads the team looking into the project, said the first six-week segment of the study will consider how planned new buildings might use steam from the plant and how existing buildings might convert from their current fossil fuel-burning heating or cooling units.

He said potential customers would include a new civic center for which ground will be broken this summer, and probably such large buildings as the Phoenix Hotel, the Kentucky Central Insurance building and some downtown bank buildings.

The study's second phase—to be undertaken if first phase results are encouraging—would consider construction costs for the plant.

The second phase would take about 4 1/2 months.

Hoskins said the minimum capacity for such a plant—based on the operations of a limited number in America and Europe—appears to be about 500 tons of garbage a day, which would just handle Lexington's current output of solid waste.

But if sufficient market were shown to exist—if the system could be extended to major customers such as the University of Kentucky—the city would contract with surrounding communities for disposal of their solid waste, he said.

Study of garbage-burning plants has indicated that combustion of a ton of solid wastes produces energy equal to that produced by a third of a ton of coal, 65 gallons of No. 2 fuel oil or 8,000 cubic feet of natural gas.

The garbage, of course, is free—except for collection costs, which would be spent anyway—and the supply is apparently limitless.

Estimates indicate the Nashville system will produce about a fourth of the smoke that is now produced to heat and cool the buildings it will serve, and about a tenth of the poisonous sulfur oxide gases.

And that limited air pollution will be spread out over a year rather than concentrated in the winter months.

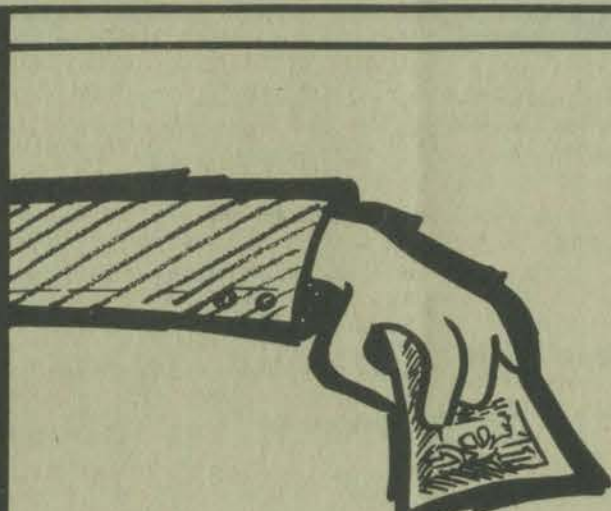

DEMOCRATIC WOMEN TO MEET

The Floyd County Democratic Women will hold their regular monthly meeting at May Lodge Wednesday, Feb. 14, at noon. County Court Clerk C. "Ollie" Robinson will be the speaker. All Democrat women are invited to attend.

Shelton Participates In Special Project At Union College

Barbourville, Ky.—Bruce Shelton, son of Chester Shelton, of Drift, participated in a special academic project at Union College during January. The "mini-term," an innovation more formally known as the interim term, is a four-week program sandwiched between the fall and spring semesters which gives students an opportunity to focus their academic attention on their own particular field of interest.

Shelton enrolled in a course in American reform movements, which examined the movements in the United States from the 1830's through the 1930's. It included consideration of the Abolitionists, Mugwumps, Populists, Progressives, and the New Deal.

Somerset Aviation School Is Unique

At the Aviation Maintenance Technician School in Somerset, students interested in aviation mechanics are learning what it takes to keep sleek multi-million dollar jets soaring through the skies. Opened Feb. 1, 1971, the school is certified by the Federal Aviation Administration.

The school offers two major fields of instruction: airframe maintenance and power-plant maintenance. Airframe students learn about the structural components of the airplane while power-plant instruction deals with the propulsion systems of the aircraft. In these two fields, students are given equal training in practical application and classroom theory. The school requires approximately 22 months of instruction.
