

Two Children Die In Trailer Blaze

Adults Escape Fire Near Here Sunday Morning

Two small children died Saturday morning in a fire which destroyed one mobile home and damaged two others in the Goble-Roberts Addition, near here.

The bodies of James Anthony Martin, 5, and his two-year-old sister, Carol Faye, were recovered around 9:30 a.m. by Prestonsburg firemen from the flame-gutted hull of the trailer in which the fire began. Intensity of the heat made immediate recovery of the bodies impossible and firemen remained at the scene until nearly 1 p.m.

Mother of the children, Catherine Martin, and a relative, 15-year-old James Richard Hunt, escaped the burning structure as did Gene Ray Hinton, who, County Coroner James Carter was told, owned the trailer.

A neighbor who reported the blaze told Fire Chief Frank Vaughan that he heard a woman screaming shortly after 9 a.m. and looked outside to see the trailer afire. The fire department was then alerted and persons living nearby were aroused.

Attempts to battle the blaze were useless and would-be rescuers were repelled by the flames. Odell Wallen, owner of the mobile home upwind from the burning trailer, sustained a badly cut hand in an effort to enter the structure. Wallen's trailer was only moderately damaged, with broken windows and smoke stains suffered. James Ousley, whose mobile home caught fire and was reportedly "totalled" as a result of its downwind position from Hinton's trailer, also unsuccessfully tried to enter the burning structure.

James Hunt, who had spent the night in the trailer, told Coroner Carter that he had gone into the bathroom and when he came out the interior was filled with flames. He was then able to arouse Mrs. Martin and Hinton and the three left through a side door.

Coroner Carter said he was told Mrs. Martin was forcibly restrained by Abe Vanderpool from re-entering the flaming trailer when she realized her children were inside.

The boy's body was discovered beneath the bed in another bedroom and the daughter was found in a chair in the living room.

Two Outpost Clinics Scheduled Feb. 19th

The Floyd County Health Department announced this week that two nursing outpost clinics will be held in the county February 19—one at Honaker, in Kidd's Store, mouth of Big Branch; the other, at Bypro, in Ethel Osborne's Store. Both clinics are scheduled from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Nurses will be doing TB skin tests, immunizations, blood pressures and diabetes screening. Preschool children should be taken to the clinics.

2 Deputies Hit By Shotgun Fire; Meat Co. Looted

Two Floyd deputy sheriffs, Willie Hall and Henry Younce, were wounded Saturday night on Mud Creek by shotgun fire which smashed a window of Hall's car. A third man in the auto was also wounded. His name is unavailable.

Sheriff Frank Leslie said Monday afternoon that warrants for the arrest of Love Akers, of Mud Creek section, and her son, David, have been issued.

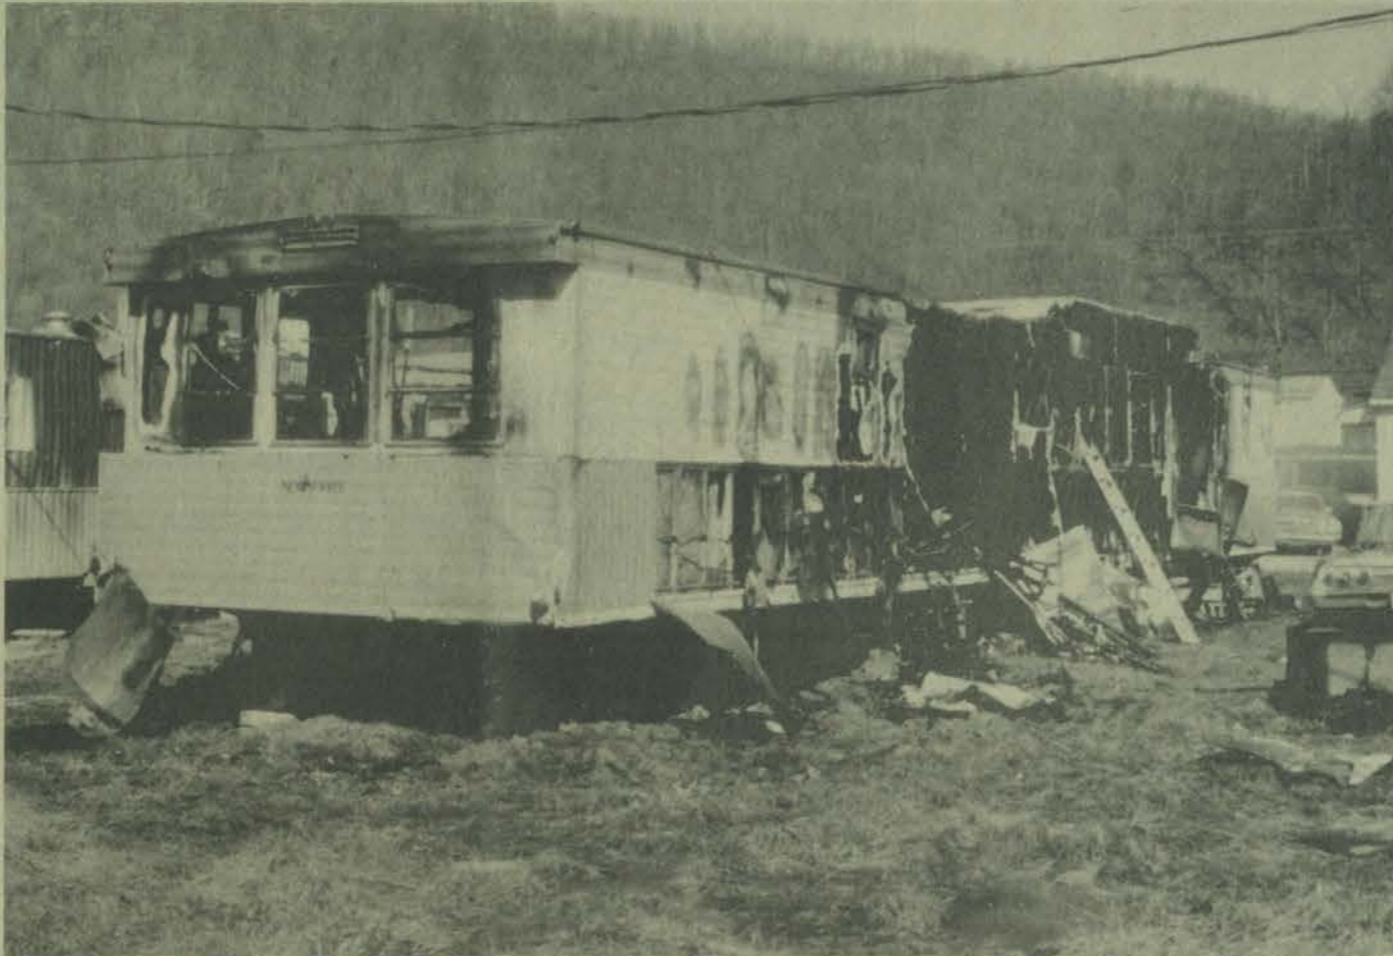

Neither of the officers was seriously hurt. Deputy Sheriff Hall reported here that the right rear window of his car was broken out by the shot. No motive for the shooting was given.

Shots were fired here last Tuesday night at two persons seen fleeing the Greer Meat Company, and one is believed to have been hit, although a check by officers has failed to disclose that anybody has sought treatment for a gunshot wound from a doctor in this area. The thieves took approximately $50 in cash from the company and in their flight lost 10 pounds of hamburger.

A stereo taken in a Christmastime break into Goebel's Discount Store here has been recovered, and Timothy Miller was booked last Wednesday at the county jail on a charge of knowingly receiving stolen property. Miller had been booked the preceding day, to be held 72 hours for questioning. The total haul from the store was estimated at $2,500. Officers involved in the investigation include Chief of Police Bill Potter, Policemen Hack Thornsbury, State Police Detective Gary Rose and County Detective Sam Hale.

Sheriff Frank Leslie and Deputy Sheriffs Dester Hamilton and D. Martin arrested Don Henderson and confiscated 28 cases of beer last Thursday on Frasure's Creek. Henderson was taken before Magistrate Eddie Caudill.

EARLY PLANTING

There is, we are told, a strong possibility that Johnny Burke will give up golf, come summer, to enjoy the flowers and listen to birdsong at an unlikely spot. Here's why:

A few days ago, he stored in a plastic trash bag some 50 pounds of sunflower seed for the birds around his home. Next morning, the garbage crew picked up the bag and hauled it away to the landfill on Middle Creek. Prospects for a bumper crop of sunflowers are bright, and there—tra-la! the birds will gather.

THE "PRAYER" HELPED, ANYHOW

Cleo Akers brings back from the cliff-country of Menifee county the story of a modern-day Jack-the-Giant-Killer and the trouble a reputation can bring.

The scene of his story is a country store where, one day, a little man named Perkins lit, just in time to run into two men of some heft who had imbibed too freely. The two drunks, almost out on their feet, pushed the newcomer a bit too much, and he laid both low with his fists.

Perkins left the store, knowing that it was not by the might of his fists but by the help of John Barleycorn that he had lulled the two big men to sleep. But others ascribed the feat to his Mighty Mite strength, and so it was that the name, Perkins, was spoken with some awe in that area. Men stepped aside to let him pass. Women looked upon him with something akin to adoration. Little boys dreamed of growing up to be a man like him.

Perkins basked in all this glory and often returned to the scene of his triumph to enjoy his fame. But there came the day when a giant stranger hitched his horse to the rack

Watson Bond $10,000 In Brother's Slaying

Bond of $10,000 was asked Saturday by County Judge Henry Stumbo for the release of Johnny Watson, 21, who is accused of the slaying late last Tuesday afternoon of his brother, Dennis, 32, on Little Mud Creek.

But the bond will not be in effect until Watson has undergone psychiatric examination at Central State Hospital, Louisville. Committal of the boyish-looking prisoner to Central State was made on agreement of Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo and County Attorney James R. Allen for the state and Jim Hammond and Albert A. Burchett for the defense. Hammond and Burchett are defending young Watson under the new Public Defender law.

One witness, Cecil Hunter, 24, of Honaker, was heard when the defense objected to the $10,000 bond asked by the Commonwealth. County Detective Sam Hale and State Police Detective Ewing Ballard said several others were at, or near, the scene of the crime.

Dennis Watson was shot through his neck by a bullet from a revolver which Hunter described as a ".38 snubnose," and he died en route to the Methodist Hospital, Pikeville.

Hunter, who said he had been driving with the brothers, indicated that a six-pack of beer may have caused the slaying. He said they stopped in front of the home of Johnny Watson's girl-friend, Deloris Hall, whom he visited briefly. The two, he said, had been arguing about the beer, and when Johnny Watson returned to the car he had a revolver in his hand.

Said Hunter: "Johnny asked Dennis to get out of the car. Dennis asked him to leave him alone, said he didn't want any trouble... Dennis never at any time tried to do anything, but they were arguing about the beer. Johnny was standing three or four feet from Dennis... After the shot was fired he looked at Dennis a little while, then he fired a shot into the air, handed the gun to me and said, 'Do what you want to with it and what you want to with him.'"

Hunter added, however, that later Johnny Watson accompanied him and the wounded man to the hospital. He said both he and the victim had "tried to reason with Johnny."

Hunter admitted, under defense questioning, that he did not actually see the firing of the shot which struck Watson but said he saw Johnny Watson point the revolver at his brother, immediately before he heard the shot. He also admitted that he did not know Johnny Watson had ever carried the gun and that he had seen Dennis with the weapon "a time or two."

Both men had been drinking, according to the witness, who said Johnny was "pretty high" and Dennis "could hardly walk." Both had sold him beer, he said, and he told of Johnny Watson working for his brother at a trailer on the top of the Spurlock hill.

The accused man listened to the testimony of Hunter without change of expression. When Judge Stumbo, after making a final decision on the $10,000 bond, addressed him, pointing to the enormity of his offense and telling him that he was sorry for him, Watson did not change expression.

The victim was a son of Kessie and Dicie Watson, of Honaker. Besides his parents, he is survived by his widow, Mrs. Brenda Watson and one son, Mark Anthony, both of Honaker; six brothers and six sisters, Willie, Earl, Johnny, Kenneth, Udale and Wilburn Watson, all of Printer, Mrs. Geneva Morgan, of Millard, Misses Nadine, Joyne, Lois, Ethel and Nedita Watson, all of Printer.

Funeral rites were conducted Friday at 10 a.m. from the Church of Christ on Little Mud, with J. R. Kidd and Delmar Hunter officiating. Burial in the family cemetery was under direction of the Justice Funeral Home.

Mine Death Suit Seeks $320,000

A suit filed in circuit court last Wednesday by a Floyd county woman seeks to recover $320,000 damages from the coal company which employed her husband at the time of his fatal injury, last February.

The suit was filed by Offie Gene Boyd as administrator of the estate of her husband, Jonathan Boyd. She alleges that his fatal injury resulted from the failure of the defendant, Dale Meade, operator of the Meade Coal Company, to equip, maintain and supervise the workings in compliance with state and federal mining laws and to take corrective measures to compensate for irregularities in the mine floor. She also claims defendant failed to discuss with Boyd the danger involved in pushing the deck-end of battery-powered equipment over the area in question.

In addition to damages, the suit asks $2,000 for funeral expenses.

Court Sets 10-Ton Load On 2 Roads

To Ask Rule Again On Power To Void Broad Form Deed

Although County Judge Henry Stumbo and members of the fiscal court reminded them that the attorney general has held that the court may not under the new Home Rule law outlaw the Broad Form deed and thus prevent strip-miners from moving onto their property, residents of Sugar Loaf and Corn Fork of Brandy Keg were given the protection Saturday of court-ordered tonnage limits on their roads.

The court voted to restrict the weight limit to 10 tons on both routes.

It also directed County Attorney James R. Allen to draft another letter to Attorney General Ed Hancock, requesting another opinion as to the court's Home Rule authority. In response to the first inquiry, the attorney general held that the court had no power to attack the Broad Form deeds because it had not been shown that mining under authority of these deeds constitute a threat to the public welfare. The new question will be posed on the contention that the public welfare is threatened. John Rosenberg, of the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund, Inc., will assist in drafting the letter requesting a second opinion.

After the fiscal court had unanimously voted the 10-ton limit on both Sugar Loaf and Corn Fork, Forrest Burchett, who lives at the mouth of Sugar Loaf, challenged the court's authority to regulate load limits on the road there, pointing out that is is not a county road.

County Judge Stumbo said he was not able to say if the county had procured rights-of-

Brief Tour May Alter Site Plan; Emma Span Near

Spindletop Research representatives have expressed the belief that two landfills would be sufficient for this county's solid waste disposal program, but after a drive of an hour or less last Saturday morning over one section of the county they apparently have changed their minds.

Two Spindletop representatives left here after a brief conference with the fiscal court to tour the entire county. W. R. Callihan took them in his auto and he was prepared to spend a day, or longer. They drove up US 23 to Harold, up Mud Creek and down Prater Creek and back to Prestonsburg, although Mr. Callihan informed them they had seen only a fraction of the county's area.

"We didn't realize the county is as large as it is," they commented and returned to Lexington—perhaps to begin considering the use of four landfills, as the court had suggested.

Another project which has been in the planning stage for months, the construction of a modern bridge across the Big Sandy at Emma, is apparently headed toward advertising for contractors' bids by spring. County Judge Henry Stumbo said Monday that he has received deeds for rights-of-way to be procured and also plans for the span. He added that he will go to Emma "as soon as I can get out this office" to negotiate for the right-of-way needed.

Mrs. Flo Weddington Adams, who led the fight for the bridge to replace the ancient and dangerous span now in use, said she anticipates no trouble in procuring rights-of-way. She added that Rural Highway Commissioner Ingram has notified her of the progress made.

The Department of Highways was recently granted permission by the fiscal court to remove the old bridge as soon as the new construction is completed.

Rough Fish Haul Heavy at Dewey

Part of one morning's catch featuring large carp is shown at left. Commercial fisherman engaged in Dewey Lake project displays two medium-size carp (right).

Two Paris, Tenn. commercial fishermen who began seining operations Feb. 6 at Dewey Lake are proving that two statements made by fishermen there—namely, "there are no fish in this lake" and "the big one always gets away"—are just fish tales.

By last Saturday, Dalton Ray Conley, conservation officer, reported, the two had taken almost two tons of large "rough" fish from the impoundment. The catch at that time was set at approximately 2,700 pounds of carp and 1100 pounds of catfish.

The catfish being taken, it was pointed out, are of the mudcat or yellow catfish variety. Because the nets used have four-inch mesh, only large fish are snared and few, if any, channel catfish are taken.

All game fish are released, if caught, but few have been netted. One bass released was estimated by the conservation officer at 9 to 10 pounds. Another of five pounds are caught, but it became entangled in the net because it had a lure in its mouth, with about 50 feet of line trailing.

One mudcat weighed in at 32 pounds, and a 25-pound carp was caught, Conley said.

The fishermen have 30 nets in operation.

Commercial fishing for rough fish is permitted under permit because fish biologists hold that reduction of their population is beneficial to bass and other game fish.

Coffee Sales To Help Heart Fund

The efforts of a number of local clubs and organizations to raise money for the annual Heart Fund drive will be highlighted February 14 by "Coffee Day."

On Valentine's Day participating restaurants throughout the county will donate all proceeds from coffee sales for the day to the Floyd fund drive. County Heart Fund drive chairman, Sharon Stai, said that although some establishments were reluctant to agree, most were willing and more and more restaurants were joining the list of participants every day. Chairman for "Coffee Day" is Phyllis Stanley.

Another important phase of the fund drive will be that of business gifts. Members of the Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club under the direction of chairman Jeanne Brown, will go to all local businesses asking for donations. Similar activity in other Floyd communities will be carried out by the Wayland-Lackey-Garrett, Wheelwright and Drift Womans' Clubs in their respective communities. Carol Wallen, of the Prestonsburg Woman's Club will head the solicitation of businesses in Allen.

February 25 has been designated as "Heart Sunday" and it is estimated that almost half of the funds received will be collected on this day. "Heart Sunday" will see Junior Woman's Club members going from house to house asking for contributions.

Kentucky State Heart Fund Chairman, Rodney Ford, of Louisville said that last year's state drive raised more money than ever before—$569,188.46, and he expressed the belief that this year's total would exceed even this.

Serving as Honorary Chairman for 1973 is Governor Wendell Ford. Advisory Co-Chairman are former governor Edward T. Breathitt and U. S. Senator, Thurston B. Morton.

MAYTOWN NEWS

The Maytown Homemakers Club met at the home of Mrs. Tribly May Feb. 8 at 7 p.m. Mrs. Marcella Bailey, president, presided, with Mrs. Alda Gibson and Mrs. Marie Stephens conducting the devotional.

The hostess, Mrs. May was greeted on her birthday and was presented a birthday cake.

Mrs. Beatrice Swetnam displayed her quilts, one of which was more than 100 years old.

Mrs. Bailey reported on the area meeting to be held at the Paintsville Country Club, April 26, and that any member who wishes to model in the style show should contact Mrs. Frances Pitts, Mrs. Nellie Meadows, Clay City Artist, will be guest-speaker. A valentine was presented to each member, and door prizes were given.

Mrs. Bailey discussed the plight of little Ruth Ann Moore, who has leukemia. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Nora Martin, one of Maytown's homemakers. Her other grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Beveridge Moore. The club members are helping furnish food, and all are urged to go and help with the benefit dinner to be held Sunday, Feb. 18, at Lackey grade school from 12 to 5 p.m.

The Maytown Homemakers are pleading with everyone who reads this to send a $1 donation to Mrs. Nora Martin, Langley, Ky., or be there for lunch.

Mrs. May served food to Marcella Bailey, Helen Boyd, Stella Martin, Minnie Gearheart, Thelma Hicks, Alda Gibson, Charlene Sexton, Beatrice Swetnam, Alta Jean Gibson, Marie Stephens, Margie Sue Orsborne, Frances H. Pitts, Sandra H. Bradley and Charles, and guests, Betty May, Melvin and Beverly, Mrs. Otela S. Smiley of Prestonsburg, Brenda Bentley.

Next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Minnie Gearheart.

Observes 87th Birthday

Mrs. Annie Elliott Stumbo, of Martin, recently celebrated her 87th birthday with the help of three generations of Elliott descendants. Mrs. Stumbo is the widow of the late Dr. Walk Stumbo who owned and operated the Beaver Valley Hospital at Martin and the Stumbo Memorial Hospital at Lackey.

"Aunt Annie," as she is affectionately known, had the traditional cake and ice cream and was remembered by friends with gifts and cards.

BOARD ASKS MORE POLICE

The Louisville Board of Education is asking for more support in the school system's police liaison program. The board believes the program is an effective way of improving the police image and cutting down on discipline problems.

PRICE TAG FOR COURSES?

Donald Sweeney, formerly of the U. S. Office of Education, suggests that perhaps the best way to get community involvement in the schools is to put a price tag on each subject—then ask the voters to buy what they want.

Official Faces Are Red

When the Knott county fiscal court last year voted a resolution requesting the removal from their county of State Trooper Michael O. Turner, almost 2000 citizens promptly signed a petition asking that Turner remain there.

Last month, this same trooper was voted Kentucky's Trooper of the Year award.

So official faces there grow redder and redder. The county judge says he was not in the group voting for this top officer's removal. The others—probably because their mouths are full of crow—are not saying much.

We are happy for the state trooper and for the Kentucky State Police that the people of Knott county came to the defense of this officer when he was under official attack. The incident also affords this newspaper an opportunity to express its appreciation of what the State Police mean to this and neighboring counties.

We do not mean to say that every member of the State Police is all he should be; we can't claim that for even every member of any church. But, as a whole, these men are doing a splendid job of protecting citizens in their homes and businesses and in bringing the law into play on those who recognized no law but their own. Theirs is a model of efficient, dedicated service that Kentucky has not often seen.

Circuit Judge Mann, of Salyersville, recently put into action and words his high esteem of the State Police. When two troopers there were accused of assault after an altercation with certain Magoffin county men, Judge Mann boldly announced to a well-filled courtroom that he was dismissing the charges, then followed this action with his own appreciation of the law-enforcement body.

In the course of his remarks he asked a question which might well be echoed in this county:

"What would we do without the State Police?"

Shock Parole, a Shocker

The so-called shock parole law is a shocker.

This legislation makes it possible for any person convicted of any crime, regardless of its enormity, to be paroled by a circuit judge within 70 days of the beginning of the convict's sentence.

It is a product of an age of permissiveness and of a studied opposition by many to any form of punishment for the criminal.

We subscribe to the theory that the law should be tempered by mercy and that a second chance may be all that many need to escape a career of crime. But mercy extends to the innocent as well as to the guilty, and the mercy which many academicians revere forgets those who are under siege by crime.

Under this law the person accused of a crime has multiple chances of freedom from punishment. First of all, he has the chance of winning his case at the hands of a jury. Or, if convicted, he may win probation from the trial judge. And now, thanks to shock parole, if he loses on those points he may be paroled by the judge.

This is authority which belongs to the executive branch of government, Attorney General Hancock contends, and we think he is right. It is authority formerly exercised only by the governor, and sometimes abused. The executive branch in Kentucky long ago discontinued its executive clemency function as to outright pardon of criminals, and now the legislative branch has attempted to make it possible for the judiciary to take charge.

Shock parole shakes us. What would be more shocking, however, would be action by the Supreme Court, first of all, then by legislative bodies to restore some meaning to that old and once-respected term, "law and order."

Judge Conley Expresses Belief New Parole Law Unconstitutional

Circuit Judge Hollie Conley said here last week that he thinks Kentucky's new shock probation law is unconstitutional, and he indicated that he hopes Attorney General Ed Hancock wins the suit he has filed asking the Court of Appeals to declare it so.

Judge Conley pointed out that he and other circuit judges have the power of probation and that they do not need additional authority to order the release of a prisoner after he has begun serving his sentence.

Under the new law a prisoner, however long his term, may during the first 30 to 60 days of his sentence petition the trial judge for probation, and the judge must act within 70 days. Thus, a life term could conceivably mean 70 days in prison.

Judge Conley agreed that the trend is toward easing the penalties of the law and avoiding punishment for crime.

The theory behind shock probation is that a brief time in prison may shock some offenders to the point that they would benefit more from supervised probation than from serving out full sentences.

But, in his suit filed last week Atty. Gen. Hancock asserts that under the state Constitution shock probation is a function of the executive and not the judicial branch of government.

Hancock argues, in effect, that a judge may probate at the time of sentence but not after service of a sentence has begun.

"After the prison door is closed," an inmate's release amounts to parole, which is strictly a function of the executive branch of government, Hancock contends.

According to a state Department of Corrections survey in mid-January, about 90 inmates had been released from state prisons on orders by the judges who had sentenced them.

Hancock also contends that in a previous case the court of appeals in 1928 "held unconstitutional a similar statute which allowed a circuit judge to suspend from further execution a sentence of any prisoner confined in jail."

The particular cases involved are shock probation petitions by two men sentenced to terms in the state penitentiary Dec. 19 in Trimble circuit court.

According to Hancock, Clifford Dean received 90 days in Trimble County Jail for possession of dangerous drugs for resale and a concurrent one-year prison sentence for possession of narcotic drugs for resale. Paul Thomas Pusey, he said, was sentenced to consecutive one-year terms for knowingly receiving stolen property and possession of narcotic drugs for sale. Hancock said both men pleaded guilty to the charges.

Hancock asks the court to issue a writ of prohibition preventing Trimble Circuit Judge George F. Williamson from acting on the two requests for shock probation.

Hancock contends the 1972 law involved "is unconstitutional insofar as it attempts to confer jurisdiction upon the sentencing judge to probate a convicted felon after he has been transferred to the Department of Corrections . . ."

Hancock could have attacked the constitutionality of the shock probation law in Franklin circuit court but chose to ask the Court of Appeals to take original jurisdiction.

His plea said the high court should intervene because "an important constitutional question is involved and if this court declines jurisdiction and a substantial miscarriage of justice will result."

Equipment to Monitor Blasting at Strip Mine

Paintsville, Ky.—An official of the Kentucky Mines and Minerals Department said last week that equipment would be installed to monitor blasting at a strip mine operation near Paintsville.

D. T. Froedge, director of the Division of Explosives and Blasting, said the action was planned after inspections made by his staff in the Northgate subdivision.

Several residents have sued the White Ash Coal Co. and its managers, Matthew Tobin and Robert Appleman, claiming their property has been damaged by blasting at the nearby mining operation.

Froedge said his records showed that blasting at the mine was legal but further checks would be made to see if any violations existed.

CELEBRATE BIRTHDAYS TOGETHER
Homer Salisbury and his daughter, Mrs. Marion S. McMurray, of Nashville, Tenn., celebrated together their birthdays, which fell on February 10 and 11. She came here to be with her father, returning Sunday to Nashville. Relatives and friends called, greeting them and bringing gifts. Refreshments were enjoyed.

Thirty Years Ago

(February 11, 1943)

Dependency draft deferment—even for men with children—will be wiped out when a new order issued Tuesday by the War Manpower Commission, ruling that only essential workers are draft exempt, goes into effect April 1. The Court of Appeals, Friday, upheld the right of County Judge E. P. Hill, Jr., to fix the hours during which Floyd county roadhouses outside municipal limits may operate. Public sale of canned fruits and vegetables will stop throughout the nation at midnight February 20 and will resume on a tightly rationed basis March 1. Steve Richardson, 85 years old, of Middle Creek, died at the Prestonsburg General hospital, Saturday, of injuries received when struck by a train near Dwale, Friday night. The 30-day period beginning December 31 and extending into 1943, local War Production Shop officials here announced this week, marked the turnout of 70 trainees from the shop into war plants. Harry R. Benner, Wheelwright man serving with the Navy, has been reported as missing, while two other Floyd county servicemen—Pvt. Fred Wallace, of Garrett, and Pvt. Glenn Pinks, of Royalton—who were previously reported missing, have been located. County Superintendent Town Hall was formally authorized by the Floyd County Board of Education Tuesday to issue continuing contracts to all eligible teachers under the 1942 teacher tenure act. Born: to Mr. and Mrs. John Allen, of Prestonsburg, a daughter, Mary Alice, January 30, at the Martin General hospital; to Mr. and Mrs. Norman Allen, of Prestonsburg, a daughter, Sharon, January 28, at the Martin General hospital. Twenty Years Ago

(February 12, 1953)

A germanium deposit, believed to be the richest ever found in the United States, has been discovered in the Prestonsburg area. Sheriffs in Kentucky have no right to charge arrest fees against persons swearing out misdemeanor warrants, Assistant Attorney General M. B. Hollifield wrote this week in reply to an inquiry from this county. The Floyd fiscal court this week advertised for bids on the 23-classroom county high school building to be constructed here. Lancer citizens, moving toward annexation of the community to the corporate limits of Prestonsburg, met opposition at last week's City Council meeting when their petition was faced with another petition opposing annexation. An estimated 5,000 petitions from Floyd, Johnson and surrounding counties, urging the deepening of Dewey Lake will be ready to be taken Monday to Huntington, West Virginia, for presentation to the U. S. District Corps of Engineers. Conservation officers Raymond Copley, of this county, and Dewey Murphy, of Martin county, were investigating this week the poisoning of 10 fox-hounds in Martin county recently, the dogs valued at $75 to $100 each. Mrs. Gilva Spurlin, Prestonsburg, has been named the 1953 Heart Fund drive chairman for Floyd county. Married: Miss Anna Lee Tackett, of Martin, and Mr. A. Need for Citizens Interest Stressed By Mayor at Meet

Mayor George P. Archer, of Prestonsburg, presented an overview of city government responsibility at the February meeting of the Prestonsburg Branch of the American Association of University Women.

In the discussion that followed the Mayor pointed out the need for greater citizens interest in the workings of the city council. He invited participation in planning for the expenditure of revenue sharing funds. Mayor Archer counseled that this was the time to take the population studies of the area seriously and make long range plans.

The program was introduced by Boots Adams, and the following members and guests attended: Betsy Rennick, Helen Ankrom, Pauline Shepard, Elizabeth Wilson, Louise Rarick, Kathryn Frazier, Sharon Stai, Sandra Robertson, Sylvia Atkinson, Jean Rosenberg, Betty Mahaffie, Pat Harrison, May K. Roberts, Alice Harris, Mary Kay Klein, Nancy Thomas and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bradbury.

The topic for the March AAUW meeting will be "Women in Government." The meeting will be held March 8 in the Floyd County Library.

Lieut. Gov. Carroll To Speak Thursday At May Lodge Event

Lieut. Gov. Julian Carroll will be the speaker tomorrow (Thursday) evening at the annual Industry Appreciation Dinner to be given at May Lodge by the Prestonsburg Area Chamber of Commerce.

The occasion will also serve the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club as Ladies Night. Membership in the Chamber of Commerce is not required for any who may desire to attend.

The Industry Appreciation Dinner, Chamber officials explain, gives area retail and service firms and leaders "an opportunity to express our appreciation to representatives of our many industrial businesses for locating in our area."

FREAS-KENDRICK VOWS SAID

Miss Leatha Carolyn Freas, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George W. Freas, became the bride of William Spears Kendrick, son of Mrs. Mae Spears Kendrick and W. R. Kendrick, both of Prestonsburg, Ky., at two o'clock Saturday afternoon, Jan. 6, at the Franklin Presbyterian Church.

Dr. T. Walter Herbert, Lexington, Ky., a campus minister and professor of English at the University of Kentucky, officiated.

The choir rail was decorated with garlands of greenery and on either side of the altar were bouquets of Fuji mums, stock and roses with a background of greenery flanked by candelabras holding burning tapers.

Thomas Moody, organist, presented a program of nuptial music. Included in his selections were "Prayer", "Joyful, Joyful We Adore Thee", "Carol" and the traditional wedding marches.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal-length gown of candlelight taffeta and French bridal lace fashioned with French bridal lace on the bodice and ending at the empire waistline. The skirt fell from two large inverted pleats on each side of the waistline and was trimmed with insets of lace.

The gown was accented in the back at the waistline with a butterfly bustle that ended in a chapel-length train. Small inverted pleats of sheer marquisette accented the fitted French bridal lace sleeves.

Her cathedral-length veil of tulle was caught to a Carnelot cap of French lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of white gardenias and stephanotis.

Miss Carol Freas, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. She wore a floor-length gown of royal blue iridescent taffeta designed with buttons down the center of the bodice and candlelight satin collar and cuffs and a semibouffant skirt.

Miss Jane Ann Kendrick, sister of the groom from Berea, Ky., Mrs. Donald Spath and Miss Jane Searcy were the bridesmaids. Miss Christine Scherick, Plandome, N. Y., was the junior bridesmaid.

They wore dresses identical in design to that of the maid of honor's. All attendants carried French bouquets of roses, baby mums, painted daisies and carnations with ribbon streamers tied in love knots. Paul Tackett, Prestonsburg, Ky., served as best man.

The ushers were Don Goble, Louisville, Ky.; Chip and John Freas, brothers of the bride, and Gregory Scherick, Plandome, N. Y.

The bride's mother wore a formal pale blue wool knit skirt with a shirtwaist top of eggshell crepe topped with a short weskit of patterned tapestry. Her accessories were off white and a corsage of gardenias was caught to her shoulder.

The mother of the groom wore a formal-length gown of blue knit in a floral design featuring solid blue knit sleeves and collar. She wore dark blue accessories and a shoulder corsage of gardenias.

Immediately following the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained with a reception at the Franklin Country Club. The serving table was covered with a white satin cloth trimmed with garlands of boxwood and centered with a floral arrangement of white roses, stock and carnations flanked by silver candelabras holding white burning tapers.

The column three-tier wedding cake—with pale blue flowers and sugar bells—was topped with a miniature bride and groom.

Serving the refreshments were Mrs. David Dinwiddie and Mrs. Jimmie Madison. Mrs. Gary Jamison kept the guest register.

After a short wedding trip, the couple is making their home in Louisville, Ky., where Mr. Kendrick attends the University of Louisville Law School.

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Otto H. Romann, Granite City, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Heinrick, Edwardsville, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Carracker, Granite City, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Roman Ernde, Eric and Christina, Bowling Green, Ky.; Mrs. Kenneth Baker, Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar J. Scherick and children, Plandome, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Don Spath, Lexington, Ky.; Miss Cindy Clark, Owensboro, Ky.; Scott Wilson, Corbin, Ky.; Mark Green, Louisville, Marsha Holt, Louisville, and Walkie May, Lexington, Ky. Mrs. James B. Goble and daughter, Rhondetta, Prestonsburg, Ky., Julie Hager, Berea, Ky., and Dr. Ralph Wesley, Nashville, Tenn.

The crowd was enthralled by the blinding "chicken scratch" style autoharp playing of Flannery and Allen's hauntingly beautiful Jew's harp was said to have raised "big goose bumps" on all present.

Travel in State Spend $635 Million

Out-of-state visitors spent $462 million in Kentucky last year—$36 million more than in 1971, Gov. Wendell Ford told the 1973 Kentucky Travel Conference in Lexington last week.

Travelers, both in-state and nonresident, spent a total of $635 million in Kentucky in 1972, Ford said.

He said state taxes from tourism and travel amounted to $49.5 million last year while local taxes collected from tourists increased $900,000 over 1971.

But, he warned, "The tourist business is competitive. The battle for vacationers and other travelers grows more intense every year."

The greatest competition, Ford said, is from foreign countries.

"Through such programs as group trips and tour packaging the lure of travel beyond the U. S. is...becoming more attractive and less expensive than ever before."

Ford said the state had stepped up its national newspaper and magazine promotional campaigns to attract visitors to Kentucky. He said $120,000 was spent on promotion last year compared with about $40,000 in 1970 and 1971 combined.

Earlier, Parks Commissioner Ewart Johnson told the conference that security at state parks had improved greatly during 1972 and that recreation programs, particularly for children, had doubled.

MOORE-RATLIFF

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Moore, of Martin, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Linda Louise Moore, to Mr. Charles Alan Ratliff, of Langley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Ratliff. The open-church wedding will take place at the Church of Christ at the entrance to Jenny Wiley Park, Lancer, Ky., March 17.

Two Floyd Teachers To Attend Conference

Two Floyd Countians will be on the program of the second annual Southeastern Regional Conference of the International Reading Association at the Galt House in Louisville, February 15-17.

Miss Bertha Ratliff, Jenny Wiley Reading Council president and McDowell reading teacher, will serve as recorder for the Saturday session that will discuss "Individual Reading Contracts." Council secretary Nadine Hicks, reading teacher at the Clark school, will serve as recorder for the "Modifying Teacher Behavior" session on Friday.

At the request of Miss Betsy Mynheir, President of the Blue Grass Reading Council and State Reading Consultant, both Miss Ratliff and Mrs. Hicks will act as hostess for the Kentucky Council meeting on Friday.

Sponsored by the Kentucky State Council of the International Reading Association, the 1973 Southeastern Regional Conference features leaders in the field of reading. Approximately 5,000 educators from the southeast will attend.

State Slips a Notch In Per Pupil Spending

New school statistics for the nation place Kentucky near the bottom of the list—47th—in money spent for each pupil and in average salary of classroom teachers.

Although the state is spending more this year in both categories, Kentucky fell one notch in state rankings for per-pupil expenditure and remained in the same spot for average teacher salary.

Kentucky will spend an estimated $693 per pupil in 1972-73, up $25 from last year, according to the latest annual report of the National Education Association (NEA) Research Division entitled "Estimates of School Statistics, 1972-73."

Average salary of Kentucky classroom teachers is expected to be $7825, up $463 from last year.

But in both categories Kentucky lags far behind the average for the nation, for surrounding states, and even for the traditionally low spending Southeast region, noted Charles Whaley, Kentucky Education Association (KEA) director of public relations and research.

In per-pupil spending Kentucky is $341 below the national average of $1034; $199 below the $892 average for surrounding states, and $96 below the $789 average for the Southeast region, Whaley said.

The gap between average salary of Kentucky classroom teachers and those in the nation as a whole is $2289, based on a national average salary of $10,114.

Whaley said Kentucky teachers receive $1534 less than the $9359 average salary for surrounding states and $729 less than the $8554 average salary for the Southeast region.

Top per-pupil expenditure for 1972-73 is New York's $1584. Only three states—Mississippi, $689; Arkansas, $652, and Alabama, $590—rank below Kentucky's $693.

Highest average salary for classroom teachers is Alaska's $14,491, followed by New York's $12,380. Only three states—Idaho, $7657; Arkansas, $7363, and Mississippi, $6924—rank beneath Kentucky's $7825.

The new estimates put Kentucky average salaries for instructional staff (teachers, administrators, and specialists) at $8150, up $502 from last year and up one notch to 46th place in state rankings.

In this category, Whaley said, Kentucky is $2493 below the national average of $10,643; $1506 below the $9656 average for surrounding states, and $713 below the $8863 average for the Southeast.

This year Kentucky schools are expected to receive 15.8 percent of their revenue from federal funds, 55.1 percent from state funds, and 29.1 percent from local funds. Last year the Kentucky breakdown was 16.6 percent federal, 53.5 percent state, and 29.8 percent local.

In the nation as a whole this year 7.7 percent of school revenue comes from federal funds, 41 percent from state funds, and 51.2 percent from local funds.

The federal share of the total cost of public-school education is now almost a full percent lower than the record high of 8.8 percent of 1967-68.

But, the NEA report warns, the 7.7 percent estimate is "extremely tenuous" for two reasons: the fiscal 1973 funds for the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare have not yet been appropriated, and it is uncertain how much money schools will receive from the states' share of general revenue sharing.

Kentucky Crime Commission Director Charles L. Owen says five state circuit courts will begin to test new ways of streamlining the judicial process. The five "model courts" are in Franklin, Fayette, Madison, Boyle and Oldham counties.

The Legislative Research Commission has directed its interim committee on business organizations and professions to look into the licensing of various professions and occupations in Kentucky.

Former Floyd School Supt. Heads Unique Pre-Law Program

Pikeville, Ky.—A new program headed by a former Floyd man at Pikeville College is thought to be the only one of its kind in the nation, since it offers pre-law students the chance to work in a law office.

According to V. O. Turner, assistant professor of political science and co-ordinator of the internship, the program gives the student "a taste of law before entering law school. This allows him to know if this is the profession he wants to pursue and will save the student time and money. If the traditional approach is used, a pre-law student knows only what the professors tell him about the law profession."

Turner, an attorney himself, and a former superintendent of Floyd county schools, looks at the program as a way to learn the "study techniques of law and have a head start over law students who have not had the course. Some colleges and universities have some phases of the program, but to have a program of work in the law firm is very unusual.

"By using the Pikeville College program," Mr. Turner said, "the student may be as much as a full semester ahead of the regular law student since legal research is the major part of law school and we are using some of the same textbooks in our political science department that are used in the nation's law schools."

The student is required to research and study special problems assigned by co-ordinator Turner and the attorney he is working for. In addition, he attends trials at the traffic and police courts, and county, circuit and Federal levels.

A student in the course is assigned a working space in the attorney's office and is only on campus once a week for counseling. At the end of his internship, he receives a grade from the co-ordinator and the attorney and a written evaluation of the internship prepared by the student.

Kentucky Afield
By Hope Carleton
Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

There are those who believe only what they want to believe and few will change their thinking regardless of arguments presented.

The case in point is that segment of people, especially hunters, which believes that predators such as hawks, owls, eagles, bobcats and foxes should be killed on sight. Some pride themselves on being "top gun" in the total destruction of these predatory creatures.

Others believe (1) that predators are competing with man for available game; (2) they're just something else to shoot; (3) predators are "bad" because they are "killers" and, therefore, should be destroyed.

If a person would take time to study predators maybe much misunderstanding could be corrected.

Before getting into facts and figures, let it be established that predators do kill and eat quail, grouse, rabbit, squirrel, duck, dove, geese and even beautiful song birds. But to what extent?

A good example of a prolific creature is the common meadow mouse. The gestation period is from 12 to 15 days and litters of eight to ten are not uncommon. The young reach adulthood in some 30 days and after this time will have a brood in a couple of weeks.

Dr. Roger Barbour of the zoology department at the University of Kentucky did a study on meadow mice and made the following discovery. In a protected, enclosed area, meadow mice were allowed to do what came naturally—eat and reproduce. When the population had built up to the equivalent of 600 meadow mice per acre they had eaten themselves out of house and home. Starvation resulted in this barren, isolated area.

Dr. Barbour pointed out that, in general, an acre of bluegrass pasture will support a growing steer. However, it will not furnish enough food to support a meadow mouse population of 600.

Where conditions are such that mice populations are extremely high, predators soon move in and cut back this ready food supply.

Jim Moynahan, manager of the Ballard County Wildlife Management area, located west of Paducah in Ballard county, pointed out another important fact about predators. There, in the waterfowl capital of Kentucky, thousands upon thousands of ducks and geese merge in their migrations. Both golden and bald eagles come and go with the waterfowl.

Moynahan has observed that soaring eagles are on the lookout for sick or crippled waterfowl. The ailing birds become a ready meal while alert, healthy ones evade the patrolling flights.

Eagles, feeding from the sky, and lurking bobcats seeking out the culls from the ground, help to insure a healthy stock of waterfowl to reproduce and furnish healthy game for sportsmen.

Predators come in all shapes and sizes and serve an important place in the balance of nature by controlling over-populations of wildlife and by removing the sick and weak.

Today there are federal laws designed to save the bald and golden eagle. Kentucky's game and fish laws protect these birds of prey and all hawks, owls and falcons. The red fox is protected and may be harvested only during the furbearer season. The bobcat, now rare in the Commonwealth, has been given complete protection by the Fish and Wildlife Commission.

The American Ornithologists Union lists 54 species of hawks and owls native to North America. Of these, 21 species (nearly half) have been recognized as endangered or rare by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife.

In a study conducted in Michigan several years ago, various birds of prey in a given area produced 215 eggs. Of these, 120 hatched and 106 survived to the fledgling stage. This was an average of two young per pair for all birds of prey in that area.

The hunter should enjoy the sight of these birds and mammals of prey. They are doing him a favor by controlling rodents as well as weeding out weak and sick wildlife.

4-H Club News
By JACK M. FRIAR
(County Extension Agent, 4-H)

Eight 4-H members were awarded 4-H jackets recently. These awards are made each year by the Floyd County 4-H Council to members winning area project championships for the first time.

Members receiving jackets for their 1972 project work were Greg Kidd, Debbie Reffett, John Flanery, Jeff Spears, Dani Smith, Jackie Hall, Melvin May, Yvette Martin.

Sixteen other clubmembers were recognized as area project champions during 1972, but they had received jackets in previous years. These members included Ann Flanery, Dale Conn, Vicki Blackburn, Anita Auxier, Sherri Allen, Kelvin Adkins, Chris Conn, Jeannie Auxier, Lance Blackburn, Lara Hopkins, Buelah Patton, Leslie Auxier, Judy Stewart, Derek Hicks, Dalton Howard and Jeff Martin.

Twenty Floyd 4-H girls were awarded style revue medals recently. These medals were awarded to blue ribbon winners in the 1972 County 4-H Style Revue. Winners were Jackie Hall, Jayne Pitts, Dani Smith, Tammy Martin, Debbie Reffett, Yvette Martin, Debbie Johns, Gia Hall, Sharon Martin, Lara Hopkins, Ann Flanery, Sherri Martin, Teresa Huff, Sharon O'Quinn, Rita Duff, Reva Duff, Terri Harris, Karen Conn, Sandra Ritcher, Judy Stewart.

Kentucky Power Budget Excludes Floyd Work

Kentucky Power Company's construction budget for 1973 is more than $12 million, but apparently no major work is planned in Floyd County.

Waldo S. La Fon, executive vice president who made the announcement, said:

"These expenditures are necessary to meet the needs of our customers. Added to the normal growth in our customers' use of electricity is the increasing dependence on electricity as the alternative to some fuels that are in short supply."

Major items in the budget of the company serving over 110,000 customers in eastern Kentucky include distribution lines and stations, about $7.5 million; transmission lines and stations, more than $2.5 million; improvements at Big Sandy Plant near Louisa, above $1 million; materials and supplies, including transportation equipment, about $1 million.

In connection with principal projects, Mr. La Fon said that this year will see virtual completion of converting both the Ashland and Pikeville downtown areas from 4,000-volt to 12,000-volt distribution. He pointed out that the conversions will provide additional capacity and increased reliability of service in both areas.

More than $1 million has already been spent on converting the Ashland distribution system, with $200,000 slated for this year, leading to completion of this program in 1974. The Pikeville conversion, under way for several years, is expected to be completed this year at a total cost of $200,000. Conversion of the Hazard downtown distribution to 12,000 volts was completed last year at a total cost of $200,000.

Included in the expected expenditures at Big Sandy Plant is the addition of equipment in connection with improving electrostatic precipitator efficiency and handling ash storage.

In connection with highway construction in eastern Kentucky, the estimated cost of relocation of electric facilities is $500,000.

Mr. La Fon outlined some of the other work to be completed this year in each of the operating divisions.

The big project in the Hazard Division during the year will be to convert some of the area's transmission from 34,500 volts to 69,000 volts. This involves about $1 million for work at nine substations and about 70 miles of line. Included are: Hazard Station, a new 138,000-69,000-volt transformer to provide another source of power as well as additional capacity and improved reliability; completion of Jeff Station in Perry county and Collier Station in Letcher county, both begun last year; a new Whitesburg station with more capacity; a rebuilt Millstone station with new transformer in Letcher county; the addition of a new transformer and improvements at Fleming station in Letcher county; the rebuild of Daisy and Clover Fork stations in Perry county; the rebuild of Leslie station at Hyden, and building the Vicco station in Knott county.

Major distribution work in the Hazard Division involved converting the system serving the area from Vicco to near Whitesburg from 12,000 volts to 34,500 volts. The improvements include the new Vicco Station, the conversion of Beckham station in Knott county and the new Collier station in Letcher county.

The Hazard-Pineville 161,000-volt transmission line is being rebuilt over its 44-mile length, with completion expected this summer of the two-year project.

A 69,000-volt transmission line will be built between Coleman Station in Pike county and the Sprigg area, reinforcing the area's power supply and providing an alternate source of power to the area. The 10-mile line is expected to be completed by this fall at a cost of $300,000.

The Bellefonte station is slated for additional improvements costing $200,000, following last year's expenditures at that station of $1-million. In addition to bus and breaker work, Bellefonte will become another distribution station with a new transformer converting 138,000 volts to 12,000 volts. This addition will serve the Russell, Kenwood, Bellefonte, Westwood, fairview and Flatwoods areas, providing another source of power and additional capacity for growth.

Church, Coal Camp Life, Topics of Film Now Being Produced

Young people from Appalachia are helping produce color documentaries on the Old Regular Baptist Church and coal camp life in a filmmaking project this year in Eastern Kentucky. The Appalachian Educational Media Project, sponsored by the National Endowment for the Humanities and other foundations, offers students from the region an opportunity to learn the fundamentals of professional filmmaking while helping to preserve part of their cultural heritage.

Several students will be given living stipends to work on the project, which is a part of APPALSHOP, Inc. in Whitesburg. Six positions have been filled, and applications for the others are now being accepted. The project, which began in June, will end in August.

Other films planned for the project include documentaries on cockfighting, one-room schools, mountain music and moonshining.

The project director is J. Benjamin Zickafoose, a graduate of Clinch Valley (Va.) College who attended the New York University School of Film. "We're interested only in students from the mountains who would otherwise never get a chance for an experience like this," Zickafoose said. "Besides learning filmmaking, they get a chance to express themselves about the things they grew up with."

The foundations sponsoring the project along with NEH are the Noble Foundation, the Public Welfare Foundation and the Kentucky Arts Commission.

Applications may be mailed to AEMP, Box 743, Whitesburg, Kentucky 41858.

Cornbread Mold Goes to Combs

Bert T. Combs, former U. S. District Court judge and Kentucky governor, was presented with a cast iron cornbread mold Saturday night by the O'Tucks organization at Hamilton, Ohio.

The group, formed to improve the image of Kentuckians who have migrated in Ohio, held their 15th annual winter banquet in Hamilton.

Hamilton Mayor Frank Wood presented the cornbread mold to Combs and drew laughs when he referred to native Kentuckians' penchant for going "down home on week-ends."

"Everybody's always going down to Kentucky on week-ends and bringing things back to Ohio," said the mayor, noting that better than 50 per cent of Hamilton's population has a Kentucky background.

"We just wanted you to go back home to Kentucky with something made here in Ohio."

Combs received a standing ovation from the crowd of 400 when he was presented the award and again when he departed.

The unsuccessful Democratic primary candidate for a second Kentucky gubernatorial term confined his remarks to jokes and Kentucky lore.

He noted that Kentucky is the only state which has produced 104 governors of other states, the only state to have three seats on the U. S. Supreme Court at one time and to award military bonuses to former residents.

Combs drew the heaviest laughter telling judicial jokes.

In one, he referred to an Eastern Kentucky judge who had a "fondness for bourbon and women." Once, during jury selection of a jury, a woman candidate said she knew both the prosecutor and defense attorneys were "drunks" and "crooks."

"At that point the judge called both the attorneys to the bench and said, 'if either of you ask her if she knows me you're both going to jail for contempt of court.'" way deeds for the road but that the county has for some time had the route on its rural road program and that work has been done on it in the past, with some additional work planned soon.

Exploration of some of the land on Sugar Loaf has been begun. Residents of Corn Fork fear that if a profitable strip or auger operation begins on Sugar Loaf it will cross the hill onto their lands.

Their plea for court action was made by Merle Little, of Wheelwright, and William Jarrell, a disabled miner from Sugar Loaf.

The entire court, including the judge, was sympathetic toward the landowners. But Mr. Little, a community organizer for the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund, later said the court is not as strongly opposed to strip-mining as its members appear. "The weight limits won't stop strip-mining, and that's what these people want," he said.

Judge Stumbo commented during the court session, referring to surface mining: "They've hurt us in different parts of the county. They've torn our roads up and filled our streams... If they're permitted to do it, they'll probably tear your country to pieces."

Of the broad-form deed he said: "Most of these people are not even from here. They take out whatever wealth they have and then get out, leaving the damages."

Magistrate Bill Wells openly criticized surface mining. "I don't believe there's a person here that will go along with strip-mining," referring to other members of the court.

When Judge Stumbo was reminded that the weight limits were violated on a Johnson county road, a judge there threw out of court 100 citations, Stumbo replied, "That was Johnson county. It won't happen here."

Mr. Rosenberg, an attorney with the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund, said an attorney general's opinion of Dec. 29, 1972, skirts the issue of possible threats imposed on communities by surface mining and the broad-form deed.

The opinion, requested by Floyd County Atty. James Allen, said the county had no authority to adopt an ordinance affecting the broad-form deed when there is no showing that the "public interest and welfare are at stake."

"We want to know if it would change the Several farmers in Floyd county have not returned their tobacco cards to the ASCS office. According to Paul E. Hall, executive director for this county, any farmer who fails to bring in his marketing card may find that he has a reduced quota for next year.

Burley tobacco regulations require that marketing cards be brought back to the ASCS office as soon as marketing from each farm is finished. Besides, the cards are needed to close out each farmer's 1972 records and show how many pounds of unsold tobacco the grower has on his hands and where it is stored.

opinion if the court found that the broad-form deed is a threat to public welfare," Rosenberg said.

He said the opinion "assumes" that public welfare is not threatened or harmed by the broad-form deed—a point, he said, that should be decided by local residents and the courts.

Rosenberg charged that broad-form deeds adversely affect the public welfare by discouraging industrial and land development, by preventing immigration and jobs and by decreasing the fair market value of property.

outside the store and entered with a wild sort of gleam in his eye.

"The name," he announced, "is Turner, and I'm from Elliott county. Anybody here named Perkins?"

The storekeeper silently pointed to the undersized man of that name who was leaning against the counter.

The big visitor ambled over. "Perkins?" The hero admitted rather ruefully that he was Perkins.

"Jim Perkins?"

"Yeah, Jim Perkins."

"Well," the newcomer said, "I'm the champion fist-fighter in my parts, and I've heard tell of you. I'm here to fight ye."

In the midst of his admirers Perkins could not refuse to fight. But he suffered considerable doubt of his ability to survive an encounter with this burly brawler. A ring was drawn outside the store, coats were slucked, and Turner took his stance.

"Would you excuse me a minute?" Perkins asked, and went behind the store. Then, moments later his voice could be heard as the store keeper relates—"he really lifted up his voice in prayer."

And this, in effect, is what he said while all the others listened:

"Lord, you know I am a peaceable man, and I don't want to hurt anybody. I pray now, Lord, as I must fight this man here that you will weaken me. You remember what happened when I slapped those two men here at the very store. So, weaken my arm, Lord, as I fight this man—for I don't want to kill anybody."

The storekeeper, it is recorded, later commented that he doesn't believe the Lord hears such prayers but that he's convinced Mr. Turner did. "Perkins" he said, hadn't got back around the corner of the house till Turner was toppin' that bank yonder, and was encouragin' his horse to go a leetle faster, if possible."

OF DESCRIPTIVE PHRASES

Kentucky—this part of Kentucky, in particular—has such a wealth of similes and colorful comparatives that their compilation might earn a grant from one of these foundations which shell out hard money for easy jobs and diverse causes.

A project in itself might lie in the task of tracing the origin of an expression an old aunt of mine used to describe an individual who was unusually onery. Her expression was, "As mean as the Old Gyarbro," and it has intrigued me at times over the years.

But the more common expressions will suffice for this item; for example, those pertaining to a very thin or weakly specimen:

"As poor as Job's turkey"... "so weak you'd have to prop him up to shoot him down"... "poor as a whiporwill"... "thin as a rail"... "He'd have to stand in two places to make a shadow," and so on.

Then there are those expressions which have to do with those who aren't—well, so lean: "Fat as a hog," and the like. But Watt Hale says he was introduced to a new description of one who was so obese that he had suffered prolapsus of the midriff. This fellow waddled into view, says Watt, and one of those who beheld him remarked, "Looks like his wife has kept him on a floored pen."

Nature Trails

By Rufus M. Reed

The praying mantis is without doubt the fiercest killer of the insect world. It will devour anything alive it can capture with its hooked steeltrap forelegs, which it holds out in an attitude of prayer.

Recently, a lady reported seeing a large praying mantis kill a hummingbird. The hummer was hovering over some flowers, drinking the nectar, and the praying mantis, which was fully four inches long, was hidden in the green leaves nearby. Its protective color of green makes it hard to see in foliage. She said the mantis made a leap, grabbed the hummingbird with its barbed forelegs and held it in a viselike grip. Then it bit it severely in the back of the neck and proceeded to feast on the neck. The lady ran forward and the insect dropped its prey. But the hummingbird quickly expired from the wound.

An army of praying mantises around your garden will prove better protectors than pesticides. Now in wintertime is when to search for their egg cases, which you can fetch to your garden and fasten on twigs or shrubs nearby. When the young mantises hatch out in the spring, they will swarm over the garden, devouring the plant lice and any other insects they can find. They are greedy eaters—so greedy they cannot be kept contained as they will eat one another.

Entomologists have lent the praying mantis a devout name, MANTIS RELIGIOSA, which signifies a seer or a prophet, one who is pronouncing a blessing on people as he holds out his hands in an attitude of prayer. But those insects which fall prey to the greedy jaws of the mantis might be inclined to dub him "the pious hypocrite." Certainly, his stance of prayer belies his blood thirsty nature and if he prays at all, it is for a juicy insect to come near so he can grab it to devour.

The mantis belongs to the order, ORTHOPTERA, in which insects such as grasshoppers, crickets, roaches and walkingsticks are found. But the mantis eats all of these and many more species. A large mantis will tackle a bumblebee, a hornet, a wasp, or even a honey bee. So mantises should not be placed near a hive of bees.

At his time of the year you will find the egg cases firmly attached to the twigs of a bush or shrub. The cases are brownish, tough containers, hardened from foam and thick enough to protect the eggs from severe cold. Each bag may contain several hundred eggs, and when the young hatch out in the spring they swarm out in all directions, looking for small insects to devour. These young are especially fond of plant lice and do a good job of policing the garden.

The body of this insect is long, slender and protected by armor plate. A bumblebee or a wasp can seldom sting a mantis in a vital spot. The insect can turn its head and look in all directions; it is said to be the only insect that can look back over its shoulder.

A single mantis may be kept as a pet and trained to fight like a game rooster. A boy I once knew kept one and trained it for a fighter. He would tease it with his forefinger and the mantis flogged him severely, trying hard to deliver a mortal blow or a bite. It was great sport for the boy to watch its pugilistic maneuvers.

Corps of Engineers To Seek Advice on Fishtrap Problems

Dissatisfied with the results of a U. S. district court trial of its case against a Pike county coal company which, it claimed, had damaged Fishtrap Reservoir by siltation, the U. S. District Corps of Engineers, Huntington, W. Va., scheduled a meeting in Washington with Corps legal counsel in an apparent move to continue the fight.

Col. Kenneth E. McIntyre, district engineer, said last week he will head a delegation to Washington for a discussion of Fishtrap's problems. He indicated that the conference may determine if the Corps will seek a permanent injunction against Kentland Elkhorn Coal Company to stop it from discharging coal-dust-blackened water into the reservoir.

Federal Judge H. David Hermansdorfer ruled Jan. 29 that the Corps failed to present sufficient evidence to support a charge that the coal company had caused "irreparable damage by siltation" to the reservoir.

The Corps had charged that Kentland-Elkhorn, a deep mining company, had violated the 1899 Refuse Act by siltation and was endangering Fishtrap as a flood control project.

"It appears to us," said the district engineer, that the judge's decision, while it rules out the possibility of a temporary injunction against Kentland-Elkhorn, does not discount the possibility the Corps could seek a permanent injunction.

"The judge's findings will be discussed, as well as what evidence could be presented in the injunctive action," Col. McIntyre said.

In his decision, the federal judge pointed out the areas in which the Corps' evidence was weak. "There's an implication there," Col. McIntyre suggested.

The Corps had said earlier, "We'll move upstream against every company in the watershed. We already have evidence against a few." By Nov. 14, 1972, two other Kentucky companies in the Fishtrap area had been referred to the U. S. attorney in Lexington for Refuse Act violations.

But the Col. McIntyre said the judge's findings would not stand in the way of future suits alleging damages.

He indicated it might be easier to obtain compliance with regulations from coal companies operating on government-owned land. He said there were four principle sub-leases and 30 active mining operations currently mining on government land at Fishtrap.

The Corps is also scrutinizing mining companies operating upstream of the reservoir and off government land. "Here we must rely on federal and state laws to police the several 100 operations, the colonel indicated.

He said Kentland-Elkhorn is operating upstream and off government land and the recent court action against them is "most significant," added McIntyre, because it shows the Corps what laws can be used to procure "good mining practices."

Kentland Elkhorn Coal Corp., a division of the Pittston Co., operates the mine at Mouthcard, Ky., and was charged by the Corps with contributing to "irreparable harm" to Fishtrap Reservoir by discharging "black particulate effluent" into Big Creek, which eventually flows into the reservoir.

New Greenhouse In Pike County Uses Hot Air From Coal Mines

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD

What possible use is an abandoned coal mine? If a research project now under way in Pike county proves successful, coal mines, both abandoned and active, could be the basis of a new Appalachian industry—growing vegetables in greenhouses heated by air pumped from deep mines.

This new idea in greenhouse heating is now being explored by University of Kentucky College of Agriculture horticulturists and agricultural engineers at an abandoned "driftmouth" mine, as deep mines are often called, on Long Fork of Shelby Creek. Recently completed and now in operation is a unique steel and plastic greenhouse, funded primarily by the Kentucky Surface Mining and Reclamation Association of Pikeville. Experiments are now under way there testing such factors as effect of the pumped-in mine air on environment in the greenhouse.

As explained by Dale Anastasi, UK Extension horticulturist in the Quicksand area, who conceived and helped design this research facility, air which remains a constant 60 degrees Fahrenheit will be drawn from the mine into the greenhouse by powerful suction fans. The anticipated greenhouse temperature will be between 50 and 60 degrees and suitable for several kinds of cool weather crops like leaf and Bibb lettuce, radishes, and others.

In addition to producing crops of winter vegetables, this greenhouse could also be used as a holding house for potted shrubs and trees used in landscaping, and for flowers such as mums that are adversely affected by high temperatures in summer, Anastasi explained.

Although the new greenhouse is at the mouth of an abandoned mine, such structures could be erected and operated in conjunction with active mines if the experiments prove successful. Since active underground mines must always keep exhaust fans going while the mine is in operation, greenhouses heated by mine air could become a sort of supplementary industry with electrical costs reduced or entirely absorbed by the coal operation.

The mine-heated greenhouse represents not only a new idea in vocational agriculture, but also a new search for resources. "I am sure that we have many resources here in eastern Kentucky that we do not even know about," Anastasi said. "We must therefore search them out and, with imagination and creative effort, develop our own unique industries based on these resources."

"In many instances, since our resources and circumstances are different," he added, "it will profit us little to examine and try to duplicate programs in Ohio, New York State, or other areas. We must make do with what we have to do with. This new greenhouse is one attempt."

This venture is still strictly experimental and no data is yet available to give even an inkling of what the results may be, Anastasi points out. However, if the greenhouse measures up to expectations, it could have far-reaching effects and become a boon to eastern Kentucky horticulture. With the area possessing literally hundreds of both active and abandoned mines that could be utilized, it is easy to see how a whole new industry could be created, not only in this but also in other coal mining regions of Appalachia.

Governor Greets New Troopers

"You must be firm, yet fair; intelligent, yet humble; tough, yet compassionate. A lot will be asked of you, and a lot more expected of you," Governor Wendell Ford said as 39 new state police troopers were given the oath of office Feb. 2 in the Capitol Rotunda, Frankfort. The graduates of the State Police Academy underwent 20 weeks of training including 25 hours of college credit courses. Among those who were graduated were Larry Prater, of David, and James Stephens, Prestonsburg, both of whom have been assigned to Post 9, Pikeville.

A Busy Doctor Finds Time For Youth of His Neighborhood

(Editor's note: The following from The Ashland Daily Independent pertains to Dr. Adrian N. (Pete) Collins, son of Mrs. Edna N. Collins, of Prestonsburg, and the late Adrian Collins.)
South Shore, Ky.—What began as a private fishing lake for Dr. and Mrs. A. N.

Collins here has turned into a community recreational facility.
About 18 months ago, Dr. Collins decided to construct a fishing lake near his very large and elegant house located behind McKell high school.

Recently, when the lake was frozen, more than 25 youngsters from throughout the lower end of Greenup County used the frozen lake to practice or learn how to ice skate.
According to Mrs. Collins, the lake is used more in summer months for swimming than their own little private swimming pool.

"I guess the kids just prefer to swim in the lake," she said, noting that the rather large lake is 18 feet deep in some parts.

It seems unusual that Dr. Collins would take such an interest in the young people of this area since he was reared in Prestonsburg and his wife is from Missouri.

However, Mrs. Collins stated, "We came here 10 years ago because my husband had borrowed money from the state to complete medical school and was required to practice in a rural area for a term equal to the number of years he borrowed money.

"But, the more we stayed the more we liked it here and have been here eight years longer than he was required to stay and will more than likely spend the rest of our lives here together with the good people of South Shore."

Mrs. Collins, who was interviewed by The Independent because of her husband's packed office Monday, said, "We have to pump water from Tygart Creek to the lake because there just isn't enough run-off water to keep it full."

She noted that Dr. Collins has already blown up one gasoline pump and now uses an electric pump to maintain the preferred water level in the lake.

"Kids from all around us come to the lake to fish, swim or ice skate depending on the weather which suits us just fine," she said.

Mrs. Collins said her husband also has constructed a long bike trail through the hills behind their home so "the young people could have a place to ride the little minibikes and to keep bikes off city streets."

One would think that Dr. Collins, with his busy practice and all the youngsters hanging around his house, would be fairly tired by the evening. However, he has a small garden, some chickens and rabbits and once had several horses to occupy his spare time.

Mrs. Collins is kept busy with their four children and upkeep on their extravagant four-year-old house which is far above the average home.

"We really like living where we do now," she said, "because everything is so quiet and peaceful but we are still not too far away from the main stretch."

One gets the impression from talking to Dr. and Mrs. Collins that things have a funny way of turning out completely opposite than planned but still in a way that makes everyone happy.

After all, he was only going to practice medicine in South Shore for two years some 10 years ago and the lake, which is now used by practically everyone, was to be a private fishing lake.

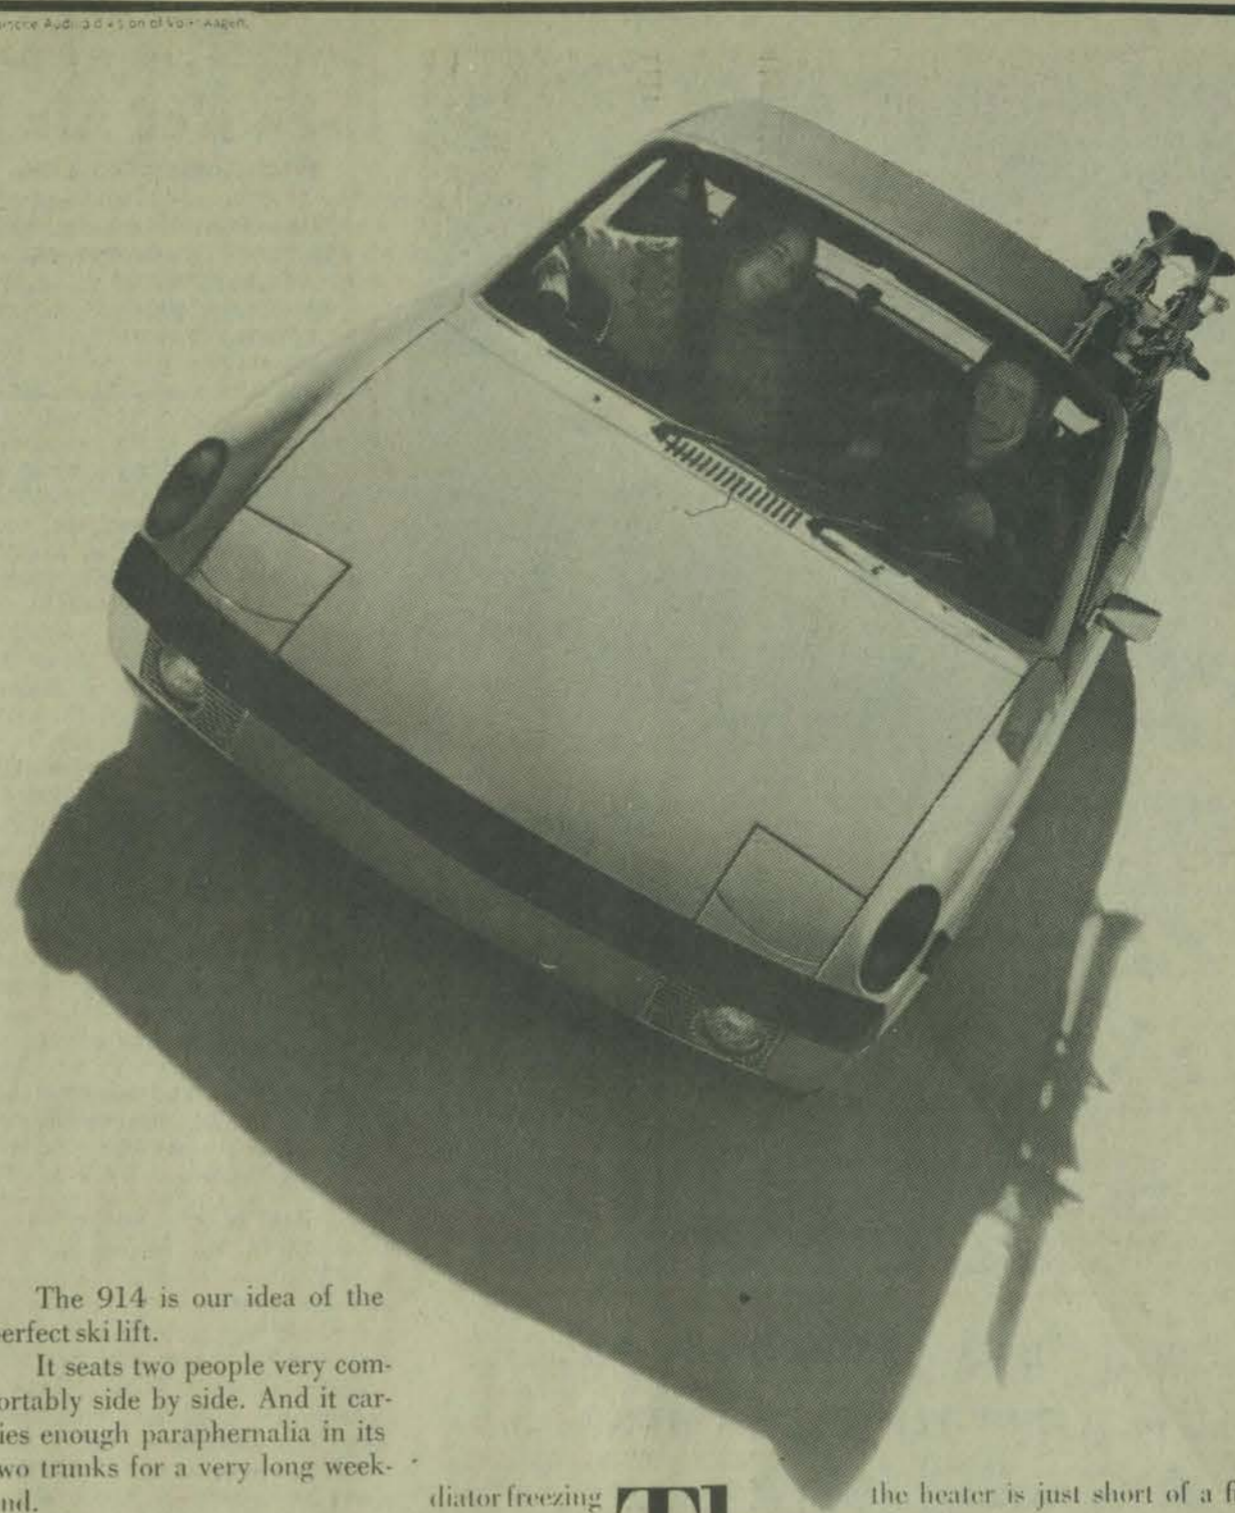

There's no substitute for experience

Our senior citizens have mastered a lot of the lessons of life.
They've lived through the depression and two world wars.
And they've seen horse-drawn buggies transformed into cars.
They've seen a lot of change.
And they've changed the scene a lot.

Their graying heads are the ones in which our community was planned. And much of what we have today was built by their hands.
Whoever said the good die young never met our elders here.

The 914 is our idea of the perfect ski lift.

It seats two people very comfortably side by side. And it carries enough paraphernalia in its two trunks for a very long weekend.

The mid-engine design gives the car near-perfect balance. That and rack-and-pinion steering make for slalom quick handling.

With four-wheel independent suspension to smooth out the moguls (bumps!).

When the snow comes, you don't have to worry about the radiator freezing or the carburetor icing.

The engine is cooled by air. And fed by electronic fuel injection.

And you don't have to worry about yourself freezing. The removable fiberglass roof shuts out the elements like a hardtop. And the heater is just short of a fire-place.

There are five forward speeds for mashing through the slush. And four-wheel disc brakes for surer stopping.

The price should be easy even for a beginner.

Johnson Says $1 Million Saved In 1972 Operation of Parks

Frankfort, Ky.—When Gov. Wendell Ford appointed Ewart Johnson as commissioner of parks, he did so to put the system on a more businesslike basis. Given the opportunity to implement his management ideas, Johnson, a successful Winchester food catering executive, promised to save the department a million dollars by the end of his first fiscal year. As of Dec. 31, 1972, six months ahead of schedule, the million was saved.

problems are. But he comments are getting more and more favorable, especially in food services. So, we feel we're upholding, if not going beyond, the standards. Johnson pointed out that the million dollars saved thus far will be "recycled" - channeled back into several park facilities that have deteriorated over the years. According to Johnson, five of the older parks (Cumberland Falls, Lake Cumberland, Kentucky Dam, Carter Caves and General Butler) have been authorized $484,000 for renovation work, mainly for cottage improvements. An additional $235,000 has been allotted for small improvement projects on hiking trails, displays and recreation sites. Funds for equipment repair total $140,000. "Of course we'll try to continue to save money," added Johnson. "However, as I've said, Parks is not a profit-making organization, but a system to bring tourist business into Kentucky, to spur the state economy and get new dollars into the General Fund. And that's a matter of better management for better parks."

The state parks system involved three avenues of funds—two leading in, the third leading out. First of all, Parks is granted an appropriation from the General Assembly for park upkeep. Funds are also generated by the department itself—from room rental, food service, gifts and park related activities. Parks is also responsible for tourist attractions from which no income is derived: non-resort parks such as Jefferson Davis, My Old Kentucky Home and Waveland. To these are added administrative costs, and services which operate at a loss (cafeterias and toll road gift shops for example) because of insufficient income. "Since the department is not set up to make a profit," said Johnson, "savings had to be accomplished through more effective handling of labor, stock, supplies and improved maintenance."

According to Johnson, once the department established what amounts of labor, equipment and supplies were required to operate the parks system, the department found they were able to do more for less. As much or more work could be done with fewer man-hours. Johnson also indicated that a fairly large amount of supplies and equipment was lost through waste, vandalism and theft. As one means of correcting this, the department instituted a stronger security program in all of the state parks. After six months, the decrease in towel loss alone has shown a significant savings in money. Other savings are evident in comparing resort parks' net income figures for the six months ended Dec. 31, 1972 with those during the same time in 1971. Of 16 resort parks, nine showed a substantial profit while six emerged from a year of loss. Six others, while operating in the red, evidenced a decrease in loss. Only one resort park, Kenlake, experienced a decline in income in 1972 and it still operated at a profit. Total income for all 16 resort parks went from a loss of $617,073 in 1971 to a profit of $254,170 in 1972.

Non-income services (the non-resort parks, toll road gift shops and cafeterias) went from a 1971 loss of $655,484 to $464,885. "What is important," said Johnson, "is that we accomplished the savings without jeopardizing quality and appearance." We receive and screen in excess of 1000 comment cards each month; if there are any complaints, we know where the

Fred Martin's 30 Years of Work In Vocational Education Reviewed

(Editor's note: The following, which first appeared in The State Journal, Frankfort, tells of the 30-year career of Fred Martin, of this county, as a leader in the field of vocational education. Mr. Martin is a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Martin, of Hueysville.)

In the last years of the depression, a young teacher in an Eastern Kentucky coal town saw many of his students dropping out of school to find jobs. These kids—"some not more than children"—were unskilled and could do little but follow their fathers into the coal mines.

Fred Martin knew "almost nothing" about vocational education but when he saw his students leaving school with no where to go but the dusty hazardous mines he decided there "must be something to help people prepare for jobs".

Vocational education in the thirties and early forties meant agriculture and home economics. What few courses were available in industrial education were usually rudimentary and provided few skills.

In a short time Mr. Martin acquainted himself with vocational education and its possibilities and limitations. In 1941, he enrolled at Eastern Kentucky University concentrating in the area of industrial education. A year later he joined the Mayo Vocational School staff in Prestonsburg as an area vocational school coordinator.

World War II interrupted his studies and teaching, but the Navy soon put him to work as a machine shop instructor. After the war he returned to Richmond and received the Bachelor of Science degree in 1949.

Upon graduation, Martin joined the Kentucky Department of Education as assistant director of Trade and Industrial Education. During his early years in Frankfort he also received his Master Degree in Counseling and Guidance from the University of Kentucky.

Martin, who has been accused of "eating, sleeping and breathing vo-ed," likes to think he can "share some of the credit for the phenomenal growth and development of area vocational schools in the Commonwealth".

For 30 years, he has worked to strengthen the bond between industrial arts and trade, industrial and technical education. The establishment of the Kentucky Industrial Education Association (of which he is an ex-officio member of the Board of Directors) in 1956, was admittedly a "high point" in a career he has never found dull.

Martin has been the Kentucky Department of Education's director of Trade, Industrial and Technical Education since 1955. In addition to his state leadership in Kentucky's period of vocational education expansion, Martin has served in national leadership positions and has received recognition for his role in the nation-wide growth of vocational education.

An avid outdoorsman, Martin and Audrey, his wife of 33 years, spend a great deal of time boating and fishing. In 1962, he received a certificate and citation from the governor of Massachusetts for a 45 pound sea bass he caught off the coast of Cape Cod. It was the third largest of that species caught during the fall fishing series that year.

A man of many interest Martin also "fiddles with horticulture." He has a small apple orchard on his farm in Franklin County and is working with new methods to make good apples better.

He also raises saddle horses on his farm in addition to his dogs which are "more members of the family than pets."

Fred Martin has come a long way from the one room school as the head of Quicksand Creek in Knott where he began his career as an educator but he "has too many things to do and is too young in his career and, of course, age" to sit back and let other people do all the work.

Vocational education has also come a long way. In addition to traditional agriculture and home economics courses students have the resources available to them to study health occupations, carpentry, plumbing, welding, mechanics and a host of others.

The man who perhaps loves the field of vocational education more than anyone else in the state says the field is more wide open now than ever before and will continue to grow.

Martin has enjoyed being a part of this continued growth and the young man who was dismayed at the lack of opportunity for Eastern Kentucky's children is now older in years but not in faith and ideals. He is obviously proud of the opportunities now available to Kentucky's children to insure them of better educational opportunities.

Fred Martin plans to continue his efforts so that these opportunities become even more accessible and continually up-to-date.

Wicker Named Head 1973 Easter Seal Drive in County

Jack Wicker, of Prestonsburg, has been named chairman of the 1973 Easter Seal Campaign for Floyd county, according to Thomas "Tommy" Bell, Lexington, state campaign chairman. The annual appeal will begin March 1 and continue through April 22, Easter Sunday.

Contributions to the campaign, sponsored by the Kentucky Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults, will help provide rehabilitation services for physically handicapped Kentuckians throughout the state.

Easter Seal centers operated by the society include Cardinal Hill Hospital, Lexington; West Kentucky Easter Seal Center, Paducah; Northern Kentucky Easter Seal Center, Covington; Geiger Easter Seal Center, Ashland; Morehead Speech Center; Hearing and Speech Center, Louisville, and Camp Kysoc, Carrollton.

ON MIDWAY DEAN'S LIST

Miss Ada Jayne Halbert, of Martin, has been named to the Dean's List for the 1972 fall semester at Midway College. Miss Halbert is a freshman, majoring in nursing.

Four Floyd-Co. Coeds On U.K. Dean's List

Three hundred fifteen University of Kentucky students from 57 counties in the Commonwealth have been named to the dean's list in the College of Education for the 1972 fall semester.

To be honored by their dean, education students must attain a 3.5 academic standing or better, based on a 4.0 grading system.

Floyd county students on the honor list are:

Pat Shelton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Shelton, of Drift; Carla Ann Tackett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Tackett, McDowell; Sandra Kay Garrett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amram Garrett, Prestonsburg; Carolyn Simpson, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Little, of Wheelwright.

Experimental Fuel Cell Work Being Done in Semi-Secrecy

LEXINGTON, Ky.—While reports of a possible energy crisis flood the country, work is continuing quietly on an experimental fuel cell that can produce electricity from natural gas.

Since 1967, 35 gas companies and a Connecticut aircraft firm have spent close to $50 million on the three-phase project that is nearing the end of phase two.

Known as the team to advance research for Gas Energy Transformation, Inc., the project is scheduled to run through 1976.

During the past 20 months, field tests on the fuel cells were conducted in 19 states and the District of Columbia. The results currently are being studied at the Hartford headquarters of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft and everyone connected with the project is keeping tight-lipped about it.

"They don't want too much publicity about it," said James R. Bradford, a manufacturing operations manager who had one of the cells at his home here for three months last summer.

Bradford said, however, that during the time the cell was in operation he and his family noticed no difference in the performance of their appliances and experienced no problems in meeting their energy needs.

At one time, when a storm knocked out power to the rest of their neighborhood for about an hour, the Bradfords continued to have electricity.

In a recent issue of pipeline, the magazine of the Columbia Gas System Inc., Ellwood Shoemaker, a company engineer, said the test was successful in terms of knowledge gained about installation, operation and maintenance.

Beyond that, information about the project is being kept under close wraps.

"The information developed from the various test programs . . . is of proprietary nature and nothing has been disclosed about the results," said Henry G. King, Columbia's director of public relations.

A spokesman for Pratt & Whitney, meanwhile, said their contract specifies that all information and publicity must come from the gas companies.

The object of phase two is to determine how soon and at what cost energy from fuel cells can be made available.

The experimental fuel cells and accompanying inverters are about the size of a home central air conditioning compressor. Project information states that should they prove successful the cells that eventually would be placed on the market would be about one-fourth that size.

Each cell is able to generate 12.5 kilowatts of power—more than enough to meet the average single family's peak electrical needs, the information says.

For commercial, industrial and apartment buildings multiple cells would be used.

Three steps are involved in the conversion of gas to electricity. First, the gas is processed in a reformer. Next, it goes into the cell where it is converted electrochemically into direct current.

Finally, the inverter changes the direct current into alternating current. An air intake fan is the cell's only moving part.

Educators Express a Liking For Computerized Information

CIS (the Computerized Information System), co-sponsored by the State Department of Education Division of Guidance and the Eastern Kentucky Educational Development Corporation, Ashland, is a success.

At least that's the word from superintendents, principals, teachers and students, whose favorable comments have flocked in since the program began operation January 4.

CIS is designed to provide about 45,000 seventh through twelfth grade and community college students in Region VII (Eastern Kentucky) with reliable and up-to-date vocational and educational information.

Here is just a sampling of some of the comments received about CIS:

At Russell middle school, counselor Judy Justice said: "I don't know who is more excited to receive the print-outs, the students or me. The students loved the print-outs, especially because it was personalized," and the CIS Program is the best thing yet for counselors."

Mrs. Loula Hill, counselor at Bath County high, said: "The kids are standing on their ears waiting for print-outs, and they sure thought the personal message to them from the computer was funny."

At Salyersville high school, a teacher indicated much of the same information could often be found in books, but that students wouldn't read that.

"They'll read the print-outs though," he said, "and they are especially thrilled to receive the print-outs because they are personalized."

At Mason County middle school, counselor Mrs. Jane Cline said: "What is especially good about the program is that the students get to keep the print-outs."

Mrs. Thelma Justice, counselor at Wurtland high school, said her school has a unit on careers that the CIS program "ties in real well with."

"It also especially helps to prepare the students for a career day held late this spring at Ashland Community College."

An instructor at Prestonsburg Community College said he was "impressed" with the program "because the information in the print-out was so up-to-date and concise."

Phyllis Belcher, a counselor at Johns Creek school in Pike county, was so impressed with CIS that he wrote a page of compliments.

"After just having received and distributed the last of our career print-outs, I just had to write and let you know just how pleased we were," Mrs. Belcher said. "My students were very interested from the beginning. They enjoyed filling out the forms and they have been equally pleased with the information they received."

"May I also add that your service has been a great help to us, since we have no funds for purchasing career information. I am looking forward to your help again next year."

Students as a whole were fascinated by the actual job requirements and salaries, and their interest has caused them to both seek out additional information and talk up the program to their fellow students.

"This information they get back from the computer stimulates their interest to really investigate a potential career," said Mrs. Lena Nevison, counselor at Greenup's McKell High School.

CIS was developed as a result of planning and work of superintendents and guidance counselors in Region VII who saw the need for better guidance services in Eastern Kentucky.

The current CIS program, known as Phase I, involves the following vocational and educational information:

Occupational—Catalogues with 450 occupational briefs, 50 words each; are placed in each school for student use. Student uses catalogue to make request and gets 300-word print-out of detailed occupational information from the computer.

Educational—Student can obtain information on three specific colleges and universities, or student can set parameters on collegiate needs, and the computer recommends, from 1,300 colleges and universities, those schools best suited for the student.

All inquiry requests in Phase I will be returned by mail, and information will be updated constantly.

The following components will also soon be added to Phase I: local occupational descriptions, community colleges, technical and specialized schools, apprenticeship programs, and military information.

Phase II of CIS, scheduled to be operational during 1973-74, will:

1. Program student data such as test scores, grades, courses completed, present schedule and attendance records for the computer to be able to suggest possible career areas in which the student would be most successful; 2. Begin development of audio-visual presentations on regional vocations and careers.

Phase III of CIS, scheduled for implementation during 1974-75, will put all this information on-line with cathode ray terminals for student and administrative use. This device displays written messages on a TV-like screen to which the student responds on a typewriter-like keyboard.

Library Notes

By ALICE HACKWORTH

February is Term Paper time! Students from high schools and junior high schools all over the county are finding much of their required information at the Floyd County Public Library. Reference questions are answered in person, by telephone and by mail.

Most students prefer to check out their materials from the main section of the library or from the more than 50 current periodicals we have. Others must be content to use the many reference books located in the Reference Room. These books must be used within the library, but they offer information about a wide range of subjects.

When more detailed information is required, additional materials may be ordered from the Department of Libraries, which will in turn search University Libraries throughout the area for information about a specified topic.

Whatever the question, come to the Floyd County Library for the answer. If we don't have the information at hand, we'll be able to locate it for you.

Floyd County Bookmobile Schedule

Mon, Feb. 19—Charles Robinson home stops, Paul Le Master home stops and Martin community; Tues., Feb. 20—Alpike Trailer Court, Cohen Campbell home stops, and Conn's Grocery at Harold; Wednes., Feb. 21—Harold community stops, Harold home stops and Harold Post Office; Thurs., Feb. 22—Martin Housing Project and Printer Post Office; Fri., Feb. 23—Sammon's Grocery at Minnie and East McDowell Community.

An all-time high of nearly 1,932,000 men and women received jobs or job training through Manpower Administration programs during fiscal 1972.

Grethel Man Dies Last Tues., Result Of Dec. 23 Mishap

Ronald Gene Hall, 29-year-old Grethel man, died last Tuesday at Highlands Regional Medical Center here, victim of injuries sustained in an automobile mishap eight weeks ago.

The single-car accident occurred Dec. 23 at approximately 10 p.m. on Ky. 979 (the Mud Creek road), about five miles south of Harold. State Police sources say Hall ran off the right shoulder of the road as he travelled south and that the vehicle rolled several times down a 60-foot hill. The car came to rest on its top.

The victim was taken to Prestonsburg General hospital suffering extensive head injuries and later to St. Joseph's hospital, Lexington. He was moved to Highlands Regional three days before his death.

Mr. Hall was born January 21, 1944 at Grethel, a son of the late Curt Hall and Goldie Tackett Hall, who survives. He had been employed as a brake operator with the Lennox Company.

Survivors, other than the mother, include his widow Willarene Martin Hall; a daughter, Jennifer Lynn, at home; five brothers, Comas and Carlos Hall, both of Grethel, and Herschell, Drexell and Don Hall, all of Columbus, Ohio, and a sister, Mrs. Lois Newsome, of Rome City, Indiana.

Funeral services were conducted Friday at 10 a.m. at the home of his mother with ministers of the Regular Baptist Church officiating. Burial was made in the Hall cemetery at Grethel under the direction of Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

Mrs. Lulu M. Epling

Mrs. Lulu McGuire Epling, 81, of La Grande, Oregon, formerly of this county, died January 27 at Grande Ronde hospital at La Grande where she had been a patient for the past month.

A daughter of the late Solomon Worth and Callie Wells McGuire, she was born in Floyd county, March 12, 1891. Her husband, F. A. Epling, preceded her in death in 1965.

Survivors include a son, Golan M. Epling, of Portland, Oregon, and four sisters, Mrs. Fanny M. Spradlin, Lexington, Mrs. Mint Marshall, of Elk City, Oklahoma, Mrs. Mina Spears, Lancer, and Mrs. Lida M. Porter, of Prestonsburg. Mrs. Epling also leaves four grandsons.

Funeral services were conducted January 30 at La Grande and burial followed at the Epling cemetery there.

Fire Chief Cancels Fireworks Permits

Frankfort, Ky.—The market for fireworks in Kentucky blew up last week.

That seemed to be the most immediate reaction when State Fire Marshal Warren E. Southworth issued an order setting Feb. 1 as the date for cancellation of permits held by all fireworks manufacturers now supplying Kentucky.

"We're already receiving inquiries about the order and, of course, every manufacturer asking for hearing will be granted one," Southworth said.

But at this point it appears uncertain whether the firms will be allowed to renew the cancelled permits.

Although aimed directly at halting what Southworth termed an apparent failure by manufacturers to comply fully with a 1968 safe fireworks law, the order apparently will also have the effect of putting a complete ban on the sale of fireworks in the state.

According to Southworth, his field inspectors will now be instructed to confiscate any fireworks found on display. Anyone attempting to sell fireworks may be subject to prosecution, he said.

Under the ban, only public fireworks displays and the sale of toy pistol caps are allowed.

Southworth cited "a substantial increase in the number of fireworks accidents involving children" as the chief reason for his order. Many of those accidents might have been avoided if the manufacturers had complied fully with the law, he said.

Each of the manufacturers named in the permit cancellation order were charged with identical violations of the law: They were:

Failure to provide the state fire marshal with up-to-date listings of all outlets distributing their products in Kentucky.

No displaying their assigned state fire marshal's permit number on each item offered for sale.

Failing to submit all fireworks, with an accompanying report by an approved testing laboratory, to his office prior to putting the items on the market.

NAMED OUTSTANDING IN MATH

Pikeville College professor, Mrs. Gertrude Ison, was chosen to be listed in the recently published "Outstanding Contemporary Mathematicians." Mrs. Ison began her math teaching career in the Knott County high school at Hindman.

Pikeville, Ky.—Gertrude S. Ison, associate professor of mathematics at Pikeville College, has been listed in the recently published "Outstanding Contemporary Mathematicians."

Editor Dale R. Moore said Mrs. Ison was chosen because "an outstanding educator must look beyond his textbook and his ivory tower into the world of reality. We are pleased to honor such individuals in this book."

Ison, a native of Vest, Knott county, received her A. B. degree from Morehead State University in 1944 and her M. S. degree in 1964 from the University of Kentucky. She was formerly a teacher in Knott County high school and a professor at Alice Lloyd College. She is treasurer of Opportunity's Workshop and has been recognized as a Community Leader of America. Mrs. Ison is the wife of Lovell Ison, a retired Pikeville College biology professor. They have four children.

No Crash Deaths In 5-County Area During January

Magoffin Retailer Loses Food Stamps

The Kentucky State Police reported this week that a survey of its activities for the month of January shows that there was not a fatal highway accident in the Post 9 area—Floyd, Pike, Johnson, Magoffin and Martin counties—during the month, although 62 persons were injured.

A total of 83 was arrested on drunk driving charges by state troopers last month—30 in Pike, 19 in Floyd, 18 in Magoffin, 13 in Johnson and 3 in Martin.

Troopers investigated 74 accidents in Pike county, 36 in Floyd, 8 in Magoffin, 15 in Johnson and 6 in Martin. At the same time 43 criminal investigations were made in Pike county, 27 in Floyd, 10 in Magoffin, 6 in Johnson and 1 in Martin.

Criminal arrests were divided among the five counties as follows: Pike 32, Floyd 8, Magoffin 8, Johnson and Martin, 1 each. Troopers recovered one stolen car in each of three counties, Floyd, Pike and Magoffin.

Atlanta, Ga.—Mach Howard, formerly doing business as Howard's Grocery, Salyersville, Ky., has been disqualified for one year from the federal food stamp program for violations, the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced today.

Howard has recently sold his store, and USDA officials say that the new ownership has been authorized to accept food coupons for eligible items.

The store, under Howard's ownership, was charged with redeeming USDA food coupons accepted in violation of FSP regulations. A USDA official explained that food coupons, by law, can be used only to buy food, excluding certain imported foods.

Friday at Auxier
The home of Eugene Marsillett at Auxier was destroyed by fire, with all its contents, Friday night.
It was said that the blaze, of undetermined origin, broke out while Mr. Marsillett was taking his father-in-law to a hospital and other members of the family were visiting at a neighbor's home. There was no estimate of the damage.
The Prestonsburg fire department was called but arrived too late to save the frame residence. A nearby mobile home was saved, however.

Farming Prospects
Set for Discussion
At May Lodge Meet

The influence of legislation and government policies on agriculture will be analyzed during a Southern States regional board meeting in Prestonsburg, February 20. The session will be held at Jenny Wiley State Park, with registration beginning at 6 p.m.
Paul E. Mullinix, director of Community Services for the cooperative, will direct the attention of 100 members of the cooperative's local boards and stockholder committee members to the agricultural economic outlook and project the gross income for farmers in the upcoming year. He also will cover the cooperative's operations during the first 6-months of the 1972-73 fiscal year as well as recount some of the co-op's history and achievements during the past 50 years. (The co-op is currently celebrating its 50th anniversary.)
The session will also be attended by a number of young farmers, agricultural workers and the cooperative's retail agency personnel.

Presiding at the meeting will be Hayward B. Hill, of South Charleston, West Va., a member of the cooperative's 15-man board of directors. Hill represents the cooperative's members in southwestern West Virginia and eastern Kentucky.
Following lunch, local board and stockholder committee chairmen, who head 100 percent attendance groups when the session is called to order, will receive the cooperative's 50th anniversary commemorative awards.
Attending the session from this area will be Kenneth Meade, manager of Prestonsburg Farm and Home Store, and board members, Jesse Wallen, James R. Shepherd, Donald Hicks, Mortie Shepherd, Prestonsburg; Ernest Prater, of David, and Dode Calhoun, of Water Gap.

Floyd County Court
Regular meeting of the Floyd county court held in Prestonsburg, Kentucky, in and at the courthouse. Present and presiding: The honorable Henry Stumbo, County Judge.

In Re: Making of new voting precinct consisting of Dwale and New Allen, in Floyd County Kentucky.

"In changing mouth of Beaver Creek voting precinct No. 10 and Jim Banks voting precinct No. 11 and creating a new voting precinct in New Allen, including the town of Dwale, Kentucky".

It appearing to the Court that Mouth of Beaver Creek Voting Precinct No. 10 now includes New Allen and the Jim Banks Voting Precinct No. 11 now includes the town of Dwale, it is therefore ordered by the Court that the voters in the town of Dwale and all of the voters from the Cow Creek precinct boundary line, including all of New Allen and the voters on the north side of the Big Sandy River to the precinct boundary line of Ivel Precinct No. 33, will vote in New Allen and said precinct will be named the Allen-Dwale voting precinct No. 44.
This precinct will include all voters from the boundary line of Cow Creek precinct No. 9 to the boundary line of the voting precinct of Ivel No. 33, including all tributaries on the north side of the Big Sandy River and all tributaries in the town of Dwale Kentucky.
This boundary change of said voting precincts and the establishment of a new voting precinct, known as the Allen-Dwale voting precinct No. 44, is hereby established and the voters will vote at said precinct as outlined above in the boundary lines of the prospective voting precincts in the coming primary to be held on May 29, 1973.
All of which is approved by this Court.
This the 8th day of February, 1973.

HENRY STUMBO
County Judge

Floyd County Basketball

By MARK LAFFERTY
With only five teams in the tournament, the winner of the lower bracket game between Wheelwright and McDowell in the second round of district basketball tournament starting here Feb. 28 will be assured not only a spot in the tournament finals but also a place in the regional tourney.
This situation developed in the draw last Sunday at Betsy Layne for tournament pairings. A. B. team tournament will be arranged to accompany the regular district eliminations.
The pairings follow:
Upper bracket—Allen Central vs. Betsy Layne at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 28; Prestonsburg, bye.
Lower bracket—Wheelwright vs. McDowell at 8 p.m., March 1.
The semifinals in the upper bracket will be at 8 p.m. March 2, with Prestonsburg meeting the winner of the Allen Central-Betsy Layne game. The championship game will be at 8 p.m., March 3.
Action last week left the Blackcats with two more setbacks. Sheldon-Clark downed them, 76-67, with a fine fourth quarter rally for the second time. Prestonsburg started quickly and continued to lead at the end of three quarters, 53-49. The Cats were led by

State To Offer
Student Loans

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Wendell Ford and Agriculture Commissioner Wendell Butler are making available more than $300,000 for student loans to Kentucky farm boys and girls.

The money is being provided through funds released from the Farmers Home Administration to the Commonwealth.

Students may borrow up to $1500 per year for either college or vocational-technical school enrollment. Once an agreement is completed with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, these loans will be federally guaranteed and no payment will be due while the student is in school. Interest will not be due for nine to twelve months after training is completed and enrollees have five to ten years to repay the borrowed money.

Not only will the continuous repayment keep a revolving fund available, but additional money will be added as $401,871.84 in FHA-insured loans are paid to the Farmers Home Administration.

The money originated in 1933 as an allocation to Kentucky under the Emergency Relief Act. It had been operated as a trust until February 1, 1970 when authority to receive and administer the assets was delegated to the Commissioner of Agriculture as the representative of the Commonwealth.

Commissioner Butler secured the assistance of Glenn Wilson, a former FHA employee, to prepare plans for utilization of the money.

Loan applications will be screened first by a committee in each of the 120 counties. The final decision on applications will be made by a state committee.

sophomore Kippy McNally with 20 points and Jim Blackburn with 19. Senior playmaker Bill Risner also scored in double figures with 10 points.
The Cats' other setback came at the hands of Wheelwright, 59-53, as they avenged an earlier loss to the Cats. The Trojans' rejuvenated lineup, as Coach Francis calls it, jumped on top at the outset and rode the game out for the victory. Top point-getters for Prestonsburg were Jim Blackburn, Kippy McNally and Billy Risner as they each collected 12 points. Wheelwright top guns were Larry Issac with 25 points and Tippy Moscript with 17.
Wheelwright toppled tough Elkhorn City also last week, 68-60, at Elkhorn City. Wheelwright, now playing three sophomores, a freshman and a senior, took an early one-point advantage and with the advantage of an explosive fourth quarter bombed the Cougars for the win. Tippy Moscript was high point with 20, with Bryant following with 11.
Betsy Layne lost its only contest of the week as it fell to these same Cougars, 85-74, at Betsy Layne. Dan Hall collected 21 points for the losers.
McDowell's winning streak came to an end last week with No. 2 ranked Louisville Shawnee delivering the blow, 93-78. Coach Grigsby felt the Daredevils played a fine game, but were smothered by Shawnee's hot shooting in the first half. Neil Turner and Glen Heinisch responded by pouring in 24 and 25 points, respectively. Neil Moore added 15 points to round out McDowell's scorers in double figures.
McDowell got back on track just two days later as they crushed Phelps, 91-78. McDowell ballooned to a 21-point halftime advantage and coasted the final period. McDowell had four players in twin figures with Neil Turner gathering 33 points, Glen Geinsch 26, Ricky Roberts 15, and Neil Moore 10.
This week McDowell visits Whitesburg on February 13, Johns Creek on February 16, and comes home against Millard on February 16, and comes home against Millard on February 17. Prestonsburg travels to Ashland on February 13, and hosts Paintsville, February 16. Wheelwright is at home against Johnson Central February 16, and Johns Creek, February 17. Allen Central goes to Paintsville, February 13, and to Virgie, February 17, at Prestonsburg. Betsy Layne is at home against Sheldon-Clark, February 16 and Pikeville, February 17.

ROPES Proposes
Job Placement
For Students

At the January 31 meeting of the Regional Organization for Providing Educational Services (ROPES) board of directors held at the Floyd County Board of Education here, two new proposals were approved to be submitted to the Bureau of Vocational Education for possible funding.
One of these was a request to develop an exemplary placement system for students who graduate from vocational education programs that operate in Floyd, Pike, Johnson, Martin and Magoffin counties and for students who may not be able to fully complete their training programs. This project would supplement the existing placement activities that are done by administrators, teachers and others and would be an additional service for students who need job placement information. If a comprehensive placement program can be developed for Region 11, these findings will be shared with other vocational education regions in Kentucky.
The second proposal approved by the ROPES board is a request for funds to develop a comprehensive planning system for vocational education programs in the region. To meet the educational needs of the people of Region Eleven, it is essential that educational programs be planned, implemented and evaluated in a systematic manner. This program would be an attempt to improve the planning process.
Bronelle Skaggs, assistant director of ROPES and director of Vocational Education Programs in Region 11, submitted the two proposals to the Department of Vocational Education in Frankfort, February 4.
The ROPES directors also approved a proposal for a program under the Drug Abuse Education Act. The title of the project will be, "Help Communities Help Themselves". This is a mini-grant program supported under the Drug Abuse Education Act of 1970 and its purpose is to provide as many communities as possible throughout Region Eleven trained leadership for planning, implementing and administering drug education programs.
Reo Johns, director, ROPES Region 11, and Shirley Beard, administrative assistant, will work with Mountain Mental Health in Prestonsburg, Model Cities Agency in Pikeville, and the Big Sandy Human Resources Council in developing this project.

Personals
Mrs. Mary B. Hendricks and Mrs. Eva Duff, of Mt. Sterling, were overnight guests of Mrs. H. D. Hewlett last Thursday. They attended the funeral of Mrs. Bessie Harmon Nelson at the Jones-Preston Funeral Home in Paintsville, Friday.
Mr. and Mrs. Rainey White were in Huntington Saturday on business.
Mr. and Mrs. Garland H. Rice visited Mrs. Everett H. Sowards here last Sunday.
Kenneth Roy Perry and John Perry visited their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Perry, Sunday. Mr. Perry is very ill.
Mr. and Mrs. Bill Moore, of Banner, visited her mother, Mrs. Ethel Wallen, and son Tim last Sunday.
Secretary of State Thelma Stovall says her office will hold six workshops around Kentucky to explain the state's new voter registration law for the benefit of county clerks. Under that new law, all voters must re-register with their county clerk by Sept. 25 to be eligible to vote in next November's primary election.
