

Fiscal Year Begins, New Dock Asked Expect Work in '73 As Present Facility Held Beyond Repair

B. N. (Ken) Dossett, supervisor of docks for the Department of Parks, inspected the shambles that is the Jenny Wiley Boat Dock last week, and immediately went to a telephone.

"We've got to have a new dock," he told Parks officials in Frankfort.

Age and damage by wind and wave have made of the dock possibly the state's poorest. Its repair or replacement has been delayed by heavy expenditures required to repair heavy storm damage incurred on at least two occasions by Kenlake and other Western Kentucky docks, but a new fiscal year began Monday and with it come new funds.

Yet work on the dock is not expected to be undertaken till the current boating season ends with Labor Day, it was indicated by George Barker, manager of Jenny Wiley State Park.

Mr. Barker said he is certain work on the dock will be let to contract for completion before the 1974 season. This work will include construction of new walkways, boat slips and lockers.

Additional services and conveniences earlier planned by Barker but delayed because of condition of the dock will be possible when the work is completed. These will include a place for the cleaning of fish, a water supply and other items.

Repair of storm damage to the metal section of the existing dock has been let to contract.

Mr. Barker said prospects at the Goble Branch camping area have brightened with the announcement that a contract or contracts will be awarded by Oct. 1 for construction of a bath house, other buildings and the installation of utilities. Water to the camping area will come from the Auxier Water Company.

2 Booked Here As Transporters

Two Floyd men were arrested by ABC Agent Arvel Nelson and Deputy Sheriffs Ralph and Roland Howell this week and were booked at the County jail on the charge of transporting alcoholic beverages in local option territory.

Leroy Hamilton, of Teaberry, was arrested Monday on Stumbo Hollow at Drift after a chase which began on Sizemore mountain. Forty-nine cases of beer and two cases of whiskey were confiscated. Nelson said that in the chase of Hamilton another vehicle driven by Danny Ray Martin, of Drift, attempted to slow the officers and at one point pulled across the road. Martin was arrested and charged with reckless driving and blocking the road to an emergency vehicle.

The second transporting arrest was made Tuesday morning at Lackey where Kermit Martin, of Drift, was halted by Nelson and the Howells. The ABC agent said Martin's vehicle contained 70 cases of beer and one case of whiskey.

All three men were booked in Magistrate Bill Wells' court.

Long-Range Water, Sewer Plan Views Sweeping Floyd Changes

A Regional Comprehensive Water and Sewer Plan prepared for the Big Sandy Area Development District by Howard K. Bell, Consulting Engineers, Inc., Lexington, recommends that the five counties be divided into three service areas, that a Water and Sewer Authority be created for each area and that all water and sewage treatment systems by ultimately owned and operated by the three service areas.

The Big Sandy district of five counties is divided by the planners into three service areas largely according to drainage systems—the Levisa area to include Pike, Floyd and Johnson and the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy; the Licking to serve Magoffin, and the Tug to serve Martin county.

Each of these three areas would have a Water and Sewer Authority, and each would eventually acquire, maintain and operate the water and sewer systems in their respective areas. Interconnection and consolidation would figure in the plan, and Bell admits that the Levisa area would have most trouble in this effort because of the sizeable number of municipal and independent systems now existing or in the process of being implemented.

$500,000 Doctors' Clinic Opens

Moving of the last medical offices from the old Prestonsburg General Hospital building last Thursday to the recently completed Prestonsburg Medical Center brought to a total of four the physicians presently seeing patients in the $500,000 facility in the Porter Addition here.

The clinic, which contains office suites for 13 doctors, is now being utilized by Dr. William Cook, Dr. George P. Archer, Dr. Ernest C. Holbrook, Dr. David White, Dr. Daniel Spurlock and Dr. Charles Hieronimus. Dr. Spurlock and Hieronimus are general practitioners.

Three other doctors have signed to become further additions to the clinic staff. To arrive early next year are Dr. John W. Sutherland, internal medicine; Dr. Joe H. Rapier, orthopedic surgery, and Dr. Michael M. Minix, ophthalmology.

The three-acre site, the former location of the Mountain Metal Company, was purchased a year ago by doctor-members of the Prestonsburg Clinic, Inc.

from Richard E. Martin, Prestonsburg engineer. The site not only provides a 120-space parking area and the clinic itself but also ample room for any future expansion of the facility.

In addition to laboratory, X-ray and minor surgery departments, the clinic also contains a pharmacy.

Dr. George P. Achrer said the former Prestonsburg General Hospital building will be for sale.

Officers Hunt Burglar Clues

City and state police were seeking clues Monday to the identity of the persons who during the week-end rifled safes of three Prestonsburg places of business and stole merchandise estimated at $500 value.

All three places burglarized are in the southern business district and all were entered in the same fashion—by breaking side windows of the buildings. Approximately $1000 in cash was taken from the safe of Eastern Kentucky Auto Parts. A hammer and chisel were used in smashing the safe and it was ruined.

At the nearby Parkway Motors a cigarette machine was emptied, but an attempt to break into the safe by using an acetylene torch failed. Only the dial was cut from the safe.

Approximately $100 was taken from the safe of the Farm & Home Store, and watches, radios and ammunition valued at around $500 are missing. The safe was not damaged, Sgt. Hutchinson, of the Kentucky State Police, said.

Jailed within the week: John Henry Salisbury, reckless use of a deadly weapon, by Deputy Sheriff Hall; Charles E. Hopkins, drunk driving, by Officers C. E. Lee and J. A. Haley; Johnny Owens, drunk driving, by Deputy Sheriff Grady Skeans; Carmel Hamilton, destroying private property, by State Trooper Phillip Tucker; Wilbur Conn, drunk driving and no operator's license, by State Trooper Estep; Terry Adams, reckless driving, contempt of court and resisting arrest, by Prestonsburg Policemen Woods and Campbell.

CLOSE FOR FOURTH

The Floyd and Martin county Health Department, which closed July 4, will resume regular business hours Thursday.

This Town . . . That World

No, Junior, you are not to celebrate the Fourth with a "fifth."

THOUGHTS ON INDEPENDENCE DAY

It's July 4 again, and I am reminded . . .

We who are more or less satisfied with things as they are and shy away from change are no more, no less guilty of the apathy that kills than many "good" folks were, back there in 1776 and during the years leading up to that climactic event which we now celebrate as Independence Day.

Those who were critical of the Mother Country, the king, Parliament, taxation and the like were, in the minds of many solid citizens of the day, very low fellows, trouble-makers, no less.

Why protest taxes? We must carry our share of the load? Why gripe about taxation without representation? They're spending more on us than they collect from us.

And that dumping of the tea into Boston harbor—now, that was downright outlawry. But wasn't Sam Adams always up to some sort of mischief? Those fellows who were meeting in secret, plotting against the king, gathering arms and drilling men for battle—traitors, no less.

Those Tories, whom most of us have at one time or another scorned, were of the "respectable" class. They foresaw hard times ahead if the colonies rebelled, and there were such times. The expression, "not worth a Continental," described the value of the colonial currency and remains today descriptive of anything that is worthless. The economy, these Tories argued, as men do today, was of first importance. Please don't rock the boat.

Care Center Sets Enrichment Program To Begin July 9th

The Floyd county staff of Mountain Comprehensive Care Center will sponsor a Summer Enrichment Program beginning next Monday, and to continue for five weeks, concluding on August 10. The program is designed for children of elementary school age who have learning or studying difficulties. The main focus of the program under the supervision of two elementary-level teachers will be on improving attitudes toward learning.

Students will spend three hours daily, five days a week, in the program with the time being divided between a lesson, a

Martin Held in Pike After Griffith Death

Robert Griffith, Sr., 45, who was wounded at Estill June 24 by a revolver shot, died Sunday morning at the Methodist Hospital, Pikeville, and within a matter of hours his alleged slayer, Glenn Martin, 30, was jailed at Pikeville by State Detective Gary Rose.

The murder warrant for Martin was issued from the Pike county court, and he may be given trial in either Floyd, where the crime was committed, or in Pike where Mr. Griffith died.

Martin was first jailed here on a shooting and wounding charge and was released last Thursday under $15,000 bond.

Griffith, a well-known business man, died of a bullet wound in his abdomen. He was said to have been shot with his own gun. Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo said the victim's son, Robert Griffith, Jr., told of the shooting, to this effect:

The younger Griffith, Glenn Martin, Martin's brother, a man named Clatworthy and Johnny Martin had been drinking while shooting at turtles along the bank of Right Beaver Creek at Estill. His father came to the scene and tried to get him to leave with him. Later, fighting broke out and the elder Griffith returned. He said Glenn Martin threw a rock which struck his father on the head, knocking him to the ground, and that Martin then snatched his father's .38-calibre revolver and shot him.

The younger Griffith was quoted by the prosecutor as saying that three shots from the .22-calibre rifle were fired at him by another member of the group after his father had been wounded.

Mr. Stumbo said questioning of Clatworthy elicited more than one rambling version of the shooting. He said the wounded man was unable to make a statement to him but that Mrs. Griffith told him her husband told her, soon after the shooting, that Martin knocked him down and shot him. The accused man declined to make a statement.

The victim operated a furniture and appliance store, Griffith's Shoppers Fair, at Estill and an automobile and boat dealership. He was a veteran of World War II and was a son of Wayne Griffith, of Ohio, and the late Virginia Clay Griffith.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Ada Allen Griffith, and his son and daughter, Robert Griffith, Jr., and Mrs. Priscilla Ring, all of Estill; seven brothers and

Park Perks Up With No. 2 Spot In Ky. System

Jenny Wiley State Park came within two points of winning the Park of the Month award for the month of May, losing only to Cumberland State Park, it was announced this week.

The high rating of Jenny Wiley in the state parks system was hailed as an outstanding comeback after a period of decline. The Park of the Month competition is based on several factors, one of which involves the comments of guests. Guests' comments on Jenny Wiley for the month were 99.4 percent favorable.

The number of guests at the park is running much heavier than last year, George Barker, manager, said. Occupancy for the month of June, he said, was 95 percent, and that is a level usually not attained till July and August. Overall, June receipts were within $1,800 of last July's total, and that despite the fact that no camping fees were collected this year and the riding trails have not been opened.

Social Security Office Location Held Uncertain

What initially was a "firm commitment" by the Social Security Administration to establish a permanent office in Prestonsburg isn't so firm, these days.

Last year, it was announced that the Prestonsburg office would be established to serve Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin and Martin counties, and bids were asked from property-owners or builders who might supply quarters for the office.

Bids were submitted, and apparently were ready for acceptance last March. But suddenly something happened. Prestonsburg bidders say a "hold order" came through from Senator Cook when Paintsville interests entered the picture. At any rate, no bid was accepted. A temporary office was meanwhile established in the States Motel building here, and again bids have been asked.

This time, Social Security asks for bids, pointing out that a site in Prestonsburg, or in Paintsville, or on US 23 between the two county-seats, will be acceptable.

Privately, Social Security workers express the fear that if the location if made at Paintsville all Floyd county from Allen south will take advantage of the new four-lane US 23 and go to the Pikeville office and thus leave that office still deep in a heavy caseload.

Yet is conceded locally that Paintsville has the edge, politically.

Grant To Help 'Mini-Park' Here

With the promise of a $7,500 federal grant, the go-ahead for the construction of a "mini-park" at the Goble-Roberts Addition here depends on a decision by the Prestonsburg City Council, Mayor George P. Archer said Friday.

The one-acre park site was appraised at $15,000 and the U. S. Bureau of Outdoor Recreation (BOR) has agreed to contribute half the total if the City of Prestonsburg will match this amount.

The park area comprises mostly low-rent housing and Dr. Archer said, "A little park is needed there." He expressed the hope that the park would relieve some of the congestion in the area, explaining, "The children don't have any place to play except in the streets. If we can get the kids off the streets, it will all be worthwhile."

Archer said, "We wouldn't have room to do much there," but added that the park would probably include slides, swing sets, a softball diamond and a basketball goal.

If approved, funds for future development of the park would be provided by BOR, Dr. Archer said.

Proclaims Summer Theatre Week

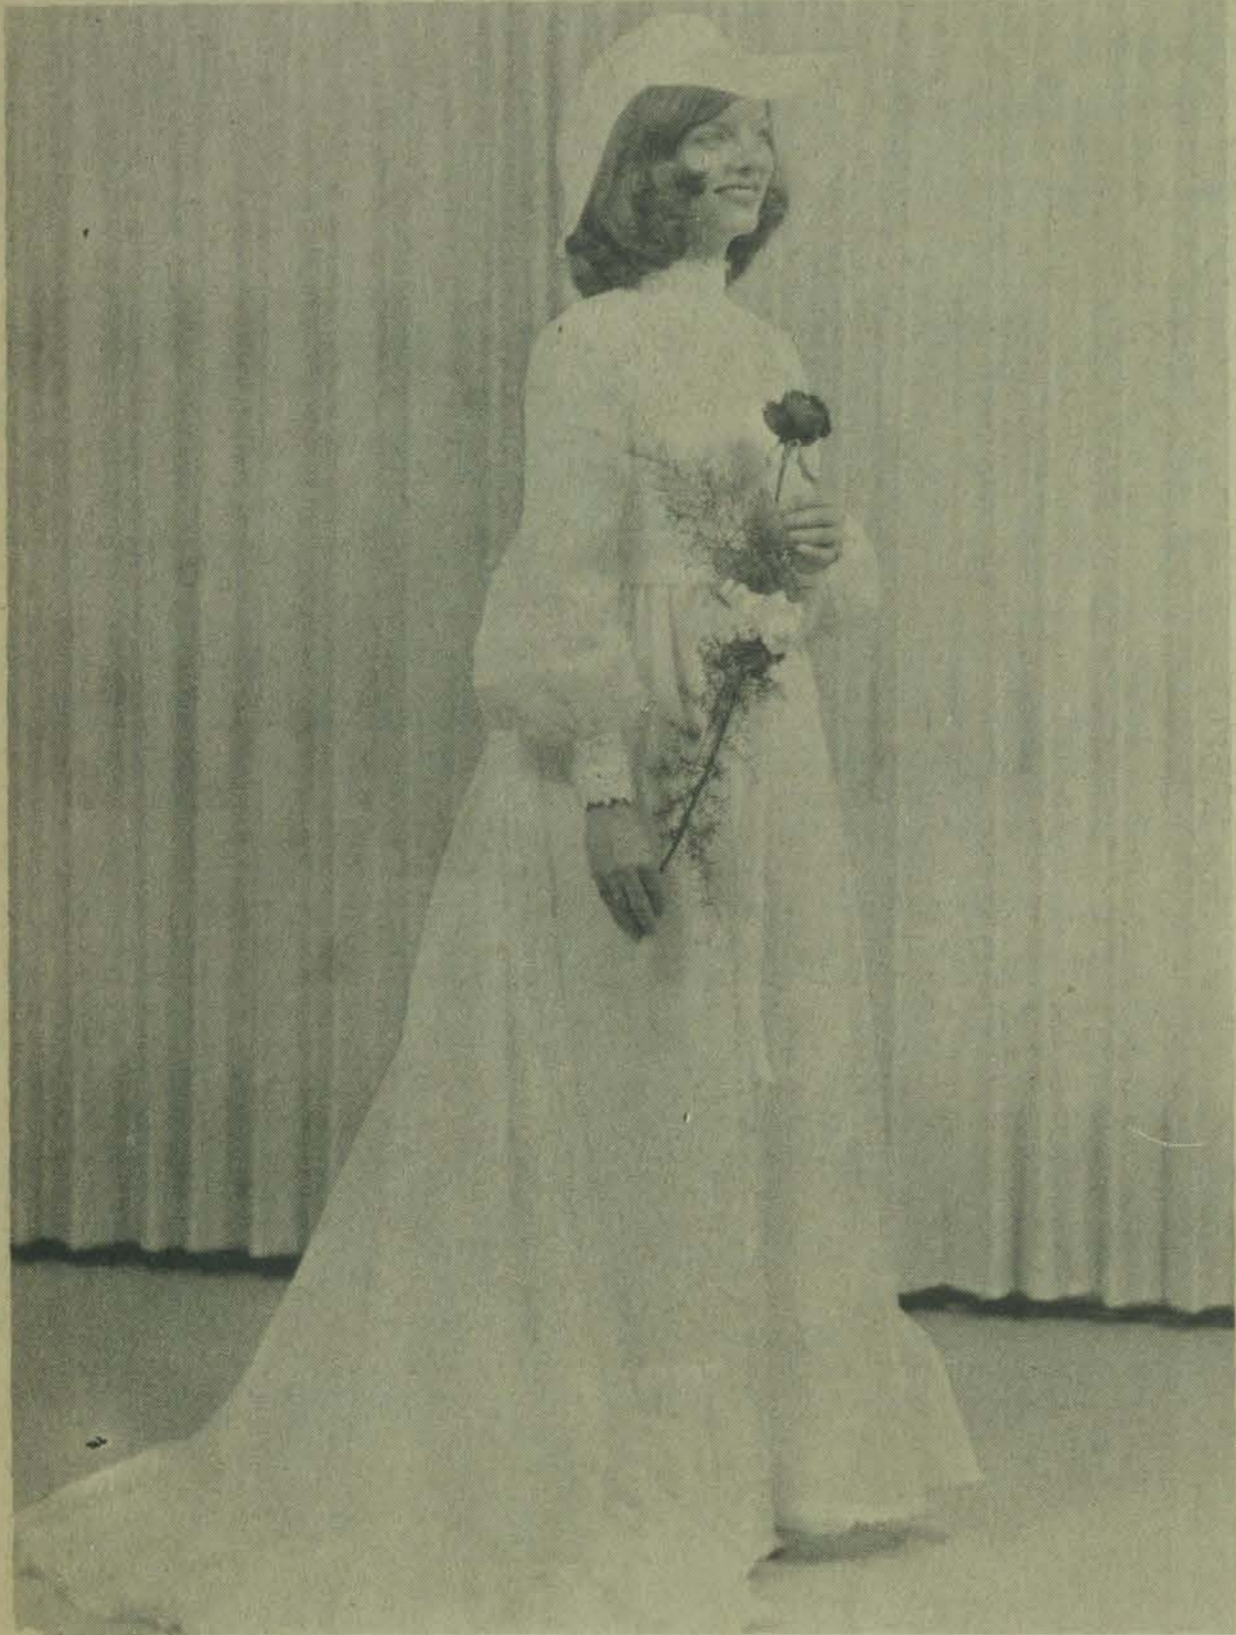

Two stars of "1776," Michael Edwards and Gary Franklyn Marchacek look on as Mayor Archer signs proclamation designating the period, July 1-7 as Jenny Wiley Summer Theatre Week.

"1776," the historically based musical now playing at the Jenny Wiley Amphitheatre, and July 4 go together like carols and Christmas, and so Mayor George P. Archer last Saturday proclaimed this holiday period, July 1-7, Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre Week in Prestonsburg and Floyd county in recognition of the production.

In his proclamation Dr. Archer pointed out that "1776" has been proclaimed "the finest professional production currently being offered in any state park in the state of Kentucky," and announced that a special performance of the musical will be staged at the amphitheatre on the evening of July 4, complete with fireworks and a display of flags from the 13 original colonies.

Becomes Bride of Mr. deLafosse

The marriage of Miss Malissa Allen Francis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Francis, and Mr. John R. deLafosse, Lexington, Ky., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. deLafosse, Amarillo, Texas, was solemnized at 3:30 o'clock on the afternoon of June 16 at the home of the bride's parents at 77 Mary Jane Lane, Prestonsburg.

The marriage vows were exchanged in a double-ring ceremony from a poolside platform at the Francis residence, against a background of pines. Dr. Harold W. Dorsey, of Lexington, a former pastor of the First United Methodist Church here, was the officiating minister. Nuptial music was provided by Miss Jane Talbert, Indianapolis, Ind., vocalist, and Mrs. James H. Robinson, Jr., Lexington, Ky., organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of satin organza and re-embroidered lace designed with a fitted Victorian bodice and neckline applied in lace and tucked finely over the bodice. Her sheer, full sleeves were tucked and applied like the bodice and caught at the wrists by deep cuffs. Her softly gathered skirt featured a tucked front panel and a ruffled hemline which swept into a chapel train. A bias fold of satin organza encircled the waistline and ended in a bow at center back. She wore a wide-brimmed horsehair hat with a re-embroidered lace crown. A satin ribbon with a bow and back streamers completed the design. She carried red and white roses atop a white Bible.

Mrs. Newell Crawford, Clemson, S. C., the matron of honor, wore a long gown of voile in a lavender floral print. The empire bodice was tucked with a standup collar. The long sleeves and hemline were ruffled.

Mr. Morris Ford, Atlanta, Ga., served Mr. deLafosse as best man, and Mr. William G. Francis, Lexington, Ky., brother of the bride, was usher.

Following the ceremony, a reception under the supervision of Mrs. Sidney Garland, Paintsville, was held at the Paintsville Country Club. Assisting were Mrs. William G. Francis and Mrs. Douglas Knoop, both of Lexington, Mrs. David C. Collins, Columbia, Mo., Mrs. Phillip Damron, Misses Pam Goble and Patti Marshall, all of Prestonsburg.

The bride is a graduate of Christian College, Columbia, Mo., and Transylvania University, Lexington, Ky., and presently is employed by the First Security National Bank in Lexington. Mr. deLafosse was graduated from Embury-Riddle Aeronautical University, Daytona Beach, Fla., and is vice-president of Skyway Enterprises, Lexington, Ky.

After a honeymoon in Atlanta, Ga., Mr. and Mrs. deLafosse are at home in Lexington.

The 'Rock and Roll' Continues

Now that the early-season collection of boat license fees has been completed, the Division of Boating, we are told, has only one enforcement officer to serve between Dewey and Fishtrap reservoirs and none at all at Buckhorn.

This situation opens the door to conjecture, if not downright suspicion. This newspaper begins to wonder if the only interest the Division of Boating has in water safety is to collect license fees. It also wonders if the Division isn't aware that a licensed craft can violate as many water safety regulations as one that is unlicensed.

Two small boats have already been swamped at Dewey this year by heavy, speeding craft. At Fishtrap one drowning has been recorded. It is little short of the miraculous that the death toll is light at these lakes where "anything goes" and the Division of Boating stays home.

These are narrow, mountain impoundments which should be enjoyed by the public, whether the craft in use is a john-boat or a cabin cruiser powered by a high-speed motor. From time to time limits have been established to set apart the lower section of Dewey Lake to speed-boating and water-skiing, with the upper section reserved for fishermen and others using smaller boats.

But these regulations have never meant anything. The "rock-and-roll" at Dewey continues from the dam to German—simply because nobody has exerted any effort to enforce the rules.

A Plea for Miners

While We Fight and Hate

Speaking for the miners and Black Lung sufferers in Eastern Kentucky and especially Floyd county, a man from this county, Mr. Howard Holbrook, Jr., worked around 35 years in the mines for Inland Steel Company. The Social Security board had him come all the way from Somerset, Ky. to Pikeville for another breathing test. He died a few days later. He only weighed 98 pounds when he died—without getting his "black lung."

Scientists from all over the world recently met in London, and they came to a definite conclusion. Since 1760 the climatic conditions of the earth have been changing—at first, slowly, then more rapidly, and now so fast that it is becoming alarming. They said another Ice Age is fast approaching, that the polar ice cap would start to melt and move southward, leveling mountains and cities and that a few thousands of people may survive this phenomenon.

Could this be the fulfillment of the prophecies of the Bible, that the meek shall inherit the earth? Over the thousands of years we have been so occupied fighting and hating each other that we have forgotten that God still lives.

How To Save at the Market

By AVERY JENKINS

Undoubtedly many housewives are seeking ways to make the food dollar go farther in the market place.

In the areas of meat grading, quality and preparation, helpful information is offered by a University of Kentucky professor of animal sciences.

You can't make good beef out of poor beef, but you can improve its tenderness by the way you prepare it, says Dr. James Kemp.

The way beef is cooked affects tenderness. Less tender cuts should be cooked with moist heat to break down fiber and tissue. Tenderizers, when used properly, will make the meat more palatable. They won't improve the flavor of a poor grade of meat, but they will make it easier to chew.

Commercial tenderizers are themselves a food product. They are derived from either pineapple, fig or papaya. Mechanical tenderizing also is worthwhile as a means of rendering beef more pleasing to the consumer, Dr. Kemp says. Some of the meat juices may be lost, for example, when meat is beaten with a tenderizing mallet, but the overall result usually is considered advantageous.

Tenderness also is determined by at least six other factors: age of the animal; degree of fatness—to a certain extent the fat animal yields meat that is more tender than the all-lean meat animal; the particular cut of meat; the muscle type—muscles of suspension such as the back which yields porterhouse, sirloin and T-bone steaks are more tender than the muscles used for locomotion such as the round and the shank found in the back leg and the fore leg, respectively; hereditary—two beef animals that appear almost identical to an observer will not have the same tenderness when cooked; aging of the carcass—the ideal time for aging a beef carcass is 10 days to two weeks.

If eaten within 48 hours after slaughter, beef will be tough because rigor mortis is still present and the tissues have not had time to relax.

"A consumer interested solely in flavor and tenderness and wishing to use mostly dry-heat methods of cooking, should buy the fatter grades of beef. However, leaner beef, if properly cooked, is practically as palatable, much less wasteful, and has a higher percentage of protein than the fatter beef," Dr. Kemp adds.

Less tender cuts are just as nutritious as the best ones. The protein found in hamburger is as beneficial to the human body as is the protein in T-bone steak. The eight beef grades are prime, choice, good, standard, commercial, utility, cutter and canner.

Prime cuts make up four per cent of the beef carcass and go almost exclusively to the top restaurant, hotel and motel trade. Approximately 59 per cent of the beef sold in the U. S. is graded choice and is primarily the beef sold in food markets. Good (16 per cent) is the second most abundant grade. At the lower end of the scale is the utility beef, which may be suitable for stewing or pot roasting, Dr. Kemp says.

Cutter and canner grades of beef are from very thin, mature animals and are used mostly in processed meat products. Beef also is graded for cutability, and grades range from 1 to 5. A very meaty carcass is designated as 1, while another with excessive fat is labeled 5. Since most beef is trimmed of excess fat at the retail store, consumers will be concerned very little with cutability grades, unless they are planning to buy a quarter or side of beef.

Seventy-five per cent or more of retail cuts come from meats with a cutability of 2, whereas a cutability of five may yield no more than 60 per cent. The retail store takes the trim loss on the fat meat, while the person who buys the whole carcass has to take the trim loss himself.

Government grading is not compulsory and meat processors establish their own grades or brand names which may be equivalent to one or more government grades. Thus, there may be a slight variance in quality within the same grade, depending upon the processor.

"Most of the meat sold in markets is either choice or good," Dr. Kemp continues. "Some stores advertise that they sell nothing but choice. If the meat is ungraded, it could be either. If meat is not labeled, the buyer should look for meat that's bright in color, has some marbling, shows firmness, and has some fat along with the lean. These are the things to look for in identifying choice meat."

There's one other factor about beef quality. That's the animals' diet. It generally is agreed by experts that a grain-fed animal produces better beef than the grass-fed animal. Nearly all grocery and supermarket beef has been grain-fed, Dr. Kemp says.

Grass-fed animals are still marketed in some foreign countries but most of U. S. beef is fattened on grain in feed lots, he stated.

They were accompanied by Lloyd Wells (center), FFA adviser.

The majority of summer fishermen may find it difficult to catch fish during extended periods of high water temperatures or exceptional water conditions caused by boating activities. However, during these times, there is good fishing for those with know-how.

Some of the best black bass fishing of the season occurs during this time, especially for those anglers casting the banks and dropoffs at night.

Night bass casters usually rest during the day, then head to the lake near dark, as the water calms.

Spinner baits and artificial night-crawlers are two of the top producers during this period.

Many of the night anglers will locate a school of feeding bass off the deep dropoffs or rocky points. As a result of their fish-finding efforts, the anglers may even harvest a limit of fine bass.

Night casting is fine for some, but there are many who prefer the daylight hours.

A good choice is to cast the shoreline in early morning or late evening with surface lures, or to head for the open water and await the jumps.

Jump fishing can be about the most exciting type of sport fishing. Both white bass and black bass are taken from the jumps, as schools of these fish feed on surfacing schools of shad.

As a rule, surface lures will take black bass. Spinners and spoons are the choice of the white bass.

Jump fishing most often occurs in calm water, especially in early morning and late evenings. Anglers must be accurate in their casts to the target areas where the schooling fish are feeding. At peak periods this type of angling will produce a fish or a strike with every cast.

Still fishing also has its place during the summer, especially for the bluegill. Many of the best strings of bluegill are taken during the hot summer.

Many professional bluegill fishermen drift the deeper banks or steep walls with worms or crickets. This method can pick up endless numbers of these fine sunfish during the day.

Some anglers are missing a good bet during the summer by not trying for rainbow trout that the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources has stocked in 26 streams, four state-owned lakes, one major lake and six tailwaters below the major lakes.

Trout are stocked in the streams four to eight months a year; the tailwaters, seven times annually; and state-owned lakes, three times. The one major lake receives all of its fish at one time.

Trout fishermen need a trout stamp in addition to a valid fishing license.

Write to the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Capital Plaza, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601 for the trout stocking pamphlet.

These are only some of the ways to harvest fish during the summer. Next week will be other suggestions for that summer harvest of fish.

Although most fishermen seem to concentrate their efforts on the larger lakes, there are other places to fish in Kentucky which can offer both a change of pace and a full stringer to the angler willing to try them.

Some of the best summer fishing occurs in the tailwaters below our larger dams. The Kentucky and Barkley Dam tailwaters are well-known for their excellent catfish, crappie and white bass fishing, but not many are aware that fishermen who know these waters often catch their limit by plugging the shorelines for black bass, particularly in the Cumberland River below Barkley Dam.

Kentucky fishermen seeking large rainbow trout can find no better place than the Cumberland River below Wolf Creek Dam. Each year many trout averaging over five pounds are taken from these cool waters. During the summer, trout fishing is at its peak during periods of low flow. Strings of fine trout are taken by bank fishermen and by those who choose a peaceful float trip which may extend as far as Burkesville, some 30 miles from the dam.

For another change of pace, anglers might explore some of the numerous streams which flow through Kentucky. On these smaller streams, fish will sometimes refuse to take artificial lures, so the fisherman should carry a small seine to catch minnows, crawfish or other natural baits, which will often catch fish when all else fails.

There are also many farm ponds throughout the state. The Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources has stocked some 60,000 of these ponds, and they are often prime spots for both bass and bluegill. Remember, however, that these ponds are on private property; permission should be obtained from the landowner before fishing on his pond.

Fishermen shouldn't overlook the smaller state-owned lakes scattered throughout the Commonwealth. These are open to the public and are often "hot spots" for summer fishing.

No matter where you fish during the summer months, an important point to remember is that the best results usually occur in the early morning, late afternoon and night.

Environmentally Speaking

Commissioner

Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection

Forestry Division Assists Woodland Utilization

As commissioner of the new Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, I am issuing a call to woodland owners and all citizens of the Commonwealth to utilize the department's services to get every acre of woodland or idle land into maximum productivity. Within the department, the Division of Forestry welcomes the task of assisting woodland owners in proper forest management.

The professional resources of the Forestry division are available to provide technical guidance to all landowners interested in good forest management. The division has 28 professional foresters, working in nine administrative districts, to provide guidance and assistance.

Their services may include woodland examination, tree planting advice, timber stand improvement layout, marking timer for cutting, marketing assistance and other activities related to the protection and proper management of trees and forest land. The foresters' recommendations indicate the best management practices applicable to the particular woodland.

There are no charges for the foresters' services except the nominal charge made for timber marking. The marking is done with the assistance of the landowner, or his representative, at a charge of 40 cents per thousand board feet marked, with a minimum charge of $5.

In an average year, the Division of Forestry will give service to approximately 3,000 landowners. This includes preparing 1,500 management plans, marking 12,000,000 board feet of timber for harvest, and servicing tree planting site examination requests and miscellaneous cases.

I am eager for the Division of Forestry to show increased accomplishments and make its services available to all private woodland owners in the Commonwealth.

FORD CREATES COUNCIL IN ENERGY CRISIS

To help Kentucky meet the current energy crisis Gov. Wendell Ford has created a five member Energy Council. It will inventory energy needs, develop programs to educate the public on conservation of energy, and recommend research and development efforts. The Governor has asked citizens to lower traveling speed by 10 miles an hour to conserve gasoline and has ordered all state vehicles to do so in 60 and 70 miles per hour zones, as well as reduction of use of state vehicles.

9,334 Tons Of Litter Removed In Pike Cleanup

PIKEVILLE, Ky.—Pike county's four-week cleanup drive resulted in the removal of 9,334 tons of litter and rubbish from the county, Hugh Collett, county coordinator of the drive said last week.

A total of 37,619 workers—more than half of Pike county's 61,000 citizens—devoted 96,320 man-hours to clean up the area in what has been termed "the most effective county-wide clean up campaign ever undertaken in America."

Drive Chairman Harold Edmonds, financial aid director of Pikeville College, said these and other statistics were tabulated from verified reports submitted to the drive's steering committee by 33 community drive coordinators, District 12 officials of the State Bureau of Highways, the 810th Supply Co.

of the U. S. Army Reserves, the eight Pike County magistrates, the Neighborhood Youth Corps and the county's Nelson Mainstream Program workers.

Not included in the report statistics, Edmonds said, are those dealing with the removal of approximately 1,600 junk vehicles from county land and streams, which will be collected at district depots during July and August.

The largest groups of volunteers, Edmonds reported, were county elementary and high school students (13,106) and private citizens (14,917).

Collett singled out the State Bureau of Highways for its major role in disposition of refuse. "Under the direction of Harold Reed, operations engineer for the Bureau's 12th District, a total of 6,000 tons of material from 'immobile' dumps, bagged litter and junk was hauled off by a crew of 50 workers, working a total of 3,200 man-hours," Collett reported. The truck miles driven by the bureau to transport the collected material to the city dump from locations all over the county came to 10,000 miles, he said.

County Judge Wayne T. Rutherford has expressed his appreciation for the "vastly successful" campaign to the drive steering committee and to the Pike County Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the April 16-May 12 drive. "This was certainly a citizen's effort, with over half of our population taking an active part in the drive," Judge Rutherford said, adding that he had "never heard of any other county-wide cleanup project netting anywhere near the tonnage and percentage of citizen participation as this drive generated."

The judge asserted that this effort "probably will win top prize in the 1973 Keep America Beautiful competition." The Chamber of Commerce and the Pike fiscal court have jointly entered that contest, said Collett, who also serves as executive director of the Chamber.

A topographic map shows other features besides topography. It is an extremely accurate instrument which indicates the location of highways, 4 WD trails, hiking trails, vegetation, campgrounds, cabins, springs, streams and lakes—all important features to those venturing afield.—SPORTS AFIELD

PG PARENTAL GUIDANCE SUGGESTED

Miss Johnson, Mr. Stephens Wed

In a double-ring ceremony performed June 24 in the Trinity Church of God, Huntington, W. Va., Miss Karen Sue Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Dorothea Young Johnson, 2510 Collis Ave., Huntington, became the bride of Claybourne Fisher Stephens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Claybourne Stephens of Prestonsburg.

The Rev. Fred J. Davey officiated. Mrs. James Cottle, organist, and Dale Albee, soloist, provided wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by a cousin, Bill Harbour. She wore a long-sleeved gown and chapel train of chantilly lace and a Camelot headpiece of Venise lace holding a bouffant tiered veil. She carried a white Bible topped with a cascade of white roses, white miniature carnations and baby's breath.

Miss Linda Stover was maid of honor and Miss Becky Fugate was bridesmaid. Junior bridesmaids were Miss Kelly Harbour, cousin of the bride, and Miss Elizabeth Ann Murphy.

They wore gowns of powder blue chiffon with white tucked organdy bibs edged in Val lace, and carried colonial bouquets of blue and white miniature carnations and baby's breath. The senior attendants wore blue chiffon headpieces and the junior bridesmaids wore headpieces of miniature blue and white carnations.

Miss Heather Wilcox was flower girl and Timmy Albee was ring bearer. Taper lighters were Jimmy Davey and Mark Harbour, cousin of the bride.

Claybourne Stephens was best man for his son, and ushers were Thomas M. Hereford, III, of Prestonsburg, John Porter, of Paintsville, and Wallace Bailey, of Ashland.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church.

Attending the wedding from Prestonsburg were Mr. and Mrs. Claybourne Stephens, Miss Linda Sue Stephens, Misses Linda and Elsie Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hereford, III.

Goins Brothers Play At Smithsonian Fest.

The Goins Brothers, Melvin, of the Middlecreek road, and Ray, of Elkhorn City, left Tuesday for Washington, D. C. where they will perform, July 4, 5, and 6 as part of the Kentucky Folklife Festival. This festival, conducted by the Smithsonian Institution, features various representatives of different aspects of the Commonwealth's folk culture. The Goins Brothers' Bluegrass group will also play at a banquet in honor of Gov. Wendell Ford on Thursday.

The Kentucky Department of Mental Health has initiated a program providing consultation services to law enforcement, judicial and corrections officials and named its first staff member. K. David Jones has been appointed coordinator for the new service in the ten-county Barren River Region. An educational psychologist, Jones will work closely with local officials making available evaluation services for those accused of crimes, assistance in legal competency hearings, recommendations prior to sentencing, advice to juvenile authorities, assistance to parole and probation officers as well as educational activities for law enforcement and court personnel.

Hicks-Connelly

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Hicks, of Langley, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Miss Joan Lynette Hicks, to Mr. Thomas Leo Connelly, Jr., son of Mrs. Laura Connelly Young, of Louisville, and the late Thomas L. Connelly, Sr.

Miss Hicks attended the University of Kentucky and Morehead State University, and is presently employed in Louisville by South Central Bell as a service representative.

Mr. Connelly attended Saint Thomas and graduated from Bellarmine College. He is employed as supervisor of chemical engineers by Rohm and Haas Chemical Company.

The gracious custom of open church will be observed as the wedding vows will be exchanged at Duncan Memorial Chapel in Crestwood, Ky. on July 21 at 4 p.m.

Gov. Wendell Ford has been named "Outstanding Public Citizen" by the Breckinridge chapter of the National Association of Social Workers. The Governor was recognized for his appointment of "professionally qualified commissioners to head every state human service agency," and especially for appointing the first woman social worker, Gail Shuecker, as head of the Department of Economic Security.

Junior Majorette

Eight-year-old Danita Rae Combs, daughter of Herman and Martha Amburgey Combs, of Raven, Ky., is one of 16 Caney junior majorettes. The girls range from the first through the fourth grades and have performed before packed houses of Knott county fans at both grade school and high school basketball games and on occasion at Alice Lloyd College games. The majorettes are sponsored by Patti Rose and Ruth Thornsberry.

Smaller than the brownies, the grizzly rarely exceeds 800 pounds, with a maximum height of eight feet, six inches. Since he is classified as a carnivore, only the grizzly's skull is considered for record. The world record is 26 10-16 inches.—SPORTS AFIELD

Five Floyd county 4-H Club members will be participating in the state 4-H Food and Electric Demonstration contests on the campus of the University of Kentucky, July 5 and 6.

Betsy Layne, boys' electricity; Kathy Hamilton, Ivel, and Peggy Tackett, Harold, girls' electric demonstration. The club members earned the opportunity to compete in the State event by winning both the Floyd County and the Northeast Area contests.

Sandy Area Development District," the engineers state.

- All new facilities constructed in a service area after the establishment of the Water and Sewer Authority for each of the three areas to become the property of the Authority, and the Authority for each area to assume, by purchase agreeable, the assets and obligations of each municipal water and (or) sewage facility, water district or association or private water and sewerage system providing service in the area.
- A land use plan for the entire district, with the formation of a planning and zoning commission to approve and enforce the plan.
- Industrial needs to be fully considered in the future development of water and sewerage systems.

Water recommendations made for Floyd county:

- That the Prestonsburg municipal system increase the capacity of its treatment plant within the next five years from one to three million gallons per day and construct 10-inch mains from Lancer along KY 3 (Bull Creek) to new US 23; also a 10-inch main from the end of the present main to Emma in one direction and in the other from the main near the Highlands Medical Center to connect with the proposed 10-inch main from the Paintsville system at the Floyd-Johnson line.

2. In five to 20 years the 10-inch main at Emma to connect with the Allen system at Dwale and construct a six-inch main up Cow Creek to the Woods community.

3. Consider the proposal of the Beaver Elkhorn Water District to extend water service to Hi Hat, Ligon, Bevinsville, Halo, Bypro, Melvin and Weeksbury.

4. That the Allen Water System should (1) buy water from Beaver Elkhorn or (2) sell to that system.

5. That the Martin Water System double its water storage capacity to 150,000 gallons. Since expansion will be necessary in the 20-year period ahead, the system should consider buying water from the Beaver Elkhorn system or selling to that system, it was suggested.

6. That the Auxier water system should be included in the Prestonsburg system in the next five years.

7. That the Francis Water Company at Garrett be merged with Beaver Elkhorn.

8. That the Beaver Elkhorn system should at the earliest possible date provide water service to Weeksbury and that the existing plant there should not undertake major repairs and renovation.

Sewerage recommendations included in the Bell report are:

- Three sewage treatment plants on the Levisa in this county, at Auxier, Dwale and Tram. Auxier's would serve the area from the northern (lower) city limits of Prestonsburg to the Floyd-Johnson line. Dwale's treatment plant would serve Allen (New and Old), Dwale and the Emma area. The Tram plant would serve Tram, Mare Creek, Justell, Betsy Layne, Harold, Boldman and other scattered community developments.
- Sewage collection facilities for the Bull Creek area in the next five years because of development there.
- Consideration should be given to pumping sewage from Martin to the Allen plant when it is activated because the near no-flow state of Beaver Creek at Martin in the dry season. This was suggested instead of additions to the Martin plant to meet the possible need of greater degree of treatment.

4. Construction in the next five years of a sewage treatment plant at West Garrett to serve Wayland, Glo, Estill, Lackey and the Garrett vicinity. At some later date, it is suggested, sewage from Bosco may be pumped back to the West Garrett plant.

5. Discontinue the 30-year-old Wheelwright sewage treatment plant and construct a new plant during the coming 20-year period in the lower end of Burton. This would also serve Melvin.

The study estimates the cost of making suggested water improvements in Floyd county at $3,590,600 and sewerage plants at $6,981,000. Over the five-county district the water improvements suggested for the same period would cost an estimated $24,137,500, while sewerage treatment would cost $16,876,000.

Water districts listed as in the planning in this county are the Levisa Water Association for the Prater Creek watershed, the Abbott Water Association, the Mountain Parkway Water District the David Water District and the Water Gap-Bull Creek Water District.

Social Security Will Continue To Accept Claims As a Service

Frederick T. Reffett, Social Security manager here, pointed out this week that, although responsibility for administering the Black Lung program was transferred to the U. S. Department of Labor on July 1, social security offices will continue to accept black lung benefit claims as a service to miners and their families.

Under the 1972 amendments to the Black Lung law, the Department of Labor will be responsible for miners' black lung claims filed on or after July 1. Money to pay the benefits will continue to come from federal general revenues through 1973; beginning in 1974, benefits and payments for medical treatment will be paid by those coal mine operators who are found liable for them under the law.

The timetable is a bit different for Labor's takeover of claims by survivors of miners who have died, but most of these claims also will be under Department of Labor jurisdiction by January 1, 1974. There is one exception: if a miner is receiving black lung benefits from the Social Security Administration at his death, any benefits due his survivors may also be paid by SSA, no matter when the death occurs.

The Social Security Administration will be responsible for payment of any benefits due in black lung claims filed and determined eligible before July 1. These new claims, like those which are already being paid, will remain under Social Security jurisdiction; they will not be transferred to the Department of Labor, now will they become the financial responsibility of coal mine operators.

As a convenience to applicants, social security offices will continue to receive black lung claims, and will forward them to the Department of Labor for action and decision.

"At the Prestonsburg social security office we will continue to answer questions about the Black Lung benefits," Mr. Reffett said, "but I realize that some people will now have questions about the future, not the present program. I suggest that anyone who has a question about the new arrangement should write the Director, Division of Coal Mine Workers' Compensation, Employee Standards Administration, U. S. Department of Labor, Washington, D. C. 20210."

It was these Tories who wined and dined Sir Henry Clinton, the British commander, in New York while those who were foolish enough to rebel were starving and freezing at Valley Forge. Traitors, these Tories? They were loyal to the government, they assured themselves and others; it was those rebels who were the traitors.

And Patrick Henry? A hothead and a loudmouth. "Give me liberty or give me death" didn't thrill a lot of folks, those days. He and his ilk, many said, were tearing the country apart, destroying the economy, laying the land open to retaliation from the most powerful empire on earth.

So went the reasoning of lovers of the easy chair.

But there were those who counted the cost, looked the grim future in the eye—and never looked back.

So it went, this revolutionary movement that today finds us rejoicing in the daring and the patriotism of those who made of this fourth day of July more than a mere date on the calendar and this country more than a territorial vassal. Somebody has said, "All that is needed for tyranny to reign is for good men to remain silent."

Who's a Tory now?

THE DARK PLOT

If you will bear in mind that the "o" in the key word is to be pronounced long-o, you will get the point of this lie which is more euphemistically known as an anecdote.

This Polish woman had married a Yank and was living in the United States, having troubles with the language and, maybe, some with her husband. Anyway, she turned up at police headquarters one day to report:

"My hussban' he gonna do away with me."

The police sergeant asked why she thought so.

"Becauss," she said, "I see him buying a can which said, 'Polish Remover.'"

Ugh.

DOOR TROUBLE

I have suffered some wrist damage at various times over the last two years, trying to get out of the courthouse here, and at long last rise to make a remark or so. You go in by pulling the right side of the door. You leave, if you will keep your mind on your business and concentrate, by pushing the left side. Trouble is, I hit the wrong side.

Mark Twain once wrote about a rhyme running through his head to the clackety-click of the wheels of the train which he was riding. While he watched the conductor, the words kept running over and over in his mind:

"Punch, brother, punch, punch, with care, Punch in the presence of the passengaire."

This door thing almost got me in the same frame of mind, and I started out: "Pull on the right, Push on the left . . ." and then the muse fled as I had a practical idea: Why in the mischief doesn't somebody put up a sign?

IT HAS ITS POINTS

There is scarcely anything that is an unmixed blessing or curse. Take the Japanese beetle, for instance. Abhorred by gardeners, devourer of growing things, it would seem a blight to make a Pharaoh blanch. But it has its points. Ask Neil Allen. He fished a Dewey Lake hole with the critters as bait, the other day, and the bluegill greeted them with open mouths, if not open arms.

supervised study period and a recreation period.

Registration will be held on the opening day of the program, July 9, but parents may pre-register their children by calling the MCCC Outpatient Clinic, 886-3893.

Enrollment is limited to 12 students, and transportation must be provided by the parents.

In asking bids from those who would construct a building Social Security requires 4,000 square feet of workable space on one floor, all utilities furnished and janitorial services performed by the owner. But it proposes a lease of only five years, with a guarantee of staying three years.

The new bids are to be opened at 4 p.m., July 9.

The apparent rivalry between Prestonsburg and Paintsville may break a pattern of cooperation in recent years. One business leader here voiced fear that the competition may work to the detriment of the Big Sandy Area Development District which has allied five counties in an attempt at cooperative effort toward community improvement.

Work, which has been slowed by wet weather, is nearing completion on new riding trails, and the concession will be open soon to bidders. Homer D. Neeley, who has operated the riding stables since they were introduced to the park, decided this year not to seek renewal of his concession lease because of the abbreviated season.

Josiah "Buzz" Ryland, who for the last two months has been assistant manager at Jenny Wiley, has been transferred to Buckhorn State Park where he is scheduled to be manager. Mr. Ryland came here from Lake Barkley, where he was assistant manager.

Ground Broken for New Church

ATTORNEY GENERAL RULES ON COMPULSORY RETIREMENT

The office of the Kentucky Attorney General recently issued an opinion clarifying state laws on compulsory retirement policies for teachers. Asst. Attorney General Carl Miller said, "It is our opinion that it is in the legal discretion of the board of education to adopt a policy of compulsory retirement at age 65 or at any age between 65 and 70." A teachers' continuing service, contract, according to state law, terminates at age 65. Unless a school district's policy states otherwise, a teacher between the ages of 65 and 70 may be employed on a limited contract.

First Statewide Conference On Government Issues Held

More than 500 mayors, city and county clerks, and county judges, as well as members of the Kentucky General Assembly, met with state officials here at the Galt House, Louisville, recently for a conference on local government issues. The conference, the first of its kind in Kentucky, was sponsored by the Office for Local Government, a division of the Executive Department for Finance and Administration. Co-sponsors included the Kentucky City Managers Association, the Kentucky County Judges' Association, Kentucky Council of Area Development Districts and the Kentucky Municipal League.

The statewide training conference presented a forum for local officials to discuss the broad range of problems encountered in the daily operation of government services.

According to Margaret Le Bus, OLG official, "the conference gave our staff a chance to meet many of the local officials that we regularly correspond with."

Sessions dealt with revenue sources, budgeting, small community planning, and possible revisions for state law government planning, zoning and annexation.

A regional approach to problems cutting across political boundaries was the topic of other sessions. These concentrated on the multi-county services now in existence and on other services which could be multi-county in scope. Among these were the potential for regional housing authorities, regional water and sewer authorities, solid waste systems, industrial development funds and policing.

In addition to the exchange of ideas and the many speeches during the conference, there was a display of publications featuring materials from 14 agencies at both the state and federal level.

Speaking at the opening day's luncheon session, Gov. Wendell Ford said the officials assembled were "the most representative group of individuals to meet in the common cause of improving government responsiveness to the citizens."

According to Mrs. Nancy Black, coordinator of the conference, "it was a major success." She added that those persons who attended the conference were "concerned about the issues and solving the problems."

Care Center Grant Of $35,000 Is Made

Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, the Big Sandy regional mental health agency, was informed last Thursday by the regional office of Health Education and Welfare in Atlanta that it had been awarded a $35,000 continuation grant for its adult activities program in Pike county.

The grant for fiscal 1973-'74 will permit the training program for retarded adults to continue in its fourth year. The Pike county program includes training in arts and crafts, horticulture, socialization and academics for developmentally disabled adults 18 years of age and older.

In announcing the HEW award, O. T. Dorton, regional Mental Health Board president, acknowledged the splendid work being done by program supervisor, Mrs. Glenda Larson, and her staff. The funds for this continuation grant were awarded through the federal Developmental Disabilities Services Act. Richard Stai, executive director of Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, said that four of the region's five counties now have adult activity programs and that grant application has been made for a similar program in Johnson county.

Sports Afield

By Ted Kesting

Robert O'Byrne, Travel Editor of Sports Afield, says he likes fishing for smallmouth bass in the Buffalo River and for rainbow and brown trout in the White River in north-central Arkansas on the Missouri border near Bull Shoals. Such river trips represent a glorious opportunity to enjoy a leisurely wilderness experience combined with some of the finest bass and trout fishing to be found in our country.

Picture yourself comfortably relaxed in a deck chair aboard a 20-foot flat-bottomed johnboat, as you drift along with the current enjoying the magnificent scenery and solitude for which the Ozarks are famed. Everything has been taken care of by your guide; you need only sit back and enjoy this unique experience.

It is suggested that you travel the White River from the dam at Bull Shoals downstream for about 60 miles. Travel the Buffalo River from Ponca to Buffalo City, at the junction of the White River, about 119 miles.

If you want to arrive at the starting point of your trip by air, the nearest airport is at Harrison, Arkansas. Harrison is reached by Frontier Air Lines out of Dallas, Texas; Little Rock, Arkansas, and St. Louis, Missouri. Car rental is available through Thrifty.

The White River has cold water the year-round, which comes from the bottom of the dam at Bull Shoals. Therefore, the fishing for trout is year-round, with the most enjoyable months March through October. The Buffalo is a warm-water stream; the fishing for smallmouth is best from April to June.

Recommended places to stay in Bull Shoals include: Anglers Resort, Gaston's White River Resort and the Imperial Resort. The Bull Shoals area is the ideal headquarters for making these river-fishing trips. However, accommodations can be found at the following nearby towns in Arkansas: Lake View, Flippin, Cotter, Gassville, Mountain Home and Yellville.

It is possible to camp in many of these Bull Shoals areas. All of the accommodations given for the Bull Shoals areas have boat rentals. Launching sites are indicated under the symbol Public Access on the free map of the White River. Guide service is also available at a number of places listed, and they will set up float trips for one day or more. Float trips of several days on either the White River or the Buffalo cost about $30 per day per person. This includes boat, guide, camping equipment, and setting up campsite, food and even fishing tackle if you forgot yours.

Braniff Air Lines offers a complete fly-in package from many points in the U. S. Tour begins with a reception at Harrison Arkansas, thence transportation to Gaston's Resort. The first night is spent at the resort, fishing the second day, and camp is set up on the river the second night. Fishing the third day and then transportation back to Gaston's with overnight there. Package includes all meals, camping equipment, boat, tackle and guides. Total cost per person, when at least three people make the trip, $150 per person.

Report Shortages Of Fuel Supplies, Farmers Are Asked

Farmers are being asked by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to report critical shortages of fuel, immediately, to their local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Office, according to Harry T. Hill, chairman of the Floyd County ASC Committee.

The USDA has been working cooperatively with other agencies of government, agricultural suppliers of fuel, and other interested groups to identify potential problem areas and to provide solutions before the problem becomes critical. It is imperative that farmers lend their support to this effort. If a fuel supply problem cannot be resolved locally or at the state level, the shortage will be reported immediately to Washington, D. C. There it will be brought to the attention of the Office of Oil and Gas (OOG) in the Department of Interior.

Invitation to Bid

The Floyd County Board of Education will offer to the lowest and or best sealed bidder, until Noon, July 7, 1973, the following:

ITEM I. School maintenance and building supplies. For detailed list, contact George E. Allen, Maintenance Supervisor, Floyd County Board of Education, Allen, Kentucky.

ITEM III. A. General Supplies, brooms, mops, tissue, paper towels, etc.; B. Custodial Supplies - soaps, (hand and scrub), disinfectant, wax, wax stripper, etc.; C. Lighting—fluorescent and incandescent.

Retiring Librarian "Keeps Trying"

By BONNI BROCKMAN
FRANKFORT, Ky.—The secret of State Librarian Margaret Willis' success? She keeps trying.

Through thick and thin, through building expansion and library fund cuts, Miss Willis said she had "just kept working. Talking doesn't do much to help."

Miss Willis plans to keep working even after her July 1 retirement. She will assist her successor, Charles Franklin Hinds, by directing the library's field services until the end of January.

"I believe we're poised at a point where we can either go way ahead or go backwards," Miss Willis said of the state library system.

"Going ahead" has been the direction for the system since Miss Willis began serving as state librarian in 1962. Her accomplishments include:

—expanding the bookmobile service from a few converted panel trucks to the nation's largest fleet of specially equipped traveling libraries.

—developing the federally funded Kentucky Library Communications Network, where requests for certain books are channeled from a regional library to the main department in Frankfort by mail, telephone or a teletypewriter machine.

—developing the Department of Libraries in Frankfort into the headquarters for 16 regional library systems throughout Kentucky.

—beginning book services to institutions, including hospitals and prisons.

—renovating or building libraries in many Kentucky counties.

"I just kept trying, that's all," Miss Willis said. "I'm just a homey, old gal."

Miss Willis has campaigned for funds for library expansion, buildings, renovation, supplies, and bookmobiles. She also won passage of local taxes for library services by campaigning across the state.

Born in St. Louis in 1906, she received a B. A. from the city's Washington University and a master of library science degree from the St. Louis Library School. She was a book reviewer for the American Library Association in Chicago from 1935 to 1940, when she became a U. S. Army librarian at Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

She was head of the Louisville Free Public Library's Circulation Department from 1943 to 1954. Miss Willis was named coordinator of the state's Library Extension Division in 1955. She became director of the division in 1957 and was named state librarian when the division gained departmental status in 1962.

A former president of the Kentucky Library Association, her affiliations include membership in the American Library Association, the Southeastern Library Association and the Kentucky Historical Society.

"I'm getting old and I'm getting tired," Miss Willis said, "I need to give this job to someone with plenty of pep. I'm very pleased the Governor has chosen Charlie Hinds."

Hinds, 49, has been director of libraries at Murray State University for the past six years. A Henderson native, he formerly has served as director of both the Kentucky Historical Society and the state archives.

In announcing Hinds' appointment, Gov. Wendell Ford said: "Kentucky is indebted to Miss Willis for her outstanding service to the residents of this state, for it was under her capable leadership that the Kentucky library system has reached the level of success for which it is recognized today."

Martin Co. Better Roads Group To Help or Fight Gov. Ford

By KATHY KARCH
 (In The Herald-Dispatch)
 INEZ, Ky.—A group of Martin county residents, banding together to form the "Better Roads for Martin County" club is raising money "either to help Gov. Ford or work against him."

The group has mailed a letter to Kentucky's governor Wendell Ford stating they "are tired of being the underdogs" when the state funds for roads improvement are meted out.

"For years we were walking and wading mud holes to get to our work and the grocery, taking our sick in boats across Tug River to cars to go to the doctor," the letter stated.

The group charges the road between Lovely in Martin county and the Pike county line—Ky. 292—has been torn up by coal trucks "until you are risking your lives to travel it at any speed."

The group is asking the governor to "suppose there was a major mine disaster" and "suppose it was a matter of life and death to get to the hospital (at South Williamson) in minutes."

Club members report in the letter that "just recently there have been three deaths that the doctor's at South Williamson think could have been prevented if the victims could have gotten to the hospital sooner. Ambulances shy away from serving the area since this road is so bad," they claim.

The letter reminds the governor that "you got the highest vote at our precinct, which is Emily, than you got anywhere in Martin county, but you are ignoring us." The group charges that the Republicans also ignored Martin countians.

"But remember this and remember it well," the letter warns. "If this road is not paved before school starts, there will be no children from this route attending school."

"The group challenges Gov. Ford to "travel our roads and see if you blame us."

Group members, including president

Preston Howard and vice-president Clyde Robinette, say the damage to the 18 mile stretch can be laid at the feet of coal truck drivers but are well aware that the coal companies are the major and, for the most part, only economy in Martin county.

Others say the roads were poorly built originally and any type of traffic would have led to damage.

A Kentucky Bureau of Highways official, Gail Mullins, district engineer at Pikeville, said earlier this month portions of the road will be resurfaced this summer, but added "the road was not in that bad a condition."

Mullins also said the state offices are considering conducting additional work on the road next year.

In the meantime, Martin countians are raising funds to achieve their goal. Other officers of the group include Gladys Calloway, secretary, and Della Marcum, treasurer.

Chronic Sufferers From Kidney Disease To Get Medicare Aid

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare last week released interim regulations under which it will begin to administer the chronic kidney disease provision of the Social Security Amendments of 1972.

"On July 1, 1973, virtually all persons under 65 with chronic kidney disease will become eligible for all Medicare benefits, including payment for dialysis and transplantation," HEW Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said. "In the past, the high cost of these life-saving procedures has prevented many persons from benefiting from them, and brought tremendous financial hardship to others."

It is estimated that approximately 13,000 persons will be eligible for these benefits at the end of this year, and 8,000 to 10,000 persons annually thereafter. Department officials have projected the cost for the first year to be about $250 million. The funds are derived from Social Security taxes and are included in the Social Security Trust Fund.

Kentuckians to the End

By BETTY ELLISON

In that jubilant, terrible April of 1865, Abraham Lincoln had gathered around him men who shared his Kentucky roots and ties.

A desperate Civil War was over, soldiers in Blue and Gray were going home, and there was a nation to lace back together.

Then, on a spring night, a mad actor put a bullet into the President's head.

One man from Kentucky would forever curse himself for not being at Lincoln's side at Ford's Theater on that Good Friday. Another Kentuckian would seriously bend the law to prosecute members of the assassination conspiracy before a military court.

Among the President's last appointments that day was the man who lugged rails Lincoln had split into the convention hall four years earlier, and who coined the phrase, "The Rail-Splitter Candidate." That was Maj. Gen. Richard J. Oglesby, of Oldham county, Kentucky.

Keeping the death vigil at the Petersen House (where the wounded Lincoln was carried, across the street from the theater) was his attorney general, James Speed, of Louisville, who sadly left the room where his leader and friend lay dying and went into the back parlor to write the Vice-President that he should prepare himself to take the presidential oath in a matter of hours.

In the front parlor a Kentuckian stood by, helpless, as he watched Mary Todd Lincoln crumble under the crushing blow she had just received. In a lonely cabin, far away, sat an elderly lady whom Abraham Lincoln called "Mother," who found no surprise in the news of the shooting of her stepson.

Surprise might have been eliminated from the attack on the President had Ward Hill Lamon been present, instead of a guard who had been discharged from the Washington police force and who had left his duty post to watch the play.

A handsome, swashbuckling man, Lamon studied law in Louisville in the 1840's and later became Lincoln's circuit-riding law partner in Illinois. He was selected to accompany Lincoln to Washington in 1861, was responsible for the President's safety during the secret journey from Harrisburg to Washington amid assassination plots and later was appointed marshal of the District of Columbia.

In 1864, when threats against the President's life ran rampant, Lamon would often roll his six-foot-two-frame in a blanket and sleep on the floor outside Lincoln's door at the White House. But on the night of April 14 he was on assignment in Richmond, Virginia.

There is little doubt that Lamon would have attempted to break John Wilkes Booth in half had he been in the President's company that night. Once, after a street disturbance, Lincoln remarked to Lamon, "When you have occasion to strike a man, don't hit him with your fist; strike him with a club or crowbar or something that won't kill him."

Another lawyer, who had also studied in Louisville, felt his presence at the theater might have helped change history. "If I had been in the box, I would have grabbed the assassin by the neck and choked him to death," said Major General Oglesby, who was still carrying a bullet in his chest from the battle of Corinth.

Oglesby was born in Kentucky, where his father was a slaveowner and a member of the legislature. He would long remember the cheerful parting from Lincoln after his appointment in the President's office that afternoon, and how pleased Lincoln was that Oglesby had been elected governor of Illinois. It was Oglesby's imagination and inventiveness that made the split rail a symbol of Lincoln's candidacy and helped him win the nomination. Oglesby was among those Kentuckians who kept the bedside vigil.

Attorney General James Speed, as Kentucky as they come, grew up in Louisville in the family home, "Farmington," and was educated at St. Joseph's College in Bardstown and Transylvania University in Lexington. Serving in the Kentucky legislature, he found that his firm anti-slavery attitude hampered his political career.

His brother Joshua Fry Speed was perhaps Lincoln's most intimate friend, with a devotion that began in a store loft and ended at a catafalque in the White House. When Lincoln was much concerned about the possibility of the well-armed Kentucky State Guard, under Simon Bolivar Buckner, going over to the Southern cause, he sent William Nelson, formerly of Maysville and a naval commander, on a vital mission to see Joshua Speed.

A secret meeting was organized by Joshua in 1861, at the Capital Hotel in Frankfort, with loyal Union supporters, and he outlined a plan for distributing 10,000 "Lincoln" guns to the proper hands—guns that are credited with helping to hold Kentucky in the Union.

Lincoln remarked of James Speed, when he appointed him attorney general, "An honest man and a gentleman, and one of those well-poised men, not too common here, who are not spoiled by a big office." It was Speed who handed down the opinion that the alleged assassins should receive a military trial, rather than a civil one, as the head of the United States Army and Navy had been shot while the nation was still partially at war.

Prosecutor at the assassins' trial was Joseph Holt, whom Lincoln had appointed judge advocate general of the Department of the Army. Holt, too, was thoroughly Kentucky; he was born in Breckinridge County, educated at St. Joseph's in Bardstown and Centre College in Danville, had opened a law office in Elizabethtown with the famed Ben Hardin and spent a year as an editor on the Louisville Advertiser. After his appointment, Holt developed the military commission so that persons and offenses not subject to the jurisdiction of courts martial could be tried by a military body.

Perhaps loyalty to his fallen leader, plus the constant push of the obsessed secretary of war, Edwin M. Stanton, caused Holt to take legal shortcuts in the trial of the accused conspirators. Later, Holt would be accused of suppressing evidence, such as Booth's diary, and failing to inform the commission of President Andrew Johnson's recommendation of clemency for Mrs. Mary Surratt — only women conspirator who was hanged.

Mary Todd Lincoln, born in Lexington where she spent her girlhood, was removed from the small bedroom, begging to die with her husband, on the orders of Stanton. Attempting to console her in the front parlor was John Blair Smith Todd, born in Kentucky four years earlier than Mary, his first cousin. Todd felt then that Mary Lincoln was already "Bowed to the very dust under the weight of her bereavement," and he could do very little to help except remain in her presence.

Another woman felt keenly the grief she had predicted when Lincoln bade her farewell before going to Washington. Sarah Bush Lincoln probably contributed more to Abraham Lincoln's life than any other woman. It was she who saw that little Abe was scrubbed clean and had fresh clothes and a warm home with plenty of food, and who convinced her husband that he should allow his son time to read and study.

Sarah Bush Johnson, who lived in Elizabethtown at the time of her marriage to Thomas Lincoln, felt an immediate intellectual kinship (although she could neither read nor write) with her stepson.

Dennis Hanks, Lincoln's cousin, carried the news of the President's death to her. Sarah replied, "Yes, I know, Denny, I knowed they'd kill him. I ben awaiting fur it."

Where will this bass be without more electric power?

DEAD.

But he's alive... thanks partly to sewage treatment plants that keep millions of tons of man-made pollutants from entering our rivers, lakes and streams. Many more plants like these that help keep his environment clean and our drinking water safe are needed to do an even better clean-up job. Our job is to produce and deliver the millions of kilowatts of electricity required to operate these and other industrial waste water treatment plants. It's a job we're trying hard to do... and with minimum effect on the environment. It all takes electricity... lots of it. When you stop to think about it, electricity is the key to cleaning up our rivers, lakes and streams.

What Is A Hillbilly?

By JAMES R. COMSTOCK

(Editor, The West Virginia Hillbilly)
A Hillbilly is someone who can't look out his window without seeing the big hills and feeling small and big at the same time, because of them.

He's somebody with a heritage of independence because—cut off from other people by the mountains—he had to make it by himself; someone stubborn and tenacious because he's learned, that while faith can move a mountain, it might take a little time.

He's friendly because mountains teach that there are more people—and that if your closest friends are both sides of a mountain distant, they're better held on to than fought with. And he's industrious; even being lazy in mountain country can work a man pretty hard.

He's somebody who knows that only God can make a tree—and figures that if He troubled to make a whole state of forested mountains, that state must be specially blessed.

A West Virginia hillbilly is a man with wealth under foot, wealth towering over his head, and only the beauty all around him coming easy. He has his trouble but plenty of toughness and faith to stick it out, sometimes looking poorer than he feels.

And have you noticed, those who came here are as proud as most deep rooted of us, to be known as hillbillies?

Stubborn hillbillies tended and tamed these mountains, with patience and faith. Why not give that stubborn, tenacious, independent hillbilly—the real backbone of all of us—credit for what he laid the foundation of? Let's hope we all have the guts to live up to him, facing the wonderful favorable odds his grit preserved for us. Take away his name and you take away the credit from him.

Somebody asked George Washington what he'd do if it looked as if he were losing the war. He said "Give me but a banner to plant upon the mountains of West Augusta"—their name for this area in Washington's day—"and I will gather around me the men who will lift our bleeding country from the dust and get her free."

He knew hillbillies.

LEE ROBERTS EXPRESSES HIS GRATITUDE TO THE VOTERS OF FLOYD COUNTY IN LEGISLATIVE DISTRICT NO. 94

I want to say "Thanks" to the people in Floyd County who gave me their support in the recent Primary election. Without your overwhelming vote of confidence I would not have been successful. I shall ever remember this.

Although I live in Pike County and a very small part of the district is in your county, you may be sure that every consideration will be shown to you if I am elected in November. I will stand ready at all times—day or night—to listen to your problems and provide the very best representation within my limitations.

Thanks, again! And I hope to see you during the November campaign.

Sincerely Yours,

LEE ROBERTS

Hall-Moore Vows Exchanged

The wedding of Miss Sheila Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ishmael Hall, Weeksbury, Ky., and Edward Moore, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Bascom Moore, Price, Ky., took place at 3 p.m. Saturday, June 16, in the Methodist Church, Wheelwright. The double-ring candlelight ceremony was conducted by Bennie Blankenship, pastor of the Prestonsburg Church of Christ.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin covered with lace, with an oval neckline and wrist-length sleeves. The A-line skirt was of scattered lace appliques, and was designed with a chapel-length train. She carried a cascade of baby sweetheart roses on a white Bible.

The maid-of-honor was Miss Shirley Hall, twin sister of the bride, who wore an orange dress with matching headpiece and carried a nosegay of sweetheart roses.

The bridesmaids, Miss Carol Little,

Miss Kay Hall and Miss Rosemary Little, all of Weeksbury, wore empire-waist dresses of pink, blue and yellow, with matching veils and carried one rose with matching streamers.

Angela Hall, Columbus, Ohio and Tammy Marcum, of Prestonsburg, served as flower girls. Each wore pink, flowered dresses. Kenneth Edward Hall, Columbus, Ohio, was ring-bearer, organist was Miss Kathy Mullins, Melvin, Ky.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Lottie Hall, wore a blue and tan dress with a corsage of carnations. The grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Flora Little, wore a blue dress and a corsage of carnations.

Scott Moore, of Prestonsburg, brother of the groom, served as best man. Ushers were Chipper Hanger, Wheelwright, Rondall Lawson, Prestonsburg, and Archie Horn, McDowell.

The newlyweds are now making their home at Prestonsburg.

KEA Says House Restoration Of Funds Heartening To Teachers

Kentucky teachers now on notice that they won't be rehired next year unless federal education funds are restored can take heart from overwhelming passage of the fiscal 1974 appropriations bill by the U. S. House of Representatives, says the Kentucky Education Association (KEA).

Dr. J. M. Dodson, KEA executive secretary, said the large margin by which the bill passed—347 to 59—was highly encouraging. House action was taken in spite of repeated warnings that President Nixon would veto the bill, which now goes to the Senate.

Dodson said if Kentucky teachers are active enough in talking to the public and to their U. S. representatives and senators about the damaging effect a federal-aid cutback would have on the state's schools the President may change his mind about a veto or a veto could be overridden by Congress.

KEA has been pushing hard for continuation and expansion of federal funding, giving strong support to efforts led by U. S. Rep. Carl Perkins of Kentucky, chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee.

Last month KEA president Mrs. Louise Hite of Middlesboro warned that the state's schoolchildren stand to lose many basic instructional programs if federal spending cuts proposed by the Nixon Administration go through.

Perkins has expressed confidence that Title I and other federal aid programs will be financed in time for school operations this fall, saying, "I can assure our teachers in Kentucky that they'll be taken care of. If they stick with us, they'll have jobs next fall."

As approved by the House the appropriations bill would appropriate $32.7 billion to operate the Departments of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare for fiscal 1974, which begins July 1. President Nixon had asked for $31.5 billion.

Increases approved by the House would restore spending levels for programs cut by the Nixon Administration to fiscal 1973 amounts.

The major increases in the bill were for education programs, including a $549 million boost in the impacted aid program that provides funds to school districts with heavy concentrations of children of federal employees and a $225 million boost in the program for educationally deprived children. The total for the latter program was raised to $1.8 billion.

"Where Confidence Gets Business and Satisfaction Keeps It"

What To Do In July

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD

Although summer begins in June, the season reaches its full maturity in July and in the heat of the burning sun, the vegetation begins to lose some of the lush freshness and greenness of spring.

With proper care and cultivation, however, flowers and vegetables thrive. Green beans, cucumbers, tomatoes, and plump roasting ears begin to ripen. The air is filled with the hum of insects and animated by birds darting everywhere in search of food. Nasturtiums, dahlias, and poppies bloom; butterflies hover over wayside flowers; and over all is a sense of abundant life.

This month, despite the heat that may at times be oppressive, the lawn, garden, and flower bed must still be maintained. We must still mow, water, and weed. If sufficient rainfall is lacking, deep watering and high mowing will be necessary to keep a pretty lawn. In the vegetable garden, cultivation, although it helps conserve moisture in the soil, will not take the place of watering. Much cultivation and watering can be avoided by mulching which not only inhibits weed growth, but also keeps the soil cool and moist. Moisture is a great temperature regulator and mulch acts as a parasol and an insulating seal that admits air but, in turn, keeps out excess heat.

In doing garden work in July, it will be well to take some time out to reread garden bulletins studied earlier. This will refresh the memory on the types and best methods of using mulch and on how and when to irrigate. If you need other bulletins or special advice on garden problems, talk to your county Extension agent.

Although by July many gardeners feel they have done enough planting for the season, late vegetable crops taste mighty good and come in handy.

For those interested in late vegetables, sweet corn can be planted during the early day of the month. Silver Queen, a white variety, and Burpee's Honeycross, which is yellow, can be planted in early July and make excellent late roasting ears.

Bunch or bush beans can be planted up until mid-July, and beets, carrots, and turnips can be planted during the last days of the month. Hold off, though, on planting Bibb lettuce and kale until August.

Other things to do or think about in July: sow coreopsis seed, purchase flowering bulbs for fall planting, get after crab grass, and pick blackberries. Also, on the theory that it is better to live rich than die rich, a farmer or gardener can live richer and probably longer if, in July, he will take some time off from mulching, spraying, and watering to enjoy corn on the cob—eat cold watermelon—visit one or more of the UK Agricultural Experiment Stations—attend farm field days—go bluegill fishing in the farm pond—drink plenty of good cold lemonade—sit on the back porch at night and listen to the whippoorwills—and doze for about 30 minutes at noontime each day in a hammock out under the maples.

All these things come highly recommended by medical, as well as agricultural science, and, as statisticians say and prove by their figures, people who live on the farm and follow such procedures have a longer life expectancy than people of many other professions.

Medicare Premium Rolled Back by 'Freeze'

The monthly premium for Medicare medical insurance, scheduled to be increased in July, has been rolled back in keeping with President Nixon's 60-day price freeze policy, according to Fred Reffett, Social Security manager, here.

"The higher amount will continue to be charged until the premium record for each beneficiary can be corrected," Reffett said. "Refunds in full will be made at a later date. This also applies to railroad beneficiaries and Civil Service annuitants who pay premiums for medical insurance under Medicare."

Medicare medical insurance helps pay for doctor bills and many other medical expenses of almost everyone 65 or over and disabled people under 65 who have been eligible for monthly Social Security disability payments for two years or more.

Our Native Americans are on the move to claim their fair share of America's tourist industry. Most Indian reservations are now opening up vast new hunting and fishing areas for non-Indians, implementing effective programs of wildlife management and constructing modern campgrounds, motels and other facilities required by visiting sportsmen and their families.—SPORTS AFIELD

IN MEMORIAM

In loving, but sad memory of our dear son and brother, Homer Conn, who passed away one year ago, July 1, 1972, but it seems like only yesterday. He lived in Elton, Maryland at that time, had lived there for the past 15 years. He would write or call home often, and we miss his letters and talking to him on the phone so much. He only got to come home but once a year but he always seemed so happy to be home for a few days. Sometimes he would stay for a week or two. Our many friends and wonderful neighbors helped us so much through our sorrow. Homer was loved by everyone who knew him. Now he has gone on home and has paid his debt here, one that we will all have to pay, sooner or later. We think of you, Homer, and will always miss you. We loved you so much.

Your loving Mom and Dad

Mormon Church Introduce 'Family Home Evening'

In a time when crime and juvenile delinquency are increasing, when social and political issues match father against son, mother against daughters and divorce courts find their ugly responsibilities growing, the Mormon Church looks to the family for peace and tranquility.

Members of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) have devised a unique way of bringing the family together at least one night a week. They call it "Family Home Evening." The program is a practical thing where communication is open, where active participation by all family members is encouraged and where families can learn and share and grow together.

Curtis Miller, who presides over Mormon church activities in the area, said, "The Family Home Evening program is an invaluable opportunity for families to unite themselves, to bridge generation gaps, and to maintain communication between parents and children."

The church has assigned elder Ken Angle and Elder Roland Amundson to the congregation in Martin.

Cook Announces Training Grant

A grant of $33,487 by the Appalachian Regional Commission to equip and operate a training program for the mentally retarded in Floyd, Johnson, Pike, Magoffin and Martin counties was announced last week by Senator Marlow Cook.

The program, to be based in Prestonsburg, will provide pre-vocational and vocational training in agricultural and horticultural areas under the Kentucky Bureau of Vocational Education.

The ARC grant is only a part of the overall cost of the project. In addition to this grant, a grant in the same amount will be made under the federal Development Disability Service Act, and $112,178 will be funded from local sources, Senator Cook said.

Some training work in the area has already been begun, with the Johnson county "Greenhouse Project" the forerunner of what hopefully will be done in both agriculture and horticulture.

A bill has been introduced in the U. S. House of Representatives which would provide $1 billion annually to parochial and private schools through federal income tax credits. The bill, H. R. 49, would pay half of nonpublic school tuition up to a maximum of $200 per year per student. The Supreme Court's rulings on tax credit parochial laws will have an important bearing on the bill's development in Congress.

Council Slates Annual Meet

About 500 persons from seven states are expected to meet July 27-29 for the 61st annual conference of the Council of the Southern Mountains, Inc. "Building Appalachia" is the theme of the week-end meeting to be held at Emory and Henry College, Emory, Va.

For the past three years the annual meetings of the Council have seen hundreds of mountain people working together to find ways to solve pressing problems in the Appalachian region.

"We Take Control" is the theme of a panel discussion which will begin the three main events on Saturday. Discussion will be about efforts to build strong bases of economic and political power. Featured speakers are from three organizations: Save Our Cumberland Mountains, a group of people from five coal counties in Tennessee who are organizing around issues of unfair taxes and strip mining; Citizens for Social and Economic Justice, a broad-based group in Dickenson, Scott, Lee and Wise counties, Virginia, which includes people from at least 1,000 families who work on such local issues as public assistance, black lung, veterans' benefits, school facilities, and a food co-op; and the United Mine Workers of America, a union which is currently being reformed from its locals and district levels to its international office.

"Providing Our Own Services" is the theme of a second panel which will emphasize efforts by local organizations to provide needed services in their own communities. Speakers will represent Model Valley Industrial Development Corporation, a non-profit community development corporation in Tennessee and Kentucky; West Virginia Welfare Rights Organization, a union of poor people in West Virginia which educates and organizes around issues of welfare, medical, school, government, and other "social services" programs; and the Mud Creek Health Project, a community clinic started by poor people in Floyd county to provide needed local health care.

NWF Sues Morton Over Mine Plans

A coalition of conservation groups, including the National Wildlife Federation, has filed suit against Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton and the heads of eight other Federal agencies to require them to publicly disclose their plans to authorize the massive strip mining and development of the North-Central U. S.

"We're not against the wise development of these resources," explained Tom Kimball, executive vice president of the NWF. "But we are dead set against turning our last great open spaces into a slum because we wouldn't plan ahead."

Joint industry-Federal government studies have recently predicted the new coal-based power complex throughout the rolling plains of eastern Montana and Wyoming, parts of Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, and the Dakotas. More than 50,000 megawatts of electricity—more power than presently produced in Japan, Germany, or Great Britain—are planned for output from the huge development.

The massive project will require the diversion of entire river flows, including use of 2.6 million acre-feet of Yellowstone Basin water, strip-mining of over 900 square miles of land, and construction of over 40 giant coal-fired power plants, coal-gasification and liquefaction facilities, many of which will be three and one-half times as large as the controversial "Four Corners" plant near Farmington, N. M.

Also proposed are thousands of miles of transmission lines requiring up to 20 acres of right-of-way per mile to get the electricity to midwestern and Pacific Coast cities and hundreds of miles of new railways. Besides the obvious potential environmental problems, conservationists have expressed concern over the economic and social impacts of the project, including a projected rapid ten-fold population increase with accompanying cities on the present sparsely-populated rural country.

The federal government holds the key to the development through the many permits, licenses and approvals it must give for individual industry actions. Approximately 70 percent of the rich and accessible coal deposits of the West is owned by the Federal government.

"The problem," according to Kimball, "is that the government has simply not put its plans out on the table. Unless we can see them, we have little confidence that the government really has the handle on this thing or whether it has really studied the best ways to go about it."

"In fact," he added, "we're concerned that they might not even have a plan at all."

The June 13 legal action was filed in the U. S. District Court for the District of Columbia. Besides the NWF, other conservation organizations joining in the suit include the Sierra Club, the Northern Plains Resource Council and several state conservation organizations.

Say Pond Hazards Demand Precaution; 21 Ponds in County

Warm summer weather and the fishing season invites swimmers and fishermen to many of Floyd county's 150 ponds, according to Jimmy D. Jones, who is assisting USDA-Soil Conservation Service (SCS) activities working out of the Prestonsburg field office.

Swimming and fishing are popular uses of many ponds, but these activities bring drowning hazards with them, according to Soil Conservationist Jones. Drownings in ponds have been reported already this summer in some Kentucky locations.

Owners should take every precaution to make their ponds safe if used for these popular summer activities, Jones said. There are several things that can be done.

Safe swimming areas should be clearly marked and warning signs placed at danger spots. Jones said that lifesaving devices such as ring buoys, ropes, and long poles should be placed at swimming areas. He also pointed out that pond owners need to be thoroughly familiar with local and state health regulations if their pond swimming areas are used by the general public.

The younger set finds pond fishing to their liking which presents a special hazard. A young fisherman on a hot summer day will usually take a dip before going home according to Jones. So even though the pond is not generally used for swimming, lifesaving devices should be nearby.

Boating takes place on some Floyd county ponds. A boat in good shape, a life jacket for each person in the boat, and safe operating procedures are absolute musts, according to Jones.

More than 24 ponds have been constructed in the Floyd County Conservation District as part of conservation plans prepared with technical help from the Soil Conservation Service. Jones said 10 acres of water are represented by these small impoundments. They add to the natural beauty of our county and are valuable for many reasons, but they need to be made as safe for use as possible.

Landowners can get more ideas on farm pond safety by asking for job sheet number K-JS-19 "Farm Pond Safety" from the Prestonsburg field office. Phone 886-3128 or write to USDA-Soil Conservation Service, Prestonsburg, Ky. 41653 for this free information.

What Really Happened, 197 Years Ago?

Livingston, Sherman and Ben Franklin are shown in song and dance in the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre production of "1776."

Have you ever wondered what really happened on that 4th of July, 197 years ago, when the men who founded this country signed the Declaration of Independence?

For the answer to this question, make plans now to attend the special performance on July 4th of "1776," the fine musical entertainment currently being offered by the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre at the Amphitheatre in Jenny Wiley State Resort Park.

"1776" is the song-and-dance version of how the Declaration of Independence came to be. It parades across the stage such history-book personalities as Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, and John Hancock in this jocular, lyrical version of what happened during the hot weeks of debate in Philadelphia before the Continental Congress met on July 4th, to sign the Declaration.

The box office at the theatre is open daily, and tickets may be purchased at the door. All seats are general admission and early arrival assures a choice in seating.

A special fireworks display will highlight the July 4th performance. It will feature a huge replica of the American flag in glowing fireworks.

Nature Trails

By RUFUS M. REED

This story, I feel, is one of the most touching ones ever written. Setting: A small church in a town of one of the eastern states. Time: About dusk of a warm June evening.

The church choir, consisting of some 25 members and their children, along with the local minister, had met at the church for their mid-week choir practice. The minister stood at the pulpit, leading the singing. On the pulpit rested a Bible, which was open at the Gospel of St. John 11th chapter. The organist, a middle-aged lady, was seated at the organ.

Somehow a window or a door of the church had been left ajar. A tiny brown bat, nabbing the insects outside, spotted the opening, and, as bats often do, it followed the gleam of light and flew inside the church. It flickered across the room and perched on the dome of the sanctuary. There it remained perfectly quiet, its bright, beady eyes looking down at the people.

The organist first saw the bat and shrieked. Some of the other ladies also gave vent to terrified cries. Two or three other members of the choir sat still, looking at the bat with understanding and a feeling of love for all of God's creatures.

The organist broke the tense silence: "We must get rid of this horrid creature." She ordered her sixteen-year-old son to run home and fetch his .22 rifle. Their home was near the church.

In a matter of moments the boy was running back with the rifle. The minister and most of the people nodded their assent as the boy took careful aim at the bat. The small creature fell at the crack of the rifle and its mortally wounded body landed on the open Bible on the pulpit. Its blood stained the sacred pages of the Holy Book.

One might well ponder such questions as, Suppose Christ had been in the pulpit, what would He have said on such an occasion? Surely He would have said the bat was one of God's creatures and should not be killed. Would He have given approval to the boy's killing the bat, and right here in the holy quiet of the church. While most of the people applauded the boy's murder of the bat, others felt shocked. Some of these wrote strong letters of protest, pointing out the destructive attitudes of some Christians, who should be protecting life instead of destroying it. One of them pointed out how the Bible says that the Heavenly Father is concerned even with the fall of a little sparrow.

It seems all down the pages of time man's first reaction on seeing a wild creature is to kill it. Does not this attitude back to the time of the cavemen, who killed mostly to survive?

There is a strange sequel to the story of the bat that went to church. One of the members of the choir looked at the open page of the Bible and saw how the blood had sprinkled the pages. Among the verses stained by the bat's blood was this one: "Jesus wept."

LRC Plan Would Collect Tax On Royalties from Coal

The old "broad-form deed and its fine print are seen as the biggest threat to the legality of a plan suggested by the Legislative Research Commission to tax royalties to non-Kentuckians on coal produced in the state.

If the plan is legal and can be put into effect, a dozen Eastern Kentucky counties may collect as much as $1 1/2 million a year.

LRC Director Jackson White acknowledged its legality could be a point of controversy.

He said the "fine print" in leases from decades ago is the main roadblock to a valid new statute and consequent source of additional income for the financially hardpressed mountain counties.

As explained by White, this is what the plan essentially involves:

The deeds which many Eastern Kentucky landowners gave to out-of-staters, mainly at the turn of the century, sever mineral rights on the land from surface rights.

The companies and individuals obtaining the mineral rights are entitled to one-eighth the gross sales price of the coal extracted, which is called the royalty.

Under the home rule statute of the 1972 General Assembly, counties would be allowed to impose a tax on the privilege of receiving these royalties.

"You're talking about production of 60 million tons of coal a year and royalties of 50 to 75 cents a ton," White said. "So the collective royalty payments could amount to at least $30 million annually."

He figured that a royalty tax of only 5 per cent therefore would yield an aggregate $1.5 million, assuming every affected county passed such a law and the process was legally practical.

"In many instances the windfall to a county would be three times the current operating money of a county," White said. "Furthermore, such new money would generate more federal revenue sharing money for the county."

On the optimistic side of whether such a tax could be levied, White said the LRC staff has determined that if imposed on non-residents "it would not amount to a denial of due process... we're satisfied it can be done."

He cited an attorney general's opinion saying counties can impose taxes under the home rule provision unless the tax is specifically prohibited by law.

Also up to now courts have held that a local excise tax is void while a local license tax is valid. White said the royalty levy would be classified as a license tax.

"Maybe this does represent verbal gymnastics," he said, "but it's for a good end... too much money from Kentucky's natural resources has gone to Wall Street."

On the pessimistic side of enacting a valid law, White said, is a clause in many of the royalty deeds.

The clause specifies that any tax, direct, or indirect, imposed on the royalty owner will be paid by the coal operator.

"This is an avenue by which the New York owners could turn things around and impose the burden on the operators," he said. "Our operators have enough to cope with now in view of rising Workmen's Compensation Insurance costs and the severance tax."

The LRC director said his agency now is trying to determine how many large coal leases contain the language making operators responsible for taxes on royalties.

"We may try to arrange an exclusion under which ordinances get around this seeming prohibition," White said.

Latest government figures show 73.3-million fish were killed by pollution in 1971. This is 81 percent more than ever reported in any previous year.

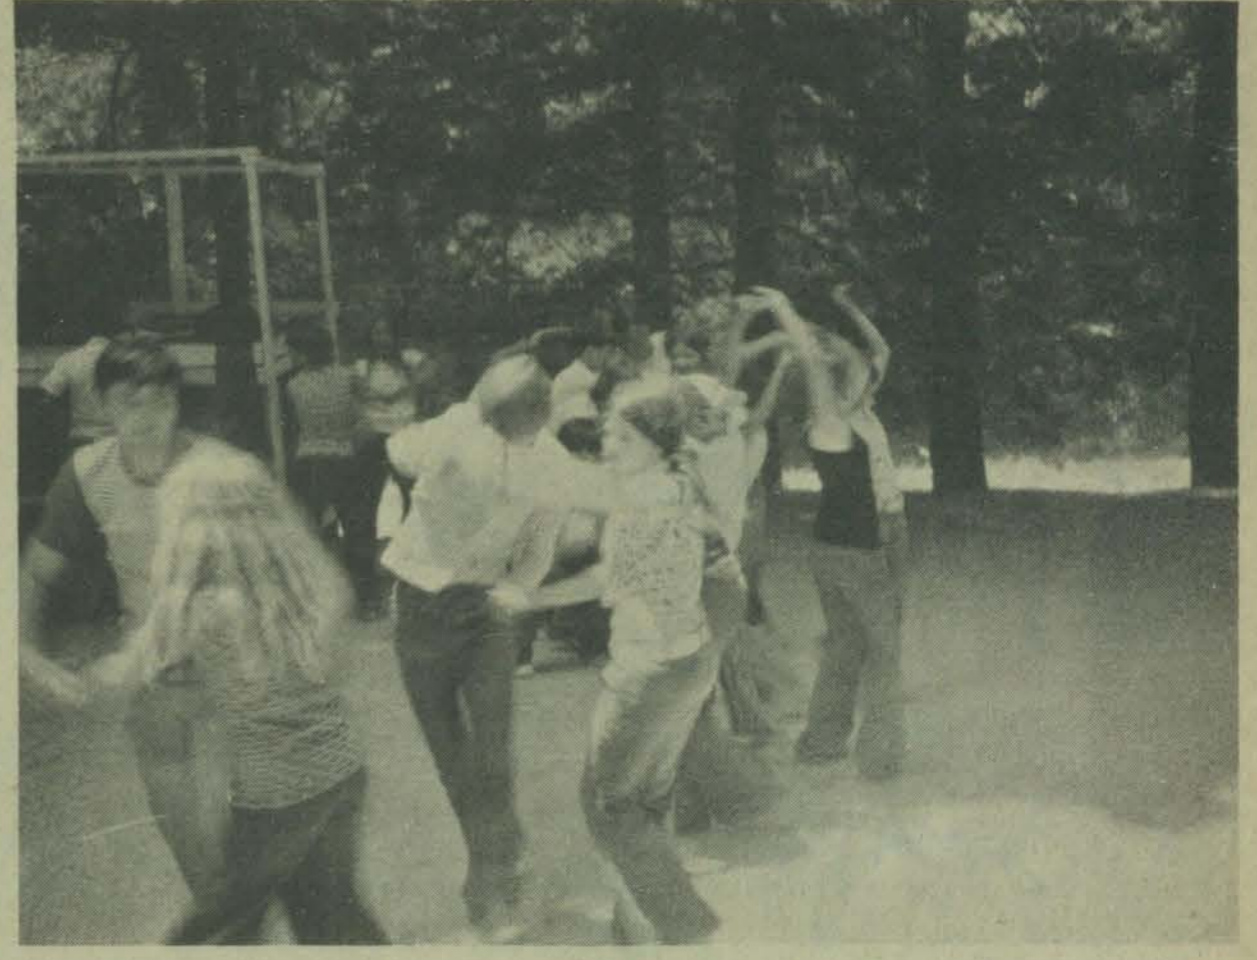

The individual number of fish kills also took an unprecedented leap upward. There were 860 isolated kills, 226 more than any previous year. For the third time, sewage pollution from faulty municipal plants was the greatest mass killer. Kills from industrial pollutions were second.

Forest Resurvey Under Way

Kentucky was reported 10 years ago to have nearly 12 million acres of forest land, which amounted to almost half the land area in the state. Since then many trees have been harvested, woodlands have been cleared for new homes and roads, and to some extent idle lands have been stocked with trees.

To determine the extent of Kentucky's forest resources, the third forest survey of the state is now underway. Previous surveys were completed in 1949 and 1963. The third survey is under the direction of Carl E. Mayer, the project leader, at the Northeastern Forest Experiment Station. It will be conducted in cooperation with Harry Nadler, director of the Division of Forestry in the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection.

The objectives of this forest survey are (1) to secure reliable and accurate estimates of current forest area, timber volume, stand conditions, area changes, timber growth, mortality, and removals (2) to develop county estimates of timber volume and area that enables users to evaluate the local resource situations in the state; and (3) to analyze the current forest resource and the changes that have occurred since the 1961-1963 measurement.

Another phase of the forest survey will get underway in 1975. This will be a timber-industry canvass to determine the 1974 Kentucky production of timber products. It will also be a joint effort between the Division of Forestry and the forest survey staff. A report on the wood-using industries in Kentucky, based upon the results of the canvass, will be published in 1976.

Field work for the entire state will be

U. S. Court Convicts Two in Theft Plot

Eugene E. Siler, Jr., U. S. attorney for the Eastern district of Kentucky, disclosed the conviction June 22 of Leon Mullins and Raeford Harold Branaham, both of Pikeville, in the federal district court at Pikeville for conspiracy to steal from an interstate shipment of furniture moving from North Carolina to Pike county.

Both Mullins and Branaham received sentences of 18 months.

Mullins and Branaham were accused of attempting to persuade a driver of a Claremont Motor Lines motor truck to permit them and others to steal and remove furniture from the loaded truck in exchange for the payment of money to the driver. The driver alerted police to the activity prior to any theft.
