

Bidding High, Garth Work Delay Seen

Lowest Bid Above Estimate; Stumbo School Work OK'd

Construction of three new shops at the Garth Vocational School faces possible delay after the Floyd County Board of Education has failed to accept the lowest of several bids offered on the work.

Lowest bid opened by the board at its Saturday meeting here was $367,737, and that is approximately $27,000 higher than the estimated cost. Although the board did not accept the low bid, it refrained from rejecting it, pending a further study.

The $31,958 bid of the Elliott Glass & Electric Company on construction of a sewage treatment plant at the Stumbo elementary school was accepted.

George Lee Shannon, architect, was authorized to prepare final plans for an off-street turnaround for school buses on the former Sturgill property there which was acquired a few months ago by the board of education. The improvement will serve the Prestonsburg elementary school. Earl Martin, engineer, was authorized to supply a topographical map of a new loading area for the elementary school here.

The death of Anna Lee Johnson, Title I remedial reading teacher at Wayland, resulted in three teacher changes. The board employed Johnny Ray Turner as head teacher at Drift elementary, Frankie Pack was transferred from Drift to Wayland, and Martha Lee was transferred from a Minimum Foundation position at Wayland to the remedial reading post there.

Ned Bush was employed as a qualified substitute teacher.

Superintendent Charles Clark was authorized to advertise the old Tram rural school and grounds for sale. The board voted to sign an agreement, upon the recommendation of the state School Lunchroom Division, with the Lance Company for cracker flour at a considerable discount. New textbooks chosen by the Textbook Selection Committee composed of teachers were approved.

Board Approves ROPES Council Here Last Week

The board of directors of Region 11, Regional Organization for Providing Educational Services (ROPES) approved the regional advisory council at its Feb. 28 meeting held at the offices of the Floyd County Board of Education here.

The advisory council is composed of the Rev. W. D. Jagers, Robert R. Allen and Estill Lee Carter, of Floyd county; W. R. Conley, William Rice and Paul Fyffe, Johnson county; Bob Porter, Dennis Dorton and Price Hager, of the Paintsville independent district; Ronald Gullett, Barbara G. Hall and Paul R. Jones, Magoffin county; Freeman Johnson, Wood Keesee and Claude Varney, of Pike county; Joe Stone, Joan Johnson and Don Batten, Pikeville independent; James Dickerson, L. T. Hardin and John Marcum, of Martin county.

Dr. John R. Duncan, of Morehead State University, was approved by the board to serve as a consulting member.

Helen Colley, music director, Virgie high school, and temporary chairman for the Regional Music Educators' Association, told the board that the purpose of the Music organization is to secure funds from federal and state sources to enrich the ongoing music programs in the region. Mrs. Colley spoke of the need for more music programs in the region, especially in the cultural enrichment area. The superintendents voted to allow the music teachers in Region 11 to meet for one-half day for the purpose of organizing. The ROPES staff will assist the music educators' association for the region in making contacts to get additional funds for music programs.

Charles Clark, chairman of the ROPES board of directors, appointed Virgil Porter, superintendent of Johnson county schools, as chairman of a committee to study cooperative purchasing. Other members of the committee are Eugene Frazier, coor-

Home Rule Law Discussed Here

How Home Rule, as defined by Kentucky's new law, can or will work was discussed and debated Monday afternoon at the Big Sandy Development Area workshop held at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park.

Locally, officials have come near to arriving at the conclusion that the home rule legislation will mean little, if anything, to counties and smaller cities. But state legal authorities contend it can work.

County home rule was discussed and debated at the workshop, including the attorney general's opinions on points of the law and how counties in other states have utilized their powers under similar home rule laws.

Area county judges, county attorneys, magistrates, state representatives and other officials attended the Monday afternoon session here. The workshop was conducted by Jackson W. White, director of the Legislative Research Commission, and three other staff members.

Four-Lane Bridge Awaiting Concrete

Steel reaching across the Big Sandy at Allen has linked and concrete work on the span will begin soon. Its completion will mean the opening during the summer of the new four-lane US 23 from Allen via Bull Creek and Katy Friend to connect with the Mountain Parkway, near here.

Many OEO Programs May End During Year

Clifford Austin, Floyd county CAP coordinator, said Tuesday morning that the cutback in programs may not be as sudden or severe as expected. He said he has been informed that the Senior Citizens program has been extended to Dec. 31; that the NYC program has been "unfrozen" and is back in full effect, and that the On-the-Job Training program has been continued for the year.

Mr. Austin said the new director of OEO has indicated that no project will be terminated without 30-day notice and that none will be discontinued without a fair review of its merits.

If President Nixon's plan to abolish the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) and its multiple community action programs survives opposition in Congress, the number of jobs for Floyd counties will shrink appreciably and a payroll perhaps next to that of the coal industry will be no more by next summer.

And perhaps a dozen office suites in and around Prestonsburg will be for rent again as the various programs pass from the economic picture.

OEO's Community Action Program could die before the end of the fiscal year, June 30. The Rev. Clifford Austin, CAP coordinator for Floyd county, said last week that the program is funded till April 30 but that it is being financed on a month-to-month basis.

Staff members and office workers already are looking around for other jobs.

OEO's end will mean the elimination of these separate projects:

1. Mainstream (formerly known as the Nelson Project), which currently lists 167 workers and an office staff of four. Claude Swiney, director of the program, said Mainstream at one time employed 225.

2. Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program (EKCEP), which employs 30 and an office staff of 10. Nello Francis, director of the program, said those in training will continue to be employed till their training is completed. A nurse-aide class of 10 was scheduled to start this month. The program, which extends over 22 Eastern Kentucky counties, suffered an appropriation cut of $407,000 this year, and another cut of $64,000 is proposed.

3. The Senior Citizens program, which lists 11 beneficiaries.

4. The Neighborhood Youth Corps (NYC), which now has 18 on its payroll. Normally, 32 are employed in this county.

5. On-the-Job Training, with about 50 employees.

6. The Emergency Employment Program, which is operated mainly by the county judge and mayors of towns. 32 workers. This is the only anti-poverty program initiated by the Nixon administration. Although it had been reported as on its way out, County Judge Henry Stumbo said he has been told in Washington that it has a good chance of surviving the proposed "mass execution" of poverty programs.

7. The summer Headstart Program, which is administered through the county school system and which is one of the largest of the lot. A type of kindergarten program for the benefit of disadvantaged children, it enrolled 450 youngsters last summer and had on its payroll 21 teachers, 37 teacher-aides, 12 lunchroom cooks and 37 contract drivers for the transportation of children to training centers.

Harry Wallace, Headstart director, said more of the future of the program will perhaps be known this week. Mr. Austin, CAP director, said, however, that recruiting of pupils has been called for and that applications are being received by the Community Action Program.

The Legal Aid Program, which affords legal representation for those who are unable to employ an attorney, apparently is destined to continue, either in its present format or in another.

It has been indicated that federal revenue-sharing funds will be allocated to the states, and from the states to their counties, for the continuance of poverty programs con-

Spradlin Held For FBI Quiz; Prisoner Flees

State Detective Gary Rose, County Detective Sam Hale and a FBI agent questioned Tommy Spradlin, of the Stanville section, at the county jail Monday afternoon about stolen vehicles found at or near where he resides.

A motorcycle has been recovered. An automobile, which was reported stolen and brought across from another state, was found burned.

One of those brought to jail here this week never became a prisoner. He fled the jailer's office and has not been recaptured. The fugitive, Elmer Lafferty, of Dwale, was arrested by State Trooper Danny Stumbo and before he could be committed escaped and has not since been located.

Danny Newsome, John D. Tackett and Darrell Tackett were booked last Wednesday by Detective Rose and State Trooper Estep on a grand larceny charge. They allegedly took upwards of 600 pounds of copper wire from a coal mining operation.

Others jailed, charges on which they were

Sturgills Buy May Sign Firm

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Sturgill, of Harold, have purchased the May Sign Co., Inc., of Prestonsburg, and have assumed operation of the business.

Involved in the transaction was the acquisition by the Sturgills of the building, equipment and business of the sign company operated for more than 20 years here by Mr. and Mrs. Russell May. The Mays retain their art, gift and wallpaper shop, renting from the new owners the front portion of the building for this business.

Mr. Sturgill is president of the sign company and Mrs. Sturgill is secretary-treasurer. She also is postmaster at Harold. In all, 10 persons, including the ownership, are involved in the operation of the business.

Sturgill said his firm will work to provide the people the high type of sign service they deserve and also to uphold the reputation for excellence established by Mr. May over the years.

His separation from the sign business will afford Mr. May the opportunity he had long wanted to devote more time to his painting. He is widely known as a landscape artist.

Johnson Co. Man Seriously Shot Here, Saturday

One man was seriously wounded in what officers termed "a shoot-out" at the intersection of Court street and Arnold avenue, the heart of the Prestonsburg business district, last Saturday night.

Herbert Rowland, 56, of Oil Springs, Johnson county, is in the Lexington hospital, his condition listed as fair after a revolver bullet had passed through his side. Rowland was at first in critical condition after having been transferred from the Highlands Medical Center to Good Samaritan Hospital, Lexington, but he was later off the critical list.

Charged with the shooting is Donald "Ducky" Newsome, 21, of Blue River. He was jailed here Monday afternoon by State Trooper Elmo Allen. He was held in jail Tuesday in default of $2,500 bond.

The shooting, officers said, may have followed an argument during a poker game on the second floor of a building near the shooting scene. Apparently both men fired several shots. Rowland walked up Court street after he was shot and hailed a taxicab which took him to the hospital here. Policeman "Hack" Thornsby said the wounded man's revolver was in his pocket, all its shells empty.

When police arrived on the scene, according to the report given The Times, Newsome and another man said to have been Damon Newsome had left by automobile.

Florists Here Win Top Awards

Jenny Wiley Florist, of Prestonsburg, captured the highest achievement awards at the annual Kentucky State Florist Convention held March 2-4 at the Executive Inn, Louisville.

Jenny Wiley Florist placed first in three floral categories out of five and won second place honors in all five classifications.

Donald Colvin, manager, was named over-all winner and Designer of the Year. He was presented a wall plaque, a trophy and a check for $100.

Barbara Burchett, an employee of the Prestonsburg firm, won first-place trophies in the hospital arrangement and "Do Your Own Thing" categories.

Ethel Colvin, owner of Jenny Wiley Florist, won the first-place trophy in the wedding bouquet category. Mr. and Mrs. Colvin and Mrs. Burchett received certificates of appreciation from the association for their participation in the 1973 Designer of the Year contest.

Mr. Colvin will represent Kentucky at the Southeastern Florist Convention in Atlanta, Ga., competing with 10 other states for the Southeastern district title.

Only One Area To Be Affected, Engineers Say

Rumors, some of which were published, to the effect that a schedule of user fees to apply to Dewey Lake will be exorbitant were denied Tuesday by Conrad Ripley, public affairs officer, U. S. Corps of Army Engineers, Huntington, W. Va.

In fact, said Mr. Ripley, the only area on Dewey Lake to which any schedule of fees applies is in the German area, where Class D camping facility users will be charged $1 per day per vehicle, and there is no limit to the number of persons per vehicle.

An earlier and unfounded report had said that fees would be charged for launching boats at the lake and for all power boats on the impoundment. This, Mr. Ripley emphasized, is not true.

The schedule of user fees will be applied at this one area of Dewey Lake and to certain areas in other impoundments operated by the Corps of Engineers, sometimes in cooperation with the U. S. Parks and Forestry Services (Parks and Forest Services have no connection, however, with Dewey). These fees are required by Public Law 92-347, but the schedule itself depends on the decision of the official in charge of that particular (in this area, Col McIntyre).

The only fee set for Grayson reservoir was 50 cents per car per day at an area in the vicinity of the dam. At Fishtrap Reservoir's Class A camping area in the Grapevine area the fee will be $3 per car per day.

Council Grants McDowell ARH Expansion OK

The McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital will soon award a contract for the expansion of its ambulatory patient area and relocation of its pharmacy and laboratory for the convenience of outpatients and staff physicians.

Contractors' bids on the remodeling-expansion project have already been received and work will begin as soon as contractual arrangements are completed, Edward Collins, administrator, said. No estimate of the cost involved was available.

New construction will include a one-story extension of the building 10 feet by a maximum of 50 feet. Otherwise, space needed for the improvement is already provided in the present facilities. Additional office space for doctors will also be provided, it was said.

The proposal to make the improvements was approved last Wednesday by the Kentucky Comprehensive Health Planning Council.

The council also approved other Eastern Kentucky hospital projects, including:

Wurtland Geriatric Center, Wurtland, to build a 60-bed intermediate-care facility.

Voiers Convalescent Center, South Shore, to convert a school building to a 30-bed intermediate-care facility.

Based on a plan adopted by Southeastern Kentucky Regional Health Demonstration, Inc., that 112 intermediate-care beds are needed in Lee, Breathitt, Perry and Knott counties, the council approved:

Conversion of 22 personal care beds to intermediate care at Nim Henson Geriatric Center at Jackson. The facility had requested that 50 of its 74 beds be converted.

Probe Started As Sale of LSD Suspected Here

An investigation is under way here into the sale and use of a hallucinatory, possibly LSD.

The probe, being made by State Police Detective Gary Rose and County Detective Sam Hale, stems from the recent "illness" of two Prestonsburg high school girls.

Tablets recovered by the two detectives are being analyzed at the State Police laboratory in Frankfort.

Although he admitted that an investigation is under way, County Attorney James R. Allen declined to identify any suspect in the case. At least three adults are suspected in the sale of drugs to students here.

Detective Hale refused to discuss the situation in any detail but did say that "the people of Prestonsburg will be shocked when they learn what appears to us to be the facts."

County Superintendent of Schools Charles Clark said Monday that he has little information of a substantial nature but said he has been working with Ronald Hager, principal of the high school, and that Mr. Hager has been working with state and local officers.

Superintendent Clark said he is not aware of drugs being sold in other high schools of the county but admitted the situation is not one which is peculiar to any one school. "Drugs apparently are coming to Prestonsburg first, and from here they could go on to other schools," he said.

Letters to The Editor

Gee!—Thanks!—This Helps

Too often we don't do anything to say how we appreciate things and when I learned last week of the destroying by fire of your paper, I have felt bad all week.

I remembered so many different things about the Times that had brought pleasure, and pain and other things through the years, and so this morning I decided to write and tell you.

We moved to New York City in 1946, and my aunt, Grace Burke, sent us a Christmas package, protected in the top of the box by papers, and one top was a used, somewhat old copy of the Times. We were new to the city, and away from our hills, and we put the paper on the Christmas tree and celebrated Christmas eve, looking at the paper and crying. Later on, I sent you a supposedly anonymous article each week by Ima Bowler, and I was feeling pretty proud of myself when my daddy identified the writer as a close friend—until I slipped up one week and wrote something only he knew, and, of course, he caught me. Naturally each week brings news of home, and that is precious to those of us not there with you. My step-father has read the Floyd County Times for years, and knows almost as much about "down home" as we do through the pages of your paper. I have always loved "This Town—That World," and, of course, it would be hard for me to forget the time in the twenty years ago section when you listed me as 130 years old or some such.

And now Thursdays, here at the library, is Newspaper Day, because I get the Courier-Journal, the Herald-Dispatch, the Pike County News, The Floyd County Times and the New York Times Book Review from my mama, and I've been so disturbed all week that this morning, I dreaded going to the postoffice, because I thought probably I wouldn't get it today.

You've been making remarks for years about all the deficiencies in your paper, and I've grown to love every word in it. I've always felt we were very lucky to have you and your gifts, and never had the courage to say to you how I felt. I, for one, was heart-broken that you might not come back, and delighted beyond words to find that you did succeed. I think it is about time you quit running yourself down, and pat yourself on the back. I don't remember the daily papers we've always had, but I could mention pages in The Times that had meaning. A recent old picture of my mother and father in a grade school class is a treasure to me. And recently, when I went to Prestonsburg, everyone asked me if I saw my husband's picture in the paper. (This reminded me to renew my subscription). He was on that championship football team, years ago.

I know that a blow like this is awful, and heart-breaking to you, but I don't believe we could survive without you. Maybe it is about time we all tell you that. But you are such an important part of our lives, even away from

Pine Knot, Oil or Coal

Editor, The Times:

Much has been said lately in the press and by radio and TV broadcasts about the growing "Energy Crisis" in America. Daily increases in the import of foreign produced oil and natural gas has begun to worry many of our industrial as well as some government leaders.

We could let this growing energy appetite go unabated for a while, perhaps months or even years if we had the dollars to afford our trade balance of payments, but this "put-it-off-attitude" could suddenly flame into a dangerous reality and throw our people into a mad scramble for the few available "pine knots" (the cave man's night light), or rushing with the mob to the antique shop in search for a rare item known as the "coal oil lamp."

To maintain our vigilance as a friendly and independent World Power we must put forth more faith in our own abilities and constantly stress national reliance upon the resources of this American Republic. We must get back as soon as humanly possible to coal, the richest, and wholly dependable source of energy, the well known "One Trillion and Five Hundred Billion" unmined tons of reserves in God's earthly storehouse of solar energy incased in the thick beds of billion-year-old decayed plant life.

home, that we need you, and I for one wanted to tell you. For those of us away from home-you are almost the only contact we have. I get Prestonsburg on FM radio, but I learned, a long time ago, it didn't suffice.

We are, and always have been, luck to have you and your paper and if you have any deficiencies, it has to be in the fishing area, because in the paper business you are great. It is a comfort to know that my Thursdays aren't going to be ruined, wondering what is going on and not getting the paper. You have no idea what your paper means to those who read it, and I wish I could put in words how much it means to me. I am sorry for your fire and your problems, but without "This Town—That World" the world would surely be a sadder, duller place. Our best to you and hope things will soon be back to normal, and the worst problem you have is how many fish you didn't catch.

INJUNCTIONS FILED AGAINST JUNKYARDS

The Kentucky Department of Highways cracked down last week on Floyd junkyard operators, asking injunctions against three.

Operators named in complaints filed in circuit court here are Jim Settles, doing business as the Settles Body Shop, US 23 at Allen; Frank Adams, doing business as Adams Used Auto Parts, US 23, near Auxier; and Ronald D. Adams, doing business as Ronald D. Adams Auto Parts, US 23, Allen.

Charging the operators with failure to comply with state law governing the operation of junkyards, the suits allege that the three places of business contained "numerous junk vehicles which are open to the full and complete view of motorists using adjoining highways," that they do not have a state permit and have provided no artificial or natural screening of their junkyards as required by law.

The defendants, the Department of Highways alleges, have been asked on different occasions during the last three months to remove the junk vehicles more than 2,000 feet from the highway or to screen their junkyards.

The permanent injunction sought against the three operators seeks to halt their operation. The petition also asks that the court order them to remove junk vehicles immediately a distance of 2,000 feet from the highway or to erect a state-approved fence to screen the junkyards from the view of passing motorists. It also asks that they be required to procure permits to operate.

Only 1 from County Passes Examination

Lovell Hall, of Grethel, was the only Floyd countian to pass the examination held in Frankfort last week for property valuation administrator (tax commissioner).

The present tax commissioner, Harry Gordon Allen, was not required to take the test. It is not known if others from this county entered.

Statewide, only about one-fourth of those taking the exam made passing grades. Of the 417 entrants, 113 qualified. In 46 counties nobody passed, so a second test was scheduled for those counties on March 20.

License In Jeopardy If Test Refused

Frankfort, Ky.—"A driver should never refuse a chemical test for intoxication if he wants to keep his license in the state of Kentucky," said Eugene Hodges, Director of Driver Licensing.

Kentucky law says that a driver who refuses to take such a test when it is requested by a police officer automatically loses his license - whether he has nothing to drink or has consumed a gallon of moonshine.

Refusal-of-Chemical-Test (RCT) hearings, which are conducted by Kentucky's Driver Licensing Division, point up again and again that drivers are often either in ignorance of this fact or think they can work around it.

Here's what happened when Harry (a fictitious Kentucky driver) was stopped by an officer and charged with driving while under the influence of alcohol.

The officer explained to Harry that under Kentucky law he must submit to a breathalyzer, blood alcohol, urine or saliva test for alcohol or he would automatically lose his license.

"I'm not taking any test," said Harry adamantly.

Kentucky's implied consent law (KRS 186.565) provides that a person who refuses a chemical test for alcohol must be warned a second time by the officer that his refusal will result in the automatic loss of his license. And so, the officer warned Harry again.

Whatever his reason, Harry still absolutely refused the chemical test.

Several hours later, when his sister bailed him out, Harry had sobered up, but his memory of the encounter with the arresting officer was hazy.

"The desk sergeant told me you've lost your license Harry. How will you sell those office supplies now?" she asked.

"How could they do that?," shouted Harry. "There wasn't any trial. I don't remember any trial."

The officer who arrested Harry sent a signed, notarized affidavit of his refusal to the Kentucky Department of Public Safety.

Three days later, Harry was notified by certified mail that he had ten days to request a hearing with the department "to show cause why his license should not be suspended."

Harry could represent himself or hire a lawyer, and could present witnesses to testify in his behalf, he was told.

But, as the hearing examiner stressed at the beginning of the hearing, the only question which could be raised involved whether he was driving the car, whether he was warned that he would lose his license if he refused the chemical test and whether he did indeed refuse the test. Whether or not he was intoxicated had no bearing on the outcome of the hearing.

Harry claimed he didn't remember anyone explaining the law to him, and he couldn't recall refusing to take the test.

The testimony of the arresting officer was supported by two other policemen, who were on duty at headquarters when Harry refused the test.

Since Harry's argument was not supported by any evidence, the department ruled against him. Although he still could have appealed the decision to circuit court and then to the Court of Appeals, he elected not to.

During 1972, the Division of Driver Licensing received 1,121 RCT affidavits similar to the one filed against Harry. Of that number 142 requested evidentiary hearings. Out of those appeals 102 suspensions were sustained. Later, 26 of those rulings were carried to circuit court and three to the Court of Appeals.

In cases taken to circuit court two licenses were restored, three departmental rulings were upheld and the rest are pending. No opinions have been returned on three cases in the Court of Appeals.

"However the chemical test turns out, you still have a chance to retain your license. When you refuse you have almost no chance at all," Hodges warned.

Kentucky Crime Rate Down for '72

Frankfort, Ky.—Major crimes decreased 8 percent in Kentucky last year, state police reported last week.
 The sharpest decline was recorded in auto theft—down 14.8 per cent compared with 1971. But in two categories the crime rate increased. Forcible rape cases were up 6.6 per cent and robbery 8.3 per cent.
 Murder, aggravated assault, breaking and entering and larceny or theft over $50 were also included in the report issued by the uniform crime reporting section of the Bureau of Criminal Identifications and Statistics.
 The statistics show:
 Murder decreased 8.2 per cent, from 352 in 1971 to 323 last year.
 Robbery cases increased from 2,530 to 2,739.
 Aggravated assault decreased from 4,308 to 3,882.
 Breaking and entering decreased 8.7 per cent, from 23,419 to 21,380.
 Major larceny decreased 5.7 per cent, from 21,289 to 20,072.
 Auto theft decreased from 10,783 to 9,260.

"Attempts at comparisons of resulting crime figures should not be made without first considering the individual crime factors which exist in each region and county," L. G. Boucher, state police director said.
 In Jefferson county, the most populous in the state, major crimes decreased in the categories of murder and negligent homicide—from 110 in 1971 to 92 last year; breaking and entering—from 8,158 to 6,944; larceny of $50 or over—from 8,130 to 7,653; and auto theft—from 7,214 to 5,989.
 Crime increased in the categories of forcible rape—from 172 to 203; robbery—from 1,621 to 1,704; and aggravated assault—from 768 to 769.
 While Jefferson had 19 fewer murder cases last year, Fayette county had 24 cases, or five more than in 1971. Kenton county with 12 cases also had an increase of five.
 Forcible rape cases increased in populous counties—from 172 to 203 in Jefferson, from 40 to 43 in Fayette and from 28 to 33 in Kenton.
 The same was true of robbery—from 45 to 75 in Campbell, from 191 to 235 in Fayette, from 190 to 222 in Kenton and from 1,621 to 1,704 in Jefferson.
 The third annual report compiled from all police agencies in the state contrasts with a 1.1 per cent increase in the crime index reported a year ago.
 The three-year record of serious crimes included totals of 62,594 for 1970; 63,302 for 1971 and 63,258 for 1972.

Huddleston Hits 'Unmarried Tax'

Washington—Senator Walter Dee Huddleston (D-Ky.) said last week that existing federal income tax laws make thousands of unmarried Kentuckians "second class citizens" by requiring them to pay up to 20 percent more tax than married persons.
 He pointed out that Kentucky has 590,000 unmarried persons 18 years old and over, a major portion of which pay federal income taxes. Nationwide, there are some 30 million unmarried federal taxpayers.
 "To require them to pay more taxes simply because they are not married is blatant discrimination," said the senator, who is cosponsoring a bill to extend to unmarried persons the same tax benefits enjoyed by married couples filing a joint return.
 "The discrimination is particularly harsh as it applies to widows, of which Kentucky has approximately 160,000, and unmarried heads of households. Census Bureau figures indicate that as many as 100,000 Kentuckians fall in the latter category, along with another 3.5 million across the nation."
 Huddleston said an unmarried person with a taxable income of $8,000 would, all things being equal, pay $210 more in federal income taxes than would a married couple of the same income.
 "I think the time has come to eliminate discriminatory federal income taxation against unmarried persons," he added.

Environmentally Speaking

by THOMAS O. HARRIS
 COMMISSIONER
 Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection

Because Kentucky's conservation districts are charged with developing and carrying out a complete conservation program in each of our 120 counties, every user of any of Kentucky's natural resources has free access to technical know-how to plan a conservation program.
 The governing body of these districts is composed of the district supervisors who develop these plans and programs.
 I am very happy that Gov. Wendell Ford recognized the importance of the programs of the conservation districts and the part they play in improving the environment when he appropriated to the districts, at the first of January this year, $20,000 from his Contingency Fund.
 This money will be used to reimburse conservation district supervisors for part of the expenses they incur in carrying out the official business of the district. An additional $20,000 will be made available July 1, 1973 and another $20,000 Jan. 1, 1974.
 These funds were necessitated by a law passed by the Kentucky General Assembly which increased the number of supervisors of a conservation district from five members to seven. No funds were appropriated for these new supervisors. These conservation district supervisors are locally elected officials of subdivisions of our Kentucky state government.
 They serve in this capacity without any compensation other than the small amount paid for their expenses. Certainly, citizens of this Commonwealth are getting their money's worth from these programs.
 Each day we hear about the bad condition of our environment, and yet here is a group of dedicated individuals who have been giving their time for more than thirty years to improve these conditions here in Kentucky. I am very happy that the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, with the help of Governor Ford, has been able to provide this assistance to the conservation districts in their work to make Kentucky a better place in which to live.

To Conduct Study At Lake Projects
 A private land planning firm has been contracted by the Army Corps of Engineers to conduct an environmental inventory of the Paintsville and Yatesville Lake projects.

Col. Kenneth E. McIntyre, Huntington district engineer, said the purpose of the study is to gather information for identifying best uses of project lands. It will include identification of environmental attributes which should be preserved, protected or enhanced, and provide base information for management of the water and land resources.
 Col. McIntyre said this study is separate from the environmental impact statements which already have been filed for both projects.
 The firm of Rahenkamp, Sachs, Wells and Associates, Inc., of Philadelphia received the contract for the Environmental Assessment and Analysis Study, expected to be completed in 18 months.

Brands, Tattoos Used In Fight on Rustling

By DAVID KENNAMER

It's late at night on a dark country road. Cattle are sleeping peacefully in a nearby field. A truck pulls up and stops. The cattle are quietly herded into the truck and driven off into the night. The next morning they are sold at the nearest market - perhaps before their owner knows they are gone.

This is modern rustling in Kentucky. It's on the increase, and until recently not much could be done about it. Kentucky State Police records show that in 1967, 17 rustling cases were reported. In 1972 this figure was up to 52.

In the past, Kentucky cattlemen have had little recourse but to mark their losses up to experience and keep a closer watch on their herds. However, some steps have been taken to help these harassed farmers.

In 1964 the General Assembly passed the Kentucky Branding Law in order to give some sort of protection to cattle owners by providing permanent identification of cattle with brands and marks.

According to state law a brand is a "permanent mark of which the letters, numbers and figures used are each three inches or more in length or diameter." They must be humanely burned into the hide of the live animal with a hot iron or caustic chemical.

A mark is a permanent identification made by cutting a notch in the ear of an animal.

Registration of brands is not mandatory, but anyone who purposely marks cattle with a design already on record with the State Department of Agriculture in Frankfort is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every five years a brand must be re-registered. If it is not, the brand is terminated and can be used by someone else.

The branding law is administered by the Agriculture Department's Division of Shows and Fairs. Fifty-one brands have been registered in the nine years the law has been in existence.

Barney Hornback, the division's director, says that there has been an increase in the increase in cattle rustling in the Commonwealth. Twenty-one of the 51 brand registrations have come in the last two years.

The people who have registered brands with the division are for the most part purebred livestock owners and absentee owners of farms. These people are especially vulnerable to cattle rustlers.

The state veterinarian's office has implemented a method of identifying all the cattle in the state according to owners and farms. Local veterinarians assign numbers, to be placed on ear tags, to cattle owners in their areas. The numbers are from a series specified by the state veterinarian's office. These ear tags with their identification numbers are attached to the animals. The numbers are also tattooed on the animals' ears.

Each of the 130 stockyards in the state must keep records of everyone who sells and buys cattle in that yard. The identification numbers of each animal must also be recorded.

After a farmer reports stolen cattle to the State Police, they can check stockyard records kept at the state veterinarian's office in Frankfort to see if cattle with that farmer's identification number have been received or sold. If they have, the names and addresses of the sellers and buyers are available. The whole process is computerized for efficiency and speed.

According to J. D. Wolf, administrative assistant to the state veterinarian, this system can also be used to trace the sources of animal diseases. "If an infected animal is found in one of the state's stockyards or packing houses, its number can be traced to the farm it came from. Steps can then be taken to eliminate the source of the disease."

This identification system is part of a national plan. In Kentucky there are 100 inspectors from both state and federal governments working to insure the correct identification of livestock.

So with a combination of the old and new, branding irons, computers, and tattoos, those who have been victimizing Kentucky's cattle owners may find that making a living will be a little more difficult in the future.

Progress on the state horse park in Lexington continued with the announcement of a $1.25 million grant to buy land. The money came from the U. S. Bureau of Outdoor Recreation.

Mr. Cowan also reported that 182 students, which represents 39 percent of the 467 enrolled, have been awarded some form of financial aid, either through the college or from an outside agency for the 1972-'73 academic year. The different types of aid includes federally insured student loans, approximately $29,400; scholarships, $13,159; National Defense student loans, $9,500; Educational Opportunity grants, $10,550; college work-study program, $35,815; Bureau of Rehabilitation, $14,043; WIN Program and others, $1,928.

In the year ending March 1971, single men constituted 43 percent of the new workers coming into the labor force, mostly because of the cutbacks in the military draft and the steady return of veterans.

Establish Scholarship Fund

Establishment of a $50,000 trust fund to provide scholarships for students at Pikeville College, honoring a pioneer Bluefield coal operator and his widow, was announced here yesterday.

Directors of the six companies associated with Ashland Coal and Coke Company, in authorizing the trust, have designed it as the William Wade Walker and Helen Record Walker Scholarship Fund.

It will be administered by the trust department of the Flat Top National Bank of Bluefield. In selection of scholarship recipients preference will be given to qualified children of employees of the donors and to residents of Pike County, Kentucky, Buchanan County, Virginia and McDowell and Mercer Counties, West Virginia.

In addition to Bluefield-based Ashland Coal and Coke Company, the companies participating in the fund are its affiliates:

Ashland Mining Corporation, Harman Mining Corporation, Sovereign Pocahontas Company, Majestic Collieries Company, Poplar Creek Development Company and Sovereign Coal Corporation.

Indianapolis, Ind., was the first American city to place women police officers on regular patrol duty. Two women were assigned to Car 47 in September, 1968.

Camp Rising Sun—What It Offers

By DANIEL GREENE

In this era of mass technology, materialism and world chaos, youth strives to be heard. In today's society young men search for purpose in their lives amid the confusion and bewilderment of the status quo. They consciously hold onto their dreams of the future and seek earnestly to grasp it.

Within the past year I had the privilege of meeting George Joanas, a man who, I felt, was attuned to the dreams of millions of boys around the world. A very warm and resourceful person, Mr. Joanas believes in the worth of the individual and the potentialities of each young man to serve mankind. He uniquely feels and is convinced of his own dream of world contentment and exemplifies it in his dealings among men.

The major area of Mr. Joanas' concentration is Camp Rising Sun, the developmental camp located near Rhinebeck, New York. This camp has attracted many national officials and international interest since its founding in early 1930. The camp itself offers young men between the ages of 14 and 16 over the globe the valuable experience of sharing their lives and interests with boys of other nations. From the populated city to the farm and across the continents, each type of individual is represented. Mr. Joanas seeks boys who are willing to give and share themselves with each other with no grade point or financial stipulation.

Through the months of July and August the boys' interests at the Camp are channeled through a wide range of activities which include camping, music, nature studies, swimming, boating, baseball, soccer and other athletic and cultural activities. Each young man is urged to use his time constructively with the realistic framework of freedom he is given.

Mr. Joanas' point of interest in the camp goes much further in depth. It is through Camp Rising Sun that his philosophy of life is lived. It is here behind the distant mountains that these young men begin to truly grow up. Their individuality is stressed and given encouragement. Each senses his own powers of accomplishment, not only of the present but also in terms of the future.

The boys patiently and hopefully learn on a day-to-day basis that there is a unique and pivotal position for each of them in society. Respect is a word meant and felt for every individual at Camp Rising Sun, regardless of color, race, or creed. Though men like Mr. Joanas, a young man extends his views of the world through the boys he meets and becomes better prepared for those challenges and responsibilities he will some day assume for his position in life.

Mr. Joanas will be coming to this area through March 6-9 and will be interviewing students at the various schools in the county to represent Kentucky at Camp Rising Sun. Last summer, Clarence Prater, of Blue River, and Timothy Crawford, of Wheelwright, were selected for the camp. They view their attendance at Camp Rising Sun as their most valuable and stimulating experience ever.

Director, Paintsville independent schools, Wayne Ratliff, assistant superintendent, Floyd county schools, and Howard Hall, purchasing agent, Pike county schools. A full report will be given at the March board of directors meeting.

Sandra Deaton, of the Division of Special Education (Title VI), said that the proposal for a regional supervisor for special education is still in the process of being reviewed and that ROPES will be notified sometime in March if it has been approved. The superintendents of the school districts in the region voted to purchase a school bus safety film to be shown to school children.

Don Bale, assistant superintendent of instruction, Department of Education, and staff members pointed out that the departments of the Bureau of Instruction are organized according to function and that they now have seven divisions, two offices, and two schools. The schools are the Schools for the Deaf and the Blind. The seven divisions are: Teacher Education and Certification, Division of Special Education, Accreditation, Supervision and School Organization Division, Division of Program Development, Division of Instruction, Title III, and Compensatory Education (Title I).

Mr. Bale pointed out that the sole purpose of their visit was to try to bring services to the region. D. C. Anderson, of the Bureau of Instruction, spoke concerning contractual accreditation which involved district self-study lasting five or six months, a team visit from the Department of Education, and a contract between the school district and the Department of Education to maintain conditions at least equal to those at the time of the self-study. Participation in this program is voluntary.

Dorothy Jones, Compensatory Education (Title I), pointed out the advantages of workshops to encourage communications among the staff and bring out the good qualities of the educators.

Mr. Winebarger, Title III, pointed out that this five county area is located in Region 7 for Title III. He said that the Title III people are waiting to see what happens about funds. "There are two alternatives," he said, "it will continue as it is or be a part of special revenue sharing." He pointed out that Title III is the only source of funds to provide innovative stimulation for research and development.

Conley Manning, director of the Division of Program Development, told the board that his division is a new one to provide effective instructional leadership in general subjects. This division has two units: Program Service Unit and Curriculum Lab Unit. Five thousand publications are available from the Curriculum Lab Unit.

sidered vital, but many governors and county officials shrink from the task. They say they expect revenue-sharing funds to be far below the total such an undertaking would require. County Judge Stumbo said Congressional leaders in Washington indicated to him and others last week that the revenue-sharing plan of financing poverty programs is unacceptable to them.

Joseph E. Smith, state OEO director recently returned from the OEO Southeast Region's office in Atlanta, where he learned about specific plans for phasing out OEO in the eight-state region that includes Kentucky.

President Nixon's budget calls for abolishing OEO and transferring some of its programs to various federal agencies.

But Mr. Nixon's budget for the fiscal year beginning in July, specifically proposes ending federal support for the main OEO-sponsored antipoverty programs—community action programs.

There are 22 OEO community action programs in Kentucky plus one OEO "limited purpose agency," the Mississippi River Economic Opportunity Council in Fulton County, which operates like a community action program, Smith said.

All 23 agencies operate on "program" years that begin in different months, he said. Such OEO agencies traditionally apply for continued funding for each new program year.

"All those scheduled to be refunded after June 30 will receive word that their funding is being terminated," Smith said.

For those agencies with program years beginning before June 30, Smith said it is "fairly clear" that they can expect "as much as" an additional six months' worth of funds to complete their phasing out.

Current annual funding to the 23 agencies totals $27 million from various federal sources, Smith said. Through the years, federal agencies other than OEO have picked up the tab for various aspects of the antipoverty program. Smith pointed out that most community action agencies in Kentucky run U. S. Labor Department and U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) programs and that OEO foots the bill for the administrative costs of these projects.

For instance, the Labor Department might supply the money for equipment and other materials needed to train clerks and typists, but OEO money would support the cost of personnel needed to teach the trainees and deal with other administrative aspects of the program.

He said that community action agencies have been ordered by OEO to "promptly commence discussions with other federal agencies from which you receive funding in order to clarify your status as grantees."

With the cessation of OEO funding under section 221 of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 as amended, community action agencies will lose their designation as community action agencies.

It is yet unclear how this will affect their ability to receive funds from other federal sources. OEO supports the administration of community action agencies as well as the administration of antipoverty programs of other federal agencies which they help run.

Some community action agencies, however, have managed to develop projects such as day care centers, job programs and low-cost food stores that are now self-supporting. And too, some community action agencies hope they will be able to attract revenue-sharing funds and money from local business and industry to continue the administration of some of their services to the poor.

HELP WANTED
If the owner of this little dog that is curled up on our back porch, this very moment, cares for him, I suggest he or she get around and file a claim. For the son-of-a-gun has me at the point of renouncing the resolution which I made at the passing of my old Dalmation—namely, that I was as of that moment and forevermore out of the dog business.

This dog has enough cocker in him to crowd right up against you and demand loving, and enough shepherd or collie to outsmart you if you aren't careful. He's hep, this one. Just smile at him and watch his ears perk.

My conscience tells me to feed this dog. The little good sense I have warns me to ignore the mutt.

Will the owner please come forward?

Our homemakers, we feel, are holding the most important jobs in our community.

They manage the home and they manage the children.

And they manage to put up with us, too.

Elsewhere, it seems, women are trying to prove that they are no different than the next fellow.

Private Citizens Help Prevent Delinquency

Frankfort, Ky.—Citizens' groups in 20 Kentucky counties are part of a Department of Child Welfare program aimed at preventing delinquency.

These groups, County Child Welfare Citizens Committees, carry out projects aimed at reducing delinquency after evaluating the needs of children in their counties and setting priorities for action. The scope of the committees' concerns may range from providing specific services to tackling broad social issues.

Describing the program, Child Welfare Commissioner Evans Tracy said a great deal of delinquency can be prevented by affording children the opportunity to normally develop their physical, emotional and intellectual capabilities and by minimizing those factors which may retard that development, such as child abuse or economic deprivation. And, he said, private citizens can often provide that opportunity better than a state agency.

In keeping with that philosophy, the Community Resources Development (CRD) Unit of Child Welfare is organizing the county citizens' committees and then serving as a resource for the committees once they begin functioning.

The year-old CRD Unit has already organized 20 county citizens' committees and expects to organize 14 more by August.

Organizing and recruiting members for a new County Child Welfare Citizens Committee is often "the biggest problem in the program," claimed the CRD project director, Brennan Mullaney. While admitting that the process of organizing a new committee is rather complicated, Mullaney said the procedure is essential to insure a representative committee membership and to guarantee that the committee is both autonomous and effective.

A CRD worker will spend a couple of months in a county to get a feel for the lifestyle of the people and a picture of what interest groups are present in the county. He then appoints a nominating committee composed of these various interest groups (including social service recipients) which in turn nominates citizens to serve on the permanent committee. After receiving this list of about 25 nominees, the Commissioner of Child Welfare appoints 11 to 21 of them to that county's Child Welfare Citizens Committee.

Mullaney stressed that the committees were indeed autonomous. "Although the CRD worker maintains a working relationship with the committees after it is organized, his role is to provide assistance to the committees in carrying out their projects, not to decide which projects to undertake," he said.

Commissioner Tracy agreed it is important for the committees to retain their autonomy. "One of the major assets of these citizens committees," he said, "is that they can attempt to correct conditions like substandard housing, which Child Welfare, as a government agency, has no authority to deal with, even though these conditions have a detrimental effect on our clients."

"That is why I think this program is so important as a tool for the prevention of delinquency," he explained. "Although we in Child Welfare have a number of programs geared toward prevention, we really don't have the capability to deal with some of the root causes of delinquency like inadequate housing and educational opportunity, inadequate recreational facilities or an inadequate supply of day care facilities for children of mothers who must work. These committees have the capability to develop the resources to start a day care facility in their community or bring pressure to bear on the local school system board to improve the educational system in the county."

In fact, citizens committees in Spencer and Kenton counties have already made substantial progress toward improving their local school systems. The Kenton county citizens committee, for instance, decided that little could be accomplished in the way of delinquency prevention until the county's 48 per cent dropout rate was lowered. Knowing they would need the cooperation of the school board with this project, they became involved in the last school board election.

They interviewed all the candidates and, with their permission, bought newspaper advertising space and outlined the committees' position on five major issues alongside the position of each candidate. Although the committee did not back particular candidates, voters apparently looked at the committee's positions and voted for candidates accordingly so that the county now has a school board the committee believes will cooperate with the program.

Friends of Famed Bill Monroe, They Make Own 'Bluegrass' Music

At a time when much of today's popular music is characterized by the electronically amplified and often distorted sound of screeching guitars and electric basses, that type of music known as "Bluegrass," originated in the early 1930's by Kentuckian Bill Monroe and having roots centuries older in the southern Appalachians and the British Isles, continues to deal with themes of an older, and simpler way of life. "Bluegrass" communicates these themes, using such unamplified instruments as the guitar, 5-string banjo and fiddle. Two well-known performers with a long experience in this field are the Goins Brothers—Melvin, who resides on the Middle Creek road, near here, and his brother, Ray, of Elkhorn City.

Born in the mountainous coal mining area around Bluefield, W. Va., Melvin, now 39, and Ray, two years younger, grew up with the old-time mountain music they still play today. "Both sides of the family were banjo pickers and fiddlers," Melvin recalled.

The two brothers started taking their music seriously at about the age of 12 to 14. "We used to walk four or five miles up a mountain road nearly every day so we could pick with a cousin, an old time fiddler," Melvin recalls. It was during this time that Ray developed the skills he displays so well today on the five-string banjo and Melvin the guitar techniques for vocal as well as instrumental accompaniment.

This early experience proved invaluable to the two West Virginians and Ray Goins went to work with the famed Lonesome Pine Fiddlers on WHIS, Bluefield, in 1952. Later, Melvin joined the group but the brothers dropped out in 1953 when the family moved to Pike county.

During 1956-'57, the Goins Brothers returned to Bluefield where they appeared on a daily television show. At the same time they performed on a Friday evening television barn dance.

In 1959 they came back to Kentucky, where they performed for two years with Hylton Brown and the Timberliners and then in 1961 they were reunited with the Lonesome Pine Fiddlers.

With this group of West Virginians they played until 1963, recording for Starday—RCA Victor records. Ray, as usual, played banjo, and Melvin provided guitar back-up and harmony.

After a couple of years of playing with several groups, Melvin became a member of the nationally known Stanley Brothers, a distinction held until 1969. Ray, during this time, played part-time with the Lonesome Pine Fiddlers group.

In 1969, the same year that Melvin and his attractive wife, Ina, moved to Floyd county, the brothers formed their own group.

The melody singing of Melvin and Ray's tenor harmony proved an ideal combination and in May of 1969 the Goins Brothers recorded their first album, "Bluegrass Hits," in Nashville, Tennessee. Additional recording albums since that time include "Bluegrass Country," recorded in Dayton, Ohio in 1971; and, in 1972, "In the Head of the Holler," recorded in Jackson, Michigan. Another album, "In Tribute to the Lonesome Pine Fiddlers," was recorded this month and an album of gospel numbers is now in the making.

Personal appearances by the Goins Brothers group, presently include besides Melvin and Ray, Leslie Sturgill, of Hindman, string bass and mandolin; Ralph "Joe" Meadows, of Princeton, W. Va., fiddle, and Harley Gabbard, of New Trenton, Ind., dobro (former dobro player for the Osborne Brothers). They performed in 1971 and 1972 at Bill Monroe's "Early Bird Bluegrass Show." This show, broadcast from WSM's Grand Old Opry, attracts only the top Bluegrass bands, including such groups as Lester Flatt, Jim and Jesse, and The Stanley Brothers.

The Goins Brothers also appeared at the Country Music Fanfare Show held at Nashville's new Opry Land. Appearing on the same show were Bill Monroe and Roy Acuff.

Other appearances include dozens of performances each year at Bluegrass and folk festivals all over the country.

A recent feature article in the magazine, "Country Music," dealing with the annual Bean Blossom, Indiana Bluegrass Festival, at which the Goins Brothers performed, compared the quality of the Goins Brothers' music to better known groups such as Bill Monroe and the Stanley Brothers.

The songs performed by the Goins Brothers are almost all original material. A country disc jockey, Mike Paxton, of Pikeville, writes many of the lyrics while Melvin and Ray more often provide the melodies and instrumentation.

There are different varieties of Bluegrass, with some types such as the music of the Stanley Brothers leaning heavily on traditional mountain music, and others, like the Osborne Brothers, "modern Bluegrass."

The Goins Brothers, too, have a distinctive style. Melvin says: "We have originated a style of our own." Their music is similar in many respects to that of Bill Monroe, a close friend and frequent visitor, who the brothers say, has most heavily influenced them. But much of their repertory consists of older mountain styles.

Of the future of Bluegrass music, Melvin Goins expressed the belief that "the next five years will be the biggest ever."

He said that one of the main problems recently in conducting Bluegrass festivals has been that many people in certain sections of the country didn't know what "Bluegrass" actually was.

"A lot of people think it's something you smoke," Melvin said. According to him, many people don't distinguish Bluegrass festivals from the rock festivals that have become so widely publicized recently. "I've seen people put barbed wire around their homes," Goins commented referring to the fear held by many of a mass assault of strange-looking creatures smoking pot.

"But people are beginning to realize that Bluegrass is the cleanest kind of music there is," he said. "Why, it's as clean and pure as a little pine tree settin' out on a hillside."

Bluegrass festivals, said Melvin, attract and appeal to all kinds of people. "There's college students, farmers, truck drivers, hippies . . . all brought together by the music."

This summer, the Goins Brothers look forward to festivals in Oklahoma, Texas, Virginia, Indiana, and a festival of their own to be held June 22-24 at Beckley, West Virginia.

Albums by Melvin and Ray, as well as bookings, may be obtained by contacting Melvin or his wife, Ina, at West Prestonsburg or at the IGA Food Store here.

HUD's Peeve Costs Taxpayers $26,500

While most Americans agree that taxes don't go in any direction but up, few of us are aware of some of the sillier ways in which government contributes to soaring levies. Among a collection in the March Reader's Digest is this example: The Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) had a single 45-foot flagpole in front of its Washington headquarters. The neighboring Department of Transportation had a pair of 75-foot poles. Peeved, HUD officials had two 80-foot poles erected. Cost to taxpayers: $26,500.

McDowell Wins Title In 58th District Here

By MARK LAFFERTY

After trailing Betsy Layne by a single point in the first half of the 58th district tournament championship game here last Saturday night, Pete Grigsby's McDowell Daredevils blew the game open in the second half and emerged with the title. They defeated the Bobcats, 73-52.

Both teams will have berths in the 15th regional tourney this week-end at Johnson Central high school, Paintsville.

Coach Grigsby and Gene Frazier, coach of the Allen Central team, received at tie vote for Coach of the Year honors, and Glen Heinisch and Neil Turner, both of the McDowell team, shared the individual free-throw trophy.

The five-team tournament moved along in this fashion:

The tournament opened last Wednesday evening with the two top choices for the title meeting. These two teams, Betsy Layne and Allen Central, had met three times earlier, with Allen Central twice the victor. But, this time Betsy Layne evened the score with the most important victory of the four by downing Allen Central, 87-76, for the right to play Prestonsburg on Friday night.

The game opened with a quick surge into the lead by Betsy Layne as they scored the first two points of the game and went on to lead, 10-2, after only a few minutes of play. With the score 13-6 in favor of Betsy Layne, Allen Central held on to lead the see-saw battle at the half, 34-33. In the third period the teams battled again on even terms, with Allen Central still holding a point advantage at the end of the period. In the final quarter, however, Betsy Layne erupted and gained a quick five-point advantage that the Rebels could not close. The contest was close until the final minutes when Allen Central tried desperately to steal the ball. At this point Betsy Layne remained calm and widened the victory margin to 11 points.

The McDowell Daredevils met rival Wheelwright, Thursday night. McDowell, the hottest team in the district at the close of the season, crushed Wheelwright, 85-68. Wheelwright played an inspired first quarter and wound up leading at the end of the period, 15-14. But that was all of the short Wheelwright lead as McDowell stormed back and gained a nine-point halftime edge. The second half was just a replay of the second period, with McDowell continually widening their lead. By winning this game McDowell was by luck of the draw for tournament position thrust into Saturday night's championship game and, more importantly, the regional tournament.

Friday evening, the once-victorious Betsy Layne Bobcats took on the Prestonsburg Blackcats. The Blackcats won the last meeting of the season between the two teams, but Prestonsburg for the second game in a row failed to put more than 40 points on the board. The Blackcats' inability to score crippled them after trailing by 15-8 after the first quarter. Prestonsburg failed to score in double figures for the next two quarters as Betsy Layne ran away with the contest. The Bobcats held an 11-point advantage at the half, 25-14. In the second half the Bobcats completely crushed the Cats for a 72-38, victory.

In Saturday night's title game McDowell was on top at the end of the first period, 15-12. Betsy Layne caught fire in the second quarter and at one time held a five-point bulge. McDowell kept pace with Bobcats and trailed by only one at the end of the half. The second half saw McDowell blow the game open as they built a 10-point lead in the third quarter and completely ran away with the contest in the final period.

McDowell also won the team free throw trophy, Betsy Layne received the runners-up trophy and Prestonsburg was voted the Sportsmanship trophy.

Sale of Wild Game Costs Kentuckian

Warren County Judge Basil Griffin has imposed one of the heaviest fines in Kentucky history for a small-game violation on a Bowling Green man, according to the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

H. S. (Strather) Miller, who pleaded guilty to the illegal sale of wild game, was given the maximum fine of $500 plus costs, for a total of $98.50 and had his hunting license revoked through December 31, 1973. According to his own records, Miller had killed almost 2,000 rabbits in a 5-year period.

Working on a tip, Conservation Officers Billy Hudson and Jett Johnson of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources began undercover investigations of the case in mid-December, 1972. Miller was arrested on January 31, and during this period the two officers alone purchased 102 wild rabbits from Miller, who was tried and sentenced February 9.

It was discovered during the investigation that Miller kept careful records of the rabbits he killed and sold, and with the help of Warren County Attorney Henry Potter, these records were obtained at the time of Miller's arrest.

They showed that Miller had killed 1,960 rabbits since 1967. According to these records, 418 were killed during 1972-73, with the highest daily kill of 17 occurring on December 23. The legal daily limit for the 1972-73 season was six rabbits, with a possession limit of 12.

“HE WANTS TO MAKE YOU HAPPY”

Never sell a car to a friend, they say, because you'll lose the friend.

We disagree. We're your local Ford Dealers and we sell cars to friends every day. And we haven't lost one for years.

One reason, of course, is our cars. We have 6 popular lines of really good cars to sell. But you can't sell cars like cans of spaghetti (or you shouldn't) so there's more to it than that.

Which is why a Ford showroom isn't just another cash-and-carry supermarket, or merely a peddler of cars and trucks they make in Detroit.

We take you more seriously than that. Ford may make cars by the thousands, but we sell them to you one by one. It is up to us to keep each of you happy you bought a Ford. And we know it.

So our first job is to get you together with the best Ford for your needs, your finances, and for that gleam in your eye. (Everybody who buys a car has a gleam in his eye.)

When your car comes in we get it ready to roll. This is called Dealer Preparation, and it is no once-over-lightly matter. Not with us. We check each car over as though our reputation depended on it.

After which we shake your hand and say good-bye and you drive off into the sunset, eyes gleaming. Right? Wrong! This isn't the movies. Cars, even good Ford cars, need service. They always have and they always will. Cars need looking after, help, care, parts, love, work. They need understanding and skill and a lot of concern.

We believe what goes on in the back of a Ford dealership is really more important than what happens out front in the showroom. That's why we have more servicemen than salesmen. That's why your Ford Dealers carry an average of $56,000 worth of parts in stock. That's also why we have tens of thousands of dollars in service and diagnostic equipment.

We welcome your cars back for their warranted checkups. We welcome the chance to tune them up and make them purr. We want to keep them running and on the road.

When we sell you a car, we never want to see the last of you. We want to keep you happy all the time you own that Ford.

And we know this attitude works. We Ford Dealers have been one of the sales leaders around here for a good many years.

See what it's like to deal with someone who wants to make you happy. See your friendly Ford Dealer.

See your friendly Ford Dealer... He wants to make you happy.

R. J. Reynolds makes cigaret price increase

NEW YORK—R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., the nation's largest cigarette manufacturer, announced price increases of 20 cents per thousand Wednesday for all its cigaret brands.

The increases, which follow those posted by most other major cigaret producers in recent weeks, are effective immediately.

Reynolds Tobacco, a subsidiary of R. J. Reynolds Industries, makes Winston—the nation's biggest seller—as well as Camel, Salem, Doral and Vantage cigarettes. Industry sources said this probably would mean an increase of only about a penny per pack at the retail level. Vending machine prices, in some cases, will rise by a nickel.

The company said its last price increase for cigarettes was May 29, 1970.

Girl Scout Week Observance Set March 11; Cookie Sale On

Girls in Floyd county will be doing their part to make the annual celebration of Girl Scout Week, March 11-17, a big one. This county is served by the Wilderness Road Girl Scout Council, which provides professional services in 55 Central and Eastern Kentucky counties, plus one each in Ohio and Tennessee.

Mrs. Wendell Kingsolver, Carlisle, Council President, said that girls in the various counties would observe the week in a variety of ways.

"The observance primarily is designed to enhance the image of Girl Scouting, with its current emphasis on 'Today's Vision - Tomorrow's World,' and to let the general public know that our girls have a dynamic program."

Girl Scout Sunday (March 11) will launch the week's observance, with many Scouts in uniform at church Sunday morning and, in some cases, attending in groups.

A total of 123,000 folders telling the Girl Scout philosophy and giving information about the Wilderness Road Council, has been given to churches throughout the area for distribution March 11 with regular church bulletins.

The annual cookie sale of Girl Scouts in 57 counties, including Floyd, is under way. Most of the 12,000 Girl Scouts of the Wilderness Road Girl Scout Council will be out selling cookies to raise money for support of the Council's outdoor program.

Additionally, each girl will be making a 7½ cents-a-box profit for her own troop.

Official dates of the sale are March 8 to March 31, but girls in each community may begin selling as soon as cookie shipments arrive.

Profits from the sale help operate five camps in the Council area, including Camp Chatterawha, near Dewey Dam.

Judge Stephenson Sees Need For Change in Selecting Judges

By JEANNE BECKETT

Frankfort, Ky.—Kentucky's newest Court of Appeals Justice, James Bennett Stephenson, would like to see reforms in selecting circuit judges. His opinion, based on 13 years as a trial jurist, is that good court proceedings result from the actions of the judge and conscientious juries.

Justice Stephenson served as circuit judge in the 35th Judicial District in Pike County. He says he strongly favors constitutional changes that would eliminate political races for the circuit judges. He prefers the Missouri plan in which the judge runs against his record rather than against an opponent.

According to Stephenson, it works like this:

A new circuit judge is appointed by the Missouri Governor. After serving one term, the next election ballot reads "are you for or against retaining Judge ?" This system leaves the people the opportunity to eliminate a judge if they so desire, Stephenson points out. Should the majority vote be against the jurist, he would run against an opponent.

"I don't think there is anything particularly wrong with courts in Kentucky," says Stephenson. "It is the character of the judge that counts, he can get the job done if he is the right person."

Justice James Bennett Stephenson

Placing responsibility on the presiding judge, Justice Stephenson points to variances in jury selection. Using New York City as an example, the justice says that there, the judge is not even present when juries are selected and it often takes a week or two to seat a panel.

In contrast, Kentucky's judges conduct the questioning. It is their responsibility to keep jury selection time to a reasonable limit. "There is no justification for taking a long time to select a jury in our state," Stephenson says.

"Seeing justice done within the framework of the law is the greatest gratification for a trial judge," says Stephenson. He compliments the conscientiousness of most jurors, saying his experience has been that most take their oath very seriously and truly return a verdict on the basis of evidence heard.

The new justice, although born in Greenup county, has spent most of his life in Pike county. He still retains his residence there. He attended Pikeville public schools and earned his degree at the University of Kentucky.

Justice Stephenson was in private practice from 1940 until his first election to the Pike judgeship in 1957. His only respite from the law since college graduation was a four-year tour of duty with the Air Force, including two years in the European Theatre of Operations.

Sportsmen League Extends Contest Into Ky. Schools

The 333 club affiliates of The League of Kentucky Sportsmen were urged last week to extend the league's statewide essay contest competition into schools.

The essay contest, announced by League President Reid Love, Vanceburg, is open to any Kentuckian. Subject is, "Why I Should Belong To My Local Sportsman-Conservation Club." Length of each entry is to be 200 words.

Scores of league affiliates are currently conducting local area contests, the deadline for which is April 1. The top three winners locally will be judged for the local awards and competition in the statewide judging.

Clubs will submit the local winning essays to Redmon Payne, Franklin, league secretary-treasurer, for statewide judging by April 10.

State winners will compete for the President's Plaque and other awards presented by Mr. Love at the LKS convention in Ashland, June 8-10.

Hunting and fishing mean many things to many people.
 For some, they're a means of "getting away from it all." For others they provide thrills - seeing a bass taking a surface lure, watching a bird dog handle a covey of birds or a retriever bring a giant goose to the blind. These are but a few of the things that make hunting or fishing meaningful to an individual.

On a personal basis, do you remember when and where you took your first fish or harvested your first rabbit or squirrel? Do you remember the person who introduced you to the sport of hunting or fishing and who was, actually, responsible for your first successful hunting or fishing trip?

If you've followed these sports for a number of years now perhaps it's time to add another dimension to hunting and fishing trips by "doing unto others," so to speak, and making it your turn to teach a child to enjoy the woods and waters, as you were taught.

A son or daughter of your own would probably be your first choice for an outdoor companion, but if you haven't one, just look around. There are youngsters who want, and need, to be out-of-doors, and sharing your knowledge and experience with one of them greatly increases your own pleasure.

How to start? Remember that the first trip should be fun and not a forced march or endurance contest.

Fall and earlywinter fishing weather conditions are not too cold for a child to enjoy. Fish are more active during this time and, with any luck at all, both of you should be able to take fish. This is important.

Crappie might be a good fish to try for during this period. They have once again schooled-up and oftentimes are found around submerged treetops, creek and river channel dropoffs or around cover areas. And then, too, crappie fishing is easy for the beginner. Minnows are the prime bait, fished by rod and reel or even a cane pole, and casting skills are not needed or required.

Once the child has been on a few trips you should add bass fishing to the agenda and the beginner might start with a closed-face spinning rig. This type of tackle does not require nearly as much skill as do some other outfits and the lack of backlashes (as beginners call them) or overruns (as the pros say) benefits the disposition of both teacher and pupil.

Hunting should also be included in a young person's exposure to the outdoors. The beginner should be taken on trips to the field while you are seeking rabbit, quail or possibly squirrels or doves.

Gun safety is a must and the newcomer should be shown to handle firearms properly. He will be watching you and forming impressions about how one should conduct himself in the field. It's up to you to show him not only how to use a firearm but also how to use it safely and how to be a good sportsman.

Before a youngster goes afield with a firearm, he should have gone along with you as an observer several times and should have spent many hours with you in practice shooting and learning about safe gun handling.

When both of you feel confident about the youngster's gun handling abilities, the first hunt will provide more than fun. There will be a feeling of pride on the part of both teacher and student.

One thing for sure - neither game nor fish must be harvested for the trip to be termed a success. The companionship and shared experiences will make the trip more than worthwhile.

Consider the outdoors a kind of classroom and remember that many experiences which are "old hat" to you are completely new to your young companion. Take time to explain and enjoy the hoot of the great horned owl or the flushing of a covey of quail. Spend a few minutes watching the green heron fish for his dinner or the raccoon "hunting" his. Step on a puff ball and watch the red cloud of dust.

Rediscover the fringe benefits of hunting and fishing as you see the outdoor world again through the eyes of a child and teach him to be a sportsman.

Nobel scientist may sue to get honorary degree

LONDON (AP) — Prof. William Shockley, who won a Nobel Prize as one of the developers of the transistor, said yesterday he may take legal action against Leeds University for its decision to withdraw an honorary degree it had offered him.

The scientist, who holds that American blacks are genetically inferior to American whites, was offered an honorary degree by Leeds three months ago to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the transistor.

Last Thursday the university court, at a meeting attended by 41 of its 131 members, voted 36 to 2, with 3 abstentions, to withdraw its offer because of Shockley's controversial views.

Kings activate Schade to replace injured Green
 KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City-Omaha Kings announced yesterday veteran Johnny Green has been placed on the injury list and rookie Frank Schade from Eau-Claire State has been activated.
 Green suffered a badly twisted knee in Thursday night's overtime loss at Omaha to the Milwaukee Bucks. The Kings said he would be out indefinitely.

New Appointment Fills P.C.C. Board

Prestonsburg Community College has for the first time in two years a complete advisory board. The appointment of Chalmer H. Frazier, administrator of the new Highlands Medical Center, gave the board its full membership. Mr. Frazier was appointed by Governor Ford to a four-year term, beginning Jan. 30 last. Other members of the advisory board are R. V. May, Prestonsburg, chairman; Marvin Music, Prestonsburg; Robert Conley, Paintsville; Russell Goble, Inez; Curtis Clark and Burl W. Spurlock, both of Prestonsburg. Ex-officio members of the board are Prof. Laura Weddle, faculty representative, and Robert A. Burchett, student representative. When the board meets March 15 at The Plantation, near here, resumption of negotiations for additional land for the college campus will be one item on the agenda. It was said last week that the school of nursing, one of the new programs at the college, has been highly successful. The two-year program has 41 enrolled, and these are scheduled for graduation in May. Applications for students in the fall nursing program will be received, beginning April 1. Robert R. Allen, academic dean, announced.

Pentagon may drop copper shell casings

WASHINGTON — In a move which could have a major impact on the soaring price of copper, the Pentagon is said to be moving rapidly to authorize the use of steel rather than copper in manufacturing 20mm machine-gun bullets. The 20mm machine gun is one of the most widely used weapons in all branches of the military, and the use of copper to form the shell casing represents one of the largest portions of the Pentagon's purchase of the metal, which currently runs about $30 million annually, according to rough estimates. In the past two months, the price of copper has jumped 20 per cent, from 50 cents to 60 cents a pound. The copper is used as the base metal in the processing of brass alloy ammunition casing.

The amount of money to be raised by this sale shall be in the principal sum of $1,515.92 with interest thereon at 7 percent annually from the 22 day of November 1972 until satisfied and the additional sum of $518.52 with interest thereon at 6 percent per annum from January 26, 1973, and the costs of this action, including costs of advertising of this sale and the fees and commissions for conducting this sale. For the purchase price the purchaser must execute bond with approved surety or sureties, bearing legal interest from the day of sale until paid and having the force and effect of a judgment with a lien retained upon said property as a further security. Bidders will be prepared to comply with these terms. Given under my hand, this 28th day of February 1973.

Chandler's Personal Papers Join UK's Document Collection

The personal papers of former Gov. A. B. Chandler are now a part of the University of Kentucky's growing collection of modern political documents.

Since 1928, when he became master commissioner of Woodford county, Chandler has been county chairman of the Democratic committee, state senator, lieutenant governor, governor, and U. S. senator.

Thousands of pictures, papers and documents and numerous personal scrapbooks featuring practically every news article written about the man and his career, currently are stored and are being processed by the UK Department of Special Collections and Archives in the Margaret I. King library.

Dr. Stuart Forth, director of UK libraries, said, "The most significant aspect of Governor Chandler's generous gift to the University is that every facet of his career is contained in these papers."

In addition to Chandler's, the library collection of personal papers include those of such former Kentucky statesmen as Vice President Alben Barkley, Chief Justice Fred Vinson, Senators A. O. Stanley, Thruston Morton and John Sherman Cooper, and Representatives John C. Watts and Brent Spence.

Students, historians, political scientists and other scholars frequently use the collections as primary source materials. Doctoral and master's theses, articles for scholarly journals and books evolve from the references.

MERIT FINALIST

Kelvin M. Franko, of Lancer, a senior at Prestonsburg high school, is a finalist in the 1973 Merit Scholarship Program—an honor shared by less than one-half of 1 percent of the nation's graduating high school seniors.

Young Franko has been notified by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation that as one of 14,500 finalists in the United States he is in the competition for a Merit Scholarship, coveted scholastic award sought annually by top high school seniors.

Merit Scholarship winners will be named between mid-March and mid-May. Approximately 3,000 of the 14,500 finalists will be selected.

"We are especially proud that this boy has received this honor," Edgar Craft, guidance counselor at the high school, said.

The Merit Scholarship finalist is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Kalman N. Franko, of Lancer.

Quilting Is Enjoying Nationwide Revival

The ancient art of quilting is enjoying a revival that amounts to a nationwide explosion, according to the March issue of Reader's Digest. Quilting has enormous appeal for a number of reasons: ecological by using such leftovers as shirts, ties, towels and dresses, quilting becomes part of the recycling process; economic—quilts can last for 100 years or more; and, perhaps most valuable of all, artistic—quilts can be dazzlingly colorful in the same way that made many 20th century artists famous. The world's record for number of pieces used in a quilt is held, surprisingly enough, by a man. Albert Small, of Ottawa, Illinois, used 63,460 pieces to make what is undoubtedly the quintessential quilt.

Deskins Murder Case On Trial in Pike-Co.

The trial of Boone Deskins, 68, of Meta, Pike county, on a murder charge in connection with the slaying of his wife, Mrs. Gladys Deskins, 59, was docketed this week in Pike Circuit Court.

Trials of three other men, indicted for murder in the same slaying, will be heard later, Commonwealth Attorney John Paul Runyon said.

The others are Robert Sykes, 39, Pikeville, Willard (Woody) Christian, 25, and William Eugene Thompson, 23, both of the Pikeville area.

Deskins and Sykes are free under bond. Mrs. Deskins was found slain at her home on the morning of July 12, 1971.
